WOUNDS FOR ETERNITY.

Rum Takes Away Health and Character and Destroys the Soul.

Whosoever is guilty of excess and intemperance in drinking, even though not to intoxication, but thereby causing great distress to his family, squandering away by his intemperance that which should serve for their support, commits a mortal sin against charity and justice. In like manner, whosoever thus renders himself incapable of the payment of his debts, although he may not drink to intoxication, commits a mortal sin.

It should be a sufficient argument with any reasonable man to know that this evil, as an enemy to man, wounds him wherever he can be wounded.

Sickness is an evil, but it wounds only his health; misfortune may take away his property, but it wounds only his property.

Slander may take away his good name, but it wounds only character. Blindness may take away his sight, and deafness his hearing, and so with all his senses, but these afflictions touch not his true manhood.

Death may take his life, but he dies sound of mind and in the hope of heaven, and it is thus throughout the whole catalogue of natural and social ills—they all come single and alone.

Intemperance strikes at the whole man. It wounds him in time and for eternity.

It takes away health, property, friends, manhood, character, liberty, sight, hearing, brutalizes all moral instinct, degrades the intellectual faculties and natural affections, destroys every talent for good, takes life and destroys the immortal soul.

By accident a man may die of poison, but he dies sane. The drunkard dies a fool.—Orphan's Bouquet.

THEY DRANK THERE.

A Saloon Keeper Caused Some Confusion In Court.

A saloonist innocently revealed one of the principal difficulties in the way of enforcing laws against liquor dealers in a trial before a justice's court, according to The Templar. On being sworn one of the attorneys in the case said:

"Mr. ——, where is your place of business?"

"What for you ask me such dings? You drinks at my blace more as a hundred dimes."

"That has nothing to do with the case, Mr. ——. State to the jury where your place of business is."

"De shury, de shury! Oh, my shiminy! Every shentleman on dis shury has a sdring of marks on my cellar door just like a rail fence."

His honor here interceded in behalf of the counsel and in a calm, dignified manner requested witness to state the place of his business.

"Oh, egscuse me, your honor. You drinks at my blace so many dimes I dinks you know very well where I keeps mine blace."

RUM'S DAY OF DOOM.

The Forces Are Gathering For the Overthrow of the Liquor Traffic.

We have lived to see the terrible curse of slavery abolished. Horrible as it was and blighting as was its influence wherever it existed, yet never in the darkest days did it ruin so many families or break so many hearts or crush so many noble lives as does the liquor traffic today. Slavery never cost us so many thousand dollars a year, it never produced so many or such awful crimes, it never counted its victims by so many thousands, it never was so defiant of law as is the liquor traffic today. But the hour came when the people rose up in their might and washed its black stain out in rivers of blood.

The liquor traffic, too, will have its day of doom. Public sentiment is slowly but surely forming against it. Public sentiment is gathering strength, and when it strikes it will be with the blow of a Titan.—Father Doyle.

A drunkard is not a beast. If he were, he would not get drunk.

Drunkenness is the screw of a vise that tightens at every turn.

It is always hard times with a man who drinks up his wages.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON V, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 31.

Text of the Lesson, Acts iv, 1-14—Memory Verses, 10-12—Golden Text, Acts iv, 12—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

1. "And as they spake unto the people the priests and the captain of the temple and the Sadducees came upon them." They spake of Jesus, His life, death, resurrection and return to restore all things of which the prophets had spoken; that He and all things concerning Him had been foretold by the prophets, and that now, being raised from the dead, He was ready to bless Israel first. In all the prophets the Spirit had said that through Israel all nations of the earth should be blessed, and He spoke through them of a great Deliverer who would do this and make Israel the chief of all nations.

2. "Being grieved that they taught the people and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead." They would be grieved that men, in their eyes unlearned and ignorant (verse 13), should dare to teach. The priests were to teach the people (Mal. ii, 7; Lev. x, ii). While resurrection was plainly taught in the Old Testament (Job xix, 25-27; Ps. xvi, 10; Ezek. xxxvii, 12, 13; Hos. vi, 2), the Sadducees believed not in any (chapter xxiii, 8), so that anything on resurrection would grieve them. That Jesus of Nazareth, whom they crucified as a malefactor, should be risen from the dead would prove that they were guilty and that He was what He said He was.

3. "And they laid hands upon them and put them in hold unto the next day, for it was now eventide." They had been taught to expect this, and therefore may not have been surprised at it, though the first time that even a predicted event happens is often a surprise (John xv, 19; xvi, 1, 2; Math. x, 16-20). The enmity against God and His word, even on the part of those who, like the priests, are professedly His people, is still very marked and shall continue to be throughout this age.

4. "Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed, and the number of the men was about five thousand." If these are wholly in addition to those of chapter ii, 41, then here are already over eight thousand followers of the Lord Jesus Christ in a few days, and apparently through two sermons and a miracle. What a contrast to the hundred and twenty of chapter i, 15, and what an illustration and proof of His words, "Greater works than these shall he do because I go unto My Father (John xiv, 12).

5, 6. "And it came to pass on the morrow that their rulers and elders and scribes, * * * were gathered together at Jerusalem." This was a council of the highest religious body, or as we would say of the church authorities, and, therefore, one to be feared by ordinary men.

7. "And when they had set them in the midst they asked, By what power or by what name have ye done this?" The phrase "in the midst," makes us think of the invisible Christ who was truly in the midst unseen by the religious dignitaries. Peter and John were there in His name, on His business, and He was surely with them in the midst (Math. xviii, 20).

8. "Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people and elders of Israel." The Holy Spirit is the key to the whole business and the one great secret of every victory in the Christian life. He spake and wrought every word and act through Christ, and He is given to every believer to do the same in each one—that is, to speak and act through us.

9. "If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole." The man was certainly utterly helpless, a truly impotent man, and it is on and in such that the gracious Lord loves to work. If we knew how helpless we are to save ourselves or to do any good thing when we are saved, we would stop trying and trust our mighty Saviour to work in us both to will and to do of His good pleasure. All our doing tends to exalt ourselves, and this is wrong; but His doing exalts Him, and that is right.

10. "By the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth doth this man stand here before you whole." The crucified and risen Christ, the despised Nazarene, still lives and has all power, and He manifests it through His followers to His glory that His name may be known. The devil and the world and a worldly church hates to have His name made known (verses 17, 18), but a true believer will say with Peter and John, "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard" (verse 20). The apostles took no credit to themselves, but gave all glory to Christ, saying, "He did it."

11. "This is the stone which was set at naught of you builders, which is become the head of the corner." This would or should have carried their thoughts to Ps. cxviii, 22; Isa. viii, 14; xxviii, 16; Gen. xlix, 24, and other texts where Israel's Messiah is compared to a stone. Some of these very men may have remembered his own words to this effect also. See Math. xxi, 23, 42-44. Some day, when the nation shall see Him coming in His glory, they will think of these things, and with true penitence they shall make the words of Isa. liii their own. See Zech. xii, 10.

12. "Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." Whether it be for a nation or for an individual (Job xxxiv, 29), there is no salvation apart from Jesus Christ. In Him is life, and he that hath the Son hath life, but he that hath not the Son of God hath not life (John i, 4; I John v, 11, 12).

13. "They took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus." An unlikely instrument, humanely speaking, when controlled by God brings glory to God. The utterance and the fearlessness of these men before this great council convinced them that some great mind or power was controlling them. They probably remembered the boldness of Jesus and saw in these men His Spirit. He had told them while yet with them that when brought before councils for His sake they were not to be anxious as to what they should say, for the Spirit of God would speak through them (Math. x, 18-20).

14. "And beholding the man which was healed standing with them they could say nothing against it." An incurable sick person made whole, a wicked person made righteous, a profane or violent person made meek and gentle, a worldly person made to be devoted to the Lord Jesus Christ—these evidences of the work of Christ cannot be spoken against. If while we profess to be the Lord's the old life is still continually manifest, there is no convincing testimony, and the name of the Lord is dishonored; but, filled with the Spirit, there cannot but be convincing testimony for Christ.

NINE MEN IN GREAT PERIL.

Being Driven Out into the Lake on a Few Square Rods of Ice.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—A dispatch from Menominee, Mich., last night said "Tonight nine men are clinging to a block of ice a few rods square that is being driven out of Green Bay into Lake Michigan by a fierce southerly gale. The wind is blowing thirty miles an hour, and carries on a zero temperature an occasional snow squall. The men are fishermen, clad only in the none too heavy clothing worn while tending their nets and unless the ice floe has been blown against Chambers' island or Green island there is little possibility that they will ilve through the night. The doomed men are residents of the little fishing village of Menekaunee, and their wives and children are spending the night on the mountains of ice that fringe the beach weeping and moaning. The missing men are: Nels Mattson, Otto Christianson, Ed Hoffman, Lars Larson, Matt Halgren, Seth Jeitson, John Johnson, Thomas Knutson and Tom Lund.

Menominee, Mich., Jan. 18.—It now appears that there were eleven men on the ice floe, and all have been saved. Nine of the number were not far distant from Green island, setting their nets, at the time the ice floe began to move, and succeeded in reaching that point before the ice field passed. Hoffman was out several miles to the eastward of the island, and could not reach land in time, but was rescued by the lighthouse keeper's boat. Gus Lund was nearer the west shore, and managed to reach Peshtigo point by jumping from one cake of ice to another.

VICTORY FOR GOMEZ.

The Cuban General Said to Have Captured Santa Clara.

New York, Jan. 15.—The Press this morning claims to have news through private channels that General Maximo Gomez stormed and captured the important city of Santa Clara on Jan. 9, and is now moving on Havana with 18,000 men. The famous cavalry leader Quintin Bandera was mortally wounded, The Press says, and General Luque, commanding the Spanish, was also wounded. The news received said that the losses were: Spanish, estimated killed and wounded, 900; prisoners, 700; cannon captured, 18; battle standards, 4; rifles in the Spanish arsenal, 5,000, with plenty of ammunition. Cubans killed and wounded, 1,500, which is 600 more than the Spaninsh loss. The Press quotes Carlos Roloff as saying that the report is credible. The junta has no news.

ILLINOIS NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST.

Summary of Important Events of the Past Few Days Reported by Telegraph for the Benefit of Our Readers—Items of Special Interest to Illinois People.

Springfield, Ills., Jan. 14.—After a session of ten minutes duration yesterday the senate adjourned. There were few members present. During its brief session several appropriation bills were passed, among them one appropriating $50,000 for employes' salaries and one appropriating $15,000 for the payment of the expenses of the Fortieth general assembly.

Springfield, Ills., Jan. 15.—A ten-minute session of the senate was held yesterday morning, during which a number of bills were introduced. The nomination made by ex-Governor Altgeld of Joseph D. Strauss, of the south town of Chicago, to succeed Justice Glennon, was confirmed. One of the bills introduced is to create a board of pardons; another appropriates $100,000 for the participation of Illinois in the Omaha exposition next year, and another is to create a free public employment bureau in cities over 60,000, the appointment of a superintendent and necessary clerks at expense of the state, and asking for an appropriation of $10,000.

The house drew for seats as soon as it met. The first name drawn out was that of Kincheloe, Republican, and he selected a seat in the front row. The second name was that of Barnes, Democrat. Craig, the Democratic leader, was among the earliest called, and secured a front seat. Cochran presented the report of the committee on rules. The most important change made in the old rules is the creation of three new committees on judicial, congressional and senatorial apportionment, each consisting of twenty-one members. The report was adopted. Cochran offered a resolution, which was adopted, memorializing congress to pass the pending bill establishing a national park at Vicksburg.

TANNER REVOKES A REQUISITION.

Lawyer Shows Him That It Is Persecutton, Not Prosecution.

Springfield, Ills., Jan. 16.—Governor Altgeld honored the requisition of the governor of Tennesse for the surrender of J. S. Buchanan, who was supposed to be under arrest at Urbana, and wanted at Dayton, Rhea county, Tenn., for alleged embezzlement. Yesterday attorneys for Buchanan appeared before Governor Tanner, went over the case with him and showed that Buchanan was being persecuted, not prosecuted, and asked that the requisition issued by Governor Altgeld be revoked, as Buchanan had never been arrested. Governor Tanner ordered the requisition papers revoked and expunged off records.

Their Romance Ends in Death.

Percy, Ills., Jan. 18.—Monroe Skidmore, a widower, aged 78, and Mrs. Kelly, a widow, aged 65, residing near Ruma, this county, were engaged to be married, the wedding day being set for Christmas. At that date a large number of guests gathered at the home of the prospective bride, but the groom failed to appear. He sent a letter saying he was ill and unable to be present and bidding the guests to partake of the banquet provided, as the ceremony would have to be deferred a few days. Mrs. Kelly went to the home of her betrothed to nurse him back to health, but was herself stricken down, dying last Tuesday. Skidmore lingered until last Friday, when he, too, passed away. The couple had been sweethearts in youth and were engaged to be married then, but a lover's quarrel parted them.

Santa Clara Not Captured by Gomez.

Madrid, Jan. 18.—An emphatic denial has been issued from official circles of the report that the town of Santa Clara, capital of the Cuban province of that name, has been captured by the insurgents. It is further stated that the only recent insurgent attack in that province has been at Buena Vista, where, it is said, the insurgents were repulsed.

California Senatorship.

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 13.—George C. Perkins was yesterday re-elected United States senator, receiving majority of the votes in both branches of the legislature. In the senate he received 27 votes against a scattering opposition vote of 13.

Fatal Election Riot in Georgia.

Byron, Ga., Jan. 18.—Owing to the fact that two elections resulted in a tie the whole population of this town got out its gun and went to shooting. C. C. Richardson, C. L. Bateman, C. C. Bateman and R. H. Baskies were killed.

Escape from the Gotham Bastile.

New York, Jan. 15.—Four prisoners escaped from Ludlow street jail last night. One was recaptured.

NEW IRON LASTS and HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT

The Latest, Neatest, Cheapest and Best Outfit Ever Invented.

THE HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT NO. 1.

Consisting of 38 First-Class Tools and Materials (neatly boxed) Shown in Cut, viz.:

1 Iron Last, 8 inches.
1 Iron Last, 6 inches.
1 Iron Last, 4 inches.
1 Iron Standard, with Base.
1 Package Assorted Nails.
1 Package 4-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 5-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 6-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
6 Pairs Star Heel Plates.
½ lb Copper Rivets and Burrs.
1 Steel Punch.
1 Sewing Awl, complete.
1 Pegging Awl, complete.
1 Wrench for above.
1 Stabbing Awl, complete.
1 Shoeknife.
1 Shoehammer.
1 Bottle Rubber Cement.
1 Bottle Leather Cement.
1 Harness and Saw Clamp.
1 Ball Wall.
1 Ball Shoe Thread.
1 Bunch Bristles.
4 Harness Needles.
1 Soldering Iron.
1 Bottle Soldering Fluid.
1 Box Rosin.
1 Bar Solder.
1 Directions for Use.

All these tools are full-sized, practical, neat, and cheap; not mere toys. They enable any person to do his own half-soling, boot, shoe, rubber, harness, and tinware repairing.

This Outfit is the result of years of study, experiment, and correspondence in the manufacture of Iron Lasts and Repairing Outfits; and its practical advantages need only to be seen and tried to be appreciated.

Our Improved Iron Lasts and Standard are one of the handiest tools you can have about the place. The Lasts are four in number, smooth and solid, 4, 6, 8 ,and 10 inches long, thus enabling one to half-sole all sizes of foot-wear. The Standard is made with an iron base, which can be easily fastened to the bench. No method of half-soling is now used on common work, except that of iron last and wire clinch nails. The writer of this has been in the business 20 years, and has seen the changes from the old wooden lasts and pegs to the modern method, and knows it to be complete.

Our Improved Harness and Saw Clamp is an indispensable tool in sewing a harness or filing a saw. The jaws are thrown open mechanically by a coiled spring on the bolt.

The weight of this outfit is 18 lbs. Price, all complete, packed in a neat, strong box, only $3.00.

The Home Repairing Outfit No. 2.

COMPLETE BOOT, SHOE AND RUBBER REPAIRING OUTFIT, consisting of 31 first class tools and materials. The No. 2 outfit contains the same articles as the No. 1 except ing the Harness and Soldering Tools, and is gotten up for those who have no harness or tinware repairing to do. Price of No. 2, neatly boxed, $2.00, or with the paper one year, $2.75. Price of No. 1, neatly boxed, $3.00, or with the paper one year, $3.75.

FARM FIELD AND GARDEN

COLD FRAMES.

Useful For Winter Gardening—How to Construct One at Small Expense.

The use of a cold frame adds very materially to the lengthening out of the vegetable season. Any one handy with tools can easily construct a frame. This should be 6 feet wide and may be of any length desired. For ordinary family use a frame of four sashes that is 12 feet in length will be sufficient. Of course for market gardening purposes the extent is almost unlimited. The best location for such a frame is where there is an eastern or southeastern exposure and shelter from the north and northwest winds. Common hemlock boards will answer for the frame, according to American Agriculturist, authority for the following:

Before placing this in position the soil should be dug out to the depth of 10 or 12 inches. Then posts are to be driven at each corner and the boards nailed to these so that one-half of their width is above the level of the surface. The rear board should be 2 or 3 inches higher than the front one in order to give sufficient slope to the sashes. Three feet from the end there should be a crosspiece about 2 inches wide to strengthen the side boards and to serve as a support for the sashes. The space from which the soil has been dug out should now be filled in with the best and richest garden soil obtainable.

The frame is now ready to receive cabbage, cauliflower and lettuce plants for early spring transplanting. The usual number put under one sash is from 300 to 400. If the weather should be dry and the sun hot at midday, the plants may have to be shaded and watered once or twice. After they have once taken root there is very little trouble with them. The sashes should be raised on all warm, sunshiny days and well covered when the weather is cold.

Thus treated, lettuce plants will be ready for planting in hotbeds in January or February and the cabbage and cauliflower in the open ground as soon as the season opens. After the plants have been taken out the frame may be transformed into a hotbed, or it may be used to good advantage for transplanting tomatoes, eggplants, peppers, etc., out of a separate hotbed where the plants have been started. The cost of construction is but trifling, and sashes ready for use can be procured at a small cost.

Profitable Economies.

In California for years it was the rule to let rot on the ground all oranges that were sunburned or imperfect in any way—oversized or undersized or unmarketable from any other cause. As the orchards returned smaller profits, however, it was found that these fruits were valuable for marmalades and preserves, and they have now become no unimportant factor in the total income of the orange grower. Around the driers and canneries large heaps of peach and apricot stones accumulated and became a nuisance. It was afterward discovered that these would burn as well as the best stove coal, and they are now a source of profit, selling at $15 per ton as fuel, while their ash is rich in phosphoric acid and potash and valuable as a fertilizer.

Now a new industry in connection with raisin growing is about to be established at Fresno. Raisin seeds sell in Germany at $16 to $18 per ton. The seeds are said to contain from 30 to 40 per cent of glycerin and 16 per cent of essential oil. The proposition under consideration is the erection of a raisin seeding plant, thus increasing the value of the product and utilizing the seeds. Around all the wineries of the state are vast heaps of grape seeds and stems, all of which are now wasted, but which contain a large percentage of tannic acid, and in Europe form an important item in the product of the vineyard. It is small economies that enable us to withstand the hard times, and even California is learning this lesson. The feeding of waste apples and of pomace from cider mills and the use of apples for jelly, evaporating, etc., are other instances of profitable economies in horticulture, says American Agriculturist, authority for the foregoing.

Irrigation In Kansas.

The Kansas Farmer, so far from being ready to call a halt on irrigation development in western Kansas, expects to see the favorable results which have thus far followed well directed efforts greatly multiplied and a very large proportion of the now almost unused plains subjected to a change as magical as that produced by irrigation in the southern portion of our California friend's own state. So little accustomed are irrigators generally to finding great supplies of water in other than surface streams or lakes that they uniformly underestimate the invisible supply of the great plains and look upon the short grass which grows upon the surface as the only valuable product possible.

News and Notes.

New stock food composed of rice bran and waste molasses, so mixed as to be comparatively dry and easily handled, is to be introduced.

While more beet sugar comes to New York than to any other city, it is nearly all the German product.

The coming orange crop of California is estimated at 8,875 carloads. Last year's crop was 7,000 carloads.

It is not always good policy to drop a product because the price is low, for the probability is that farmers enough will do so to shorten the supply and run the price well up another year.

Peppermint is produced in New York and Michigan.

The richer the feed the stronger the manure and the better the crops of next season.

NEW YORK WEEKLY TRIBUNE

FOR Farmers & Villagers
FOR Fathers & Mothers,
FOR Sons & Daughters,
FOR
All the Family.

With the close of the Presidential campaign THE TRIBUNE recognizes the fact that the American people are now anxious to give their attention to home and business interests. To meet this condition, politics will have far less space and prominence, until another State or National occasion demands a renewal of the fight for the principles for which THE TRIBUNE has labored from its inception to the present day, and won its greatest victories.

Every possible effort will be put forth, and money freely spent, to make THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE pre-eminently a NATIONAL FAMILY NEWSPAPER, interesting, instructive, entertaining and indispensable to each member of the family.

☞ A GOOD, RELIABLE WATCH CHEAP. ☜
FREE FOR A CLUB OF TWENTY SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the demand for a good cheap watch, we have made arrangements to furnish this reliable and durable timepiece at a very low figure. This is no "below cost" or "sheriff sale" watch. The price we ask is more than we pay, but so little more that we could not send them a cent less if you ordered a bushel. ☞ There is

No Reliable Watch Cheaper Than This!

READ CAREFULLY! The movement is a 7 jeweled Elgin or Waltham with stem wind and stem set. To set the watch: Pull out the stem until it "clicks," when you can turn the hands at will. Press back in position to wind. By this arrangement you only need to open the watch to regulate it, and your movement is kept as nearly dust-proof as possible. The case is Silverold (not silver), yet can hardly be told from solid silver. Will keep its color always. Is screw back and bezel, tight fitting, handsome and strong and will last a lifetime. Before the late reduction in price of this movement the retail figure was $12.00. WE GUARANTEE this watch to be perfect, and will refund the money if not exactly as represented. REMEMBER, this is not a Chronometer, nor will it regulate the sun, but it is a good, reliable timekeeper. Sent by express for $5.75. If wanted by mail add 25c. for postage.

This movement in a solid silver case, described as above, only $9.50.

MASONIC CHART.

ILLUSTRATING THE RELATION OF SOME OF THE DEGREES AND RITES IN FREEMASONRY TO EACH OTHER.

The accompanying chart represents one hundred and forty two degrees.

1. The American Rite of 13 degrees;
2. The Scotch Rite of 33 degrees;
3. The Egyptian Rite of 96 degrees.
4. The Mystic Shrine of one degree.
5. The Eastern Star of 5 degrees for Master Masons and for women. These are side degrees, and not genuine masonry.

The Symbolic degrees, or Blue Lodge of three degrees, are common to every Masonic rite, whether American, Scotch, or Egyptian, or whichever of the Masonic rites, named in Mackey's Masonic Encyclopedia one may choose to investigate.

This chart shows in the Blue Lodge the position of the Worshipful Master and some of the other officers of the lodge. Several positions of the candidate who is being initiated are also shown. In the Master Mason's degree is recognized the murder, burial and resurrection scene so full of religious significance to Freemasons.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. 341 pages, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. 2 vols. Per vol., cloth, $1.00: paper, 65c.
The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive.
Vol. II comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 19° to 33rd degree inclusive.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. 274 pages, flexible cloth, 50c.
By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. 110 pages, paper, 25c.
The genuine old Morgan book republished.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry. By Avery Allyn. Cloth, $5.00.
Contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, and the Orange Societies.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Cloth, $2.50.
Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market, it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated."

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 75c.
Contains the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual.

Look to the East. A ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Cloth, $2.00.
Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or the Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. 16 pages, 5c.
Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge.

Mah-Hah-Bone; 589 pages; $1.00
Comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. Cloth, $1.00: paper cover, 50cts.
The complete revised ritual of the Lodge Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. Cloth, 50c; paper cover, 25c.
This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor of Evangelical Lutheran church. 10c. each.
This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and, the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias, Illustrated. Cloth, 50c: paper cover 25c.
An exact copy of the new official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the world, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. 15c each.

Finney on Masonry. Cloth 75c., paper 35c.
The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By ex-Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasony Self-Convicted. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40c.
This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them.

Judge Whitney's Defence before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. 15c.
Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. 10c.
This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life-undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder and Oaths of 33 degrees. 304 pages, cloth, $1.00,
"Composed of Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan: "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's, Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees."

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor of United Presbyterian church.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in New Berlin trials 10c.
The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiation by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co,, N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties,

Grand Lodge Masonry. 5c. each
Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to Republican Government. 15c.
By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio.

Story of the Gods. Postpaid, 10c.
By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of the past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood.

Masonic Outrages. Postpaid, 20c.
Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. 25c.
As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book. 25c.
Consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies.

The Image of the Beast; A Secret Empire; or Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy. By Rev. Richard Horton. Third Edition. 200 pages, cloth, 60c.

Sermon on Secretism. 5c. each.
By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear ayra of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all.

MONETARY CONFERENCE PEOPLE AGREE UPON A SCHEME.

Three Fundamental Principles Are Set Forth as the Things Needed to Reform the Currency System—Gold Standard and Retirement of the Greenbacks.

Indianapolis, Jan. 14.—At 10:30 o'clock yesterday the first morning session of the monetary conference was called to order. The convention has been conspicuous for the absence of unnecessary frills. The chief event of the morning session was the speech of Representative Fowler, of the banking and currency committee of the national house, in which he said: "There are three ways of escaping national bankruptcy at some time, if the present plan is to be continued: 1—We could assume full functions of banking, a step which is altogether out of the question; 2—we can tax the people when the emergency arises, which must prove, as it always has, a most expensive and burdensome policy and one to which the people will not long submit; 3—the retirement of the demand obligations of the government, a policy that is demanded by our own experience and approved by that of all the rest of the world. This is the only practical solution and it is our only remedy."

Committee Works Out a Plan.

With an exception in the case of Fowler all the speeches were limited to five minutes, and there were bushels of plans proposed for attaining the objects of the convention. To have read them all in full would have been impossible; so they were sent to the committee on resolutions unread. And that committee wrestled all day with the question of which was the best, or would a sort of "composite" plan—made of them all or several of them—be the thing wanted. A scheme was finally decided upon, reported to the convention, unanimously adopted and sine die adjournment reached a day or two ahead of the time expected by many people in this city.

CONVENTION PLATFORM ADOPTED.

Propositions the Convention Is Willing to Risk as Correct.

Following is the report of the committee:

This convention declares that it has become absolutely necessary that a consistent, straightforward and deliberately planned monetary system shall be inaugurated, the fundamental basis of which should be: First, that the present gold standard should be maintained; second, that steps should be taken to insure the ultimate retirement of all classes of United States notes by a gradual and steady process, and so as to avoid injurious contraction of the currency or disturbance of the business interests of the country; and that until such retirement provision shall be made for a separation of the revenue and note issue departments of the treasury. Third, that a banking system be provided which should furnish credit facilities to every portion of the country and an elastic circulation, especially with a view of securing such a distribution of the loanable capital of the country as will tend to equalize the rates of interest in all parts thereof.

For the purpose of effectively promoting the above objects—Resolved, that fifteen members of this convention be appointed by the chairman to act as an executive committee while this convention is not in session, with the full powers of this convention. The executive committee shall have the power to increase its membership to any number not exceeding forty-five, and five members thereof shall at all times constitute a quorum of said committee. The executive committee shall have special charge of the solicitation, receipt and disbursement of contributions voluntarily made for all purposes; shall have power to call this convention together again when and where it may seem best to said committee to do so, and shall continue in office with power to fill vacancies until discharged at a future meeting of this convention.

Resolved, That is shall be the duty of this executive committee to endeavor to procure of the special session of congress which it is understood will be called in March next legislation calling for the appointment of a monetary commission by the president to consider the entire question, and to report to congress at the earliest day possible.

IF CONGRESS REFUSES TO ACT

Commission of Eleven to Take Charge of the Matter.

Or failing to secure the above legislation they are hereby authorized and empowered to select a commission of eleven members, according to the rules and place set forth in the suggestions submitted to the convention by Mr. Hanna, of Indianapolis, as follows:

Article 1.—The commission shall consist of eleven members to be named by the executive committee appointed by this convention. The executive committee shall have power to fill vacancies in the commission as they may occur.

Article 2.—The first meeting of the commission shall be held at a time and place to be designated by the executive committee of this convention in a call to be issued therefor; and at such meeting the commission shall organize by the election of such officers and the adoption of such rules and by-laws for its own government as may be agreed by a majority of its members; and thereafter it shall be governed by such rules and by-laws subject to these articles.

Article 3.—All rules and by-laws of the commision and all its proceedings shall be directed towards the accomplishment of the objects of its creation, which is to make a thorough investigation of the monetary affairs and needs of this country in all relations and aspects, and to make appropriate suggestions as to any evils found to exist, and the remedies therefor; and no limit is placed upon the scope or such inquiry or the manner of conducting the same, excepting only that the expenses thereof shall not exceed the sums set apart for such purposes by the executive committee.

Article 4.—The executive committee of this convention shall use so much of the voluntary contributions made to it as may be available for that purpose to defray all necessary expenses of the commission, and shall notify the commission from time to time of the amount so available, in order that it may regulate its expenditures accordingly; and no liability shall be attached to said committee or to this convention beyond the amount so notified.

Article 5.—When the labors of this commission have been completed as far as practicable the executive committee, if it deems it advisable, shall issue a call to bring this convention together again at a time and place designated in such call, and at the meeting so convened the commission shall make report of its doings and suggestions in such manner and form as it shall deem best adapted to present the same to this convention and its members for action; and if legislation is deemed possible it shall accompany such report with a draft of such bill or bills providing for such legislation.

Resolved, That all resolutions and communications as to methods of currency reform which have been presented to this convention be referred to such commission when formed.

LAWMAKERS AT WORK.

Synopsis of Proceedings in the Senate and House.

Wahsington, Jan. 13.—The senate put in the day on the free homestead bill without action and Hill introduced a bill making the terms of postmasters four years, including those of the fourth-class. The day was largely devoted to political debate.

In the house the speaker sustained the point of order against recommitting the Pacific railways funding bill and Johnson and Maguire of California had a heated controversy regarding the raking up of an old sin of Johnson by Maguire in a speech only printed in The Record. Maguire lost the suqabble, as his "criticisms" of Johnson were stricken from The Record.

Washington, Jan. 14.—The senate agreed to vote on the free homestead bill at 4 p. m. today and spent the ballance of the day in executive session, at which talk was the order, and nothing was done except to refuse to adopt Secretary Olney's view of of the Orange Free State and the Argentina extradition treaties, and insist on the amendment made by the senate.

The house put in the day mostly on the bill to make imitation butter subject to the laws of the states. No final action was taken. A large number of bills of no general importance were passed, one being a senate bill allowing no criminal cases to go to the supreme court except those for capital offenses.

Wahington, Jan. 15.—In the senate the free homestead bill was passed—yeas, 35; nays, 11. A resolution was adopted for an inquiry into the alleged combination of lake carriers to maintain rates. Morgan introduced a resolution to inquire whether by the defeat of the Pacific railways their properties became the property of the United States. An attempt to make the Nicaragua bill unfinished business failed for want of a quorum—33 to 6. Adjourned to Monday.

The house passed the bill making imitation dairy products subject to the laws of the state regardless of the original package decision—126 to 96. The Indian appropriation bill was reported. A resolution was adopted asking the navy department what it would cost to put the old frigate Constitution in a seaworthy condition. A pension bill was passed giving the widow of the late Rear Admiral Carter a pension of $50 per month.

Washington, Jan. 16.—The proceedings in the house yesterday were very tame. It was private bill day, but the whole time was consumed in passing through the house bills favorably acted upon in committee of the whole before the holiday recess. The widow of the late Major General John Gibbon was the beneficiary of a bill that passed carrying $100 per month, and the widow of Brevet Major General W. A. Nichols of another carrying $75 per month. The free homestead bill which came back to the house with senate amendments was referred.

At the evening session fourteen private pension bills were reported with a favorable recommendation. Among them were bills granting a pension of $50 per month to the widow of General Green Clay Smith and $75 per month to the widow of General Henry A. Morrow.

Fairbanks Nominated for Senator.

Indianapolis, Jan. 13.—C. W. Fairbanks was nominated for senator at the joint caucus last night, receiving 60 votes.

A COMBINED S. S. SINGING-BOOK.

The enterprising publishers, S. W. Straub & Co., Auditorium Building, Chicago, have put into one volume two of their most popular Sunday-school Singing-books, "Beautiful Songs" and "Living Fountain," making a work twice the usual size. The price is the same as that of ordinary books. 35c. (The publishers will mail one sample copy for examination upon receipt of only 20c.) Mr Straub's books have always been regarded as very excellent, and this combined book with its double amount of the richest music and its extremely low price will be quickly appreciated by our best schools.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

A Red-Letter Year for 1897

THE ENTIRE NOVELTY of many of the plans for 1897 is noticeable. For instance, the series devoted to

"LONDON, AS SEEN BY CHARLES DANA GIBSON." Mr. Gibson has not before appeared as a writer. He visited London last summer for SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE, for the purpose of depicting with pen and pencil those scenes and types which the huge metropolis presents in endless variety.

Of like novelty is the first considerable

NOVEL BY RICHARD HARDING DAVIS, "Soldiers of Fortune." The hero is one of the most vigorous men that Mr. Davis has drawn. Illustrated by C. D. Gibson.

"THE CONDUCT OF GREAT BUSINESSES." A beautifully illustrated series of articles of which the following are already completed:

"The Great Department Store."
"The Management of a Great Hotel."
"The Working of the Bank."
"A Great Manufactory."

"UNDERGRADUATE LIFE IN AMERICAN COLLEGES." A series of articles touching upon the life of our older universities as represented by the doings of the students themselves. Judge Henry E Howland writes on "Undergraduate Life at Yale." Mr. James Alexander on "Princeton," and Robert Grant and Edward S. Martin on "Harvard."

"JAPAN AND CHINA SINCE THE WAR" will be a most interesting group of articles richly illustrated.

"THE UNQUIET SEX." Under the title of "The Unquiet Sex," Mrs. Helen Watterson Moody will write a series of articles: "Woman and Reforms," "The College Bred Woman," "Woman's Clubs," and "The Case of Maria" (a paper on domestic service).

W. D. HOWELLS'S "STORY OF A PLAY." In this Mr Howells gives us the best novel he has ever produced in his delightful vein of light comedy.

GEORGE W. CABLE In addition to the fiction enumerated there will be a series of four short stories by George W Cable, the only ones he has written for many years

HOW TO TRAVEL WISELY with a minimum of wear and tear must be regarded as an art little understood. Mr. Lewis Morris Iddings, in two articles, will offer a variety of useful suggestions and data on "Ocean and Land Travel." This will be happily rounded out by an article from Mr Richard Harding Davis on "Travellers One Meets: Their Ways and Methods." The illustrations by American and foreign artists will be highly pertinent.

The Missouri State Convention will meet at Kirksville, Feb. 4 and 5. Read the program on 9th page.

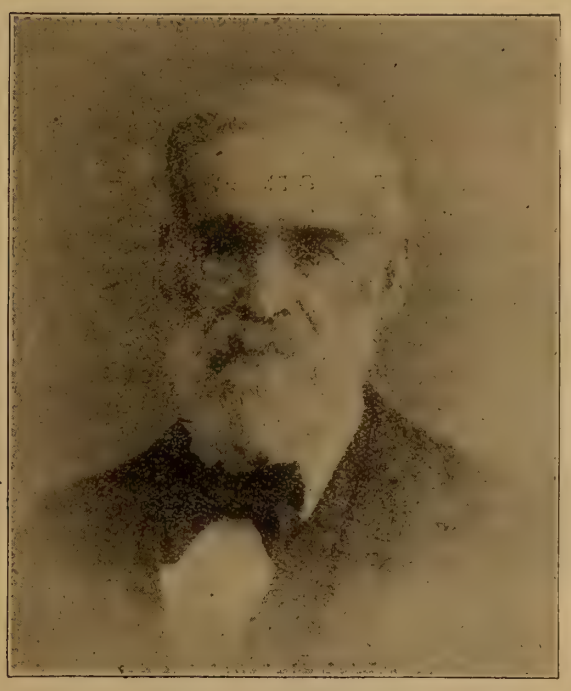
Men consent to the lodge denial of Christ, who yet hope that he will not deny or ignore them in turn before his Father and the holy angels.

When a friend in the ministry dies, what a satisfaction it is to remember that, so far as the secret abominations of the lodge are concerned, he kept himself unspotted from the world.

Is it any credit to you not to know the nature of a prevalent evil that seduces thousands in your own land? False religion, false morality and false citizenship flaunt themselves in your streets and parade themselves in your churches, yet you are not ashamed to know nothing.

The program of the Minnesota State convention at Willmar, Feb. 23 and 24, has not reached us, though it was promised this week. Rev. T. C. Sproull, who rendered such valuable assistance at the Columbus Ohio State convention last year, is expected to be one of the speakers. Let as many as possible arrange to attend and help at this convention.

The Chicago Record of Jan 15 says: "There is trouble between the members of the Woodmen of the World and the sovereign officers, and secession and a partial disruption of the order may be the ultimate result. Omaha is so far interested in the fight that if the members win and the sovereign officers lose, the general headquarters will be removed from this city to Chicago. In place of these headquarters, however, Omaha will remain the center of the subordinate camps in four States: Nebraska, N. Dakota, S. Dakota and Minnesota, which would form a separate order, connected by only the slightest bonds with the Woodman of the World. The agitation was started by the local members who desired to sever their connection with the Southern States. The organization is incorporated under the laws of Illinois.



REV. E. L. HARRIS.

This is the picture taken on his eightieth birthday of one of our pioneer reformers, who has taken the Cynosure from its infancy. He spent most of his youth among the green hills of Vermont and at the time of the Morgan tragedy was ten years old. In 1843 he graduated at Colgate University, and soon after was ordained to the Gospel ministry. He has been pastor of five congregations, none of which allowed slave-holders or secretists in their membership. In 1850 he came to Wisconsin, and was pastor for four years of the Baptist church at Beloit. He has since resided near Delevan, Wis., except a few years near the close of the war he went South as a missionary among the Freedmen. Because he could not smother his conscience on the lodge question, he has since contented himself by preaching for the poor rural congregations in Southern Wisconsin.

Rev. E. L. Harris imbibed an intense hatred of Freemasonry when a youth. He eagerly read a liberal supply of Anti-masonic literature provided by his father during the Morgan excitement. In 1872 he organized, with the aid of Bro. Parsons, an Anti-masonic society of thirteen members, in Delevan, which the year following sent him as a delegate to the Monmouth Anti-secret State Convention. Here he arranged with Pres. C. A. Blanchard, then a student at Wheaton, for a course of lectures at Delevan. The first was delivered in a small hall owned by one of the members. Here the young lecturer so powerfully impressed his audience that he was invited to lecture Sabbath afternoon in the Congregational church and in the evening in the Baptist church, where he spoke to crowded houses; but the pastors all had engagements elsewhere. Bro. Harris and one other member are all that are left of this aggressive anti-secret society, and their hall has gone into the hands of a Milwaukee Brewing Co.

If bowing to the East was an "abomination," as reported in the eighth chapter of Ezekiel, it cannot be a worthy action to bow to the East in order to worship the sun in imitation of the very same idolatry in a Masonic lodge.

Tampering with the forms of heathenism, and indulging such fondness for them as appear in enthusiastic advocacy, together with spite against rebuke and antagonism, may involve peril to the soul. How long can one wear Satan's armor and march in his ranks, and yet be in no degree his soldier?

There is a preacher in Boston who worships the true God in a splendid temple dedicated to him. In a "high place" or upper room he "bows to the East" like those exposed in the eighth chapter of Ezekiel. In thus combining two incompatible things, one of which is pagan, he copies Solomon.

General Secretary Phillips spent several days in Indiana last week attending to important financial interests of the N. C. A. He visited Bro. Isaac Crane, at Peru, and found him strong in faith and devotion to the anti-secret cause, though suffering in body from an attack of paralysis. His present desire was to make a large cash donation to the cause, but was prevented by an action begun by relatives. Would that all friends of our cause could realize the importance of acting as their own executors while it is in their power to do so.

Lodgery is a vice that includes denial of Jesus and the cultivation of ideas that resist the Gospel. It involves making promises that are not right. It is essentially vicious and practically does an appalling amount of mischief. It is a dreadful snare to souls. Yet there seems to be a tendency to regard it as something to be made an exception among sins, so as to go unreproved. Thus its victims are seduced, unwarned and afterward are not led back to repentance. But the Scripture says, "Cry aloud, spare not; lift up thy voice like a trumpet and show my people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins." Isa. 58: 1.

A Missouri paper announces their State anti-secret convention next week as follows: "A convention 'opposed to secret societies' will be held at Kirksville, on the 4th and 5th of February next. This will be the first move towards the complete extermination of these secret orders, we suppose. It is a wonder some wiseacre has not risen ere this and put a stop to the foolish people who are inveigled into the lodge rooms of the country. We would suggest a hollow-horned ruminant of the genus Capri be procured to 'butt' people out instead of into these secret orders. They are harmful—to the people who can't get on the inside."

THE CONFLICT.

BY G. W. CLARK.

We're afloat, we're afloat, on a fierce rolling tide;
True freedom's our bark, and the truth is our guide;
No rest for the sluggard, no peace for the foe,
But thro' all opposition right onward we go.

The storm gathers round us, the thunder is heard,
What matter? our bark rideth on like a bird,
With the flag of true freedom above our true men;
We have braved it before and will brave it again.

Far above the dark storm-cloud the clear sunbeams rest,
And the bright bow of promise gleams forth on its breast;
Before us a future of labor and love,
True brethren around us, a just God above.

A future of labor, brave, honest and free!
No oath-bound clan, but a brotherhood we;
A future of love when the just and the true,
Shall rule in the place of the cable-towed crew.

Throw out the broad canvas to catch the free wind,
Leave old party issues like rubbish behind;
With justice and love to lead on the van,
Live and die we for freedom, for truth and for man.

JESUITRY AND THE A. P. A.

EXTRACT FROM AN ADDRESS BY REV. J. M. FOSTER, BEFORE THE NEW ENGLAND ANTI SECRET CONVENTION IN BOSTON, TUESDAY EVENING, DEC. 1, 1896.

It is only a comparatively short time since the Masons proclaimed themselves opposed to Rome. That sounds like the Jesuit's voice. The Jesuits in the Illuminati always proclaimed against the order of Jesuits. That was to mislead the public and disarm suspicion. What if Rome is doing the same in the Masonic lodges in our country now? What shall we say of the A. P. A.? They are what the reading societies were in Europe. The Jesuits use them and they are using the A. P. A. Archbishop Ireland talks Americanism to capture the A. P. A. Beware lest he lead the whole fraternity into the Roman camp in broad daylight. The growth of the A. P. A. has been wonderful. But they have adopted the methods of the Jesuits in becoming a secret, oath-bound society. The Jesuits are members of their order and are directing their movements as a father guides the steeds while his boy holds the lines before his hands and thinks he is doing it all.

The A. P. A.'s are the greatest dupes of the nineteenth century. Out of their two or three million of alleged members, not more than one in eight are church members. Can you not see the hand of the Jesuits in that, breaking down the faith of our citizens and making skeptics and scoffers of them? I do not believe the King of nations will permit a secret order of skeptics to destroy Rome and save this nation. History assures us that a secret order of skeptics is the destruction of the social order.

Let the A. P. A.'s remember that in adopting secrecy as a method they have put themselves in the same list with the Jesuits, and made themselves their silly instruments. If the A. P. A.'s are patriots, actuated by love of country, let them adopt open, patriotic methods. Secrecy is un-American, un-Republican. Open public discussion is the only method for Christian citizens to adopt in fighting the battle for truth. In this we follow the great Exemplar, who said, "In secret have I said nothing."

If I could get the ear of my fellow citizens in the A. P. A., I would say, avoid secrecy as you avoid the plague. You break your covenant with the whole people in adopting secrecy. The best people will not join a secret oath-bound society. You have left the camp of the patriots and gone into the enemy's camp; and while you imagine you are fighting the foe, you are really the blind instrument of the enemy, fighting against the cause of the whole people. "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof is death."

Your secrecy is the foil in which the dynamite of Jesuitry is concealed. Weishaupt, the founder of the Illuminati, was an implacable foe of the Jesuits, and yet the Jesuits used that order. Here is what they said: "The greatest strength of our order lies in its concealment. Let it never appear in any place in its own name, but always covered by another name and another occupation. None is fitter than the three lower degrees of Masonry; the public is accustomed to that order, expects little from it, and therefore takes little notice of it.

"Next to this the form of a literary or learned society is best suited to our purpose; and had Freemasonry not existed this cover would have been employed; and it may be much more than a cover, it may be a powerful engine in our hands. By establishing reading societies and subscription libraries and taking these under our direction and supplying them through our labors, we may turn the public mind which way we will."

The A. P. A. is a still better engine in the hands of the Jesuits. Remember that secret methods in politics lead to the reign of terrors. The A. P. A.'s have no more right to a place in politics, as a secret society, than the Jesuits. The A. P. A.'s and the Jesuits have no more right to adopt secret methods than the Republican and Democratic parties. If these two parties were to adopt the secret methods of the A. P. A.'s and the Jesuits, the cry of alarm would be raised all over the land. Brethren of the A. P. A., the rapids are before you. You are in the current that leads to Niagara. Beware of the folly of going on blindly until you cannot get back. Turn while there is hope of reaching the shore. Put away secret methods. He that is of the truth cometh to the light.

THE FOOLISHNESS OF PREACHING.

BY PROF. J. M. COLEMAN.

It seems probable that Paul in the statement, of which the headline is a part, is not giving expression to a sentiment of his own, but to what his opponents had to say about him and his work. Teaching, such as was carried on by Jesus and his successors in the ministry, was a new method of presenting religious truth. To those who had been trained in the ceremonies of the Jews, or the materialism of the heathen, it doubtless seemed the "foolishness of preaching." Whether from that time to this the idea has returned to trouble the preacher, concerns us less than the fact that it seems to be having a renaissance in this present age. To be sure, there is still preaching and preachers, but if the old couplet have any significance, the present movement is somewhat ominous. Whether this statement of things has come about through the preaching of foolishness, or the foolishness of preachers, or from some social movement which was beyond their control, it would be difficult and also hazardous to draw conclusions, but the fact obtrudes itself in such a way as to attract notice. It is the aim of this article to state the problem and leave the solution to some one who can speak with authority and not as the ordinary scribe. One looks with a feeling akin to awe on one of the sermons of the fathers which was somewhat deficient if it lacked a score of points, as he compares it with the modern Sabbath evening discourse which is set forth for the delectation of a city audience.

When saints begin to dwindle sma'
They're ga'en ta vanish soon,

It is still customary for those who have a name to be living, whatever the fact may be, to attend the morning service, or delegate their wives to the conventional body which meets at the morning hour, but that usually fulfills their religious constitution. In the evening the young people have their meeting on the hour before the service, and, joyful in a sense of duty well done, they go home, or somewhere, leaving the preacher a few gray heads that seem like snow patches on the barren interior.

To meet this difficulty some of the churches bring in a responsive service with the hope that it will bring in a crowd, but the success is not so great as to conclude that a liturgy is what is needed. Others advertise a ten-minute sermon sandwiched in between solos and various other performances which are supposed to be sacred because of the evening on which they are given. But even this minimum of preaching seems hardly acceptable as a part of the performance.

If preaching is to be reduced to a vanishing point, will not the preacher also pass from the scene? He might be useful as an adviser or ex-officio member of numberless committees which make up the modern church, but in his past position he would not be needed. While proposing no solution for the problem which is troubling many pastors, history indicates that all movements have a re-action, and it may come in time to preserve the office.

VAIN OBLATIONS.

BY H. D. WHITCOMB.

Since the first week of this year, commonly observed as "week of prayer," most of the churches in this city have been holding special evangelistic services. These have been indifferently attended, and there has been little of the revival spirit in those who do go. The spiritual apathy is so apparent as to cause frequent remarks from those who have enjoyed gracious outpourings of God's Spirit in times past. The refrain,

"Look how we grovel here below,
Fond of these trifling toys;
Our souls can neither fly nor go
To reach eternal joys,"

has been the burden of many a heart, if not the burden of song or speech. There is, doubtless, some honest enquiry why Zion is left desolate, and why she don't "arise and shine," as predicted in Isa. 60:1, and show forth the "glory of the Lord." The writer attended one of these meetings, where were assembled a goodly number of women and eight men, by actual count. Six of these were party Prohibitionists, a very different ratio from that of the late election returns, but quite common in the prayer meetings. Of course, should we attempt to explain this condition, we should tread on many churchly toes. We have denied God in the last election, in the person of the poor, the unfortunate and the tempted. This calls for repentance, and the forsaking of whiskey license parties, if we would enjoy ease of conscience, and the presence of the Holy Spirit.

It would still further "chill the meeting" to say that it was mean and pusilanimous to appoint a Temperance Sunday, and rehearse the State platitudes about the "wicked rumseller" after election, and the mischief is done and the saloon is in the saddle. Such a thing would be thought outrageous, but we believe it within the facts, if not the proprieties of the case. Many of the speeches were good concerning the folly, weakness and spiritual imbecility caused by sin in general. Lot in Sodom, and Sampson in the lap of Delila, were cited as illustrations of those in improper places. To us they represented the Christian in a license party or a Christless lodge. The large preponderance in the prayer meeting of females seeking holiness by prayer and faith, and like preponderance of males in the lodges seeking purity by the compass and square or the three links, indicates the necessity of woman's vote if we would preserve our government as a Christian nation. In short, we must do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with God if we would enjoy his presence or preserve our institutions.

Bloomington, Ill.

IF I ONLY KNEW.

BY REV. D. B. GUNN.

If the churches in the denominations which profess to be set for the defense and promotion of the truth as it is in Jesus, would only take Gospel ground and their proper stand against these unholy and abominable things, have no fellowship with them, preach, pray and vote against them as they should, they would fast fall into disrepute, and in the not far distant future sink back into "the hole from whence they were digged." The besom of destruction would smite them from the face of this fair earth. But this great subterfuge is standing in the way: "If I knew it would be a success, if I knew it would be of any use, if I knew that a majority of others would come out and do the thing so as to give it popularity, I would not lose my vote, put forth my effort in vain, nor be called a crank and the like."

Such poor metal in our fellowmen, on the part of brethren beloved, is a trial of one's faith and patience, and calls for straight standing up, plain and pointed words. Where are the champions of true principle, and the heroes of truth and righteousness? If such fear and subserviancy had been the course pursued by our forefathers, when would we have had an American Republic, a free and independent nation? If all Christians acted thus, what would be the condition of the world? It is time for every civilized nation, for this democratic government, for the churches of our Lord Jesus Christ, for all Christians and liberty-loving men and women, to assert themselves and act up to principle and Gospel teaching. Even though they may not be able to say that they knew what the result will be, how the reform will be brought about, in what way salvation and victory will come, they ought to be able to say, I do know what my own conscience tells me, what the Word of God teaches, what real moral and Christian principle calls for, and I will act accordingly. I do now in the fear of God, to whom I must give account, decide what is right and just. I will act accordingly and leave all results with him to whom they belong, and who holds all destiny in his own hands.

So did our pilgrim fathers and the heroes of our national independence, and we have this glorious country. So did those sturdy men who subscribed their names unflinchingly to the Declaration of Independence, in the face of great uncertainty and threatened defeat; and as a God-consummated result we have this free republican government, the pride of her own subjects, and the admiration of the world. Look at the examples given us by the Abolitionists of 1840 to 1860, led by such valiant men as Birney, Adams, Hale, Garrison, Sumner and Phillips; and the United States was freed from the curse of American slavery. So let all the Prohibitionists and saloon haters stand and act as one man in the fear of God. And so likewise everyone whose eyes are open to the evils and threatening tendencies of secret societies. And those whose eyes, ears and hearts are not open so as to see and know how unpatriotic, un-Christian and perilous these institutions of darkness are, need to have the light turned on, line upon line and precept upon precept, until they do see and know the dangers and wickedness which, like a hidden viper, lie along the pathway.

Why do any wait to know the results of right doing? What have we to do with the results of right political or religious action, more than with the results of our seed sowing and cultivating, our preaching and praying? He who made the laws and gave the commands, holds all the responsibility of results in his own hands. They do not belong to us at all. This we are responsible for, not to be unequally yoked together with unbelievers; to come out from among rumsellers, rum-drinkers, secret lodgeites and harlots; be separate; have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness but rather reprove them; touch not anything unclean; teach, preach, warn and beseech men to turn from Satan and sin, to Christ and righteousness. Then how favored and happy will we be, with God for our Father, and we his sons and daughters. Thus will our hands be clean of guilt, our skirts clear of blood; we will receive the approval of our own consciences, the approbation of God, the smiles of heaven, and a final welcome to a glorious reward.

A NEW PAPAL MOVEMENT.

BY H. M. HUGUNIN.

A dispatch from Rome, dated Dec. 31, 1896, and bearing the air of a genuine telegram, has been published. It says:

"The Pope to-day gave an audience to a body representing the old pontifical army. He made an address to the representatives, in which, after speaking of the services rendered by the army, he declared that the papacy would finally triumph. He added that he had received offers from Canada, Ireland, Spain and elsewhere, from people who were ready to hasten to the defense of the papacy. He hoped the moment would soon come when he would see himself surrounded anew by sons as faithful and as well-beloved as those which had comprised the pontifical army. The speech has produced a deep impression on all circles here."

There is nothing to indicate what this regathering of the pontifical forces may mean. The Chicago Tribune, however, formulates its idea of the movement:

"Does this mean that the papists of Canada, Ireland, Spain and elsewhere intend to organize a crusade to invade Italy, make war on the Italian government in behalf of the papacy, overthrow it, seat the Pope on the throne of the Cæsars, and make him the political head of the nation as well as the spiritual father? Thus flatly violating Christ's orders to give unto Cæsar the things thrt are Cæsar's, viz., political rule. If these papalites undertake that job, they will find themselves in the condition of the man who 'bit off more tobacco than he could chaw.' The Pope's political rule over Italy in the future is an iridescent dream, never to be realized in this world before the archangel blows his resurrection trumpet. The powers of science and the political rights of man will prevent the index on the dial going backward. The Pope has enough theological business to attend to, to occupy all his leisure."

One would think so; but he may also be ambitious for worldly honors, like old Cardinal Wolsey—and "get left."

The union of the Italian States and their deliverance from papal dominion was established on the 2d of October, 1870, after Victor Emmanual's army had occupied Rome, and the city had been surrendered to the royal troops. That event virtually ended the temporal power of the Pope. By a vote of the people, the ten States of Italy were dissolved and united in the kingdom of Italy.

WAR AND CARNAGE.

An open letter to John B. Wood, of the Peace and Arbitration Society, Germantown, Pa.:

In the work thus far of the Peace and Arbitration movement, one most important phase of this subject seems to have been almost wholly overlooked. I refer to the secret empire within our Republic, with its vast standing army. For years the Knights Templar, Freemasons, Odd-fellows, Knights of Pythias and other secret societies have been familiarizing the public with the panoply of war. The triennial conclaves, grand encampments and national drills have impressed the multitudes with their numbers, skill and power.

The writer has seen the United States troops and State troops, Zouaves and legitimate soldiery under review by the President and generals. He has also viewed the prize drills of the crack commanderies of Knights Templar and other branches of this widespread secret armament, and the superiority of the latter over the former is remarkable. This pseudo military is thoroughly armed, officered and equipped. They are drilling almost nightly in the most modern and improved tactics. There is a vast display of forces on every possible occasion. Every boy that looks upon all this marching and countermarching, the costly uniforms, glitter and glare, fairly worships it. It feeds and develops the war spirit. It is contagious.

There are sons of veterans, boys by the thousands in our public school, armed and uniformed, and even boys' brigades in our churches, with the accouterments of war on their persons and implements of blood in their hands Nor is all this unauthorized armament an accident. There is brain, method and purpose in it. Those able-bodied soldiers, the very flower of the nation, are neither idiots nor children. Seceders from every department, under civil affidavit, assure the populace that those "sir knights" and "eminent commanders" are awfully in earnest. That they are sworn by the most solemn vows to draw their swords and march at the dead hour of midnight to defend despotism and imperialism—"most worshipful grand masters, sublime princes, kings and grand kings."

Immense treasury, time and thought is in all this deployment and maneuvering. The American people are sowing to the wind and they will reap the very whirlwind. A discussion of the government of Freemasonry and kindred orders will prove the increasing and imminent danger from all this. Americans should rally as one man—the pulpit, the press and the platform—to arouse the commonwealth to the usurping, encroaching enemy that has established itself, and is so rapidly preparing the multitudes for blood and carnage.

This nation is at this hour a vast magazine of powder, shot and shell. At a moment's notice from the "Most Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander" every department of this gigantic military octopus may be set in motion. The United States is a pausing volcano of the most awful military forces. Every patriot, Christian and philanthropist should be up and doing. Pray that God in his infinite wisdom may restrain these agents of death and destruction. A little more sleep, a little more slumber, and a "French commune" may shatter our Republic to atoms, or a spark ignite a war that will be the Armegeddon. For years the gravity of this tremendous subject has been forcing itself upon my mind as I have studied these monitors on every hand. I would not be an alarmist, but unless something is done, and that quickly, the terrible crisis may be upon us. What think you of these things?

THE DEVIL AT THE LORD'S SUPPER.

I once heard a minister declare from the pulpit on a Communion Sabbath, that believers have no fellowship with each other in the Lord's Supper, that they have fellowship only with Christ; and that though the devil were a participant, that would be no bar to communion. I confess I would not like to put the symbols of Christ's body and blood into the hands of the devil; nor would I like to receive them from his hands—it was an extravagant expression at least. But he was a Freemason, and perhaps he was on rather familiar terms with his Satanic majesty.

"The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ? For we being many, are one head and one body; for we are all partakers of that one head.....Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord and the cup of devils; ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table and of the table of devils." 1 Cor. 10:16, 17, 21. "Wherefore, come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you." 2 Cor. 6:17.

KANSAS BORDER RUFFIAN CONFLICT.

O fair, traditioned Kansas,
Thy prairie farms and groves
Are full of thrilling memories
And tales of early days.
Thy story-haunted waters
In music gush along;
Thy eastern slopes are tragedies,
Thy grassy vales are song.

The Free State settlers in and about Fort Scott were constantly harassed and in peril of robbery or murder at the hands of bands under such Pro-slavery and border ruffian leaders as Charles Hamilton, Brockett and G. W. Clark. Out on the "Osage" some miles from Fort Scott resided one Montgomery, who, from the first, had fought the Pro-slavery claim-jumpers off his claim; at first single-handed, then with a few friends for mutual protection, gradually gathering strength till he became the acknowledged leader of hundreds of Free State men, and a constant menace to Hamilton and his gang of outlaws.

Montgomery now assumed the aggressive in defense of his suffering brethren at and near the fort, swooping down upon the town at intervals when notified of their suffering and danger, threatening the destruction of the town and holding possession till getting a promise of good behavior from the Pro-slavery citizens.

Still in Montgomery's absence Hamilton and Brockett succeeded in continually stirring up feuds between the elements, to the detriment of the Free State settlers.

Thus it continued through 1857, till by 1858 it became unbearable, and Montgomery took his force and raided the town, driving the Pro-slavery leaders into Missouri. But hardly had his men become settled on their claims again till the Pro-slaveryites were back committing their usual depredations. Montgomery quickly mustered his force again and made a night raid, taking the town by surprise. The offenders came out and held a parley with him, and while this was going on Marshal Little opened a door and discharged a shotgun into the crowd, the load taking effect in the person of Kagi, one of John Brown's men. Fortunately his clothing was heavy and the shot were small, inflicting but little damage. The fire was returned and Little was killed. After the ordinary resolutions of respect by the lodge he was buried with Masonic honors.

Montgomery proved too much for them in this semi-guerrilla warfare, and they resorted to their cowardly practice of calling the United States troops to their aid. These were sent out after Montgomery and his forces, coming upon them unawares. They fled from the United States troops, of course, not wishing any conflict with the government. But being pressed too hard, they dismounted in a narrow defile and opened fire on them, killing a soldier and the horse of the commander.

This necessitated a halt on the part of the pursuers, as the falling horse pinned the commander to the ground; and in the confusion Montgomery escaped with one man wounded. This was made much of by the Pro-slaveryites; but in view of the needlessness of calling on the United States troops at this time, they were rather incensed against them than against Montgomery, and nothing really came of this bold defense against the United States authorities, only increased depredations on Free State settlers thereabouts. After a short interval Montgomery resumed his defense of his friends at Fort Scott. On one occasion, when Old John Brown was with him, Brown wanted to destroy the town and be done with it; but Montgomery would not consent to it, and Brown would not enter the town with him at all.

Late in April, 1858, it became necessary for Montgomery to raid the town again in defense of his suffering friends. This was evidently a put-up job on him, for unbeknown to him and his friends the United States troops were near by and Montgomery was captured by them. But complaints were made to the commander against the Pro-slavery element with such effect that he required a promise at their hands that they would not molest Free State citizens or settlers. Montgomery, however, was retained in the custody of the troops, who started to Lecompton with him; but before reaching that place they were overtaken by messengers, who declared that the Free State people were being depredated as bad as ever.

At this the commander swore that if they would not regard their promise and keep the peace when they had it entirely within their power to do so, he might go back and fight it out with them. So, to their amazement, Montgomery and his force was soon after them again, and they were again forced to a degree of moderation.

REFORM NEWS.

THE DARK SIDE OF JOHNSTOWN.

LATROBE, Pa., Jan. 21, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—My meetings for a week past have been in the German Baptist Brethren churches near Johnstown, Pa. Addresses were given as follows: Thursday eve, Roxbury; Friday eve, Yoder's Hill; Saturday eve and Sabbath A. M., Walnut Grove; Sabbath eve, Yoder's Hill; Tuesday eve, Benshoff Hill. These meetings were all well attended, and collections indicated a willingness to help. Some appeared glad, others sad; and some were happy, others angry, as usual. My home was generally with the elders, who did much to make the meetings the success that they were. Elders Berkley, Dover, Myers, Fyock, Blough, Deitz and Harrison all rendered substantial aid. Bro. Noffsinger agreed to canvass for subscriptions to the Cynosure and Lodge Lamp.

There are about forty copies of our paper going to Johnstown now. Mrs. Sadie Brallier Noffsinger delivered an address on "The Dark Side of Johnstown," that brought many curses from those who "love darkness rather than light." The facts that she gives, and the pictures she draws are, we fear, terribly true. Seventy saloons in Johnstown! What untold misery must accompany them. This address is in pamphlet form and can be had by sending ten cents to the author. My home when on Benshoff Hill was with Bro. E. Rhodes. Some lodgemen responded to his invitation to come and hear me. I began speaking at 7:30. The interest being much, I kept on until 10:45. All remained to hear me through. Many expressed approval, and some ordered books.

Johnstown has a light border if it does have its "dark side." Christian friends are there being raised up who may be counted on the Lord's side. I think it will prove a good center for a convention at some future day. There were many protracted meetings in progress. More than forty had united with the Brethren church as the result of the special meetings held there. The vast amount of evil in Johnstown can only be overcome by the power of the Holy Spirit, for "it is not by might nor by power but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." I am sure God will bless the effort of your agent. Some good will be done by this visit.

I am at the home of M. H. Steele. He is a member of the Presbyterian church, Latrobe. A visit to the pastor of this church assured us of his sympathy. He is consulting officers and will report this evening if the church will be open for my work. In this church there are many secret society members and great need for work in my line. Wm. MacFarland, of the New Alexandria Covenanter church, entertained me last night and has been taking me about in his carriage today.

THE PETITIONS.

Several friends who are circulating the petitions have been heard from. Word comes from Philadelphia, New Castle, Esther, Rockton, Hartville, Emaus, Mount Jackson, York, De Gala, Pittsburgh and elsewhere in the State, giving evidence that a beginning is made. No one to whom petitions have been sent has written declining to circulate them. Some write that they will do what they can, which no doubt means much. The Beacon Light Mission, Philadelphia, reports receipts to aid in the circulating. Bro. Milligan writes that his church ought to take a collection to aid the cause. Bro. Irvine Caldwell promises financial help. Nearly six sheets of the petitions have been filled with the names of those attending my lectures.

I should be glad if all friends circulating the petitions would report progress. How many names have you now? Do you need more petitions? If for any reason you cannot aid in circulating the petitions, but have received them, don't fail to let me know, that some one else may be asked to canvass your town. If your church will take a collection, or you expect to give to further this work, let me know, that we may push accordingly. We have thousands of names of pastors and others that may aid if furnished with petitions. Who will help furnish them?

Don't say, "It will do no good." It has done good already in stirring up the people and finding friends. If we go to Harrisburg with a respectable petition we will get a hearing. It will be published in the newspapers, and God alone can tell what the result will be. So push the petitions. Let us hear from all at once.

Address, W. B. STODDARD.

215 Four and one half St, N. W. Washington, D. C.

Solomon followed strange gods and frequented high places. He went to the true temple for true worship, and to the high place for false worship. In this sense he was a Freemason. He had more than one religion. So do Freemasons who profess to be Christians.

OUR TENNESSEE COLPORTEUR.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 18, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—With a good conscience I am doing what I can to let in the light on some of the darkness that prevails on the secrecy question. The popularity of this evil among Christians is amazing. Yet I am refreshed in spirit sometimes in talking with ministers who are Masons and yet have no words of commendation for them. But others are ready to extol what they deem to be virtues in them. Rev. A. C. Moore, a Baptist, of Bells, seemed willing to hear what I had to say, and rather acceded to my charges against Masonry than otherwise.

Rev. J. I. Ayres, a Baptist, acknowledged himself a high Mason, and in reply to my suggestions about its un-Christian principles, said that he would investigate that matter. Is it not passing strange that intelligent Christian ministers will for many years belong to a fraternity of such mammoth proportions and yet pay little heed to its bearing upon the religion which they preach?

At Lexington I received a good supply of Lodge Lamps and other leaves that shine away the darkness from many minds concerning the lodge system generally. And I lost no time in circulating them freely. A Baptist elder here who was not inclined to talk on the subject finally said, "I will not argue the subject with you."

The Methodist pastor at Bells, whose meetings I had attended in another place, entertained me hospitably, making me welcome in his home. He said he had not attended a lodge in fifteen years. But he also said that the exposures were not to be depended upon. "Those oaths that Masons take are sacred, and an honest man will not go back on them."

I said an oath to do wrong cannot be morally binding.

He said: "But they do not bind me to do wrong."

I replied, they bind you to screen a brother Mason in crime.

He said: "If they do that I do not know it."

I asked him what about the requirement "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers?" He then spoke in very significant terms of his dislike to that part of it, and appeared to be disgusted at the way Masonic funerals were conducted, with such unworthy chaplains to officiate, and said. "My wife will never allow a Masonic funeral over me." He said, "They came to me with the literature you left with them, to know if it was true, and I told them to read it, for I had no time to examine it."

He also said to me, "You go ahead in your work; you have not taken the oaths and you can do it." I did not fail to leave some of the oaths with him to refresh his memory, for it had been so long since he had attended a lodge. It is revolting to have ministers of Jesus Christ's pure Gospel claim a sacredness for those illegal, profane and clannish oaths, with murderous penalties attached, to which the Holy God cannot be a party.

From Lexington I went to Jackson and spent a day in distributing literature over the city as generally as I could in the time allotted. And here I was greeted by old friends in the cause, who nevertheless feel the righteousness of the cause and are aware of the despotic tread of the clannish foe to free speech on the subject of secretism. May the Lord give them courage to stand for the truth. C. POWERS.

"Denying the Lord that bought them" seems to be Scripturally held a "damnable heresy." Practiced only in the lodge it seems to be imagined by some not "damnable."

CORRESPONDENCE.

PASTOR'S INTERESTING EXPERIENCE.

Rev. W. B. Stoddard incloses the following interesting letter he received from a pastor at Alton, N. Y.:

DEAR BROTHER:—Since our providential meeting at the Barre camp-ground, I have never ceased to be interested in you, and I have been interested in your work for years. You did not know how near I came to taking up the Christian Association work there at Barre; but I feel that the decision then made was the right one at that time, and also at the present.

We have been having some interesting developments in the secret society line here at Alton. Nearly a year ago one converted in my meetings forsook two or three societies. Then two members of my church, Free Methodist, were brought to a decision between the lodge and the church. They chose the lodge and withdrew. Again a man belonging to the other church here, Protestant Methodist, who was wonderfully saved from a wicked life last year, has got under conviction on the secret society question in our meetings, and renounced and denounced the Masons and Odd-fellows. Since then he has been called into court to testify against an Odd-fellow that they were trying to impeach. He swore that he would not believe this Odd-fellow under oath; but a number of Odd-fellows took the stand and swore the man clear. This convert's step has created some sensation here, for he stood up in class meeting and told his convictions like a man.

Recently a Mr. Laurence has been here trying to organize a lodge of Maccabees. When I found he was really going to make it go, and they had begun to build a hall, I prepared a Sabbath night sermon upon the subject, and waded in the best I could. How I did wish I had you. But the talk saved some, and I have heard from it in more ways than one. Then I sent for several copies of the Lodge Lamp containing your articles, and put them where I thought they would do the most good. Laurence says there is not a word of truth in it; but I shall give him the chance to disprove them. A lodgite said I made many false statements that Sabbath night. I met him in the store to-day and challenged him before all to mention one. He said he would tell me in private, but not there. H. L. CROCHETT.

THE DEATH STRUGGLE COMMENCED.

NORTHWOOD, Ia., Jan. 20, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Our local paper advertises that the initiation fee into the A. O. U. W. lodge of this town has been cut in two for a certain time in order to get new members. This act undoubtedly points to the fact that the death struggle has commenced, and that the order is trying to avert the fatal moment by obtaining new blood in hanging out this bait.

Each member hopes that the order may live to pay back the money he has taken away from the support of his family. But this and allied fraternal institutions are built on sand, and it is only a question of time when the collapse will come. Some must get left. History tells us so, and common sense says amen. In the name of protection many rob their wives and children of necessary support. In the name of protection many stay away from their families, and spend their time in lodge rooms. What fools these mortals be! O. T. LEE.

Secrecy is not necessarily vicious. It is a vice when it preserves vicious secrets. It is also a vice when it is planned and secured in a vicious way.

ARBITRATION TREATY MAY FAIL.

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 22, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—There is great danger that the United States Senate will reject the Arbitration Treaty, whose negotiatinon has been hailed both by the European and American press as one of the great events of the century. Private advices from Washington assure us that nothing will now save the treaty but an overwhelming expression of public opinion.

We are sure that you will gladly exert the influence of your paper to prevent the threatened action of the Senate, which would be at once a national disaster and disgrace. Kindly urge your readers to write personal letters to the two Senators of their State, and suggest to pastors the desirability of asking from their congregations a public expression of opinion, a report of the result of which should be sent to United States Senators as above, and to No. 513 United Charities Building, New York.

Yours faithfully, JOSIAH STRONG,
Gen'l. Sec'y. Evangelical Alliance.

LETTER FROM PRESIDENT S. H. SWARTZ.

SAD CASE OF A RUINED PREACHER.

MORRIS, Ill., Jan. 20, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Bro. Fenton's article in the Cynosure of January 7th, "Humbugging the Preachers," set me to thinking and my mind ran in the same line with David's when he said, "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful." All the so-called great preachers are in the lodge. Most of them are in that Christless institution Masonry, and defend its infernal blasphemy and damnable oaths.

I do not wonder that the blessed name of the Christ is left out of the Masonic ritual and lodge room, because the institution is intrinsically heathenish and altogether anti-Christian. But I am amazed that professed followers of Christ, and above all those who claim to be called of God to be watchmen in Zion and teachers and leaders of the people, can find any way to justify their membership in and application with the Masonic order. They not only justify their position, but with bold face falsify when confronted with the facts of the humiliation and degradation of manhood in their initiation into the order and in regard to the blasphemous oaths.

I can only understand it when I remember that he who walks according to the counsel of the ungodly, will soon stand to look on the way of sinners; and thus being off his guard, he will soon be a partaker in their evil deeds. How quickly do we become hardened by the deceitfulness of sin, and sit us down at ease with the sinner. "When lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin; and sin when it is finished, bringeth forth death." Solomon, the son of David, adds helpful words to those of his father's in the first Psalm: "Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men; avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it and pass away." Prov. 14:14, 15

At our last conference session I met a young minister whom I had not seen for a year, and in whose future I was much interested. He had a badge on his coat. I asked him what it was. He told me that it was a Masonic badge.

"Are you a Mason?" said I.

"Yes, I am proud to say that I am," he replied.

"Well," said I, "that is your first step down, and if you don't mind will lead you to hell."

Two months of the conference year had hardly gone by before I heard that this young man had resigned his charge. Financial embarrassment was the published cause; but on meeting with one who had stood very near and knew the facts, my heart was saddened as I contemplated the fact of one who I believed was a chosen vessel, and yet humbugged by the devil into joining his church, the Masonic lodge, and then being taught deception and falsehood, he became an easy subject for the Satanic influence of the strange woman. S. H. SWARTZ.

AN M. E. PASTOR'S TESTIMONY.

KENT, Ill., Jan. 2, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—My heart is still in the work. As I have seen and learned more about secrecy, I am more than ever persuaded of the darkness of its work. Its work is evil. In conversation with a lodgeman who had been reclaimed in one of my meetings, he frankly acknowledged that the tendency of the lodge is to evil. From his testimony and what I have gathered in conversation with others, I am driven farther away from the lodge than ever. I have no use for any of them. The best of them lead men away from God.

When secrecy puts its hands upon God's Word and God's ministers, and says, "You must read the Scriptures in such a way that when you stand before a congregation you can be known as a fraternity man," any honest man ought to withdraw from them. I am told, and that by lodgemen, that a Mason can tell the moment a man stands up to read the Word of God whether he is a Mason or not. If this be true, does it not look as though someone is trifling with sacred things? Can there be anything right about it?

I hope and pray that God will hasten the day when this evil will be driven from our country. Wishing you a happy and successful new year, I am yours truly, P. G. LINAWEAVER

COME OVER AND HELP US.

AN APPEAL FROM THE SOUTH.

2504 SOUTH ROBERTSON ST.,
NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 15, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—We are here in this lodge-ridden, rum-ridden, Catholic-ridden, modern Sodom and Gomorrah, in the midst of all kinds and manners of opposition to the truth as it is written in God's Word. Sometimes my pathway seems to be strewn with thorns. Yea, the thunders of opposition roar loud and fast and the lightnings of prejudice seem to flash vividly in my face, but thanks be to God I have not yet despaired. I am often led in the Spirit to the Rock that is higher than I.

My church, the St. Matthew Baptist, with its faithful few, are still preaching an unadulterated gospel truth. We meet very often with discouraging hardships; but God be praised, who only giveth the victory through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, we have resolved not to give the victory over until the crown be won.

Secret societies are flourishing here now as they never have before. Even the few shepherds who a few years ago would dare to lift their voices publicly against secretism, have been frightened into perfect silence and quiet submission. I was in the company of a great Baptist Masonic preacher a few days ago, and among other foolish things he said:

"Any man who opposes Masonry is a crank and a fool."

I remarked: "Well, there are a great many fools, and many of them very wise fools, in the light of God's Word, at that." The National Christian Association have made a grave mistake in withdrawing all of their field agents from the South. The lodge is manufacturing minor secret orders for young children to enter at the age of five years.

If a wideawake and energetic agent, with tracts, copies of the Cynosure and Lodge Lamp, could meet the many associations, conventions and conferences in this State and distribute anti-secret society tracts, etc., and sell reform books, much good would be done. I have established a weekly sewing school at my church, and we are making and distributing garments to the poor orphans and old decrepit widows. Contributions of clothing, shoes, etc., or anything that could be utilized to help the very poor and destitute of which this city abounds, will be thankfully received and distributed.

We are in hope of commencing work on our new church in March. Let the friends of the reform help us in our struggle. Pray for us. May God bless you. Yours for the Master's cause,
F. J. DAVIDSON.

SHALL THERE BE NO MORE WAR?

WASHINGTON, D, C., Jan. 20, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Several of our most prominent ministers referred to the arbitration treaty, in their sermons Sabbath. Bishop Satterlee preached from Micah 4: 3, 4: "And God shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning-hooks." In the sermon he told his hearers that he regarded the treaty as a fulfillment of the prophecies of Micah, uttered twenty-five centuries ago, and in closing said: "The influence of the deed that has already been done, the signing of the treaty, cannot be checked, cannot be stayed, cannot cease from growing until it makes itself felt as an irresistible moral force among all the nations. Here is a force before which no standing army can hold its own, and before which all standing armies will eventually, one by one, melt away."

After commending the treaty as "the gladdest event of eighteen centuries," Dr. Talmage made this appeal to the Senate: "I implore the illustrious Senate of the United States to allow nothing to interfere with a vote of ratification that the bells of all Christendom may ring out 'Peace on earth, good will to man.' Senators—many of you my personal friends—let me say that this is the opportunity of your lives. By emphatic and enthusiastic vote rise to the splendor of the occasion and win the favor of all the good on earth and all the mighty of heaven. Let the 'aye! aye!' of our American Senate resound through all the capitals of Europe, and make all the arsenals and armories of the world hear that there shall be no more murder among nations."

The peace associations, churches and business organizations of the country are urging Senators, by personal representatives and by mail and wire, to ratify the treaty. C. A. S.

LETTER FROM SCOTLAND.

PAISLEY, Scotland, Jan. 4, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I have not forgotten your home at Kossuth, nor the great kindness I received there twenty-eight years ago. I am delighted to hear about your esteemed parents, who must now be pretty advanced in years. I trust that the evening of their lives may be calm and unclouded, and that at last an abundant entrance into the heavenly kingdom may be granted to them.....

I stopped in Chicago one night on my way West, and the hotel in which I stopped, like many others, perished soon after in the great conflagration.

Secret societies are a great curse in Britain as well as in America. From the Prince of Wales, down to the artisan and laborer, Masonry has a large part of the population in its grasp. Ministers of various denominations are identified with it, and speak of it in terms of highest commendation. In our publications we have occasional articles against Masonry and other secret societies; but there is no active organization in the country to do battle with the accursed system of secrecy.

By the end of this month I shall have been pastor in Paisley for thirty-one years. I have had several calls to other congregations, but I could not see my way clear to leave my small flock. If spared till next May, I shall have had charge of the Reformed Presbyterian Witness for twenty-two years. R. DUNLOP.

A VOICE FROM SOUTH CHICAGO.

SOUTH CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 18, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I have been deeply impressed by the study of the Sabbath-school lessons bearing on the life of Solomon. No wonder the lodge is side-tracking the church, for there are so many who are worshiping Solomon and bowing the knee to Baal and taking Mackey's Ritual of Masonry as their guide, and trying to worship God without Christ. Oh, that the church was filled with the spirit and love of that Christ who said, "I and my Father are one;" and again, "No man cometh to the Father but by me." I thank God that Jesus has no cable-tow. He said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

I was asked by a Presbyterian minister, in another city, why I did not unite with his church? I said because four elders and one-half of his congregation were worshipers of Baal. I could not partake of the Lord's Supper in such company. He said he was not in sympathy with secret orders; that he had joined the Masons once but found no good in them, and believed they were a great hindrance to the usefulness of many men. He said I should not stay out of the church on that account; I should at least be as liberal as Christ when he ate with publicans and sinners. I told him that Christ did not eat the last supper with but one unworthy sinner, and he condemned him there. He said that when a man gets his heart and soul full of the love of God he has no time for secret societies. Oh, that the day may come speedily when all Christians will come out and stand firmly against this secret lodge system that is corrupting our churches, our courts and our politics. May the Lord hasten the day when ministers called to preach his truth will preach it in all its fullness, and declare the whole council of God against the terrible evils of the lodge; and may the Cynosure be sent broadcast over the land, turning many from darkness to light by its influence. And may this, one of God's greatest reforms, go on until the lodge and its damning influence shall be overthrown. W. G. MCCOY.

IOWA VETERAN HEARD FROM.

CLEAR LAKE, Ia., Jan. 18, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—My earnest prayer is that subscribers to your valuable paper will work as faithful during 1897 as I had to for the last few days to get the small amount I have for the worthy Christian work you are doing. How it would add to the good work of helping to educate the boys in regard to the dangers of secret societies. Our little city of 1,700 inhabitants is sin cursed with twelve different secret organizations, and Rev. John Brown and myself are the only ones that have taken the Cynosure, or dared to speak out against secret orders. We have four churches, and in those churches all told not over nine Masons, and not one of the pastors are Masons; still the pulpit and the press are as silent as the grave on that vital question. There is where the great danger to our people and the country is. Masonry has the pulpit and the press so completely under control that silence is the watchword, and it is strictly obeyed all over this country. It is to-day the greatest enemy and set-back to the churches of any sin they have to contend with except the liquor traffic.

The Masonic lodge here has as many adult male members as all the four churches in town. This is terrible; but let the truth be told and let the responsibility rest where it belongs; and that in great measure is on the shoulders of ministers of the Gospel, and church members that are Masons. The institution could not exist twelve months if they would do their Christian duty. But in that sweeping charge I do not wish to excuse other ministers and church members from having a fearful responsibility in the silent course they are pursuing. This gigantic evil is keeping tens of thousands of men out of the churches.

We all have a duty to do in this important work. Let us not fear to do right. Ministers of the Gospel frequently answer me that they do not know anything about those organizations, and therefore excuse themselves for their silence. That is a very poor excuse in this age of books and papers, that give a vast amount of unimpeachable testimony on the dark deeds of Masonry. All the people ought to know, and it is the especial duty of the ministers of the Gospel to inform themselves in regard to the secret lodge system, when they can do it for 25c. or $2 invested in books, that have been before the American people for seventy years, and have never been successfully contradicted. These books stand to-day as unimpeachable testimony in regard to the rotten institution of Freemasonry.

I have watched it with much interest for seventy years, since Capt. Wm. Morgan's abduction and murder in Sept., 1826, by the Grand Lodge of Freemasons, of New York. I lived then in Western New York, a boy of only ten years; but the agitation and investigations which followed were so exciting, and the people so terribly stirred up over it for years that followed, that it has ever kept fresh in my memory. My father took a very active part in the Anti-masonic political movement that followed for years after. About 45,000 Masons seceded from the lodge in the Northern States, and in New York and many of the Eastern States Masonry was dead for many years. But during and since the war it increased greatly; its life insurance project has been a great help to it in getting new members. But it is a deception and a fraud, and like all the fraternal insurance on the assessment plan without a reserve fund, is soon going by the board. It is only a matter of time with any of them, and the sooner our young men understand it the better.

THERON PALMETER.

"BRAVELY OVER HIS RAISING."

PRINCETON, Ind., Jan. 13, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I send you an editorial from the Princeton Weekly News, edited by James McCormick. He was editor of our Prohibition paper here for a number of years, and the son of Rev. Thomas Brown McCormick, the fearless anti-slavery and anti-secret reformer, who died here in 1892. Rev. J. G. Reid, of this city, preached a sermon one evening of the week of prayer in the Cumberland Presbyterian church, which editor McCormick reviewed as follows:

"We understasd that Rev. J. G. Reid last evening preached a very forcible and pointed sermon upon the existing sins of the day. He placed as the chief and leading sins 'the drink traffic, Sabbath desecration and secret organizations.' With regard to the two first we can heartily agree with him, but upon the latter arraignment we think he is wrong, in classing secret societies —or membership in such societies—as a great sin. We were raised to believe that a secret society was the next door to hell, but, as in many other things, we have got bravely over 'our raising.' We candidly believe that in about all the secret orders now in active operation in this city, there exists to-day a greater feeling of charity for each other and a more binding feeling of brotherly love than exists in any church of our city, and we say this with all due respect to every church organization in this place. We belong to no secret society, but we have watched the workings of the different orders very carefully, and we have also watched the workings of the churches. We are not posing as an advocate of secret societies to the exclusion of the church or church duties, but we believe they two should work hand in hand for the upbuilding of humanity. We fail to see how any good can be accomplished by classing, as a sin, organizations which claim in their membership as good and devout men as live."

Last Sabbath afternoon Rev. J. G. Reid preached a strong sermon from Luke 6:33, "And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye; for sinners also lend to sinners to receive as much again." He referred to the above editorial, and proved that lodge charity is not charity at all. ELIZA DAVIS.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON.

BY REV. J. B. GALLOWAY.

And when he had opened the fifth seal I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the Word of God, and for the testimony which they held fast. Rev. 6:9.

The Apocalypse is the book of the consummation, the book of judgments, that are to wind up the affairs of the present evil age and the age to come. This is indicated by chapter 4:2, where the throne is seen. I take it, that from the beginning of chapter 4 to the close of the book, the real fulfillment is future. Christ is now about to exercise his great power and reign. The fifth seal differs from those going before, in that there is no heavenly messenger sent forth. It is a scene of the results of terrible persecution, which has been accomplished by the diabolical forces of earth.

1. As to the cause of this martyrdom. There is an old maxim which reads: "It is not death, but the cause of death that makes the martyr." Millions upon millions have been slain under the former seals, but they were not martyrs; they simply suffered the due rewards of their deeds.

(a) It was on account of the Word of God that they suffered. God always has had and will have faithful witnesses. During these awful times, those who were formerly careless and unbelieving, though they had been instructed in the Word, will now read it with new eyes and new hearts. The higher critics of those days, if there were any, were among the persecutors, not the martyrs.

(b) But there is something more special in their testimony than preaching in general. It is poobably the Gospel of the kingdom—of retribution and of wrath. It is that testimony which they held fast; some particular testimony that made them obnoxious to the powers that be; present truth, bearing on the times then present. They proclaimed that the day of the Lord had come, that the crown rights of the Lord's anointed were about to be vindicated. Every form of iniquity, whether secret or open, whether of the day or of the night, will stand out in its true light, and quake before the oncoming power of the all conquering King. Moreover, "your covenant with death shall be disannulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand."

2. These witnesses will be the reformers during the times in which they live. As I read history, sacred and secular, God's men in all generations have been reformers. God's command to the old prophets was, "Lift up thy voice like a trumpet and show my people their sins;" and I have never heard that this was not necessary during the age that now is.

No great iniquity has ever been overthrown; few great reformations have ever been brought about without martyrdom. John the Baptist was beheaded. The Prince of life was crucified. Paul reasoned of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come, and was offered up. Our fathers bought our liberties, civil and religious, by sealing the title with their blood. It follows as an axiom that every system of iniquity that has been, is or will be, has in it the spirit of persecution.

The ghost of slavery in our land has bloodly hands. The saloon system has already shed innocent blood. The secret empire has not been able to hide its bloody skirts. Now as ever, and ever as now, the faithful witnesses shall suffer persecution. There are certain sanguine optomistic souls who seem to think that persecution is a thing of the past; that brotherly love and arbitration will put an end to war and disband the standing armies of the world. This is a dream. As long as organized iniquity exists and Satan is loose, there will be wars and rumors of wars; and as the age draws to a close, unparalleled tribulations.

Readers of the Cynosure, you are God's witnesses in this generation; you have espoused the most unpopular reform of the age. You are wrestlers against principalities and powers, against the ruler of the darkness of this world, and you must quit you like men and be strong; for as you cry, "How long, O Lord," the blessed answer comes, "Yet a little while and the wicked shall not be." "The Lord shall laugh at him: for he seeth that his day is coming." "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life."

How Mourning Is Designated by Color In Different Places.

Many colors are used for mourning purposes. Black with us seems to us the only proper emblem. The south sea islanders used black and white striped cloth to designate sorrow mixed with hope; the Ethiopians grayish brown, the color of the earth to which the dead return; the Persians pale brown, the color of withered leaves. Sky blue is the color worn by the inhabitants of Syria, Cappadocia and Armenia to express the assumed hope that the deceased has gone to heaven. The Romans (in the republican era) and Bokharans wore deep blue for mourning. White, emblem of "white handed hope," is the mourning color of the Chinese. Henry VIII wore white for Anne Boleyn. The ladies of ancient Sparta and Rome used this color also for mourning. Up to 1498 the Spanish did the same. In England now it is the custom to wear white silk hatbands, scarfs, etc., for the young and unmarried. Yellow, "the sear and yellow leaf," is worn by the Egyptians and Burmese. The widows' caps of Brittany are yellow also. Yellow is worn in token of exaltation. The color of mourning for kings and cardinals in France is purple and violet to express royalty—"kings and priests to God." The mourning color of Turkey is violet. The black England and America wear is emblematic of the privation of light and joy and the gloom of sorrow for the loss sustained.

How to Decorate Salads.

Place the bowl containing the salad in an outer one somewhat larger, of glass or silver. Fill in the space with cracked ice. In the middle of the salad place an arrangement of thinly sliced cucumber pickles in the shape of a star and have opposite each ray the ring of a hard boiled egg (the white only), with an olive in the middle. This ornamentation can be varied by using a little red radish instead of the olive or placing a slender cucumber pickle through each of the egg rings.

How to Care For the Ears.

A prominent physician says that more than half of the ear troubles from which people suffer during the cold weather can be traced to the habit of picking at the ears with the finger nails or hairpins or some other hard substance, which irritates the delicate inside of the ear. Instead of this injurious "picking," the ears should be washed out with warm water and a little good soap and thoroughly dried after the operation. If the ears are sensitive, a little cotton may be put in before going into the open air, though this is apt to make them even more sensitive. In extremely cold weather, before venturing out a good way to clean the ears is to wrap the corner of a towel around the finger, and with a little cold cream carefully wipe out the auricle. It will remove every particle of dust and will really protect the ears from the cold, but it can scarcely be recommended for regular use.

How to Become a Good Talker.

The art of conversation consists in the exercise of two fine qualities—you must originate, and you must sympathize. You must possess at the same time the habit of communicating and the habit of listening. To listen sympathetically and to talk amusingly are generally supposed to be two distinct qualities seldom, if ever, united in the same individual, and it would be well for those who desire to shine as talkers to study the golden mean and judiciously combine both accomplishments.

How to Kill Water Bugs.

To destroy the insects in your kitchen sprinkle powdered borax freely and set traps of flat dishes of molasses and beer.

How to Make a Headrest.

Make a cushion of the desired size in heart shape. Cut a piece of white linen a little smaller than the cushion. Cut the edge of the linen in small scallops and buttonhole it with yellow Roman floss. On the linen work scattered buttercups and leaves with Asiatic filo. Cover both sides of the cushion with yellow china silk. Fasten the linen on the upper half. Finish the cushion with a double ruffle of the silk and hang with yellow satin ribbon.

How to Preserve Old Manuscripts.

The paper or document, after being cleaned or brushed, is washed on both sides with a transparent adhesive solution. Sheets of imported white silk of the most delicate fabric, large enough to give an ample margin or border to surround the document to be preserved, are then placed on each side of the record and pressed. The pressure causes the silk to adhere closely to the document, which is then treated to a coating of paraffin for the purpose of bringing out and making more legible the writing thereon. This process seals the document permanently from any danger of disintegration or fading of the ink, and also is a protection against insects or mice, which might prey upon the ancient records.

How to Cook Pork Chops.

Add a teaspoonful of finely chopped onion to a beaten egg and a good pinch of sage. Trim the chops free of any superfluous fat and place in the above mixture. Strew with bread crumbs and fry.

How to Clean Silver.

To clean the silver spoons and forks in everyday use rub them with a damp cloth dipped in baking soda, then polish them with a little piece of chamois.

PEACH TREES.

FOR THE NORTH. Why not grow your own peaches? I have an Iowa peach that has been grown in the State for sixty years. The original tree is still alive and fruiting.

This peach is of good size, best quality, free stone, and has fruited unprotected after winters of 30 degrees below zero.

It is the peach for the North Send for prices and history; also prices of other reliable nursery stock.

The Christian Cynosure.

REV. M. A. GAULT, - - - EDITOR.
WM. I. PHILLIPS, - - - PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 28, 1897.

THE CONFLICT DEEPENS, ON YE BRAVE.

Last Sabbath in one of the largest churches of Chicago the pastor and assistant pastor gave the strongest kind of testimony in private conversation against Christians fellowshipping secret societies. Their testimony was quite full and very interesting, and the readers of the Cynosure shall yet have it to read. At the same time a member of the church said that he had been a member of the Maccabees up to one week ago; that he knew for a long time that something was keeping him from being in the best religious and spiritual condition. His eyes were opened about one year ago when he listened to an address upon secret societies, by Pres. Blanchard. Then he saw his difficulty, but he could not bring his mind to giving up his insurance in the order; but last Sabbath he surrendered, and then God met him and filled him with joy and happiness.

Another member of the church came up and said that he had been an Odd-fellow for twenty-two years and also a Freemason, but that he renounced the whole system of secrecy and thanked God for the testimonies against it. A deacon of this church was not present, but it was related that he had renounced his membership in Freemasonry, and burnt up his Masonic apron. We were glad to learn, also, that one of the leading and most active workers in the Illinois State Y. M. C. A. has no complicity with secret societies himself, and believes that young men ought to keep out of them, and so advises them.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN CHINA.

The following is an extract from an excellent article in Blackwood's Magazine with the above title:

"The recent arrest and imprisonment of Sun Wen at the Chinese Legation raises an interesting question, and one which doubtless will be settled with due regard to diplomatic forms and personal considerations. But the immediate incident is connected with a matter of far greater importance in the eyes of the Chinese government than the mere question of diplomatic jurisdiction. What Disraeli said of Europe is still more true of China. The whole empire is honeycombed with secret societies, and if the agents of the government are to be believed, Sun is not only an active member of the 'White Lily' Association, but is a prominent leader of that very revolutionary body.

"The 'White Lily' Association is second in importance only, both as regards numbers and objects, to the Kolao Hui, and has lately shown a disturbing activity in the neighborhood of Canton. Both societies present unspeakable terrors to the official mind, and at the outbreak of the late Chinese and Japanese war the emperor's government viewed with the greatest alarm the possibility of an insurrection on the part of the Kolao Hui and other societies associated with it. If the 'Hui' had risen in the central provinces at the same time that the Japanese attacked the northeastern frontiers of the empire, there can be little doubt that, had Europe abstained from interfering, the fate of the Ts'ing dynasty would have been that of the numerous imperial houses, which have in succession ruled over the destinies of the empire. Fortunately for the Ts'ings, the Kolao leader, who is now enjoying the congenial climate of a certain South American republic, issued a mot d'ordre that not a man was to move, and the existing order of affairs was preserved.

"This want of action showed, from the society's point of view, a lack of zeal in the cause and power in the field; and no doubt the fact that the members are scattered over widely separated portions of the empire does to a certain extent weaken the central authority. The 'White Lily' Association, on the contrary, concentrates its forces in particular districts, with organized branches planted in congenial environments, and not by any means always appearing to the outer world under the same title as that of the parent society. 'The Vegetarians,' for instance, who lately committed such ruthless murders on English missionaries in the neighborhood of Foochow, form part of this confederation, and would, with other affiliated leaguers, be ready to be summoned to the ranks in case of an uprising.

"The original home of this society was in the north of the empire, and more particularly in the Province of Shantung, where its active presence occasioned much anxiety to the mandarins some years ago. But of late its leaders have turned their attention to the southeastern provinces, and notably to the neighborhood of Canton. As is not uncommonly the case with secret associations all over the world, the ostensible aims of the 'White Lily' society are purely philanthropic, and in some of their primitive rites and ceremonies there would almost seem to be traces of some early and debased form of Christianity, possibly Nestorian. In the promotion of the benevolent objects which they profess, its chiefs regard themselves as commissioned by high heaven to regenerate the empire, and their zeal ever prompts them to raise the standard of revolt against the tyranny of corruption, cruelty and wrong under which the unhappy subjects of the emperor habitually suffer."

FREEMASONS INTRUDING.

No free people can become accustomed to the precedence in its affairs of a secret society without peril. It is especially evil to find these societies pushing forward into control of the school system, thus misleading the youth. The following account from the Commercial Gazette of Pittsburgh, January 21st, shows the unexpected appearence, on a public occasion, of the Masons and their usurping precedence in a ceremony that belongs to the educational officers of the city:

"Despite very disagreeable weather, fully 2,000 people witnessed the laying of the corner-stone of the new Sixth ward Allegheny school building, at 2 P. M. yesterday. The stone was presented and laid by the Grand Lodge of Masons of Pennsylvania. At one o'clock more than 100 members of the Masonic fraternity of Pittsburgh and Allegheny met at the rooms of Davage Lodge 374, at Beaver and Pennsylvania avenues, and at 1:30 they marched to the new building at Chartiers and Juniata streets, headed by the Grand Army band of Allegheny, and the ceremonies were performed.

"The following persons had charge of the exercises, having been deputized by the Grand Master of Masons of Pennsylvania: Right Worshipful Grand Master Joseph Eichbaum, Deputy Grand Master J. W. Brown, Grand Senior Warden James McLaren, Grand Junior Warden William H. Hamilton, Grand Treasurer A. D Wilson, Grand Secretary M. G Clark, Grand Chaplain George Quaill, Esq., Deputy Grand Secretary Joseph T. Nevin, Grand Senior Deacon Henry F. Gilg, Grand Junior Deacon George Trimble, Grand Stewards Frederick Waldschmidt and Charles Kirkbride, Grand Pursuivant A. F. Toy, Grand Marshal Joseph G. Morris, Grand Sword Bearer Jesse K Seright, Grand Tyler James Baker. The ceremonies were in charge of William H. Slack, District Deputy Grand Master of Pennsylvania.

"The corner-stone is of polished red granite, and is six feet four inches by three feet two inches by two feet. It fronts on Juniata street. In a bronze box in the corner-stone were placed a copy of the Holy Bible, Ahiman Rezon, by-laws of Davage lodge, reports of the city superintendent of Allegheny schools, reports of the Sixth ward school board and a list of the school directors of the ward; a silver dollar, a silver half dollar, a silver quarter, a silver dime, a nickle and a 1-cent piece, and copies of the papers of both cities."

TESTIMONY OF REV. A. T. PIERSON, D. D.

At the recent conference of the Christian Alliance (Dec., 1896), held at the "Gospel Tabernacle," 8th Ave., near 44th St., New York, Pres. Charles A. Blanchard, of Wheaton College, gave an address on "Present Dangers in Society." As other speakers had treated other subjects, he spoke of the secret lodge system. After he concluded, Dr. Arthur T. Pierson spoke briefly on the same subject. He was for some years a pastor in Indianapolis, and then of the People's church in Philadelphia, and for many years one of the foremost evangelists of his day. He is the author of several works on missions and is a high authority on that subject. He occupied Spurgeon's pulpit in London after the death of that great preacher, and was much talked of as his successor. As an eloquent pulpit orator and thorough Bible expounder he has few equals. He said that he had never united with any secret societies, and that as he had been listening and thinking, two thoughts had been uppermost in his mind:

First, that the Church of Jesus Christ was all that man needed for his religious and moral nature, and he could see no reason why, having the best, he should trouble himself about other matters. He said that he had never known of any good thing being done by secret lodges which could not have been better accomplished in other ways. He said that at one time in a city where he lived there was a "Good Templar's" lodge of seven hundred members, including the most substantial and worthy men and women of the city. He said that there was a frightful amount of drunkenness, and one saloon to every twenty houses. You would have supposed, said he, that such an organization would have done effective work against that awful trade in strong drink, but, said he, it was not so. Such an organization in such a town, instead of working to remove evil, divided first into two parties and then into four, on the question, "What musical instrument shall we have in our lodge?" He said that his own experience had been that of others; that he had been told by members of the Masonic and other bodies, that whether wicked or not they were certainly needless.

The second thought he said was this: That Jesus Christ desired his people to work in the daylight and not in the dark; that Jesus himself did so; that when the end of his life had come, and he was questioned respecting his disciples and his doctrine, he said, "I ever spake openly to the world and in secret I have said nothing." His words were listened to with apparent interest, and seemed to command the assent of the large number of earnest, Christian workers present.

THE RIGHT KIND OF TESTIMONY.

In a letter from Mrs. E B. Ross, of East Longmeadow, Mass., we take the following excellent testimony on the secret society question:

"'But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner: with such an one no not to eat.' 1 Cor. 5:11. How blind are the professed children of God to some of his commands. He says, 'Come out from among them, and be ye separate,' and 'Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers,' and yet look around you and see the great number of secret societies constantly increasing; dens of 'idolaters' and extortioners, for such they are; and yet so-called Christians are mingling with the ungodly in all this until it has become a hard matter to distinguish between them; and really, Christians are under greater condemnation since they profess to know the Lord. But alas, like Peter they are following afar off. Oh, child of God, what think you would be Paul's attitude towards the Christless lodges?

"Just imagine Paul bowing down, half-clad, in a Masonic lodge, going through the indecent and foolish initiation. The bare suggestion of such a possibility is an insult to that grand and noble martyr, who 'suffered the loss of all things that he might win,' not a costly jewel such as lodgites wear, but 'Christ.' 'With such an one no not to eat.' This should forever debar the Christian whose eyes, perhaps long blinded, but opened at last to the evils of secret societies, sun worshipers, idolaters, from being partakers with them. Going to the communion table, and receiving the sacred emblems from hands polluted with these things. Ministers whose minds are filled with the ungodly ceremonies through which they have recently passed blindly led about by cable-tow or chain. Think you such an one a fit subject to participate in this ordinance? No. The penitent form would be more suitable. 'Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord and the cup of devils.'

"In conversation with a Christian, who has since his conversion came out from his lodges, I asked him if he thought one could be in Masonry and have the Holy Spirit. He said, 'I do not see how it is possible for a man to be filled with the Holy Spirit and remain in the lodge.' Such is the testimony of many who know what they are talking about. 'Come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing and I will receive you.' Where are you, O child of God? Are you then separated unto him? or are you going hand in hand with the world, disregarding his commands whose follower you profess to be? These are days when we need to study and know God's Word and his will for us, and the Bible will prove a safer chart for us to follow than the Masonic or any other of man's devising. 'If any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his.' 'By their fruits ye shall know them.'"

MISSOURI STATE CONVENTION.

Next week Thursday and Friday, February 4th and 5th, the State Anti-secrecy Convention will meet in Kirksville in the Christian church, Rev. Simpson Ely, pastor. Delegates and visiting friends will go at once to the church upon arrival in the city where they will be met by the reception committee. There will be a preliminary meeting at the church at 2:30 P. M., on Thursday the 4th, for prayer and consultation. The evening exercises will begin at 7 o'clock with a song service for half an hour. A choir of young people have volunteered to aid in this part of the program during the convention.

After prayer an address of welcome will be given by pastor Simpson Ely, and the response by Rev. J. R Wylie, of the Reformed Presbyterian church, Blanchard, Iowa. This will be followed by an address from Samuel Swartz, D. D., of the Methodist Episcopal church, Chicago. Friday morning at 9:30 appointment of committees and an experience meeting, and discussion of these questions: 1. Ought secret societies to lay the corner-stones of public buildings, which are paid for by the public? 2. Ought those who intelligently and determinately adhere to Freemasonry be fellowshipped in the church of Jesus Christ? Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock short addresses by Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Eld. A. B. Lipp and others, the discussion of resolutions and plan of work and transaction of business.

Friday evening at 7 o'clock another song service for half an hour followed by an address by Pres. C. A. Blanchard, of Wheaton College, (Congregational).

A cheery letter just received from R. A. Cullor, of Unionville, Mo., says: "There is much interest aroused in this part of the country about the convention." WM. I. PHILLIPS.

THE SEATTLE CONVENTION.

Our readers will be glad to hear of the successful convention at Seattle, Wash., Jan. 18, 19. The following note from Rev. P. B. Williams came just as we go to press:

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 20.—The convention is over. It was by far the best we have held on the coast. Many things against us, but oh, how the Lord helped! The brethren all did well. As it was manifest that we could not depend on getting any from Portland to attend here, and visa versa, we organized the Washington State Association with Rev. W. M. Howie, president; Prof. Clark W. Shay, vice-president; secretary, Rev. P. J. McDonald; treasurer, Rev. M. L. Larson. The Oregon officers are: President, Rev. H. F. Wallace, D. D ; vice-president, Rev. N. C. Mower; secretary, Rev. P. B. Williams; treasurer, Rev. John Skans. The association unanimously agreed for me to change headquarters to California for the sake of my wife's health, and elected me delegate to the General Convention and Annual Meeting in Chicago in May, with leave of absence for four or six weeks as last year. I think I never was so tired in my life, and am nearly sick with a severe cold. I cannot write up the convention till I get home and get rested up a little. The expenses of hall, etc., were met nicely, and a surplus of something over seven dollars were handed the agent toward his expenses. Send all my papers from now on to Los Angeles, Cal.

TAKE NOTICE.

Our Publisher announces this week, that for this year the clubbing price for the Christian Cynosure and the Weekly New York Tribune for 1897 is $1.75 for the two papers.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Keep still about it? Why? Give us a decent reason.

—When is silence golden? Is it when no duty is so imperative as to speak?

—To save one soul from the lodge octopus is a rescue worth the greatest effort?

—Trying to secure any worthy end by means of lodgery, seems a marked example of doing evil that good may come.

—Bro. A. S McConnell, of Clinton, N. Y., writes that some day he hopes to do much to help overthrow the powers of secretism.

—Rev. S. H. Swartz, of Morris, Ill., president of the National Christian Association, was a welcome visitor at the Cynosure office recently.

—What is that which dares not be known? What that is enraged if spoken of with candor, and not in terms of empty and fulsome adulation?

—You took abominable oaths once when they were new to you. They are old now. You still agree to their being taken by others. And one day you will give account of this to God.

—R. P. Lyman, son of R. W. Lyman, of Arcade, N. Y., visited our office last week on his way to visit friends at Dundee, Ill. He graduated in Berea College, Ky., in the class of '95.

—A ministerial brother in Washington writes that he would rather the White House had been vacated than the Beacon Light Mission on Pennsylvania Ave. But Washington's loss is Philadelphia's gain.

—Miss Clara Barton has offered her services to Cuba through the President, on condition that Spain permit and protect her while ministering for the relief of the wounded and dying. So far Spain has not responded, and we do not believe that such a despotism will respond.

—Bro. Milton Yoder, of Bellefontaine, O., who is an intelligent, outspoken friend of our cause, has been challenged to debate the question, "Resolved, that the secret lodge system is in harmony with the Bible." He is inclined to accept the challenge, and we predict his opponents will find him a foeman worthy of their steel.

—Mrs. Julia Taft Bayne has written for the February St. Nicholas an article about "Willie and Tad Lincoln." While the President's sons were living in the White House, Mrs. Bayne's brother was their most intimate playmate, and she herself, then a young girl, saw much of them. Mrs. Bayne describes the pranks of the Lincoln boys, and tells of a minstrel show that was given in the White House.

—The only church in Washington which pays the superintendent of its Sabbath-school a salary, for devoting his whole time to the work of the Sabbath-school, is the Calvary Baptist church. There may be a difference of opinion as to whether this is merely an illustration of cause and effect, but it is a fact that the Sabbath-school of that church is not only the largest in Washington, but the largest in the South.

—Rev. W. B. Stoddard spent a part of last week working up the cause at New Alexandria, Pa. He reports that the State Labor Convention at Pittsburgh, Jan. 16th, adopted resolutions favoring legislation making it unlawful to discharge any employee for belonging to labor organizations, and favoring the extension and use of union labels Thus laboring men are being brought more and more under the tyranny of the lodge.

—Rev. R. Dunlop, of Paisley, Scotland, is the editor of a 50-page magazine and one of our valued exchanges. It is devoted to the principles of a covenanted reformation and very ably edited. Bro. Dunlop's letter, on another page, vividly recalls his visit to our home in Iowa in our college days. He shares with us the fear that on the horizon of both Britain and America there is looming up a desperate conflict with secret societies.

—Pres. Lewis Johnston, of the Richard Allen Institute at Pine Bluff, Ark., writes: "The Odd fellows organized a lodge near Grape Vine, and took in about eight of my school boys. One of them said to me, 'All the big men belong, and I was sure you did.' I said, 'Have you never heard me say you must not ensnare yourself by joining societies where you are compelled to vow secrecy?' He said, 'Yes, but they told me the society would help me.' I felt I had not been clear enough in my testimony. I gave him some plain talk; but now I find myself minus a few boys of the upper grade."

—Rev. J. R. Wylie of Blanchard, Ia., will be one of the speakers at the Missouri State Convention, Feb. 4 and 5. Several of his members who reside mostly in Missouri are planning also to go as delegates. We do not remember that Missouri has held any State Anti-secret Convention since 1878 at Albany, in Gentry Co., when its leaders were Jonathan Blanchard, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Pres. Kephart, then of Avalon College, M. N. Butler, Geo. W. Needels, H. Curtis and A. G. McKeown. It was one of the most soul-stirring conventions we ever attended.

—Rev. John Nutting, for so many years pastor at Glenwood, Ia., has recently accepted a call to the Congregational church at Sioux Rapids, Ia. Rev. T. C. Walker, protege of Dr. J. B. Walker, was his predecessor, and was in many of the secret orders. Bro. Nutting writes: "I should expect to accomplish more here if the town was not so eaten up with secret orders. Aside from any other evil, these societies so occupy the people that there is not a fair chance for religion to get hold. However, there is some appearance that men are getting tired of them."

—A public mass meeting was held Sabbath afternoon in Metropolitan church, under the auspices of the Reform Bureau, and in the interest of reform bills now before Congress, especially those relating to the liquor traffic and to the better observance of Sabbath. The meeting, which was largely attended, was presided over by Hon. Charles Lyman, president of the Reform Bureau, and among the speakers were Bishop Satterlee, Rev. W. F. Crafts, superintendent of the Reform Bureau, Mr. J. L. Ewin, of the Anti Saloon League, and Mrs. Platt and Mrs. Ellis, of the W. C. T. U. A resolution was adopted directing the speakers at the meeting to sign a petition, for the meeting, asking Congress to pass the reform bills now before it in both branches.

—"Not long since," says President C. A. Blanchard in the Wheaton College Record, "near Pittsburgh, we had the pleasure of meeting her who was Miss Rachel Milligan. She studied with us for a year or two back in the 'seventies.' Her husband is pastor of the United Presbyterian church at Sewickley. He is just completing a building which is to cost $25,000, and will be a fine church home for their work. He is in every respect a live man. During his last pastorate he closed every gambling den and disorderly house in the city where he was a preacher. He stopped the races and kept them closed so long as he was in the city. The league of which he was president sent more than one hundred persons to the penitentiary. As soon as he resigned his pastorate the race track made arrangements for a 'meet', sold the book-making privilege to gamblers as usual, and every form of vice lifted its head and rejoiced. It is good to have such pastors in our churches."

—James McCormick, editor of the Princeton, Indiana, Weekly News, says: "It is a sad commentary upon our Christian civilization to know that Sabbath desecration and intemperance are upon the increase. The drink traffic is annually slaying its hundreds of thousands, and it seems that no laws are stringent enough to overcome this evil. As to the other evil, one has but to look around him to see how gradually, yet surely, the sanctity of the Sabbath is being obliterated. Business is now conducted openly and boldly on the Sabbath day that ten years ago would have astounded our citizens, and we predict that in ten years more, unless a great change takes place, every store and workshop in this place, whose proprietor so desires, can carry on its business with open doors the same as on week day. We are not at all puritanical in our ideas or belief, belong to no church and seldom hear a sermon, but we say with an honest sense of interest in the general welfare of the country that with increased desecration of the Sabbath and a disregard of its sanctity will come an increase of crime, drunkenness, debauchery, and domestic harmony and peace will cease to exist. Unless a halt is called this country will fall to the level of France in its wildest days of profligacy and crime."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 31.
Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Endeavorers loyal to Christ. What will they do?—John xiii, 31-38; viii, 31. (Christian Endeavor day.)

Another year has rolled round. Another anniversary is upon us. The hosts are still increasing. The stakes are being strengthened and the lines advancing. It is, however, no time to pause or to falter. The higher the position reached the greater the responsibility and the greater the need of increased loyalty to Christ. Loyalty to Christ is to be emphasized this Endeavor day, not loyalty to Christian Endeavor. Happy thought! After all, loyalty to Christ is the main thing, and the Endeavorer who is loyal to Christ will not be disloyal to Christian Endeavor. What will the Endeavorers who are loyal to Christ do? The references suggest that:

1. Loyal Endeavorers will love one another as Christ loved them. "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you that you also love one another." How did Christ love His disciples? 1. He loved all of them. So we should love all Christians, not simply those of our own church or denomination, but all who love Christ—interdenominational love. 2. Christ loved His disciples when they were aliens and strangers to Him and sinners against Him. In doing this Christ loved His enemies. He loved all men. Following Christ's example, we should love all men. 3. Christ manifested His love for His disciples by dying to save them. We should manifest our love for all men by doing what we can to save them. We cannot die for men, but we can direct them to Him who did or send Him to them if they dwell in heathen lands. Practical love seeks to save. Christ loved men practically. So should we.

2. Loyal Endeavorers will live for Christ. Christ told His disciples that He was going where they could not go, but where in time they could follow Him. Peter thought he could go, no matter where it was, even if going cost him his life. But Peter made a poor stagger at dying for Christ. He failed to live for Him for 24 hours. We hear a great deal of sanctimonious gush about dying for Christ. Christ is not asking us to die for Him, but to live for Him. Are we doing that? Do we show by our lives that we stand for Christ, and are we willing to testify that we are His even in the presence of those who are not His? Christ wants our lives just now. Has He got them? We cannot be loyal to Him unless He has.

3. Loyal Endeavorers will continue in Christ's word. They will be steadfast in believing what He has told them to believe and in doing what He has told them to do. Steadfastness in thought, word and deed is certain proof of loyalty.

Bible Readings.—Math. v, 13-16, 43-48; xxviii, 19, 20; Rom. xii, 1-21; xv, 1-8; I Cor. x, 31; xv, 58; Gal. vi, 1-9; Eph. v, 1, 2; Phil. ii, 1-11; iv, 1; Col. ii, 1-17; II Thess. iii, 12, 13; II Tim. iv, 7, 8; Heb. xii, 1, 2; I Pet. iv, 7-11; Rev. ii, 10.

The Church the Working Power.

While the personality of Christ and the life He lived contain the real working power of Christian truth, yet the church is the instrument through which this truth is to be held up for the guidance of men. The church may be wrong in its interpretation of theological dogmas, but there is no earthly organization so likely to be right in teaching the essential truths of life. The church is the working harness of true religion, and while it asks loyalty to the organization for the purpose of advancing the fundamentals of religion it should permit a wide margin for individual growth and interpretation. Be strong in the advocacy of the fundamentals, but liberal in the matter of individual opinions on matters of dogma.—Universalist.

A Silhouette Social.

Much amusement may be excited at a social by silhouettes, suggests The Golden Rule. Hang up a sheet, divide the company into two parts, let light be on one side of the sheet only, and let the part of the company who are in the dark guess from the "shadow picture" who is casting it. Let each side take turns in guessing, winning the person as the result of each successful guess.

Better and Happier.

Each one of us is bound to make the little circle in which he lives better and happier. Each one of us is bound to see that out of that small circle the widest good may flow. Each one of us may have fixed in his mind the thought that out of a single household may flow the influences that shall stimulate the whole commonwealth and the whole civilized world.—Dean Stanley.

Not Open to Other Eyes.

Faith sees worlds that are not open to any other eye. It has been well said, "The Holy Spirit can put an eye of faith into the soul and thus make the things of God manifest to it, as He did to the Old Testament saints, who saw things afar off."—English Churchman.

What Education Means.

Education does not mean teaching the people to know what they do not know. It means teaching them to behave as they do not behave.—Christian Leader.

A Timely Suggestion.

The saddest hour in the life of a youth is when he thinks he can get a dollar in some other way than by squarely earning it.—Greeley.

Something Antique.

Those women who go in for antique yet comfortable furniture are buying empire bedsteads draped in the empire style. They are exceedingly odd, take up a whole side of the room and are very effective.

Ida A. Harper's Task.

Mrs. Ida A. Harper is to write the biography of Miss Susan B. Anthony, under Miss Anthony's supervision. Mrs. Harper is well qualified for the work. She is of New England parentage, but has spent most of her life in Indiana. For years she was managing editor of the Terre Haute Daily News, besides doing all the paper's political writing. Later she was on the staff of the Indianapolis News, doing a full share of the editorial work and making a specialty of paragraphing, her paragraphs being widely copied in all parts of the country. For 11 years she conducted a department in the Terre Haute Saturday Evening Mail, and for 12 years was connected with The Firemen's Magazine, the most widely circulated labor magazine in the country at that time. During this time Mrs. Harper traveled, corresponding with the Chicago Times and Inter Ocean, Detroit Free Press, Cleveland Leader, Indianapolis Journal, Toledo Blade, Western Christian Advocate, New York Christian Union and Chicago Advance. Mrs. Harper will go to Rochester about Feb. 1 to undertake the biography. All Miss Anthony's correspondence and family papers will be placed at her service. The work is expected to occupy at least a year.

Women and Religious Work.

The Protestant deaconess institutions in Germany have paved the way for an independent position and suitable work for unmarried women. The black dress with the white cape gives her a safe entry into all houses, and we cannot but regret that the number of ladies is not larger who seek this useful occupation. But it has also given a general impulse to the work of women in all the branches of home missions.

This brings us to another point—the position of women in religious work. Women pastors and preachers are recognized in America as an order already existing. In Germany we are only in the beginning, but this beginning is made. The speaking of women in public was formerly rendered quite impossible. At first it was allowed in smaller circles of women. Now a lady, Mrs. Guauck, who is one of the German representatives of the rights of women, was requested to give an address at the evangelical social congress at Erfurt last year, and she met with universal applause. We begin to hear now that women may make public addresses without losing that true delicacy which we should not care to miss. In our prayer meetings women begin to take an active part. We even find that these meetings only become more lively and interesting when women join in the exercises.—Count Bernstorff in Examiner.

Drab In Favor.

Drab is one of the season's favored colors. The French call it "winter sky," but this is too poetic a title for its uncompromising dull, metallic tone. It is not like soft nun's gray, swallow gray, silver, dove, fawn or anything as delicate and dainty. Drab is not a becoming color on its own merits. We associate it with the coats and gowns of the Quakers, when far stricter in sectarian and dress matters than they are now, and with the old Puritan drivers of the defunct stagecoach, with their many caped, long, drab coats. But a French modiste can easily make a gown of beauty out of even drab cloth. She combines it with black and Danish or Spanish or British red so artistically and deftly that the dowdy dress of drab becomes in the hands of this sartorial prestidigitator a triumphant success. Set it against, for example, one of the brick red gowns of cloth, with a black and white vest and a brick red velvet toque en suite, and rivalry there is none between the two. The one is vulgar and provokingly aggressive, the other sufficiently smart and eminently attractive, but quiet withal. Another fancy of the Frenchwoman combines the drab material, with cream cloth accessories braided in gold or striped with the narrowest lines of red and gold braid laid side by side.—New York Post.

Who Pays the Taxes?

At the last meeting of the Political Equality club of Lewiston, Pa., the following statement was made: The taxpayers are in the east ward, 127 men and 103 women; in the west ward, 137 men and 89 women; in the south ward, 46 men and 13 women; whole number of men paying tax, 310; whole number of women paying tax, 205. The number of women paying tax in the borough is almost two-thirds the number of men, yet they are not supposed or expected to know how this money is expended and have no voice as to how it shall be used. Is this taxation by representation?

This town was once my home. Miss Hay and Miss Yates organized this Lewiston club. I rejoice to see that it flourishes and that its members can make out so strong a case. Their taxation argument is certainly a good one.—Laura M. Johns in Boston Woman's Journal.

Honor to the Pioneers.

Mrs. Catharine Waugh McCulloch, attorney at law, of Chicago, wrote a bright paper for a parlor meeting of the Rockford Woman's Suffrage association, in which she said: "If the old common law under which we live in Illinois had not changed for the better during the past 25 years, life would be unbearable for even the most servile suffrage remonstrant. We women workers owe our present opportunities to work at fair wages in varied callings to those pioneers who asked first and always for the ballot, which includes it all. All honor to our benefactors, Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and our gentle, persevering, undaunted, devoted, heroic and immortal Lucy Stone!"

A Youthful Hustler.

J. Ellen Cadelle of Florence, S. C., is only 16 years old, and yet she has been a drummer for three years. Necessity forced her to care for her invalid father and mother and little sister and brother, and she started out to canvass her state for a weekly newspaper. She is now traveling for a Bath (N. Y.) tinware house, though a big firm in Chicago is trying to get her to work for them. She is writing a history of her experiences as a drummer, and it will soon be published.

Attaching Husband's Earnings.

The women of New Zealand recently passed the following, which will be interesting to women at large, "In all cases where a woman elects to superintend a household and to be the mother of children there shall be a law attaching a certain just share of her husband's earnings or income for her separate use, payable, if she desires, into her separate account."

Two Opinions.

Mrs. Lynn Lynton having asserted in a London periodical that "the prettiest woman in the world loses all her distinctive charm when biking," the Countess of Malmesbury hastens to say that her sex looks well on bicycles, and vastly better than men, because "the motive power is concealed almost entirely by the skirt if the ankle action be good."

She Can Have the Place.

The first car run on the new electric line recently opened in Santa Barbara, Cal., was operated by a woman, Miss Hattie K. Muller. She was so successful that she tried it again and again and finally said to the president of the road that if people did not stare so she would rather be a motorman than anything else in the world. The president replied that the place was open to her whenever she wanted to adopt that profession.

Organized by Women.

Eight prominent society ladies of Spokane, Wash., have incorporated the Woman's Northwest Mining and Investment company, capitalized at $2,000,000, and will engage in the mining business. They have obtained the services of an expert to report on the properties of the company. Branch offices will be established in many large cities.

Clothless Dinners.

Several clothless dinners have been given lately, which is a decided innovation. It has heretofore been usual only at luncheons and teas, if at all, to strip the polished mahogany of its cloth. Now, in at least a few cases, it has been done at dinner as well. Nothing can make a more effective setting for silver, glass and wax lights than the dark, shining surface of this rich wood. It seems a pity, however, to take away the pretty distinction of the simpler meals by giving the privilege of an uncovered board also to the formal dinner.

Young, but Clever.

Miss Katherine L. Courtright, dean of women of Knox college, is a very young woman to hold the position she does, but, in addition to that, she is also a young woman who received no "higher education" as it is furnished in schools. A college dean with no degree, no alma mater even, is a rarity worth comment, and when that dean is a teacher with an enviable record and a director of fine methods there is something to be said to the women who lament that so many doors are closed to them because of their lack of college training.

Winter Shirt Waists.

Well fitting, well made, pretty flannel shirt waists are the thing just now for cyclers, golfers and other women who affect out of door sports. A cotton or linen waist is too cool, so the flannel and lightweight cloth shirts take their place. The newest and prettiest flannel shirts are made without linings so they can be easily washed. Delaine, corduroy and velveteen are all made up into regular shirt waists these days, and when they fit well they are pretty and appropriate for the fresh air girl.

To Fix Up Furs.

Furs, when taken out in the fall, are often found to have a marred and crushed appearance. They can be made to look fresh and new with little trouble. Wet the fur with a clean brush dipped in water and then shaken, brushing the hair up the wrong way. Let the fur dry in the air for half an hour and then give it a good beating with a rattan. After beating it comb the fur in the right way with a coarse comb.

Women Coal Miners.

In England a number of young women are regularly employed in coal mines and are perfectly satisfactory in their work. They do not go down into the deep shafts, but work at the mouths of the pits and shovel coal as easily as men. They receive 28 cents a day. They wear heavy trousers made in knickerbocker style, blouses and short, heavy skirts turned up like the washerwoman overskirts of the past.

Chest Protectors.

Chest protectors of brocaded silk in bright, dainty colors are made for women to wear with evening dress. They are shaped somewhat on the plan of a bolero jacket without armholes, meet at the neck in front, where they tie across with ribbon and are finished with a little standing collar.

The Little Girl That Grew Up.

She was sitting up straight in a straight backed chair.
There wasn't a snarl in her shining hair;
There wasn't a speck on her dainty dress,
And her rosy face was full of distress.

When I drew near to this maiden fair,
She suddenly rumpled her shining hair,
And dropping down "in a heap" on the floor
Uplifted her voice in a wail most sore.

"Now, what is the matter, my pretty maid?"
"I'm all grown up," she dolefully said,
"And I'm lonesome—as lonesome as lonesome can be—
For Humpty Dumpty and Riddle-me-ree.

"There's Little Boy Blue, who used to creep
Under our haystack and fall asleep,
He isn't my friend since mother dear
'Did up' my hair in this twist so queer.

"And the dog and the fiddle, they left me, too,
When the baby into a woman grew.
The dish has hidden away with the spoon,
And the cow has staid at the back of the moon.

"The little old woman who swept the sky
Is caught in her cobwebs high and dry,
And Jack and his beanstalk I cannot find
Since I began to improve my mind.

"I wouldn't be scared—not a single mite—
If the bugaboo I should meet tonight.
The bogy man I'd be glad to see,
But they'll never—no, never—come back to me.

"I watched in the garden last night at dark
A fairy favor to find, but—hark!
My mother is calling—don't you hear?—
'Young ladies don't sit on the floor, my dear.'"

The Stowe Statue.

The statue of Harriet Beecher Stowe, to be erected in Hartford, will be the third statue to women in this country. The first one is in New Orleans to a woman who was a heroine during a fearful epidemic there. The other is of Emma Willard and stands in Troy, N. Y.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

At the last election two towns in Kansas chose women for all the local offices, including those of mayor and chief of police. Women were also chosen as superintendents of public schools in 20 counties. And still the women of Kansas possess only a limited measure of suffrage.

The girls of the Iowa State Normal school, at Cedar Falls, have adopted a dress reform uniform, consisting of a skirt six inches from the ground, a short jacket, leggings and a plain hat or cap.

The Daughters of Syria, a new society, open to all Syrian women who can read and write, has been organized in New York city for social and moral purposes, as well as for study.

A Business Woman's club has been organized in Buffalo for the purpose of providing the members with club conveniences—such as men enjoy—in the business part of the city.

The St. Johnsbury Woman's club of Vermont has placed seats in the public parks of the town and set up drinking fountains for men, with granite troughs for horses and dogs.

The Rhode Island Woman's club of Providence is paying the expenses of a student at Brown university.

DOCTORS ON ALCOHOL

THEY ARE OPPOSED TO ITS USE AS A BEVERAGE.

It Predisposes the Body to Disease—Weakens the Mental Powers—Healthy Persons Do Not Need Alcohol In Any Quantity—Total Abstinence the Safeguard.

Dr. A. Baer of Berlin is a royal medical counselor and the first physician of the prison at Ploetzensee. He has written a work on alcoholism and has been pronounced "the best informed man on the subject of alcohol," writes J. H. W. Stuckenberg in The Voice. His opposition to alcoholism is due to his scientific investigations and his experience with criminals. We quote but a few of his many utterances on the subject. He thinks drunkenness was probably never before so generally prevalent and never so injurious to the public welfare. He declares that healthy persons do not need alcohol in moderate quantities even, and that it is certain that no one becomes a drunkard who was not previously a moderate drinker. He says:

"Alcohol is not a food in the sense that it gives one the power of endurance or preserves strength and health. It rather produces the opposite effects, for it destroys the body and ruins its health." Instead of being a preventive of malaria, cholera and other diseases, alcohol actually predisposes one to these evils. The mental and moral effects of alcoholism are beyond description terrible. "Alcohol destroys the individuality of men, paralyzes the will and the physical energy, makes the individual a slave of his passions, so that, unless he gratifies them, he becomes stupid, miserable and impotent, but if they are gratified they are cultivated inordinately so as to terminate in the destruction of the body and the end of life."

We now turn to a Dutch physiologist, Dr. F. C. Donders. He says:

"Never let a drop of whisky moisten the lips of men. If large quantities destroy mind and body, small quantities produce physiologically exactly the same effect. The difference is quantitative, not qualitative. I do not hesitate to affirm that if from this day not another drop of spirituous liquors was drunk, the appetite for it would be quieted after a few generations, if not wholly destroyed."

Among the radical opponents of the use of alcohol as a beverage, whether in large or small portions, is Dr. A. Fick, professor of physiology in Wurzburg. He pronounces alcohol a poison, and as a specialist in physiology he declares that its effect on the mind and body is most pernicious. However moderately taken, he denies that it can be regarded as a valuable nourishment.

Respecting the strengthening influence of alcohol he says:

"It is altogether beyond question that even the moderate dose of alcohol diminishes the power of work. All that is said about the strength produced by alcohol is deception. The small glass of the poor man taken during his hours of labor is undoubtedly injurious. Every penny which the laborer pays for alcoholic drinks is not only wasted, but also works destructively. The laborer would use his money productively if he spent for fat and sugar what he gives for alcohol."

He claims to speak as "a critical scientist," and states that it is the province of physiology, his specialty, to determine the effects of alcohol on the system. As a scientific specialist he makes this significant statement, "The warfare against alcohol is the most important phenomenon of our age—more important than political action, wars and peace conventions." He is a total abstainer and sees in total abstinence the hope of saving the nations now diseased by means of alcoholic poison transmitting the pernicious mental and physical effects to the coming generation.

Dr. J. Gaule, professor of physiology in Zurich, declares that the future belongs to such as have the courage of total abstinence. He laments the great dominion gained by alcohol over the human family. The destruction it works may be slow, but it is sure. "The man addicted to morphine is a ruin in two or three years. Alcohol gives longer respite, often 20 or 30 years, but it is equally remorseless, the process being in essence the same."

Dr. J. Kollmann, professor of anatomy in Basel, pronounces alcohol one of the greatest hindrances to every reform which aims at promoting the welfare of the people. He wants the better situated classes to set the example of total abstinence. The rewards will be personal welfare, increase of the happiness of the family and a longer life. "Temperance, total abstinence, may lengthen life ten years."

Dr. J. Rosenthal, professor of physiology and hygiene in Erlangen, says: "So long as alcohol remains in the stomach, digestion is suspended. In that case the food remains undigested for hours."

The eminent Jules Simon, who died recently, said: "I am a great enemy of alcohol, which is worse than the pest. It is an unending pest."

Dr. Helmholtz, late of Berlin, well known through his discoveries in physiology and in other departments of science, was regarded by many as the greatest scientist of the age. He was one of the eminent thinkers who established the law of the conservation of energy. In celebrating his seventieth anniversary, referring to his own experience, he spoke of the suggestions which come like lightning flashes as if by inspiration to the scientist and then added, "But the least quantity of alcohol seemed to banish them."

Alcohol's Ravages.

As long ago as 1847 Dr. Turner declared that the inebriate had suffered a compound fracture from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet, so great is the assault made by alcohol on the human system.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON VI, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, FEB. 7.

Text of the the Lesson, Acts iv, 32, to v, 11—Memory Verses, 32, 33—Golden Text, I Sam. xvi, 7—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

32. "And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul." It was a whole hearted surrender to Christ of all they were and all they had; a full recognition that they were not their own, but bought with a price to be a special people unto the Lord (I Cor. vi, 19, 20; Titus ii, 14). This was as truly the work of the Holy Spirit as was the boldness of Peter and John before the council, or their boldness in verse 31. Imagine the financial condition of the churches and missionary societies if all Christians would say, "Whatever the Lord wants of me or mine He is welcome to, for all I am and have is surely His."

33. "And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus and great grace was upon them all." The grace was the grace of God, and the power was the Spirit of God. "Not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts" (Zech. iv, 6).

34, 35. "Neither was there any among them that lacked. Distribution was made to every man according as he had need." It is the Lord's plan that those who are His and serve Him should lack no good thing (Ps. lxxxiv, 11; Math. vi, 33; Phil. iv, 19; Luke xii, 35).

Make thou His service thy delight;
He'll make thy wants His care.

In this case the supply came from the willing contributions of those who, having property, sold it and brought the proceeds to the apostles. When the tabernacle was built, the superabundant supply came from the willing offerings of the people (Ex. xxxvi, 5-7); but whether in these ways, or by ravens, or by increase of oil or meal, God will supply His people's need.

36, 37. "And Joses, having land, sold it and brought the money and laid it at the apostles' feet." Here is one example of the many who did thus. His other name, Barnabas (son of consolation), was certainly true of him when he stood by Saul at the time the other disciples were afraid of him (Acts ix, 26, 27).

Chapter v, 1, 2. "But a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira, his wife, sold a possession and kept back part of the price." These were professedly followers of Christ and perhaps really so; but, like so many today, they were not whole hearted in service. They saw others selling property and giving the proceeds to the apostles for the general good, and they seemed to do like the others, not thinking that God saw their hearts and their dishonesty. They did not act upon the precept, "Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as to the Lord, and not unto men." Nor did they think of the eyes of the Lord beholding the evil and the good (Col. iii, 23; Prov. xv, 3).

3. "But Peter said, Ananias, why hath satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost?" When any one receives Christ, the Holy Spirit is given to instruct, guide and control in all things that life, and when there is complete submission to the Spirit there will be a life greatly to the glory of God, but when the old life—the flesh, the carnal mind—which still remains in the believer is allowed to have its evil way—for it is only evil—then the Spirit is grieved (Eph. iv, 29-32).

4. "Thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God." Here is a proof of the oneness of the Father and the Spirit; to lie to the one is to lie to the other. The property was Ananias' and the proceeds of the property when sold were his also, and he was at liberty to give to God all or part or none without committing sin, but to profess to give all and yet give only a part was a lie. We are saved freely through Christ without money or price. We are then to remember that we are bought with a price, the precious blood of Christ, and yield fully to Him for His service (Rom. xii, 1), but it must be honestly and cheerfully done to be accepted.

5, 6. "And Ananias, hearing these words, fell down and gave up the ghost." Instant death for a lie. This seems very severe, but it was evidently, in the sight of God, a necessary discipline for the believers. I cannot conclude that this man and his wife were out and out hypocrites and lost souls without concluding that all who today keep back part of the price are also lost souls, and if that be so what a host of professors are lost! If all such should be cut off as these two were, there would not be undertakers enough to see to the burying.

7. "And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in." She did not know that she was a widow, she did not know that her guilt had been found out; she probably came looking for her husband. She came knowing in her heart that she was acting a lie as to the price of the property, but not knowing God's displeasure with such conduct. What a contrast there is in this "not knowing" to the "not knowing" of Abraham in Heb. xi, 8.

8. "And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much." Another lie, the Spirit grieved, loss incurred. The devil is the father of lies, and thus early in the history of the church he got in some of his devilish work. He did some of the same kind—I mean lying—through Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebekah, Jacob and Rachel, and if he never accomplished any through you, my friend, you have great reason to praise God for His grace which has kept you.

9. "Then Peter said unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord?" What consternation must have seized her as she heard the exposition of her guilt, and in Peter's next words the tidings that her husband was dead and buried, and that she must die too! What an awful illustration of the words in Num. xxxii, 23—"Be sure your sin will find you out." May we keep in mind that God desires truth in the inward parts, and let our hearts be saying, "O Lord, thou hast searched me and known me" (Ps. li, 6; cxxxix, 1).

10. "Then fell she down straightway at his feet and yielded up the ghost." Another example of God's hatred of deceit and lying. Those who make a practice of lying have reason to fear lest they finally find themselves in Rev. xxi, 8. These two may have been given to this sin ere they became numbered with the followers of Christ, and this may have been the first outbreak since conversion.

11. "And great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things." We are to serve the Lord with fear and rejoice with trembling, and also to work out our own salvation with fear and trembling (Phil. ii, 12), not a fear of being lost, but a fear of grieving the Holy Spirit.

TERRIBLY COLD AT CHICAGO.

Many Poor Families Fonnd Nearly Frozen to Death—Sunday Relief.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—According to the records of the weather bureau yesterday was the coldest day in Chicago in thirteen years. Only twice since the Chicago station has been established has there been so low a maximum temperature recorded. At 8 o'clock last night the signal service reported 12 below and at 3:30 this morning a private observation on the street showed nineteen below. The suffering among the poorer class is intense, and a number of cases of destitution were reported to the police. At Grand Crossing thirty-three families, with eighty-six children, were found in their poorly protected hovels, unable to care for themselves, their ears, noses and hands whitened and benumbed by cold.

In South Chicago five families were found actually freezing to death. These found actually freezing to death. A number of other cases were found in other parts of the city. To aid the poor on account of the extreme severity of the weather the county coal contractor delivered 400 loads of coal to destitute families. This is the first time such a delivery has been made Sunday. Food and clothing were also given out.

Reoorts from the west and northwest show very low temperatures—at St. Paul, 18 below; at Helena, Mont., 14; at Bismarck, N. D., and Winnipeg, Man., 24; Duluth, 18; Detroit, 5; in the upper peninsula of Michigan, 15.

Americans Expelled from Germany.

ILLINOIS NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST.

Summary of Important Events of the Past Few Days Reported by Telegraph for the Benefit of Our Readers—Items of Special Interest to Illinois People.

Springfield, Ills., Jan. 21.—The finishing touches to the work of making William E. Mason United States senator were added by the members of the legislature assembled in joint session yesterday afternoon. Mason's name was put before the joint session by Representative Sharrock and seconded by Kincheloe. Altshuler nominated Altgeld and in seconding the latter Peter Gallagher said: "I rise to second the nomination of a man who, if here, could speak for himself—if he had a chance—John P. Altgeld." There were a number of other seconds and when the speech-making was done the roll was called, resulting as follows: Mason—Senate, 37; house, 88; total, 125. Altgeld—Senate, 13; house, 64; total, 77. Speaker Curtis then formally declared W. E. Mason elected senator in the national congress.

Resolutions were adopted by the joint session favoring Senator Cullom for a position in McKinley's cabinet. The resolutions eulogize the senator, declaring him eminently qualified as an advisor of the chief executive of the nation. The resolutions earnestly urge Cullom for a portfolio, but do not specify any particular one.

In the senate little business was done after the senatorial election. In the house a Chicago member introduced a bill to force Chicago street railways to give rides for less than the contract price with the city, and another member introduced a Cuban recognition resolution. A number of bills were introduced.

Injunction Against a Railway.

Springfield, Ills., Jan. 25.—In the United States circuit court Judge Allen, upon application of the Central Machine and Foundry company, of Quincy, issued an injunction restraining the Quincy, Omaha and Kansas City and the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad companies from discontinuing the through freight line which has been maintained between Quincy and Chicago by way of the former road to Hurdland, Mo., where the road connected with the Santa Fe. The roads in question are also enjoined from refusing freight by that line. The Santa Fe wishes to break the traffic agreement.

Illinois Coal Mine Statistics.

Springfield, Ills., Jan. 25.—The Illinois state board of labor has just completed its annual report and sent the advance sheets to the public printer. The annual coal report shows that while coal mined in three counties was less than in 1895, the aggregate receipts were $1,570,579 more than for 1895 and the grand total output was 2,050,762 tons more than for the same period. The number of employes killed was only two more than for 1895.

Light Fines for Riotous Students.

Champaign, Ills., Jan. 25.—Student George Morrison pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct and was fined $3 and costs. Pease, who threw the chemicals, stood trial, and Saturday was fined $10 and costs on the same charge. Miss Radebaugh's condition is serious, but she is apparently improving. If President Draper carries out his positive declarations made Friday night, all the guilty ones will get a severe punishment.

DELAWARE "RUMP" HAS QUIT.

Tells the People That the State Is in a Mighty Bad Way.

Dover, Del., Jan. 21.—The "rump" legislature adjourned sine die yesterday afternoon, but before doing so, issued a manifesto. The document declares that the rights of the people are continually denied in Delaware; that the legislature and executive authorities have been overthrown; that legally elected legislators have been evicted from the state capitol; that "a corrupt oligarchy" has usurped the executive powers of a free state; that election returns have been falsified by state officials, acting as agents of a corrupt machine; that leaders of the people curse the laws and defy the courts; that violent, profane and obscene leaders of partisan mobs overthrow the will of the people by falsifying election returns and certificates, and that the courts of the state are influenced by partisan prejudices.

Dover, Del., Jan. 21.—Delaware has now apparently three United States senators-elect and one sitting in the senate. The Democratic legislature, sitting in the state house, elected General Richard R. Kenney to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Higgins, and the Republican legislature, in session at Hotel Richardson, elected J. Edward Addicks for the same term. Opposing these two new claimants Colonel H. A. Dupont has renewed his claim to the seat vacated by Higgins, alleging that he was elected by the Delaware legislature in May, 1895.

NEW IRON LASTS and HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT

The Latest, Neatest, Cheapest and Best Outfit Ever Invented.

THE HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT NO. 1.

Consisting of 38 First-Class Tools and Materials (neatly boxed) Shown in Cut, viz.:

1 Iron Last, 8 inches.
1 Iron Last, 6 inches.
1 Iron Last, 4 inches.
1 Iron Standard, with Base.
1 Package Assorted Nails.
1 Package 4-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 5-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 6-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
6 Pairs Star Heel Plates.
½ lb Copper Rivets and Burrs.
1 Steel Punch.
1 Sewing Awl, complete.
1 Pegging Awl, complete.
1 Wrench for above.
1 Stabbing Awl, complete.
1 Shoeknife.
1 Shoehammer.
1 Bottle Rubber Cement.
1 Bottle Leather Cement.
1 Harness and Saw Clamp.
1 Ball Wall.
1 Ball Shoe Thread.
1 Bunch Bristles.
4 Harness Needles.
1 Soldering Iron.
1 Bottle Soldering Fluid.
1 Box Rosin.
1 Bar Solder.
1 Directions for Use.

All these tools are full-sized, practical, neat, and cheap; not mere toys. They enable any person to do his own half-soling, boot, shoe, rubber, harness, and tinware repairing.

This Outfit is the result of years of study, experiment, and correspondence in the manufacture of Iron Lasts and Repairing Outfits; and its practical advantages need only to be seen and tried to be appreciated.

Our Improved Iron Lasts and Standard are one of the handiest tools you can have about the place. The Lasts are four in number, smooth and solid, 4, 6, 8 ,and 10 inches long, thus enabling one to half-sole all sizes of foot-wear. The Standard is made with an iron base, which can be easily fastened to the bench. No method of half-soling is now used on common work, except that of iron last and wire clinch nails. The writer of this has been in the business 20 years, and has seen the changes from the old wooden lasts and pegs to the modern method, and knows it to be complete.

The weight of this outfit is 18 lbs. Price, all complete, packed in a neat, strong box, only $3.00.

The Home Repairing Outfit No. 2.

COMPLETE BOOT, SHOE AND RUBBER REPAIRING OUTFIT, consisting of 31 first class tools and materials. The No. 2 outfit contains the same articles as the No. 1 excepting the Harness and Soldering Tools, and is gotten up for those who have no harness or tinware repairing to do. Price of No. 2, neatly boxed, $2.00, or with the paper one year $2.75 Price of No. 1, neatly boxed, $3.00, or with the paper one year, $3.75.

COVERED BARNYARDS.

How These Compare With Open Yards. Objections Against Them.

The decomposition of manure under cover, for which covered barnyards are chiefly recommended by their advocates, presents the most favorable conditions for the propagation of any germs of disease which may have infected a herd of cattle, according to American Cultivator, which advances the following opinions: When manure is composted under cover, its temperature is raised generally to something more than blood heat. No better seed bed for the propagation of germs of all kinds can be desired than this. So long as the manure keeps moist these germs stay in their place. But inevitably under cover, unless artificial watering is resorted to, the moisture in the manure pile becomes dried. As the farmer says, the manure "fire fangs" and when handled breaks up into fine powder, which in a close, darkened room flies about in every direction, lodging on walls and holding in this dust the germs of every disease that has been propagated in the fermenting manure heap. Is it any wonder that the tuberculosis disease has raged most among the stock kept most carefully, by which is usually meant the most artificial and unhealthful conditions?

We do not condemn keeping animals warm, either in stables above ground or in underground basements. Whatever is necessary for the comfort of animals must be secured in inclement winter climate. But trying to save manure by composting it in the same room with the stock is something that never ought to be done. The composting should always be done out of doors. The manure, if kept moist, always will decompose its vegetable matter into moist mold that will help to hold ammonia instead of into dry ash that will dissipate it. Instead of providing covered barnyards to hold the manure it should be brought outside the barn into the open air each day.

The man who works comfortably in the open air during the daytime needs shelter and protection at night. So, too, does stock. It is the attempt to preserve stock from exposure at all times, rather than keeping it warm and comfortable during hours of sleep, that is objected to. Giving some exercise in the open air each day is an essential to preserving health in all animals. It is because the covered barnyard makes this difficult that we are opposed to it. By keeping the open barnyard well littered with straw there will be little waste of manure. The advantage to health of providing a place for farm stock to freely exercise in will more than counterbalance any possible but not probable waste of manure from such cause.

Measurement of Water.

The state engineer of Wyoming is credited with the following by the Orange Judd Farmer: The "inch" as used in the measurement of water is a very indefinite and unsatisfactory unit. The laws of Idaho make a cubic foot per second equal 50 miners' inches. The state engineer of Colorado computes that under the conditions defined by their statute it will require 38.4 inches to equal 1 cubic foot per second, but that is only under certain conditions. It may vary widely from that under the possible conditions of their law. The miners' inch in California varies in almost every district. There is no uniformity in the gauge nor the pressure under which the water shall be measured, pressure varying from 4½ to 12 inches. In those sections of California in which a 6 inch pressure above the top of the orifice is used, a miners' inch is taken as discharging 0.026 cubic feet per second, which is about 38.4 inches to one cubic foot per second.

The Manual of Irrigation Engineering, by Wilson, gives 50 California miners' inches as equal to 1 cubic foot per second. In Wyoming the inch has no legal status nor any recognized method of measuring. To summarize, the entire states in which the absolute relation between the inch and the cubic foot per second has been fixed by law that relation has been fixed on the ratio of 50 miners' inches to 1 cubic foot per second, but in those states where the conditions of measurement have been fixed by law the ratio is from about 34.4 to 45.9 cubic inches.

Ashland Hams.

By request National Stockman reports the formula used by the Clay family of Kentucky in curing the once famous Ashland hams:

To sugar cure small hams or shoulders take enough spring or well water to cover the meat. For every hundredweight of meat use brown sugar, 3 pounds; saltpeter, one-quarter pound; alum, an ounce; soda, an ounce. Mix these in the water and add enough salt to make a brine strong enough to bear an egg. Pour this cold over the meat, which should have been previously slightly salted to draw out the blood, weight the meat with stones to keep it under the pickle, and in about 30 days it will do to hang up to dry and smoke. Smoke meat three weeks, making the fire of green wood or sawdust. Ashland hams were smoked four weeks with green walnut wood.

Farmers & Villagers.
FOR Fathers & Mothers,
FOR Sons & Daughters,
FOR
All the Family.

With the close of the Presidential campaign THE TRIBUNE recognizes the fact that the American people are now anxious to give their attention to home and business interests. To meet this condition, politics will have far less space and prominence, until another State or National occasion demands a renewal of the fight for the principles for which THE TRIBUNE has labored from its inception to the present day, and won its greatest victories.

Every possible effort will be put forth, and money freely spent, to make THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE pre-eminently a NATIONAL FAMILY NEWSPAPER, interesting, instructive, entertaining and indispensable to each member of the family.

☞ A GOOD, RELIABLE WATCH CHEAP. ☜
FREE FOR A CLUB OF TWENTY SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the demand for a good cheap watch, we have made arrangements to furnish this reliable and durable timepiece at a very low figure. This is no "below cost" or "sheriff sale" watch. The price we ask is more than we pay, but so little more that we could not send them a cent less if you ordered a bushel. ☞ There is

No Reliable Watch Cheaper Than This!

READ CAREFULLY! The movement is a 7 jeweled Elgin or Waltham with stem wind and stem set. To set the watch: Pull out the stem until it "clicks," when you can turn the hands at will. Press back in position to wind. By this arrangement you only need to open the watch to regulate it, and your movement is kept as nearly dust-proof as possible. The case is Silveroid (not silver), yet can hardly be told from solid silver. Will keep its color always. Is screw back and bezel, tight fitting, handsome and strong and will last a lifetime. Before the late reduction in price of this movement the retail figure was $12.00. WE GUARANTEE this watch to be perfect, and will refund the money if not exactly as represented. REMEMBER, this is not a Chronometer, nor will it regulate the sun, but it is a good, reliable timekeeper. Sent by express for $5.75. If wanted by mail add 25c. for postage.

This movement in a solid silver case, described as above, only $9.50.

MASONIC CHART.

ILLUSTRATING THE RELATION OF SOME OF THE DEGREES AND RITES IN FREEMASONRY TO EACH OTHER.

The accompanying chart represents one hundred and forty two degrees.

1. The American Rite of 13 degrees;
2. The Scotch Rite of 33 degrees;
3. The Egyptian Rite of 96 degrees.
4. The Mystic Shrine of one degree.
5. The Eastern Star of 5 degrees for Master Masons and for women. These are side degrees, and not genuine masonry.

The Symbolic degrees, or Blue Lodge of three degrees, are common to every Masonic rite, whether American, Scotch, or Egyptian, or whichever of the Masonic rites, named in Mackey's Masonic Encyclopedia one may choose to investigate.

This chart shows in the Blue Lodge the position of the Worshipful Master and some of the other officers of the lodge. Several positions of the candidate who is being initiated are also shown. In the Master Mason's degree is recognized the murder, burial and resurrection scene so full of religious significance to Freemasons.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. 341 pages, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. 2 vols. Per vol., cloth, $1.00: paper, 65c.
The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive.
Vol. II comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. 274 pages, flexible cloth, 50c.
By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. 110 pages, paper, 25c.
The genuine old Morgan book republished.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry. By Avery Allyn. Cloth, $5.00.
Contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, and the Orange Societies.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Cloth, $2.50.
Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market, it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated."

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 75c.
Contains the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual.

Look to the East. A ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Cloth, $2.00.
Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or the Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. 16 pages, 5c.
Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge.

Mah-Hah-Bone; 589 pages; $1.00
Comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. Cloth, $1.00: paper cover, 50cts.
The complete revised ritual of the Lodge Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. Cloth, 50c; paper cover, 25c.
This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor of Evangelical Lutheran church. 10c. each.
This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and, the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias, Illustrated. Cloth, 50c: paper cover 25c.
An exact copy of the new official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the world, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. 15c each.
The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient or the Oriental degree. This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. $1.00, each.
Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated."

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association. 10c. each.
Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Constitution and By-laws of the Association.

Secret Societies. Cloth 35c, paper 15c.
A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev Edward Beecher.

The Master's Carpet or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical. Bound in fine cloth. 400 pages. 75c.
Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. 5c.
By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Finney on Masonry. Cloth 75c., paper 35c.
The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By ex-Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasony Self-Convicted. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40c.
This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them.

Judge Whitney's Defence before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. 15c.
Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. 10c.
This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life-undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder and Oaths of 33 degrees. 304 pages, cloth, $1.00,
"Composed of Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's, Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees."

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor of United Presbyterian church.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in New Berlin trials. 10c.
The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiation by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties,

Grand Lodge Masonry. 5c. each
Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to Republican Government. 15c.
By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio.

Story of the Gods. Postpaid, 10c.
By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of the past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood.

Masonic Outrages. Postpaid, 20c.
Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assualt on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts. etc.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. 25c.
As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book. 25c.
Consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies.

The Image of the Beast; A Secret Empire; or Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy. By Rev. Richard Horton. Third Edition. 200 pages, cloth, 60c.

Sermon on Secretism, 5c. each.
By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear ayra of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all.

THE COURSE OF EVENTS IN THE SENATE THIS WEEK.

Turpie Will Tackle the Cuban Question—International Monetary Conference to Come Up Today—Likelihood of Amendment of the Canal Measure.

Washington, Jan. 25.—The senate programme this week is rendered decidedly uncertain by the condition of the Nicaragua canal bill. With that measure out of the way the bankruptcy bill would probably be given the right of way earlier in the week, but even with the road cleared to the extent of the removal of the Nicaragua bill it is not probable that any headway would be made with the bankruptcy bill before Wednesday. The time of the senate after 3 o'clock today will be devoted to eulogies upon the late Speaker Crisp, and the time previous to that hour after the disposal of the routine morning business will be consumed by Turpie in a speech discussing the Cameron resolution. It is known that Senator Turpie will take radical ground favorable to Cuban recognition, and it is hinted that he will take occasion to criticise Olney's position sharply.

Cuba May Come in for Oratory.

Turpie's speech may prove to be the first of several on the Cuban question, but the committee on foreign relations is manifesting no disposition to press the resolutions to a vote. Tomorrow Chandler expects to secure a vote on his bill providing for the representation of this country at an international monetary conference. There will be several short speeches and more or less running debate on the measure, but it is believed that all substitutes and amendments will be voted down and the bill passed before the close of the day set for its consideration. Cameron has a substitute requiring the government to take the initiative in calling a conference, which may give the movers of the original bill more or less trouble.

Will Fight for the Canal Bill.

Morgan will make a strenuous effort to prevent the Nicaragua canal bill from losing its place as the unfinished business on the calendar, and it is understood will submit amendments which will meet the demands of those who hold that the bill requires further work by committee in view of the new position of Nicaragua as developed by Senor Rodriguez's letter. Which would seem to indicate that Morgan is not so belligerent now as he was Friday when the Rodriguez letter was announced in the senate, when he wanted "this minister" to send his statement "back to his government."

House Likely to Discuss Immigration.

The most interseting feature of the house programme for the coming week, unless the Nicaragua canal bill should receive consideration (which in view of the recent complications seems entirely improbable), will be the fight against the conference report on the immigration bill. Barthoidt of Missouri, who made an ineffectual attempt to prevent the bill from going to conference, will lead the opposition to the bill as agreed on by the conferrees. There seems to be little doubt that the friends of the measure will be triumphant in the end, as the sentiment in favor of an immigration bill in the house is, as shown by the votes on previous occasions, in a strong majority. Nevertheless Bartholdt proposes to do all in his power to defeat the conference report.

May Kill That Peace Treaty.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Quite an important as its effect upon the Nicaragua bill itself is the influence which Rodriguez's communication is likely to have upon the Anglo-American arbitration treaty. Many senators believe that the new position assumed by the Central American powers is the result of British influence, and the effect is to cause those who hold this belief to stand aloof from any alliance with England. Members of the committee on foreign relations freely express the opinion in private conversation that the effect of the communication will be entirely against the treaty.

Jones Appeals to Idaho Democrats.

Washington, Jan. 25.—Senator Jones, of Arkansas, has sent a message to the silver men of the Idaho legislature saying: "Upon a full review of the situation we believe that the controversy in Idaho today is the same that was fought in the last campaign and that the interest of the national Democracy demands the election of Dubois, who with Teller and others led the silver Republicans out of the Republican party. His defeat by Democratic votes, or by the failure to obtain them, will not only affect our party in the senate, but will weaken and dissipate our strength in the west and central west."

Senator George Dangerously Ill.

Washington, Jan. 25.—United States Senator James Z. George, of Mississippi, is dangerously ill from heart failure at the Garfield hospital in this city, and owing to his advanced age his friends are very apprehensive of the outcome.

Returned from a Duck-Shooting Trip.

Washington, Jan. 25.—The president returned from a duck shooting trip down the Potomac late Saturday night. He spent Saturday at Colonel Waller's famous ducking grounds at Widewater, near Quantico, Va., and had a fair day's luck.

LAWMAKERS AT WORK.

Synopsis of Proceedings in the Senate and House.

Washington, Jan. 20.—The session of the senate yesterday was without incident. Turpie spoke against the Nicaragua canal bill, and the reading of the legislative appropriation bill was completed with the exception of sections making provision for the congressional library, which were passed over temporarily in the absence of senators interested in the subject.

The old soldiers had a field day in the house. Under a special order the day was devoted to the consideration of private pension bills. Of the 900 on the calendar fifty were disposed of during the five hours' session. Among those favorably acted upon were bills to grant pensions to Major General Julius H. Stahel at the rate of $100 per month; the widow of Major General Erastus B. Tyler, at $75; Hannah E. Rodgers, daughter of a revolutionary soldier, at $12, and the widow of the late General Mathhew M. Trumbell, of Iowa, at $100 per month.

Washington, Jan. 21.—The senate yesterday continued consideration of the Nicaraguan canal bill, Turpie continuing his speech in opposition. The legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, carrying approximately $23,000,000, was passed. Pettigrew severely criticised the executive authorities for concluding the Venezuela boundary agreement, which he said was a complete surrender of Venezuela to Great Britain. His resolution calling on the secretary of state for information was referred. Unanimous agreement was secured for taking up the bill for an international monetary conference on Tuesday next.

The house spent the day debating the contested election case of Yost vs. Tucker from the Tenth Virginia district. The committee is divided on the case and the speeches were rather warm, but not sensational. The case was not concluded. The conference report on the army bill was agreed to.

Washington, Jan. 2.—Morgan tried in the senate to have a day fixed for the vote on the Nicaragua bill, but the opposition showed an indication to filibuster and he threatened to "sit it out." A quroum failed, however, and he gave it up for the day. Turpie finished his speech against the bill. Chandler presented the credentials of J. Edward Addicks, of Delaware, for which seat Dupont's claim has been presented. Hill spoke against monopolies.

The house did nothing important except to vote—127 to 119—that Tucker was entitled to the seat for the Tenth Virgina district and Yost was not. Fifty-four Republicans voted for Tucker. The speaker had to count a quorum several times on acocunt of filibustering.

Washington, Jan. 23.—The whole session of the senate was devoted to discussion of the Anglo-American arbitration treaty and the Nicaragua canal. The sentiment on the treaty was that it was a good thing, but should be carefully examined for a "nigger in the woodpile." The canal came up in a communication from the minister of the Greater Republics to Secretary Olney stating that the bill before the senate was violative of the conditions of the concession by Nicaragua. Morgan did most of the talking and declared that he could see Great Britain's hand in the move; atacked the president and declared that the arbitration treaty could not be ratified unless this move was explained. Adjourned to today.

The house put in the day on private bills, except to pass over the president's veto the bill for a term of the United States court at Beamont, Tex. A number of private and pension bills bills passed, including one giving the widow of Green Clay Smith $50 a month. Adjourned to Monday.

NINE MEN LOST IN THE WRECK.

Life Savers Try in Vain to Shoot a Line Aboard the Vessel.

New York, Jan. 22.—For hours yesterday the life-savers at Quoque, L. I., tried to rescue the crew of the schooner Nahum Chapin, of Rockland, Me., coal laden, which went ashore in the surf there. The breakers were so high that it was impossible to launch a life-boat and recourse was had to the life-line gun. The crew, nine men, could be seen in the rigging and three attempts were made to shoot a line to them. Each was a failure, however, principally because the crew was too benumbed to catch the line.

Every time it was shot it reached the vessel, but slipped off before the men could catch it. As it landed on the schooner the last time the last of the men were seen to fall into the sea.

Cubans Defeat the Spaniards.

Cincinnati, Jan. 23.—A special to The Commercial-Tribune from Key West, Fla., says: News was received in Havana yesterday from Cuban sources that a fight ocurred at Pijua, Matanza province, last week in which the Spanish lost 100 men killed and wounded. They were attacked by Captain Morenzios's band of Cuban guerrillas at daybreak, while marching to reinforce a Spanish garrison there and but for the aid extended from Pijua would have been cut to pieces.

Sash and Door Trust in Session.

Oshkosh, Wis., Jan. 21.—The National Manufacturing company, the alleged sash and door trust, met here yesterday in annual session with about thirty members present. It is learned that it was decided to quietly await the outcome of Attorney General Mylrea's action to dissolve the trust. With this understanding the old officers were elected.

Iowa Coal Troubles Nearing Settlement.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 22.—At a meeting of mine operators yesterday it was agreed to pay the price demanded by the striking miners—70 to 80 cents per ton. The miners accepted it as a satisfactory solution. The matter now lies with the Oak Park operators, who did not take part in the meeting. It is believed that they will agree to the rate.

Reason for the Receivership.

West Superior, Wis., Jan. 22.—The Russell-Miller receivership which was applied for in the federal courts at Fargo, N. D., and Madison, Wis., as stated by officials here, is not on account of financial difficulty, but through disagreement of the stockholders.

Accident to McKinley's Sister.

Canton, O., Jan. 25.—Miss Helen McKinley, the president-elect's sister, slipped and fell on the ice on the sidewalk near the McKinley home on West Tuscarawas street. She was on her way to the postoffice. In falling one of the bones in her right wrist was broken. The injury was dressed and will probably take some weeks to heal. No other injury from the fall was reported.

See the program of the Minnesota State Convention on our ninth page.

So far as possible each session of our State Conventions will be a free parliament. Members of lodges are particularly invited, and will be heard in defense of the orders freely and courteously.

General Secretary Phillips has been devoting much time to working up the Missouri State convention, but will not be able to attend as he had planned, because of having to make another trip to Georgia this week on important business connected with the N. C. A.

The Missouri Convention hand-bill is one of the best we have seen. It is elegant in appearance, and will be helpful to the city in which the convention is held, since it has valuable testimonies on it in addition to the program, and it will be placed in a thousand of the homes of Kirksville, thus reaching many who cannot attend the convention.

The N. W. Christian Advocate says, "In the field of art an event has occurred which ought to make the year 1896, in a certain sense, infamous, namely, the acceptance and erection of the figure of a woman naked and drunk, as a suitable entertaining and educational influence, by the Public Library of Boston, Mass., the metropolis of the descendants of the Puritans."

The venerable ex-Pres. John G. Fee, of Berea College, Kentucky, sends $5 for N. C. A. literature to be distributed among students and citizens of Berea. The lodge question is being earnestly discussed in the literary societies of the college. The ex-President though above eighty years of age gave a strong address on the lodge question last Sabbath. Berea College is one of some 150 institutions of learning in this country in which the N. C. A. has placed anti-secret libraries in years past. We hope the friends of the cause in connection with these institutions will take pains to see that these libraries are accessible to the students.

REV. R. W. CHESNUT.

The brother whose picture looks out here is a natural-born reformer. He was born near Kossuth, Iowa, in 1858, and for several years was a member of the same church with us. He was blessed with pious parents and an excellent home training. After removing to Clay county, Kan., where he spent sixteen years with his parents, mostly on the farm, he resolved to study for the ministry, and overcoming many obstacles he completed his five years' college course in the University of Kansas at Lawrence. He completed his theological course in the Philadelphia Seminary in 1887, and the next year became pastor of the New Light Covenanter church at Marissa, Ill., which relation he still holds, gaining year by year an increasing hold upon the confidence and affections of his people. He has been for five years editor of the R. P. Advocate, the organ of his denomination, and is one of the rising men in that body.

Rev. R. W. Chesnut is a strong advocate of anti-secrecy. He has addressed several State anti-secret conventions, and has served as president of the Illinois State Christian Association. He has written: "I am opposed to secret oath-bound societies because they are contrary to the teachings of Jesus Christ, who said, 'In secret have I said nothing;' and because their oaths are blasphemous, their penalties barbarous and un-Christian. They stand in the way of all true reform, and are the church's worst enemy and the devil's strongest ally. They destroy the idea of benevolence and Christian charity. They are a descendant of heathenism and idolatry, and teach a false religion which rejects Christ as a Saviour and excludes his name from the prayers in their rituals. They pervert the Scriptures, degrade men and endanger their lives by their mode of initiation; they exclude women, reject the crippled and helpless, and give to none but to members whose dues are paid up."

Every person who aims to hold back even one friend from lodge connection should at least take pains to understand the "Third Point of Fellowship" as it appears in the third degree and reappears in the seventh.

Is it good religion to teach a man, that, if he does not commit adultery with the wife, sister, mother or daughter of a Mason who has proceeded as far as the third degree, he is, as to morality of that sort, as good as any Christian need be, and as ready for "the grand lodge above?"

A single column sermon each week on some of the living reform issues of the day will be a new and interesting feature of the Cynosure. Rev. J. S. T. Milligan, whose sermon appears this week on our sixth page, has consented to alternate every other week with Rev. J. B. Galloway in writing these sermons. As these brethren both wield very able pens these sermons will command attentive reading.

Let our friends take special pains to assure their neighbors that in these State conventions they are cordially invited to attend and learn why some of their fellow citizens prefer open to secret methods in benevolent, patriotic and Christian work; why they consider a young man safer in the home, the church and open associations like the Y. M. C. A., the Christian Endeavor and the Epworth League, than in assemblies entered by secret passwords and an oath or pledge to conceal whatever transpires within.

Very few people have any conception of the size of Greater New York. Its area will be 195,840 acres. It will have an estimated population of 3,430,000. Its annual tax budget will exceed $55,000,000. The assessed value of its real estate amount to $2,307,091,000. Its parks and park lands will comprise 7,336 acres, not counting the boulevards, which are under park control. It will contain sixty-four monuments and statues, including Grant's tomb, to be dedicated next April. It will have forty-eight cemeteries, comprising 3,600 acres, and containing a silent population of 4,000,000. Its public schools will contain 326,000 pupils and 7,282 teachers. There will be 1,093 churches, with 720,771 parishioners and 300,000 Sabbath-school scholars. The sitting capacity of the churches is 469,159. The aggregated value of church property is $68,718,000. There will be two big universities and ninety-three other educational institutions. The forty-five lines of street railway carry 792,000,000 passengers every year, over 464 miles of tracks. There are 218 banks and banking institutions in New York and Brooklyn alone, and the clearings of the clearing house aggregate $28,000,000,000 a year. The big city will transact considerably more than one-half the foreign commerce of the country.

THE DAY OF THE LORD.

HORATIUS BONAR, D. D.

The day of the Lord, it cometh!
It comes like a thief in the night;
It comes when the world is dreaming
Of safety, and peace, and light.
It cometh, the day of sackcloth,
With darkness, and storm, and fire,
The day of the great avenging,
The day of the burning ire.

Then the day of the evil endeth,
And the righteous reign comes in,
Like a cloud of sorrow evanish
The ages of human sin.
The light of the morning gleameth,
The dawn without cloud or gloom;
In chains lies the ruler of darkness,
And the Prince of light has come.

AN OPEN LETTER FROM W. B. DENTON.

The very able article entitled, "Fraternal Life Insurance—Organized Robbery," published in the Cynosure of Nov. 19, and in the November Lodge Lamp, created an unusual stir among the members of fraternal insurance societies. The author, W. B. Denton, of Winfield, Kan., has received in reply to his article many interesting letters from fraternity men, some of them prominent in politics. We publish several of these letters is this issue. The following is a letter he received from a member of the Kansas Legislature.

NIOTAZE, Kan., Jan. 6, 1897.

Mr. W. B. Denton.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter received and contents noted; and in reply will say, I think the author has been kicked out of some order, or is an insurance agent, and an all-around crank. Yours respectfully,

JOHN SHOUSE.

To this letter Mr. Denton makes the following reply:

Hon. John Shouse Topeka, Kan.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of the 6th inst. duly received. I thank you very much for complying with my request to give your opinion of the little paper sent you on fraternal life insurance. I also thank you for your plain, pointed English. I like plain talk. If you will kindly allow me a little self defense, I will say that it cannot possibly be proven that I ever was, or tried to be, a member of a fraternal insurance order, so I could not have been kicked out.

I am not, nor have I been, a life insurance agent. There can be no such thing as life insurance. Death is certain. Insurance is based only on the probable or possible. Your house may not burn; your watch may not break. You could just as well insure the sun to not rise on a certain day. Life insurance of every kind is only a name, behind which to hide a scheme, lottery or steal. In reality the old line company simply bets you a certain amount, that you will not pay a fixed sum at a specified time each year while you live. The wily company knowing the freaks of fortune generally wins.

Fraternal life insurance, with a heavy strain on morals and figures, holds out the promise that there will be no losses but all will gain. The best that can be said of it is, that it borrows from the future; but there can be no borrowing without the consent of the lender. The Ram's Horn of Jan. 9th says: "The devil has a halter around the neck of every man who is trying to get money in an easier way than by honestly earning it." On the grounds of opposing a popular system I freely acknowledge myself to be a crank. If you hold a beneficiary certificate, which I infer you do, how about the halter?

In comparison I am intellectually but a pigmy, yet if you dare defend fraternal life insurance in public print, I challenge you or any one else to a further discussion of this subject.

Very truly, W. B. DENTON.

Infidelity is not a bar to admission to a lodge. Neither is paganism. India is a home of Freemasonry, and Bombay is full of lodges. Masonry was founded on paganism.

Do not let another year pass without knowing definitely whether the charge that Masonic doctrine is persistently, secretly and effectively antagonizing Christian doctrine in the minds of thousands of men is true or not.

MODERN WOODMEN OF AMERICA.

(From the Revised Ritual.)

BENEFICIARY DEGREE

(Escort)—Before you become one with us it will be necessary for you to be regularly adopted as a Son and Neighbor. I will assure you, however, that nothing will be done to violate your political or religious obligations, or hurt your self-respect, but a valuable lesson will be taught you by ceremonies peculiar to our fraternity.

1st. Obligation:*—(Chief Forester)—Stranger, raise your right hand, and repeat after me the following obligation: (Consul gives three raps.)

I, (your name), upon my most sacred honor, promise that I will not in any manner reveal or communicate to mortal ear, sight or sense any of the secrets of the Modern Woodmen of America which I have already seen or heard, or which I may hereafter see, hear or experience, unless it be to a Neighbor whom I know to be a member of said Fraternity and be authorized to know and receive the same. To all this, without mental reservation, I most solemnly and sincerely promise. (Venerable Consul gives one rap.]

. . . . . .

2d. Obligation:*—(Consul)—(Gives three raps) Then take in your right hand this stone, and mind you well to do that which I instruct you. You will repeat after me the central obligation:

I, (your name), do, in the presence of these witnesses, vow and declare that if I am adopted as a Son and Neighbor of the Modern Woodmen of America, I will, in addition to that which I have already promised, obey the laws, rules, regulations and requirements of the Fraternity, faithfully and conscientiously, and will forever hold its interests sacred, and do all in my power, not inconsistent with my duties as a man and patriot, to maintain and promote the same. If I knowingly use deceit in this, my obligation, may I be cast out of the Fraternity, and from the company of all good men, even as I now shall cast the stone I hold in my right hand.

FRATERNAL DEGREE.

PART I.

(The hall should be prepared as during meetings. The saw, saw-buck, stick of wood, camp goat, ladle and quicksilver, the branding iron and the false wine or beer glasses should all be in readiness, but out of sight of candidate. The Consul remains robed as Venerable Father.)

(Escort and candidate wear their regular clothing; advance to the door, give three raps, and Watchman repeats three raps.)

(Watchman)—(Opens door) Why would you enter here?

(Escort)—That we may receive further instructions in Woodcraft.

(Watchman)—Then advance seriously to yonder station, and receive your final obligation. . . .

. . . . . .

3d Obligation:*—(Adviser) Then take this fragile vessel in your right hand. Obey my commands, and you shall receive the Arcana of our Camp.

(Hands fragile vessel that may be easily broken to stranger, who shall take it in his right hand; place table, chair or bucket so that he can readily break it at the proper time. An egg shell, after the contents have been removed or an old lamp chimney make the best fragile vessels. Consul gives three raps.)

I, (your name), in the presence of our Venerable Consul and these witnesses, on my sacred honor as a man, promise and declare that I will not wrong or defraud the Fraternity in its treasury nor a member in his purse; that I will promptly pay all dues and death assessments, and thus do my duty to the widow, the fatherless, and the orphan; that I will not propose for membership any person whom I know to be of unsound health, of bad repute or irregular habits; that I will not reveal any of the transactions of the Camp, or the signs, ciphers, words, symbols, grip, or written work of the Fraternity to any person not lawfully entitled to the same. And that under no circumstances and conditions in which I may be placed, will I, even though threatened with dire calamity, or tempted with great reward ever reveal the passwords of this Fraternity, except to those entitled to receive the same in a regularly constituted Camp of Modern Woodmen, or when I may be acting as Venerable Consul of the Camp, Deputy Head Consul or Head Consul. May I be dashed to pieces as I now dash this fragile vessel into fragments, if I promise not the truth.

(Stranger casts vessel into receptacle provided. Which being done):

To all this I sincerely and in honor promise.

PART III.

(The Venerable Consul, after the recess of five minutes, calls the Camp to order, and says):

(Consul)—My Son, you will please take your position at the altar.

(Candidate is placed in position by Escort,)

Are you now a Woodman and ready to assume a Woodman's duties?

(Candidate)—I am.

(Consul)—My Son, you are now to be tried by a more severe test than any yet given you. You must act with fortitude and moral courage, and all will be well. You will be conducted by the Escort and these Foresters to the camp-fire, and you will obey the instructions of the Chief Forester.

(The candidate is now hoodwinked and marched around the hall with the Foresters to the camp-fire, which has been prepared while the candidate is hoodwinked. Lights are turned down in the hall and the camp-fire lighted. The saw-mill is placed in position a little way from the camp fire. The brush and stake at which the Escort is to be burned is concealed in readiness. The Foresters form a circle with the Chief, Escort and stranger in the center. The hoodwink is then taken from the stranger.)

AT THE STAKE.

(Chief Forester)—Woodman, we are now going into the forest of Brotherly Love for our daily work, and you and your friendly Escort are to remain here to watch the camp-fire and protect the same. In this forest is a band of outlaws that prey upon their fellowmen. They have long desired the secrets of Woodcraft, that they might enjoy its benefits; and to know the passwords, that they might pass unmolested through the different parts of the forest. You must always be on your guard never to divulge to them the sacred secrets of Woodcraft. Will you be true to your obligation?

(Candidate)—I will.

(Chief Forester)—We will now leave you and go to our work.

(The Foresters now form and march out, singing one verse of "The Woodman's Jubilee Song" and chorus. The Escort and stranger seat themselves by the camp-fire.)

(Escort)—Stranger, in the dark recesses of this forest, where we have pitched this Camp, the solitude is to me awe-inspiring. I dread the approach of the outlaws, who have sworn to obtain the secrets of Woodcraft, even by murder, if necessary. Hark! I hear footsteps and voices.

(With wild yells the outlaws enter the Camp, and bind the stranger and the Escort. These outlaws may be four or six, according to the size of the Camp, and if the Camp is very small, some of those who have acted as Foresters can disguise themselves and re-appear as outlaws. The outlaws should wear black masks and assume the disguise fitted to the part.)

(Chief Outlaw)—We demand the secrets of Woodcraft. Be quick, we have no time to parley.

(Escort)—We will not give them to you.

(Chief Outlaw)—Bind this man to the stake, and we will see if his spirit is stronger than his flesh.

(The Escort is bound to a stake and some brush piled around him, and the candidate is now hoodwinked.)

(Chief Outlaw)—Do you still refuse to give us the secrets of Woodcraft?

(Escort)—I do.

(Chief Outlaw)—Men, apply the torch.

(A light is then made by burning a newspaper in a tin bucket of some sort, or by red fire, and the Escort cries in a loud voice, I have lost the brazen coin! Help! Help! Or I die!)

(Chief Outlaw)—You shall die, and no one can help you.

(The Escort is now unbound from the stake and laid upon the floor and covered with a sheet. Instead of the brush formerly used around the stake, it is replaced by half burnt brush which has been prepared beforehand. The hoodwink is taken from the candidate.)

(Chief Outlaw)—Behold the funeral pyre of your dead comrade. (Pointing to the stake) There lies his dead body. (Pointing to the sheet) Now, will you give me the secrets of Woodcraft?

(Candidate)—(Makes his own answer, or, perhaps, refuses to answer)

(Chief Outlaw)—Think not you will escape so easy as with even the horrible death of your companion. We know how to torture, and we must have the secrets of Woodcraft. Men, prepare the rack.

(The candidate is again hoodwinked and bound to the carriage and the saw started in motion, and the candidate slowly approaches the saw, the hoodwink being removed.)

(Chief Outlaw)—(The Chief Forester's whistle is heard in the distance) Men, the Woodmen are coming. (Leaning over the Woodman on the saw carriage): "Give me the word, and I will release you; if you do not, I will leave you here to die this horrible death before the Foresters can return."

(If the candidate still refuses, one of them whispers to the Chief Outlaw so that he can be overheard by the candidate: "Are you sure the machine is all right?" The other whispers: "I suppose so." The outlaws then withdraw. All is perfectly still, and the carriage slowly moves the candidate closer to the revolving saw. Just as the body of the candidate is about to touch the saw the Foresters return. The saw is stopped in its motion, and the candidate unbound and released.)

(Chief Forester)—You have proven a worthy Neighbor, and that you would give your life rather than betray the secrets of Woodcraft.—Lodge Lamp.

A dispatch from Chattanooga, Tenn., says that Jan. 1 the corner-stone of the city auditorium was laid by the Freemasons; Priest Tobin [Romanist] made the prayer, and the Romanist societies united with the Masons in the exercises.

The American, another patriotic paper, alluding to this event says:

All the Catholic organizations of the city joined with Masonic and other societies in the public demonstration.

Nothing will sooner bring forth a prompt, often and angry denial, than to make the assertion to any member of the so called "patriotic orders" that Masonry and Romanism are really close kin, and that, however bitter their quarrel may seem to be, it is only a family quarrel that will be patched up as soon as the ruling powers on each side see that they can gain more by coalescing than by keeping at swords' points.

There has been as yet no report that Priest Tobin or the members of these Romanist societies are to be disciplined by the church. Rome knows when to wink at a transgression of her laws, and when to turn the screws on the hapless transgressor with crushing force. Recent events show that Jesuitism and the Romish policy are two names for the same thing, and this fact should be born in mind as explaining the gross contradictions which so often occur between Rome's avowed principles and her actual practice, as in this Chattanooga incident. Jesuitism can and will set aside the laws of the church as unscrupulously as the laws of God when there is any important end to be gained.

AT THE SAW-MILL.

JESUITRY DOMINATES THE VATICAN.

OBJECT LESSON FOR PATRIOTIC AMERICANS.

BY ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

A recent number of the American Citizen, published in Boston, contains the following remarkable statement:

The country has seen within the last ten years a great uprising in many of our cities and towns against the political rule of Rome. Masonry has taken advantage of this patriotic movement, and under the various names of American Protective Association, United Order of American Mechanics, Knights of Malta, and others far too numerous to mention, she has roped in multitudes of honest Americans, who train in the dark under unknown leaders and have been actually made to believe in their ignorance and simple credulity that Masonry is synonymous with the most aggressive Protestantism, and that to oppose it would be to tear down the very bulwarks of American liberty.

The Chattanooga incident, to an intelligent observer, is a very significant sign of the times—a sign of the secret understanding existing between these two gigantic powers of darkness.

Romanism, as we all know, is a dominant force in our municipal politics. She and her henchman, rum, control our great cities. Yet her usurped dominion is subject to popular upheavals like what occurred in this city in 1888, or more recently in New York under Dr. Parkhurst and Theodore Roosevelt. She can never be quite sure, even when she seems to have her hand on every part of the city government, that something will not happen to smash the "machine." But she sees another power, as wily and serpent-like as herself, that is striving after the same thing, and like her making tools (and fools) of the baser sort of the people. "Why not use this power?" said the Jesuit of the seventeenth century, when he dreamed of Romanizing England. "Why not utilize such a potent force as Masonry, harness it to our chariot wheels and make it do our bidding?" as he, the Jesuit, three centuries later, when he dreams of Romanizing America. America, with the star of empire on her brow! America, crowned heiress of the age!

> In her left hand is the oak tree,
> In her right hand is the olive,
> And she walks toward the sunset,
> And her couch is in the sunrise.

Why not? What is to hinder?

"Nonsense!" comes the answer in a perfect chorus from multitudes of good patriotic Americans who think they know all about it. "Don't you know that Masonry is under the express ban of the church? Rome will never give the lie to papal infallibility by thus going back on her own laws."

But wait a moment. You are leaving out of your reckoning the most potent factor of all. Let me repeat again: Jesuitism is to-day the dominating force at the Vatican, and the General of the order is the Pope's real superior. The Nun of Kenmare has lately added to her "Story of my Life," "The Black Pope, a History of the Jesuits." In this volume Miss Cusack, who has perhaps as deep a knowledge of her subject as any person living, shows most conclusively that while the General of the Jesuits may pose before the world as the humble servant of his Holiness, he can at any time countermand his orders, if, as a clause in the Jesuit constitution reads, "he shall deem it necessary for the honor of God."

Now the infallible Pope Leo XIII. may ban the Masons as vigorously as he chooses. If his actual superior, the Black Pope, "deems it necessary for honor of God" that he should make use of the order to help him in his scheme of conquering America, the wearer of the triple tiara must submit. And if he prove insubordinate let him profit by the fate of another Pope Leo, who ventured to oppose the Jesuits and died in the most dreadful and lingering agony from slow poison secretly administered to him in a basket of peaches.

The same rule, according to Miss Cusack, holds good with a Roman Catholic bishop. He is practically the pope of his diocese, but, like his superior who sits in the Vatican, he is in reality under the control of the Jesuits, though they may be too politic if he is a man of very independent spirit to let him feel his fetters.

It is Jesuitry not Rome—except as the two may be considered synonymous—that will conclude the secret treaty with Masonry, and add her influence to that of the other secret orders in fostering the growing love for titles and military display, and the alarming tendency towards centralization of power in the hands of a few;—the first step towards the limited monarchy which a Catholic priest told his congregation last fall was the kind of government America ought to have. Whatever Leo XIII. may seem to do, it is the Black Pope who will actually let down the bars—he who will flatter the secret orders with visions of power and glory while he leads them by the nose.

This Chattanooga episode ought to be an object lesson to all patriotic Protestant Americans. Nurse the plague to escape the small-pox; pet the tiger to avoid the fangs of the wolf, but don't think by fostering Masonry, and that spawn of secret societies of which she is the mother, to escape the clutches of the Romish Jesuit.

KANSAS BORDER RUFFIAN CONFLICT.

> Then worthy of the devil came
> The base champion Hamilton;
> He stained with blood the Kansas sod,
> And led a fierce though fawning horde,
> The human blood-hounds of the earth.
> Tyrants, could not experience teach
> That man has rights beyond your reach?

As soon as Montgomery returned from the custody of the United States troops, he discovered a deep-laid plot to murder the Free State settlers on a larger scale. Indeed his capture was a preliminary to the easier accomplishment of the scheme. The extent of the plot he could not ascertain; but learned that it was to commence in that region somewhere, and by Hamilton and Brockett. The waning fortunes of the Pro-slavery cause in Kansas now so exasperated Hamilton that he was heard to declare, that if slaveholders could not live in Kansas and hold their slaves, neither should Abolitionists live in it.

So Montgomery determined to try and capture him lest he should attempt the wholesale slaughter of Free State men. Accordingly he took his force and surprised Hamilton by surrounding his private fort near Ft. Scott. But he found it so strong that he could accomplish nothing with ordinary arms, and had to send to Lawrence after a cannon, which caused considerable delay. While thus delayed, Hamilton's friends sent after United States troops as usual, and at their approach, before even the cannon had arrived, Montgomery had to disband and flee to parts unknown.

On leaving he disclosed the rumors of the plot to the sheriff, who promised to protect the Free State settlers in such an event. As soon as Montgomery and his men were safely away, Hamilton allowed the United States troops to depart, and taking advantage of the absence of both, he sallied forth with his own trusted band of thirty men, and started out through the settlement. It was early in May, 1858, and the settlers were busy planting their crops or passing along the roads toward the towns on business. About 8 o'clock on this lovely May morning, Hamilton's force made their appearance near Trading Post, not far from the Missouri line, and commenced to capture the settlers.

A dozen or more were soon captured, and they passed quickly on. Meeting Elder B. L. Reed, against whom they had a particular grudge, they took him to custody. Seeing a team approaching on the road toward Kansas City they halted off the road a little, and when it came up called the driver to them, who was not allowed to go back to his team. He was after goods and had considerable Free State money, as well as a good team for them to take possession of.

Passing on, Hamilton took a detachment and leaving the main body went to the home of Eli Snyder to capture him. Snyder was in his blacksmith shop, and at their approach knew the gang and their hatred of him, and at short range opened fire on them with such precision and rapidity, that very soon they were compelled to retire with several wounded. After dressing their wounds they joined the main force again and all passed on.

Arriving at an out-of-the-way place at the head of the gulch they halted, and after an examination of the prisoners all were released but ten.

These were taken down into the gulch while the others were watched to a safe distance. The ten who were retained were placed in a line in front of Hamilton and his men. One of them said, "Gentlemen, if you are going to shoot us, take good aim."

When all was ready Hamilton deliberately gave the order, "Make ready, take aim;" but before the order "fire" could be uttered, Brockett abruptly wheeled his horse away, at which Hamilton exclaimed, "Brockett, why in the h—— don't you stay in line!" Brockett swore he wouldn't have anything to do with such a d—— piece of business. If it was in a fight he would fire. Hamilton then fired with his men and all dropped but Elder Reed, who in his bewilderment at not being hit turned half way round to look at his fallen comrades. Hamilton fired again and Reed fell.

After waiting a few minutes two men were ordered to go down and shoot any who showed signs of life. Several shots were fired into the bodies of writhing victims, money and valuables taken off the bodies, and the tragedy was over. The murderers now hastened over into Missouri lest they should be captured and meet their deserts, to await developments.

After their evident departure and all was still, except the death-gurgle of some and the groans of others who had reached the re-action following an unconscious state, one of them opened his eyes and looked each way. Then he raised his head and looked and listened, then arose. It was Hall who had not been hit but, unlike Elder Reed, had fallen with the others and feigned dead, thus saving his life. It was not long till their neighbors and relations were on the spot, some weeping and others vowing vengeance. Five, Pat Ross, J. F. Campbell, Wm. Colpetzer, Wm. Stillwell and M. Robinson, were found to be dead. Four, Wm. and Asa Hairgrove, Asa Snyder and Elder Reed eventually recovered, and lived as well as Hall to tell of the terrible tragedy.

History says, "It has been a mystery why any of those captured were released." "From the best information obtainable, it is believed that some were released because Pro-slavery, some because of their youth and others because they gave the Masonic sign of distress, which all good Masons must recognize." "It is also believed that Brockett refused to fire upon recognition of the same sign made by Mr. Stillwell, who was a Mason."

The body of Stillwell was taken to Mound City, Kansas, for burial. The bodies of the other three were buried near the scene of the tragedy. The place of the massacre is three-fourths mile north of Haystack Mound, Kansas, and one mile west of Spy Mound, Mo. A large pile of stones marks the place of burial.

Several hundred men went in pursuit of Hamilton and his band over into Missouri, but without success. A strong guard was kept along the border of Kansas till autumn. Two of the murderers were subsequently captured, one of whom was hanged, but the other escaped. After the guard was withdrawn that fall, another raid from Missouri into Kansas was planned, doubtless by the same leaders, and in October they renewed their raids from the Missouri border into Kansas.

THE PACIFIC COAST CONVENTION.

INSPIRING ADDRESSES, LARGE ATTENDANCE, BEST CONVENTION YET HELD ON THE COAST.
EXCELLENT REPORT BY REV.
P. B. WILLIAMS.

The Pacific Coast Association opposed to secret societies met in Ranke's Hall, Seattle, Washington, Jan. 18th to hold its sixth convention, Rev. W. M. Howie, the president of the Association, presided through all the deliberations. The president led in prayer. Rev. M. L. Larson delivered the address of welcome, which was responded to by the field agent.

Rev. P. B. Williams read letters to the convention from Rev. Edwin H. Stayt, of Snohomish, Wash., Rev. N. R. Johnston, Oakland, Cal., and Bishop Dillon, D. D., of Dayton, O. After which he held the audience for two hours, showing clearly the interference of the secret lodge system with the family, the church and the government. There were at least three hundred present at the first meeting. The chair appointed committees on enrollment, nominations and resolutions.

TUESDAY MORNING SESSION.

Rev. P. B. Williams led in prayer. Rev. P. J. McDonald delivered an excellent address on the subject, "The Benevolence of Secret Societies." The speaker clearly defined true benevolence, and then showed how the pretended benevolence of lodges fell short. The field agent submitted his report. [See report elsewhere in this paper.] Rev. Alexander Beers spoke on "The Scriptures and secret societies." Bro. Beers is a fine speaker, and always impresses the hearer with the idea that he knows what he is talking about.

"The Citizen and Secret Societies," was ably handled by Rev. C. E. McReynolds, district elder of the Free Methodist church. This address was requested by the convention for publication in the Post Intelligencer, of Seattle, and Christian Cynosure, of Chicago.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

Rev. August Ernst led in prayer. Rev. W. M. Howie read an able paper on "The Religion of the Lodge and the Religion of the Church." It will suffice to say the subject was safe in the hands of Bro. Howie. He rightly asserted that "no man can be a true Christian and a true Mason or Odd-fellow at the same time. He must be untrue to one or the other system." This the speaker empasized again and again; but as the address is to appear in the Cynosure, I will not comment further.

Rev. Kirkpatrick, of Tacoma, being absent, Rev. M. H. Nichols took up the "Best Method of Opposing Secret Societies." The speaker said in part, "The best way to oppose the lodge is to know the lodge. This we have a divine right to do." He quoted from Ezekiel, 8th chapter, in support of his position. "And then we have a political right to know them, according to their own practices. He instanced the A. P. A.'s claim the right to know the inner workings of the Jesuits. Then others have the same right to know the A. P. A.s and other similar orders." The address was a masterly arraignment of the orders, and left the impression that Bro. Nichols knew something about secret societies.

Dr. Hayes, of Olympia, failing to be present, Rev. Jas. I. Frazer took up and very ably handled "The Lodge a Hindrance to the Spread of Christianity." The address was very able. Your agent wishes that Bro. Frazer and other brethren who spoke orally during the convention might when convenient present their thoughts to the readers of the Cynosure.

The testimony of those who have left the lodges was opened by Rev. Johnson, of Mt. Carmel Mission on Third Ave., who mentioned three lodges that he had to forsake in order to be true to Jesus. Bro. Campbell spoke of renouncing Odd-fellowship, and added, "As Bro. Williams spoke about Odd-fellowship last night, I could testify that he knew what he was talking about."

Quite a number of lodge people and the elite of the city were present to hear these testimonies. The field agent took occasion to relate an incident which occurred at Zanesville, Indiana, in 1878, when Bro. Ronayne initiated a candidate in the Entered Apprentice Degree. Mr. F. M. Wilson arose and said, "Ladies and gentlemen, you know that when Bro. Levington, of Detroit, Mich., was here one year ago last winter exposing Freemasonry, I, with the rest of the Zanesville Masons, said it is all a lie; but it was us who lied, and I cannot lie in defense of Masonry any longer. God has pardoned and saved me since then, and I tell you here and now, that Bro. Ronayne has initiated his candidate to-night precisely as I was initiated up in the Zanesville Masonic lodge."

He took his place the next night in the open lodge, helped pass the candidate to the Fellow Craft's degree, and the next night helped to raise him to the sublime degree of Master Mason. Then we said, "If you people of Seattle or the State of Washington want any further proof that Masonry has been revealed, you can have it by finding a Mason who will go before a Notary Public and make affidavit that Ronayne has not revealed Blue lodge Masonry, and I will enter suit at once to prosecute him for perjury. Or I will go before the Notary and affirm that he has revealed it, then I challenge the Masons to prosecute me for perjury. They can take either horn of the dilemma, but they can't cast sand and dust in the eyes of honest men and women longer and make them believe there is no truth in these expositions of Freemasonry.

A business session was next held, at which the following items of business were attended to: Rev. P. B. Williams was granted the privilege of attending the General Convention at Chicago next May, the same as last year. The convention unanimously agreed that the agent may change headquarters from Portland, Ore., to Los Angeles, Cal., on account of the failing health of his wife.

The following officers were elected: President, Rev. H. F. Wallace, D. D., Portland, Ore.; Vice President, Rev. N. C. Mower, Portland, Ore.; Secretary, Rev. P. B. Williams, Los Angeles, Cal.; Treasurer, Rev. John Skans, Portland, Ore. At this juncture an organization was effected to be known as the Washington State Association opposed to secret societies, auxiliary to the National Christian Association. The following officers were elected: President, Rev. W. M. Howie, Seattle, Wash.; Vice President, Prof. Clark W. Shay, Ross, Wash.; Secretary, Rev. P. J. McDonald, Seattle, Wash.; Treasurer, Rev. M. L. Larson, Seattle, Wash.; Rev. P. B. Williams, Los Angeles, Cal., field agent.

EVENING SESSION.

Rev. E. L. Smith led in prayer. Rev. P. B. Williams read the report on "Resolutions," which was adopted by a hearty vote. The secretary read letters from Misses Julia and Delia Whiting, Tacoma, Wash., Rev. David Morrow, Oakland, Cal., S. M. Neff, Conconully, Wash., Rev. Walter Reynolds, Salem, Ore., Prof. H. F. Kletzing, Naperville, Ill., and a very interesting letter from a Liberalist of Seattle, extending his sympathy and criticising the "plug-hatted, bejewelled" of the city, who were standing aloof from the convention till the cause should become popular.

About four hundred were present at this closing session. The closing address was by the field agent, after which he very earnestly thanked the audience for their attendance and attention given to the discussions; to the pastors and people who gave their influence to the cause and stood by him so nobly; and to the reporters for their very fair manner in which they reported the addresses and work of the convention.

Thus closed by far the best convention held on this coast. The Post Intelligencer next morning gave three and more columns to our work, also placing it prominently on all the bulletins sent out everywhere. The next day we bid adieu to friends in Seattle, and returned to Portland for a few days.

CELIBACY AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

The New York Press in a recent editorial says that historians have attributed the decline and fall of the Roman Empire to the increase of celibacy among the people, and adds that there cannot be much doubt that it is perilous to the morals of individuals, and tends to undermine rapidly the stability of a State.

In recent times France, whose population has long been nearly stationary, has noted the evil and proposed emoluments or rebates to the parents of large families, but now as this paper states, the Argentine Republic in South America has turned its attention to the same subject. A bill has been introduced by which a tax is to be imposed on unmarried men, and the benefit is to accrue to parents of large families. Other provisions are added, but the above indicates the purport and intent of the bill.

This is one of the evils which is aided, abetted or promoted by secret societies as explained in the enlarged edition of "My Experiences with Secret Societies," where their operation and effect in both ancient and modern times are fully described and urged upon the attention of the public. A READER.

—Several prominent society persons of Vineland, N. J., have received threatening letters recently signed by "White Caps." None of the threats have been fulfilled, but the mother of a girl who received a letter made a complaint to the postoffice authorities and they will make an investigation.

CORRESPONDENCE.

LETTER TO THE SEATTLE CONVENTION.

FROM PROF. A. F. KLETZING.

NAPERVILLE, Ill., Jan. 15, 1897.

DEAR BRO. WILLIAMS:—Greetings to you, and all assembled in the Washington Convention:

I trust that your meeting will result in greatly strengthening the anti-secrecy work on the Coast. If we are to win in this contest against the powers of darkness, the ministry must be enlightened, strengthened and ready to lead. I am convinced that there are many ministers in the different churches who are not in sympathy with the lodge, but, for the sake of not becoming unpopular, they are afraid to say anything against it.

When the ministry of our land rises above coveting "popular applause" and is ready to stand for convictions at any cost, then we shall see a great advance in all lines of reform, including the anti-secrecy cause. May heaven's blessing be upon you, and may your meeting result in establishing and girding many. God is in this work; and he who is fully in God's hands will be ready to be used in this greatly-needed reform.

Yours in Him, A. F. KLETZING.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS

TO GENERAL SECRETARY PHILLIPS.

EVANGELIST LAWRENCE WRIGHT, WHAT CHEER, IA., JAN. 11, 1897.—I have been getting in some good work here while preaching the Gospel. I have saved a number from the vile, contemptible humbuggery of secret societies.

A. GRAY, CLARKSBURG, PA., JAN. 22, 1897.—I don't see that there is any prospect of getting the lodge system put down, yet I suppose we should still testify against it as a very wicked system, one that no Christian ought to give any countenance to. [It is true that the saloon, brothel and secret lodge seem to flourish like all sin in general, but be not discouraged, keep pegging away. "The outlook is good, but the uplook is better." God is looking after results; "be ye faithful unto death." There is a crown awaiting such.—ED.]

A. KNOX, WASHINGTON, IA., JAN. 1, 1897.—I am pleased with the Cynosure, and do not wish to miss its weekly visits. I suppose that its position is not popular. I refer to its testimony on secret societies, but it is the truth, and truth should make us free.

JOHN HOLEMAN, HUMBOLDT, NEB., JAN. 11, 1897.—I take it for the good of the cause, which I believe is the Lord's work, and my duty to support for his sake. Praying that this work may lead many deluded souls into the light and warn others to steer clear of the lodge evil.

———— ————, NEWARK, N. J., JAN. 8, 1897.—Strong pressure is being exerted to induce me to join the Masonic order, but it is written, "Ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table and the table of devils," therefore, as one who seeks "to show forth the praises of Him who hath called me out of darkness into his marvelous light," I decline. Your book, "Freemasonry Illustrated," has lent me material aid in arriving at this decision.

R. M. STEVENSON, SILOAM SPRINGS, ARK, JAN. 2, 1897.—I would not like to be without the Cynosure, I have read it for so long; and while there are many very important reforms, I consider the anti-secret reform surmounts them all. I find here, to my surprise, once in a while an Anti-mason even among the ministry, but as a rule their tongues are bridled. I make use of the Cynosure and some other anti-secret literature once in a while in a missionary way.

———— ————, READING, PA., DEC. 30, 1896.—Being a member of the Independent Order of Odd-fellow's Encampment and Patriarchs Militant, etc., and desiring to advance myself in the secret work and elevate myself, and knowing that you have the revised works for sale, you will please send me the "Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated." [The blessed thing about these expositions, published by Ezra A. Cook, is that each book contains an antidote to the satanic lodge principles, and I have known an Odd-fellow like the above to buy a book of the National Christian Association that he might be a brighter Odd-fellow, but the truth in the book as to its principles made him sick of Odd-fellowship when he came to read it.—ED]

INTEREST IN THE ARBITRATION TREATY.

WASHINGTON, D. C., JAN. 27, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—It is not probable that the proportion of men who had obtained eminence in some calling was ever greater at any mass meeting held in Washington, or elsewhere, for any purpose, than at the meeting of friends of the arbitration treaty held here this week for the purpose of "publicly attesting their approbation of the great principle of arbitration embodied in said treaty."

Among the signers of the call for the meeting were an ex-Secretary and ex-assistant Secretary of State, the Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, a Commissioner and an ex-Commissioner of the District of Columbia, two bishops, ministers, both Protestant and Catholic; the president of a great university, and editors, lawyers, bankers and business men. The attendance was made up largely of the same class of men, and notwithstanding the unusually cold weather, was large. Among the speakers at the meeting were the following gentlemen: Hon. John W. Foster, Hon. Gardiner G. Hubbard, Hon. John B. Henderson, Mr. Justice Brewer, Dr. Whitman, president of Columbian University, and Mr. Thomas Nelson Page, the well-known author.

Among the personal letters written in behalf of prompt ratification of the treaty, to Senator Sherman and other members of the committee on foreign relations, is one from Rev. Josiah Strong, secretary of the arbitration committee, calling attention to the character of the 600 men who have by letter endorsed that committee, among whom are seventy-six judges, fifty-five of whom sit on Supreme Courts. Mr. Strong says in his letter to Senator Sherman: "You may not regard the instrument as ideal. If it were to be binding for all time, it might be well to stand out for an ideal treaty, but is it not better to accept something short of an ideal for five years rather than abandon the principle involved?"

Among other prominent men who have written personal letters in behalf of the treaty are Dr. Lyman Abbott, Edward Everett Hale, Robert Treat Paine, Bishop Leonard, Hon. Franklin MacVeagh, ex-Senator Farwell, Dr. Washington Gladden and the Justices of the Supreme Court of Connecticut. In addition to the large number of organizations which have adopted resolutions in favor of the treaty, the National Board of Trade, which held its annual meeting in Washington this week, adopted a resolution reciting that the organization regarded the pending treaty of arbitration as unsurpassed in importance by any international negotiation in the history of civilization, and, which if consummated, not only would bring peace with her richest harvest to bless this land, but would extend its benign influence to all nations. All this, and more, for the treaty, and less than half a dozen letters against it, not one of them from a man of any standing except as an agitator. Yet the fate of the treaty has daily grown more doubtful ever since it has become complicated with the Nicaragua canal and the Monroe doctrine. C. A. S.

STEALING A MARCH ON BRO. STODDARD.

NEW CONCORD, Ohio, Jan. 29, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Rev. J. P. Stoddard was a diligent worker in the anti-secret cause at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893. I visited him at his stand six times and always found him busy. When I first called to see him, he did not recognize me, although we had previously met several times and I heard him give some of his lectures. When he was at leisure I approached him and said somewhat abruptly, and in a tone calculated to irritate him:

"You cannot make an anti-secret man out of me."

He then commenced to talk to me kindly and tenderly, and in a manner calculated to convince me. But I soon stopped him, telling him that I was already convinced and had always been an anti-secret man, and that I had taken the Cynosure ever since it was first published. I told him when I had met him, where I lived, etc.

He then remembered me and invited me to take a seat in his booth, which invitation I gladly accepted, for I was tired and I wanted to see his method of work. I had but little conversation with him, for he was almost constantly talking and giving tracts to persons passing, which I was delighted to see. He drew the attention of many of the people passing, and the seed sown must have produced largely. He was the man for the place. God has raised up special men to do special work. I think he is well calculated to do reform work. SAMUEL HARPER, SR

A POLITICIAN CONCERNED ABOUT THE WEATHER.

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 22, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—When we were returning to Portland from the Seattle Convention a certain doctor from Kalama boarded the train from Olympia. He soon gave us to understand that he had been duly elected to the legislature by the Republicans, but was "counted out," as he put it, by Populists, and of course he had nothing good but all evil to say about the Populists. As his address was directed to myself and wife, I felt free to talk, and so at a venture I said:

"Stranger, we have worse institutions in this country than the People's party."

He asked, "What are they?"

I answered, "One is an association in which the candidate swears to have his "throat cut across from ear to ear, his tongue torn out by the roots," and his "heart plucked out," and his "body severed in twain," etc. The way he colored up I knew I was after him lively.

He said, "What church do you represent?"

I said, "I am a member of the United Brethren in Christ."

He next related his experience with Bishop Dillon when he lectured in Kalama.

"I said, "Yes, I have heard of you through our bishop." We had it "hip and thigh" from there to Kalama. Very frequently wife, when she is along, calls me down when in private discussions on the train, but that night she kept nudging me up. She says the doctor had occasion very often to look after the weather outside. I think he wished, before we were half way to Kalama, that he had never run for Representative of his county. We learned that he is a 33-degree Mason, a member of twelve other orders, a member of a popular church, does not believe there is a hell or a heaven only as a man makes it himself. I suggested that his heaven must be quite a mixture, if he had adopted all the principles of the thirteen secret orders he claimed a brotherhood with.

When the trainmen called Kalama he seemed glad. A number of lady passengers came to Mrs. Williams, while I was out seeing the doctor off, and said, "I tell you your husband had that doctor in some of the tightest places I ever saw a man. Didn't he squirm hard to get out?" I pray that he may let the Holy Spirit open his blinded eyes. P. B. WILLIAMS.

FROM AN EXPERIENCED CAMPAIGNER.

HOW TO PUSH THE N. C. A. WORK.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 25, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Your able paper and the National Christian Association being un-sectarian non-denominational surely represents more fully the most important crusade of the century. The secret lodge question to-day overshadows all others. And the time has come that men and women of every creed should rally around the anti-lodge standard, and stand in solid rank against the dangerous un-American system. There is power in co-operation. There is strength in union of forces.

Every five to ten miles through the West are squads of patriots who have not bowed the knee to this secret empire, and are only waiting the opportunity to assist all in their power to overthrow this vast system of paganism and imperialism that is destroying the piety and patriotism of the nation. The United Presbyterians, Covenanters, Quakers, Advents, German and Swedish Lutherans, Evangelicals, Wesleyan Methodist, Free Methodist, Mennonites, Dunkers, Radical United Brethren, Church of God and other true blue anti-secret forces dot the prairies of the West, while hundreds and thousands in the Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist Episcopal deplore the presence and baneful influence of oath-bound lodgery—its anti-Christian and anti-republican character.

Then there are non-professors of religion in every community, who, as patriots, are actively opposed to those oath-bound rings, cliques, clans and cabals. A reconnoiter would find these groups of families preparatory to systematic distribution of literature, open doors for lectures, bring them into touch and save cost of travel. It would only be a breakfast walk from one point to another. Work all around the towns, indoctrinate and enlighten the country people and then hold general meetings, bringing local speakers from as many different denominations and parties as possible. This would take time, but when once under way, friends at every point would be glad to arrange for meetings entertain lecturers, distribute literature and contribute towards the furtherance of the greatest crusade of the age.

By all joining hands and doing in their several localities the work of agitation, education and organization would go forward. Every anti-secretist would become a possible member of some of these anti-secret denominations, and Christianity would come out of this great struggle fair as the moon, clear as the sun and terrible as an army with banners.

The older people in the anti-secret ranks were educated by the great Morgan wave that swept the country, but their sons are being drawn into lodge paganism and despotism. Nothing but a general movement can save church and state from idolatry and monarchy. A good starter is to read the Cynosure and pass it on to some other patriot and request him to keep it going

M. N. BUTLER.

HE RENOUNCES THE KNIGHTS.

FORT SMITH. Ark., Dec. 28, 1896.

W. B. Denton, Esq , Winfield, Kan.

DEAR SIR AND BRO:—Some kind friend sent me a November '96 number of the Lodge Lamp containing an article written by you.

I have read it carefully, thoughtfully and prayerfully; and for the first time have taken the pains to figure the cost of a $3,000 policy in the "Knights and Ladies of Security." I had supposed that life insurance was an expensive luxury. But I find by figuring, that if I live to be eighty years of age, which is not probable, I will have paid, in assessments, only about $750 for a certificate of $3,000.

As a result of your article and my figuring, I am fully persuaded that there is something wrong in these mutual fraternal associations, and that no institution can long exist and pay $3 000 for $750; and it is certain that some one at some time must suffer the consequences. I might add that I sever my connection with the "Knights and Ladies of Security," and stand on my convictions hereafter. Yours truly.

W. W. LOCKWOOD.

HAVING FUN WITH THE BOYS.

Dec. 23, 1896.

DEAR FRIEND:—I have read your article on fraternal insurance with much interest, and re-read it to a small company of "fraternal" people gathered in the district clerk's office this morning.

The entire party were more or less insured in various fraternal societies; and, well, they ripped you up the back from stem to gudgeon. One man, who carried about $10,000 in various lodge organizations, said he would bank his judgment with $50 that you are in the employ of Old Line companies and that the Lodge Lamp got so much per line for publishing your article from these companies. Another interrupted my reading at various points to inject, "Well, that fellow is the biggest liar I have heard from since the election." Taking the sentiment expressed by this small company of men, I should judge that your article will not be received very kindly in those lodge circles where the chief purpose of the order is to put $200 in the pot and draw out $2,000.

But as to my own views, I think I shall have to agree with you in about all that you say. I am a "sinner" though; that is to say, I carry $3,000 in the Knights of Pythias and $1,000 in the Odd-fellows, but I am calculating on beating the game; that is, that I may die before these insurance institutions "bust up." My judgment is that in ten years, and perhaps less, fraternal insurance will be at a great discount, if not a thing of the past. The A. O. U. W. order, the progenitor of fraternal insurance, has reached its zenith even in Kansas, where it had a wonderful growth and success. When it breaks in this State, as it has been doing in several others, and will in this, it will knock the bottom out of this kind of insurance.

As you very forcibly demonstrate, there are no correct business principles involved in this line of insurance, and institutions that are not founded on correct principles cannot long stand.

As to the moral features of your objections to fraternal insurance, I do not care to discuss, though I do not disagree with you. I should probably have to purge myself of that $4 000 insurance to fully join you in that line of argument, and that I am not prepared to do just yet. I think I shall send your article to my lodge some evening.

[The above letter is from a prominent politician in his city, and his name is withheld, since the letter was a private one.—ED]

HAPPIER WITHOUT THE MONEY.

AN AFFIDAVIT.

WINFIELD, Kan., Jan. 12, 1897.

Six years ago last August I lost my husband, A. H. Stevens, by death. He was a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and of the Modern Woodmen, and the sum of $4,000 was given to us.

This money has been a source of great worry and vexation to me; though I was left poor, with four small children, I am sure I would have been much happier without it. I have always felt that it did not belong to me, and it has robbed me of a comforting Christian experience.

Had I the ability I would like to spend the remainder of my life lecturing against life insurance. MRS. PRISCILLA STEVENS

OUR WEEKLY SERMON.

BY REV. J. S. T. MILLIGAN.

That ye be not soon shaken in mind or be troubled neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand. 2 Thes. 2:2.

There are two very different views of the second coming of Christ. One is, that he may come now at any moment suddenly, and that the predicted thousand years reign of righteousness upon the earth will be after his personal coming. The other view is that the millennial reign of righteousness will precede Christ's second comming. Those who hold the first view are called Pre Millenarians; and those who hold the second, Post Millenarians. As our activity in the anti-secret reform and any other reform is deeply affected by our view of this momentous subject, let us see if we cannot reach more definite conclusions regarding it. Let us first note the points of difference between tho Pre-Millenarian and Post-Millenarian views.

1. They differ as to the means to be used in saving souls. The latter believe that Bible reading and preaching, the Lord's Supper, baptism and prayer are suitable and God-ordained means of grace, and when accompanied by the Holy Spirit are effectual for the salvation of souls. The former claim that these means will fail, and that the visible, personal coming, word and work of Christ must at last be added to make them fully and finally effective.

2. They differ as to the efficient agencies. The latter claim that the church and ministry and Holy Spirit are adequate to the result desired. The former believe the church and ministry will become apostate and the work of the Holy Spirit through them will fail, and that the personal coming and work of Christ will alone succeed.

3. They differ as to the time and nature of the resurrections. The former believe that when Christ comes to rule in person on earth, there will be a physical resurrection of dead saints to live and reign on earth with Christ in their glorified bodies. The latter believe in a spiritual resurrection with Christ in the conversion of all true believers, and to a general spiritual resurrection of the spirit and power of all good and faithful men at the beginning of the millennium called the first resurrection. They believe the general physical resurrection of the just and unjust will not occur until after the millennium.

4. They differ as to how the millennium kingdom will be administered. The former believe in an administration generally undefined but corresponding to the glorious character of Christ and his saints. The latter hold that the authority of Christ expressed in the Bible will be generally accepted by individuals and nations on earth, and that God-fearing, Christ-loving men will be in authority, and that the Holy Spirit's effectual working will be generally enjoyed.

5. They differ as to the general results. The former hold that the companionship of Christ and the glorified character of the bodies of the saints will make an ineffable heaven of earth, for at least a thousand years. The latter believe that the curse will be largely removed from earth. The world's productiveness, healthfulness, knowledge, especially spiritual knowledge, and unity of the churches will be greatly increased. Nations will be governed on Christian principles; war will cease; men will generally be converted; the Jews restored to their own land and will be a mighty agency of spiritual blessing to the world. But at last Satan will be loosed and will gather the hosts of Gog and Magog to a final assault upon the church; but he will be destroyed by the second coming of Christ personally to the judgment of the world. In another sermon I will show the points of agreement between these two views, which view I accept, and my reasons.

ABOUT CARVING.

How to Do It Well—By an Expert In the Art.

First, as to the position of the carver, he should not stand, but should have his chair high enough so that he can work comfortably seated.

The platter, which must be sufficiently capacious to hold the entire joint, or bird, when carved, should be placed near enough to prevent a moving of the dish or an awkwardness in his movements. And of all things no string or skewer should be left in the meat when it is brought to the table. Neglect of this particular may cause no end of annoyance.

Large birds, such as geese and turkeys, should have their heads placed always to the left. Smaller birds, like partridges and grouse, which are usually placed across the platter, should have their heads on the farther side. A saddle of mutton should be placed with the tail end to the left of the carver; a haunch of venison or mutton with the loin or backbone nearest the carver; a leg of mutton or veal with the thickest part toward the back of the platter; a shoulder of mutton or veal with the thickest part up, and a rib roast or a sirloin roast with the backbone at the right. In a sirloin beefsteak, the tenderloin should be next the carver. A fillet of beef should have the thickest end at the right, but a calf's head must be placed with the face to the right. A roast pig's head should be placed to the left and the thickest side of a roast ham on the farther side of the platter.

Now, as to the actual carving. Suppose it is a leg of mutton or lamb. Put the fork in the top, turn it toward you and cut slices through to the bone; slip the knife under and cut them away. The best way to learn to carve a fowl is to study it in an uncooked state. When one finds a joint and cuts the gristle, the leg or wing is free. In carving roast chicken the leg and wing are first removed from one side and then from the other. Next the breast is carved on each side, and then the wishbone comes off. Separate the collar bones and shoulder blades, the breastbone from the back, then the back from the body, and then the side bones.

How to Dye Straw Black.

Take about half a pound of logwood chips for each hat, and to every half pound add 4 quarts of soft water, or as much as will cover the hats. Boil the hats in this for half an hour without bruising the straw. Then remove them; add more water and a bit of copperas about the size of a bean for each hat. When quite dissolved, return the hats and simmer for 20 minutes. Lift while simmering, to get the air, then remove entirely. Rinse well in plenty of cold water and hang out in the shade to dry. When ready, stiffen the hats by brushing over with light glue, and when dry block as usual.

How to Make Your Own Buttermilk.

The milk should be permitted to sour and partially skimmed so as to allow enough cream to render it rich. It can be taken from the icebox, provided you wish it cold, and simply beaten a few moments with an egg beater—one that turns with a handle is preferable—and you have as fine buttermilk as can be made under any process. There are so many invalids who crave it, and yet it is often an impossibility to get it pure and rich. It is usually diluted with water and often there are so many lumps of butter floating through it that it is not very inviting, but by this mode any one who can get any amount of milk, no matter how small, can manufacture in a few moments a drink fit for the gods. Try it and see how quickly this delightful drink can be had.

How the Moon's Standing Still Would Affect the Earth.

We must imagine that the moon would always be exactly over one spot of the earth's surface. At night, therefore, that part of the earth would always be illuminated unless the position—which is most probable—would result in an eclipse, but the other portions of the earth would be in total darkness at night. The effect on navigation would be revolutionary. The phenomenon of the tides would practically cease. Consequently many tidal rivers would run low constantly and flourishing ports go to ruin. Not only so, but the distribution of the water on the earth's surface would be seriously altered. If the moon stood still, the waters on that side of the earth where the moon was stationed would rise in one huge mass, while the opposite side of the earth would have a smaller bulk. The waters, however, at the sides of the earth would practically disappear. This would undoubtedly mean that many portions of the earth now dry would be flooded and vice versa. Not only so, but the shape of the planet would—to an outside observer—change. The solid portions would remain rigid, but the general contour would appear to be egg shaped, the greater end being turned toward the moon and the point away from it.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1897.

ANOTHER MODERN WOODMAN VICTIM.

The victims of secret society initiation are becoming alarmingly numerous. Of late, public notice has been taken of an average of one a week. The latest is reported from Dubuque, Iowa, on December 13. A certain George Harris, of that city, was so seriously injured while being initiated in the Iron Wood Camp of Modern Woodmen that he had to be taken to a hospital. An operation was necessary, and it was thought that one of his arms would have to be amputated. If is evident that laws will have to be enacted, prohibiting these dangerously nonsensical initiation ceremonies.

THE MODERN WOODMEN.

This number of the Cynosure will be especially valuable to any who have friends or neighbors victimized into joining the Modern Woodmen. Let them use it freely in opening blind eyes and saving men from this dangerous delusion. The cuts represent scenes in taking the Fraternal degree, but it should be noted that the Modern Woodmen ritual in a footnote states that "the camp can, by majority vote, excuse the candidate from taking the Fraternal degree."

Many portions of the ritual and secret work composed by the founder of the order, Mr. J. C. Root, were printed. He was virtually obliged to step down and out of the position of Head Consul on account of frauds perpetrated about 1889; and when W. A. Northcott became Head Consul he naturally wanted to try his hand at revising the ritual. He has given the order a REVISED RITUAL.

The funeral services remain the same as in the old ritual.

We publish in this number portions of the revised ritual, taken from the prescribed work of the Head Camp, and which was officially published by the order of Modern Woodmen in 1894. The cuts in this paper are taken from the official ritual and picture the initiation as practiced at the present time.

A synopsis of what has been published heretofore follows, and is taken from the Official History of the

Its founder:—Mr. J. C. Root states: "That he was one of the organizers of the Iowa Legion of Honor and its first Grand Treasurer;" that "he was four years Chief Rector of the V. A. S. Fraternity;" that he is an active member of the Masonic Consistory, Royal Arch Chapter and Blue Lodge; that he was once a candidate for Grand Master of his State; that he is an Oddfellow, a member of the Knights of Pythias and of other fraternal organizations. "That in forming his ritual, Odd-fellowship suggested one idea, Masonry another, and in the treasure-house of ancient mystery—the Grand Eleusinian rites—still others." (Pages 6, 7, 10)

Its character:—Its members shall not receive any money as profits—it being a purely secret society." (Page 43.)

Its professed purpose:—The object for which this corporation is formed is for the purpose of furnishing life indemnity or pecuniary benefit to the widows, heirs or relatives of deceased members, or accident or permanent disability indemnity to members thereof. (Page 43)

Its membership:—"The fraternity should not arrogate to itself to select the Christian and reject the unbeliever. . . . . The doors then are left open to the Jew and the Gentile, the Catholic and the Protestant, the agnostic and the atheist." (Pages 13 and 14)

[In the burial service the order quotes 1 Cor. 15: 47, but omits these words,—"the second man is the Lord from heaven," indicating the author of the funeral rites to have been a Freemason.—EDITOR]

Its charity:—"If a member fails to pay his dues before the first day of the following month after he has been notified, he shall be suspended, and during such suspension his benefit certificate shall be void." (Page 81.)

BURNS HIS TEMPLAR UNIFORM.

About five years ago at a revival in Guthrie Center, Iowa, Mr. Wm. Jacoby, a business man in Guthrie Center, was converted to God. Soon after he came to the Bible (Moody) Institute, Chicago, and is now pastor's assistant in the Chicago Avenue (Moody) church, one of the largest and best representatives of a Christian church in Chicago.

The students of Wheaton College and some others, on Jan. 20th last, had the pleasure and profit of hearing Bro. Wm. Jacoby give an account of his conversion, portions of which are here given to Cynosure readers.

"There was a revival in Guthrie Center and a great many of the young men and women were converted, and gave themselves over into the hands of God. I presume a hundred or more had done so when some one asked me if I would not go to the meeting. There is no use for me to go around to your meeting I said; but finally I was prevailed upon to go to the church. A friend sitting alongside of me, just for fun said, if you will raise your hand I will mine. He was in fun but I was half in earnest, and I said, if you will I will; and when they asked I raised my hand for prayers; then they told me to come to the altar. I didn't think that would do any good, but I went and kneeled down at the altar. They were singing and praying, when some one came and asked me, 'Do you feel any different?' Well, I did not, and so I had to tell the truth; I would go up to the altar and kneel down alone there; this I did for six or seven nights.

"I would go into the class-room and pray to God for light, but it seemed as if I was in a dream. They would tell me that it was tobacco that was in my way. A long spear-head plug would last me just ten days. I was willing to do anything, and so I had to stop the tobacco. I threw it all away and then I started to chew gum, for I had to chew something. I commenced chewing gum, and would chew it so fast that I was afraid I would get the lock-jaw. Then I cried, 'Lord, here you help me; I cannot quit this of myself.' And friends, from that day to this I have never wanted a chew of tobacco. God answered that prayer in a marvelous way.

"Finally one day about six months after I had started, they said, 'Bill gives a good testimony, but I have never heard him say he was saved.' Am I saved? I asked myself. I had been getting a little bit of the Word of God, and knew that it said that if you come to him a lost sinner, he won't cast you out. Well, I asked myself, are you sorry for your past sins? Yes, I wish they were all blotted out. I wish they never had been. Well, do you believe Jesus Christ died to save sinners? Yes, I do. Do you believe you were a sinner? Yes, I was a sinner. Well, does he save you? Then the thought came into my mind, 'God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' I said yes. And it seemed to me as if the whole room lighted up, and from that day to this I have never doubted.

"One night I went to the prayer meeting, and went from the prayer meeting over to the lodge. There were many of the church members in the lodge room that did not go to the prayer meeting. I thought of these things. I said to myself: You are in business; if you go out of the lodge how about your trade; the men will avoid trading with you; members of the lodge here have influence all over the country and you will lose your trade. I thought of these things three or four days; finally I says, well, what are you going to do? And my answer was, I have got to go out. Well, I said, all right, if I have got to go out, out I will go. So I went out, and I wrote the lodges a letter and told them. I do not think that I have been called upon to tell any of the secrets, but God just told me to come out from among them. The boys did not want me to go; they tried very hard to keep me in the lodge. I said I feel that I must come out of them and so out I came. I thought I would lose their trade. But there was not a single one left me, to my knowledge.

"I will tell you another thing that led me out of them; that was having to kneel down with a man whom I knew was one of the worst men in town, and together lift up our hearts in the Lord's Prayer. As I heard that man lifting up his voice and knowing that he was one of the worst men in town, it became another one of the things that led me out.

"I had a Knight Templar's uniform and I thought I had better sell it, and I wrote to the lodge and asked if they wanted to buy it. They wrote, 'Yes, somebody else will probably go in.'

"That suggested something else. If you sell that uniform what will be the consequence? Somebody else will go into that lodge that would not otherwise go in, because they can get the uniform for half price; if that is so, I thought, I cannot sell it. So I took it and burned it up. (Applause.) The sword I could not burn, but I put it in the fire and then I buried it in the ground.

"The reason I tell you this is just to show you how God led me. It is for Jesus' sake that I tell this to-day. I believe that many a young man to-day would be kept away from them if he knew the consequences.

"After this I would sit at my desk in the store when no customers were in and write out Bible readings. And a revivalist came along and took me with him. I would stand up before the people with my Bible. I had little knowledge of the Bible and not very much education, but I did not have a bit of fear, because I knew that it was the Holy Spirit that was leading me. So I would just stand up and read that passage in the 12th of Romans: 'I beseech you therefore, brethren, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds, that ye may prove what is that holy and acceptable will of God.' And I would tell them that this was only reasonable that they should be holy. That Christ could not have half of their heart. That they could not serve two masters. I could just tell them the truth that God told me. That I could have complete victory over sin by trusting in him. He was my Saviour. That it did not depend upon me. That Satan might tempt me to do wrong, but God was greater than Satan and Christ was manifest to destroy the works of the devil, and by trusting him I could come off more than victor.

"I just want to close with a few words. God has been wonderfully blessing me. God has been filling my soul with joy.

"He says, 'These things have I written unto you that my joy might remain in you and that your joy might be full.' And I know that if you are living so that no one is receiving anything from you, you must get closer to the Fountain. There in John you know it says that we shall be rivers of water, that is full and running over."

P.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev J. M. Faris, so long pastor at New Concord, O., is preaching at Fairgrove, Mich.

—Bro. Alex Mooney, a good anti-secret reformer from San Francisco, Ind., was a welcome visitor at the Cynosure office recently.

—Read in this issue how Samuel Harper, father of the illustrious president of Chicago University, tried to steal a march on Rev. J. P. Stoddard.

—Notice what Bro. W. B. Stoddard says in this issue of a certain community in Pennsylvania: "As every one asked subscribed for the paper, there was much to cheer us on our way."

—Dr. David Metheny, the veteran missionary in Syria, is expected home this spring. Many will remember his effective address at the Congress of Churches in this city on the lodge question some years ago.

—Rev. J. K. Glassford, now of Phœnix, Arizona, has rendered effective service for our cause as one of our talented and devoted lecturers. We are sorry for the illness of his wife, which of late has confined him much of the time at home.

—Samuel Harper, Sr., of New Concord, Ohio, and father of President Harper of the Chicago University, was a welcome visitor at the Cynosure office last week. He was accompanied by Samuel N. Harper, son of President Harper. Samuel Harper, Sr., whose letter is on another page, has been a Cynosure reader for many years, and in years past has co-operated with anti-secret lecturers in holding meetings at New Concord.

—Rev. R. M. Blackwood was ordained as pastor of the Bloomington, Ind., Covenanter church, Jan. 20. The pulpit had been vacant more than a year and a half, since the resignation of Rev. M. A. Gault, the former pastor. The young pastor starts out with the congregation in excellent working order, and has bright prospects before him.

—The editor addressed a fine audience last Friday evening at the Covenanter Mission, 6530 Cottage Grove Ave., this city, on the "Capital and Labor Question. This mission was re-inforced last week by Rev. R. B. Cannon, D. D., and family of Ohio, who have just taken up their residence in this city, The doctor is a strong advocate of the anti-secret and all other reforms, and the Cynosure extends to him and family a hearty welcome to Chicago.

—Rev. G. Kennedy Newell of Hope Chapel, at Plainfield, N. J., will be asked by a committee of the Red Men, Miantonomoh Tribe, either to qualify his remarks or else retract the implication which he placed on the order when he charged recently that the Red Men and the Daughters of Pocahontas recognized heathen gods in the burial ritual. Past Sachem William Newcorn says that if the minister does not withdraw his objectionable remarks he will make public some interesting statements. This is a good illustration of how tne secret lodge attempts to muzzle ministers and silence the pulpit.

—Pres. Silas W. Bond, of the Houghton New York Seminary, writes as follows to Gen. Sec. Phillips: "Some days ago I spoke to one of our young men in the theological department concerning the workers and work of the National Christian Association, and to my surprise he had never seen a copy of the Cynosure. Now we have here a fine class of young ministers, several preparing for teachers, and many others who are fitting themselves for some place in the world's great field of action. If you can feel that it is a method of advertising which will more than repay you the cost of putting a copy of the paper in our reading room, I shall be very much pleased to have you do so, and will gladly recommend it to them as a very helpful paper for them to use and circulate when they get out into their various fields of labor. We are finding this a very pleasant field of labor, and are enjoying our work very much indeed. In some way we have seemed to just meet their requirements, and the way they are rallying to our side in support of the school is very gratifying. Under God's blessing we expect to see the school continue to grow and prosper, and send out men and women who will bless the world." [We have many calls similar to the above from institutions of learning asking for N. C. A. literature. Would that the friends of the cause could realize more the importance of providing the means for sending the Cynosure to the reading rooms of colleges, where it would instruct and warn those who are soon to control public sentiment in the nation.—EDITOR.]

TAKE NOTICE.

Our Publisher announces this week, that for this year the clubbing price for the Chsistian Cynosure and the Weekly New York Tribune for 1897 is $1.75 for the two papers.

REFORM NEWS.

HOW THE DEVIL WANTS THE GOSPEL PREACHED.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 27, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—To say, preach the Gospel and let iniquity alone, is iniquitous. To say, preach the Gospel and let secret societies alone, is a devil's gospel, and the devil's way to preach it. When Bro. McNeil testified against Masonry in the Y. M. C. A. hall in Chicago, as recorded in the Cynosure of Jan. 21st, and the lodge pastors were squirming in the fire, and a pastor pulled his coat while he was testifying, and the chairman of that meeting said in substance "that our first concern should be to get the Freemason's heart filled with the Spirit, and then he would rightly decide the lodge question," that was an artful way of saying, "Shut your mouth, McNeil, or we will shut it and seal it shut in "a grave six feet perpendicular and six feet due east and west."

But, no doubt, Bro. McNeil understands it, and feels it too, that it is at his peril, except he is in Christ, to bear testimony to the truth of what the devil does for a man in the lodge; for lodge pastors would treat him as their Masonic brethren treated Captain Morgan if they dared. They and their "pimps" would drive every honest man out of the pulpit if they could.

When St. Paul was shipwrecked and had landed on the island of Melita, a viper fastened itself on his hand, but he shook off the beast into the fire and felt no harm. So let every assembly of God's people shake off that venomous beast—the lodge member—and that assembly will feel no harm, but have an approving conscience in the sight of God. It is a very great sin to receive a member of a lodge into Christian fellowship.

Can a reader of the Cynosure tell us of a Baptist church that actually excludes members of all secret societies from its fellowship, and has a clause to that effect in its church covenant?

W. FENTON.

NEW ALEXANDRIA A MODEL TOWN.

SCENE OF DR. MILLIGAN'S EARLY LABORS.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Jan. 27, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The fruits of the Beaver Falls Convention of last year are manifest. Many were enlisted at that time who will help us in days to come. The storms of the week past have been trying. The reformer expects to meet storms. We shall move on, knowing "It will be summer time by and by." Rev. H. B. Hummel, of the Presbyterian church, Latrobe, invited me to preach on Sabbath to his people, but wrote that the session did not think the time auspicious for an anti-secrecy address. There are a great variety of lodges in Latrobe.

The village paper lauded a man who was giving addresses in the Y. M. C. A. hall. He was organizing a lodge of the Knights of Malta. Some seem to have money to buy so-called secrets, who have little for their families. I was glad of the opportunity to again visit New Alexandria and continue my canvass for the Cynosure there. The Steeles, who have been often tried, proved true to their name. M. H. Steele conveyed me a distance of six miles to John R. Steele's. The latter is an elder in the Covenanter church, of which Rev. R. J. Gault is pastor. His fast horse, as usual, was needing exercise. Nicely wrapped up in the carriage we enjoyed our canvass, notwithstanding the driving snow storm. As every one asked subscribed for the paper, there was much to cheer us on our way.

That John R. knew the right place to go for dinner was evident. The turkey awaited us at a brother's, S. M. Steele's. It's a nice thing to be a reformer when you go to New Alexandria. Lodges have been attempted, but do not thrive there. A literary society meets every Friday evening in Steele's schoolhouse. At the hour appointed for this meeting last Friday it was snowing and blowing. The people got to the house some way. It was filled with as intelligent a company of young people as can be found in the country. The declamations, essays, etc., indicated thought and interest. By special vote the hour usually occupied in debate was given to your agent. I hung up the chart and explored the so-called mysteries. The closest attention was given. There were lodgemen in the audience who would of course be specially interested. I hope they may take my advice and not invest in any more of the so-called secrets.

It seemed wise to remain at New Alexandria over Sabbath. I was sorry not to accept the kind invitation of the pastor at Latrobe. I shall hope to do so later. Our ex-State president is pastor of the United Presbyterian church in New Alexandria. Sabbath morning he made me very welcome and insisted on my preaching to his people. Dr. Collins said he had not been able to get hold of a subject during the week to present to his people as he could wish. He understood the reason, he thought. The Lord intended me to preach. Everybody treated me kindly. Indeed, one might forget they were engaged in reform work. There was not enough opposition to make it seem natural.

Bro. Gault reported four pages of signatures to the petitions, and still there were more to follow. I am stirring up some to circulate the petitions and securing readers to the Cynosure this way. Geneva College reports an increase in the number of students. Money is scarce, we are everywhere told, but there are several new buildings going up. Some people are awake and pushing.

I hope to visit New Castle to-morrow. Expect to be at home before this reaches Cynosure readers. Letters are coming reporting that petitions are being circulated. In my next I hope to give friends items of interest in this line. Shall I not hear from those who have not reported? Remember, friends, our final success under God depends upon individual effort.

Wednesday Evening.

7:30 P. M.—Devotional Exercises.
8:00 P. M.—Lecture, "Evils of Secret Societies," by Rev. L. A. Johnston. Business meeting. Adjournment.

This convention is called in the interest of our Lord Jesus Christ and his church, and in his defence against the wiles of the devil and his lodge angels. May the Spirit of the Lord awaken his sleeping bride, and God's people come to this convention clothed with righteousness and full of the Holy Ghost. So we shall surely be guided in truth and win the battle with our Lord, upon whom we wait. We have no Gospel of lies to preach to the people; but such a Gospel as tears the "deceitful mask" off the Odd-fellow whom the devil has made so odd that he is a lying hypocrite and a rebel against the Almighty.

Brethren, let your prayers touch the throne of God on this subject, and come to the convention in that spirit. Neither Martin Luther, nor Paul, nor any of the apostles of our Lord could do anything against our open foes without that spirit. The foes that we are to meet in this convention are foes that skulk behind tyled doors, but our God has made a hole in the wall and has bidden us go in and see the abominations. We shall meet these wicked spirits in heavenly places, and see and know the salvation of our God.

"The secret things belong unto the Lord our God; but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever." Deut. 29:29. Now the wicked things of the lodge are revealed, and also the things of God concerning them; and it is our duty to fight, and to fight in the armor that God has provided for us. W. FENTON.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

GOOD WORK ACCOMPLISHED BY A CHICAGO GIRLS' CLUB.

The Majority Petition—Piques and Cotton Canvas—The Rainy Day Club—Lamp Shades and Sleeves—The Height of Style.

The clubhouse of the Girls' Mutual Benefit club is at 531 West Superior street and is in good financial condition so far as its running expenses are concerned. It is self supporting, although the fees are so small, the initiation fee being 25 cents and the dues 5 cents a week. The membership numbers about 225, and includes a number of the leisure class besides a large number of self supporting young women.

The club was organized in 1890 by six young women who recognized the fact that a home of luxury was the fate of comparatively few, and who longed to divide the favors fortune had bestowed upon them with their less fortunate sisters. They had worked together for some time in the Ashland circle of King's Daughters, but the club was not in any way under the auspices of the King's Daughters. Alice Cary Burkhardt, one of the founders, is president of the club.

After the regular classes were established Saturday evening was set aside for socials and lectures, the latter on history, hygiene, Delsarte, general care of the health and other interesting subjects.

A library was started at once, and that, together with the games and music for those who do not wish to join the classes, helps to make the evenings spent in the clubhouse both profitable and pleasant.

The expenses were defrayed at first by the proceeds of a concert, which made a nest egg of $268 to start on. But the club very soon outgrew its small quarters, and it was decided best to build. About $1,500 was raised by subscriptions, entertainments and bazaars, which paid for the lot at 531 West Superior street, upon which a handsome and commodious clubhouse was built which cost $7,000, $500 being paid each year on the indebtedness. This amount is raised by outside subscription, entertainments, etc. They still owe $3,000.

The house was dedicated amid great enthusiasm and has drawn an immense membership from that vicinity. It is finished admirably and furnished for the special needs of the organization. On the ground floor are the rooms occupied by the janitor and his wife, the matron, and consist of a little five room flat. The bathrooms, which are always open for the use of the members, are also on this floor, as well as the furnace and storage rooms. On the second floor are the offices, library, two large reception rooms and a well appointed kitchen where the cooking lessons take place and which, as furnished, is a model kitchen in every sense of the term. The third floor is divided into a large auditorium and two music rooms in front.

The entire house has hard finished floors, and the rooms, with the exception of the large auditorium, are furnished with rugs. All the furniture except the auditorium folding chairs was donated by friends of the institution. This is probably as attractive a clubhouse as there is in the city, especially when it is taken into consideration that it is managed entirely by girls. These young women say the organization is what its name indicates—delightfully mutual in its benefits. The members of the leisure class have time and ways to plan and to work for the support of the club outside the club's own limits. The wageworkers do their part in dues and are always ready to engage in entertainments, for which they pay a regular admission price as a help to the revenue of the club. It is impossible to estimate the value to the leisure class of the lessons which they learn of the girls and young women who every day glean experience in the business world. These industrial members are bright examples of patience and perseverance.

The classes are all free, with one exception, and the fee for that one is only 10 cents, the charge being made on account of necessary expense involved. The other classes are carried on by 24 volunteer teachers, who aim to make their instruction as practical as possible. For the dressmaking class a sewing machine has been given, so that nothing is left out of the fullest instruction necessary to cut, fit and make complete anything in a girl's wardrobe. The cooking classes are especially interesting, the theory being followed by practice and illustration in the shape of a supper.

This institution is not for the so called "submerged tenth"—does not aim at civilizing, but Americanizing. This district being composed entirely of foreigners of the poor but thrifty class and speaking their native languages in their homes, it is hard to get at the heads of the families, as they stay at home so entirely that many of the women do not understand the English language at all. It has been the desire of the club to form mothers' clubs, but in this the club is hampered by the linguistic fact above referred to.—Chicago Tribune.

The Majority Petition.

Martha R. Almy of Jamestown, N. Y., when asked her views on the "majority petition," in a manner positive and firm replied:

"From the time when Margaret Brent asked to vote in the Maryland assembly, Jan. 21, 1647-8, to the present day the women of America have been asking for a voice in government. When all legitimate arguments against the granting of their reasonable requests have failed, they have been met with the inane apology that when a majority of women want to vote the suffrage will be conferred upon them.

"Since the right of petition is the only political right which a disfranchised class enjoys the inference is that the prerequisite to enfranchisement should be a petition signed by a majority of all the women of the state.

"I deny the right of any person or power to demand such a test as a majority petition. The declaration of independence does not say, We hold these truths to be self evident, that when all men, or a majority of them, shall ask for their inalienable rights they shall receive them. It says that all men are created equal and endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, and that to secure these rights governments are instituted.

"If this time honored instrument sets forth any one supreme proposition of which all others are but corollaries, it is the statement that governments are instituted to secure rights.

"The theory seems to be growing alarmingly prevalent in these latter days that the government should confer rights, and that only when the demand is so strong that it can no longer safely withhold them. If this be true, Columbia is no better than old King John. In all the pages of history, ancient or modern, there is not recorded an instance where a determinant majority of unrecognized persons ever asked for an extension of rights or privileges.

"A volume would not contain the record of instances in the world's history where an active, aggressive minority has demanded an extension of rights and privileges and received them. The whole story of the evolution of liberty is but an illustrated sequence of examples where the few have asked and the many received. To confine ourselves to our own country, we should never have had a Decaration of Independence if it had been necessary to have a majority of the colonists declare for it. The majority, and especially the wealthy people in colonial days, thought it better to endure the ills they had than to run the risk of others which they knew not of. At one time during the Revolutionary war there were twice as many Americans in arms against the cause of independence as there were in the American army. The loyalists in this country always claimed that they were in the majority. In New York state originally only freeholders voted. Did the poor man unanimously petition for the franchise? Did the poor black man in the state of New York in 1846 unanimously or in any determinant majority petition for the franchise? Did Abraham Lincoln insist upon a majority petition from the slaves before signing the emancipation proclamation? Did the negroes in the south in the days of reconstruction circulate a petition to find out how many wanted to vote?

"If a majority test is to be required, the logic of the situation demands that it be a majority of citizens, both men and women."—New York Tribune.

Mrs. Peary.

Mrs. Peary, wife of the arctic explorer, is an exceedingly clever, attractive woman. She is a fluent speaker and has recently received an offer of $20,000 to make a lecture tour of the larger cities in the United States. But she refused the offer. She was recently a guest in Milwaukee, where she filled an engagement for her husband, it being impossible for him to be present. She sold her journal, that she kept while she was in the arctic regions, for $10,000 and a royalty of 12 per cent. She is handsome, with Grecian features and soft, curling hair. She is of German parentage.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 7. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Sincerity—with oneself, with others, with God.—Ps. xv, 1-5; Ezra viii, 16, 17.

The Fifteenth Psalm is supposed by some to have been written by David at the time of the bringing of the ark to Jerusalem, but it was probably written later, as the expression "holy hill" would indicate. It was the ark that made Zion the "holy hill."

It opens with the question, "Who shall abide in thy tabernacle; who shall dwell in thy holy hill?' And in answering the question it draws a picture of the perfect man, making his perfection to consist in his personal integrity and sincerity and a similar relation to others. In relation to himself, the man who holds communion with God is: (1) He that walks uprightly his whole life is right; (2) he that worketh righteousness—that doeth the will of God; (3) he that speaketh the truth in his heart. Truth, sincerity, dwells in his heart, and he speaks it there first. The sincere man is sincere in heart. If the heart is deceitful and hypocritical, though the words and actions of a man may seem to be sincere, he is not sincere. Sincerity, truth, trueness, begins in the heart. It is a heart characteristic.

Sincerity in oneself will necessarily include sincerity to others. The man who is false to others is not true to himself or to God, for it includes that. In trueness to others there are several negative qualities embraced: (1) He is not one that slanders or does evil to his neighbors; he does not injure them by thought, word or deed. (2) He will not even listen to reproaches made by others; he neither speaks ill of his friends nor allows others to speak ill of them to him. Other qualifications also are mentioned. He is one who turns from the evil and honors the good. He is not one who takes usury or bribes. In Zechariah we are told that he should speak truth to his neighbor, execute the judgment of truth and peace, not imagine evil in his heart against his neighbor and love no false oaths. And why? Because God hates these things, and the true man will not do the things which God hates. He will want to be sincere with God as well as with himself and his neighbor.

Sincerity with God is the most important of all. If we are sincere with God, if we are honest in all our dealings with Him, we cannot be false to ourselves or others, for that would include falsity to God. When we sin against ourselves or others, we sin primarily against God. Sincerity is a noble trait of character. No trait of human character is so admired both by God and man. God and man both love sincerity and truth and cordially hate and despise a hypocrite.

Bible Readings.—Ex. xxiii, 1-12; Lev. xix, 16-18; Job. viii, 11-16; Ps. xxxiv, 11-16; Zech. vii, 9, 10; Math. vi, 1-8; xxiv, 44-51; John viii, 44; Acts v, 1-11; Gal. vi, 7, 8; Eph. iv, 25; Phil. i, 9-11; iv, 8; I Pet. ii, 1, 2; Rev. xxi, 8.

Working In Common.

Christianity has nothing in common with apathy. It does not transform men into stoics. We may admire the old Roman who shed no tears over calamity and bore all in stolid unconcern, but marble insensibility is not akin to either nature or the gospel. The Christian religion recognizes true, manly, hearty sympathy. It evokes, enjoins and honors becoming emotion. It says, "Weep with those that weep." Our Lord wept at the grave of Lazarus as the bereaved friend and over Jerusalem as the solicitous patriot who saw the approaching desolation of his beloved city. Surely it is not unmanly to weep. Sensitiveness ever finds occasion for tender and responsive expression.—Presbyterian.

One of the Crying Evils of the Day.

We are living in an age in which old beliefs have been much unsettled. A large proportion of our new generation have never received, either at school or at home, adequate instruction in the elements of morality, and particularly in the necessity of restraining the inclination of our common nature to satisfy its greeds irrespective of the rights of others. Dishonesty in various forms is one of the crying evils of the day.—Catholic Standard and Times.

The Just Balance.

The just balance of thrift and enterprise is preserved not by toning down one, but by building up the other. No one is too enterprising, no one is too thrifty, but most of us are deficient in one or the other and need to cultivate that one with special care. Whichever trait is the feebler within us needs more abundant exercise by which to grow and strengthen.—Lutheran.

Real Endeavor.

A Christian Endeavorer of Berlin, Ont., a young woman 17 years old, visits the almshouse every Sunday, carrying good literature. The poor old folks anxiously look for her, and her visit is to them the brightest spot in the week. Hundreds of Christian Endeavor societies are engaged in similar work.

Politics and Moral Character.

The man who enters politics poor and after a few years retires with a competency is not likely to have much, if any, moral character left.—Lutheran Observer.

Lovely Selfishness.

The habit of love is to put the best possible construction on men's actions, while the habit of selfishness is just the opposite.—Christian Standard.

Applies to Religious Sentiment.

The foundation of the church lies in the religious sentiment, and to this sentiment its appeals must persistently be made.—Christian Register.

If We Truly Love Him.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

WATER POWER.

A Simple Little Engine That Any Smart Boy Can Make.

The principle illustrated in the accompanying cut might readily serve to generate power without the use of machinery. We give it, however, merely as an interesting and easily made experiment.

Pour water into a good sized glass tumbler until it is two-thirds full and stand it upon a canister to give it the necessary elevation. Through the flat cork on the surface of the water is a stout straw, which transversely supports one of the same diameter. To the latter are attached two other straws of smaller diameter, each of these having a bit of straw about an inch in length attached to the end at an obtuse angle, with the outlets cut on the slant to facilitate the exit of the water.

All the joints are hollow and are made water tight with sealing wax. The ends of the transverse straw are likewise closed with the wax, but the ends of the depending straws are left open.

Now, to start this unique homemade apparatus in action, let two persons suck the open ends of the depending straws until the water begins to flow, and when they take their mouths away the device will begin to revolve, while the water pours steadily from the open ends.

This revolving siphon will soon empty the tumbler, but you may keep the action up as long as you please by pouring water in as fast as the straws let it pour out.

A Boy and a Banana Skin.

One day last week a white haired old gentleman was walking up Fifth avenue with his cane. Not far in front of him dawdled a boy eating a big ripe banana. It was near the noon hour, and the street was thronged with people hurrying off to lunch. Presently the boy, having finished the banana, dropped the skin on the sidewalk and went whistling up the street. The old gentleman stopped and bent over slowly, leaning heavily on his cane, and picked up the banana skin. Just then the boy looked over his shoulder and saw what the old man had done. He stopped, with his hands in his pockets, and watched curiously. Close to the curbing stood a forlorn old dray horse, with its head hung down and one leg bowed out. He looked as if he hadn't had enough to eat in months.

The old man held out the banana skin, and the discouraged old horse instantly pricked up his ears. He was evidently suspicious at first that a joke was being played on him, but it was only for a moment. He reached forward eagerly and nipped the banana skin with his soft lips. When it was gone, he looked up wistfully, but the white haired old man was walking on up the street with his cane. The boy stopped whistling. He was thinking, and so were a score of other people who saw the little incident.—Chicago Record.

Some Schoolboy Definitions.

In a recent examination some boys were asked to define certain words and to give a sentence illustrating the meaning. Here are a few: Frantic is wild; I picked some frantic flowers. Athletic strong; the vinegar was too athletic to use. Tandem, one behind another; the boys sit tandem at school. And then some single words are funnily explained. Dust is mud with the wet squeezed out. Fins are fishes' wings. Stars are the moon's eggs. Circumference is the distance around the middle of the outside. —Educational Gazette.

Cork Toys.

Curious toys may be made of cork. One of these is the well known little tumbler such as is generally constructed of pith. But cork, especially if it be hollowed, will answer the purpose quite as well. Make the puppet of three or four corks, shape and paint it as skillfully as you can, and glue to the feet, or under them, little hemispheres of lead. When thrown into any position, the figure, of course, rights itself, and, like a cat, always falls on its feet. It is quite possible to make a cat of pith or of cork too.

SAN FRANCISCO'S BEER.

Her Saloons, Placed Side by Side, Would Extend Sixteen Miles.

The yearly consumption of beer in San Francisco, according to the calculation of the federal gaugers, is 14,215,161 gallons. This is equal to 2,843,032 1-5 five gallon kegs. It would require a single cask 222 feet high and 161 feet in diameter to hold this liquor. The battleship Oregon could easily float in this cask. The beam of the Oregon is only 70 feet and her extreme height, including her military mast, is 120 feet. It would require five ships as large as the Oregon to carry this beer as a cargo after all the machinery and armament had been removed and allowing nothing for the hull displacement. The displacement of the Oregon is 10,000 tons, the weight of the beer is 50,860 tons.

Notwithstanding the fact that San Francisco has but 300,000 people, there are 3,260 licensed saloons in the city.

The Examiner of that city recently compiled a statement of the extent of San Francisco's rum business, and this article has been drawn upon for many of the facts herein given.

These figures take no account of the numberless barrel houses—"can joints" in the expressive vernacular of the police—for the barrel houses are not required to pay the municipal license of $21 a quarter, and consequently are not enumerated in the books.

Eliminating, therefore, the barrel houses and allowing to each of the more than 3,000 licensed saloons a frontage of 25 feet—certainly a moderate allowance—the astounding fact is made to appear that the San Francisco saloons, if placed side by side in a straight line, would extend nearly 16 miles—one unbroken, bibulous, beery boulevard.—New York Voice.

THE MODERN CAIN.

Childhood, Youth and Manhood All Perish Before the Slayer.

The saloon—this modern Cain—is the depository of the rankest poisons. He who stands behind its bar deals in death.

It is a murderer of babyhood. No one who but casually glances over the record of crime issuing from the saloon can doubt that it is disastrous to child life.

The saloon is a murderer of manhood. It has wrecked the bodies and sent to eternal doom the souls of thousands of the flower of our country.

It is the destroyer of the home, that ancient institution of God, that little heaven on earth, that one thing dear to a woman's heart next to her God. The saloon has been the cause of thousands of homes being turned into hells on earth.

Here is modern Cain with this difference, that, whereas in the olden time Cain was reckoned an outlaw and went slinking away when confronted with his crime, this modern Cain is a legalized murderer and carries on its work under sanction of law. I am profoundly impressed with the conviction that in the annals of time this shall be reckoned the "crime of the ages." May the voice of the eternal God startle us tonight with the question, "What hast thou done?" Two hundred thousand homes are under the shadow; 100,000 hearts are broken; the cry of 500,000 wretched, ragged children pierces the air; the tramp, tramp, tramp of 100,000 drunkards yearly marching to their doom makes the earth tremble, while crimes unmentionable are being perpetrated upon thousands of innocent victims by the votaries of the saloon.—Rev. J. Knox Montgomery.

LIQUOR AND BUSINESS.

People of a Town Don't Have to Guzzle Beer to Be Prosperous.

One of the highest salaried traveling men making Kansas was talking with a Wichita reporter the other day of the prohibition law of Kansas and said: "I make all the towns in eastern Kansas and western Missouri, and I want to say that all this talk of prohibition hurting business is all a farce. I sell more goods and a better quality in Kansas towns than I do in Missouri, and my patrons are better pay.

"They need not tell me that the people of a town have to guzzle beer in order to have prosperous business. When the people of a town spend their money for beer, they don't have so much to spend in my line. I don't mind a glass of beer occasionally, but I prefer to sell goods to a man who doesn't use it. I find he is a great deal more apt to have the money when pay day comes."—Kansas City Star.

Sunday Closing In Scotland.

Here are some figures that witness to the advantages of Sunday closing of saloons: In Scotland the consumption of spirits in 1852 and 1853 was 6,853,331 gallons for a population of 2,914,744. In 1892 and 1893 the consumption was 6,691,758 gallons, the population being 4,063,451. Compare the decrease in consumption of spirits with increased population.

No Good Templars In Russia.

Joseph Malins, grand chief Templar of England, recently made an attempt to locate lodges of his order in Russia, but the government forbade any move of the kind, and the enterprise was abandoned.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON VII, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, FEB. 14.

Text of the Lesson, Acts v, 17-32—Memory Verses, 29-32—Golden Text, Acts v, 29—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

17. "Then the high priest rose up, and all they that were with him, and were filled with indignation." The preceding verses tell of multitudes coming to Jerusalem to be healed, and they were healed, every one. It seems that blessing came even from the shadow of Peter falling upon them. Multitudes of men and women believed and were added to the Lord, and many signs and wonders were wrought by the hands of the apostles, but it was all the work of the risen Christ through them by His Spirit. The same Christ lives today, and the same Spirit is in every believer, but where are the signs and wonders to the glory of God? Is it because believers do not live to honor Christ as the apostles did?

18. "And laid their hands on the apostles and put them in the common prison." The high priest and the Sadducees were very religious people and professed to worship the one living and true God, yet they thus manifested their anger against these men because they honored Jesus Christ risen from the dead and because of the mighty works done in His name. The margin of verse 17 says they were filled with envy, and there are still many religious people whose strange and seemingly hateful conduct to others can be accounted for only on the ground of envy.

19. "But the angel of the Lord by night opened the prison doors and brought them forth." When the Lord wants his people all night in prison, that is the place for them to be, as in chapter iv, 3, but when He wants them out of prison He has angels enough to minister to them, and one angel has more power than all the soldiers on earth, and prison doors or walls are nothing to them.

20 "Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life." The words of God are Spirit and life (John vi, 63). Christ is life and apart from Him is no life (Col. iii, 4; I John v, 12). If we have life in Christ, it is that we may pass it on to others by holding forth the word of life (Phil. ii, 16). If we have the bread of life and living water, it is that we may pass on the same to those who have them not. Five small loaves in the hands of Christ fed over 5,000 people. He is the very same Jesus.

21. The apostles did as they were told and taught the people in the temple. The high priest, with the council and senate, assembled in the morning and sent to the prison to bring the prisoners. It was evidently something very important that these men, Peter and John, should be dealt with severely, and hence the calling together of the whole senate as well as the council, and now that they had them safely in prison—as they supposed—was the time to do something very decided.

22, 23. The prison shut safely, the keepers before the doors, but no prisoners in the prison—this is what the officers came and found and returned and told. The rulers were taking counsel together against the Lord and against His anointed, and the Lord was having them in derision (Ps. ii, 2, 4).

24. The high priest and chief priests doubted whereunto these things would grow, and well they might, for if lame people are made to walk and all manner of sickness healed, and prison walls and faithful guards set at naught, the rulers may well ask, What next? We know whereunto these things will grow—they will keep growing until to Him every knee shall bow, all kings fall down before Him, and all nations serve Him, and the kingdom and dominion under the whole heaven be given to the saints of the Most High.

25, 26. Hearing from some one that the prisoners were teaching the people in the temple, the captain and officers went and brought them without violence. The same power that took the apostles out of prison, and that sent the soldiers to the ground when they came to take the Lord Jesus in Gethsemane might have arrested this captain and his officers if the Lord had thought best, but His plan for them now seemed to be that they should quietly go with the officers. Quiet submission to circumstances, trusting God to arrange the circumstances, is the way of peace for the believer. I find great help in this word, "Do as occasion serve thee, for God is with thee" (I Sam. x, 7).

27, 28. Being set before the council, the high priest accuses them of filling Jerusalem with their doctrine and making the council guilty of the death of Christ, and this in spite of the command of the council to stop teaching in the name of Christ. There is no reference to their escape from prison, perhaps because they felt compelled to acknowledge the hand of God in this and dared say nothing against it, perhaps for other reasons.

29. "Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said, We ought to obey God rather than men." In the presence of the council that put Christ to death they feared not the same treatment if such had been the will of God for them. They had prayed not for deliverance from their enemies, but for boldness in teaching whatever the result might be (chapter iv, 29-31). They remind us of the friends of Daniel, who, with the fiery furnace before them, feared not to honor God and defy the king. The fear of God delivers from all fear of men.

30. "The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree." The end of all their conversation as well as the beginning is Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today and forever (Heb. xiii, 7, 8). They are not afraid to insist upon the fact that the rulers of the Jews crucified Christ, and with triumph they assert that God raised Him from the dead.

31. "Him hath God exalted with His right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour for to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins." Humbled unto death and crucified by His enemies, God raised Him from the dead and gave Him glory and exalted Him to give repentance unto Israel first if they would accept it, for up to this time it looks as if Christ might have returned to give the kingdom to Israel if only they had been willing to accept Him. See Acts iii, 19-21 R. V., and remember that all the believers thus far, though numbering many thousands, were all Jews.

32. "And we are His witnesses of these things, and so is also the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to them that obey Him." See the partnership of the Holy Spirit and these, in themselves, weak and unworthy vessels. See the Lord's own words in Acts i, 8, and let us be willing to be His witnesses; then we may be sure that all our ways and words will be chosen for us and our work will be in the presence and power of God, according to Jer. i, 7, 8.

EXPLOSION IN AN IOWA MINE.

Burns Eleven Men, One of Whom Will, It Is Thought, Not Recover.

Ottumwa, Ia., Jan. 29.—News, delayed by storm and cold, has just been received of an explosion in a coal mine at Foster Wednesday. Foster is in Monroe county, fifteen miles south. Eleven men were burned by the explosion, but all will recover with the possible exception of one. The cause of the explosion is a mystery. It is thought it may have been a keg of powder, but the mine authorities say it was the result of natural phenomena; that air of extreme low temperature met the warm, gaseous air of the mine when the shaft suddenly opened, and formed a gas which ignited from the lamps of the miners, who were just leaving work for the noon hour.

The following were injured: Louis Fogler, may die: Robert Williams, John Farrell, C. G. Anderson, David Scott and two sons, Thomas Connor and William Morgan, burned badly, but probably not dangerously, about the scalp, face and hands. John Pierson was badly injured by a flying rock. Nearly all the injured men have families.

DEATH OF PRESIDENT ROBERTS.

Head of the Pennsylvania Railway Company Goes to the Majority.

Philadelphia, Feb. 1.—George B. Roberts, president of the Pennsylvania company, died at 4:30 Saturday afternoon at his home in Bala, a suburb of this city, from heart failure superinduced by acute indigestion, aged 63. Roberts was first taken ill in August last, but there had been periods since that time during which he was able to be about the house. He was forced to take to his bed about two months ago with catarrh of the stomach, and grew steadily worse until the time of his death. During the past two weeks his condition had become practically hopeless.

LATEST WORK OF TRAIN THUGS.

Express and Mail Looted and Cars Set on Fire with Dynamite.

Portland, Ore., Jan. 30.—The Southern Pacific train which was held up early yesterday morning near Roseburg arrived here last evening. Charles Piper, the postal clerk in charge of the mail car, said: "Two men did all the work of holding up the train, but I think there were five in the gang. They exploded two dynamite bombs in the express car, and half a dozen on the outside. When the express car took fire I realized that my car, which was next to the express, was in danger. One of the robbers drew his revolver on me while he went through the mail. I don't believe he took anything of value. The express car was soon a mass of flames and I set about to save my car, if possible, by carrying water from a pond near at hand. The entire end of the mail car was burned out, but only a small part of the mail was damaged."

Arbitration Treaty Amended.

Washington, Feb. 1.—The arbitration treaty came out of the senate foreign affairs committee very materially amended, as it was voted 9 to 1 to drop King Oscar as the one who is to appoint an umpire if the high contracting parties fail to agree, and leaving them to fight it out as to who shall be umpire. Another amendment cuts out from arbitration all questions affecting the domestic or foreign policy of either party, or their relations with other states. In this condition it was voted to report the treaty to the senate, Morgan, Mills, Daniel and Cameron voting no on the question of reporting.

Successor to Dubois Elected.

Boise, Ida., Jan. 29.—Henry Heitfielt, Populist, was yesterday elected United States senator to succeed Dubois. The decisive ballot was: Heitfelt, 39; Dubois, 30; T. F. Nelson, 1. Heitfelt got 13 Democratic votes and 1 Republican; Dubois 4 Democrats. Heitfelt is a farmer. He represents Nez Perces county in the state senate. His age is 40. His education is apparently only of a rudimentary character.

THE PRAIRIE STATE.

ILLINOIS NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST.

Summary of Important Events of the Past Few Days Reported by Telegraph for the Benefit of Our Readers—Items of Special Interest to Illinois People.

Springfield, Ills., Jan. 27.—There was a large attendance in both houses of the legislature yesterday. Nearly every member brought back a bill with him, and some brought as many as three or four. The senate was in session scarcely five minutes when it adjourned. Three bills were introduced, however, one by Senator McKinlay prohibiting convict labor by contract, and providing that the labor of convicts shall be used for state purposes only. Two other bills appropriate money for the deaf and dumb institute at Jacksonville and for the expenses of the governor's office.

In the house Busse, of Cook county, introduced a joint resolution "whereasing" that the Anglo-American arbitration treaty was "offensive and defensive" and resolving that it should not be approved by the United States senate. Revell introduced a bill for the repeal of the libel law passed at the last session of the legislature. Sharrock introduced a bill that railroads shall carry bicycles as baggage. Truesdale introduced one abolishing private banking. McLaughlin offered a joint resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution authorizing the legislature to regulate contracts between corporations and their employes.

Springfield, Ills., Jan. 28.—Representative Revell's bill to repeal the libel law of the last session, which was made a special order for Wednesday, was made a special order for next Tuesday by the house. Buckner stirred up a hornet's nest by offering a resolution regarding the Cuban question. Democrats claimed that hte resolution was out of order and that it was an attempt on the part of the Republicans to steal Democratic thunder. The resolution was referred. Barnes offered a join resolution calling for a submission to the vote of the people of an amendment to the constitution which, if adopted, will admit women to the right of suffrage. The senate was in session just ten minutes. The business transacted was of a routine nature.

Springfield, Ills., Jan. 29.—In the house Thursday the resolution of Representative Busse protesting against the arbitration treaty with England now being discussed in congress came up as a special order, and was referred to the committee on federal relations. Perry introduced a bill providing punishment for bribery in elections; also a bill to repeal the flag law. Allen introduced a bill in the interest of good country roads. It provides the issuance of bonds to raise money for this improvement. Another brief session of the senate was held Thursday morning. It was of 10 minutes' duration. A message from the governor nominating W. C. Simpson of Vienna, Ills., a member of the state board of pharmacy to succeed W. P. Boyd was received and confirmed.

Springfield, Jan. 30.—The senate did nothing yesterday but receive a few bills and a joint resolution to submit to the voters a woman's suffrage constitutional amendment. Adjourned to Monday at 5 p. m. In the house the judiciary committee was announced, Allan, of Vermilion, chairman. No other business of importance was done. Adjourned to 5 p. m. Monday.

Officers for Illinois Surveyors.

Springfield, Ills., Jan. 29.—At the annual session of the Illinois Society of Engineers and Surveyors the following officers were elected: President, Chas. C. Stowell, of Rockford; secretary, P. C. Knight, of Pontiac; executive secretary and treasurer, J. A. Harmon, of Peoria. The next annual meeting will be held at Peoria, in January, 1898.

School House at Pawpaw Burned.

Pawpaw, Ills., Jan. 27.—Pawpaw's $12,000 brick school building burned yesterday. The fire service lacked hose for reaching the flames, and the severe weather had frozen the hydrants so that nothing could be accomplished towards saving the building. The fire caught from one of the furnaces. Insurance, $5,000.

Death of a Prominent Illinoisan.

Quincy, Ills., Jan. 27.—Hon. R. H. Downing, a prominent citizen of Adams county, died of diabetes at his home near Golden yesterday, aged 68. He was an active Democrat and served several years in the state legislature.

Prominent Chicagoan Dead.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—James W. Oakley, of the Walter Oakley company, tanners, died last evening at his home in this city of paralysis, aged 64 years. He had been an invalid for years. He was prominent in business circles.

Weyler's Supply Train Dnyamited.

Cincinnati, Feb. 1.—The Commercial-Tribune's special from Key West says: On Friday one of General Weyler's supply trains was dynamited on the railroad near Cieze, north of Cienfugos. Out of the guard of 100 soldiers on it forty-five were instantly killed or terribly injured. The others surrendered. The captain of the Cubans was a man from Indiana named Burke.

Trevelyan Quits Parliament.

London, Feb. 1.—Right Hon. Sir G. O. Trevelyan (Radical), secretary for Scotland in the cabinet of Lord Roseberry, has resigned his seat in parliament on account of ill health.

NEW IRON LASTS and HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT

The Latest, Neatest, Cheapest and Best Outfit Ever Invented.

THE HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT NO. 1.

Consisting of 38 First-Class Tools and Materials (neatly boxed) Shown in Cut, viz.:

1 Iron Last, 8 inches.
1 Iron Last, 6 inches.
1 Iron Last, 4 inches.
1 Iron Standard, with Base.
1 Package Assorted Nails.
1 Package 4-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 5-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 6-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
6 Pairs Star Heel Plates.
½ lb Copper Rivets and Burrs.
1 Steel Punch.
1 Sewing Awl, complete.
1 Pegging Awl, complete.
1 Wrench for above.
1 Stabbing Awl, complete.
1 Shoeknife.
1 Shoehammer.
1 Bottle Rubber Cement.
1 Bottle Leather Cement.
1 Harness and Saw Clamp.
1 Ball Wall.
1 Ball Shoe Thread.
1 Bunch Bristles.
4 Harness Needles.
1 Soldering Iron.
1 Bottle Soldering Fluid.
1 Box Rosin.
1 Bar Solder.
1 Directions for Use.

All these tools are full-sized, practical, neat, and cheap; not mere toys. They enable any person to do his own half-soling, boot, shoe, rubber, harness, and tinware repairing.

This Outfit is the result of years of study, experiment, and correspondence in the manufacture of Iron Lasts and Repairing Outfits; and its practical advantages need only to be seen and tried to be appreciated.

Our Improved Iron Lasts and Standard are one of the handiest tools you can have about the place. The Lasts are four in number, smooth and solid, 4, 6, 8 ,and 10 inches long, thus enabling one to half-sole all sizes of foot-wear. The Standard is made with an iron base, which can be easily fastened to the bench. No method of half-soling is now used on common work, except that of iron last and wire clinch nails. The writer of this has been in the business 20 years, and has seen the changes from the old wooden lasts and pegs to the modern method, and knows it to be complete.

The weight of this outfit is 18 lbs. Price, all complete, packed in a neat, strong box, only $3.00.

The Home Repairing Outfit No. 2.

COMPLETE BOOT, SHOE AND RUBBER REPAIRING OUTFIT, consisting of 31 first class tools and materials. The No. 2 outfit contains the same articles as the No. 1 except ing the Harness and Soldering Tools, and is gotten up for those who have no harness or tinware repairing to do. Price of No. 2, neatly boxed, $2.00, or with the paper one year, $2.75. Price of No. 1 neatly boxed, $3.00, or with the paper one year, $3.75.

CELERY CULTURE.

Views of Eastern Market Gardeners and Western Celery Growers on Varieties.

An enormous impetus has been given to celery growing since the introduction of the self blanching sorts have been introduced. With proper management celery may now be had nearly all the year round, and consumers have become more discriminating as to the qualities of the different varieties, as is evidenced by the following inquiry from one of the largest celery growers in Ohio: "Is it not advisable for growers to use more of the self blanching varieties of celery, like Perfection, Heartwell or Perle le Grande, and less Golden Self Blanching, and are not the pink and red varieties the best for marketing?" This inquiry was submitted to a number of experienced celery growers in various sections of the country by The American Agriculturist, and their replies, some of which are here reproduced, show how the tastes of buyers differ in different localities and how important it is for growers to acquaint themselves with the requirements of their markets. Nearly all agree that the eating qualities of the pink and red varieties are superior to those of all others, but for market purposes they are almost worthless.

From Hudson county, N. J., came the following: If all the good qualities of the Pink Plume celery were known, it would take the lead. It is a strong, healthy, compact grower, not quite so rank as the White Plume, with no tendency to rust, stems very solid and crisp, extra early and a long keeper, remaining, when properly trenched, in perfect condition into the spring.

A contributor from Queens county, N. Y., writes: The pink varieties are decidedly better than other sorts, whether self blanching or not. They have a rich, nutty flavor. I do not consider the self blanching sorts as vigorous as the green and pink varieties. The absence of color is an evidence of loss of vitality, and as all kinds of celery require earthing up to make them tender and delicious I am decidedly in favor of the pink and green sorts, but it must be understood that any given variety will not be equally good in all soils and localities.

From Middlesex county, Mass., comes the information that Boston market celery leads in Boston markets.

A writer in Ottawa, Mich., tells that all large growers raise White Plume exclusively for the summer trade, Golden Dwarf and Perfection Heartwell for winter. The pink varieties do not take in the market. An Illinois correspondent tells that the red kind has not made its way in his markets as yet. In Bureau county the large celery growers commence to grow more self blanching varieties for early trade, such as the White Plume, Perfection Heartwell and others. The reply from Ottawa county, Ills., is as follows:

Three-fourths of all the celery seen in our markets is Henderson's White Plume, for the reason that it bleaches earliest. The green sorts are far superior in quality, provided they are well bleached, but the pink celery is certainly the best of all.

Electric Culture.

Professor Bailey of Cornell university shows that this fact is mainly owing to the careful compilation of data which has been made by himself. He shows that the effect of the light is marked even at a distance of 100 feet. From his experiments are drawn the following conclusions: The influence of the electric arc light upon greenhouse plants is greatly modified by the use of a clear glass globe, or the interposition of a glass roof. Plants which are much improved by a naked light may be benefited by a protected light. The light can be suspended even above the house with good effect. As a rule plants are earlier under the electric light than when grown under ordinary conditions. Lettuce is greatly forced and improved by this light. An average of five hours of light per night hastened maturity from a week to ten days at a distance of from 10 to 12 feet. At 40 feet, with diffused light, the effect was striking. The light appeared to injure young, newly transplanted plants. Radishes were benefited by the light. Cauliflowers grew taller and made fewer and smaller heads.

Cotton Seed as Feed.

The Oklahoma experiment station sends out the following: It may be advisable to use moderate quantities of cotton seed in connection with corn or Kaffir or where the chief reliance is on corn or Kaffir stover or prairie hay. The hulls, which can be bought at low prices at the cottonseed mills, have considerable feeding value, but are not suitable as the sole food of any class of stock. It will be found advisable to mix the seed with grain or other food rather than to feed it alone. The lint left on the seed may be considered objectionable, but it very rarely causes trouble, except with hogs. It is not advisable to feed whole cotton seed to hogs.

To Keep Rabbits From Trees.

A Nebraska correspondent, writing to Prairie Farmer, says:

Make a thick whitewash by dissolving a fresh lump of lime. When the lime is slacking, add under cover a half pound of pine tar. When the wash is prepared, add a fourth of a pound of powdered red pepper. Rake away the rubbish around the trees and apply the wash. Rabbits and mice will not trouble them. I have used it many years. It is a good protection from sun the next season.

Pasturing Cows.

The Iowa station made a test of pasturing cows on the best blue grass and soiling on green peas and oats, green oats and clover and clover and green corn fodder. The cows gave more milk on the soiling feed than from the pasture, made more gain in live weight and were less annoyed by flies.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co, Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and is made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

A GOOD, RELIABLE WATCH CHEAP.
FREE FOR A CLUB OF TWENTY SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the demand for a good cheap watch, we have made arrangements to furnish this reliable and durable timepiece at a very low figure. This is no "below cost" or "sheriff sale" watch. The price we ask is more than we pay, but so little more that we could not send them a cent less if you ordered a bushel. ☞ There is

No Reliable Watch Cheaper Than This!

READ CAREFULLY! The movement is a 7 jeweled Elgin or Waltham with stem wind and stem set. To set the watch: Pull out the stem until it "clicks," when you can turn the hands at will. Press back in position to wind. By this arrangement you only need to open the watch to regulate it, and your movement is kept as nearly dust-proof as possible. The case is Silveroid (not silver), yet can hardly be told from solid silver. Will keep its color always. Is screw back and bezel, tight fitting, handsome and strong and will last a lifetime. Before the late reduction in price of this movement the retail figure was $12.00. WE GUARANTEE this watch to be perfect, and will refund the money if not exactly as represented. REMEMBER, this is not a Chronometer, nor will it regulate the sun, but it is a good, reliable timekeeper. Sent by express for $5.75. If wanted by mail add 25c. for postage.

This movement in a solid silver case, described as above, only $9.50.

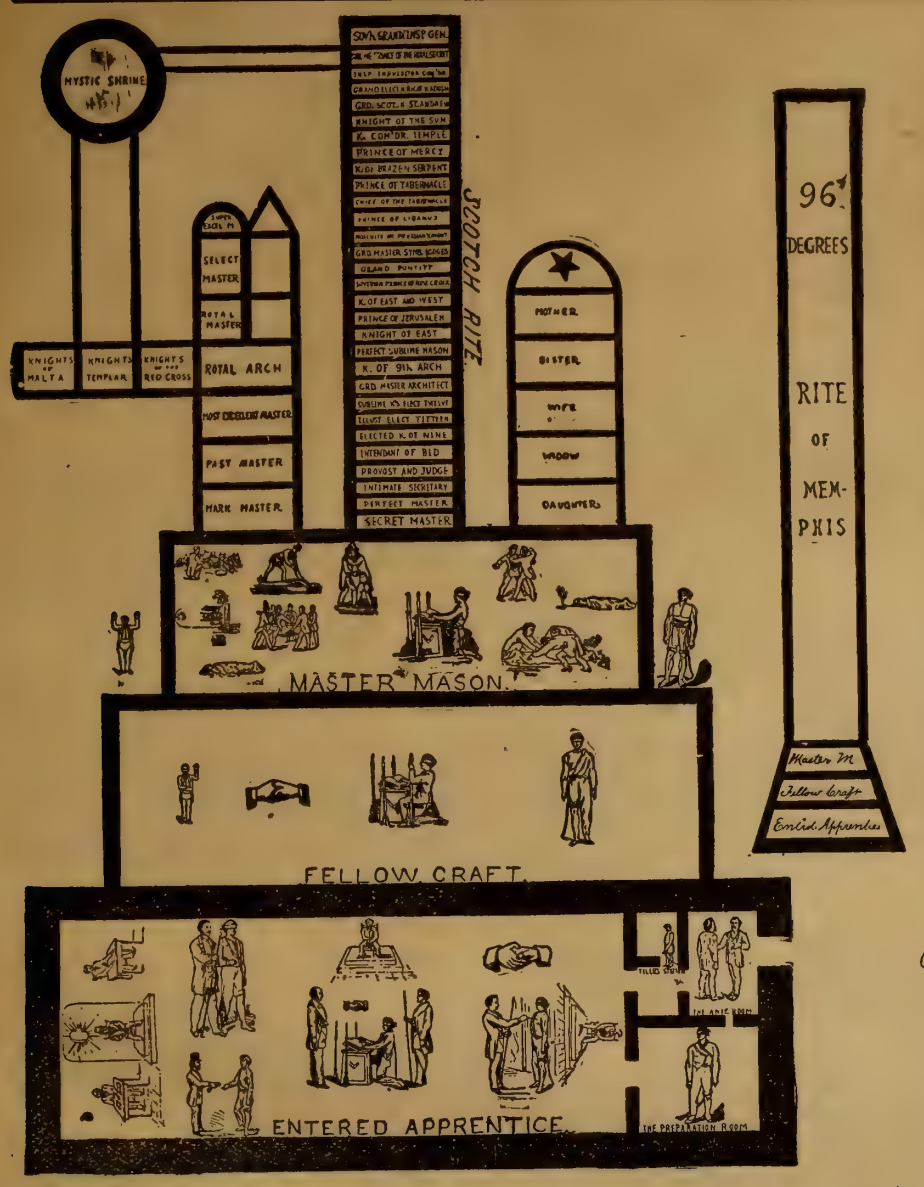
Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge, and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc.



MASONIC CHART.

ILLUSTRATING THE RELATION OF SOME OF THE DEGREES AND RITES IN FREEMASONRY TO EACH OTHER.

The accompanying chart represents one hundred and forty two degrees.

1. The American Rite of 13 degrees;
2. The Scotch Rite of 33 degrees;
3. The Egyptian Rite of 96 degrees.
4. The Mystic Shrine of one degree.
5. The Eastern Star of 5 degrees for Master Masons and for women. These are side degrees, and not genuine masonry.

The Symbolic degrees, or Blue Lodge of three degrees, are common to every Masonic rite, whether American, Scotch, or Egyptian, or whichever of the Masonic rites, named in Mackey's Masonic Encyclo- dia one may choose to investigate.

This chart shows in the Blue Lodge the position of the Worshipful Master and some of the other officers of the lodge. Several positions of the candidate who is being initiated are also shown. In the Master Mason's degree is recognized the murder, burial and resurrection scene so full of religious significance to Freemasons.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. 341 pages, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. 2 vols. Per vol., cloth, $1.00: paper, 65c.
The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive.
Vol. II comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. 274 pages, flexible cloth, 50c.
By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. 110 pages, paper, 25c.
The genuine old Morgan book republished.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry. By Avery Allyn. Cloth, $5.00.
Contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, and the Orange Societies.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Cloth, $2.50.
Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market, it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated."

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 75c.
Contains the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the high r degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual.

Look to the East. A ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Cloth, $2.00.
Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or the Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. 16 pages, 5c.
Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge.

Mah-Hah-Bone; 589 pages; $1.00
Comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. Cloth, $1.00: paper cover, 50cts.
The complete revised ritual of the Lodge Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. Cloth, 50c; paper cover, 25c.
This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor of Evangelical Lutheran church. 10c. each.
This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and, the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias, Illustrated. Cloth, 50c: paper cover 25c.
An exact copy of the new official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the world, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. 15c each.
The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient or the Oriental degree. This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. $1.00, each.
Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated."

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association. 10c. each.
Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Constitution and By-laws of the Association.

Secret Societies. Cloth 35c, paper 15c.
A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev Edward Beecher.

The Master's Carpet or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical. Bound in fine cloth. 400 pages. 75c.
Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. 5c.
By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard, Cloth, $1.50. paper, 75c.

Finney on Masonry. Cloth 75c., paper 35c.
The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By ex-Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasony Self-Convicted. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40c.
This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them.

Judge Whitney's Defence before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. 15c.
Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. 10c.
This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder and Oaths of 33 degrees. 304 pages, cloth, $1.00,
"Composed of Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's, Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees."

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor of United Presbyterian church.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in New Berlin trials 10c.
The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiation by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties.

Grand Lodge Masonry. 5c. each
Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to Republican Government. 15c.

RAVAGED BY FLAMES.

THIRTY BUILDINGS LFFT IN ASHES AT PHILADELPHIA.

Destruction Takes Place in the Heart of the City and Endangers the City Hall and Wanamaker's Great Store—The latter Damaged $100,000.

Philadelphia, Jan. 27.—A tiny spiral of smoke curled out of the cellar window of a big building on Market street at 5:50 o'clock yesterday morning. A few hours later one of the most valuable blocks of bulidings in the city had been consumed by raging flames. It was the block bounded by Market, Thirteenth, Filbert and Juniper streets, in the very heart of the city. A few steps to the right looms the massive city hall; around the corner stands the Pennsylvania railroad terminal, and directly across the way John Wanamaker's great store stretches from street to street. So fierce was the flame and so strong the wind which aided its destructive work that even the building, distant the width of Market street was saved almost by a miracle from total destruction. and Wanamaker last night placed his loss at $100,000. The total loss is variously estimated at from $1,000,000 to $2,500,000, but in the chaos and confusion now existing it is all but impossible to secure accurate figures. The losses are very generally covered by insurance.

Where the Blaze Began.

The fire originated in the basement of the six-story building extending from 1309 to 1317 Market street, occupied in the lower floors by Hanscom Bros., grocers, and above by the umbrella factory of Hirsch Bros. The smoke was discovered by a policeman, who promptly turned in an alarm, but the fire made such headway that before the engines could be put to work the building was a mass of flames. With uncontrollable rapidity it then spread in all directions, destroying about thirty buildings before it had been finally controlled. The fire reached the big tower of Wanamaker's store about an hour after it started, and the energies of the department were concentrated upon saving that building. The tower was entirely destroyed, together with the valuable clock and chimes; the roof all along the Market street front was badly damaged, and a great deal of the stock in the front of the store suffered from smoke and water.

FIREMEN HURT IN CHICAGO.

Seven of Them Have a Close Call and Two May Die.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Seven firemen and two spectators were badly hurt at the fire which last evening destroyed the Williams block at 196 to 202 Monroe street. The injured men are: Jeremiah O'Rourke, fireman, struck by falling wall, will probably die; John Workman, fireman, fell into the building when it collapsed, body badly crushed, may die; Patrick Patterson, fireman, struck by falling bricks, leg broken; Jeremiah Redcroft, fireman, both ankles broken by falling wall; James Barker, captain engine company 21, badly burned about head and neck; Sherman P. Quinlan, fireman. leg broken and body badly bruised by falling wall; Harry Geohegan, fireman, fell from the building, leg badly wrenched; two unknown young men. struck by falling shutter, badly cut and bruised.

IOWA TOWN LOSES A BIG SUM.

Fire Fiend Licks Up Fifteen Buildings at a Loss of $30,000.

Glenwood, Ia., Jan. 27.—The town of Pacific Junction, three miles from this city, sustained a $30,000 loss by fire at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, starting in the store of Ed Rose. A high wind was blowing at the time, and the town being without fire protection the flames were not checked until fifteen business firms were wiped out. Included in the loss was the postoffice, News office, Commercial House, DeLashmuett & Stroud, and Martin & Kroon, both general merchandise; Alleshouse & Harrison, druggist, and the city building and a number of other smaller houses.

HOTEL GOES UP IN SMOKE.

Firemen at Logansport, Ind., Have a Hard Two Hours' Work.

Logansport, Ind., Jan. 27.—The most destructive fire in the history of this city was caused last night by a gas explosion in the Murdock hotel, which completely gutted the building and then went to Elliott's wholesale grocery. Every building within reach of the destructive blaze caught fire and was greatly damaged. The thermometer registered 10 below zero and caused the water pressure to be very low. Every effort was made to save the balance of the block. Many tenants in surrounding buildings were turned out of their rooms by fire, smoke and water, having gone into the stores to obtain shelter from the cold.

Joliet Was Left in Darkness.

Joliet, Ills., Jan. 27.—Fire destroyed the plant of the Economy Power and Light company, and Monday night the city was in darkness. A stove in the basement, used to keep the pipes from freezing, exploded and caused the blaze. The company provided 265 arc lights for the city and 6,000 incandescent lamps for the stores and residences. The plant cost $400,000. The damage is fully $150,000, with $49,000 insurance. The plant will be rebuilt at once.

Destructive Fire at Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, Jan. 28.—The north section of Albert Schwill & Co.'s malt house, extending from Commerce to Second, between Race and Vine streets, a five-story building, took fire this morning and called out the whole fire department. The flames spread to Goepper's malt house and to Overman & Schrader's cordage building. At 4 a. m. the fire was under control and the damage done was between $300,000 and $500,000.

Fire Wipes Up $100,000.

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 26.—Fire last night destroyed the Dillaye block and part of the Butler block and damaged the Keeler block. The following stores were burned out: W. W. Kimball company, piano and organs; New York Cloak house; Palmer's milinery stores. Total loss about $100,000; mostly insured.

Pottery Plant Destroyed by Fire.

Kokomo, Ind., Jan. 27.—The plant of the Great Western Pottery company, of this city, was partially destroyed by fire yesterday, four of the seven buildings being destroyed. The loss is estimated at $50,000.

LAWMAKERS AT WORK.

Synopsis of Proceedings in the Senate and House.

Washington, Jan. 27.—The senate did nothing yesterday but talk. The oratory was on Cuba, the Nicaragua canal bill and the international silver conference bill, which was formally introduced.

The house overrode another of President Cleveland's pension vetoes yesterday. The bill pensioned Jonathan Scott, of the Sixth Iowa cavalry, who is now living Oswego, Kan., at the rate of $72 per month. Cleveland vetoed it on the ground that the disability for which the beneficiary was to be pensioned was not contracted in the service. The rest of the day was devoted to a continuation of the debate on the Indian appropriation bill.

Washington, Jan. 28.—The senate yesterday passed the military academy bill after striking out the appropriation to bring the West Point cadets here for the inauguration parade. The balance of the day was consumed in debate on the Nicaragua canal bill and a motion was pending an adjournment to recommit the bill. Sherman made the significant statement (in view of the fact that he will be McKinley's premier) that the only feasible way to build the canal was for the United States government to do it under a new treaty.

The house yesterday, after a debate of four hours, adopted the conference report on the immigration bill by a vote of 131 to 118. The principal criticism of the measure agreed on by the conferrees in debate yesterday was based upon the extension of the educational test to female as well as male immigrants, on the ground that it might divide families, and to the limitation to the ability of an immigrant to read and write the English language of the language of his native country or residence.

Washington, Jan. 29.—The open session of the senate was comparatively brief yesterday, as more than half the day was spent behind closed doors. During the open session the bill for an international monetary conference was debated, Chandler speaking in favor of it and Stewart against. It is expected that a vote will be reached today. The Nicaragua canal bill and the bankruptcy bill were before the senate for a brief time, but no progress was made. The most important action of the senate executive session was the confirmation of the nomination of W. S. Forman, of Illinois, to be commissioner of internal revenue.

The house passed the Indian appropriation bill and entered upon the consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill, but all interest in these two measures was overshadowed by two speeches, one made by Grosvenor, attacking ex-Governor Altgeld and the other by DeArmond of Missouri, heaping ridicule on Secretary Morton for the recent issue of a pamphlet entitled "The Farmer's Interest in Finance."

Washington, Jan. 30.—The credentials of W. E. Mason as senator from Illinois were received in the senate yesterday. A bill was passed giving a pension of $8 per month to Martha Frank, of Georgia, the widow of a veteran of the Indian war of 1818. She is 102 years old. Bacon offered resolutions to the effect that congress should pass resolutions in favor of arbitration between nations and ask other countries to do the same in lieu of general arbitration treaties. The bill providing for the appointment of American commissioners to an international silver conference was passed—46 to 4. Adjourned to Monday.

GAGE HAS A PORTFOLIO.

Mr. McKinley Selects Him for Secretary of the Treasury.

Canton, O., Jan. 29.—At 7:30 o'clock last evening Lyman J. Gage, president of the First National bank, of Chicago, emerged from the dining room of the McKinley home to fill an appointment with the Associated Press and special correspondents, to tell them the result of his conference with Major McKinley.

"Mr. McKinley offered me the treasury portfolio. I told him I would accept the high honor and fill the position to the best of my ability."

This was the first utterance of the incoming secretary of the treasury on being presented to the party. Gage reached Canton about 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, his train being belated by cold and snow. With him was National Committeeman Cyrus Leland, of Kansas. The McKinley conveyance was in waiting and the visitors were hurried over the snow-covered streets to the McKinley home, from which no hint of what was transpiring within came until dinner had been served and Gage stepped into the office-library, and addressed himself as quoted above. Beyond this he had little to say.

Woman Suffrage Convention Closes.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 30.—The Woman Suffrage convention finished its work last evening, with a celebration of the victory in Idaho. Speeches were made by Mrs. Colby, of Wyoming; Mrs. Bradford, of Colorado, and Mrs. Woods, of Idaho. Other remarks were made incidentally, and the convention adjourned to work without ceasing to add suffrage states.

Senator For Washington Nominated.

Olympia, Wash. Jan. 29.—George F. Turner, of Spokane, was last night nominated for United States senator in a caucus of Populists and free silver Republicans. He received 54 votes. Judge Turner has been a Republican, but in the late election he supported Bryan.

Minnesota State Convention Feb. 23, 24.

General Secretary Phillips expects to visit several points in Indiana this week in returning from the South.

As we go to press there comes an excellent report of the Missouri Convention from Prof. Simpson Ely, which will appear in the next Cynosure. He says the attendance and interest were better than he had expected, and the convention was a success.

In Chicago a careful estimate shows about 4,500 secret lodges, about ten for every church. There are now about 6,100 saloons. Is it not safe to say that every year through these trap doors to perdition ten times more young men go down to ruin than are saved by all the churches?

The Chicago aldermen are allowed to ride free on all the street cars when they exhibit their aldermanic star, and at the same rate they pass on all the trains on railroads whose franchises their votes have secured. They also have free tickets to all theatres and places of public amusement.

The next Cynosure will contain an extra number of good things, among which will be an open letter to Sam Jones from the pen of Miss Flagg; also an account of an interesting interview of Rev. J. P. Stoddard with Sam Jones at his hotel in Boston, in which he admitted that he had taken the Knight Templar degree, and declared that he would never give up Freemasonry.

Since Antiochus Epiphanes butchered a hog on the Mercy Seat in the Holy of Holies there has seldom been a more literal fulfillment of the prophecy, which speaks of the abomination which maketh desolate being set up where it ought not to be, than the boodle aldermen of Chicago selling the city franchises and treating their duties and trusts as means to enrich themselves at the expense of the public. Ten righteous men would have saved Sodom; but ten righteous aldermen are not sufficient to save Chicago.

T. H. GAULT.

Our portrait this week is of one of Chicago's successful lawyers, and one who for many years has taken a prominent part in municipal reform. His youth was spent in Western N. Y. and Wisconsin, and during the war he served his country three years in the Twenty-eighth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, which participated in some hard fighting in Arkansas and around Mobile, Alabama. At the close of the war he entered Monmouth College, Ill., and graduated in 1870, in the same class with his brother, the editor of this paper. Three years later he graduated in the Law Department of the Michigan University at Ann Arbor, and the same year began the practice of law in this city. For a number of years he was one of the Board of Directors of the National Christian Association. He was attorney for the International Sunday Observance League for the Sunday closing of the World's Fair. He is now chairman of the Central Committee of the Christian Citizenship League, and at a recent Prohibition convention in Willard Hall was nominated for city attorney.

Several years ago when T. H. Gault was attorney for the Civic Federation and for the Society for the Prevention of Crime, a large amount of gambling property, such as faro and roulette wheels and poker tables, were destroyed. In one important case the owner of this property was so incensed over his defeat and loss that he followed Attorney Gault from the court room and assaulted him on the crowded street, striking him a heavy blow over the head with a piece of oak, which would have resulted seriously but for the protection of his silk hat. He says Chicago is largely under Jesuitical rule, which may be demonstrated from the fact that the majority of the aldermen are Catholics, and eighty-five per cent of the teachers and more than seventy-five per cent of the city employes. He says: "Secret society influence operates in the court room to an alarming extent, though the proof is difficult to obtain. The great aim of the lodge is to conceal their tactics from the public. But when nearly all the testimony in a trial points only to conviction clear and positive, and the jury decide contrary, what other conclusion can we reach, when the party for whom they find is generally known as a leading Freemason?"

Mr. W. J. Onahan, who for two years was comptroller of the city treasury of Chicago, says: "If the city, since it became a city, had received proper annual compensation for all the franchises that have been ignorantly and corruptly disposed of for nothing, Chicago would to-day have income enough to run its affairs without levying a dollar taxation on real estate or personal property. I can prove it if called upon. Consider the privileges that have been given the steam railways, from the Illinois Central to the last to come in. In connection with these steam railways look at the countless private switches and tracks all given away. Then the street railways, the gas companies, the electric lighting companies, the telephone companies, the water privileges, dock privileges, and I don't know what all. Why, every one of these favored interests which secured their privileges by bribing aldermen and corrupting officials, ought to be millions in annual tribute to the city. I repeat that, if our rights in this regard had been looked after in the beginning and been carefully guarded ever since, there would be no need now to talk about taxes or their injustices and inequalities."

The Chicago Record says: "How much does it cost to pass a franchise ordinance through the Council? There is no set price because one franchise may be worth more than another. The highest price ever paid for aldermanic votes was a few years ago when a measure giving valuable privileges to a railway corporation was passed in the face of public condemnation. There were four members of the Council who received $25,000 each, asd the others who voted for the ordinance received $8,000 each. An official, who was instrumental in securing the passage of the measure, received the largest amount ever given in Chicago for a service of the kind. He received $100,000 in cash and two pieces of property. The property was afterward sold for $111,000.

RELIEF OF LUCKNOW.

BY ROBERT LOWELL.

Oh, that last day in Lucknow Fort
We knew that it was the last;
That the enemy's mines had crept slowly in,
And the end was coming fast.

To yield to that foe meant worse than death,
And the men and we all worked on;
It was one day more of smoke and roar,
And then it would all be done.

There was one of us, a corporal's wife,
A fair, young, gentle thing,
Wasted with fever in the seige,
And her mind was wandering.

She lay on the ground, in her Scottish plaid,
And I took her head on my knee;
"When my father comes hame frae the pleugh," she said,
"Oh! please then waken me."

She slept like a child on her father's floor
In the flecking of woodbine shade,
When the house dog sprawls by the half-open door,
And the mother's wheel is stayed.

It was smoke and roar, and powder stench,
And hopeless waiting for death;
But the soldier's wife, like a full-tired child,
Seemed scarce to draw her breath.

I sank to sleep; and I had my dream
Of an English village lane,
And wall and garden—till a sudden scream
Brought me back to the rear again.

There Jessie Brown stood listening,
And then a broad gladness broke
All over her face, and she took my hand,
And drew me near, and spoke:

"The Hielanders! Oh! dinna ye hear
The slogan far awa?
The McGregor's? Ah! I ken it weel;
It is the grandest o' them a'.

"God bless the bonny Hielanders!
We're saved! we're saved!" she cried;
And fell on her knees, and thanks to God
Poured forth, like a full flood-tide.

Along the battery line her cry
Had fallen among the men,
And they started; for they were there to die;
Was life so near them then?

They listen, for life; and the rattling fire
Far off, and the far-off roar
Were all,—and the colonel shook his head,
And they turned to their guns once more.

Then Jessie said, "The slogan's dune,
But can ye no hear them, noo?
The Campbells are comin'! It's nae a dream,
Our succors hae broken through!"

We heard the roar and rattle afar,
But the pipers we could not hear;
So the men plied their work of hopeless war,
And knew that the end was near.

It was not long ere it must be heard,—
A shrilling, ceaseless sound;
It was no noise of the strife afar,
Or the sappers under ground.

It was the pipes of the Highlanders!
And how they played Auld Lang Syne;
It came to our men like the voice of God;
And they shouted along the line.

And they wept and shook each other's hands,
And the women sobbed in a crowd;
And every one knelt down where we stood,
And we all thanked God aloud.

That happy day when we welcomed them in,
Our men put Jessie first;
And the General took her hand; and cheers
From the men like a volley burst.

And the pipers' ribbons and tartan streamed,
Marching round and round our line;
And our joyful cheers were broken with tears,
And the pipers played Auld Lang Syne.

RELIGION OF THE CHURCH OR LODGE.

ADDRESS BEFORE THE WASHINGTON STATE CONVENTION AT SEATTLE, JAN 19, 1896, BY REV. W. M. HOWIE OF THAT CITY.

In the treatment of this subject it will take no lengthy argument to determine what is the religion of the church. No matter what may be the branch of Christ's church, the growth is from the same root principles. Or, to use the other common figure, no matter what may be the form or ornamentation of the structure which any denomination may build, the foundation stone is the same. All the evangelical denominations recognize that "other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." The first parts of the structure resting on this foundation are the atonement, justification by faith, regeneration, sanctification, adoption into God's family, etc. The church makes the

to the pardon of sin and acceptance with God. The church also makes the acceptance of Jesus as a personal Saviour necessary to individual salvation and the securing of spiritual life. According to the church, there is no forgiveness of sin, no acceptance with God, no heaven beyond, without personal faith in the Lord Jesus. This idea is held because the Bible says, "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

The religion of the lodge is not built upon this foundation. Nor does it teach such doctrines or faith essential to an entrance into heaven. In treating of this religion of the lodge I will only deal with Freemasonry, which has given suggestion and existence to all others. The religion of the Odd-fellows and of some of the other secret orders are similar to Masonry in leaving out Christ and the fundamental principles of Christianity. It is true there are some secret orders, like the Good Templars, whose religious ritual is in harmony with the principles of the church; and there are some secret societies, organized for business or insurance, that like Freemasonry. But some one may say that Masonry is not a religious institution; that it is a benevolent organization. It is as well a religious institution. It teaches the immortality of the soul, happiness in the world beyond, faith in rectitude and morality, and a belief in a divine being. It has religious ceremonies, a religious ritual and religious prayers.

Mackey's "Lexicon of Freemasonry," page 369, says: "All the ceremonies of our order are prefaced and terminated with prayer, because Masonry is a religious institution, and because we thereby show our dependence on, and faith and trust in God." Charles Scott, A. M., once grand master of the Grand Lodge of the State of Mississippi, says: "Freemasonry is founded on the truths contained in the Holy Scriptures, and that its design is to teach those doctrines which essentially relate to the temporal and eternal destinies of our race." He further says: "Masonry is founded on faith in God, hope of immortality, and charity to all mankind." "It is by the practice of these virtues that the Mason expects to find access to Him who is the subject of faith, the object of hope and the eternal fountain of charity." See Stern on Masonry, pages 4 and 5, in letters.

In Sickel's "Freemason's Guide," page 57, we find this language: "And, finally, we shall discover that our rites embrace all possible circumstances of man—moral, spiritual and social—and have a meaning high as the heavens, broad as the universe and profound as eternity." In Mackey's "Jurisprudence of Freemasonry," page 95, we read: "The truth is, that Masonry is undoubtedly a religious institution—its religion being of that universal kind in which all men agree." From such authors we not only see that Masonry is a religion, but we have been given the hint that

THE RELIGION IS PECULIAR.

If it were the Christian religion it could not be said that it was of that kind in which all men agree. Webb's Monitor, page 284, says: "The religious tenets of Masonry are few and simple, but fundamental. The candidate must profess a belief in deity before initiation." Here is brought out the one thing fundamental to Masonry, and that in which all men agree, a belief in deity. "Mackey's Jurisprudence" says, p. 94: "Though in ancient times Masons were charged in every country to be of the religion of that country or nation, whatever it was, yet it is now thought more expedient only to oblige them to that religion in which all men agree, leaving their particular opinions to themselves."

This same thought is presented at greater length in "Chase's Digest of Masonic Law," p. 206: "In our opinion any further religious test is not necessary; and to require that a candidate profess a belief in the divine authenticity of the Bible, or a state of future rewards and punishments, is a serious innovation into the very body Masonry. It is Anti-masonic to require any religious test other than the candidate should believe in a God, the Creator and Governor of the universe." We now see that this belief in a God does not need to be a belief necessarily in the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, for Mackey in his Jurisprudence, p. 95, says: "Under the shelter of this wise provision, the Christian and the Jew, the Mohammedan and the Brahmin, are permitted to meet around our common altar, and Masonry becomes, in practice as well as in theory, universal."

We have now come to a point where we can see a radical distinction between the religion of the church and that of Masonry. The church believes in a God who is the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, but Masonry does not require the uniting of a belief in God with belief in Christ. The individual can be a rejecter of the Christian God, as is the Jew, the Mohammedan, the Brahmin and many others. Yet as we have seen, this religion resting upon a simple belief in a deity meets, according to Masonic authority, all "possible circumstances of man, moral, spiritual and social." Now we come to ANOTHER GRAND DISTINCTION.

Chase says in his "Digest of Masonic Law," pp. 207 and 208: "Blue Masonry has nothing to do with the Bible. It is not founded on the Bible; if it was, it would not be Masonry, it would be something else." The religion of the church is not only founded on the Bible, but all its teachings are drawn from the Bible. The Bible is everything with the church; it is to Masonry only as it may be made to serve its system.

The "Masonic Law," pp. 207 and 208, says: "Blue Lodge Masonry has nothing to do with the Bible," and we can well understand the reason that there is no Christ in Masonry. Christ is the center of the Bible, the great personage with whom all our interests lie as members of the church; but as Masonry neither is built on the Bible nor requires belief in the God who is the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, it does not need Christ in its religious system. It is quite natural that he is left out. Masons desire to use some passages of Scripture in the New Testament where Christ's name occurs, but not wishing to use his name, it is dropped out. 2 Thess. 3 and 6 is used by Masons: "Now we commend you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which ye received of us." The words "in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ" are dropped out.

"THE MILITARY CRAZE."

BY WM. G. HUBBARD.

In certain quarters there is a tendency to militarism that amounts almost to a "military craze" in this country. In nearly a hundred colleges of the United States the young men are being drilled in military tactics. And military men are being crowded into high schools and academies as instructors in military practice. Besides these, there is scarcely a large town or city in the United States but has its military organizations.

And there are some of the Christian churches that are aping the customs of the old war-ridden nations of Europe, and are introducing "Boys' Brigades" into the Sabbath-schools and churches. These Boys' Brigades are said to be for the purpose of getting boys into Sabbath-schools. But a recent report of their statistics show that only about twelve per cent of the boys of these brigades attend any Bible class. Some very distinguished persons have written articles for American magazines, urging that all our American boys be taught military tactics, and the "Grand Army of the Republic" has passed an order in favor of military drill in public schools. The New York legislature passed a bill requiring every boy in the public schools, twelve years old or more, to take military drill. I am glad to say the governor vetoed the bill so that it did not become a law.

What does all this signify? Are we to become a military nation like that of France or Germany, where every young man is subject to draft and is expected to serve a certain number of years?

France has drafted as many as a hundred thousand a year in time of peace. Do we want such a condition as that for America? France has nearly four millions belonging to her army. Germany has four and a half millions belonging to her army; and some one has said, that "every German peasant carries a soldier upon his back." Think of the American farmer with a soldier on his back everywhere he goes. Of course this only means that each peasant has to support a soldier.

Do we want every laborer, every farmer, every tax payer to add to his already heavy burdens the additional burden of supporting a soldier—furnishing him clothing, food, ammunition and pay, so he may be ready to destroy life and property about some boundary line or some question of honor, real or imaginary? If we do not want this condition of affairs in the United States let us head off this effort that would turn us back into barbarism. For even Napoleon said, "War is the trade of barbarians." Dr. Franklin said, "In my opinion there never was a good war nor a bad peace."

But, however difficult it might be to maintain Dr. Franklin's high standard as to past wars, it is quite certain that at present, and for the future, there is no excuse for wars between nations that have printing presses, schoolhouses and churches—the great enlighteners of the world. Every dispute may be settled by arbitration. And public sentiment should no more allow two nations to go to war than that it should allow two individuals to bloody each other's faces.

What do we require of the individuals who have a dispute? We say to them, "Refer your case to the courts of justice." What should we say to the nations who have a quarrel? We should say, "Refer your dispute to a court of arbitration and abide its decision." This mode has been tried by the United States forty-seven times, and the results have been a thousand-fold better than "the chances of war."

And we are going to settle all our disputes by arbitration in the future. Then we don't need a great standing army. Then if we don't, this "craze" about military drill is a wicked waste of the precious time God has allotted us for making the world better.

KANSAS BORDER RUFFIAN CONFLICT.

JOHN BROWN'S LAST KANSAS RAID.

Clearer than thunder in summer's first shower,
On the dome of the sky God is striking the hour.
Do not falter before what you've prayed for so long,
When the wrong is so weak and the right is so strong.

On the 8th of May, 1858, while Hamilton was capturing and murdering Free State men in Kansas, John Brown was holding an Abolition convention of whites and negroes in a negro church in Chatham, Canada West. It was secret, of course, and in it they adopted a provisional constitution and ordinance for the people of the United States. John Brown was made Commander-in-chief, J. H Kagi, Secretary of War, Richard Realf, Secretary of State, and Owen Brown, Treasurer.

While this was going on from day to day, Brown received a dispatch stating that a traitor was in Congress making revelations of his plans and of the convention in Canada. They immediately dispersed, Brown, Kagi and Aaron D. Stevens (Major Whipple) hastening to Kansas where the others joined them soon after. Brown arrived at Lawrence, Kan., June 25, in disguise and assumed the name of Capt. Morgan, a supposed Southerner.

It was rumored that Brown was in Kansas, and the United States marshal was sent in search of him. At this Brown offered his services to the marshal, which were graciously accepted. Brown took him up toward the Nebraska line and such places as he would not likely see anyone who knew him, till the marshal gave it up and discharged him with thanks. Brown then took his men and fortified near Trading Post in a strong log cabin accessible to water and slaves. But for some reason they removed to "Bain's Fort," nearer Osawatomie.

In October, as mentioned in the preceding chapter, the Pro-slavery element had the temerity, so soon after the Hamilton massacre, to renew hostilities by another raid from Missouri. They attacked Bain's Fort, but were repulsed. Brown succeeded, in conjunction with other forces, in driving them out of Kansas late in November.

On Dec. 19th a negro slave came to Bain's Fort and told Brown that he and his family, nine in all, and another man were about to be sold, and implored Brown's help. Next day Brown made up two parties, Kagi commanding one, and himself the other, and went over to liberate these slaves. Brown secured the man and his family, and returned without any fight. Kagi secured the other, but had a fight in which the master was killed, unfortunately.

They succeeded by great haste in getting back to Kansas and in hiding. Brown was accused of the crime, news of which spread quickly over the country, and a reward of $2 500 was offered by the President, and $3,000 by the Governor of Missouri for Brown's arrest. But they could find neither Brown nor the fugitives, for the underground railway was in excellent working order. Strange to say, Brown was not long in hiding, but soon went about making arrangements to convey his refugees to Canada. On Jan. 20th, 1859, they left Lawrence and went to Topeka, where they stopped and made necessary arrangements for their mid-winter journey. Brown was so thinly clad that he shivered with cold, having exhausted his means in the interests of freedom. Securing some clothing from friends of the cause in Topeka, prominent among whom was Colonel Richie, they soon started on their northern trip, taking the "Lane Road" to Nebraska.

By this time the enemy had heard of them, and when near Holton, Kan., they were intercepted by a body of armed men, and a running fight ensued. Brown's party consisted of four white men and the ten slaves, the latter in a covered wagon. Coming to a piece of woods, in which fortunately there was a cabin, they took refuge in that and both parties sent for re-enforcements; the assailants to Atchison, and Brown to Topeka. Brown's re-enforcements arrived first, his friend Col. Richie commanding, and the assailants were routed.

But they had not proceeded far till re-enforcement arrived for the assailants, and Brown was attacked again. A friend, who was in the fight, told the writer that the assailants attacked them as the wagon was crossing a creek, where the wagon was stopped, while the negroes fought like tigers, women and all. The assailants were again routed and two of their number, prominent men, taken prisoner. The re-enforcements accompanied Brown to the Nebraska line, whence he encountered no serious difficulty. In Chicago they received all needed help, and arrived in Canada on March 12, 1859.

This was Brown's last visit to Kansas. The rest of his movements have to do with his preparations for the Harper's Ferry attack, arrest and death, Dec. 2, 1860. A monument to "Old John Brown" was unveiled July 21, 1896, at his old home in the Adirondacks, where he sheltered fugitive slaves, and where his wife and daughters lived while he operated in Kansas.

NECESSITY OF SOCIAL REGENERATION.

BY PROF J. M. COLEMAN

Does our written constitution harmonize with the unwritten? The practical value of an answer to this question lies in the fact that it determines the policy to be adopted in order that there may be a legal basis for Christian legislation in our fundamental law. Every school boy knows that our written constitution is that document which is known as the "Constitution of the United States."

The unwritten constitution is the actual life of the people at any particular time. How far is the life of the American people in harmony with the written instrument? If the life of the people is what it ought to be and only the written document is faulty, then the remedy is plain. All that is necessary is the arousing of the proper authorities to set the machinery in motion for the amendment of the written document. If on the other hand the life of the people is not what it ought to be, there must be a renewing of the public spirit before that new character can find reflection in the form of law. When laws are made by the people they will always be somewhat behind the attainments of the people and not ahead of them. The change in life must be decisive before it takes legal form.

It is even difficult to say whether the Constitution represented the collective mind of the people when it was adopted. Certain it is, that no class was satisfied with it, for, as one historian has well stated it, the Constitution "was wrong from the grinding necessities of a reluctant people." In its un-Christian characteristics the Constitution was a departure from the past State papers in two respects in 1787. It omitted the divine appeal in the oaths of office and also left out the Christian qualifications for office holders which had been in many of the State constitutions previously framed. It seems necessary to emphasize the fact that this was as far as any constitution had gone. In no case had there been a constitutional basis for Christian legislation. In no case had the divine authority been recognized in legislation or the Bible been declared the standard for legal decision.

When the national Constitution failed to include a clause which would have made the Bible the standard for all moral questions in political life, it was no departure from precedent. I would like to insist on this and also on the fact that this omission is not shown to have met with any criticism in the State conventions for ratification. There was criticism of the failure to have a Christian qualification for office and for the omission of an appeal to God in the oath, but none in regard to the more important omission.

Even though the Constitution of 1787 had contained all the Christian features of the State constitutions, there would have been no required Christian standard in legislation except that Christians would have to make the laws, which experience shows to be a different matter. There is a certain unhistorical tendency to magnify "the good old times," and to read into them what should have been there, but very frequently was not, and to bewail the remissness of the present in comparison with the past. A little historical research is too apt to remove to a more distant past the golden age which we had imagined.

The Christian amendment cannot be supported by an appeal to legal precedent for the simple reason that there is no precedent. The authority of Christ and of his law in legislation and court decisions has never been acknowledged by any modern government. We are not trying to go back but to go forward. The kingdom lies in the future and not in the past.

This brings us to the present question as to whether the present written document expresses the life of the people? Are the current methods of industry and politics a rebuke to its negative Christianity? There are few who would insist on such a conclusion. It might enable us to answer the question as to whether the unwritten constitution corresponds with the proposed amendment, if we look at what the amendment means. It demands that "the Bible shall be the standard for the decision of all moral questions in political life." The prohibition of the liquor traffic is a moral question. If the Bible were legal standard a license law would be unconstitutional. Do the acts of the people indicate that they are ready for such a conclusion? The brothel, the gambling-house, many of the business concerns, such as the Standard Oil Company, all these would be outlawed by an appeal to a Bible standard? Does the life of the people indicate that they are ready to vote such a law into effect? How many Congressmen would care to champion opposition to these social evils?

It is the opinion of the writer that there must be a social regeneration by the Spirit before it can take effect in legal forms. The stream will not rise above the fountain, nor law be much better than the people who make it. If all that was needed was to change the Constitution to harmonize with the national life, the task would be simple. If the national life must be changed the task is more difficult. A glance at the attitude of the people in regard to secret orders, Sabbath keeping and other present-day evils, will enable each one to draw his own conclusions.

I do not present these things as reasons for discouragements, but rather that we may see the need for a broader conception of the work to be done. That there shall be an acceptance of the law of Christ as the law of courts and Congress, is as certain as that the kingdom shall come. That will be one of the incidents of its coming. But there will be a social incarnation in the life before it is in the law, unless the method is different from the leaven in the meal. It is a noble work and it will be accomplished in the Lord's time. With the magnitude of the work before us we should earnestly desire a fuller measure of the Spirit to give us power and guide us into all truth. The word is not reformation but transformation.

REFORM NEWS.

FREEMASONRY INSULTING WOMANHOOD.

PRESIDING ELDER'S QUEER WIFE.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 29, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—As the Word of God declares, Eph. 5:11,12, "It is a shame to speak of the things done by the Freemasons in secret." But, while God's command to have no fellowship with them is violated, we will obey God's command to rebuke them. And we do rebuke them for limiting the seventh commandment, Exodus 20:14, which the Lutherans and the Catholics call the sixth commandment.

Mackey in his "Masonic Encyclopedia" is careful to tell us that Miss St. Leger took only two degrees of Masonry, and that Mrs. Xaintrailles took only one degree of Masonry, while the Boston Herald of Dec. 26, 1896, gives us to understand that Queen Lillinokalani has taken the third degree.

If so, the Masons have not only insulted God, but they have insulted womanhood, and by false swearing would defile a brothel; for, otherwise, to make sense of that Masonic obligation they must have changed their adultery clause so as to make it read, "I will not have carnal illicit intercourse with a Master Mason's husband, father, brother or son, I knowing them to be such," instead of "wife, mother, sister or daughter," as the landmarks of Masonry require. Verily, D. D. after a Freemason's name should mean dirty dog as well as devil's divinity or double damnation.

Loathsome as you might think it to be for a virtuous woman to contemplate being made a Mason, yet the wife of the presiding elder of the Methodists told me, in the presence of her husband, that she wished to be a Mason, and that anything that I could say about Masonry would not turn her from that desire. IMPORTANT PACIFIC COAST MEETINGS.

GOOD MAN ARGUMENT WONT STAND.

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 26, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—On Tuesday night before the convention at Seattle, I spoke at the town of Edmunds on the Sound about eighteen miles above Seattle. This appointment was arranged for me by Rev. C. E. McReynolds, district elder, and Rev. N. E. Hough, pastor of the Free Methodist church. We had an excellent congregation. The hall was crowded and the people listened with unabated interest for two hours. Several subscribed for the Cynosure, and a number more for the Lodge Lamp; thus truth will find its way to this place for the year to come. I hope some may become permanent subscribers.

I had a fine home here with Brother and Sister Armstrong, who know how to make a stranger feel at home with them. In fact, I hardly felt like a stranger, as we were all formerly from Ohio, he from the adjoining (Van Wert) county to the one I was raised in. Another feature that drew us closer to each other was, we were old soldiers together. In conversing about the G. A. R.'s, of which he has been a member in the past, he confessed that there were things practiced in the lodge which were very unbecoming, especially a Christian.

The next night I spoke at Tacoma, in the Swedish Lutheran church, Rev. J. A. Levine, pastor. This is a very nice church, and a good congregation greeted me. The pastor and leading members were present and gave their hearty approval of my remarks, inviting me to return again when convenient. The pastor took the Cynosure for a year, and a number of the members took the Lodge Lamp.

Here I had the pleasure of meeting one of Bro. Fenton's converts from the Masonic order, but being so very busy I failed to get his name. I am very sorry I could not find him afterward, as I wanted to get him to the convention to give his experience.

Friday night I spoke at the Mt. Carmel Mission in Seattle to a very good audience. Rev. Johnson, who conducts the mission, is a seceding

CORRESPONDENCE.

CHICAGO MUNICIPAL REFORM.

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 4, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Municipal reform in Chicago is again at the front as a subject matter of deep and anxious thought to all who properly appreciate the importance of the trust of citizenship and the blessing of good government. That our city, which is one of the finest on earth, has been for many years subjected to a debasing misrule, whose effect has been to bind upon its people excessive and unnecessary taxation, and what is worse, to take from them their moral safeguards, is a fact which must be generally felt and deplored. Our citizenship is divided into two classes.

1. Those who consider that liberty does not mean lawlessness, and that the state, as such, should educate, foster and protect the character of its citizenship.

2. Those who look upon every municipal vice as a just competitor with virtue, and that saloons, brothels and other pitfalls whose design is to catch the young and unwary, have just as much right to exist as the best recognized forces of morality. Upon the escutcheon of the first are emblazoned the words, liberty within the boundary of righteous law, and upon that of the other, liberty within the boundary of every man's desire.

Now it would seem to every reflecting man that we should have no difficulty in arranging the contending forces under these respective banners, and indeed we have none in relation to the immoral, vicious and lawless classes. They are to a man in perfect accord with a municipal administration which will allow all evil to run with an open throttle and call the man crank, fanatic and an enemy of liberty who attempts to call a halt upon the vicious and immoral tendencies of municipal misrule. But we must confess with sorrow that there is not the same unanimity and combination of forces among those who claim respectability and social and religious standing. Many of them, through a wrong conception of the nature of government, throw their political influence on the side of civic disorder and misrule.

The man who votes to license the saloon must be held responsible for the maintenance of this terrible evil, which is properly considered parent to every other, and yet this curse to our civilization is supported by the suffrage of those who claim membership in the Church of Christ. If the membership of the Christian church could be to a man counted against the rum power, the existence of the saloon would be doomed. It must make the angels weep to see those who profess to be yoke-fellows with the Lord Jesus Christ really in league with the devil, and pretending to serve the Lord in a church organization when these same ones refuse their allegiance to him in their political relations. To pursue this course is to entirely misunderstand the basis of government.

There are certain great eternal laws in the moral world as positive and mandatory as the law of gravitation in the physical world, and whose penalty for violation is equally certain. The ten commandments may be taken as an example. There are right, not because they are commanded, but they are commanded because they are right. No majority can change the obligation of these laws. Democracy can no more make wrong right, than it can make black white. When democracy is unjust, the injustice is just as wicked as when the sole ruler is unjust.

If our politicians could have learned that law exists in its obligations independently of Congress, legislatures or the vote of majorities, the public conscience would be greatly elevated and purified. As it is, it has degenerated into a Spoils System and a scheme of vile bargainings, and a strife of the immoral classes to get men into municipal control who, by the non-inforcement of law, will secure to them immunity from punishment and safety in the practice of vices in direct conflict with public welfare and directly productive of social disorder. This has been the history of Chicago's municipal politics. So long that any citizen who attempts to oppose this idea of corruption is insulted with circulars and letters of such character as to be unfit for publication.

You will pardon me giving you a specimen of one of the least offensive letters which I received, with many others much worse, while acting on a committee of the Civic Federation, to request and urge our chief of police to suppress the nuisance of newsboys crying their Sunday papers and making the Sabbath morning hideous with their noise. It reads as follows:

DEAR SIR:—Please remember that these who are clamoring so loudly for an unconstitutional Sunday ordinance are preachers who pay no taxes on their often expensive places of business, as also men who own no places of business to pay taxes upon; but many of those who do pay rent and taxes would encounter to them great losses if such an illiberal ordinance is passed. It would mean the impoverishment of the small taxpayers and would reduce progressive Chicago to the deadness of Toronto.

If the Civic Federation attempts to interfere with the newsboys' Sunday business at the behest of the fakirs of superstition, the Secular Union will interfere with the business of these fakirs by giving enclosed leaflets to the newsboys for circulation. So if the Civic Federation desires to be the aggressor on this line of personal liberty we shall be happy to defend it. Notice the Constitution of the United States, 14th Amendment:

SECTION 1. "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges and immmunities of citizens of the United States."

Also Constitution of Illinois, Article 2, Section 20: "A frequent recurrence to the fundamental principles of civil government is absolutely necessary to preserve the blessings of liberty."

Signed, "THE AMERICAN SECULAR UNION."

This letter is accompanied by circulars and pictures so mean, false and degrading, as to come clearly within the law prohibiting the sending of obscene and immoral matter through the United States mails, but the infamous consignment is signed by the American Secular Union, and no other name or place designated which would serve as a clue to find the perpetrators of such outrage. And yet it seems a compliment to our laws when such troglodytes are compelled to cover their slimy tracks under an incognito, but it certainly is a mild indictment to our constitutions if their fair construction affords shelter and protection to such enemies of God and man.

T. H. GAULT.

THE ARBITRATION TREATY.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 3, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Although the arbitration treaty has been favorably reported with amendments to the Senate by the committee on Foreign Relations, there is little probability, according to those who ought to know, of its being ratified at the present session of Congress. While no Senator has specifically said as much, it is easily inferred from public remarks made by several of them that some of the opposition to immediate action on the treaty arises from an idea that promptness in ratifying the treaty would cause the Senate to lose prestige in English eyes. There is very little doubt that some of the Senators who as yet have only stated their desire to have the treaty fully considered and discussed before being disposed of, are at heart opposed to the treaty either amended or unamended; but hesitate to make an open fight upon it because of the strong public opinion which favors it, and which is hourly making itself felt, if not heeded, by Senators.

The Christian Endeavorers of New Jersey have submitted a petition, through Senator Sewell, asking that the bill which has been passed by the House, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquor in the Capitol building, be passed by the Senate, and a letter has been received by the Senate committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, from Miss Frances E. Willard, President of the National W. C. T. U., in advocacy of the passage of the same bill. Miss Willard says in her letter: "The sentiment against the sale of intoxicants at our Capitol buildings, and especially at the national capital is strong. It is not a question of legalizing the traffic in general, but simply whether it is right to have temptations placed continually before the law-makers of this great self-governing nation." The bill amending the liquor license laws of the District of Columbia has been favorably reported to the Senate; also, the bill prohibiting the sale of intoxicants in the Capitol. The last bill might have been passed this week had not Senator Hill objected when Senator Morrill asked for unanimous consent to take it up and pass it. C. A. S.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS

L. WOODRUFF, BINGHAMTON, N, Y., DEC. 22, 1896.—People don't want to be made better, many of them; they hug their chains and love darkness.

REV. C. C. POTTER, IRETON, IA., JAN. 22, 1897.—You are giving us a grand, good paper, and I wish I had about $1,000 to help you in the great reform work.

CYRUS WAY, WHITTIER, CAL., JAN. 5, 1897.—I am opposed to secret societies. I joined the G. A. R., but every time we met the commander asked us, "What was the fate of all traitors?" Response, "Death."

A. BRANSON, NEW SHARON, IA.—I have received a good many letters of inquiry from the advertisement in your paper, and think I will get a number of orders. We are very much interested in the Cynosure. My boys read a great part of it, and I feel sure they will never be caught in the traps.

MRS. HATTIE E. POWERS, OF THE BEACON LIGHT, PHILADELPHIA, JAN. 28, 1897.—It is our privilege and pleasure to welcome to the Beacon Light and "prophet's chamber," Elder Wm. E. Brown, of Washington, D. C. In him are blended those rare combinations, the scholar and Christian humility. We recognize in him the sent of God in answer to prayer for help to scatter the light. He addressed our meeting with great acceptance this afternoon, and will speak again on Saturday evening.

REV. A. J. MCFARLAND, D. D, BEAVER FALLS, PA., JAN. 4, 1897.—I am heartily in sympathy with the work of the National Christian Association, and I preach to a congregation who will endure sound doctrine on the subject of the lodge, and in a church which does not permit to remain in her communion any member of an oath-bound secret society. I have been associate in this work before, and am only sorry I am not able to contribute more largely to the expenses of the work you have in prospect.

REV. N. S. SMITH, RODMAN, N. Y., JAN. 30, 1897.—I hope your work of reform will go on. No tongue can tell its vast importance. I have long thought the Cynosure the most unpopular and by far the most useful and indispensable of papers. I believe it should reach seventy million readers before another Presidential campaign, so that the people will know what is the matter. There are five million secretists lending every energy to deceive the people and prevent them from knowing what ails the nation. Like Rev. Wm. Fenton, let no parley be made with secret lodgery, but boldly proclaim that it is of the devil and that it must encounter the vengeance of the Almighty. Let there also be believing and all prevailing prayer. May the God of Jacob bless you and make you strong for battle.

LETTERS TO THE SEATTLE CONVENTION.

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 19, 1897.

Rev. P. B. Williams, et al, Committee Anti-secret Association.

GENTLEMEN:—I attended your meeting last night to learn something about your organized crusade against the powers of darkness. I am not a sudden convert to the cause, but have believed all my life that national as well as social danger lurked in the miasmatic shadows of the secret lodge room.

I am not a church member, and may be on that account perhaps not eligible to join forces with you, as my religion is of the Thomas Paine variety? But every true liberalist is a sincere admirer of truth, fairness and righteousness, come they in whatever shape they may, and hence must be a good citizen wherever you find him. All liberals are not of bad character although some are, as can also be found such in the ranks of those of every shade of religious belief.

In case any liberals organize a battalion to cooperate with you to rout the midnight dagger of sworn secrecy from the strongholds of plotters against all those upon the outside of their pale, you can count me as a volunteer to serve "during the war," or until our united efforts shall have been crowned with the blessings of success.

It is to be regretted that the campaign opens here at this particular time of a money famine, when we land owners are engaged in a life and death struggle against the monster devil-fish of confiscatory taxation, whose insatiate tenticles are constantly thrust into our pockets and extracting our twenty-dollar gold pieces faster than we can laboriously place them there.

The sinews of war—money—are of course necessary to defray legitimate expense. A sincere person will always verify his convictions by going down in his pockets, if he have one! But as many of us have pockets attenuated by hard times, you will not assume financial reserve as any index of insincerity or mere hypocritical longings for a spasmodic notoriety.

In your first assemblage here last night, I cast my eye over the audience and was greatly surprised to see a vacancy of the plug-hatted, silk-dressed and bejeweled beauty of "the 400," as well as progressive (?) divines and aristocratic church-goers of our city. Waiting to test its popularity, eh? in this battle of right against wrong. I bid you a hearty good speed.

Respectfully yours, MELODY CHOIR.

Madison and 10th Ave, opposite Jesuit College.

FROM BISHOP WM DILLON.

To the Seattle Anti secret Convention.

DEAR BRETHREN IN THE CAUSE OF REFORM:—Christianity is a spirit and a life, the object of which is to bring selfish, fallen man back into harmony with God, and to make of him a safe being to inhabit heaven. Sin has marred man, blinded him; and while there lives in him a disposition to worship, he is easily befooled with vain substitutes. Men in their blindness call evil good and good evil; put darkness for light and regard light as darkness.

Among the vain substitutes none have deceived men more successfully than the secret lodge system. It is adapted to man's depravity and meets the response of his selfishness. They name it benevolence, yet it is not so good as life insurance, does not so often pay returns; and life insurance is on business principles, set to a scale in which the insured appoint the company their guardian to take their money and use it, and make more for them than they could make of it themselves, and a large slice for the company.

Lodge charity is the concentrated essence of full fledged selfishness. "I will look after you when you are sick if you can give me a sign. I will help you when in distress if you are of my lodge. I will not debauch your wife, sister, mother or daughter, if you are of my degree. I I will sell you coal oil cheaply if you belong to my farmer's club. I will not defraud a brother of this degree to the amount of one cent, I knowing him to be such." and other like fruit, born of total depravity, is lodge morality. But to the spiritual man such loathsome putridity with a little ipecacuanha would nauseate and serve as it did Jonah's whale.

That church men can remain in the lodge, as approving participators, proves the want of true piety. The recent happenings, such as the case of Mr. E. W. Curry, in Des Moines, Ia., in which he was so injured that he died from the effect of his initiation, show lodge hazing to be hazardous to life. And a few years ago Rev. Johnston, of Huntington, W. Va., while being taken through the Royal Arch degree, fell into a pit and was killed, "died as the fool dieth," and was buried at Hannibal, Mo. I accuse the secret lodge system of many offenses, and hold myself ready for the proof.

1. They cut across the natural relations of society and set up artificial relations, violating the law of love, and bring forward preferences and partialities which violate the divine law.

2. They often become substitutes for the only soul-saving religion, and rob men of salvation.

3. Where men have both church and lodge, it is such an admixture that it defiles the good, causes the light in them to become darkness, and vainly attempts to give Christ and Belial communion and residence in the same person.

4. Such as administer oaths do it in violation of Christ's highest law. See Matt. 5: 34 to 37. James 5: 12.

5. The death penalties and mutilations invoked are horribly monstrous.

6. The Christ rejection and exclusion of that name, that is above every name, from their prayers and the Scripture they quote is unendurable by every true Christian.

7. The training the lodge gives in concealment and equivocation is opposed to the openness, frankness and transparent truthfulness enjoined in the Scriptures.

I will stop with the perfect number seven, yet I could continue to seven times seven. In fine, I will say that every thing pertaining to the lodge is repugnant to the new nature obtained in regeneration and sanctification. Let no one infer that I hate nor lightly regard lodgemen. If I should clanishly boycott them, or in anyway mistreat them, I would cease to observe the law of love. I owe love to all men, and illwill to none. But this love prompts me to not suffer sin on my brother. He is my friend who helps me out of a fault or apprises me of a sin, that I may be where God accepts me. Hence the anti-secrecy worker is the lodgeman's best friend, helping him out of that which cuts off communication with his God.

Well, all true reforms are unwelcome; when they remove the gains of sorcery they will bid you to depart out of their coasts and country. Dr. Jonathan Blanchard told me, ere he crossed the silent river, that Dr. Lyman Beecher told the Abolition students at the Lane Theological Seminary, when he was there, to go ahead and push the reform cart up the hill and then he would jump in and ride with them down the hill. Where churches have long creeds and short morals we cannot hope to have them co operate with us, but genuine purity and piety enthrones Christ and drives out the lodge. I wish you a good convention, long, active lives for all reformers and pure churches founded on communion with Christ.

Your brother in Jesus, WM. DILLON.

FROM REV. L F. CLARK.

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 15, 1897.

To the officers and members of the State Anti secret Convention at Seattle, Wash

DEAR BRETHREN:—It is with no little misgiving that I undertake to write upon the subject of "Organized Secret Societies." I have no doubt as to the non-Christian, uncharitable, utterly selfish propensity of these so-called charitable institutions, but have much doubt as to my ability to do the subject justice.

I have been a member of the following societies: The A. O. U. W., Modern Woodmen and the I. O. G. T. I can say of the first two named there is no real benefit to be derived from them. They are the source of many evils and are not conducive to spiritual health, but are continually leading their members into temptation, and all manner of sin, murder included.

I know of many who have committed suicide to provide the insurance money for their families, and one who takes his own life is in the sight of God as much a murderer as one who takes the life of another. Another source of much contention is the sick benefit. A member of our lodge in Nebraska was a little bit sick and a good deal lazy; he drew on the sick benefit until there was but very little brotherly love in the lodge for him. Many wished he might die and get out of the way. They claim to only receive well and strong men into these societies; but men and doctors who belong to them will swear to almost anything to get their friends in.

The I. O. G. T., I consider as a wart on the fair nose of the temperance cause. I was connected with this society for many years, and have never known of one drunkard thoroughly reformed through its influence. They can be reformed only by coming under the cleansing blood of Jesus.

The system of secret organized labor in unions I consider as dangerous to freedom of speech, thought and action, and are dangerous to the laws of our country. They try to coerce and intimidate on a contract where union men are employed. If a nonunion man is sent to work with them they will call him a scab, and try to force him to quit. If they do not succeed in this they will quit themselves, and thus force the contractor to allow them to run his business or run the chances of paying a forfeit for not having the building or work completed in limited time.

Notice how unjust are the charges of scab, etc. The man who is called a scab may be a Christian, and superior to them in every respect, while they are often low saloon loafers; yet they will not associate with him nor allow him to earn the much-needed bread for his family. This is secret society charity that is so much applauded at the present time.

I hope God will bless and prosper you in the convention, and in all of this so-much-needed reform work. Your brother in Christ,

L F. CLARK.

THE ABRAHAMIC COVENANTS.

CHICAGO, Feb. 2, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I believe that many, with myself, in view of the near-approaching coming of our Lord to restore all things that sin has wrecked in this earth, are interested in the covenant promises of the Bible pertaining to the earthly millennium. I therefore make them the subject of this letter.

God promised to give Abraham the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession or inheritance. Gen. 13:17, and 15:7. Did Abraham ever possess it? As an answer to this important question, I revise and condense the following, which was originally published in Our Rest:

"Concerning the land which God promised to Abraham, Stephen said, Acts 7:5, 'He gave him none inheritance in it—no, not so much as to set his foot upon;' and Paul also said, Heb. 11:13, that Abraham died in faith, not having received these promises, but having seen them afar off. Under the circumstances, how can Abraham possess the land except by a resurrection from the dead?

"If the covenants of promise to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob had been fulfilled before our Saviour came, how was it that Mary, the mother of Jesus, and Zacharias, the father of John the Baptist, should exult in prospect of their future accomplishment to Israel through the new-born Christ? Luke 1 and 2. If the place that Abraham was 'after to receive for an inheritance' was in the sky (or off the earth), how was it that he took a journey thereto, saw it with his eyes, walked in the length and breadth of it, and sojourned therein with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him in the same promise? Gen. 13:17 and chap. 23 and Hebrews 11:8,9.

"If the promised land can only be seen (this side of the grave) by the eye of faith, how was it that Moses ascended the hill of Pisgah to look at it? Deut. 34:1 4. If the promised land is celestial and not terrestial, how was it that the Lord showed Moses all the land of Gilead unto Dan, and all Naphtali, and the land of Ephraim and Manasseh, and all the land of Judah, unto the sea and the south, and the plain of Jericho, and the city of palm trees unto Zoar, and then said: 'This is the land.' Deut. 34.

"If pious people are ferried across 'death's cold flood' unto the promise land, how was it that the Lord said to Moses, when he was about to die on the Mount, 'I have caused thee to see it with thine own eyes, but thou shalt not go over thither?' Deut. 34:4. If the promised possession of the land of Canaan to Abraham's seed refers only to his multitudinous descendants after the flesh, how is it that Paul says, Gal. 3:19, 'He saith not to seeds of many, but as of one —and to thy seed, which is Christ?'

"If the promise of the land unto Abraham's seed was fulfilled in the possession of it by the Children of Israel under the law, why should Paul say, Gal. 3:19, that the law 'was added because of transgressions till the seed should come to whom the promise was made?' If the promise made of God to the fathers of Israel had become old and obsolete, and gave place to something else when Christ came, why should the apostle say that 'Jesus Christ became a minister of the circumcision, on account of the truth of God, to confirm the promises made to the fathers?' Rom. 15:8; Heb. 11:10.15.

"If the hope of this promise had been already fulfilled to the twelve tribes of Israel, how could Paul say, 'Unto which promise our twelve tribes, instantly serving God day and night, hope to come?' Acts 26:7. If this same Israelitish hope was not Paul's hope, how could he truthfully say, 'For which hope's sake, King Agrippa, I am bound with this chain?' Acts 26:7. If what was promised to Abraham refers to something he was to receive at death, how could Micah say, some thousand years after his decease, 'Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham which thou hast sworn unto our father from the days of old?' Micah 7:20.

"If either Abraham or his seed, the Christ, or his children by faith and adoption, have any of them entered into the promised patrimony, how is it that as yet they are only spoken of as 'heirs' and 'joint heirs with Christ?' Heb. 11:9; Rom. 8:17. How could Abraham be, as the apostle says, 'heir of the world,' unless he is yet to become a lordly inheritor of the same? Rom. 4:13. How can the promised land, or the land of Canaan, ever be any other place than that from which the Canaanites were ejected of old?"

Yours cordially, HENRY M. HUGUNIN.

AN APPEAL TO CHRISTIAN EDITORS.

WASHINGTON. D. C., Feb. 2, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE: — The present Congress, during which it has been impossible to do anything about the money measures that usually absorb chief attention, has afforded an unprecedented opportunity, now almost gone, for moral legislation, such as will tend to what Gladstone defines as the purpose of law, namely, "to make it as easy as possible to do right and as hard as possible to do wrong." Four such measures have already been disposed of righteously in both Houses, and ten measures of like character are half way to victory, each having the endorsement of one House or of a committee or sub-committee or of the District Commissioners or of the Cabinet. These ten half victories can be made whole victories by prompt and general expression of public opinion through the mail box, which can be secured only by the most earnest appeals of the press for the next three weeks.

As Superintendent of the Reform Bureau, the undersigned has endeavored to make the most of this rare opportunity, putting into it not only his time and strength, but also three-fourths of his modest salary for two years, as is shown by the Auditor's reports. The Bureau, inadequately supported because of the hard times and because the churches generally do not yet recognize that reforms are a part of church work, must depend on editors of religious papers to inform and arouse the preachers and the public in this emergency. Please appeal at once editorially, and by publication of some of the matter sent herewith in every issue of February, for a tremendous expression of public opinion in favor of these pending and progressing but imperiled measures, most of which will fail unless greatly reenforced at once by letters and petitions.

WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON.

BY REV. J. B. GALLOWAY.

In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my Gospel. Rom. 2:.6.

1. God will judge men. This is a first principle. God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained. Acts 17:31. This judgment is, of course, future, and is included in what is called the day of the Lord, universal and impartial, when neither wealth nor nobility nor learning nor human intrigue will be able to stay or change the proceedings.

The Lord judgeth among the nations. He puts one down and sets another up. The handwriting on the wall may be continually seen under the red glare of judgments. In the railroad system of signals the red light is just as important as is the white. The minister of the Gospel who thinks he can successfully run the church of God in the enemy's country without a full set of signals is a fool. The true Gospel lamp has four sides, two white and two red, and should be turned according to the written directions of the signal man in the heavens; and with the greater care since this is the world's night. "The night is far spent." Brethren, keep your signals burning at every place of danger till the morning, when

2. God will judge the secrets of men. His throne is a white throne, and "He will bring every work into judgment with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil."

"All our iniquities thou dost
Before thy presence place;
Our secret sins dost set before
The brightness of thy face."—Ps. 90.

In view of these things, with what hallelujahs of praise should the Gospel of the Son of God be received by sinners as such? That he hath died for our sins according to the Scriptures, etc. "That he hath made him, who knew no sin, to be sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him."

Again, there is a mighty contrast between this tribunal and the judgment seats of earth. In the courts here it is often impossible, even when honest effort is made, to reach the secrets of men. But this is not the worst. It is not an uncommon thing for courts to be so corrupt as to connive with jurors, witnesses and lawyers in covering up the truth for the purpose of clearing the guilty.

Witnesses will refuse to testify under the plea that in obedience to another government (which is not another) they have sworn to always conceal and never reveal the secrets or crimes of the accused brother; and the court being in the same condemnation, will join hands in a peculiar way with the conspirators; and thus judgment is turned away backward and justice standeth afar off, etc.

Not so at the judgment seat of Christ, where all things are naked and open before him with whom we have to do. He knows perfectly the crime and the criminal; the sin and the sinner. There is nothing hid that shall not be revealed. Plots and conspiricies concocted behind tyled doors, hidden motives, deeds of darkness, revolting crimes and shameful sins, which must not be mentioned here lest the parties committing them should be abhorred even by other sinners. All shall be judged and every mouth shall be stopped. This judgment is necessary because the greatest moral and immoral acts are done in secret, and consequently they are the best evidence of character. To exempt these would be to exempt the greatest sins and the greatest sinners. We will see then whether or not they will always conceal and never reveal.

3. This judgment will be by Jesus Christ, the Lord's anointed. See Ps. 2. Everything from the human standpoint is now reversed. The rejected One is on the throne, and he is crowned with many crowns. Every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father: those who cried, away with him; those who ignored his mediation and left his name out of their prayers; those who mutilated the Word by cutting his name out of it, as in Masonic rituals. Those who have scorned his divinity and ignored his atonement shall be confounded together; for it still remains that God alone is judge, and that Christ is judge because he is God.

COCHIN FOWLS.

Valuable For Both Eggs and Meat and Easy to Keep.

The four varieties of Cochin fowls give us a selection of colors and penciling to meet the wishes of almost any fancy. The grand golden buff color of the Buff Cochin, the black sheen with bettle green of the Black Cochin, the beautiful pearly white of the White Cochin and the penciled mahogany brown of the Partridge Cochin give an array of most beautiful colors of most pleasing shades. When these cover fine form, found in a well bred Cochin, grace and beauty are combined.

As a general purpose fowl the Cochin has no superior. Pullets hatched in March often begin to lay in September and lay for three months and do not show any signs of sitting. It is true they must be handled with great care to do this; they will lay more dollars' worth of eggs in a year than any other fowls, the Brahma excepted, for the reason that they will lay their eggs, if properly handled, during the season of the year when eggs sell for the higher prices.

As to their qualities as a table fowl, they are the equal of any of the larger fowls; no living man can select by the taste with any certainty the portions of either, when a Brahma, Cochin and Plymouth Rock are all fried and served together.

Most people destroy a flock of Cochins in their handling. Being an inactive fowl, all their feed is transfered into flesh, fat and egg. If overfed, the fatty matter clogs the egg passage and destroys the egg formation. What other fowls of a more active nature consume in running about, these fowls convert into fat. Clipped oats and wheat are better for laying Cochins than too much corn; underfed in reason is better than overfed without consideration.

The Cochin family is made more of in the showroom than any other class. The Buff Cochins are the most popular of the family, though there is no reason for this except the color, for either of the others is fully as useful as the Buffs. The Black Cochins probably lack more in Cochin qualities than the others, but these fine Cochin qualities are gradually improving. Their color is most beautiful and looks well at all times and under all conditions; neither sun nor dirt produces such bad effects on Black or Partridge Cochin as on the Buff and White.

Brains In the Poultry Yard.

Not long ago, says an exchange, an hour was spent with a farmer who, willing to work, is not yet able to see the returns for his labors. Years of experience should have fitted him for success as a poultry keeper, because he likes the business, yet the neglect of a few fundamental steps prevents him from realizing. His henhouses gave no evidence of a thorough sweeping for months; the grain is fed in heaps, where the hens and chicks can gorge themselves. There has been no separation of the flock, and liberal feeding has made the hens overfat. The grain has all been thrashed, at a cost of 5 to 8 cents per bushel, though the hens would do better if they had the work to do themselves. There was no evidence of a winter supply of grit and gravel and no sign of a bone mill or block where fresh bones could be crushed. If that flock pays the expense bill for the next five months, it will do well, yet it was as good a flock of hens and pullets as one would ask for. It is the neglect of these little things which, taken singly, may not count for much, but collectively they settle the question for the man and not in his favor.

Four Points to Remember.

If you wish to be successful with poultry, do not undertake too much at first. Begin with a few fowls and study their habits and wants and then gradually increase their number.

If after purchasing pure bred fowls they do not begin laying at once, don't get impatient. All they want is a little time to accustom themselves to their new surroundings. Then if they don't begin you may make up your mind that their feed is not right.

If your hens do not lay, or lay double yolked or soft shelled eggs, they are too fat, and more wheat and oats (and no corn) should be fed; also require them to scratch for all the grain they eat.

If your space is limited, keep only a few fowls and let the few be very fine ones, as it costs no more to feed a prize winner than it does a scrub.

Pure Bred Poultry.

Stock up with some thoroughbred fowls for breeding next season. Most breeders have surplus stock which they will sell at this season provided they were not sacrificed for Thanksgiving. A trio of pure bred fowls will cost considerably more than a setting of eggs, but it will save a full year in getting into the improved stock. It will pay to save a few of the best hens of the old stock to use as sitters and to lay eggs for the table, and if only one thoroughbred male is kept some of these eggs may be set to produce half bred fowls, which are usually good layers. On no account should any of the half bred roosters be kept for breeding, as they will cause a rapid deterioration of the flock.

DENYING JESUS.

We know that Peter denied the Lord, and that he did this by saying "I know not the man." For this he wept bitterly. Here we may obtain the standard and method of denial. To ignore Jesus where he should be recognized, to refuse him the place and relation that he claims, is to deny him. This is done when prayer to God studiously denies him the place of Mediator. He who leads in a lodge-prayer carefully framed to ignore Jesus, and he who silently joins in such a prayer thoughtfully designed to refuse him a place as Mediator, both together appear in peril of denying him as Peter did. Each may have reason to weep bitterly.

If they have not repented let them read Scripture that applies to those who persist in denial.

"If we deny him, he also will deny us." 2 Tim. 2:12.

"They profess that they know God, but in works they deny him." Titus 1:16.

"Whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I deny before my Father which is in heaven." Matt. 10:33.

"He that denieth me before men shall be denied before the angels of God." Luke 12:9.

"Denying the Lord that bought them." 2 Peter 2:1.

"Denying.....our Lord Jesus Christ." Jude 4.

THE VATICAN GRASPING FOR CIVIL POWER.

The article printed in the Cynosure for Jan. 28, entitled "A New Papal Movement," in which the Pope expressed a probable revival of the Pontifical Army at Rome, is comfirmed by a letter from that city published in the Western Catholic News. Some additional references in the Pope's address on that occasion will interest Protestants as specimens of papal "assurance." Speaking of the present condition of the papacy—its subjugation to the Italian government since 1870, and the loss of the Pope's temporal power—he says: "It was a deplorable error of the government to believe that this could continue, since it is a veritable persecution against the church, and persecutions against God and his spouse are always only temporary in duration. In vain does Freemasonry agitate and seek to insinuate itself among the various classes of society." "The triumph of the papacy," adds the letter, "cannot fail to come, for the Pope can be subject to no one, but must enjoy absolute liberty and independence, which must rest on the basis of civil princedom."

The Vatican evidently means to fight for the restoration of its temporal power. The reference to Freemasonry is based on the fact that Hiram Abiff is very largely worshiped in Italy and has set up his temple at Rome, directly under the nose of the Pope. The two secret empires can hardly harmonize in such close proximity to each other. There is likely to be a row. H. M. H.

COVENANTERS AND THE LODGE SYSTEM.

In The Occident, the weekly organ of the Presbyterian church on the Pacific Coast, recently appeared a series of articles written by Rev. N. R. Johnston, under the head of "Why I am a Covenanter and not a Presbyterian." Among numerous reasons was the following:

"The Reformed Presbyterian church bears a constant testimony against the lodge system, and declines to admit to her fellowship or retain in her communion any persons who are known to belong to any of the oath-bound secret orders, such as Freemasons, Odd-fellows, Redmen, Labor Unions, etc. Her members are of one mind, that all such secret orders are sinful or opposed to the mind of Christ, who said: 'In secret have I said nothing.' The language of the church's creed is this: 'Christians should walk in the light. Their doctrines, their purposes and manner of life, their rules of action and conduct, should not be concealed. The formation of secret associations for the prosecution of ends, however good professedly, is inconsistent with the requirements of Christian principle.' And her testimony declares that 'Members of associations, either sworn or pledged to secrecy in regard to the nature and doings of such associations, may not be admitted to ecclesiastical fellowship.'

"All this is verified by the Word of Christ and his apostles. 'Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day.' 'Ye are the light of the world; a city that is set upon a hill cannot be hid.' 'My manner of life, which was at first among my brethren, know all the Jews.' 'For everyone that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved; but he that doeth truth cometh to the light that his deeds may be made manifest that they are wrought in God.'

"That the entire lodge system is not only wrong but hurtful to the cause of religion, and to the best interests of the church, many of her best members know; and that the rapidly increasing secret orders threaten great danger to the commonwealth, many Christian patriots see with alarm. Yet the Presbyterian church does not oppose but rather fosters these orders. Multitudes of her members, even ministers and other officers, belong to them. Some ministers believe them to be an evil, but they fear or do not wish to say anything about it in their pulpits. Thus the lodges largely control the church somewhat as they do the state and educational institutions. Under all these circumstances I prefer to be in a church, however small, whose members love the light rather than darkness."

DANGER FROM MORMONISM.

Last week our Washington correspondent wrote that Hon. John Eaton, ex-commissioner of education, delivered an address in Washington this week on "The Storm Center of Home Missions," that deserves more than a passing mention. He began by saying: "Utah is regarded as the storm center of our home missions, owing to the tremendous influence of the Mormon church in that State. Twenty-five years ago the churches, the schools, and in fact all the institutions of the State, were virtually dominated by Mormons, and were in a miserable condition. Now that Utah has become a State a better condition of affairs prevails.

"But have the Mormons laid aside their worst doctrines? Is polygamy done away with? Who that is cognizant of the real facts can say that it is? Promises of promotion bind together the Mormon people in a united church. It has been estimated that there are in the neighborhood of 50,000 officers in the church." Of the Mormon church he further said: "What was the early history of the church? A record of violence. Look at their march across the continent to Utah. When they reached Utah they declared themselves men of peace. It is true that the days of violence have passed away, but what energy has the church displayed?

"The influence of the Mormon church is felt in all the States of the Union. In illustration of their power it will suffice to say that there are Mormon communities in Michigan aggregating 1,000; Missouri, 3,000; Iowa, 5,000, and Idaho, 14,000. Large recruiting stations are located in New York, Chattanooga, Tenn., and at other points throughout the country. Not many miles away, in one of the most beautiful valleys of Maryland, there has recently grown up a Mormon community of considerable size. The influence of the Mormon church is spreading more than the public are aware, and it is the duty of the Christian church to check its inroads on our people, and extinguish the faith in our land."

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Worshiping the sun may not be a safe experiment.

—What nonsense men will believe if only it emanates from a lodge.

—Have you ever asked seriously whether Satan loves or hates your lodge?

—T. Price, of Arrow Rock, Mo., called at the Cynosure office last week.

—What was wrong in Solomon cannot be right in a preacher of the Gospel.

—Gen. Sec. Phillips wrote last Thursday: "I am among the hills of Kentucky and the scenes of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' in the midst of snow, but in a 'Queen Crescent' day car, in good heart and in Him."

—R. J. Dodds, of Beaver Falls, visited the Cynosure while in the city last week.

—S. McLauchlin, of Hamilton, N. Dakota, and D. J. Ellsworth, of Hartford, Conn., were recent visitors at the Cynosure office.

—Masonic zeal for pagan forms of worship suggests the danger of zeal for pagan doctrine itself, and the essence and spirit of pagan religion.

—Queen Victoria's book will be published in America by the Century Co. There will be 100 copies on Japanese paper at $50 and 600 on fine paper at $15. Both editions are strictly limited and no more will be printed.

—Rev. T. A. Rusk, of St. Louis, called at the Cynosure office last week and left on the table $5 for the cause. He was enroute to preach at Cedarville, O. The church needs more such earnest devoted ministers as Bro. Rusk.

—At Prague, in Bohemia, the police have discovered the existence of a secret association named the Revolutionary Czechia. The program of the members is partly Czech and partly anarchist. The members, who are mostly apprentices, are armed with daggers and revolvers. Seven of the conspirators have been arrested.

—Robert E. Speer, one of the secretaries of the Presbyterian Board of Missions, speaking of the brotherhood of Christians says: "One of the noblest men I ever knew, when he went to college joined a secret society. He came to Christ, and his first act was to sever his connection. His reason was, 'I have joined the Christian brotherhood. I will not be a member of any narrower brotherhood.'" —Temperance people are pleased at the action of the inaugural executive committee, prohibiting the sale of wine at the Inaugural Ball. It is understood that this will be the first time an Inaugural Ball has been held without the sale of wine. The committee is said to have been actuated by a desire to compliment Mrs. McKinley's temperance views. What caused the committee to take this action isn't half so important as the action itself, which cannot be too highly commended.

—The Catholic Standard and Times of Philadelphia says, "That was a fine lesson on the evils of secret societies which was given the other day before the Pennsylvania Senate investigating committee in this city, when a witness refused to give evidence because of his being under Masonic obligation. And the worst of it was that he considered this 'a solemn obligation as binding as anything we hold sacred,' and that if he at all answered the question he should lie. A pretty fix to be in by reason of his being a Freemason. Who then will say that Freemasonry is not an enemy of the public weal?"

lodgeman, and is not afraid to speak out plainly against the whole business.

On Sabbath, at 3:30, I spoke at the Seattle Seminary by special request of the principal, Prof. Clark W. Shay, and the pastor, Rev. E. L. Smith. The audience room was well filled, and students and others gave excellent attention to my address. The district elder, Rev. McReynolds, was present and said, "I wish we could have such plain truth all over this country."

In the evening I spoke on the lodge evil again in the United Presbyterian church, Rev. W. M. Howie, pastor. Here we had a fair audience, there being a few lodgemen present. One man, who was not a lodgeman, undertook a defense of the lodge on the ground of some good man whom he knew in the old country, who was a member. Bro. Howie showed clearly that a man cannot be true to the lodge and true to Christ at the same time. He must be untrue to one or the other.

I happened to meet the brother on the street the next day and explained to him the inconsistencies of a Christian's relation to the lodge. He finally agreed with me in every point. I was sorry he could not stay and attend the convention. Being a railroad man he was called out to Spokane.

Among those attending the convention from a distance I mention, Father Pinkerton from Kent, Wash. His son and family were present from Maro, Oregon, also Bro. Denniston, of Sidney, Wash., and Bros. Stephenson and Templeton, of Fall City. The last named is an Odd-fellow; after hearing me the first night of the convention gave his testimony that I knew what Odd-fellowship was, having given the initiation clearly. The good work is moving on. P. B. WILLIAMS.

THE DEVIL NOT GREATLY DISTURBED.

CAN THE SPIRIT USE SUCH REVIVAL AGENCIES?

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 28, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The worst storm of the season envelops our city. It is a genuine blizzard, blocking street cars and impeding travel generally. The audiences at evangelistic services will doubtless be diminished, but there is sufficient interest to assure a fair attendance. Mr. Moody meets a ready response forenoon and afternoon at Tremont Temple. Sam Jones spoke in the Globe Theatre on Sabbath, and attracts crowds at the People's Temple during the week. There is less heard of Francis Murphy and his work, but he is steadily increasing his roll of men pledged to total abstinence.

Dr. Patterson, from Toronto, Canada, is doing faithful work at the First Presbyterian church. He is pious, orthodox, eloquent, scholarly, and in earnest for souls. Dr. Simpson and his coworkers in the Alliance are holding day and evening services in Berkly Temple this week, besides special meetings in churches, in and near the city. These Gospel "sharpshooters" are picking off here and there one from the enemy's outposts, but entrenchments and fortified strongholds remain unassailed.

The devil, of course, is not greatly disturbed by an occasional loss, while he holds strategic points and has trusted sentinels in positions to protect his interests and break the force of every blow dealt at a vulnerable point. No honest person can question the sincerity of Mr. Moody, and no one familiar with lodge tactics can fail to see that while Dr. Lorimer, Dr. Gumbart, Sam Jones and a Masonic ministry are at the front, the devil will get ten recruits for his lodge while the evangelist gets one for the true church of Christ. Indeed, it is probable that the father of lies is quite willing to exchange the shattered wrecks in his ranks for the choice young men who will be lured within his fatal, secret snares, by the example of his adroit agents, who are thus indorsed and honored before the people.

Sam Jones, as reported, alluding to the riotous dissipation that followed his sealing in the cup of devils, said, "It beat hell." This may or may not be true, but Jones was there, and so far as is known he proposes to stay. The debauch which he so tersely characterizes was given in his honor, and unless he repudiates and denounces it as it deserves, he will be responsible for hundreds of drunken orgies held in recognition of victories over men lured to destruction by his example.

There seems a strange inconsistency in his warning men against going to hell, when he is himself in an institution that he characterizes as even worse. It recalls the case of the rich man, who, "in hell lifted up his eyes being in torment;" but Jones has shown neither the regret or desire to warn others "lest they come into this place of torment," which characterized that lost man. There is this difference to be noted, Jones is the willing subject of the king of that murky abyss, while poor Dives begged for release and relief.

Confronted with cases so enigmatic and perplexing we find relief in the assurance that the masked shall one day be stripped of every disguise and Christ shall render to every man according as his works have been. I do not wish to do anything that would be construed as an attempt to divide the forces or hinder the revival effort, but have been quietly handing out tracts and conferring with individuals. People who are intelligently and strongly opposed to the lodge are strangly sensitive if not superstitiously timid on the subject, where it would seem that if they believed in God they ought to be fearless and outspoken; and I am praying and hoping that Bro. Moody may by faithful words of rebuke lead these timid souls into larger liberty before he closes the special services in this campaign.

PENNSYLVANIA'S GRAND OPPORTUNITY.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 4, 1897.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—However cold the world, and hard the winds blow, there is a fire on the hearth, and a welcome at home. My home coming was hastened by the driving storms of the week past. Days and evenings have been occupied in preparing and sending out the Pennsylvania petitions. The cold weather has undoubtedly hindered their circulation some. Reports thus far are generally encouraging.

One or two of the reports look as if the writer had been reading of Elijah under the juniper tree. Some people seem to think you can never do anything because they never have. It was the judgment of the friends gathered at the last Pennsylvania State Convention that the preparation and circulation of such petitions as are now being sent out and circulated widely through the State would do good. If they were mistaken in this they will find it out.

When the saints are ushered in triumph through the gates into the city, will some doubting Thomas sit on the fence, look wise and exclaim, "You can't do it!" The Christian must do duty. God will see to consequences. What friend is there in Pennsylvania who is well, who cannot secure twenty or thirty names to a petition if he or she tries? A number have secured from four to six pages of names and addresses already. No one knows what good may come from the circulation of these petitions.

Are we simply to fold our arms and sleep while corrupt and corrupting laws are being enacted, because we are not thought to have the same strength as the corrupter? Or shall we send in a burning protest that will at least cause some to stop and think? It is this doubting and holding back when the call comes to move forward, that has hindered all great reform movements. But why should I write thus; the friends are coming forward; we are to have a grand list of names to present to the law-makers at Harrisburg. Note the reports as they come:

Pittsburg.—R M. Steele is seeing to the circulation in the East End.

Allegheny.—Rev. W. J. Coleman is securing large lists.

Beaver Falls.—Revs. Kidd, Glasgow, Johnston, Prof. Coleman and others are securing lists.

Souderton.—Rev. Fretz has a good list.

Steelton.—Bro. White sends two pages and a splendid testimony.

Philadelphia.—Four pages come from Beacon Light Mission, 1231 Dauphin St., also $1 toward expense. Rev. Webster, of the Eighth U. P. church, reports that owing to sickness he has not been able to give attention to circulating the petitions.

Hickory.—The session of the U. P. church send $3 toward expense. A committee of sixteen were appointed by this church to secure signatures.

Chestnut Springs.—Petitions were presented in the Menonnite church, and left at the principal store for signatures.

Stewartstown.—Bro. Israel Gable writes he has secured some signatures; the cold has hindered. Bro. Jacob Myers will take the petitions to the U. P. church in country near.

Lebanon.—Bro. Michael Zug writes of church relations and sympathy, acknowledges receipt of the petitions and adds, "I wish you all success in your undertaking." Bro. Zug is a member of the German Baptist Brethren church.

Parker Ford.—Bro. Holsopple acknowledges receipt of petitions. Pressure of work, sickness, etc., have hindered in their circulation.

De Golia.—Bro. Young sends names and addresses of the U. B. ministers in Pennsylvania and adds, "I will get what names I can to the petitions."

Mosgrove.—Through Bro. Geo. W. Pence sends five lists of names and $1.

Emaus.—Dr. M. J. Backenstoe writes a very cheerful letter. He says: "I will do the best I can with the petitions and return them to you."

New Castle.—Dr. Browne, of the Second U. P. church, will seek to enlist his young people in circulating the petitions. Mrs. Lizzie McClelland, who has done much for reform, writes: "I have secured quite a number of names." Bro. Martin, of the R. P. church, and Secratary Shaw, of the Free Methodist church, are securing signatures in their end of the city.

Forest Lake.—Bro. Geo. H. Hamilton sends $1 and says: "I consider it a privilege to do something for the cause. Will do the best I can in getting signers."

Esther.—Bro. Milligan says: "I will see to having the petitions circulated." He hopes to assist financially.

Mount Jackson.—Bro. Bailey says, "Will help to circulate the petitions. Will see what can be done on the money line." Bro. Bailey met with a serious accident. He has not fully recovered, but we are glad to note he is on the up grade.

Rockton.—Bro. J. H Beer, elder in the G. B. Brethren church where I spoke recently, says he will see to circulating the petitions, and adds: "Everything seems to be quiet here since the lecture. One man said if the Lord would forgive him for joining one lodge he would not join another."

West Middlesex.—Bro. Irvine Caldwell writes that he will do the best he can in circulating the petitions. He hopes to help financially.

York.—Edward J. Chalfant writes: "Petitions are at hand; will do all I can with them."

Masontown.—Bro. A. Debolt acknowledges the receipt of petitions, and expresses a desire to help what he can.

Washington.—Bro. D. F. Caldwell writes a cheering letter. He is pushing along the petitions.

Heller.—Bro. A. Smith writes that he will circulate the petitions on his charge. Bro. Smith is with the Evangelical church.

Corry.—Bro. J. S Amidon regrets that owing to advanced age he cannot help in this work.

Wilkesbarre.—Bro. J. T. Logan, F. M., is pushing the circulation there.

Balm.—Bro. Wm. Thompson, of the R. P. church, writes of an interesting discussion in a literary society. He wants lectures, and will help what he can. Petitions have been sent this week to United Brethren, German Baptist Brethren, Covenanter, Free Methodist and Wesleyan Methodist ministers; others will follow as fast as time and money will permit. Only those who have done work of this kind can know the trials and pleasures connected with it. It looks as if God is to give us milder weather, so this work can progress faster. Who will report next?

By the River.

I sit alone in the twilight gray,
A soft, red glow in the west.
The white winged boats go slipping away,
Or lie on the waves, at rest.

There is restless life in ships that float
On the tops of crested waves,
But sweet peace broods o'er the anchored boat
That the blue wave gently laves.

The voices of those who sail away
Come clear o'er the waters free.
They rise and fall, they die away,
In some sailor melody.

But I think as I watch them sailing free,
So stanch, so strong and true,
That the noblest one in not always he
Who the noblest work can do.

For those who abide in some lowly spot
Marked out by the Master's hand
May hopefully wait, with quiet grace,
Like ships moored close by the strand.

The song dies out in the twilight dim,
The waves flow on to the sea.
My heart goes up with a prayer to Him
Who has made my place for me.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 14.
Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—What our denomination is doing.—Zech. iv, 1-14. (A birdseye view of denominational activities.)

In this chapter the flourishing condition of the Jewish church as restored after the captivity is represented under the symbol of a golden candlestick. This is the symbol used in Revelation to represent the churches of Christ. Joshua and Zerubbabel, the anointed ones, leaders in the restoration, are represented under the symbols of olive trees. These symbols may not only suggest denominational activities, but also our part in them.

Christian Endeavor stands for interdenominationalism, but it emphasizes at the same time the importance of denominational loyalty. This is manifested in no better way than by its constant effort to influence the young people to seek a thorough knowledge of the workings of their denominations in all particulars. Knowledge makes us more loyal to our denominations and more interested in them. Many members of religious denominations know nothing at all about them, and it is not, therefore, to be wondered at that they have little or no interest in them.

The activities of our denominations have special attractions for Endeavorers because they stand for activity, for work. To know what our denominations are doing is to insure our interest and our assistance. We might suggest:

1. What are our denominations doing along mission lines? All our denominations are actively engaged in missionary work, both home and foreign. Do we know all about this work? Do we know the names of the countries in which our missionaries are and the names of the prominent missionaries and the character of their labors? Perhaps if we knew more we would be more interested in this important work.

2. What are our denominations doing along good citizenship lines? Our churches are awakening more and more to the necessity of making men good citizens and to the importance of having Christian men interested in the affairs of the government. What are we doing?

3. Along temperance lines. Intemperance is one of the greatest evils of our day. The saloon educates and fosters intemperance. What is our church doing against both?

4. Along educational lines. Where and what are its schools, colleges and theological seminaries?

5. Along philanthropic lines. What is it doing to show its love for men practically by trying to ameliorate their condition in life and to make life happier and nobler?

Along these and many other general and specific lines of work we may profitably study the activities of our denominations.

Bible Readings. — Ps. cxxii, 1-9; cxxxvii, 1-6; cl, 1-6; Math. v, 13 16; xvi, 13-20; xxviii, 19, 20; Acts ii, 42-47; I Cor. xv, 58; Rom. xii, 1, 2; Gal. vi, 9; Eph. vi, 18; I Pet. ii, 12; Rev. ii and iii; xxii, 17.

Heroes For Their Faith.

So they have marched of old, the missionaries of all the ages of the religion of the incarnation and the cross, idealists, believers, magnanimous and brave, the heroes of our faith. They were all this because they were missionaries. They could not have been missionaries and not have been all this. You cannot picture mere machines or disbelievers or selfish men or cowards doing what they have done. * * * They have been heroes because of their faith, because their souls supremely believed in and their lives were supremely given to Christ.—Bishop Brooks.

From Habit or From Conscience.

Religious declension is manifest when Christian duties are performed more from habit or from conscience or as a mere form than from love. The soul fervor, the devotional spirit, the quickening impulse and energy are wanting. God looks upon the heart and condemns all lack of emotive force. Languid, feeble affection, hence, indicates declining grace, however correct may be the outward deportment.—Presbyterian.

The Spirit, Not the Letter.

We want more common sense in the administration of justice, a brushing aside of the legal cobwebs and as little as possible of "the science of artificial statement." Then we may expect a great increase of convictions for crime and a consequent inculcating on the criminally disposed of a wholesome fear of wrongdoing.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Comfort Ye My People.

Now as ever the prophet's noble admonition should be heeded, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people!" The pessimism of "all flesh is grass" is effectively counterbalanced by the optimism of "the word of our God shall stand forever."—Jewish Voice.

Christian Endeavor Notes.

One Chicago Junior society furnished ten tons of coal for its own church.

The Wilmington (Del.) union has solved the problem of union socials by having the individual societies entertain the union three or four times a year.

"C. E., Comprehensive Evangelism," is the way Rev. Charles Roads interprets our motto, "The world for Christ."

At the Indiana yearly meeting of Friends 560 Endeavorers of that church were present.

Better not sing "Speed Away!" until you are doing something definite for missions.

The Baptist Christian Endeavor society of Ellsworth, Me., has a record of which it may well be proud. Not one of the active members has ever been known to leave the church before the preaching service.

Thirty-three denominations are reported in Illinois' 2,824 Christian Endeavor societies.

The Whaling Industry.

The trials and tribulations of the whaling industry defy the meager justice which the resources of a single paragraph affords. A volume might cover the subject. The difficulty about whaling is the uncertainty of whales. These mammals decline to be regulated by any signal service reporter and refuse in their migrations to respect precedent or the ambitions of the arctic oil works. The consequence is a skipper may cruise the northern latitudes, trying conclusions with icebergs and polar bears, endangering life and limb in a mangy old tub, encountering the perils of storm, wave and Eskimo, and all without sighting a spout or capturing a yard of whalebone. I listened recently to the mournful reminiscences of Captain Green, a hardy mariner of much experience, who after many years of laboring at the oil industry retired to a raisin ranch at Fresno. Owing to the decline of raisins, however, he took to the ocean again, enipped a vessel and sailed into the latitudes of winter. There he found an antique steam whaler, the Reindeer, and for two long and weary years they have kept each other company in the close knit sisterhood of misfortune. Once during the second year they sighted a whale, and Captain Green encompassed its capture. A bowhead it was, and no great prize. Tiring of cold, salt and ill luck, the twain decided at last to go south for rest and provisions. They started together, when something broke on the Reindeer, and she was condemned to delay until the damage might be repaired. How the gallant skipper cursed the misfortune which detained him among the icebergs! How he railed at fate! Two days later a school of whales hove in sight. The captain and crew dashed upon them and in four hours had killed a dozen giants, which meant at ruling prices at least $60,000 worth of whalebones. However, it often happens in the arctic, as in the world, that the darkest moment of misfortune is the dusk that preceded the advent of prosperity.—San Francisco Wave.

Homing Pigeons.

When pigeons were to be sent back and forth, it has been usual to keep two sets, with their respective homes at either end of the course, and when they have reached their homes to carry them back to the places from which they are to be dispatched. An ingenious process has been devised to overcome this difficulty and cause the birds to fly with equal certainty in both directions. Pigeons, for example, whose home is in Paris are confined for several days at St. Denis and fed there at a stated hour every day with some favorite food which is not given them at their real home. They become in the course of time familiar with their new home and its choice dishes. When set at liberty, they start off at once for Paris without forgetting the good things they enjoyed at St. Denis. When they are to be sent back, they are made to fast a little while, and are then let loose at about feeding time at St. Denis. They go thither, and, when they have their own way, time their going so as to be there at the exact moment of feeding. Birds have thus been taught to fly back and forth regularly between places 30 miles apart.—G. Renaud in Popular Science Monthly.

"Made In Germany."

Apparently one ot the chief results of the idiotic "made in Germany" act is to render importers of foregin goods specially anxious to pass themselves off as British manufacturers, says London Truth. Here is a good example: The label round a matchbox extensively sold in London and the provinces bears a sort of trademark in the shape of a sailor's head, with the legend "England's heroes" and the following inscription in red and black letters:

"Manufactured by Martin Harris & Co., Ltd., Stratford, London, E.

"Support English Workpeople only by using English made matches."

This covers three sides of the box. The fourth is covered by a piece of sanded paper to strike the matches on. Remove this paper and you find underneath the further and still more interesting notification, "Printed in Germany."

How He Answered Them.

A well known artist received not long ago a circular letter from a business house engaged in the sale of California dried fruit, inviting him to compete for a prize to be given for the best design to be used in advertising their wares. Only one prize was to be given, and all unsuccessful drawings were to become the property of the fruit men. After reading the circular the artist sat down and wrote the following letter:

The —— —— Dried Fruit Company:

GENTLEMEN—I am offering a prize of 50 cents for the best specimen of dried fruit and should be glad to have you take part in the competition. Twelve dozen boxes of each kind of fruit should be sent for examination, and all fruit that is not adjudged worthy of the prize will remain the property of the undersigned. It is also required that the express charges on the fruit so forwarded be paid by the sender. Very truly yours, —— ——.

—Bookman.

A Pilgrim.

An inspector of schools was one day examining a class of village school children, and he asked them what was meant by a pilgrim. A boy answered, "A man what travels from one place to another." The inspector, with elaborate patience, hoping to elucidate intelligence, said: "Well, but I am a man who travels from one place to another. Am I a pilgrim?" Whereupon the boy promptly exclaimed, "Oh, but please, sir, I meant a good man!" I may mention that no one enjoyed that cheerful jest more than the inspector himself. It made him merry for days.—New York Advertiser.

Economy.

Little Dick—Papa, didn't you tell mamma we must economize?

Papa—I did, my son.

Little Dick—Well, I was thinkin that mebby if you'd get me a pony I wouldn't wear out so many shoes.—Good News.

The Rainy Day Club.

Mrs. Bertha Welby has good reason for calling the Rainy Day club "the club of the century." It is a long time since such an important reform for women was intoduced as this of keeping their skirts out of the mud, and a club whose purpose is to make such a reform general may well be credited with being the most eminent organization of the kind known for a century. Mrs. Welby says that the club will do more for the health and happiness of women than any other club. She has received letters from women in every part of the United States and Canada, asking for information and desiring membership. The slight feeling of embarrassment that troubled some of the pioneers in the movement has disappeared, and women walk about in skirts of sensible length secure in the knowledge that they are admired for their common sense.

At the meeting of the Rainy Day club in Brooklyn a few days ago most of those in attendance wore walking dresses of convenient height, although, as it was a fair day, it was not necessary to appear in the regular bad weather costume. Even on bright days it is well to dress comfortably, with the bottom of the dress at a safe distance from the dust of the ground, and the members of the club understand this perfectly. The prospects of the club are excellent. So soon as it is generally understood there will be thousands of women on its roll of membership, for rainy and muddy days are as common in one city as another and in country places as well. Dame Fashion may have rebelled against the rainy day costume at first, but even she has joined the procession now, and all who wear the sensible clothing have the satisfaction of knowing that they are stylish as well as comfortable.—New York Press.

To Reduce Infant Mortality.

The city fathers of Buffalo, at the instigation of Dr. Wende, backed by the medical fraternity, have passed an ordinance prohibiting the use of tube nursing bottles. Dr. Wende is the efficient health officer who by his sensible methods reduced the death rate of Buffalo about one-half in two or three years. He expects to reduce it still more by means of this ordinance.

France long ago did away with this deadly nursing contrivance, and her physicians claim that thereby the lives of about 100,000 infants have been saved annually. The danger of the tube bottle lies in the impossibility of keeping the tube clean; microbes breed in it and quickly find their way into the infant's stomach and intestines, when the little one soon succumbs to "bowel trouble."

Mrs. Cleveland's Kind Heart.

A pretty story is being told about Mrs. Cleveland that shows her kindness of heart. At one of her big receptions, when hundreds — nay, thousands—of people seek the White House and look for at least a moment's personal recognition, there was once to be seen an old colored woman, a veritable mammy, leading by the hand a small boy. The child wore patched clothing and looked as if he did not always see more than enough to eat. As they approached Mrs. Cleveland he looked anxiously about, and when he saw the way in which people were "hustled" along he seemed rather crestfallen. The president's wife, however, catching sight of him, made a step forward, took his hand, and actually detained the line while she said a few kindly words. As they passed, after the lad had been cheered by a sweet smile, he exclaimed, sotto voce, "She did see me, after all, gran'ma."—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Hot Water Pipe.

A plumber, called in to thaw out pipes frozen up in a cold snap, gave us this piece of advice with his bill: As it is the hot water pipe that is the first and surest to freeze, it is better not to use the hot water at all late in the evening. Keep it out of the treacherous pipes, and you will lessen the danger of a stoppage there before morning.—Philadelphia Press.

Canvas Cloth.

The canvaslike materials are in great demand. Meshes of every size and style are seen, both in solid hued and figured canvas. One of the most open of canvas weaves is suggestive of a fish net and demands a silk lining, which will be distinctly visible through the large squares. There are plaid canvases in fancy color combinations, covered with fine fibers of black.

Tagging the Tots.

The women in New York who are advocating a scheme to have all mothers tag their children so that they could easily be identified and returned if lost deserve to have their efforts crowned with success, and the plan should not be confined to the metropolis. — Boston Globe.

Helen Gould.

Miss Helen Gould has a superb library of the best works of modern English and American authors. There are more than 5,000 volumes in the library at Lyndhurst, besides manuscripts of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. Miss Gould is only 26 years old, but she has crowded many beautiful deeds of philanthropy into her short life. Many charities are the recipients of her bounty, but she gives quietly, and the world at large knows nothing of her largest schemes.—New York Tribune.

Bridal Toilets.

On some of the corsages of bridal toilets the neck is rounded low, the space thus left filled in with shirred or plaited mousseline de soie or a full Russian guimpe of embroidered satin, the sleeve puffs matching this guimpe. When a high close, satin bodice is preferred, it has a battlemented collar band of the satin, with plaitings of very rich lace showing between the stiffened pearl trimmed tabs. Below this a dainty jabot of the same lace, caught here and there with jeweled pins, drapes the front of the corsage from throat to waist.

"I should be glad," wrote Mrs. Julia Ward Howe to some Chicago reformers the other day, "to join in any effort, made with wisdom and charity, to better this state of things, but the burden of years begins to weigh upon me and my powers, such as they remain, are heavily mortgaged."

How Indeed?

"If it wasn't for me, my class in school wouldn't have any standing at all," said Hubert.

"Nonsense!" said his aunt. "Your mother says you are the foot of it."

"I am," said Hubert. "How could it stand if it didn't have a foot?"—Philadelphia Times.

Little Mary's Logic.

Little Mary was sent to the store one day to have some sirup sent up for the table.

"Does your mother want refined sirup?" asked the merchant.

"I think she does," answered Mary. "She is a very nice lady."—Youth's Companion.

A HIDEOUS TYRANT.

LORD JUSTICE HAWKINS THUS REFERS TO DRINK.

After Twenty Years' Experience on the Bench of England He Is of the Opinion That 80 Per Cent of Crime Is Due to Alcohol—Source of Misery and Want.

In the 20 years that Lord Justice Hawkins has sat upon the queen's bench of England he has won the respect of lawyers the world over. His record has been one that has reflected honor on perhaps the most famous of judicial bodies on this earth. He is known as a man of great breadth of learning and acuteness of observation. In the 20 years that he has honored England's judiciary he has made a critical study of crime and its causes. In this investigation the liquor traffic has constantly loomed up before him as the one great fountain of crime. At the Leeds winter assizes in 1876, at the Bedfordshire summer assizes in 1878 and at the Chester spring assizes in 1883 his lordship declared that nine-tenths of the crimes in the various calendars were in one way or another attributable to drink. At Durham, in 1883, Lord Justice Hawkins repeated this same declaration with more emphasis. He said:

"In many a cottage that is denuded of the commonest articles of comfort and necessity article after article has gone to the pawnshop, simply for the purpose of providing that hideous tyrant, drink, and I do believe that nine-tenths of the crime committed in this country—and certainly in this county—is engendered within the doors of the drinking house."

On another occasion he is on record as follows:

"I have thought very seriously as to what is for the most part the origin of crime, and every day I live and the more I think of the matter the more firmly do I come to the conclusion that the root of almost all crime is drink, that tyrant which affects all ages and both sexes, the young, the middle aged, the old, father and son, husband and wife.

"It is drink which for the most part is the immediate and direct cause of those fearful quarrels in public streets in the night which terminate either in serious mischief to one or other of the parties, or in some other cause of crimes of dishonesty. It is drink which causes a man to be impoverished, and if you trace to its source the cause of misery it is to be found in drink."

In Bristol, in 1886, he said:

"There are millions of men who are in their sober moments as quiet and well conducted as men can be, but the moment they get excited by drink, evil intentions and vicious spirits arise within them; hence an immense number of men appear in calendars who never would if they had been sober."

At Berkshire assizes, in 1891, he said that 75 per cent of crimes of violence were traceable to drink, and at Gloucester assizes, also in 1891, he said that more trouble was caused by drink than all other things put together, and that of every 100 persons who got into crime, he believed 80, either directly or indirectly, assigned their fall to drink. At Liverpool assizes, in May, 1895, but a little more than a year ago, Justice Hawkins referred to that terrible habit of drunkenness, which got everybody who had it into trouble.

A TEETOTAL VILLAGE.

Good Effects of No Rum In an English Mining Town.

Some interesting facts have recently been published respecting the teetotal colliery village of Roe Green in Lancashire. Five and twenty years ago the houses of the village belonged almost exclusively to the Bridgewater trustees, who employ most of the men. Today, out of 140 houses, 81 are inhabited by their owners. The Rechabite Tent has a membership of 270, the Band of Hope 286. There is a co-operative store, the property of the village, yielding a profit of 8 shillings in the pound. The chapel and Sunday school have been built by the workmen themselves at a cost of £2,700, and, while, in the United Kingdom as a whole, one in four persons over 60 years of age receives parish pay at least for a part of the year, in Roe Green there is not a single one over this age receiving pauper relief. Clearly there is something to be said for a teetotal village.—Westminster Gazette.

Wretched Teetotalers.

One of the best known stories in connection with the late Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson's advocacy of temperance tells how he had been on a visit to one of the three or four small towns in England which have no public house. Although there were 4,000 people there, the doctor was nearly starving. One day a young medical man came to Sir Benjamin for advice as to taking the practice, and Sir Benjamin, placing his hands on the young doctor's shoulders, said: "Take my advice, and don't. Those wretched teetotalers not only shirk accidents, but, when wounded, heal so fast that there is neither pleasure nor profit after the first dressing."—Westminster Gazette.

Strong Treatment.

The surgeon in charge of the troops of Vancouver barracks has a stern and effective treatment for drunkenness, the main features of which are, in brief, the stomach pump, stomach cleansing with a strong solution of soda, a bowl of hot beef extract with cayenne pepper, an hour's rest, return to work. The malady is said to be on the decrease.—Exchange.

Becoming Civilized.

In the British possessions on the lower Nile shells were formerly used for money, but a few years ago the "sound money" craze struck the country, and now whisky is the medium of exchange. Verily, they are becoming civilized on the lower Nile.

The National Watchman says that England has $91,000,000 invested in breweries in the United States and last year she took out of the country as beer receipts $8,100,000 in gold.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON VIII, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, FEB. 21.

Text of the Lesson, Acts vi, 8-15; vii, 54-60. Memory Verses, 57-60 — Golden Text, Rev. ii, 10—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

8. "And Stephen, full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people." As days passed on and the disciples increased, satan increased his zeal in disturbing the peace. There is murmuring because some thought they were neglected in the daily ministration. This leads to the appointment of a committee of seven Spirit filled men to see specially to the distribution of alms, leaving the others free to give themselves to the word and prayer. The seven were set apart by prayer and the laying on of hands. Disciples multiplied greatly, and many priests believed. Stephen, full of faith and of the Holy Spirit, content to do the humble work of the committee, was led by the Spirit into greater things, for the humble shall be exalted.

9, 10. "And they were not able to resist the wisdom and the Spirit by which He spake." This was in accordance with the promise of the Lord. "I will give you a mouth and wisdom which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist" (Luke xxi, 15). There is a power in the word of God when spoken by the Spirit of God, even through a very weak earthen vessel, which can be accounted for only by the fact that God is in His word, and it is the same word by which He made the heavens and all their host (Ps. xxxiii, 6). His word is like a fire and a hammer to break rocks in pieces. He that hath it, let him speak it faithfully (Jer. xxxiii, 28, 29).

11, 12. "We have heard him speak blasphemous words against Moses and against God." The things that are farthest from our thoughts and that we would be most unlikely to be guilty of are just those which the devil through his agents is apt to accuse us of. Think of his calling Christ a glutton, and of his accusing Him of being in league with himself, and of His being crucified as an evildoer. Imagine Stephen, filled with the Spirit of God, being guilty of blaspheming God. Yet Christ was accused of the same. When such treatment comes our way, let us be thankful for fellowship with Christ (I. Pet. ii, 20).

13, 14. "We have heard him say that this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place." Such was some of the testimony which the false witnesses bore against Stephen. The false witnesses said of Christ that He said He was able to destroy the temple of God and build it in three days (Math. xxvi, 61).

15. "And all that sat in the council, looking steadfastly on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel." His Lord was with him and in him, and made something of His glory to be seen in him. Perhaps it was somewhat as when the face of Moses so shone that the people could not look upon him (Ex. xxxiv, 30, 35).

Chapter vii, 54. "When they heard these things, they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth." When the false witnesses made their false accusation, the high priest said to Stephen, "Are these things so?" (vii, 1). In reply to this he began at the appearance of God to Abraham and traced the goodness of God to Israel down to David and Solomon; then made the nation guilty of the persecution of the prophets, and of the murder of Christ, and of not keeping the law of God. This cut them and led to their gnashing their teeth at Stephen.

55. "But he, being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up steadfastly into heaven and saw the glory of God and Jesus standing on the right hand of God." Thus he was unmoved by their anger and heeded not their gnashing teeth. The way of peace is to see Jesus only and always. Look steadfastly upward and never within nor around. See Isa. xli, 10, R. V. margin. Jesus at God's right hand for us, and the glory which awaits us are enough to lift us above all the things we see.

56. "And said, Behold I see the heavens opened and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God." Heaven opened always shows us Christ or His church either in glory or tribulation. The phrase is found only seven times in Scripture, the other six places being in the following chapters: Ezek. i, Math. iii, John i, Acts x, Rev. iv and xix. We are saved by beholding Jesus Christ as the Lamb of God taking away our sins. We run with patience and grow in grace only as we look constantly to Him, and when we see Him as He is we shall then be forever like Him (John i, 29; Heb. xii, 1, 2; II Cor. iii, 18; I John iii, 2).

57, 58. "And the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul." This is our first introduction to one who figures so largely in the rest of this book and in most of the epistles to the churches. How little he dreamed that day as he minded the clothes of those who stoned Stephen that he would ever be a most devoted follower of Him whom Stephen said he saw at God's right hand! In after days he must often have thought of this day and its events. God had a plan for him to be revealed in due time. See Isa. xlvi, 9, 10; Gal. i, 15, 16. In His own way and in His own time God humbled Saul and brought him to Himself. Doubtless Stephen's testimony had something to do with it.

59. "And they stoned Stephen, calling upon God and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." In Ps. xxxi, 5, it is written, "Into thine hand I commit my spirit." These very words said Jesus to His Father when He died on Calvary, and similar words says Stephen as he dies. It is asked, Where is the spirit after death? Jesus' Spirit—that is, Jesus Himself out of the body—was with the Father. Stephen's spirit—that is, Stephen himself out of his body—was with the Lord Jesus in glory. Jesus taught in Luke xvi, 22-28, the conscious existence of those who pass out of the body by death. The same is clearly taught in Rev. vi, 9-11, and in Phil. i, 21, 23; II Cor. v, 8. The body sleeps, but not the soul. The nonexistence of a person between death and resurrection or the annihilation of the wicked is not taught in the Scriptures and cannot be taught from them without violent perversion of these passages.

60. "And he kneeled down and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep." Here is the Spirit of the Lord Jesus, who said concerning His murderers, "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do" (Luke xxiii, 34). Stephen then went out to be with his Lord, and his body slept. Paul himself was afterward stoned to death and left for dead. But as to his spirit while his body slept or lay dead, see II Cor. xii, 1-4. May Paul's motto be ours, "Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life or by death" (Phil. i, 20).

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

Tuesday, Feb. 2.

W. D. McLaughlin, architect, died suddenly at his home in Sioux City, Ia., under circumstances which point strongly toward suicide by poisoning.

Woodson, agent of the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians, has received a letter from General Porter asking for a number of Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians to march in the inaugural parade at Washington on March 4.

The California legislature will be asked for an appropriation of $100,000 to be used in erecting a miners' hospital.

Postal station A, Chicago, was entered by burglars. A quantity of stamps and $20 in money were taken.

A defalcation of $43,000 has been discovered in the Second National bank of Parkersburg, W. Va.

Wednesday, Feb. 3.

A correspondent in Managua, Nicaragua, telegraphs that a revolution has broken out in Guatemala. Details are not yet obtainable.

The First National bank, of Oakesdale, Wash., has voted to liquidate and notified depositors to step up and get their money.

D. T. Flynn, Oklahoma's delegate in congress, makes formal announcement of his candidacy for appointment as governor of the territory.

Henri Vever's collection of pictures was sold at auction at Paris. An American paid $15,500 for Daubigny's "Bords du Oise." This is the highest price ever paid for a picture by Daubigny.

Hermann Oelrichs, the well-known society and club man and steamboat owner, was sworn in at New York city as foreman of the February grand jury.

Thursday, Feb. 4.

Cullom has introduced a bill in the senate appropriating $100,000 for a new federal building at East St. Louis.

The Missouri legislature has passed a bill making silver full legal tender, and repudiating gold contracts.

The Missouri house has passed by a vote of 77 to 42 a bill prohibiting the playing of base ball on Sunday. It was a great surprise, as everybody thought it would be defeated.

Elias Courtner, 72 years old, residing at New Market, Ind., died after fasting fifty-three days.

Dr. Nansen, the Arctic explorer, accompanied by Mrs. Nansen, has arrived in London.

Friday, Feb. 5.

The First National bank at Griswold, Ia., failed. In its last report the assets were placed at $147,000; liabilities, $80,000.

John Lee, a yarn manufacturer of Philadelphia, has made an assignment to James H. Lee. The liabilities are placed at $43,000.

Judge Owers, the Leadville, Colo., jurist who is charged with being too fond of organized labor, has been prohibited by the supreme court from trying the alleged union labor murderers of Fireman O'Keefe.

The St. Louis authorities will prosecute bucket-shop keepers and close the tape games.

Saturday, Feb. 6.

Postmaster General Wilson recommends an appropriation of $200,000 to cover the expenses of the meeting of the congress of nations composing the Postal Union.

Port Darwin, a small but important town in Australia, has been almost entirely wiped out by one of those fearful hurricanes which periodically strike the coast of Australia, destroying property and very often life.

Henceforth the commissioned officers of the "Volunteers of America," the movement organized by Commander and Mrs. Ballington Booth, will be vested with the powers conferred upon ministers of the gospel.

Charles Radbourn, the noted base ball player, many years pitcher for the Boston and Providence National League clubs, died at Bloomington, Ills., of paresis, aged 47.

The framers of the new tariff law are counting upon an increase of $60,000,000 in the revenue above what is yielded by the present law.

Monday, Feb. 8.

Dr. O'Reilly, family physician to Presidents Harrison and Cleveland, has gone to Europe to bring home his insane wife who suddenly took passage across the ocean while demented.

The house committee on elections will report in favor of Judge Black's title to the seat claimed by "Tom" Watson, late Populist candidate for vice president.

Congress will probably appropriate money at this session to restore the historic frigate Constitution.

Captain I. Smith, president of the First National bank of Mason City, Ia., has gone to California for relief from consumption caused, the doctors say, by inhaling it from diseased cattle.

Mrs. Samona Gutierres, of Albuquerque, N. M., has been arrested on the charge of poisoning her husband, who died suddenly with symptoms of strychnine poisoning.

LAWMAKERS AT WORK.

Synopsis of Proceedings in the Senate and House.

Washington, Feb. 3.—The feature of the senate was a very spirited debate on the conference report on the immigration bill. Gibson of Maryland opposed the report and Lodge defended it. After two hours' struggle the report went over and the Nicaragua canal bill was taken up, Vilas continuing his remarks. Teller also entered the debate in opposition to the measure. Early in the day Chandler introduced a resolution, the pith of which is that the United States will not take a position in favor of the gold standard, and said he would call it up shortly for a speech.

The day in the house was very dull, the whole day being devoted to debate on appropriation bills. The diplomatic and consular bill was passed, and considerable progress made with the District of Columbia bill. Resolutions arranging for the formal canvassing of the electoral vote of the last presidential election, on Wednesday, Feb. 10, were adopted.

Washington, Feb. 4.—The senate got into a deadlock on the Nicaragua canal bill and its friends could not hold a quorum. Vilas spoke against the bill, this being his third day. During the day the Allen resolution questioning the power of the executive to foreclose on the Pacific railways was debated by Thurston in favor of that power.

The contested election case of Cornett vs. Swanson, from the Fifth Virginia district, occupied the attention of the house. Swanson's title to his seat was confirmed by an overwhelming viva voce vote.

Washington, Feb. 5.—The senate Thursday had a lively debate over an effort by Morrill to pass a bill prohibiting the sale of intoxicants in the Capitol building. Hill moved to commit the bill to the rules committee and in a sharp speech criticised "the busybodies" who were maligning congress by asserting that saloons existed in the Capitol and denounced attempts to interfere with personal liberty. His motion failed by 27 to 30. The senate by 35 to 13 adopted a motion to take up the conference report on the immigration bill. The bill was recommitted to conference for modification. The debate on the Nicaragua canal bill was then resumed.

The proceedings in the house yesterday were very dull and almost entirely devoid of public interest. The major portion of the day was devoted to the District of Columbia appropriation bill. Bills were passed to grant a pension of $50 per month to the widow of Major General Joseph B. Carr, and senate bill to increase the pension of the widow of Brigadier General John Hough.

Washington, Feb. 6.—The senate admitted R. N. Kenney as senator from Delaware yesterday, but notice was given that the seat would be contested on the ground of fraud in the election. The credentials, however, were prima facie correct and the esnator was given his seat. The balance of the day was devoted to a speech by Caffery against the Nicaragua canal bill and passing fifty pension bills.

The house devoted the day to the private calendar and passed fifty-nine bills, many of them being for pensions. After a recess a night session was held and twenty-two private pension bills favorably recommended.

Washington, Feb. 8.—The session of the senate Saturday accomplished little save the passage of bills to which no objection was made, one of which was for a soldiers' home at Hot Springs, S. D. In the first part of the day Thurston of Nebraska continued his speech on the Pacific railroads. The Nicaragua canal bill came up and gave way to the calendar. There was some discussion of the Cuba resolutions reported by the committee on foreign relations, but they went over without action. Eulogies were delivered on the late Representative Cogswell of Massachusetts.

The house passed the District of Columbia appropriation bill and transacted some routine business.

CHARGED WITH PIRACY NOW.

Three Friends in Trouble for Firing at a Spanish Gunboat.

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 8.—The steamer Three Friends was seized and libeled upon its return from a towing trip down the coast. The libel charges piracy in that a Hotchkiss gun was mounted at the bow of the steamer and was fired at a Spanish gunboat at the mouth of the San Juan river while endeavoring to land an expedition. The name of the gunboat is not given. The persons named in the libel are John O'Brien, W. T. Lewis, John Dunn, August Arnau, Michael Walsh and Ralph D. Paine.

Judge Locke fixed bond at $5,000, which was immediately furnished and the boat was released upon the special provision that a deputy marshal should be placed on board and have authority to take charge of the boat in case that an attempt should be made at any time to violate the law.

Senatorial Contest from Utah.

Salt Lake City, Feb. 5.—Moses Thacher was asked yesterday for further information about the statement that he would contest the election of J. L. Rawlins in the United States senate. He said there was a petition being signed by members of the legislature with that object in view, but that it was withdrawn because the wording of the document did not properly cover the facts. He says he has no personal knowledge of what is being done, but will make the contest if his friends so desire.

ILLINOIS NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST.

Summary of Important Events of the Past Few Days Reported by Telegraph for the Benefit of Our Readers—Items of Special Interest to Illinois People.

Springfield, Ills., Feb. 4.—The following appointments were sent to the senate yesterday by the governor: Railroad and warehouse commissioners—C. J. Lindley; Greenville; C. S. Rannells, Jacksonville; Joseph E. Bidwill, Chicago. Chief grain inspector—E. J. Noble, Chicago. Chester penitentiary commissioners—T. W. Scott, Fairfield; Joseph B. Messick, East St. Louis; James E. Jobe, Harrisburg. The senate went into executive session and confirmed the new west side (Chicago) park commissioners—40 to 1. The bill to appropriate $20,000 for an Illinois building at the Tennessee contennial was passed and a number of bills introduced, after which recess was taken and the senate Republicans caucused on committee appointments. Later the committees were named, and Little refused to serve on the revenue committee with Dunlap, chairman, who he charged with being responsible for the state deficit. Senate refused to excuse Little, who insisted that he would not serve. The governor's appointments given above were confirmed.

The house held a brief session yesterday, passed one bill, heard a number of resolutions, and introduced a few bills, after which it adjourned. The bill introduced by Craig authorizing the governor to appoint a resident trustee of the eastern Illinois normal school at Charleston was passed.

The first reception given by Governor and Mrs. Tanner, last night, was a brilliant success. Fully 600 guests were present.

Springfield, Ills., Feb. 5.—In the senate yesterday Dunlap replied to Litler's charge that he (Dunlap) was responsible for the state having a deficit. Dunlap declared that the Democratic legislature of four years ago was responsible. He closed as follows: "I am not criticising the actions of the Democratic party in making an appropriation to carry on the business of the state, but for its failure to levy a sufficient tax to meet its obligations." Bills were introduced—providing for a new judicial apportionment, making fifteen districts instead of thirteen; providing for free license to ex-Union soldiers and sailors of the United States to vend, hawk and peddle goods and merchandise in any county in the state; amending the law in regard to banks, loan and trust companies acting as administrators or trusts requiring a bond of $50,000 from such companies in cities of less than 100,000 inhabitants.

There was introduced in the house a bill which should it become a law will cause considerable annoyance to the banks, capitalists and other money-changing concerns of this state. It was introduced by Compton, and according to the title is to prohibit the taking of notes, bonds and other money obligations payable in any other than lawful money of the United States. It is intended to abolish the gold contract and the lease system. Salmans introduced a bill amending the laws in relation to money lending. It provides that where the interest charge is greater than that provided by law both the interest and the principal shall be forfeited.

Springfield, Feb. 6.—The senate was in session just ten minutes yesterday, with scarcely a quorum present. Bills were introduced: To incorporate life insurance companies upon a fixed premium plan, and to authorize assessment life insurance associations to do business; empowering the city council in cities of 100,000 inhabitants or over to declare department stores a nuisance and a detriment to business, and providing for their abolishment; making the larceny of bicycles a felony. Adjourned till Monday evening.

In the house the speaker announced the committees.

PROUD OF HIS WAR RECORD.

Gen. Alger Has Something to Say About Charges Against Him.

Canton, O., Feb. 5.—General Alger was here yesterday on a mission for a friend. He left last evening for home. He talked freely while here regarding reports in the east of an opposition to him coupled with charges against his war record; that he had absented himself from the army in the Shenandoah valley in 1864. These charges were first published in the New York Sun several years ago when Alger was a candidate for the presidential nomination. Alger said he had answered in a Boston paper over his own signature the issues raised, giving a statement of Generals Custer and Sheridan and President Lincoln.

"These statements," said General Alger, "taken in connection with the fact that we were ordered to the Shenandoah valley and engaged constantly from that time until I was sent to the hospital in September, show that I could not have had very much opportunity to disgrace myself or leave my command in so short a time. The whole record with all facts in the case was published by the press of the country in 1891 and 1892. If anything were needed I think the hundreds of telegrams and letters of congratulation being received now from the men who served with me in the field would convince any fair minded person that whoever attempts to smirch my record never saw service in the field or smelled burned powder.

"They should ask the men who served under me for reliable information. If there is a part of my life history that I am proud to leave as a heritage to my children, it is my war record. I can add that Dr. Wooster, of Grand Rapids, says he sent me to the hospital, as I was unable to go with the regiment. He found me unable to be moved."

1 Pegging Awl, complete.
1 Wrench for above.
1 Stabbing Awl, complete.
1 Shoeknife.
1 Shoehammer.
1 Bottle Rubber Cement.
1 Bottle Leather Cement.
1 Harness and Saw Clamp.
1 Ball Wall.
1 Ball Shoe Thread.
1 Bunch Bristles.
4 Harness Needles.
1 Soldering Iron.
1 Bottle Soldering Fluid.
1 Box Rosin.
1 Bar Solder.
1 Directions for Use.

All these tools are full-sized, practical, neat, and cheap; not mere toys They enable any person to do his own half-soling, boot, shoe, rubber, harness, and tinware repairing.

This Outfit is the result of years of study, experiment, and correspondence in the manufacture of Iron Lasts and Repairing Outfits; and its practical advantages need only to be seen and tried to be appreciated.

Our Improved Iron Lasts and Standard are one of the handiest tools you can have about the place. The Lasts are four in number, smooth and solid, 4, 6, 8 ,and 10 inches long, thus enabling one to half-sole all sizes of foot-wear. The Standard is made with an iron base, which can be easily fastened to the bench. No method of half-soling is now used on common work, except that of iron last and wire clinch nails. The writer of this has been in the business 20 years, and has seen the changes from the old wooden lasts and pegs to the modern method, and knows it to be complete.

The weight of this outfit is 18 lbs. Price, all complete, packed in a neat, strong box, only $3.00.

The Home Repairing Outfit No. 2.

COMPLETE BOOT, SHOE AND RUBBER REPAIRING OUTFIT, consisting of 31 first class tools and materials. LIVE STOCK

TERROR TO STOCKMEN.

The Gray Wolf and Its Destruction of Prairie Herds.

One of the greatest enemies of the stock ranger on the great prairies is the gray wolf, known among students of natural history as Canis latrans. It is the largest wolf that roams the American continent and is no doubt the most voracious. It is very tricky in its method of warfare and never fights or attacks in the open. It preys upon live stock in the corrals at night, when it is the boldest in approaching habitations, and its usual method of attack is to jump upon young animals, catch them by the back and in one snap of the jaw break the vertibræ.

In daylight on the plains these gray wolves will follow a herd of cattle for hours, generally traveling in pairs or trios. They will pick out a victim, such as an old cow with a calf, and gradually work in between the cow and the herd, circling her out, as the cowboys call it. And when far away sufficiently from the herders they will pounce upon the calf and kill it in a twinkling.

If the cow shows fight, one of the wolves will slip up behind her and suddenly spring upon her hock and hamstring her by severing the tendon with one quick snap of the jaws. Then the cow falls an easy victim. The wolves spring upon her throat, open an artery with their teeth, and she soon bleeds to death. State governments offer bounties for the destruction of wolves and coyotes, ranchmen put out poison, set traps and hunt for them, but they are steadily increasing in all parts of the west and cost hundreds of thousands of dollars annually in loss of stock. If any means could be devised for the extinction of the race, it would prove the greatest blessing to western stockmen.—Lute Wilcox in Denver Field and Farm.

New Horse Markets.

It is announced that horses from America are finding a profitable market in the Scandinavian countries. A western breeder of horses, H. K. Brinnie, went to Norway with a load of animals, which are attracting great attention on account of their size. The Swedish and Norwegian horses are small and wiry. The American horses have brought from $200 to $400 apiece, and a second cargo was recently shipped from New York.

There is every reason to believe that breeders in this country will be able in future to raise kind, sound, well proportioned, docile, 15.2 to 16 hand horses at a profit.

Sheep Always Pay.

I very well remember the first start we made in the new direction by buying 12 cull ewes, at twice what they were worth, giving a note in payment, and how those 12 old ewes the next spring gave us 21 lambs, and how the wool from the ewes and the wether lambs and half of the old ewes that we culled out and sold because they had no teeth went to pay the note, and how from that day the sun began to rise on our fortunes. As soon as I had a few dollars that I could call my own I invested them in sheep, and from that day to this I have owned sheep—sometimes by the thousands, generally by the hundreds, and occasionally only a few dozen. I have never seen a year from that time to this but that my sheep have given me a balance to profit when my books were balanced on the first day of January. Sometimes it has been small—so small that it could hardly be called a profit—but at other times it has been large, and covering the whole period of thirty odd years it has been fairly good. I have handled other kinds of live stock. Horses have made me some money, cows a little and hogs a little, but no class of stock has paid me so well for the money invested, for the feed consumed and for the care given as has the sheep. Its hoof has truly been golden!—George McKerrow.

Swimming a Horse.

It must not be supposed that a horse always swims naturally and with ease the moment that he is off his feet in the water. The animal under such circumstances has but one notion—to keep his head out of the water and lift his shoulders as high as possible. In doing this his hind quarters sink and he finds himself almost standing on his tail or at least a position three-quarters erect. In such an attitude, if the rider draws up the reins or throws his body back in the least, the animal's hind quarters will sink more and more, his body will take a vertical position, and, beating the water uselessly with his fore feet, he will finally sink. As soon as the horse gets off his feet in the water let the rider grasp the animal's mane, leaning at the same time well forward upon its shoulders, but without touching its head. The rider's knees should be pressed tightly to the horse's sides; otherwise he is likely to be swept off by the water. This is the only position which will enable a man to remain in the saddle and the horse to swim at the same time. The reins must be held loosely and each well to one side.—Horse World.

Still Lower Prices.

Cattle have been selling for some time past at better prices than other farm products, but the average price during the past year was only $4.05 per 100 pounds, which was 45 cents lower than during the previous year and the lowest since 1889. During the year about 300,000 cattle were shipped from Chicago for feeding purposes, and 150,000 were exported out of the country.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and is made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

☞ A GOOD, RELIABLE WATCH CHEAP. ☜
FREE FOR A CLUB OF TWENTY SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the demand for a good cheap watch, we have made arrangements to furnish this reliable and durable timepiece at a very low figure. This is no "below cost" or "sheriff sale" watch. The price we ask is more than we pay, but so little more that we could not send them a cent less if you ordered a bushel. ☞ There is

No Reliable Watch Cheaper Than This!

READ CAREFULLY! The movement is a 7 jeweled Elgin or Waltham with stem wind and stem set. To set the watch: Pull out the stem until it "clicks," when you can turn the hands at will. Press back in position to wind. By this arrangement you only need to open the watch to regulate it, and your movement is kept as nearly dust-proof as possible. The case is Silveroid (not silver), yet can hardly be told from solid silver. Will keep its color always. Is screw back and bezel, tight fitting, handsome and strong and will last a lifetime. Before the late reduction in price of this movement the retail figure was $12.00. WE GUARANTEE this watch to be perfect, and will refund the money if not exactly as represented. REMEMBER, this is not a Chronometer, nor will it regulate the sun, but it is a good, reliable timekeeper. Sent by express for $5.75. If wanted by mail add 25c. for postage.

This movement in a solid silver case, described as above, only $9.50.

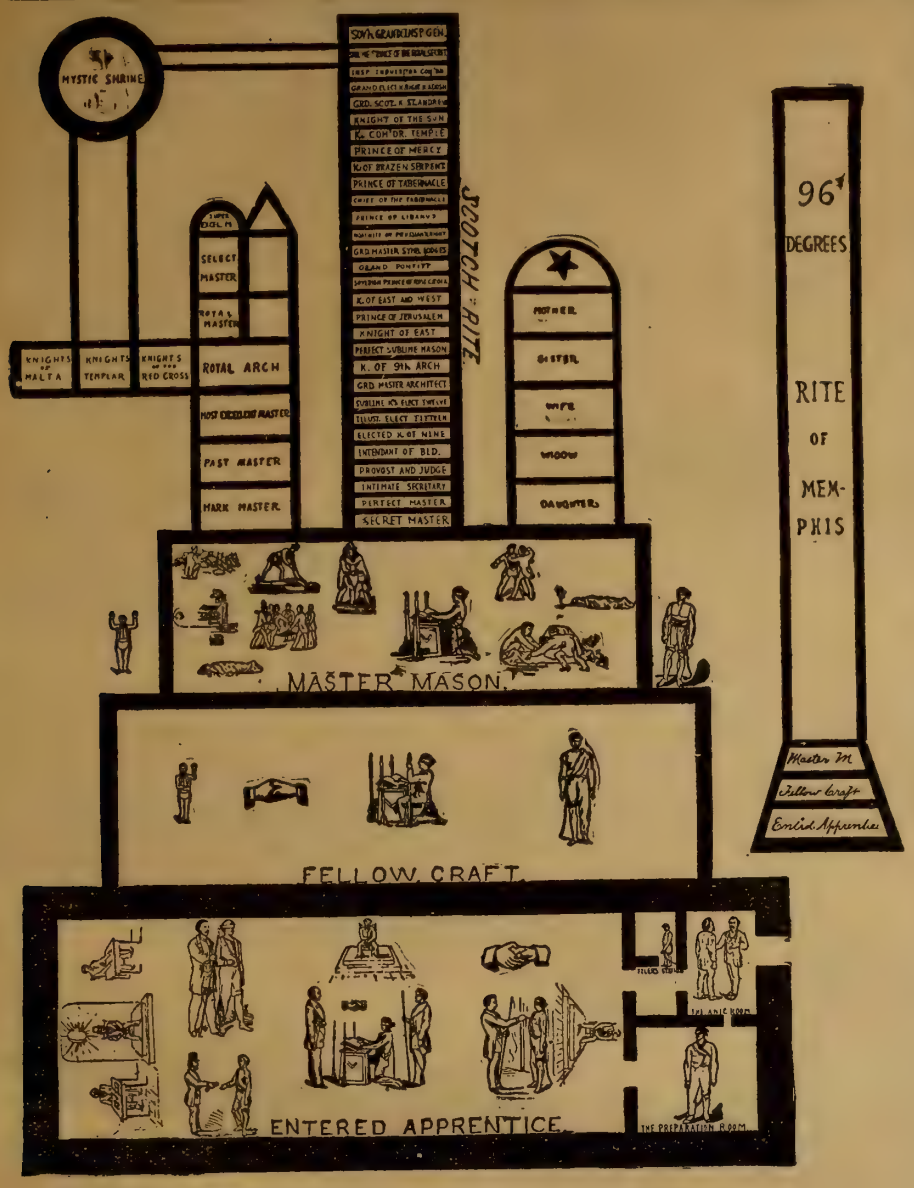
Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover, 25c. each.
Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge, and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc.



MASONIC CHART.

ILLUSTRATING THE RELATION OF SOME OF THE DEGREES AND RITES IN FREEMASONRY TO EACH OTHER.

The accompanying chart represents one hundred and forty two degrees.

1. The American Rite of 13 degrees;
2. The Scotch Rite of 33 degrees;
3. The Egyptian Rite of 96 degrees.
4. The Mystic Shrine of one degree.
5. The Eastern Star of 5 degrees for Master Masons and for women. These are side degrees, and not genuine masonry.

The Symbolic degrees, or Blue Lodge of three degrees, are common to every Masonic rite, whether American, Scotch, or Egyptian, or whichever of the Masonic rites, named in Mackey's Masonic Encyclopedia one may choose to investigate.

This chart shows in the Blue Lodge the position of the Worshipful Master and some of the other officers of the lodge. Several positions of the candidate who is being initiated are also shown. In the Master Mason's degree is recognized the murder, burial and resurrection scene so full of religious significance to Freemasons.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. 341 pages, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. 2 vols. Per vol., cloth, $1.00: paper, 65c.
The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive.
Vol. II comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 19° to 33rd degree inclusive.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. 274 pages, flexible cloth, 50c.
By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. 110 pages, paper, 25c.
The genuine old Morgan book republished.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry. By Avery Allyn. Cloth, $5.00.
Contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, and the Orange Societies.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Cloth, $2.50.
Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market, it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated."

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 75c.
Contains the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the high r degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual.

Look to the East. A ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Cloth, $2.00.
Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or the Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association. 10c. each.
Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Constitution and By-laws of the Association.

Secret Societies. Cloth 35c, paper 15c.
A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev Edward Beecher.

The Master's Carpet or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical. Bound in fine cloth. 400 pages. 75c.
Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. 5c.
By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard, Cloth, $1.50. paper, 75c.

Finney on Masonry. Cloth 75c., paper 35c.
The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By ex-Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasony Self-Convicted. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40c.
This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them.

Judge Whitney's Defence before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. 15c.
Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. 10c.
This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder and Oaths of 33 degrees. 304 pages, cloth, $1.00,
"Composed of Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's, Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees."

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in New Berlin trials. 10c.
The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiation by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties,

TOTAL OF PENSION AGENCIES REDUCED JUST ONE-HALF.

Result of Reduction of Expense—Recommended by Secretary Francis and Agreed to by the President—Details of the Important Change of Arrangements.

Washington, Feb. 8.—The president has signed, on the recommendation of Secretary of the Interior Francis, an important order reducing the number of pension agencies in the United States from eighteen to nine. The object of the order is to effect a very large saving to the government without inconveniencing the pensioners. The secretary demonstrates that by this reduction of the pension agencies the cost of disbursing pensions can be reduced by at least $160,000 per annum. The change was made possible by an amendment to the law governing the disbursing of pensions approved March 23, 1896. It required that all pensioners should, after that date, be paid by checks remitted by mail. Reports from the pension agencies in reply to inquiries as to the operation of the new law are to the effect that under it the pensioners are paid much more promptly; that the possibility of error is minimized, and that upon the whole it is much more satisfactory to the pensioners than the former law.

The agents also state that the pensioners receive their pensions when remitted by mail at their homes, where, being surrounded by family influences, the pensioner is much more likely to make a judicious disposition of his pension money. Under the previous law many pensioners collected their quarterly payments in person, and under the influence of bad associations were often induced to apply these payments unwisely and deprive their families of the benefits thereof. This executive order will go into effect Sept. 1 next, its execution having been postponed until that date in order that no pensioner should suffer inconvenience in consequence of delay in receiving his pension, and to give ample time for the removal of the rolls and records from the agencies discontinued.

The Offices That Are Dropped.

The consolidation was made by uniting existing agencies and the entire jurisdiction thereof, in order that no expense should be incurred by the making of new rolls. The agencies at Concord, N. H., and Augusta, Me., are discontinued, and payments hitherto made there are ordered made from the agency at Boston. The pensioners heretofore paid at Buffalo, N. Y., are to be paid from New York city agency; those at Pittsburg from the Philadelphia agency; those at Louisville and Knoxville from Washington; those at Detroit from Indianapolis; those at Milwaukee from Chicago; those at Des Moines and Topeka from St. Louis, where a new agency is established. A new agency is established at St. Louis because of the better mail facilities there than at Des Moines or Topeka, and for the further reasons that there is a government building at St. Louis which can be occupied without cost to the government; and there is also a sub-treasury there.

And Those That Are Retained.

The following are the agencies and the number of pensioners paid thereat under the new order: Boston, 94,357; New York, 98,833; Philadelphia, 106,735; Washington, 140,265; Columbus, 104,492; Indianapolis, 116,066; Chicago, 125,123; St. Louis, 161,709; San Francisco, 23,098; total, 970,678. The navy pensioners will be paid as heretofore from Boston, Chicago, New York city, Philadelphia, San Francisco and Washington. The estimated saving to the government is as follows: Clerk hire, $105,675; salaries of nine agents, $4,000 per annum, $36,000; contingent expenses of agencies discontinued, $10,182; rent for agencies discontinued, $9,550; total, $161,407.

CHICAGO IS NOT IN NEED.

Mayor Tells Nebraska That Her Contribution Is Declined.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 4.—The senate yesterday morning killed the Canady resolution offered last week and adopted one offering to send corn to Chicago free of any cost to the city if it would be accepted by the mayor.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Mayor Swift had been advised of the action of the Nebraska legislature, and sent the following telegram to Hon. James E. Harris, State House, Lincoln, Neb.: "Answering your message, we sincerely thank the generous people of Nebraska for their proffered donation of corn, but respectfully decline, as the response of our own citizens has been so abundantly generous as to give all the aid that will be required to meet the wants of the suffering.

"GEORGE B. SWIFT, Mayor."

Change in the Immigration Bill.

Washington, Feb. 6.—The conferrees on the immigration bill which was recommitted to them reached a second agreement yesterday. The requirement in the first report that immigrants shall read "the English language or the language of their native or resident country," is changed so as to require them only to read "the English language or some other language." This section was also amended so as to admit the illiterate wives and minor children of immigrants who are otherwise qualified and capable.

An Editor in Luck.

New York, Feb. 4.—It can be definitely stated that J. Addison Porter, of the Hartford, Conn., Evening Post, will be private secretary to President McKinley. A private telegram from Mr. Porter to a friend in this city states that that position and that he has accepted. The conference was completed at Canton yesterday afternoon.

Cuban Women Banished.

Key West, Fla., Feb. 5.—Five Cuban ladies arrived on the steamer Olivette from Havana Wednesday night, having been ordered to leave the island by General Weyler. They were forced to depart from Havana because they were suspected of conspiracy against the Spanish government.

PENNSYLVANIA LEGISLATURE DEPRIVED OF ITS HOME.

Million and a Half Left in Ashes—Fire Routs Out the Legislators in a Hurry—Four Men Caught by Flames in a Michigan Mine.

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 3.—The Pennsylvania state capitol was destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon, the legislative halls are in ruins, and a new structure must rise from the ashes that has served as a meeting place of the Pennsylvania legislature since 1822. The flames, within the short space of one hour, ate up $1,500,000 worth of property. The inefficiency of the Harrisburg volunteer fire department is generally blamed. The house was in session and the senate was about to convene after a few minutes' recess when about 1 o'clock the flames were discovered. Smoke could be seen in small volumes pouring out into the capitol grounds from the house windows. The members were not mindful of it until the great clouds rolled by the windows. Instantly there was a motion to adjourn and all was consternation.

Senators Were Given a Surprise.

In the senate the members were lolling about in their seats. The place began to smell of smoke and soon dense clouds rolled down the rear elevator shaft. Senator Grady, of Philadelphia, quickly warned the senators, and there was a general hustle to remove effects. Fire alarms were sent in and the dignified senate became a mass of howling men, desks being jerked loose and carried out. The same work was going on in the house chamber. Out in the grounds great crowds quickly gathered. The firemen were sending little streams of water to the roof where the flames were breaking through, but it was useless. The fire licked up the little streams of water. The fire soon had possession of every portion of the building and the historic structure was doomed. In an hour there was nothing of it but ashes and debris.

Description of the Historic Building.

The records of this session of the legislature were saved. There is talk of finishing the session either in Pittsburg or Philadelphia, but Senate Librarian Miller says a building can be secured here. Superintendent of Public Buildings Delaney estimates the total loss to be $1,500,000. There is about $100,000 insurance on the building. The burned capitol was built early in the century. The building was surrounded by a park of ten acres and stood on an eminence almost in the center of the city. The main structure was two and one-half stories high, surmounted by a large dome from which a fine view of the surrounding country could be had. The capitol's dimensions were: Length, 180 feet; width, 80 feet. The corner-stone was laid on May 31, 1819, by Governor Findlay. The building was finished in 1821, and was first occupied by the general assembly on the 3d of January, 1822. On each side was a wing, that on the north being occupied by the senate and the southern wing by the house. No records of importance were lost.

FIRE IN A COPPER MINE.

Four Men Are Imprisoned but Two Are Finally Rescued.

Houghton, Mich., Feb. 3.—Shortly after 7 o'clock yesterday morning the announcement was made that there was another fire underground, this time at North Tamarack, situated about a mile north of the famous Calumet and Hecla. An alarm was immediately sent to the 100 men employed in this shaft, and all but four escaped. The men had been at work but a short time when those at the ninth level of No. 3 shaft came out to the mouth of the shaft to dump their car into the skip and saw a blaze in a pile of "lagging" on the plat, and instead of trying to extinguish it ran away, going to the surface, and giving the alarm. These men had passed this spot only a short time before and saw no signs of fire then, and how the fire caught is a great mystery. When an alarm was first given those working on the ninth level and above it made their way to the skips, while those below that level escaped to No. 4 shaft and came to the surface that way.

When the fire broke out four men were working in the sixth level, and all but two escaped, Peter Limpea and his 20-year-old son William. At the eighth level eight men were working, all escaping but William Tomaczhoski and his 16-year-old son Antonio, and they could easily have escaped with the others, but instead of taking the skip when it was stopping at the eighth level they went back to a place in the level, where they had been working for their dinner pails. This was the last seen of them. The other two unfortunates had received warning of the danger, but failed to reach the surface. When it was found that four men were missing a rescuing party descended in the cage, but owing to gases could get no further down than the fourth level, and was forced to come back to the surface.

Houghton, Mich., Feb. 4.—The fire at No. 3 shaft, North Tamarack mine, has abated but little, but a rescuing party that went down yesterday morning succeeded in reaching the level on which Peter Lempea and his son William had been confined Tuesday and all Tuesday night and brought them to the surface. Neither appeared to be very much the worse for his experience, but the father is suffering from a severe nervous shock.

Another party attempted to find Tomczhoski and son, who are supposed to be at the eighth level, but after reaching the seventh level the party had to return on account of dense smoke. Another party went down at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and that also was unsuccessful. The hope of finding these two men alive has not been given up, as the father is an old and experienced miner; but with such dense smoke as is now in the mine it is hardly probably that they can still be alive. Later reports say that a searching party has reached the eighth level, made a careful survey and failed to find any one there.

Calumet, Mich., Feb. 5.—The loss of life in the Tamarack mine fire is two. The two missing men's bodies have been found at the bottom of the shaft in the water.

Dropped Dead While Shopping.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., Feb. 5.—Mrs. Fred Bower, residing two miles south of the city, dropped dead while in the city trading Wednesday. Heart disease is the supposed cause.

Death of Geo. W. Shanklin.

Indianapolis, Feb. 8.—A dispatch from Washington brings the news that Geo. W. Shanklin died in that city Saturday afternoon at the residence of Justice Harlan, of the supreme court, who married Shanklin's sister. George W. Shanklin is well-known in this state. He was born at Evansville, where he was for some years associated with his brother, J. Gilbert Shanklin, on The Courier, of that place.

Editor Merritt's Wife Dead.

Springfield, Ills., Feb. 4.—Mrs. Charlotte C. Merritt died in this city yesterday after a lingering illness, aged 47 years. She was the wife of Hon. Edward L. Merritt, editor of The State Register, of this city, from 1865 to 1879, a member of the general assembly of Illinois from 1891 to 1897, and brother of General Wesley Merritt, of Chicago, commanding department of Missouri, U. S. A.

They Condemn Emma Shirley.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Stenographers and court reporters in this city are unqualified in their condemnation of the action of Emma Shirley in turning the state's evidence in the O'Malley case over to the defense. Saturday O'Malley's attorney presented evidence tending to prove an alibi, and further evidence to prove attempts of the state to "induce" evidence of identification.

Nicaragua Canal Bill.

Washington, Feb. 8.—The friends of the Nicaragua canal bill have given up the struggle. They will make no further effort to pass it at this session.

The National Christian Association and its organ, the Christian Cynosure, have no sympathy with the politicians who are seeking to kill the "Arbitration Treaty" between America and Great Britian because of their Irish-American constituency, or for all the "politics in it." We stand in favor of the ratification of the Arbitration Treaty without amendment.

Of the Presidents of the United States the Unitarians claim Jefferson; the Disciples of Christ claim Garfield; the Congregationalists number among themselves John Adams and J. Q. Adams; the Methodists have Johnson, Grant, Hayes and McKinley; the Presbyterians claim Jackson, Polk, Buchanan, Lincoln, B. Harrison and Cleveland; the Episcopalians number nine, Washington, Madison, Monroe, W. H. Harrison, Tyler, Taylor, Filmore, Pierce and Arthur.

A well-known editor says, "I believe it is blasphemy for ministers and evangelists, upon whom rests the guilt of complicity with the liquor power in its work of wholesale crime and abomination, to stand up before the people and talk sanctimoniously of revivals of religion." Many of these men have been conducting revivals of religion for many years past, and the longer they preach, and the more converts they report, the more saloons we have, and the worse this country gets.

President Diaz is at the head of Mexican Masonry, and the Catholic church acknowledges itself to have been worsted by the Freemasons in the struggle for place and power in that Republic. The Western Catholic bring the news of a desire on the part of the church to abandon their old tactics: "Mgr. Averardi was sent to Mexico as apostolic delegate, principally for the purpose of endeavoring to establish better relations between church and state, and indications have not been lacking that he has met with success in that undertaking. One of such indications is the delegate's recent instruction to the Mexican Catholics, that they give the Diaz administration their loyal support."

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Abraham Lincoln, whose birthday was celebrated last Friday by public school children, patriots and statesmen, was not a Freemason. His well-known character speaks eloquently against the despotism and illegal obligations of such secret societies as Jesuitism, Freemasonry and Clan-na-Gaelism. He well knew that this nation can no more endure with two kinds of oaths in her court rooms—the civil and Masonic—that she could "endure half free and half slave."

"Brother" Hempsted, of the Masonic fraternity in Arkansas, has recently written a congratulatory epistle upon the unification of Italy and the downfall of the temporal power of the papacy in 1870. He assures the "Grand Orient," including the Freemasons of Italy, that the Arkansas brethren approve of its work in becoming masters of the government.

This epistle appears to have originated in the Pope's present attempt to re-organize the pontifical army at Rome. The Western Catholic News probably speaks the truth when it says: "Masons tell us in a semi-confidential tone and mode that American Masonry has no affiliation with French or Italian Masonry. This is all bosh; a Freemason of a certain degree in one country is recognized as such in other countries; and notwithstanding that American Masons accuse Italian and French Masons as revolutionary and 'anti-religious'—meaning anti-Catholic—'yet they affiliate with them in their revolutionary and anti-religious demonstrations in Italy and France."

The ostensible basis of the quarrel between all Masons and the papacy is the refusal of the former to submit to the confessional. But there is a deeper reason for this hostility. Both Freemasonry and the papacy, in theory and practice, reserve the power to destroy the private judgment of their respective devotees, and so reduce them to moral serfdom. The quarrel, thus far, has proved disastrous to the papacy; and should the contest for supremacy be revived by the Pope, there can only ensue a mighty religious war, extending to other countries wherever there are Masons and Roman Catholics—a warfare the most hateful, persistent and barbarous of any.

It was recently remarked in the New York World that the very rich in this country, unlike the upper classes in Europe, disdain connection with Masonry, but that Mr. Belmont, the millionaire, was an exception, and was beginning to assume a prominent position in its affairs. Masonry is, without doubt, very useful in bond and other deals, but in local politics in New York City Tammany has greater influence, which will explain why Mr. Belmont has also applied for admission in that society. It clearly denotes his political aspirations. Tammany meets monthly for initiation of members, and twenty prominent citizens, among whom was Perry Belmont, were initiated at the last meeting.

This is one of the secret combinations inveighed against by Washington in his farewell address as threatening the stability of the government, and the one particularly mentioned in his letter to Mr. Snyder as also menacing its morals. The cloud in the heavens, no bigger than the hand, has now grown much larger, but still no patriot heeds the warning. Both in ancient and modern times the aristocratically rich and socialisticly poor constitute the dangerous classes of a state; the latter, perhaps, from need and necessity, but the former from greed and inclination. The secret society is their first step in treason to the state and hostility to fellow-citizens, for it is the extortioner's and trickster's plot for wealth and power.

Appendix J. of the proceedings from the Grand Lodge of Minnesota, held Jan. 13 and 14, 1897, gives important information. Total gain by counting all those who joined at the organization, who later were raised to the third degree, and those who have been restored,—33,214 members. Total loss is thus given:—Withdrawn, 9,789; stricken from the roll, 4 666; suspended, 124; expelled, 121; died, 2,644; total loss, 17,344. The Grand Lodge has, Jan. 1, 1897, 15,447 members in good standing.

It is interesting to notice the loss of members n this jurisdiction, remembering that the other ju risdictions in the United States have fared likewise, and compare this loss of members with the statement made by Masons that no one outside of the lodge knows anything about the mysteries of Masonry. There are some who believe that "once a Mason always a Mason," and that this means that no one ever can get out of the lodge again. Figures speak. They tell us that there are many non-affiliated Masons, and many of these are convinced of the fact that they were gulled by promises which were not true, and who, consequently, are not bound by their horrible oaths. These unaffiliated tell of their experiences. It is ridiculous in the face of all these witnesses to claim that no one outside of the lodge knows anything about Masonry

SHALL NOT CHRIST PREVAIL?

BY H. S. KIRK.

The night of error and of wrong
Shall shortly flee away;
Then let us sing a joyful song,
Who wait the coming day.

In vain the furious heathen raze
Against our conquering Lord;
In vain in darkness they engage
To set at naught his Word.

Hands join in hands and councils set,
God disconcerts their plan,
Taking the crafty in the net
Spread for their fellowman.

O Father, in our time of need
Let us prevail with thee.
Unto our help will thou not speed
And cause thy foes to flee?

Thy ministers, O Lord, arrest,
Who bow the knee to Baal;
Thy church by heathen hand oppressed,
Oh, shall not Christ prevail?

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE EVANGELIST, SAM JONES.

FROM A FAITHFUL FRIEND.

In the Boston Herald of Feb. 1st, you are reported as saying that "some criticise my religion, and others take me to task because I am a Freemason." This is not in itself strange. No successful evangelist ever escaped criticism. Our Lord was criticised; so were the apostles. But it is one thing when our good is evil spoken of, and quite another when it is some wrong doing that brings upon us deserved censure. To be "persecuted for righteousness' sake," and to be "buffeted for our faults," involves a great distinction and a wide difference.

Allow me to ask what class of men and women are taking you to task because of your Freemasonry? Is it the infidel and the scoffer, the drunkard and the blasphemer? Is it the worldling, the nominal believer, the Laodicean Christian with "a name to live" and yet dead? You know very well that it is not they who are criticising your lodge relations, but sincere followers of Jesus Christ. And should it be any small matter to you that multitudes of devout and earnest souls were deeply grieved when they heard that on the evening of the 29th of December last, on the very threshold of your revival work here in Boston, you were made a Knight Templar in Rome, Ga.? Should it be a ground for complaint or of thanksgiving that some were too sorely pained to keep silent?

But how was it with you in the hour when you entered the secret chambers of darkness? Did your hand never tremble when you took the human skull filled with pure wine from the hand of the Eminent Commander, while the swords of your brother Knights were leveled at your breast "to avenge any willful violation" of your Masonic vows? Did you feel no thrill of shuddering horror when you invoked on your soul this double curse, so frightful that it might well have been written in lowest hell, by the light of fires that are never quenched, and accompanied by the demoniac laughter of fiends, and the groans of tortured souls:

> And as the sins of the whole world were once visited upon the head of the Saviour, so may the sins of the person whose skull this once was, in addition to my own, be heaped upon my head, and may this libation appear in judgment against me both here and hereafter, should I ever knowingly or willfully violate this my most solemn vow of a Knight Templar. So help me God and keep me steadfast.

If no one "took" you "to task" for going through such a performance would it not look as if the enemies of Christianity were justified in their worst accusations? Would it not show us cowardly of soul, and far weaker in the elements of vital godliness than was Judaism of old, if we had no Elijahs too jealous of Jehovah's honor, or Deborahs too fearless of the lodge Sisera, to let it pass without rebuke?

You may not have studied the origin and history of the order you have just entered. You may not know what vile and base men have used it in the past for the subversion of all laws, human and divine, but you ought to know something about its record as it exists to-day. When did the Knights ever hold their conclaves in any of our great cities but the saloons and houses of ill-fame were decorated to welcome their coming? Count up your "brother Knights" who are distillers, liquor dealers, men of profane habits and impure life, and then ask yourself if you can be linked by unhallowed oaths with such sons of Belial and yet claim the beatitude pronounced on "the man who walketh not in the counsels of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful."

According to your own reported words you became a Mason in hopes of worldly advantage, and on the advice of a friend who said, "If you want help here below, join the Masons; if you want help above, join the Methodists." This advice you followed, and, to use your own expression, are now "saved at both ends." It strikes me that the man who trusts in a church, of whatever name, for his salvation; and in Masonry to help him out of his temporal distresses, so far from being "saved at both ends," is not properly saved at either.

You are also reported as saying that you have not been in a Bluge Lodge for fifteen years, nor a Royal Arch chapter for twelve years. Then all this time you have been a non-affiliated Mason. And what do the laws of the Grand Lodge of your own State of Georgia declare in regard to this class? That "Masons non-affiliated for twelve months shall not be permitted to visit any lodge, nor entitled to any of the privileges or benefits of Masonry." This seems like a very small mess of pottage for which to sell your birthright; to weigh in the scale against lessened spiritual power, the forfeited confidence of the best men and women in the church, and the wounds thus given to the cause of Christ.

You are further reported as saying that you "will never give up Masonry." Without doubt Ephraim said the same thing when urged to give up his false worships—the Freemasonry of Old Testament times. But what does God say? You must have often read it, possibly you have even preached from it,—those solemn words that, like our Saviour's lament over Jerusalem, have no anger in them as they reverberate down the ages, only the mournful sadness of rejected warning: "Ephraim is joined to his idols, let him alone."

But I cannot believe that in your case such a fiat has yet gone forth. Else the Holy Spirit would never move me, as I believe he has, to write this earnest appeal that you re-consider a determination on which hang issues far-reaching as eternity. Holy men of God have been before you, Pres. Finney, Elder Bernard, Dr. Colver and others, whose names may not be known on earth, but are nevertheless written in heaven, who, too, went into the cavern of Masonic mysteries, and some of them even went as far as you, taking upon their lips the same awful vow, and drinking the same devil's libation. Here the resemblance ceases, for they came out. They said, "Welcome persecution, welcome even death itself, but we will renounce and expose these works of darkness that others be not taken in the same secret snare."

Will you do the same? Multitudes will follow your example who will not listen to your preaching. Will you be Satan's decoy to lead them down to hell through the gates of the Masonic lodge, ruined for this world and the next?

Or will you choose their part whose honored names I have mentioned, and by coming out yourself bring others out—a rejoicing host of freemen, redeemed from the bondage of lodge oaths and penalties to the liberty which is in Christ? May the Spirit lead you as it led them, so that hereafter you may walk in the light even as He is in the light. ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

RELIGION OF THE CHURCH OR LODGE.

ADDRESS BEFORE THE WASHINGTON STATE CONVENTION AT SEATTLE, JAN. 19, 1897, BY REV. W. M. HOWIE OF THAT CITY.

(From the Seattle Post Intelligencer.)

After Mr. Howie had quoted passages from the New Testament, which are used in the Masonic ritual, he said:

"Now, notice that the name of Christ is not wholly left out of these passages, but the meaning is perverted. In this last passage all reference to Christ as the corner-stone is taken away, and the reference is made to the corner-stone laid by Masons. Masonry is not made to suit the Bible, but the Bible is made to suit Masonry. There is no virtue in Masons carrying around the Bible when they are not required to believe in its inspiration, or in its God, or in its Saviour, or even to be guided by its moral code; for we learn from Mackey's 'Masonic Jurisprudence,' pp. 502 and 503, that the Masonic 'moral law is not to be considered as confined to the decalogue of Moses,' but is 'the lex naturae, or law of nature.' 'For,' says he, 'the precepts of Jesus could not have been made obligatory on a Jew; a Christian would have denied the sanctions of the Koran; a Mohammedan must have rejected the law of Moses, and a disciple of Zoroaster would have turned from all to the teachings of his Zend Avesta.' It is one of the strange things that all Christians do not turn from the un-Biblical, un-Christian system of Masonry. But if the religion of the lodge is not the Christian religion, what is it? From Masonic authorities it appears that the religion is peculiar to the institution of secrecy.

"Mackey's 'Lexicon,' p. 402, says: 'The religion, then, of Masonry is pure theism, on which its different members engraft their own peculiar opinions; but they are not permitted to introduce them into the lodge, or to connect their truth or falsehood with the truth of Masonry.' According to this author Masonry is theism, with certain religious truth, called the truth of Masonry. Upon this religion the Christian may engraft his peculiar opinions, but he is not permitted to introduce them into the lodge or connect their truth 'with the truth of Masonry.' Here is an extract from Dr. Oliver's 'Signs and Symbols of Freemasonry,' p. 76. Dr. Oliver is the greatest English authority, and he says: 'It is an extraordinary fact that there is scarcely a single ceremony in Freemasonry, but we find its corresponding rite in one or the other of the idolatrous mysteries, and the coincidence can only be accounted for by supposing that these mysteries were derived from Masonry.' Already we see from these Masonic authorities that Masonry is theism and idolatrous. In fact, all worship that does not recognize the Lord Jesus is idolatrous.

"But we may as well proceed until we have found out something of the kind of idolatrous worship that belongs to the lodge. In Mackey's 'Manual,' p. 26, we read: 'The number twelve was celebrated as a mythical number in the ancient systems of sun worship, of which it has already been said that Masonry is a philosophical development.' According to this authority the religion of the lodge is a development of sun worship. Morris' 'Dictionary of Freemasonry,' p. 296, says: 'The Worshipful Master himself is a representative of the sun.' Mackey's 'Ritualist,' p. 63, says: 'The master and wardens are symbols of the sun—the lodge of the universe of the world; the point also is the symbol of the same sun, and the surrounding circle of the universe, while the two parallel lines really point, not to two saints, but to the two northern and southern limits of the sun's course.' Surely we have considered the religion of Masonry far enough to see that it is not the Christian religion.

"We have seen that it has no Christ, no inspired Bible, no God who is the Father of our Lord Jesus, no moral system founded on the Bible. In fact, we have seen that Masonic writers and expounders of the system say its religion is the 'development' of sun worship, and point out the different things and officers representing the sun. We have also seen that Masonic writers claim that the religious system embraces 'all the possible circumstances of man—moral, spiritual and social.' To persuade yourself that Masons believe this you have but to attend a Masonic funeral and listen to the ceremony which gives the departed, no matter what his character, an entrance into the Grand Lodge above; or they may talk to Masons and they will soon find some who will say that if they live up to the teachings of Masonry it will be well with them in the hereafter. Now, what are the conclusions to be drawn.

HIS CONCLUSIONS.

"1. Masonry is a religious system opposed to Christianity, just as is Mohammedanism, or Buddhism, or Brahamism.

"2. To encourage Masonry is to encourage a religious system opposed to Christianity.

"3. To uphold Masonry is to uphold a delusive system, and help educate people to trust in a false religion

"4. To uphold Masonry is to do dishonor to Christ and the God of the Bible.

"5. To belong to Masonry is either to be untrue to the system of Masonry or to the system of Christianity. One cannot be a true Mason and a true Christian at the same time. He cannot be true to a system of religion built without Christ and one built upon Christ. If a Christian in name belongs to the lodge he is either not true to the religion of the lodge or he is not true to Christ. A Mohammedan can be both a Mohammedan and a Christian, as well as a Mason can be both a Mason and a Christian. One can not be a sun worshiper and a Christ worshiper at the same time. Yet some wonder why any Christian is opposed to Mssonry, or why any church excludes Masons. We might as well wonder why the Apostle Paul did not take the Athenians into the Church of Christ. The reason is plain. Christ instituted the church for Christians and not for a fold of all religions. The great wonder is how any church can be indifferent about Masonry, and how any Christians can belong to a lodge that turns out Christ from its religious system, yet teaches entrance into happiness. I cannot see how any Christian can do this dishonor to Christ. I am sure that it is the duty of every Christian connected with the lodge to come out from it. If they are not fully persuaded of the truth of the un-Christian character of the lodge, they should investigate the whole system and see what it really is."

THE MISSOURI STATE CONVENTION.

FULL OF INTEREST AND ENTHUSIASM.—A LARGE ATTENDANCE.—MANY OF THE STATE NORMAL STUDENTS PRESENT.—STRONG RESOLUTIONS DISCUSSED.

BY PROF. SIMPSON ELY.

This convention has come and gone. It was held in the Christian church in Kirksville, Feb. 4 and 5, and was opened Thursday evening with a hearty praise service; and then followed a most eloquent and inspiring address by Bro. Samuel Swartz, of Morris, Ill. Although he spoke a full hour and a half, he held his audience in rapt attention to the last; and although his whole address was devoted to the evils of the secret orders, even the members of these orders could not fail to admire the spirit of the speaker. He made a good impression upon his hearers.

Both forenoon and afternoon were devoted to a free parliament, in which Bro. Swartz's address and the various phases of the lodge system were freely discussed. Several members of the lodges took part in the discussion, but evidently they felt the weakness of their cause. Their defense was a feeble affair. Some seceders also spoke, and they rejoiced in the liberty wherewith Christ had made them free. One of these was afterwards elected secretary of the Missouri Associa tion. He is a manly, noble young fellow.

Pres. Blanchard, of Wheaton College, arrived at the close of the second session. From that time until the close of the convention we had the benefit of his presence and wise counsel. On Friday evening he addressed a large audience upon the sin of lodgery, and held his hearers almost two hours. His speech was earnest, logical, scriptural and convincing. A large number of young men heard him, and the cogent arguments cannot fail to do great good. If we can keep men out of the lodge while they are young, not many of them would ever be initiated.

Bro. Swartz attended the chapel exercises in our State Normal school, led the devotions, and made a stirring speech to the students. Over four hundred students heard him.

Near the close of the convention the following officers for the ensuing year were elected: President, Simpson Ely; Secretary, F. H. Conder; Treasurer, George W. Needels. The latter is of Albany, Missouri; the others are of Kirksville.

At the last session the following ringing resolutions were read and adopted:

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, 1. That in our work against secret societies we have charity for all and malice toward none; that we desire to save men and to honor the church of Jesus Christ.

2. That all secret orders which have prayers, Scripture readings and other religious services, and at the same time admit ungodly men, are, from this fact, pagan religions and enemies of the church of our Lord and Saviour.

3. That it is essential to the perpetuity of popular government that there be confidence and fair dealing among citizens; that in order to this end all secret societies should be abolished; and as a first step thereto, that no lodgeman should be elected or appointed to public office.

4. That the home is the primary and fundamental institution of society; that everything which destroys the family is also hostile to the Christian religion and free government; that secret societies are of this description, binding husbands and wives, parents and children, to different secret oaths, thus breaking down that mutual harmony and co operation which are essential to the well-being of the state, church and home.

5. That the so-called charities of secret orders are simply expensive and unreliable forms of insurance, and that no orders which exclude the halt, maimed, blind and poor should call themselves benevolent.

6. That we hereby invite the co-operation of all persons who favor openness, honesty, fair dealing and the supremacy of the Christian religion in our effort to abolish secret societies.

7. That we commend all religious and other papers which publish facts respecting lodges, and that we especially desire the success of the Christian Cynosure and the Lodge Lamp because of their work in this direction.

8. That we tender our grateful thanks to the pastor, officers and members of this church for their Christian hospitality on the occasion of this annual meeting.

Thus closed our State convention. It was full of interest and enthusiasm from first to last. The Holy Spirit was present in blessing and sanctifying power. All must have felt the necessity of a closer walk with Jesus and less conformity to the world. The convention will be far-reaching in its good effects.

Anti-secret literature was freely distributed, and doubtless many will have their eyes opened to the evils of secretism.

For myself the convention was a great pleasure. We were delighted to entertain brethren Swartz and Blanchard in our home. Bro. Wylie and others could not come, but they wrote letters bidding us God-speed, expressing their regrets and sending money toward the expenses.

DID PETER'S SERMON AT PENTECOST HINDER OR PROMOTE A REVIVAL?

BY REV. A. J. M'FARLAND, D D.

The "holidays," "Week of Prayer," and in many churches "revival services" following immediately, constitute a period of from four to six weeks. During this time it has been found that wherever a revival is in progress there is a decided disinclination to open the way for a discussion of Christ's kingly claims or of any kindred theme, on the ground that these are not to be counted in the list of subjects whose consideration would be likely to promote the work of soul-saving. In the estimation of many, such discussion would be as foreign to the end sought after and as much out of place in a revival meeting as a lecture on astronomy or hypnotism.

As the result of extended thought and careful study of the subject, the writer is fully persuaded that this view is without the support of God's Word, and is an error of such damaging power that it should be rectified as completely and as soon as possible. These doctrines are certainly Christ honoring. They, at the same time, present considerations to the intelligence and reason of the sinner that cannot be excelled in their encouraging and persuasive power. There is, therefore, as much reason to expect that Christ will send his Spirit to bless this truth to the conversion of souls, together with that which presents him as the Saviour of men, as he will the latter without the former, especially when the absence of the former is intended.

As bearing upon this question with singular directness, the preaching of Peter as recorded in Acts, second chapter, furnishes valuable testimony. These facts as connected with that notable occasion may be noted:

1. Peter spoke under the influence of the Holy Spirit. This is not a probability, but a certainty.

2 His audience was a great multitude of Jews, who were bitter enemies of Christ and had either participated in, or heartily sanctioned, the crucifixion of Christ.

3. Among other unpopular doctrines, he proclaimed in cumulative and emphatic statement, that the Christ they had curcified was a reigning, universal King, as well as Saviour. Verses 30–36.

4. He enjoined upon them, in addition to repentance, faith and baptism, the sacrificing duty of separation from what he characterized "this untoward generation." Verse 44. What this involved is doubtless seen in what they did in obedience to it—selling possessions and goods, and parting to the needy. It called for greater self-denial than is practiced by any class of separatists of our day.

5. His sermon was wonderfully blessed to the conversion of souls. The record is, that about three thousand souls were convicted, brought to repentance, faith, baptism and identification with the church.

As we examine this record closely it does not seem that proclaiming Christ as King, and exhorting to separation from all that was hostile to Christ in any measure, hindered the revival. On the contrary, so far as the preaching was concerned, the announcing of that truth and duty was specially conducive to it. For just after it had been declared that the Jesus whom they had crucified was "both Lord and Christ," it is said, "When they heard this they were pricked in their hearts," and it was immediately after the exhortation to be separate from that wicked generation that it is said that, "They that gladly received the word were baptized."

Additional Scripture testimony to the same end may be seen in the epistle to the Hebrews. This letter was written, not only to confirm the Jews who had renounced Judaism and embraced Christianity, but it was also intended to persuade and convince those Jews who, while they were still outside of the Christian church, were willing to read an argument in support of the Messiahship of Christ.

Among the facts most frequently urged in this letter is the exaltation, coronation and actual reigning of Christ. And it is noteworthy, that this reference to Christ as King is in almost every case in immediate connection with some statement setting him forth as Saviour. As examples of this see in chapter 1:3: "When he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high."

Chapter 2:8, 9: "For in that he put all in subjection under him; he left nothing that is not put under him." "We see Jesus, who was for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor."

Chapter 8:1: "We have such an High Priest who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens."

Chapter 10:12: "But this man after he had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, sat down on the right hand of God."

Chapter 12:2: "Looking unto Jesus who endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God."

And among the closing exhortations of this epistle we find in the 13th verse of the 13th chapter these words: "Let us go forth, therefore, unto Him without the camp, bearing his reproach." This set before the Jew a hard duty, as the Jews of our own time still realize when they come out on Christ's side. The spirit of this injunction is, that the Christianity that is thorough-going and Christ-honoring is that in which there is a clear going over to Christ, abandoning everything with which we cannot identify without disloyalty to Christ.

The Holy Spirit, under whose inspection this epistle was penned, must have intended to bless the proclamation of the fact that Christ was King, and the duty to be loyal to him to the conversion of Jews, when he moved the Apostle to write as he did. And we fail to see any reason why the argument should not have equal power in the case of other sinners.

We conclude then that evangelistic preaching will not be less effective if it fully honors Christ by urging his royal claims and the fullest loyalty to him in all the relations of life. This will call for separation from unholy business, the coming out from oath-bound secret organizations, which at best are rivals of the church of Christ, and non-incorporation with immoral constitutions of government; but in the light of Pentecost, we may be sure that it will promote rather than hinder a genuine revival.

KANSAS BORDER RUFFIAN CONFLICT.

THE CLOSING CHAPTER.

Oh blissful age! It hastens;
It looms in light afar,
And darts a ray of heavenly day
O'er wrong, and woe, and war.
Oh joy! Oh martyred brothers,
Your great reward appears;
Up! live! and reign with Christ again
A thousand golden years.

The final result of Buchanan's force policy in Kansas affairs blasted the last hope of Pro-slavery supremacy in the Territory. The forced election on the English bill technicality, August, 1858, coupled with his offer of bribery, was surpassed only by his later acts of connivance at rebellion. Governor Denver, who had acted all too fairly to suit the President, resigned following this election, partly from disgust and partly from fear of removal, and Secretary Walsh became acting governor till the new appointee, Medary, arrived late in November. In the interim the Free State party held a constitutional convention at Wyandotte, Kan., and drafted a constitution to take the place of former drafts, more or less unsatisfactory of years before, and ratified it by an election held early in November. Thus upon Medary's arrival this additional obstacle confronted him.

The legislature was convened on Jan. 3, '59, at Lecompton, and having a clear Free State majority, whose experiences with the town had not been pleasant, it adjourned to Lawrence. Medary ordered it back, but it re-adjourned to Lawrence. Little being done this term except to contend with the governor, it was called together again on Jan. 2, 1860. It met at Lecompton as usual, but again adjourned to Lawrence. The governor in his ire ordered it back instanter, and back it came, but again re-adjourned to Lawrence, and before another order could be issued, passed a bill abolishing slavery in the Territory. Medary promptly vetoed the bill, and it was as promptly passed over his veto. This was too much for the governor and he resigned, and his secretary, George M. Beebe, became acting governor.

Before Beebe had concluded what course to pursue with the refractory legislature, the "Law Codifying Committee"—now Free State—collected all the laws that had ever been enacted by the Pro-slavery Territorial bogus ligislatures and in the presence of a great concourse of people, and amid great rejoicing, they were burned in the streets of Lawrence. Samples of the cremated laws are as follows:

Every officer of Kansas must swear to support the fugitive slave law. It was made a felony, punishable with two years' imprisonment, to publish or say that slavery did not legally exist in Kansas; a felony, with five years' imprisonment, to say or do anything knowingly or wilfully to create dissatisfaction among slaves; and a felony, punishable with death, to interfere with the tenure of slave property; i. e., the right to buy, sell, own and beat the colored people who were or might be in bondage in Kansas. Such laws formed the basis of all slave-State constitutions, including that intended for Kansas, even the notorious Lecompton constitution, the bone of contention, till wiped out entirely by Buchanan's forced election, and the laws that accorded with it were burned at Lawrence.

Up to this time Kansas had been graced or disgraced, blessed or cursed, by ten governors and acting governors, besides two or three of the "dubbed" sort elected from time to time by the Free State party, but who never acted, except as exiles or prisoners, under the Pro-slavery regime. It had also enjoyed the distinction of three or four Territorial capitals in so short a time; and beat the record for Territorial governments, having had, as a great and witty political speaker said, "five forms, all in operation at the same time, bringing on a general election every month, and a county, township or city election every other day."

The few Pro-slavery officials formed but the skeleton of a government in Kansas now, and though it stalked abroad sometimes even yet, few feared or respected it since the Free State party had the prestige of almost a solid Territorial legislature. The startling acts of this body in defying the governor, abolishing slavery in Kansas and burning the Pro-slavery laws, was an unparalleled abolition aggression, and signaled the opening of the greatest political struggles ever known to the nation. As Kansas had been made the key to the great northwestern territory by the slave power, the Pro-slavery cause had to be shorn of its aggressive power before it would abandon the contest for such a grand prize; for this territory extended from the Missouri river to California, and from Mexico and Texas to British America. This territory had just been snatched from the rapacious jaws of the British Lion on the north, and wrested from Mexico on the south by diplomacy and war. The South now intimated its intention of withdrawing from the Union if an Abolition President should be elected; and as soon as it was known that Lincoln was chosen, South Carolina called a convention, which met Dec. 20th and passed an "ordinance of secession." Other States followed her example, and by the middle of January, 1861, six slave States had seceded and their representatives in Congress had withdrawn, leaving a majority of Abolitionists in both Houses for the first time during the Kansas struggle. On Jan. 28th a bill was passed admitting Kansas into the Union a free State, and the following day Buchanan had the unmerited honor of signing it.

Plans were laid to assassinate Lincoln on his way to his inauguration, and only a few weeks after this event the slaveholders rebelled and ushered in the civil war, of which the Kansas conflict was the prelude. Ad Astra per Aspera is the motto of Kansas. It means, "Through difficulties," or "Through rough ways to the stars;" and Kansas surely waded through difficulties to Statehood, and to her place among the stars on the flag of the Union. As soon as she became a State an election for governor was held, and the once much imprisoned, persecuted and "dubbed" Charles Robinson was elected as the first Free State governor of Kansas; allowed to act as such. It is but fair to say that many of the Pro-slavery leaders turned Free State, some before this, and others gracefully accepting the situation afterward and remained in Kansas.

Since the publication of this series of articles commenced, Kansas had the misfortune to lose the cannon, "Old Sacramento." During a freshet in July, 1896, a tipsy man took a skiff load of women and children out on the mill-pond at Lawrence for a boat ride, and allowing the boat to get too near the dam it was drawn over and all but two were drowned, including himself. In the effort to float the bodies by concussion, the sacred relic was exploded, to the grief of thousands of Kansans. The cannon, "Old Kickapoo," its opponent in the Kansas struggle, met a similar fate twenty-five years before at the bottom of a coal-shaft at Leavenworth City. The latter may be seen in the historical department, State House, Topeka.

The "Abbott Howitzer" is there too. It has usually been confounded with "Old Sacramento," but it is not the same, for the writer saw it last August perched overhead where it would escape the notice of people usually. It is the only cannon of the four left intact, and is a nice little gun. Notable among the relics there of those times is a genuine Border Ruffian flag. It is composed of five bars, three white and two red, and a white field containing four blue stars—one large, and three smaller in a semi-circle above it. In the upper part of the field is inscribed in red letters the motto, "Enforce the laws"—such laws as are quoted in this article.

But there is no ill feeling existing between the few survivors on either side, nor between Kansas and Missouri. With charity for all and malice to none, we herewith conclude this series.

SAM JONES DRINKS THE CUP OF DEVILS.

Preferring information obtained at headquarters, I called on Sam Jones at the Brunswick. Our brief interview was strictly on the line of Christian consistency. Alluding to press reports that he had been knighted, and to his allusion recently to an article published by a lady, I inferred from a remark of his that he was willing to investigate, and if convinced that it was evil he would confess and forsake his sin. He replied, "I am a Mason. I took the Chapter degrees some twenty years ago and was recently made a Knight Templar, but I am non-affiliated and have not been in a lodge for years, and I don't know that I shall ever go again." I spoke of a Christian young man who came a few evenings since to talk with me, who spoke of several of his associates who had quoted Dr. Geo. C. Lorimer in proof that the lodge must be Christian and all right, and added: "A person in your position owes the young men a good example," and that Pres. Finney said, "When I was converted I had to give up my Masonry along with my other sins."

He replied, "I shall never give up my Masonry, but I don't know as I shall ever visit a lodge, chapter or encampment again. So far I have nothing to say against them, but I simply haven't got time for such things." "Pardon me, Mr. Jones," said I, "but I am not able to understand how you reconcile the oath and fifth libation of a Knight Templar with the example and teachings of Christ." Looking me straight in the eyes, he asked, "Have you ever been a Mason?" "No, sir," I replied, "but I have conversed with many Christian men who have left the lodge and exposed its secrets." Much to my regret, we were interrupted just at this point by a man calling for a book, for which Mr. Jones went to his room and sent back by a messenger, and I saw no more of him though I remained for half an hour. As he was leaving me I handed him a copy of Mr. Finney's book, which he promised to read.

The inconsistencies of good men are truly marvelous. Jones thunders against an apathetic ministry and churches "dying of dry rot," and drinks the "cup of devils" at the Templars' altar without a compunction or word of rebuke. Moody preaches repentance, separation and holiness, and trains his artillery on hireling singers, written sermons, prurient ministers and lukewarm churches, with the zeal of a modern Jehu, then sets Knight Templar Lorimer to exhort trembling sinners to repent. How is such a course to be reconciled with the example of Paul in his dealing with another conjurer in his day? Paul did not call on Elymas the sorcerer to pray or exhort after he had given the Gospel message, but sharply rebuked him as a "child of the devil."

Without bitterness, but in fidelity to my convictions, I venture the suggestion that Knight Templar Lawrence, and all who are "cheek by jowl" with this rum distiller, look upon the performance as a burlesque on consistency. In what does it differ from a grand rally to save the Union before the war, with Stephen A. Douglas to make the speech, and Jefferson Davis to follow with an exhortation? Every rebel in the crowd would "chuckle in his sleeve" to see the farce go on; the devils of disunion would laugh and dance in merry glee over such a rousing comedy. And how much less is the delight of demons when the same thing is enacted in the name of religion? The good and zealous evangelists have hurled their javelins into the lukewarn churches and ministers of Boston, and having chastised this class of recreants it would be well for them to try the lodges and their priests. Possibly when they draw the "sword of the Spirit" on the "High Priests" at Baal's altar, they may find them less complacent than the ministers at Christ's altar even in "dead churches." If they have on their armor, let them put it to the test. Not one of these evangelists but knows that the lodges are a thousand-fold more the enemy of Christ than all the dead churches of which they complain. They know, moreover, that the lodge has done more to produce strangulation and death in the churches than any other single device of the devil. It smacks strongly of cowardice when men expend their energies on listless preachers and drowsy churches, with never an arrow from the Gospel quiver for the wolf devouring the sheep and lambs of the flock before their eyes. It recalls the Abolitionist in the fifties, with visage so "doughy" and a creed so pliable that he could smile on Toombs or Garrison with equal suavity, or be as companionable with Jeff Davis on his slave plantation as with Wendell Phillips in his Boston home. It is not the spirit of John Brown, or of those ancient worthies who "wandererd in sheepskins and goatskins" rather than sacrifice conviction to the bloody Moloch of slavery or render homage to the priests of Baal. Oh, that God would send evangelists among the people with the faith of a Finney or a Colver, who dared to preach against spiritual wickedness in high places, and assail a Goliath or hew Agag in pieces before the Lord.

CORRESPONDENCE.

GOOD WORK IN KANSAS CITY

BY REV. R N. COUNTEE.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 8, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I am now confined to my room, and have been for nearly ten days, with a slight, yet an aggravating case of pneumonia. I am praising the Lord for all things, and am striving daily to learn that greatest of lessons mastered by the Apostle Paul, viz, "In whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content." I realize the beauty and grandeur of the lesson; it is better than a gold mine, but it is so hard to learn; yet I am striving, and my dear people with me, by the grace of God to raise up here a peculiar people who will honor and revere his name and be constant. We are in our new house of worship, the plainest house in the city; not one penny wasted for embellishment, and we can truly say and sing, "It was not built for show." In my next letter to you I hope I shall be able to send you a picture of our little commonsense house.

Well, we are not out of the gunshot of the devil yet; the very week we entered our new house they started a dancing hall next door to us, and I started a prayer meeting, and while they danced we sang and prayed, and we conquered in His name. After two nights of dancing revelry, the dancers themselves said, "It is a shame to annoy those few people." Others of them said, "They are a set of cranks. Countee is a good man, but he is a fool and a crank, and ought to be howled down. He is trying to do what no other man in Kansas City ever attempted to do. He opposes everything and everybody." But I am glad to say although the man who rented the place has a three months' contract, he has not been able to keep up his coal bill, much less pay his rent, and no one scarcely will attend his hall; the general verdict is, it is too close to the church house.

Then an attempt was made to steal our clock and Bible and other little things. A small organ, my own personal property, that we were using in the building, was partially ruined, but in some way the things were not taken away. Of course nobody does these things, yet they manage to be done, and his Satanic majesty revels with delight. For two Sabbaths we have had no organ for Sabbath-school and church service, but we have not ceased to sing and praise the Lord with our voices, which are older musical instruments than organs.

The powers of darkness do not fail to make their influence felt among our faithful few. On the first Sabbath when we entered our new but unfinished building, the leading ministers of the city had promised to be present with us two weeks beforehand; and in keeping with their promise we published a program of our opening exercises, informing the public of the part each city minister would take in the same, and not a single one of them came; but we went on alone, in His name.

Our house is built of rock quarried out of the lot, and has brick trimmings around windows and doors, with front of brick veneer. Dimensions are 60x40. These walls of stone are undressed and a temporary roof gives our place of meeting a very rough appearance, yet we rejoice that what has been done has been done without a church entertainment of any character. My salary for four months has been $4, but the few members we have brought us a donation each month, and thus kept us eating, and we are happier than we ever were in all of our lives. My wife is more aggressive in fighting the powers of night than I am.

I am doing my work quietly, avoiding a storm but taking my men one by one privately, and I realize that I save myself by not antagonizing the masses for more effective work. I have now, since last January, 1896, added thirty-five to our number, and God is blessing our work, for all of these are saved from the lodge for the Lord, every one of them.

Our growth is from among the poor in the generous distribution of clothing and shoes among the poor. God is opening the hearts of the people toward us; and while some are anxious to abuse us, the number that has been helped have always a word of praise for us. Our appeal in the city for cast off apparel and shoes has been very favorably and generously met, and our work is being commented on in the city papers. We hope to be out in a few days, D. V. Pray for us.

Yours in Him, R. N. COUNTEE.

LET WOMEN RALLY FOR ARBITRATION.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD RESPOND.

NEW YORK CITY, Feb. 6, 1897.

To Women of the United States:

We ask your earnest and prompt co-operation in urging upon the Senate of the United States that, after full consideration, it should ratify the Arbitration Treaty between this country and Great Britain; and without amendments which will cripple its efficiency.

The mothers, the wives, and the homes of our land have the deepest interest in the substitution of law for war. In times of conflict they are the keenest sufferers; and while the nation's honor is dear to them, whatever tends to settle disputes by reason and law, rather than by warfare, demands their heartiest endorsement.

It is absolutely necessary that the universal public opinion of the country, in favor of this Treaty, should find expression. Therefore, we ask you, without delay, to write personally to your Senators; to hold meetings; to send petitions, and to aid by all means in your power the completion of this great act of Christian civilization.

MAUD BALLINGTON BOOTH.

MRS. CLEVELAND'S TOUCHING EXPERIENCE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 10, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Mrs. Cleveland will probably remember the experience she had last Sabbath, in the First Presbyterian church, as long as she lives, and it is probable that every one of the large congregation present will do likewise. After Dr. Talmage had finished his sermon, the venerable co-pastor, Dr. Byron Sunderland, who married Mrs. Cleveland and who has baptized each of her children, announced that holy communion would be celebrated at the close of the service, and while those present were participating therein he arose again and said: "Mrs. Cleveland is with us to-day at this communion service, where she has been many times before, but as this is probably the last time she will be present on such an occasion, I have felt that it would be appropriate to testify the esteem and affection of the congregation toward her, as one who in her high place has shown an example of wise Christian womanhood, and that if she would kindly remain in her pew until the people pass by and take her by the hand it would be a source of great satisfaction to us all."

Mrs. Cleveland was visibly effected, as were many others; there were tears in Dr. Sunderland's tone, and later, when he shook hands with Mrs. Cleveland, they were in his eyes. Everybody in the church, even to the sexton, shook hands with Mrs. Cleveland before she left. Mrs. Polk had a similar experience just before the expiration of President Polk's term. That there was no premeditation on the part of Dr. Sunderland was shown by his having said afterwards: "When I went into the pulpit I had no idea of saying what I did; but when I saw Mrs. Cleveland sitting alone in her pew, I realized that this was her last communion with us, and knowing the affection felt by the congregation for her, I asked her to remain. It was simply an emotional act on my part."

WAR AND SECRETISM.

BELOIT, Ala., Jan. 30, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The excellent article of Bro. M. N. Butler in your issue of the 28th, suggests other thoughts on the relation of the secret lodge system to the spirit and practice of war. The two systems had a common origin, and are essentially alike in their general characteristics.

1. Both are despotic. War is a pure despotism. There is no appeal from the commands of the officers, and no opportunity to resign and go home. Disobedience and desertion is punishable with death. The oath of a soldier binds him to unconditional obedience, and there can be no reservation of any rights of conscience or of private judgment.

So, too, the government of the lodge is purely despotic. There is no appeal from the decisions of the Worshipful Master. The oath binds the candidate to "obey all the laws, rules and regulations of the lodge of which he shall be a member, and of the Grand Lodge under which it shall be held," and this "covenant is irrevocable. No law of the land can effect it, no anathema of the church can weaken it." In either case the oath may, and often does, require what the law of God has expressly forbidden. In either case the premise of unconditional obedience is a repudiation of the authority of God. There can never be supreme allegiance to more than one sovereign power.

2. Both the military and the lodge systems are based on secrecy. It is not often that the private soldier is invested with military secrets beyond that of the password, but he is part of the machine that executes the secret plans of the campaign. The betrayal of any of these secrets is punishable with death.

In any secret order the covenant of concealment is absolute and unconditional. In Masonry it requires the concealment of crime, and may, in any case, require what ought to be revealed. Like the promise of unconditional obedience, this covenant of absolute secrecy is a repudiation of the higher obligation to obey God.

3. Both war and lodgery teach men to lie and made it praiseworthy to dissimulate. Strategy is the soul of war, and this is simply adroit lying. It is regarded as a grand achievement to deceive an enemy. The greatest generals have been the most successful liars. The oath taken in the lodge "to always conceal" makes it necessary that the lodge member shall pretend that to be false which he knows is true, and that to be true which he knows to be false. By a strange inversion of morals, telling the truth is falsehood; telling a lie is keeping one's oath.

4. Both violate the sixth commandment and teach men so—the lodge in spirit, war in the letter, and both are of Satan.

LETTERS TO THE SEATTLE CONVENTION.

FROM JULIA E. WHITING AND DELIA E. WHITING, TOCOMA, WASH.

Rev P. B Williams:

DEAR SIR:—It would never do for two ex-students of Wheaton College to be so near an anti-secret society convention and not take notice of it in some way. Had it occurred during the holiday week it would have been our pleasure to attend, but now duties forbid. Enclosed find $2 for expenses. Wishing you every success, we are very truly yours.

Jan. 4 1897.

FROM REV DAVID MORROW, OAKLAND, CAL.

To the brethren in convention at Seattle:

REV. P. B. WILLIAMS:—I see that in a few days the anti-secret convention is to meet in Seattle, and cannot restrain from expressing my heart's desire for your success. The work is great; the enemy of the Lord is strong, entrenched behind the bulwark of secrecy, under the cover of darkness. Our faith is nevertheless steadfast that truth will prevail and will overcome darkness and error. Much has been done, and much more work is still needed before the work of reform shall prevail. Brethren, be not discouraged, the work is of the Lord, and though clanism and secrecy is the background of many of the evils of the day, they must fall. God's blessing on you. Yours in the work.

Jan. 13, 1897.

FROM S. M NEFF, CONCONULLY, WASH.

Rev. P. B. Williams:

DEAR BROTHER:—There is not anything that would afford me greater pleasure than to attend the convention at Seattle, but my business is so arranged that I cannot leave home at that time. Though I cannot be with you in person, my prayer is that God in his infinite wisdom and unlimited resources will supply all the needs in every way to make the convention a grand success, that not alone those that are in attendance may be encouraged and blessed, but that the hearts of all the children of God, to whatever denomination they may belong, may be filled with a thrill of joy to know that there are yet a goodly number that have not bowed the knee to Baal, but have grace and courage to stand up boldly for the truth and earnestly contend for the faith that was given to the saints. May God bestow his richest blessings upon you all, and the spirit of truth guide you in all your deliberations. Yours in the work.

Jan 8, 1897.

FROM REV. W. REYNOLDS, SALEM, ORE.

To the Pacific Coast Branch of the National Christian Association at Seattle, Wash., Convention:

GREETING:—May God be with you in all of your deliberations during the convention. I feel very deeply the great need of putting down the secret lodge system. Its effects are becoming more noticeable each successive year for evil. It is withholding support from the church, disrobing her of her honor, and sapping her spirituallity, perverting the just administration of law, and is a menace to society.

These facts no honest minister can fail to see as he endeavors to care for his flock. How thankful we should be that men are coming to the front who dare to oppose such institutions, regardless of the strong prevailing influence of public opinion. I stand with you in your work, and am glad I stand for a church and with a church that strictly prohibits all such institutions. Your co-laborer in the work.

Jan. 12, 1897.

FROM ELDER W. STEWART, PHILOMATH, ORE.

Rev P. B. Williams and members of the Seattle Convention:

GREETING:—It being impossible for me to attend the convention, I hastily write a few lines in acknowledgment of my kindest feeling toward and heart-felt sympathy with you and the object of the convention. I am an open foe of secret societies, not so much for what I know of their inside workings, as what I see of their outside influence.

Next to my glorying in the cross of Christ, I glory in my free American citizenship; and in the hydra-headed deformity of oath-bound secrecy I recognize the insidious foe of our free American institutions. It puts the gag in the mouth of the minister in the pulpit, palsies the arm of justice, weakens and makes inefficient the machinery of government, encourages crime and weakens the moral and religious sentiment of our people. Every true reformer will raise his voice against, and every Christian church should banish it from her communion. May the Lord greatly bless your work.

Jan. 12, 1897.

FROM REV. N. B. JOHNSTON, OAKLAND, CAL.

To the Christian enemies of the lodge system who are assembled in convention at Seattle:

I am asked to write you "a brief letter." That means that you know it all already. And I suppose that outsiders know so much about the secret orders that not much more is to be discovered as to their character; but who that has not given the password and entered within; who that does not see the things actually done inside the lodge, and the deception used by its members outside; who that is not himself one of some order sworn to secrecy can know the ugliness of the whole system?

From my standpoint the evil seems to be growing very rapidly. It is becoming more and more dangerous to society, more and more threatening to the state, and more and more the enemy of true religion and the Church of Christ. I wish we had evidence on the other hand that the intelligent enemies of secrecy were also multiplying in number and growing in efficient zeal. If they are not now, surely they will ere long, unless God intends to give the honor of victory to only a few. That a fierce battle between light and darkness, between organized secrecy and the army of the Prince of Light, will yet be fought, cannot be doubted. Nor can there be any question as to who will be the conquerors. His arm is almighty, and when his sword is drawn in the battlefield it is not returned to the sheath until it is red with the blood of the fallen foes.

But this is only one view of the question. We may fail to see the facts—facts too important to be unnoticed. In the lodges are multitudes of men not altogether bad—many who are not sinning against light—probably some true children of God. Perhaps to these, as well as to others identified with anti-Christian organizations, comes the command: "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partaker of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." To save them from the sin of secrecy should be our constant aim.

Among my friends of days bygone was Rev. Dr. S——. He was a lovely man, a Christian gentleman and a presiding elder in the M. E. church. But he was a Mason. When I had an opportunity to converse with hin on the subject I did not improve it. After his removal to a distant city I wrote him a friendly letter in reference to Masonry. After stating his difficulties in deciding the question, he says: "Further thought and observation convinced me that I was wrong in this, and that unless the avowed object of the organization was evil. the matter of secrecy, which was only the door which they pleased to fasten behind them, should not be held as a crime. I became a Freemason and am in full standing as such in my lodge. The object of Masonry now, as I understand it, is simply to help each other when it can be done consistently with the duties we owe to our families, our country and our God. If this be evil, then Freemasonry is wrong; but I have failed to see it so. .....I have little sympathy with men or churches who fight they know not what, and who seem to conclude that all that is reserved must be reprehensible. The early Christians were evil reported of by Pliny as a sect that met at night and vowed to do no evil and sang hymns to Christ as God. I do not say that Freemasonry is equal to Christianity, but as its purpose is not evil but good, that then its secrecy is no more to put it under ban than the clandestine meetings of the early Christians or the conclaves of the conscientious Covenanters of a later period."

Years afterwards I dined with my friend, Dr. S——, and his family in Los Angeles. I loved the man so much that I almost forgot that I had received such a letter, and I had not the heart to enter into controversy with him in his own house. Perhaps you say, well, what of it? I answer, we must distinguish between men and the systems of iniquity with which they are allied. The sin rests largely upon the churches that fellowship lodge members, and so upon the members of such churches. As we may not belong to the lodge, so we may not belong to a church that fellowships lodge members. In like manner the sin rests upon the civil organization or the State that tolerates the secret orders. Perhaps Napoleon was justifiable in thrusting out the Jesuits from France. Why should the States of this commonwealth foster the secret orders as dangerous as Jesuitism? Whatever others may do we must wash our own hands in innocence and wage a moral warfare against the church or the state that bows the knee to Baal and worships his image. Especially must we get out of them as soon as our legs can carry us, and, like Lot, tarry not in all the plain.

I am too far distant from Seattle to be present in person with you earnest foes of darkness, but my heart will be with you. And I pray God to give you wisdom as well as courage, patience and hope as well as zeal. 'The battle is not yours, but God's."

OUR WEEKLY SERMON.

BY REV. J. S. T. MILLIGAN.

Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed the son of perdition.—2 Thess. 2: 3.

In my last sermon I showed the points of difference between the Pre-Millenarian and Post-Millenarian views. It is well also to note the points in which they agree. They both agree that the Bible is the unerring guide and source of authority on this and other questions. The former, however, hold to a literal interpretation, especially of prophecy, while the latter hold to a spiritual interpretation rather than to a literal. Both hold to a literal personal second coming of Christ. The former hold that it will be to raise the bodies of the righteous and reign on the earth; the latter that it will be at the close of the millennium, to raise all the dead and judge the world.

Both agree that there will be terrible judgments and a fearful destruction of men and overthrow of ungodly systems preceding the millennium. Both agree as to the conversion of the Jews and their restoration to their own land. Both agree that men should come out of ungodly relations into the church and consistent living, and that all should prepare for and hasten the coming of the blessed era. There are some views on both sides of this question that are personal and not common, and we will pass them by for the present.

Now in regard to the Pre-Millenarian theory, or the view that Christ will come in person before the millennium, I must say—

1. That the presumption is against it. It will be conceded that for the last 250 years the views of the overwhelming mass of able Bible expositors have been against it. This is true of the early fathers. This period is certainly that of the best, ablest and most reliable searching into divine truth. The late rapid increase of Pre-Millenarian sentiment is in a period that they themselves concede is one of great declension and will soon end in apostasy.

It is unquestionably materialistic in its nature and tendency. It insists on the letter rather than on the Spirit. It speaks of common-sense renderings, plain meaning and systematic theology, and forgets that the unlearned wrest the Scriptures to their own and others damage. It savors of the first Adam, who was of the earth, earthy, instead of the second, the Lord from heaven. Like Job, we may even loathe this earth, in view of a better country, even the heavenly. This view magnifies the temporal rather than the eternal, "Here we have no continuing city," no house "eternal in the heavens."

2. To my mind the Pre-Millenarian theory is unphilosophical. It identifies Christ's spiritual, celestial and glorified body with this earth as its home and heaven for a thousand years. Paul proves in 1 Cor. 15: 40, that there is a celestial body as well as a terrestrial body, and that there is a difference in their glory. The celestial is not adapted to earth any more than the terrestrial is to heaven. They must each have a suitable invironment, or their glory will be tarnished. Christ's glorified, celestial body is not adapted to permanence here, even for a thousand years. He tells his disciples they ought to be glad at his going to the Father in heaven. He must needs dwell here in humiliation until his earthly work was done. But then he must needs return to the Father.

It is not compatible with the glorified bodies of the saints that they claim will be raised before the millennium. Their bodies will also be celestial like Christ's. They shall hunger no more—why, then, need the earth yield its increase? They shall thirst no more. No water would be needed but that flowing from beneath the throne in heaven. Earthly garments would but hide their glory. The sun would not need to shine on them for either light or heat. Their gravitation would not be to earth, but to heaven and God. If Job could loathe the earth in his terrestrial body, what of those in the celestial? If the Patriarchs sought the better country, why should not the glorified saints? No! no! The better country, even the heavenly, will be more suitable even for a thousand years. Those alive and remaining had better not be changed if they are to stay here so long.

COOKING GAME.

How to Test Wild Fowl—The Proper Way to Prepare Them.

The breasts of all birds should feel thick and firm.

Grouse are old if, when held up by the underpart of the bill, it does not snap across.

Partridges when young have V shaped ends to their long wing feathers, dark bills and yellowish legs.

Pheasants should, if cock birds, have the spurs short and round. They require longer hanging than some kinds of game, otherwise they have less flavor than a fowl. They are really not worth eating till the blood begins to run from their bills when hung up by their feet. If really liked "high," allow them to hang till the feathers under the tail drop.

Birds must be hung in a dry place with a strong current of air through. They are best tied up loosely in coarse muslin or in a gauze hanging meat safe.

Do not pluck or draw them till required for cooking. If the weather is damp or "muggy," a few days will be all that you can keep them.

All game requires to be quickly baked or roasted before a clear, brisk fire and kept thoroughly basted, especially if it has to be cooked in the oven. Use butter for basting. Never have it overdone. Wild duck and teal are by many not considered worth eating unless underdone.

In every case it is an improvement to have a slice of raw fat bacon tied over the breast, it being very important to prevent it getting in the least degree dry or hard. A vine leaf is frequently placed under the bacon when cooking blackcock, quails or ortolan.

The average time for roasting game is as follows:

Babcock and pheasants, 45 minutes.

Grouse, partridges, ptarmigan, 30 minutes.

Wild duck, landrail, woodcock, ortolans, quail, 20 minutes.

Widgeon, teal, snipe, plovers, 15 minutes.

How to Clean Windows.

A little turpentine dissolved in warm water is the best thing to wash window glass, mirrors or glass globes. A little alcohol will also do wonders in brightening glass. Turpentine is excellent for washing sinks which have become dull and dirty.

How to Prepare Oysters on Toast.

Heat the juice of a pint of oysters and skim it. Put a tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan, add a tablespoonful of flour and the juice, mixed with a gill of milk. Add the oysters and finally an egg. Serve on toast.

How to Wash the Hair.

Don't wash the hair too often. It weakens it. Once a week in summer or once a month in winter is sufficient. Always dry the scalp carefully after washing. Use tepid water, with a little bicarbonate of soda added, and for soap that containing the least alkali and most glycerin is the best. Don't strangle your hair to death by braiding it tightly at night. Don't crush its life out by heavy pads, hats or bonnets. Don't poison it by quack nostrums and lotions and don't starve it for need of a good hair tonic at times. Trim it at least once a month. Nothing is a more valuable preventive of falling hair than this. Brush it at least once a day, and use a brush with long bristles, soft and yielding.

How Greek Fire Was Made.

Greek fire, which had several other names—wildfire, liquid fire, wet fire and fire rain—descriptive of its destructiveness, was discovered by Callinicus, a Syrian. It was first used in the siege of Constantinople, 673-678, and at Mecca, 690. According to Joinville, an eyewitness, it made a noise like thunder, looked like a dragon flying through the air and made night light as day. This, allowing for a vivid imagination, gives its striking characteristics when poured from caldrons, shot from copper tubes in balls of twisted flax or expelled from catapults in vials during sieges and naval engagements. Water, especially sea water, made it burn more fiercely, and wherever it fell it spread a torrent of fire. So well was the secret of its production kept that its precise ingredients and admixture were still unknown, but it is tolerably certain that naphtha, sulphur, gums of resinous trees, charcoal, saltpeter, pitch and other bitumens were used. Greek fire was used at Charleston by the Federal troops in 1863. In these days of gunpowder, nitroglycerin and dynamite its use in military operations is wholly superseded.

How to Make Koumiss.

A quart of fresh milk, a fifth of a cake of compressed yeast, a tablespoonful of sugar. Dissolve the yeast in a little lukewarm water and mix it with the lukewarm milk and sugar. Put the mixture into strong bottles (beer bottles may be used) and cork them tightly. Shake the bottles for a few minutes to thoroughly mix the ingredients; then place them on end in a refrigerator or some cold place to ferment slowly. At the end of three days lay the bottles on their sides and turn them occasionally. Five days will be required to perfect the fermentation, and then koumiss is at its best. It will keep for a long time in a cold place.

How to Wash Paint.

Soak a piece of flannel in warm water; then squeeze it until it feels dry. Dip gently into some powdered chalk and rub the painted surface with the flannel. Next wash the surface with clean water in a sponge and dry with a piece of wash leather. This method does not injure the paint, like soap, and produces a very good result.

How to Cure Craving For Stimulants.

A doctor is responsible for the statement that 4 oranges eaten every day are effective in removing the craving for intoxicants. One should be eaten before breakfast and one each at 11 a. m.; 3 and 6 p. m.

FREEMASONRY IN FAMILY AND COURT.

In the mad revel of secret societies the most hopeful sign of the times is the acceptance and dissemination of the revelations and disclosures of those opposed to such institutions. Being placed on their guard by these means, people detect the hidden operations of secret societies and report them in the press, where it is clearly seen that secret associations interfere in pulpit, court and family, as will appear from the following incident in New York:

"'I didn't know the doctor belonged to the same lodge as my husband,' said Mrs. Andrew Musgrave yesterday, who is suing for divorce in the Supreme Court, 'but when Dr. Smith called ne gave him a wink, and the doctor winked back, and said I would be all right.' According to her story the 'wink' had taken place when she was in bed suffering from a beating at her husband's hands, which had caused her to leave him. She said that her husband drank too much, and had threatened to kill her with a pistol.

"Her three daughters corroborated her testimony, and one of them said that her father had boasted that he 'had tipped the doctor off with a wink, and everything would be all right.' Musgrave, who is a coachman employed by Mrs. Melissa P. Dodge, of No. 225 Madison Ave., makes a general denial, and says he is a model husband."

A GOOD NEW YEAR SERMON.

"Evermore occupy your thought with truth. This pursuit becomes the source of sincerity, and sincerity is, perhaps, the chief glory of character. Without veraciousness at the heart of us we are as trees, goodly in the outward parts, but rotten at the core. Well does Iphigenia exclaim:

> "'I have not learned deception, nor the art
> To gain with crafty wiles my purposes.
> Detested falsehood! it doth not relieve
> The breast like words of truth; it comforts not,
> But is a torment in the forger's heart,
> And like an arrow which a god directs,
> Flies back and wounds the archer.'

"As you shrink from a lie in your speech and in your character, do not accustom yourselves to meditate on shams, fictions and current errors."

These are words fitly spoken. How hard it is to associate them with a speaker devoted to the most arrant of all "shams." They are, in effect, admirably Anti-masonic. Masonry is itself a prince among shams. It also cultivates falsity as an element of personal character. Its principles are crooked, and deviate from the true moral line. Its claims are falsity itself, and of all its gross deficiencies hardly any is more marked than its lack of truth. Its essence is fiction, its claims are pure falsehood, and falsity is its natural, personal outcome.

How a devotee of such a system could use the language quoted above, in a sermon which was doubtless preached in the presence of some who were Masons and knew the facts, is a mystery. How these Masons received such teaching, and what impression those would receive, who, like many of them, underrated Christianity, is a natural question. While thoughtlessness, ignorance or infatuation would doubtless save many Masons from the sharpest effect of the incongruity, yet it is hardly to be believed that all Masons who visit Tremont Temple are blind to the vast disagreement between their religion and the Christian religion, or the strangeness of such teaching from a man who advocates Masonry yet preaches Christianity.

Let us follow a little further this excellent sermon. 'How can any mind be placed in a world like this and not be profoundly moved to reflect on the claims of these rivals, of the problems which their warfare suggests and of the obligations which they present? Alas! it is not always the pleasure of man to reflect." "In a world formed to quicken thought he does not think, and in a society presenting so many sides for serious reflection he does not reflect; and consequently we meet continually men and women, sometimes even professors of religion, who have no coherence in their lives." It would be interesting to know whether it crossed the mind of any Mason in the audience, that members of Tremont Temple church who professed one religion in which Christ was primary and indispensable, and another in which he was unmentionable, ought not to be expected by their pastor to lead lives that were coherent. The same Mason, if more clear himself and deploring the superstitious infatuation of others in the lodge, might well be startled to hear the preacher add, "The Bible says, that 'as a man thinks so is he;' not so will he act; for he can do contrary to his thought, but he cannot be contrary to it."

Suppose the hearer a Royal Arch Mason, familiar with its gross irreverence and sacrilegious profanities. Listen with him. "Avoid, as you would the plague, the spirit of irreverence. Sad for the community the day when it approaches God, worship, prayer and other holy realities with the same jocund lightness in which it enters a theatre or handles trade. When it venerates nothing noble and sacred it will fall an easy prey to everything degrading and profane." Perhaps no single sentence has been written in this century which so condensed into a single expression the whole description of the Royal Arch degree as the last one does. As by a flash of lightning one sees suddenly revealed the almost worse than Uzzah-like rashness concerning the ark of the covenant, the awfully profane trifling with the sacred name Jehovah; and then the crawling under the arch with its "stoop lower brethren" and its abused Scripture quotation. To a Royal Arch Mason, clear-eyed as to their real nature, how vividly would such things flash out when that last sentence was uttered.

The New Year sermon at Tremont Temple was a magnificent sermon. It was true in thought and lofty in spirit. Its text was the eighth and ninth verses of the fourth chapter of Philippians, and its subject was thinking and doing. Oh, that thinking even to that afterthought repentance, and doing that which restores coherence, might be the holy outcome at Tremont Temple of such a sermon. What an awful rebuke it is to the triennial conclave that lately marched past the place where this new building stands. What a warning as to such things as the profane fancy drill that literally trampled the cross in the street. What a light on the awful incoherence of lives that fraternize with a debauch and with systematized sacrilege, and still try to claim a place in true worship.

May God bless the preacher, in this new year, in doing and being according to that part of his thinking which is expressed in his New Year sermon. May his hearers be blessed also in following him, not out of the church but into it; out of falsity into truth; out of incongruity into coherence.

DECLARATIONS OF TEMPERANCE LEADERS.

Frances E. Willard, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the world, enroute to the Minneapolis convention, said: "I do not like secret societies, and have no use for them." And in her annual address at the National Convention in Nashville, she declared: "I have always been opposed to secret societies, and never more so than to-day." Then she begins another article on the subject with the positive statement: "My whole record is against secret societies."

Mary Allen West, late editor of the Union Signal, wrote: "I was brought up to believe secret societies wrong; graduated under Pres. J Blanchard, and have never swerved from his teachings and those of my father on this subject. I never belonged to any secret society and never shall."

Mary B. Willard, first editor of the Union Signal, said to Dr. J. Blanchard, then editor of the Christian Cynosure: "When my husband joined the Masonic lodge I thought I should die."

The Union Signal of Dec. 22, 1887, defending the W. C. T. U. from the charge of friendship for secret societies, said: "We refer to Miss Willard's annual address for assurance that the W. C T U. has no intention of affiliating with secret societies."

Clara C. Hoffman, corresponding secretary of the N. W. C. T. U., writes: "I am not favorable to secret societies because I could never see the use of them, and always feared the abuse would overbalance the good done by them."

John B. Gough said: "I was once persuaded to be initiated in a Good Templar's lodge, put on its regalia, and ride in a procession. While in that carriage I looked down on my horse collar and toggery, and I stripped the stuff off in disgust and rammed it under the carriage seat; and I have never worn it from that day to this."

Dwight L. Moody, in Altoona, Pa., said publicly: "The Saviour says, 'In secret have I said nothing.' I do not see how a Christian can join a secret society. The command is, 'Be not unequally yoked with unbelievers.' If you join hands with the enemies of Christ in such associations, they will outvote you and lead you into sin. Years ago I thought of joining a secret temperance society, and about that time they decided on having a dance. That was enough for me. I determined never to have anything to do with such societies."

Gen. A. W. Riley, second only to J. B. Gough in temperance work, has often addressed anti-secrecy conventions on the evils of all secret societies.

Hon. Neal Dow, of Maine, in his speech before the National W. C. T. U. Convention in New York, pointed out the failures and shams of the secret temperance orders.

Joseph Cook at the Chicago Conference, April 23, 1890, said: "Two millions of the voters of the country belong to secret societies and are brothers of the whisky rings and gamblers, who obtain help from the lodges whenever they need it. Three-fourths of the public officials are members of secret societies because it is essential for officeholders to have the support of these orders. The danger from these oath-bound organizations is great, and growing into frightful proportions." —Chicago Herald.

The New York Voice declares: "First, a private pledge means that somebody is to be cheated. If not, why a private pledge? And it is the invariable experience, as far as our observation goes, that the somebody cheated in such agreements is never the liquor men. Our fights should all be open and above board."

"A clergyman in Bath, Me., was urging the prosecution of a notorious saloon. He applied to an attorney, who said to him, 'Are you a Mason?' The minister replied that he was. 'Well,' answered the attorney, 'That saloonkeeper is a Mason, and you had better let him alone.' The case was dropped. That clergyman was too good a lodgeman to violate his obligation."—Home Guard

Dr. John A Brooks says he has gone back on Masonry and never expects to go inside the lodge again.

Hon. John P. St. John, in a published letter, says: "I was once a Mason, having passed to the Royal Arch degree. I have not been in a lodge for about sixteen years; have paid no dues, and am in no manner connected with the order, and never shall be again. I have made this statement to at least a hundred different persons, and supposed my position touching the matter was thoroughly understood."

The people are learning that prohibition, with the grip and sign in the court room, is a costly experiment. The temperance leaders and our officials should not be the sworn brethren of the liquorites.

THE PLACE OF PROGRESSIVE EUCHRE.

Following are extracts from a new and obviously very timely tract bearing the above title, by Josiah W. Leeds:

"Holy Writ tells us how impracticable it is to acceptably serve two masters—both the Lord God of heaven, and the god of this world, which is Mammon. The way of the world is described as a broad way, and it taketh in, without any trouble at all, the round dance and the waltz and the spread of a hundred tables for the play of progressive euchre. The appearance of charity may also be observed there, circling among the dancers and bending above the tables of the many gamblers. But, is he whom some at least of the dancers and players may have professed to serve, honored of offerings of money and self-pleasing sacrifices such as these? He has shown us clearly that he is not. It was only to-day that I was reading of the death (which occurred but a few weeks since) of the Indian chief, Scar-faced Charile. In the Modoc war of nearly a quarter of a century ago in Oregon, it is said that it was he who fired hhe first shot that precipitated the tragedy of the Lava-Beds which cost General Canby his life. Taken to the Indian Territory, and his heart providentially touched by the truths of the Gospel and the grace of God's quickening Spirit, his life became entirely changed. Now the first outward act that marked this happy change was the giving up of that thing of which the Indian is so fond, his gambling. It is with such an offering as this that God is well pleased, and may there many with vastly better opportunities be found to emulate the Modoc chief's consistent example.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Next week the obituary notice of our beloved brother, Wallace J. Gladwin, editor of the India Watchman, will be printed. He fell asleep in Jesus at Bombay, India, Jan. 11, 1897.

—An interesting letter just received from Bro. Hinman must await next issue. He tells of his recent labors in the anti secrecy reform, having visited Selma, Ala., New Orleans and Hammond, La. He is now back in Beloit, Ala.

—Editor M. A. Gault and wife were summoned by telegram to Bloomington, Ind., last Friday morning to attend the funeral of Miss Mattie McCaughan. She was a devoted member of his former congregation at Bloomington, and an earnest friend of our reform.

—A letter from Secretary W. B. Stoddard, dated at Royersford, Pa., is received too late for this number. He reports good meetings and a growing interest in the Beacon Light Mission, at Philadelphia. He reports the work on the petition to be going forward nicely, and that over 500 names had been secured.

—The March Century is to be an "Inauguration Number," devoted especially to articles on life in the White House and the capital, illustrated with a great number of interesting pictures, including two new portraits of Major McKinley and one of President Cleveland at his desk,—all from photographs taken especially for The Century.

—Secretary Williams writes: "We are having fine weather in Los Angeles, and I do hope the change will help Mrs. Williams. I spoke twice yesterday to good congregations. I am billed for two nights next week at Santa Ana, the county seat of Orange county. Hope the work will develop well here and appointments open for me between here and Chicago in May."

—The demonstration meeting of the District W. C. T. U., of Washington, held in Hamline M. E. church this week, was a successful and enjoyable affair. Miss Frances Willard sent a letter of regret. Short addresses were made by several, including Representative Morse, of Massachusetts, but the principal address, on "Responsibilities," was made by Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, of Connecticut, national superintendent of the department of legislation. The meeting adopted a resolution declaring that Senator Hill was mistaken when he declared that the signers of the various petitions asking for the passage, by Congress, of the bill prohibiting the sale of intoxicants in the United States Capitol were "meddlesome busy-bodies," and again asking that the Senate pass that bill.

—The Baltimore American says that at Staunton, Va., great excitement prevails among the colored people over a very singular occurrence there on Feb. 9th. It had been reported that Harry Coleman, once a political figure and much respected colored man, had died at the insane asylum at Petersburg. His colored brethren and Masonic friends ordered the body sent for interment. It came on the ninth, and the colored Masons, in their regular regalia, paraded the streets, met the body at the depot and took it in solemn procession to the cemetery, about a mile from town. After the services at the grave, a sister of Coleman's desired to look at her brother, and the friends proceeded to open the case, which to their surprise was fastened with long wrought nails, driven very close together, making a difficult thing to open it. When, however, the face was exposed to view, it was not Coleman at all, but a stranger, totally unknown to the colored people there. The colored people are very much incensed. They have spent their money and failed to get the body of their friend. How could it have happened?

tween eleven and twelve o'clock when we arrived. They report a wonderful revival in progress at the U. B. church. Between sixty and seventy have been converted, many sanctified and thirty or forty cases of divine healing, some very remarkable, where the physician had given up that there was no hope save by a surgical operation. The Lord has wonderfully surprised the people. From reports it is much like in olden times. "The people came running to see." The house is crowded, and some nights crowds go away for want of room. Revs. Gregory and Davis, evangelists, and Reynolds, the pastor, are doing a good work, and we hope it may continue.

Near Roseburg the train slowed down at the point where the almost fruitless attempt was made to rob the train a few nights before. They destroyed the baggage and express car entirely, but could not open the safe, although they used dynamite freely. Fourteen dollars and fifty cents is said to be all they secured, and that was taken from the pockets of the express agent.

After crossing the Siskiyose mountains, we passed a derailed freight train, where about fourteen cars and the engine went down the embankment. One man, who was stealing a ride, was killed. After passing Lathrop on Wednesday we passed a wrecked pussenger train, where it appeared as if the whole train was on its side. One man killed in this wreck. How often we have reason to thank our heavenly Father for bringing us through safely where we see so many signs of disaster.

We landed here at 7:30 on the fourth, and were met at the train by Bro. and Sister Sargeant and their daughter Lulu, formerly of Salem, Ore., and friends of years gone by on this coast. We are here for work in the Master's vineyard, and have a number of appointments already to speak on the lodge evil. We ask the friends to pray that we may have great success here in turning men from the ways of darkness into the light. In another letter I will relate some experiences of the trip with lodge passengers.

P. B. WILLIAMS.

OUR MICHIGAN COLPORTEUR.

SPRING ARBOR, Mich., Jan. 12, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I thought, perhaps, that the readers of the Cynosure would be pleased to know where I am and what I am doing. I left home Dec. 30th to go to Hillsdale, Mich., and on my way there I stopped where there was a revival meeting, and in my testimony I told them where God showed me my lost condition without Christ. Then I sought after him, but before he would pardon my sins I had to give up my Freemasonry. I would not give it up until I saw that God really required me to, for I knew many preachers as well as other members were Masons, and I wanted that kind of religion, but I found that God had not that kind for me, and I could not see how any Christian could belong to any secret order since the Bible condemned them all. As soon as the meeting was out they gathered around me like a lot of bees. I soon found that I had not only found Masons, Grangers and Good Templars, but that I had uncovered a nest of Maccabees. I have found out by my own experience that when anyone talks against lodges, that they all seem to be related as pigs are to the old mother. The mother of little lodges is Freemasonry.

They felt very angry towards me, but God kept me sweet in my soul. I had told them in my testimony that if they got saved, that they would have to give up all that God presented to their minds as wrong, and if they could get through any cheaper than I could I would say amen to it.

In the morning I went through to Hillsdale where I had a chance to go from store to store and house to house with books. I did not sell many, but gave them tracts to shed light. I found myself in a strong Masonic town. While in a store several Masons went for me for showing such books, after having taken such obligations as we all have to take in lodges. I told them that the Masons had deceived me, for they said that the obligations did not conflict with any of the duties that I owed to God or family or myself, and I found it did and God had told me to confess, so I took my Bible out and called their attention to Matt. 5:33–38 where it tells us not to forswear ourselves; also to Lev. 5:4, 5, Eph. 5:11–15. They saw that I had the advantage of them so they said that I was a fool. I told them what a strong Mason I had been when I was one, but that I had to give it up before God would pardon me.

I feel that God is helping me to shed light on others, and that God is blessing my soul as I walk in the light.

I stopped at Hanover to see Rev. O. H. Perry, the M. E. preacher who has been a thirteen degree Mason and an Odd-fellow, but he told me that he had to give both up and felt sometimes that he ought to go out and lecture against it. I felt encouraged to hear it for I don't see how any Christian could take such horrible oaths as many preachers do, contrary to God's Word. They ought to be leading men out of lodges and to God. I learned that Rev. Perry had been preaching against secret orders, and that the Maccabees were stirred; that some that got up and went out were his members. So I find if a man comes out against lodges, that the devil will be stirred, for they are not of God, for he has said, in secret have I said nothing.

The devil gets the people busy providing for their widows and children, but does not care about their souls. Christ has said that he will not be found in the secret chambers. Matt. 24:26. Dear Christians, how can you go contrary to 2 Cor. 6:14–18, and you Masons that are professing to be Christians think of Luke 12:2-6. You know that the passwords and Master's word is given in that way in the lodge, and God says: Proclaim upon the house-top; be not afraid of them that kill the body and after that have no more that they can do; but I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear; fear him which after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell. He is whom I now fear, for when God saved me he took the fear of man away, or I would not have dared to do what I have done since.

I want all to apply those paragraphs of Scripture that I have given and say if they do not condemn all secret orders, much more then the ones that you are trying to sustain it by.

If you know of any preacher that can find more Scripture to sustain the orders than can be found to condemn them, please answer through Cynosure.

HOW AN EDITOR ESCAPES BEING ROASTED ALIVE.

WORKING UP THE MINNESOTA CONVENTION.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 6, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Sometimes a clock is a bad thing to have in a meeting house, especially when the Holy Spirit has free course in the hearts of believers. It was a clock in the gallery front before me that was the means of causing me to grieve the Holy Spirit on last Lord's Day evening. An invitation from the President of our State Association, Bro. Petri, to preach to his congregation had been accepted, and before the climax of the theme was reached that clock warned me that it was fifteen minutes past the time appointed for the end of the sermon. And no sooner was the warning heeded than the mistake that I had made was seen; for an opportunity to present truth to 1,500 or 2,000 attentive listeners was lost. But the pastor said that I should have another opportunity. And I am resolved to begin as near the climax of the theme as possible the next time.

Rev. A. Helland, pastor of St. Olaf's church, corner of Dupont and 16th Ave., N. Minneapolis, invites me to speak in his church on next Wednesday evening (10th inst.) on "Secret Societies and Their God." An editor of a daily paper in this city says, that when he joins a secret society he takes care to be initiated at the same time with others, so as to avoid the rough treatment that one is apt to receive when initiated alone. We may suppose, for fear he may be roasted alive or have an arm shaved off.

Will the readers of the Cynosure in this State please see that the State Convention is advertised in their local newspapers?

W. FENTON.

A Good Example.

"There," said Brown, with a shake of his head,
"I've painted the house and the barn and shed!
The fence has been fixed, and the lawn's been mowed,
But I do wish the town would fix up that road.
It's a shame, I call it, just plain and flat,
That we have to drive over roads like that!
I'll wait no longer; I'll start today
And fix my part of it anyway."

Now Brown was one of those fellows who,
When they start a thing, just "rush it through."
And a week or two after, as Neighbor Jones
Was driving home with his pair of roans,
Brown's road was dry, while his own, next door,
Was mud to the depth of a foot or more.
"By George," said Jones, "I'll let Brown see
That I can build roads as well as he!"

Now Neighbor Smith, who lived below,
Saw Jones repairing his road, and so
He fixed up his, to be "in the game,"
And Neighbor Robinson did the same,
And soon every householder in town
Was trying his best to "beat out Brown."
And now, when the town committee meets
To talk of the roads, they call them "streets."

* * * * * * *

The moral this tale to the reader brings
Applies to roads and to other things.
Reforms, like snowballs, will keep on growing
If somebody only sets them going.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 21.
Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Our little worries and how to get rid of them.—Ps. cxxi, 1-8; John xiv, 1.

The One Hundred and Twenty-first Psalm is one of the most beautiful of the psalms. Some have supposed it was written in exile. Others conjecture that it was used by the caravans of pilgrims going up to the yearly feasts when they first came in sight of the mountains on which Jerusalem stands. Whether it was the exile looking from a distant land to the mountains whence came his help or the pilgrim nearing the sacred city, the leading thought is the same—namely, that the Lord is our keeper, and we may trust Him in all the various phases of life when there is trouble and difficulty. It is the same thought that is emphasized in John xiv, 1: "Let not your heart be troubled. Ye believe in God; believe also in Me."

The idea expressed, that Jehovah, the Maker of heaven and earth, helps and keeps the individual, is a comforting one. We might imagine sometimes that the individual is lost sight of by God in the myriads of people in the world. We might be tempted to think that our little troubles and worries could not surely interest the Maker of heaven and earth. But the psalmist teaches us differently. "My help," he says, "cometh from Jehovah, the Maker of heaven and earth." And again he adds: "Jehovah is thy keeper. * * * The sun shall not smite thee by day nor the moon by night." God cares for each one of us. "Not a sparrow falls to the ground without His notice," and if He cares for a sparrow how much more for those created in His own image?

The constancy of Jehovah's care and guardianship is beautifully expressed. Day and night He watches over us and keeps us. We need not fear that our keeper may sleep. "He that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep." He cannot sleep is the sense of this expression. His eye is always upon us and His great, loving heart interested in us at all times.

The universal application of Jehovah's willingness and power to keep and uphold us is strikingly set forth. "The sun shall not smite thee by day nor the moon by night." Sunstroke is a special danger of the east. In hot climates the influence of the moon is often injurious, causing dizziness and even death when one is exposed for a length of time to its shining. These two figures may illustrate that in great trials (the sun) and even in the smaller worries and cares of life (the moon) the Lord is our keeper.

The Bible has but one plan of refuge for all worries and troubles, whether they are great or small. We should cast all our cares upon the Lord, for He careth for us.

Bible Readings.—Ps. xxvii, 1-6; lxii, 1-8; cxviii, 8-14; cxx, 1-7; cxxiii, 1, 2; cxxx, 1-8; Isa. xii, 1, 2; xl, 29-31; Math. xi, 28-30; John xiv, 27; xvi, 33; Acts vii, 59, 60; xvi, 35; Phil. iv, 4-7; II Thess. iii, 1-3; I Pet. v, 6, 7.

Personal Service.

Of the Saviour, and only of the Saviour, is it true in the fullest, broadest and most unqualified sense, "He went about doing good." From this description it is evident that He did good personally. The evangelists constantly tell us He touched the leper with His finger; that He anointed the eyes of the blind, and that in cases where he was asked to speak the word only at a distance. He did not usually comply, but went Himself to the sickbed and there personally wrought the cure. A lesson to us, if we would do good, to do it ourselves. "He hath left us an example that we should follow in His steps."—Lutheran Observer.

The Preaching of the Law.

Men go to great lengths to bring the preaching of the law into discredit and disfavor. They strive to belittle the Old Testament and the epistles that they may destroy a legal spirit, as they call it, and establish the reign of love. But love is law. Love without law is not love. God as a sovereign has established law in the natural and spiritual world. He administers law. Obedience is life with honor; disobedience is death with dishonor.—Christian Intelligencer.

Working For Christ.

Some time ago a Mexican convict was converted through the efforts of the Zacatecas Christian Endeavor society. Later, together with his wife, he traveled a long distance to attend the national Christian Endeavor convention and upon his return home organized a Christian congregation.

Too Insignificant.

The man who habitually pushes himself into conspicuous places is probably afraid that he is too insignificant to be noticed unless he puts himself where people cannot help seeing him.—American Friend.

No Time to Meddle.

He who is taken up with the King's business has no time to meddle with his neighbor's.—Christian Instructor.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems of Truth Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Character is a book that will be opened at the judgment. The character of every man is being written every day in indelible letters upon his soul. Scars upon our person, made in our boyhood, we carry to our grave. So all sins will show their brand upon the soul in eternity.—Rev. Warren G. Partridge, Baptist, Cincinnati.

Evil Methods In Business.

The customs, the practices of the day, the commodious falsehoods, the gainful evasions, the concealments, the misrepresentations—all bear witness to the fact that it is not difficult to make business, so called, a splendid game, where a man may stake his all to win or lose, regardless of character, if he will. Public sentiment often burns with unhealthy excitement.—Rev. Michael Burnham, Congregationalist, St. Louis.

Man's Insignificance.

Man is but an atom of matter on another atom of matter. No one is necessary to the world. As a mote in a sunbeam is the career of the greatest man that ever lived. And it is a struggle for existence, knowledge against ignorance, riches against poverty, a bitter, hard, selfish struggle. Material interest and material development threaten to dwarf man's life and the thought of life.—Bishop T. L. Gailor, Episcopal, Tennessee, at Louisville.

Glimpses of the Beyond.

I do not lay any stress on ghosts and manifestations, but in the case of dying persons breaking through the veil and catching a glimpse of the beyond, there is a difference. I believe it possible, probable, that they really do. If, as some people say, it is simply a dissolution of the memories treasured in the brain, a flashing of one of these impressions, why is it the dying persons only see, as a rule, one person? Why do they not see a great many persons? As a matter of fact, they only see one person, one whom they dearly loved and who dearly loved them, and the one person most likely to come to meet them. My friends, I think there is something in visions by the dying. We have gone to the border in what we may call psychical visions. I take no stock in clairvoyance or spiritualism. You'll all admit that for the most part mediums are frauds. You would not want to pin your faith on the things they profess to reveal. There is danger in doing that, a risk incurred. But in this study of psychical visions there is nothing that can do you any harm. It simply strengthens your faith in the future of the soul.—Rev. S. P. Sprecher, Presbyterian, Cleveland.

The Business of the Church.

What have preaching or preachers to do with society distinctions? The merchant is ready to sell his goods to any customer. Silks and satins may brush against gingham and calico, but that is nothing to him. His business is to sell his goods. May not the preacher and the church of this wide awake age be just as wise? The prime object of the church is to win sinners, and nothing should be allowed to interfere with that.—Rev. Stephen A. Northup, Baptist, Kansas City.

The Woman's Bible.

Within the past few years the Bible has been attacked by people who call themselves believers in God, yet they hesitate not to tear down his word and to substitute their own interpretation for that of the authorized teacher—the church which Christ established 1,900 years ago. Recently we have had a marked illustration of the lack of reverence for the Bible in what the authors were pleased to call a "Woman's Bible." Fortunately it has been buried by the indignant protests of the people, and I think beyond resurrection. — Bishop Horstmann, Catholic, Cleveland.

Spain's Iniquity.

The cup of Spain's iniquity is full. It is pre-eminently the nation of misrule. Its record is the bloodiest one of all modern nations. Its methods of warfare are barbarous and inhuman. Its tender mercies are cruel. It has brought into play again the nameless tortures of its old, detestable inquisition. It drags the reputed dead body of the gallant Maceo, who has outgeneraled Spain at every turn, at its horses' heels. But all in vain. Another general, the god of battles, will raise up to lead the determined Cuban patriot band to victory. —Bishop Fallows, Reformed Episcopal, Chicago.

Unworthy Condescension.

I pity from my heart the Christian embassador who, for popularity's sake, can get his consent to "come down" to themes and methods on which God Almighty must frown. Only a few months ago a gentleman visiting one of our American cities consulted the morning paper to ascertain the subjects on which the preachers were to preach that day. And what did he find? The following themes, so calculated to build up spiritual life: "Is the Trilby Craze Dying Out?" "How the Pastor Spent His Vacation," "High Sleeves and Theater Hats," "Canal Street on Saturday Night," "Rights of Motormen," "Fitzsimmons Versus Corbett."—Rev. Kerr B. Tupper, Baptist, Philadelphia.

SUPPOSED DISCOVERIES THAT WERE KNOWN AGES AGO.

Hindoo Claim That the Ancients Knew Far More Than Is Credited to Them. Reference to Wendell Phillips' Lecture on "The Lost Arts."

A learned Indian prince, Thakore Sahib of Gondal, is the author of a history of Aryan medical science issued from the London press. This book advances some remarkable claims on behalf of Hindoo science and civilization.

Prince Thakore asserts that the grandest discoveries of western medical genius, such as vaccination, anæsthesia and antiseptic surgery, were all practiced among the Hindoos many centuries ago. He declares that in the "Ayur Veda," or "Science of Life," which is the most ancient of all Brahmin books on medicine, nearly all the best modern methods of medical diagnosis as well as of practical surgery are fully set forth. The circulation of the blood, which we say was discovered by Harvey, is said to be fully set forth in this ancient volume of the Hindoo scriptures. Prince Thakore also cites historical evidence to show that cranial and abdominal surgical operations of the most difficult kind, such as we have supposed were never performed until within the last 50 years, were done 1,000 years ago in the land of Buddha. He points to the record of the trephining of King Bhoja of Dhar, who lived about A. D. 977, to relieve him of severe pains in his head. The record clearly states that the king was rendered unconscious, his cranium opened, the cause of the trouble removed from the brain, the wound closed up and his trouble completely cured. Jivaka, who was Buddha's own physician, performed similar operations.

Such claims tend to shake the self esteem of western peoples as the wisest and most highly inventive that have ever occupied the earth and to cast a doubt upon their boast that they are "the heirs of all the ages in the foremost files of time." It is no new thing, however, for us to be told that all light travels from the east to the west and not from the west to the east. We speak of Asia as "the cradle of the race," and so it undoubtedly was. We need not be surprised therefore if, as Asia becomes better known and its antiquities more closely inquired into, we should find that much of the supposed new knowledge of the west was familiar in the east when the world was young. Wendell Phillips' most celebrated lecture was entitled "The Lost Arts." Curiously enough, it is not included in the standard edition of his published works. A pamphlet copy of it, published 20 years ago, is hard to find. The famous Massachusetts orator very largely forestalled the claims of Prince Thakore. He boldly declared that of 100 marvelous things known to the nineteenth century 99 of them had been anticipated by the ancients. He pointed more particularly to mechanical arts and inventions. He quoted Pliny to show that Nero had a ring with a gem in it through which he looked and watched the sword play of the gladiators in the arena more clearly than with the naked eye—a style of opera glass unknown to us moderns.

The use of microscopes of immense power in ancient Egypt, Persia and Greece is fairly presumable, because there is a gem shown at Parma, once worn on the finger of Michael Angelo, the engraving whereon is 2,000 years old and which reveals the figures of seven women only with the aid of a strong magnifying glass. Sir Henry Rawlinson brought home from Nineveh a stone about 20 inches long and 10 inches wide containing a whole treatise on mathematics that was utterly illegible without a microscope. And if it cannot be read without a microscope it could not have been engraved without similar aid. Mr. Phillips averred that the art of coloring reached a perfection among the ancients far beyond our own. The burned city of Pompeii was a city of stucco. The exteriors of the walls and all its buildings were of stucco, and the stucco was stained with tyrian purple, the royal color of antiquity. The city has been buried 1,800 years, yet whenever the walls of one of its houses are dug out the royal purple flames up to view with a great deal richer hue than any we can produce. Evidently the Pompeiians possessed a secret for making fast colors that we have not. When the English despoiled the summer palace of the emperor of China, they brought home curiously wrought metal vessels of every kind, and European metal workers confessed their inability to reproduce them.

Sheffield steel is an English boast, but it will not bear the atmosphere of India without gilding. Yet the Damascus blades used in the crusades were not gilded, and they are as bright and keen today as they were eight centuries ago. There was one shown at the London exhibition in 1862 the point of which could be made to touch the hilt and which could be put into the scabbard like a corkscrew and bent every way without breaking. The best steel in the world today does not come from either Europe or America, but from the Punjab.

Sir Walter Scott in his "Tales of the Crusaders" describes a meeting between Richard Cœur de Lion and Saladin, in which the English monarch is made to think that Saladin practices the black art because the latter takes an eiderdown pillow from the sofa and causes it to fall in two pieces by drawing his keen blade across it. Travelers in India tell of seeing Hindoos throw handfuls of floss silk into the air and cut them in pieces with their fine edged sabers. There is no steel made in western workshops of that quality. So, too, with the art of glass cutting. It was supposed 30 years ago that there were no ancient glass factories, but the Pompeiian excavations revealed a workshop full of ground glass, window glass, cut glass and colored glass of every variety.—Baltimore Sun.

THESE ASTORS ARE POOR.

Claim to Be the Despised Cousins of the New York Millionaires.

In apartments on the first floor of the double tenement house 222 Railroad avenue, Jersey City, reside three generations of the Astor family, cousins of the millionaire Astors of New York.

They are Ludwig Astor, his son, Carl Frederick Astor, and his grandson, Louis Astor, 9 years old; William Waldorf Astor, 6 years old, and Henry Astor, 6 months.

Attention has been brought to the family by the published fact that a few days ago a Hudson county jury awarded young William Waldorf Astor $10,000 in a suit brought by his father against Grocer John Brede of Brede & Lutjen, 233 Newark avenue, who threw a bag of flour at him on Sept. 22 last, permanently injuring him.

Carl Frederick Astor, father of the boy, is a bookkeeper without a position. He has been in this country 15 years. He has sold frankfurters to keep a roof over his little family and provide for his old father's wants. He had his stand near the First National Bank building, Jersey City

He says that his great-grandfather was well off when the family of the first Astor, who made a fortune here from furs, were poor. They were cousins, and his grandfather, when a boy, he says, cared for the father of John Jacob Astor for some time before the latter's death. For this, he says, he received nothing.

Mr. Astor says he has frequently written to the Astors in New York asking that they help him to a position, but never received an answer. He has also called upon the family, only to meet with rebuffs.

Little William Waldorf Astor's misfortune has made him almost an idiot. He is a slightly built little fellow, and if any one touches his head he cries with pain. His brothers are strong and healthy, as was he before the accident that made him what he is.

His grandfather is a fine looking old German, who grows animated as he tells of the former glories of the Astor family at Waldorf.—New York Journal.

FOR THE INAUGURAL.

Mrs. McKinley's Gown Will Be Rather Plain and Not Decollete.

Details of the inauguration gown of Mrs. McKinley have been finally decided. The material for the gown has been selected. It is a brocade of silver and white, the combination producing a sort of gray color. It will be lined with pale blue satin.

The gown is to be made rather plain. The corsage will have a fluffy fichu of point d'alencon. Though the neck will be made high with soft laces, yet it will have the decollete effect. The sleeves will be long and finished with a full frill of lace.

The skirt, with its stately train, is to have several panels of handsome brocade. The idea is to have the gown not elaborate and at the same time rich in effect.

This is one of eight gowns which Mrs. McKinley had fitted during her stay in Chicago.

A PITIABLE PEOPLE.

French Laborers Spend Nearly All Their Wages For Alcohol.

A good deal of superficial claptrap is repeated year after year by writers about the remarkable sobriety of the Latin races generally and of the French people in particular. The Italians certainly seem to be as abstemious as they are hard working, but as for the French they are declared by their own most eminent medical authorities to be undergoing a rapid process of degeneration, brought on by the reckless consumption of brain paralyzing, blood poisoning liquors.

Dr. Brunon, the well known director of the medical school at Rouen, and a student of his, M. Tourdot, have just published the results of their studies on the subject, and these are eminently calculated to alarm French patriots. The latter gentleman dressed himself up as a waiter and obtained a place in a tavern in Rouen frequented by the lowest class of workmen, many of whom sleep there for a penny a night.

The guests of this and similar places were the principal objects of M. Tourdot's investigations, and he says that these pitiable people, who earn about fourpence an hour, came regularly, drank their hour's wages in a few minutes, went back to earn more by the most laborious work, and then took to drinking the proceeds of it in like manner till day wore on into night and consciousness was dimmed to intoxication. Sometimes he saw 150 glasses of the most pernicious alcohol served out in the short space of ten minutes.

Dr. Brunon bitterly complains of the enormous number of little taverns of this type and mentions one street in Rouen containing 150 houses, of which 75 are licensed to sell poisonous beverages.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE ADDER'S STING.

Solomon Spoke Truth When He Admonished Against Wine.

Solomon was a wise man and wrote a great many wise thoughts, but he never wrote a clearer or more forcible truth than is found in the book of Proverbs xx, 1, "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." And yet, in the light of this wisdom, we see much of foolishness and deception.

I admit that there is a period in the drink habit when conviviality seems to hold sway, when companionship is sought, and the individual is praised for his generosity and independence of restraint. He is regarded as a man in whose veins there is no puritanic blood, one who believes in having a good time. But Solomon wrote another thing about strong drink that I would have you ponder—viz, "At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder;" hence the admonition, "Look not upon the wine when it is red."

Persons are often deceived into believing that they can drink or let it alone. There is a time when this may be true; but, consenting to drink and not let it alone, there comes a time when a man can no more let it alone than he can resist the current of a mighty river—a time when the endearments of home, the entreaty of loved ones, the attractions of wealth and honor, are powerless to resist the progress of a vitiated appetite or turn him back from the untold horrors of a drunkard's life, a drunkard's death and a drunkard's hopeless eternity.—Rev. R. E. Smith, D. D.

DRINKS COME HIGH.

London's Expenditure For Alcoholic Liquors This Year Is About $100,000,000.

The most recent temperance statistics published in London show that the annual consumption of liquor in the capital is largely on the increase. It is estimated that the sum of £20,000,000, or $100,000,000, will be spent this year in acoholic drinks by the dwellers in the metropolis. This sum, it is computed, would nearly eight times pay for the school board maintenance, added to the cost of necessary new school buildings.

The appropriations for the relief of the poor in London are about $13,000,000, which is only one-eighth of the total drink bill. The London debt of about $96,000,000 could be paid in one year by the amount spent on liquor and a balance of nearly $4,000,000 left over.

When it is taken into consideration that liquor is much cheaper in London than here, the enormous quantity consumed is largely in excess of what it at first appears to be.

Setting a Good Example.

Total abstinence from intoxicating liquors is always within the limit of safety. "Temperance," as it is commonly understood in this country and almost invariably in others, is not in every instance within that limit. It is an interesting and a significant fact that Bishop Temple, the recently appointed primate of the Church of England, is an outspoken total abstinence man. Perhaps the most telling part of an address delivered in London recently, in which he again avowed his total abstinence principles, was the passage wherein he said that when he looked into the condition of the men who live by labor he felt that the best thing he could do for them was to set them an example of absolute abstinence from the use of everything that intoxicates.—Exchange.

The Rum Traffic.

Sixty million dollars are annually expended in this country for the apprehension and punishment of criminals, made so by the liquor traffic, and 40,000 criminals are supported in the prison houses of the country at the public expense. Add to this all other expenses of government caused by the liquor traffic, such as the large amounts necessary to provide for the insane and the pauper classes that have been made such by intemperance, and you will discover that the amount annually expended by government in consequence of this traffic is enormous.—Exchange.

Total Abstinence Promotes Health.

That the death rate in Scottish prisons is only 8 per 1,000 is with good reason ascribed by The Scottish Reformer to the disuse of intoxicating liquors and the healthful benefit of the prison regimen. There is no doubt that were the liquor traffic banished also from the country at large many of these same people would be law abiding citizens and live in comfort, conforming to good morals and customs as strictly as could be desired.

Rum's Death Roll.

The statistics of the government in reference to loss of life by alcoholic drinks give about 70,000 deaths each year. But a conservative estimate of the deaths caused by alcoholic poisoning, though credited to other causes, would increase the number to 100,000 annually.

The Atlanta Woman Suffrage association is discussing the advisability of calling a state suffrage convention in that city.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON IX, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, FEB. 28.

Text of the Lesson, Acts viii, 1-17—Memory Verses, 5-8—Golden Text, Acts viii, 4—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

1. Satan was very angry and stirred up the religious Pharisees, who thought that Jesus Christ was a blasphemer and an impostor and therefore justly put to death, to do all they could to stamp out this sect of apostles from Judaism, but this was overruled by God to scatter the truth of His great redemption. The command had been given, "Go ye into all the world," and the assurance also that they should be His witnesses unto the ends of the earth (Mark xvi, 15; Acts i, 8); but, being slow to obey, they had to be scattered by persecution. We would think that the apostles would be the first to go forth, but the record is that all were scattered except the apostles.

2. With great sorrow they laid away the poor broken body of Stephen till the resurrection. While they knew that he was certainly with the Lord in glory, they would greatly miss him, and for the body, and for the bereaved friends and relatives, the work of the great enemy, death, is always sorrowful work. Even Jesus wept at the grave of Lazarus, though He knew that He would in a few moments give him back to his sisters.

3. Saul seems to have been the leader in the persecution of the Christians. His own testimony in after years was "Beyond measure I persecuted the church of God and wasted it," "A blasphemer and a persecutor and injurious" (Gal. i, 13; I Tim. i, 13). See also his more full testimony in Acts xxvi, 9-11.

4. Those who were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word. Men, women and children could tell of Him who was crucified, who rose from the dead, who appeared to hundreds of His followers and afterward visibly ascended to heaven, and who was surely coming back from heaven in due time to restore all things of which the prophets had spoken (Acts i, 3 11; iii, 20, 21), and that all who would receive Him now by faith would have in Him the forgiveness of all their sins (Luke xxiv, 47; Acts xiii, 38, 39), and come with Him in glory (I Thess. iv, 14).

5. This is Philip of the committee of seven of chapter vi, 5, not Philip of John xiv, 8, one of the apostles. Stephen, the leader of the seven, being promoted, Philip, the next named in order, seems called to special service by the Holy Spirit. He preached Christ in His humiliation and exaltation, in His life and death and resurrection, His ascension, intercession and return, and that through Him all who accept Him have redemption in Him, even the forgiveness of sins.

6. The word which Philip spake was followed by miracles which God did by him, God thus working with him by the Holy Spirit (Mark xvi, 20). Philip sought only honor and glory of God through Christ, and the power of the Lord was manifested in the people giving heed with one accord to what was spoken.

7, 8. There was great joy in that city as they saw the lame and the palsied healed and evil spirits cast out, and receiving Christ as Israel's Messiah, and their own personal Saviour had the assurance of eternal life as a present possession. It is the will of God that His people be full of joy (John xv, 11; xvi, 24; xvii, 13). But there is no way to be full of joy except by believing (Rom. xv, 13).

9. One who had beforetime deceived the people by wonderful works which he wrought in the power of the evil one—for the devil has in the past wrought miracles and will again before the Lord comes in His glory (Ex. vii, 11, 12; Rev. xiii, 11-15)—is now introduced to us as being among the believers. He had exalted himself before the people as being some great one, but he saw in Philip the work of a greater than he had ever heard of.

10, 11. Before Philip came all gave heed to Simon, looking upon him as the great power of God. He was a sample, like many others who have been and are now, and especially of one who is to come (Rev. xiii, 3, 4), of a satan filled man glorifying himself and doing his will that he himself may prosper. See Dan. xi, 36. How shall we know whether we are to give heed to or beware of one who doeth wondrous works?

12. The words and works of God through Philip, the name of Jesus Christ and the things concerning the kingdom of God took such hold of the people in the power of the Spirit that many believed in the Lord, both men and women, and publicly confessed their faith by baptism. Philip did not seek, like Simon, to draw people to himself; but, hiding himself, he exalted Christ that people might be drawn to Him. If Christ is magnified, He will to this day draw people unto Him.

13. It must have been a wonder to all people when the great sorcerer himself believed and was baptized. He continued with Philip, wondering at the signs and great miracles (margin) which he saw. Whatever of sleight of hand or of the real power of the devil there had been in the sorceries with which he had bewitched the people—and doubtless there is much of each in the spiritisms of today—here were works such as Simon had never seen, much less done. Here was indeed the power of God.

14. The apostles continued at Jerusalem. They heard that the word was being preached and received in Samaria and sent Peter and John to see. These men who had been appointed to serve tables were being mightily used of God. One had been honored to be the first martyr in the early church, and one was being honored to win many souls in Samaria, while from Jerusalem nothing special is heard about this time, though doubtless many were still being added to the Lord (chapter v, 14). Let us be willing to serve the Lord in any capacity, and He will lead us into all He has for us (II Sam. xv, 15).

15, 16. When any one truly receives Christ, such a one is truly saved (John i, 12; iii, 16, 36; v, 24; vii, 37, 47, etc.) Baptism is the public confession that Christ has been accepted, although neither baptism nor the Lord's supper nor joining the church adds a whit to our safety, but are acts of obedience, bringing increased fellowship with God to the obedient believer. Every truly penitent and believing soul receives the Holy Spirit upon believing.

17 "Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost." They were saved before, but are now specially qualified for service. Simon, not understanding, offers money that he may receive the power which he saw in Peter and John. Peter severely rebukes him, but in verse 24 Simon seems sorry for his misunderstanding and asks to be prayed for. Peter and John bear witness to Christ and return to Jerusalem, preaching as they go. If we are fully yielded and ready for any service, we shall be filled.

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

Tuesday, Feb. 9.

The senate has confirmed the nomination in executive session of Isaac H. Lionberger, of Missouri, to be assistant attorney general.

The Westerly, R. I., Woolen company has started up its mill after an eighteen months' shut down.

London is to be fortified against a possible invasion by forces landing on the southern coast. The plan of fort works dates as far back as the time of the Duke of Wellington.

The quarantine line against splenetic fever in live stock includes the following states: California, Texas, Arkansas, Louisiatna, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Virginia, portions of Tennessee and the Indian Territory.

A dispatch from Bombay says that the plague is getting beyond all control. Even the vultures on the "towers of silence" are dying.

Leading merchant tailors from all parts of the country are gathered at Cleveland for a convention.

Wednesday, Feb. 10.

Sneak thieves stole $1,800 from the office of A. Boenert & Co., steamship agents, 92 La Salle street, Chicago.

Undertaker Fox, of Urbana, Ills., was about to prepare the body of a young woman for burial when he discovered that she was not dead. Physicians restored consciousness. It is believed she was poisoned and arrests are likely to follow.

Senator Harris's condition is reported considerably improved.

Miss Flo Woodbury, of Danville, Ills., has been selected as a delegate to the national meeting of the League of American Wheelmen. She is the first woman ever elected as a delegate to this assembly.

The calling of a convention of Sea Island cotton planters, to be held in Blackshear, Ga., on the 11th of this month, to demand a protective tariff against the admission of Egyptian cotton, is one of the political surprises of the day.

It is reported at London that Sir Philip Currie will succeed Sir Julian Pauncefote at Washington.

Thursday, Feb. 11.

While playing in State street near Monroe, Chicago, Cairma Shalzetti, a 9-year-old newsboy, was run over and killed by a Wells, Fargo & Co. express wagon.

The safe in the Clearfield (Pa.) postoffice was blown open and $1,000 worth of stamps and $300 in cash was stolen.

John E. Northrope, treasurer of Comstock, Cheney & Co., probably the largest piano key manufacturers in the United States, is dead at Essex, Conn, aged 60 years.

Lockhart & Sons, woolens, who suspended at Toronto, have assigned. The liabilities are placed at $110,000 and the assets at $112,000.

Governor Stephens, of Missouri, has signed the fellow servant bill making railroad companies responsible for accidents resulting from the carelessness of employers.

John P. Green has been elected first vice president of the Pennsylvania railway to succeed Frank Thomson, who was recently chosen president.

Friday, Feb. 12.

There is not a stamp mill working in Alaska now that is not making big returns on the quartz handled.

Fire damaged a business block on Euclid avenue in Cleveland to the extent of $100,000.

Phillip McElhone and Lewis M. Turner, both employes of the congressional library at Washington, have been arrested, charged with larceny of autograph letters from the library. Some of the property stolen was relics of Washington.

The house committee on elections has unanimously authorized a report in the Watson-Black contested election case from Georgia in favor of Black.

The board of trustees of Washington and Lee university has unanimously elected Hon. William L. Wilson, postmaster general, to be president.

The Italian minister has presented new and heavy claims for outrages upon Italian subjects.

Another complaint has been filed at San Francisco against Butler, the alleged Australian cutthroat, by the consul general, J. W. Warburton, formally charging him with the murder of Arthur Preston in Australia.

Saturday, Feb. 13.

It is reported that there is more snow in the mountains of California now than at any corresponding period for many years.

A band of 2,000 elk recently passed near Craig, Routt county, Colo., having been driven out of the mountains by snow.

Andrew Sauer, ex-cashier of the Defiance, O., Savings bank, has been acquitted of the charge of making a false report of the bank's condition.

Linn Boyd Porter ("Albert Ross"), the novelist, of Cambridge, Mass., has succumbed to melancholia and nervous prostration and is confined in a private sanitarium.

The Spanish minister has accepted the offer made by Miss Clara Barton, of the Red Cross society, to go to Cuba to care for the wounded an relieve distress.

It is officially stated that 2,750,000 persons are now employed on the famine relief work in the different districts where the scarcity prevails in India.

Monday, Feb. 15.

The grand jury at Bloomington, Ills., has indicted the mayor of that town for, as alleged, releasing a pickpocket from jail "for a consideration."

Mme. Modjeska, the actress, has been compelled to cancel all her engagements. She is ill with appendicitis, but, her physicians think, will recover without an operation.

Attendance at the bicycle show at New York last week reached the aggregate of 127,000.

Homer D. Martin, the well-known landscape painter, died late Saturday afternoon at St. Paul.

President Cleveland took home to Washington thirty ducks for his days shooting Saturday.

A blizzard, the worst of the season, raged over the northwest Saturday. Minnesota has had over four feet of snow this winter.

"Jeff" Cain, an engineer, made famous by his connection with the Andrews raiders in 1892, died at Atlanta, Ga., from consumption.

BUTCHERY OF PACIFICOS.

Driven into a Swamp by the Spaniards and Cruelly Shot to Death.

Cincinnati, Feb. 15.—The Commercial-Tribune's special from Key West says: A letter from Matanzas tells of the cruel butchery of a camp of pacificos by a band of Spanish guerrillas under Major Consartes. The pacificos were encamped near a lake ten miles south of Matanzas. They were afraid to come into that city because smallpox and other diseases were so prevalent. Major Consartes was sent to bring them in. Surrounding the camp his soldiers burst in upon them with wild yells, shooting as they advanced. Five fell at the first fire, two being women. Alarmed and scarcely knowing what to do the others dashed into the shallow waters of the lake, endeavoring to hide under the leaves of the big lily pads and other large-leaved plants.

The Spanish troops selected their human targets and coolly began shooting at them, killing at every shot. The screams and agonized entreaties of the poor frenzied wretches were terrible. Some soldiers threw down their guns and refused to fire. The offers of the Cubans to surrender were received with shouts of derision, and the butchery only ceased when not a head was visible. Major Consartes' official report stated that his detachment had been attacked at the lake, and that they killed ten insurgents in the fight that followed. Twenty pacificos, men, women and children, were killed.

ILLNESS OF SENATOR MASON.

He Soon Recovers and at Last Accounts Was All Right Again.

Chicago, Feb. 15. — United States Senator-elect William E. Mason was suddenly stricken at his residence Saturday afternoon with a severe fainting spell brought on by nervous strain and overwork. It had been the intention of Mason to leave for the south to secure much-needed rest, and as soon as he was conscious he decided to start immediately. Accordingly he made hurried arrangements and left on the 4 o'clock train for New Orleans. Within two hours after he had left the city the rumor was current that he had been taken ill a second time and died on the train.

At Centralia, Ills., the senator declared that he never felt better in his life and that the slight fainting spell was caused by exhaustion and no bad effects had followed. He was sitting up at 11 p. m. Saturday jollying his companions in the smoking room of the sleeper and appeared in good health.

Farmer Courtney Duly Indicted.

Ottumwa, Ia., Feb. 11.—The grand jury at Mt. Pleasant returned five indictments against Arthur Courtney and Sam Earhart in cases of wholesale farm robbery. Earhart confessed, fully implicating Courtney.

Combine in Soft Coal.

Cleveland, Feb. 12.—An evening paper says: At a secret meeting held in this city Wednesday there was consummated an agreement that will practically control the soft coal product of the state. It was a session of representatives of the Ohio soft coal association and of railroads in the association territory. It was decided to establish a single sales agency for all of the Ohio bituminous coal producers.

Another Great Agony Over.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Isaac B. Potter was elected president of the L. A. W. yesterday afternoon. The vote was: Potter, 158; Elliott, 115; blank, 1. Morrison, of Milwaukee, was elected vice president, receiving 140 votes. Keenan, of Pittsburg, his competitor, received 128 votes. Morrison's election was made unanimous. C. Frank Kierker, of Paterson, N. J., was unanimously elected second vice president.

Tanner Swings the Official Ax.

Springfield, Ills., Feb. 11.—Thirty inspectors and the entire office force of the state grain office in Chicago have been ordered removed by Governor Tanner. Rumored extravagance, pay-roll stuffing, mismanagement and inefficiency is said to be the cause.

The unprecedented reception of our Commentary for 1896, and the steady stream of warm and yet unsolicited testimonials which have been flowing in during the past years, have stimulated greater effort for the 1897 volume.

Even though you have another you need this.

THE ADVANCE: "The leading purpose of the Sunday-school teacher should be conversion. This book is prepared for aiding along this line."

THE UNION SIGNAL: "The special features of the Commentary are the excellency of the tabulated quarterly reviews, the Bible Dictionary for each quarter's lessons and the class record book bound within the same covers."

AMERICAN WESLEYAN: "Worth double the price to any teacher."

FREE METHODIST: "Fresh and inspiring, adapted to every department of Sunday-school work....Comments biblical and scholarly."

CHRISTIAN WORLD: In every sense practical and comprehensive....Many of our teachers prefer this to any other commentary on the International Lessons.

ILLINOIS NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST.

Summary of Important Events of the Past Few Days Reported by Telegraph for the Benefit of Our Readers—Items of Special Interest to Illinois People.

Springfield, Feb. 11.—The first thing the senate heard yesterday when it convened was a message from Governnor Tanner asking authority to borrow $250,000 to pay the current expenses, and a bill was immediately introduced in compliance with the request. Littler objected to the steering committee selecting a clerk for his committee and he was authorized to select one for himself. The Cuban belligerency resolution was adopted. A bill was introduced to protect farmers against fraudulent pedigrees of stallions and jacks. The bill provides that all persons standing these stallions for service must make an affidavit of pedigree under a penalty of a fine of not less than $10 or more than $100.

The house adopted the resolution asking the national congress to pass a bill now pending before it for the increase of the railway mail clerks' salaries. Merriam introduced a bill to repeal the act which authorizes the keepers of public monies to loan out the same to the highest bidder, the public to receive three-fourths of the interest and the official to receive the remaining fourth. The state treasurer, all the county treasurers, the treasurers of cities and school trustees will be prohibited from lending out the money they hold in trust for the people if the bill passes. Fuller introduced a bill creating a board of pardons.

Springfield, Feb. 12.—In announcing the appointment of new canal commissioners in place of those appointed by Governor Altgeld, Governor Tanner yesterday told the senate that he had removed Thomas H. Cannon because "he does not possess the kind of ability needed for the discharge of his duty," and created a sensation in the senate thereby. The new commission is: H. O. Hildon, of Rockford; C. E. Snively, of Canton, and T. M. Ryan, of Streator. The nominations were confirmed. The bill to authorize the governor to borrow $250,000 was advanced to third reading and made special order for Tuesday next. The Cuban sympathizing resolution was adopted. A few bills were introduced and the senate adjourned to Tuesday, practically.

In the house committees on congressional, senatorial and judicial apportionment were announced with Anderson, R. C. Busse and Warder chairman respectively. One of the bills introduced was an anti-trust bill which forbids the formation of pools, trusts and all combinations for the purpose of fixing prices; another limits the expenses of candidates for public office, and a third authorizes cities and villages to erect gas and electric plants. Adjourned to Tuesday, same as the senate.

EXPLOSION OF A TALLOW TANK.

Buries Three Men Who Are, However, Dug Out of the Ruins Alive.

Springfield, Ills., Feb. 15.—At an early hour yesterday morning an iron tallow tank in the large packing house of B. Franz Bros., situated just outside the city limits, exploded with most disastrous effect and a detonation that shook many large buildings all over the city and for miles around. The walls and two smokestacks were blown down, and the machinery in the entire plant badly damaged. The bottom of the exploded tank was found 400 feet from the ruins, buried four feet in the ground.

No lives were lost, but three men who were buried in the debris had close calls for their lives. Engineer Krimmell and one of his helpers were buried for several hours, the engineer not regaining consciousness for several hours after being rescued. The loss will approximate $10,000.

Suicide of a Lemont Man.

Chicago, Feb. 15.— Thomas J. Huston, a leading business man of Lemont, Ills., committed suicide in the Great Northern hotel Saturday with carbolic acid. No cause is known. Huston was secretary of the Lemont Building and Loan association, director of the Lemont State bank, secretary of the Lemont Electric Light and Power company, and a justice of the peace.

Prominent Illinois Republican Dead.

Warren, Ills., Feb. 13.—Hon. James Bayne, who represented this district in the legislature in 1882 and has been one of the most prominent Republicans in the state for many years, died at his home here of dropsy. He was 71 years old, and was a warm personal friend of Congressman Hitt, having supported him warmly the first time Hitt ran for congress.

Illinois State Geologist.

Springfield, Ills., Feb. 12.—Governor Tanner, Secretary of State Rose and Superintendent of Public Instruction Inglis appointed G. C. Krantz, of Chicago, state geologist.

State Notes.

Articles of incorporation have been filed at Springfield, Ills., by the St. Louis and Salem Railway company, proposing to build a railroad from East St. Louis to Belleville, East St. Louis to Salem, Marion county, and East St. Louis to Edwardsville, Madison county, Ills.

The police at Chicago arrested Albert Oistsche, a boy 15 years of age, for passing counterfeit money. The boy said he had obtained the money from J. B. Rogers and Albert Wall, whom he pointed out to the police and who were taken into custody.

Peoria's (Ills.) magnificent new library building, costing $65,000, a gift from the Mercantile Library association, has been formally dedicated and thrown open to public use.

The Commercial club, of Chicago, gave a farewell banquet to Lyman J. Gage at the Auditorium. Over 100 persons were present, including many noted men.

Gypsies 200 strong are reported to be terrorizing the farmers near Germantown, Ills.

Iowa Solons Smell a Rat.

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 10.—Another resolution for investigation was introduced in the legislature yesterday by Senator Carney, of Marshalltown, for a joint committee of the senate and house to investigate the officers of the state institutions and find out whether they are using the funds of such institutions illegally for fees, salaries or expenses. Speaker Byers has appointed the house committee to investigate the state offices and state printing.

Will Give Work to 400 Men.

Newport, Ky., Feb. 12.—The announcement is made that the Newport rolling mill will resume next Monday, giving employment to 400 men.

Constant Employment.

A witty retort is credited to a well known writer and critic, to whom a friend spoke of a young author whose literary efforts are not received with the enthusiasm which he feels them to merit.

"He tells me he is confident of winning fame for himself before long," said the critic's friend, who had lately met the young author, "and in the meantime he revenges himself upon his unfavorable reviewers by laughing at them."

"I envy him," said the critic, heaving a mock sigh. "He must be by all odds the merriest man in this part of the country if he does that."

A Grandfather's Clock.

Baron Ferdinand Rothschild possesses an old "grandfather's clock" that originally cost over £30,000. The mechanism records the day of the week, month of the year, the phases of the moon and strikes each hour. The quarters are chimed with a different bell, and (a rare thing with these clocks) it has a second hand. The case was made by Wertheimer and stands 14 feet high. It was originally the property of Louis XVI.

ANCTHER COMBINE IN TROUBLE.

Glass Trust Has to Abolish Rebates to Save Itself Alive.

Chicago, Feb. 11.—The existence of the window glass trust is seriously threatened and it is probable that the two organizations that have dictated prices since their organization—the Western Window Glass company and the Pittsburg Window Glass company—will have to materially change their policy or they will no longer be able to dictate prices as formerly. At the last regular monthly meeting a conference was held with the leading jobbers and a rebate system arranged that was thought satisfactory to all. The ink was scarcely dry on the agreement before the jobbers realized that they had gone into a plan that would offer them no relief. The jobbers held their peace, but one and all refused to buy under the system.

The manufacturers went on producing with the result that they now have an accumulation of stock which the jobbers will not touch, while the jobbers themselves are looking to foreign manufacturers for supplies. Alarmed at this condition of affairs the Western Window Glass company and the Pittsburg company called a meeting of their executive committee here yesterday at which it was decided to abolish the rebate system entirely and go back to the old dead level of prices. The rate will be good until Feb. 28.

NEW IRON LASTS and HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT

The Latest, Neatest, Cheapest and Best Outfit Ever Invented.

THE HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT NO. 1.

Consisting of 38 First-Class Tools and Materials (neatly boxed) Shown in Cut, viz.:

1 Iron Last, 8 inches.
1 Iron Last, 6 inches.
1 Iron Last, 4 inches.
1 Iron Standard, with Base.
1 Package Assorted Nails.
1 Package 4-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 5-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 6-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
6 Pairs Star Heel Plates.
½ lb Copper Rivets and Burrs.
1 Steel Punch.
1 Sewing Awl, complete.
1 Pegging Awl, complete.
1 Wrench for above.
1 Stabbing Awl, complete.
1 Shoeknife.
1 Shoehammer.
1 Bottle Rubber Cement.
1 Bottle Leather Cement.
1 Harness and Saw Clamp.
1 Ball Wall.
1 Ball Shoe Thread.
1 Bunch Bristles.
4 Harness Needles.
1 Soldering Iron.
1 Bottle Soldering Fluid.
1 Box Rosin.
1 Bar Solder.
1 Directions for Use.

All these tools are full-sized, practical, neat, and cheap; not mere toys. They enable any person to do his own half-soling, boot, shoe, rubber, harness, and tinware repairing.

This Outfit is the result of years of study, experiment, and correspondence in the manufacture of Iron Lasts and Repairing Outfits; and its practical advantages need only to be seen and tried to be appreciated.

Our Improved Iron Lasts and Standard are one of the handiest tools you can have about the place. The Lasts are four in number, smooth and solid, 4, 6, 8 ,and 10 inches long, thus enabling one to half-sole all sizes of foot-wear. The Standard is made with an iron base, which can be easily fastened to the bench. No method of half-soling is now used on common work, except that of iron last and wire clinch nails. The writer of this has been in the business 20 years, and has seen the changes from the old wooden lasts and pegs to the modern method, and knows it to be complete.

Our Improved Harness and Saw Clamp is an indispensable tool in sewing a harness or filing a saw. The jaws are thrown open mechanically by a coiled spring on the bolt.

The weight of this outfit is 18 lbs. Price, all complete, packed in a neat, strong box, only $3.00.

The Home Repairing Outfit No. 2.

COMPLETE BOOT, SHOE AND RUBBER REPAIRING OUTFIT, consisting of 31 first class tools and materials. The No. 2 outfit contains the same articles as the No. 1 except ing the Harness and Soldering Tools, and is gotten up for those who have no harness or tinware repairing to do. Price of No. 2, neatly boxed, $2.50, or with the paper one year, $2.75 Price of No. 1 neatly boxed, $3.00, or with the paper one year, $3.75

FARM·FIELD AND GARDEN

WATER IN THE APIARY.

Losses Resulting From a Neglect to Supply It—Plan of Watering.

At the last annual convention of the North American Beekeepers' association the importance of watering the apiary received attention. The subject was introduced by a paper read by E. Whitcomb of Nebraska. He said:

The necessity of water by the honeybees is to dissolve honey which sometimes becomes candied in the cells, and in brood rearing they can make but little progress without an abundant supply of water. In early spring, when compelled to go long distances or to secure a supply from hydrants, tanks, brooks or drains, the losses will be beyond comprehension, and the careful apiarist is fully aware of the value of these little water gatherers at this season of the year. He could well afford to lose four times their number a month or two later on. It is apparent that many cases of so called spring dwindling is traceable to the want of water of the proper temperature supplied at convenient places in the apiary.

The advantages of providing water for the bee are first, to avoid thirst; second, when allowed to forage away from the apiary they obtain oftentimes that which is impure and of so low a temperature that it is injurious to the delicate organism of the bee, and it becomes chilled and cannot return to the hive.

To obviate these difficulties I bring the water in close proximity to the colony in all its purity and in a condition of temperature best suited to meet the requirements of the bee. Thus she may secure an abundant supply on making the shortest possible journey to and fro and also at a temperature even warmer than the surrounding atmosphere. To accomplish this I use the half gallon fruit jar, removing the screw top and rubber and taking an inch board from four to eight inches square. Now, with a small gauge or a common pocketknife, cut a groove diagonally across the block nearly from one corner to the opposite one, taking care not to cut the groove quite to the corner. The center of this block may be cut out to suit your fancy and may be turned if so desired, and you have an excellent and cheaply devised watering apparatus.

Now fill the jar with water, placing the block over the mouth of the jar, invert the whole and set in convenient places or desired points in the apiary. To avoid the difficulty of readily attracting the bee to its new watering place I would recommend slightly sweetening the water in these jars for a day or two, and everything will move on smoothly afterward. So far as our observation has gone during the height of brood rearing, and taking no note of evaporations, five well stocked colonies will use the majority of one of these jars of water daily.

Killing Johnson Grass.

For small bunches—or as large as a man wants to undertake—cut the grass off underground to the surface roots; rake all the loose dirt off and all down to the hard ground, clipping the surface roots and cover well with salt. Use plenty of salt. The land must be damp. Cover up with moist dirt and tramp down. This is to make the salt melt before it gets dry. Don't trouble it till you are sure it is dead. Watch it. If a sprig should come, give it another dose. In the spring is the best time to kill it. Where salt is applied to fresh cut roots it strikes right in, like salting fresh meat. Salt will kill every fiber of the roots. I know this by experience.

To kill Johnson grass on a large scale sow in grain; break stubble early; keep breaking; cut every root you can with the plow; cut them two inches under the ground. When it starts up again, start your plow. Don't let it get knee high; keep plowing till frost; break again in the spring; plant in cotton and cultivate with sharp sweeps. Plow late, but shallow. Cut with hoe all underground. You can pull up the grass, roots and all, as it is the surface roots that mostly sprout. Johnson grass can be killed and good farms reclaimed. I know whereof I speak. I have been keeping a watch on Johnson grass for 15 years or more. I have killed it by keeping it cut down with a hoe—cut underground.

When to Prune.

The rule generally given is that it is safe to prune during the time the leaves are off, "any time during the autumn, winter and before the sap begins to flow in the spring." Professor Slayton of the Michigan station does not think so, as experiments he has made proved that pruning during the winter months was injurious, at least to apples and pears. The work is best done, he thinks, in October. The movement of the sap then, slight though it is, fills the pores of the wood at the surface of the cut and prevents evaporation from freezing and from bleeding when the flow begins in the spring. All cut surfaces of any size should be left for a day or two to dry and then be covered with liquid grafting wax or be painted.

When to Set Out Trees.

The editor of Home and Farm says: As a rule, the best time to set out deciduous trees—trees that cast all their leaves annually—is in the fall or early winter; and, on the other hand, evergreens do best usually when transplanted in the spring just before they commence growing. At all times it is of the greatest importance that newly transplanted trees be kept steadily in their places until the roots begin to act and so hold them thus. This steadying is usually done by means of stakes. In the case of fall planted trees it can be done by banking the earth up around the stems. In the spring, the earth thus raised can be duly leveled down.

Thawing Out Pumps.

For thawing out pumps that are overlooked and allowed to freeze up during cold weather American Agriculturist advises as follows: Take a three-quarter inch gas or other pipe 6 feet long, remove the top of the pump, push the pipe down beside the lifting rod until it sets on the ice, then insert a funnel in the end of the pipe and pour in boiling water. The pipe will drop as the ice is melted, and when a hole has been thawed the hot water soon melts the ice, and the pump is opened. This may be done in from 10 to 20 minutes.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and is made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

☞ A GOOD, RELIABLE WATCH CHEAP. ☜
FREE FOR A CLUB OF TWENTY SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the demand for a good cheap watch, we have made arrangements to furnish this reliable and durable timepiece at a very low figure. This is no "below cost" or "sheriff sale" watch. The price we ask is more than we pay, but so little more that we could not send them a cent less if you ordered a bushel. ☞ There is

No Reliable Watch Cheaper Than This!

READ CAREFULLY! The movement is a 7 jeweled Elgin or Waltham with stem wind and stem set. To set the watch: Pull out the stem until it "clicks," when you can turn the hands at will. Press back in position to wind. By this arrangement you only need to open the watch to regulate it, and your movement is kept as nearly dust-proof as possible. The case is Silverold (not silver), yet can hardly be told from solid silver. Will keep its color always. Is screw back and bezel, tight fitting, handsome and strong and will last a lifetime. Before the late reduction in price of this movement the retail figure was $12.00. WE GUARANTEE this watch to be perfect, and will refund the money if not exactly as represented. REMEMBER, this is not a Chronometer, nor will it regulate the sun, but it is a good, reliable timekeeper. Sent by express for $5.75. If wanted by mail add 25c. for postage.

This movement in a solid silver case, described as above, only $9.50.

MASONIC CHART.

ILLUSTRATING THE RELATION OF SOME OF THE DEGREES AND RITES IN FREEMASONRY TO EACH OTHER.

The accompanying chart represents one hundred and forty two degrees.

1. The American Rite of 13 degrees;
2. The Scotch Rite of 33 degrees;
3. The Egyptian Rite of 96 degrees.
4. The Mystic Shrine of one degree.
5. The Eastern Star of 5 degrees for Master Masons and for women. These are side degrees, and not genuine masonry.

The Symbolic degrees, or Blue Lodge of three degrees, are common to every Masonic rite, whether American, Scotch, or Egyptian, or whichever of the Masonic rites, named in Mackey's Masonic Encyclopedia one may choose to investigate.

This chart shows in the Blue Lodge the position of the Worshipful Master and some of the other officers of the lodge. Several positions of the candidate who is being initiated are also shown. In the Master Mason's degree is recognized the murder, burial and resurrection scene so full of religious significance to Freemasons.

Finney on Masonry. Cloth 75c., paper 35c.
The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By ex-Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasony Self-Convicted. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40c.
This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them.

Judge Whitney's Defence before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. 15c.
Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. 10c.
This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life-undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder and Oaths of 33 degrees. 304 pages, cloth, $1.00,
"Composed of Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's, Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees."

FIGHT IS ON IN CRETE

CHRISTIANS OPEN FIRE AND TURKISH GOVERNOR SEEKS SAFETY.

Goes on Board a Russian Man-of-War—Greek Warship Fires on a Turkish Transport—Mission of the British Fleet in Cretan Waters.

Canea, Island of Crete, Feb. 15.—The Christians occupied the heights surrounding the town yesterday morning, and began to bombard Canea. As soon as the firing commenced Prince Georgi Berovitch, governor of Crete, with thirty recently enrolled gen d'armes, boarded the Russian man-of-war. The Greek consul embarked on board another vessel. The Turks from the fortress replied to the fire of the Christians. It is reported that the fighting was attended with bloodshed. The military governor has been removed from his post. The foreign consuls all embarked on board the various vessels lying off the town of Canea. The Greek consul at Heraklion went on board the Greek warship Nauarchos Miaulis. The Christians at Heraklion are hurrying on board the ships. Fighting occurred around Halepa Saturday. After a brisk fusillade the Turks dislodged the Christians and occupied the Akrotiri hills. The French consul was obliged to quit his country house at Halepa and return to his official residence at Canea.

Powers to Protect the Moslems.

Constantinople, Feb. 15.—A Greek warship Saturday fired on a Turkish vessel conveying soldiers from Candia to Canea. As a result of this occurrence the ambassadors have decided to recommend to their respective governments that the powers occupy Canea, Retimo and Candia for the purpose of affording protection to the Mussulmans.

Athens. Feb. 15.—Prince Nicholas has started for Larissa, Thessaly, with the Third artillery regiment. It is stated that the British admiral commanding in the Cretan waters has orders to prevent any collision at sea between the Turks and the Greeks. Prince George arrived at Canea Saturday. He received a visit from the commanders of the foreign men-of-war. Later he returned to Milo with the flotilla. The foreign ministers at Athens met at the French legation for the purpose of considering the situation. It is believed that they decided to address further representaeions to the Grecian government, which replying to their recent statements declared that the government, having full knowledge of the situation, had not hesitated to assume the whole responsibility for the measures it had taken.

Turkish Authorities Ask Help.

The reserves of 1893-94 have been called out Grecian officers started for Crete who having been recalled at the last moment, and ordered to rejoin their regiments, have resigned their commissions and issued a manifesto explaining that they are leaving the army in order to fight for the freedom of their brethren in Crete. The report is current at Canea that the Turkish authorities, considering that resistance to the cause of the Christians in Crete is hopeless, have requested the foreign commanders to occpuy the town. The commanders of the men-of-war have referred the subject matter to their respective governments and ask for instructions.

CHICAGO KEEPS LINCOLN DAY.

Banks and Exchanges Closed—Marquette Club Banquet—Other Observances.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—The birthday of Abraham Lincoln is a holiday in Chicago, and yesterday was the day. The natal day of "the greatest American" was celebrated in a manner to make the event memorable. All over the city companies of men and of women and of children met with the single purpose of paying homage to Abraham Lincoln. The banks were closed. The exchanges were silent. Schools varied their exercises and sang his praises. Eminent citizens met at banquet and made him their theme. Republican politics, also, was not omitted. In fact that theme was the principal one at the most notable meeting—theMarquette club banquet. Here the guests of honor were Governors Tanner, of Illinois; Hastings, of Pennsylvania; Pingree, of Michigan; Drake, of Iowa; Mount, of Indiana; Scofield of Wisconsin, and others, besides Senator William E. Mason. Governor Tanner was not present, but was represented by Lieutenant Governor Northcott, who spoke for him.

Governor Pingree talked reform in his usual vein, from a municipal standpoint; the eulogy on Abraham Lincoln was delivered by Albert J. Beveridge; Governor Mount's subject was "The Farmer in Politics." Lieutenant Governor Northcott and Mayor Swift did the welcoming of the 600 guests. The other governors talked Republican politics. Lincoln council, National Union, gave its annual entertainment at the Auditorium. Meetings were held in memory of the day at many cities in the country. A banquet was held at St. Paul, Minnesota having been one of the first states to make the day a legal holiday.

LAWMAKERS AT WORK.

Report of Proceedings in the Senate and House.

Washington, Feb. 10.—The senate yesterday spent nearly the whole day in secret session on the Anglo-American arbitration treaty. But little business of a general character was done, and that of no importance.

In the house the immigration bill as revised in conference was passed— 217 to 33—and two pension vetoes overridden. Both these were for war widows who had remarried, one being for the widow of John H. Patton, an Illinois soldier.

Washington, Feb. 11.—The event in congress yesterday was the joint session to count the electoral vote. Vice President Stevenson presided. The vote was duly counted in the presence of the two houses and the result announced—McKinley, 271; Bryan, 176; Hobart, 271; Sewall, 149; Watson, 27. The joint session dissolved and the senate on reconvening passed the agricultural appropriation bill with various left-handed compliments for Secretary Morton. Morgan with a burst of denunciation against the South American republics and John Bull, whom he charged with its failure, abandoned the canal bill for the session. The bankruptcy bill comes up next.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Outside of the debate between Turpie and Morgan—for and against the Anglo-American arbitration treaty during the secret session—the senate passed the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill carrying $1,645,308, and bills fixing the time and place for holding federal courts in Oklahoma and providing for the retirement of soldiers and naval seamen after thirty years continuous service at three-quarters pay. Next Wednesday was fixed as the day for the vote on the immigration bill as revised.

The house passed the fortifications bill and considered the postoffice bill without action. A bill was passed regarding the payment of territorial bonds with an amendment permitting payment in "lawful money," except certain bonds of Arizona.

Washington, Feb. 13.—The senate yesterday passed a resolution offered by Hill of New York requesting Secretary Olney to use every effort toward bettering the condition of Sylvester Scovel, the newspaper correspondent imprisoned in Cuba, and to insist on all treaty rights to which he is entitled. Morgan offered a resolution for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. The balance of the day was spent in executive session, where Blackburn gave notice of an intention to move the postponement of the arbitration treaty. Hoar spoke in favor of the treaty and Stewart made an Anglophobic attack on it.

The house passed the postoffice appropriation bill, carrying $95,435,714

Washington, Feb. 15.—Saturday the senate passed a resolution authorizing the secretary of the navy to send a vessel, naval or otherwise, loaded with supplies to the famine sufferers of India, others to furnish the supplies. In executive session several amendments were offered to the arbitration treaty, the foreign affairs committee offering one that practically requires a new treaty every time a dispute arises. The treaty is probably dead for this session.

The house devoted the day to the sundry civil bill ostensibly but to politics really, the Wilson and McKinley bills being defended and attacked. Democrats declared that the appropriations for this congress would aggregate $1,045,000,000. Cummings offered a resolution asking information about the alleged stripping of their clothes by Spanish officials of two ladies on board an American vessel in Havana harbor and Murray another one for an inquiry as to whether South Carolina has a republican form of government.

COUNT NOW COMPLETED.

McKinley and Hobart Are Formally Declared Elected.

Washington, Feb. 11.—The electoral votes of the forty-five states of the Union were formally counted at the joint session of the house and senate held yesterday for that purpose, and Vice President Stevenson proclaimed the election of McKinley and Hobart as president and vice president respectively. Although the sky was overcast the weather was auspicious, and the galleries of the hall of representatives were thronged. The general public besieged the doors in vain, as but small space was reserved for them

No demonstration occurred at any point during the count, but when the vice president at its conclusion announced the result there was a round of applause, both on the floor and in the galleries. The totals were as follows: For president—McKinley, 271; Bryan, 176. For vice president—Hobart, 271; Sewall, 149; Watson, 27.

Two Prominent Southerners Dead.

Lexington, Va., Feb. 15.—John Randolph Tucker died at his home here Saturday night. He was conscious up to 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when he bade his family good-bye. Tucker had been ill for several weeks, and his death was expected. John Randolph Tucker was born in Winchester, Va., Dec. 24, 1823. He was educated at the University of Virginia, adopting the law as his profession. He served in the Confederate congress, and after the war was sent to the national house, serving in six congresses.

Kansas City, Feb. 15.—General Joseph O. Shelby died just gefore dawn Saturday at his home near Adrian, Mo. He had been unconscious during most of the time since last Monday, and his vitality had been gradually sinking since that time. General "Jo" Shelby was one of the picturesque characters of the great rebellion.

Costly Fire at Chicago.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—At 1 o'clock this morning fire broke out in the four-story brick building at 172 Madison street. The building was entirely burned out at a loss of about $40,000 to its owners and entailing a loss of $60,000 on Foster, Son & Co. The flames spread to the six-story building adjoining on the east and ruined the two upper stories. This building is occupied by Powers & O'Brien, who ran an elaborate saloon. Their loss will be heavy.

Weyler Near Gomez.

Santa Clara, Feb. 12.—Captain General Weyler is camped with 10,000 men in this city, which is within thirty miles of where General Gomez is supposed to be. General Arolas with 10,000 men is marching to the Jucaro Moron trocha by way of San Andreas and Sancto Espirato. Weyler has as yet made no move toward meeting General Gomez's army.

RIVERA SAYS THE SPANISH SOLDIERS ARE ON THE RUN.

Troops Are Afraid of the Rebels, Who Have to Go and Hunt Them When They Want to Fight—Another American in Weyler's Hands - Horrible Butchery.

Cincinnati Feb. 15.—The Commercial-Tribune's special from Jacksonville, Fla., says: Colonel Fredericko Perez Carbo, late dispatch chief general to Maceo, received a letter from General Rios Rivera from the Pinar del Rio section Saturday. It spoke in the highest terms of his men, their enthusiasm in the cause and denied in the strongest terms that that province was pacified. "The Spanish do not come out of their entrenched camps," wrote the general, "and when we want to fight them we have to go down to them. We have full control of all the open country." His army consists of over 5,000 men, all well armed and the health of the troops is generally good. Several important engagements have taken place and in every one the Cubans had been victorious.

Wants Another Dynamite Gun.

While the men regretted the death of Maceo, yet they were full of patriotism and the fight was being continued on the plans outlined by that great general. One expedtiion had landed there not long ago with needed supplies, and the general was in good spirits over the outlook for Cuban independence. Rivera spoke of the good work accomplished by their dynamite gun, commanded by young John Lunn, of Jacksonville, and said that he wanted another. In one of the last expeditions an ample supply of ammunition for it had come over and it was being used very often to the damage of the Spanish. Artemisa has been laid in ruins almost by the gun and other places and camps had felt its power. Important information was also sent Colonel Carbo to be forwarded to the New York junta.

Indicted for Killing Their Child.

Mason City, Ia., Feb. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Long have been indicted by the grand jury of Franklin county for the murder of their daughter Leah, aged 18. Judge Bridsall place the bail at $8,000.

Powers Take Action.....16

He who is told that he cannot destroy Masonry should be all the more incited to insure its not destroying his son.

As we think of George Washington riding to his inaugural on horseback with but one change of linen in his saddlebag, and his wife's outfit not costing perhaps $25, we may well enquire, "whither drifting?" in view of the millions being spent on the present inaugural, Mrs. McKinley's dresses for the occasion alone costing $10,000. We need not doubt what George Washington would have thought, could he have seen the political conditions prevailing in this country to-day. It was peculiarly appropriate that on the anniversary of his birth, which was last Monday, Senator Daniel, of Virginia, read Washington's Farewell Address before the Senate.

In almost every town throughout the country efforts are being made to drum up excursions to go to Washington next week to attend the inauguration. Immense trains with low fares, and made up from hundreds of surrounding towns and labeled, "Flame of Glory," promising the most magnificent night electric displays, will leave Chicago for the capital. Knowing the conditions of Washington's fashionable society and the proclivities of the politicians and hangers-on of the party, we surmise that "after the ball is over" we will realize that the nation has been disgraced by one of the most shameful drunks ever held on the threshold of an incoming administration.

From the Phalanx we learn that a $500,000 brewery is to be built at Vincennes, Ind. An ex-preacher is said to be the principal stockholder. The editor of the Commercial is a Methodist preacher's son, and the editor of the Sun is a deacon in the Presbyterian church, and they both editorially welcome the "enterprise" to their city. The ex-preacher refuses to allow any liquor to be drank on the premises, but he is willing to brew the doubly-distilled damnation to be drunk on other people's premises, and to make other parents' sons miserable drunkards. Out on such accursed hypocrisy! If there is a deeper hell reserved for one class than another, such hypocritical money getters will get their desserts.

REV. WILLIAM FENTON.

We are glad to show our readers this week the picture of one of our most uncompromising as well as logical and convincing lecturers. Few, if any, have gone down deeper in exploring the depths of wickedness and damnable philosophy of the secret lodge system. Gifted with a mind capable of deep research, we first find him a student in the Polytechnic school of Philadelphia, and afterwards graduating in the Rennsselaer Institute at Troy, N. Y. His first work in St. Paul, Minn., was as city engineer, and afterwards as superintending the erection of a block of buildings. In the years 1862–63 he was employed by the United States Navy in constructing iron-clad warships. We find him then for seven years employed as instructor in mathematics in his Alma Mater at Troy, N. Y. Here as a Sabbath-school worker he was the founder of the Sixth Avenue Baptist church of that city.

Rev. Wm. Fenton, notwithstanding his success as a teacher, resolved to devote his life to the ministry of Christ and studied in the Union Theological Seminary, Chicago. After being ordained to the ministry he was called to the pastorate of the Baptist church at Lamertine, Wis., where his labors were blessed with a revival. He also labored successfully at several other points. But meeting with Rev. H. H. Hinman, the Anti-masonic lecturer for Wisconsin at that time, and also hearing Pres. Jonathan Blanchard lecture at an Anti-masonic convention in Chicago, he grew to have strong convictions on the lodge question. These were intensified when afterward he assisted Edmund Ronayne in working the Masonic degrees. He soon found that he could not express such convictions and remain in fellowship with the Baptist denomination. This led him to take up the work of the National Christian Association. None of its workers have sacrificed more for the cause. He was discharged from his lucrative position in the United States Navy because of his refusal to join the Masons.

It seems that it was not enough that McKinley should be convicted of owning saloon property and receiving rentals cankered with corruption and rusted with the blood of countless rum-murderers, but now to fill up the measure of this iniquity arrangements are being made for a grand inaugural ball on the night of March 4th, which on a scale of luxuriousness and splendor will eclipse all previous inaugural balls. As a fashionable drinking carnival it promises to be as far ahead of Belshazzar's impious feast as that was ahead of a modern log-rolling bee.

It is a natural result of such heresy as that of Dr. Chas. A Briggs, that he has leaning toward the Church of Rome, the mother of heresies. A few days ago he sailed for Europe, and before leaving left this expression on record: "I have a great admiration for the present Pope.....I have learned through my studies to look upon some of the Roman Catholic positions more favorably than I used to.....I think that there are possibilities in the future of the re-union of the Roman Catholic and Protestant churches. I think that the door is open for such a movement." The doctor will visit Rome and may come home a bishop. As for his Utopian views of Roman Catholic and Protestant unity, we feel that it will be a hazardous undertaking for both to ride together on the scarlet-colored beast. It would be very uncomfortable for the Protestants.

The government in Ecuador, in South America, according to Roman Catholic papers, has fallen into the hands of Freemasons, who appear to rule the country and the courts with all their wonted "benevolence." Last August a prominent Roman Catholic editor, named Vivar, was first tortured and then slain by Freemasons, thus adding another to the long list of victims of that fraternity. The matter was brought to the notice of the national authorities by a Catholic tribunal, where the details of the murder caused intense emotion. One member of the State cabinet resigned, that he might not be implicated in the crime. But the Freemasons, true to their instincts, refused to act. They simply said "silence!" and "secrecy and silence" scored another victory. As a fitting finale to this transaction, the Masonic lodges "held two great meetings, in which the conduct of Vivar's murderer was the object of unanimous and public approvals." Thus Masonry is always and everywhere the same implacable enemy of justice.

A WARNING TO MINISTERS.

BY GEORGE LANSING TAYLOR, D. D.

When Jonah, to "Nineveh mission appointed,
A runaway preacher, for Tarshish set sail,
The Lord took in hand his new prophet anointed,
And sent him to college--inside of a whale.
Three days did the business; and, more than contented,
The graduate promptly was spouted ashore,
And went to his work--a whole city repented;
The grandest revival on record of yore.

You laugh at poor Jonah with thoughtless derision,
Scarce dreaming the cross God's true preachers must bear
To tell guilty sinners God's terrible vision,
How judgment hangs o'er them by only a hair.
But bear the same cross, face the scorn, persecution,
The rage at unpopular duty well done--
And quickly you'll wonder, and ask the solution,
Why Jonahs we find not, a thousand for one.

But, ah, let the preachers and pastors take warning;
If God call his prophets, then go where you're sent;
No proud parish fearing, nor poor parish scorning;
Be humble and faithful, then power shall be lent.
When preachers are true to their glorious commission,
Then kings sit in sackcloth and cities are won;
But preachers, too oft, are in Jonah's condition,
And needs must be whaled ere God's work can be done.

SECRECY AND PRIVACY.

BY EX PRESIDENT JOHN G. FEE OF BEREA C LLEGE.

Let me ask you to discriminate between mere privacy and well-defined secrecy. Mere privacy includes the private acts of the individual, the family, business committee, insurance company, even a session of Congress; either and all of these are natural and right, and afford no facility for extended conspiracy against the life, liberty or character of individuals, or the well-being of the community, state or nation. But the secrecy referred to, including as it does associations of men extended over the community, state or nation, and bound together by grips, passwords and fearful oaths, to "hail, to conceal and never reveal the secrets of a brother;" the "rites, ceremonies or future laws and acts of this society"—even those "unseen and unknown"—such societies, existing as they do in time of peace, and organized, not for public good but for personal interest, awaken just suspicion and alarm, for they may be used for selfish and dangerous purposes. History reveals scores of just such injurious associations.

It was in reference to such societies that John Quincy Adams said: "I am prepared to complete the demonstration before God and man, that the Masonic oaths, obligations and penalties cannot by any possibility be reconciled to the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

Daniel Webster said: "All secret associations, the members of which take upon themselves extraordinary obligations to one another, and are bound together by secret oaths, are naturally sources of jealousy and just alarm to others; are especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under popular institutions, and are dangerous to the general cause of liberty and just government."

Wendell Phillips said: "Such societies are a great evil—entirely out of place in a Republic."

These men saw what is true, that Freemasonry is a government within a government, and this a complete despotism. This is avowed by Masonic authority. In "Mackey's Lexicon," a Masonic authority, on p. 193, we find these words: "The government of the Grand Lodges is completely despotic. While a Grand Lodge exists its edicts must be respected and obeyed without examination by its subordinate lodges." Again in "Webb's Monitor," p 196, we have these words: "The first duty of the reader of this synopsis is to obey the edicts of the Grand Lodge—right or wrong." An official of a Grand Lodge in Missouri said in his report of 1867: "Not only do we know no North, no South, no East, no West, but we know no government save our own. To every government, save that of Masonry, and to each and all alike, we are foreigners. We are a nation of men bound to each other only by Masonic ties, as citizens of the world, and that world the world of Masonry; brethren to each other all the world over; foreigners to all the world besides." Masonry then is not only a government within a government, but that an avowed despotism diametrically opposed to the genius of republican institutions, and will thwart justice in civil courts as far as it can, where the interests of Masonry are imperiled by the action of the civil courts.

This was seen in the attempt to prosecute the murderers of Wm. Morgan and Ellen Slade as reported by Judge Whitney, and in the late expulsion of Dr. Jackson, of Hartford, Conn., for revealing in court the crime of a brother Mason; which crime was said to have been given as a secret to a brother Mason.

"HOLD THE FORT"—JESUS IS COMING.

FUTURE INDIA WATCHMAN WORK.

BY VIVIAN I GLADWIN.

"Watchman, what of the night?" The night is dark, but "the morning cometh," and Jesus does come the darkness to flee away.

Soon after my father, Wallace J. Gladwin, passed away, while silently bearing the deep heartfelt agony, and meditating on the work he loved so well, and while almost giving way under the pressure, these words, for my comfort and stay, came forcibly to mind: "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Luke 12: 32.

Little and few we are indeed, but God our leader is the same. We realize that it is a critical time in this work. Some may conclude, now the head is gone, that the work will go down, but we know that the work is God's, and that it is dear to him. It seems to me that it would be like playing traitor to fall back and fail to go forward, now that my father is taken from us. I believe God wants us who are left to still be true and hold up the standard of thorough salvation and "true holiness" in India, and show the same fidelity to the principles of righteousness that my father possessed.

The workers of the mission, now six in number, are united in carrying out my father's wishes and directions in regard to the work, and how it should be carried on. He fully expected and desired that we should go forward in it if he should be taken away.

We feel our loss unspeakably, but God has given his grace abundantly to cheer and encourage our hearts to press on the battle. The Watchman will still be edited; the book repository will be continued and the spiritual correspondence will be carried on by those who assisted in this branch of the work. We firmly purpose being loyal to God and the trust he has given us.

Knowing that all "our sufficiency is of God," we earnestly ask the prayers of all our readers and friends that a new and "double portion" of God's Spirit may come upon us, and that we may not falter in this great fight against sin and Satan.

LIFE INSURANCE.

SECRET INSURANCE FRATERNITIES MUST COLLAPSE.

In members and dollars invested, life insurance is beyond comprehension. That an institution without foundation and without a single business principle could reach such proportions is a reflection upon the honesty of the nation. Men insure their lives who would not think of buying a lottery ticket, but of the two evils the latter is the less. A lottery may be honestly conducted in its way. The poor stand an equal chance with the rich. No future adverse circumstances will cheat the holder out of his ticket. The name, Life Insurance, is a deception. There is no chance or risk on which to base insurance. The entire system is a galvenized "bucket shop." There is more misrepresentation employed than in ordinary gambling.

In Blackwell, O. T., lived a lady having three dependent children. A smooth-tongued insurance agent persuaded her that she ought to take a $3,000 policy and leave $1 000 to each of her children. He knew better than she did that she could not long carry it. After paying $116 she lapsed, and not long after did not have the means to buy necessary fuel. That $116 might have purchased one of the rounded steps leading up to that magnificent insurance building on the corner. It might have gone to make up the president's $75,000 salary, or it might have helped to swell a rich man's legacy. This is but one of probably thousands of similar cases.

An old gentleman here, after worrying for years to meet the payments of heavy premiums, died. The doctor thought this caused his death. A life to beat a life insurance company is a poor investment. What is the difference between lying and life insurance, and luck and lottery. Just a little difference in the process of reaching the same end; namely, to get somebody's money without giving a recompense. Sometimes when men get money that way it is called stealing. I expect God is no more a respecter of names and terms than he is of persons. The Havanna lottery was surpressed by moral law. Life insurance grows by Christian patronage.

My friend and his wife each had $1,500 in an assessment company. He said they would have nothing else to leave their children. She said she felt like it was laying up that much. He lost his place, could not pay the assessments and over $500 was gone. They lost their own in trying to get what was not their own. "Honesty is the best policy," morally, religiously or providentially.

At the tenth annual session of the National Fraternal Congress, which met in Louisville, Nov. 17, 1896, forty orders were represented. In his address of welcome the mayor said, "What a pleasure it is to meet a body whose special object is to help others." One but helps himself when he helps those who by law and nature he is under obligations to help. Then he should "provide things honest in the sight of all men."

Probably more than nine-tenths of the thought and deliberation was upon the life insurance feature. About one-half of the president's annual address was under the head of "Statutory Legislation." He mentioned several States. Maryland had presented three "obnoxious bills," one of which provided for the return of assessments paid by suspended members. Of course this was too fair, too much like a legitimate business. He further said, "No more important duty devolves upon the congress than that of securing uniformity of legislation in the several States.....We may soon have to seek national legislation by the United States Congress for relief." It is just too bad that these good (?) people "whose special object is to help others" are so obstructed by the law.

A man from the West said, in his jurisdiction his order had increased 174 per cent in two years; that the average policy was $2,109, and the average amount paid by deceased members was $12 15. He continues, "But I need no prophet to tell me that there is a day of judgment, when the desirable risks will be flocking to orders now unborn, just as they are flocking into the younger orders to-day." Here their "special object is to help others" twelve dollars and fifteen cents worth, and themselves to the amount of $2,109. Then when they find they may not get much more than they give, they are ready to jump their contract.

In another paper entitled "Danger Signals," occurs such phrases as these: "These discrepancies show plainly enough how utterly at sea the fraternal orders are—the danger to which every fraternal order is exposed at every recurring session of the legislature."

The committee on statistics and good of the order said: "Your committee have given the matter all the attention in their power to bestow, and take occasion here to express regret that their efforts fall far short of the requirements of the times.....The gross inequality between contribution and return must be properly adjusted." It has been admitted that no such adjustment can be made.

The committee emphasizes the following: "The experience of all the orders teaches that growth to the demanded extent cannot be maintained" The principal object of this large congress was to adopt some plan for the perpetuation of these orders, which any one with the gumption of a goose knows is impossible. It is admitted by many of the delegates, and the fact is beginning to dawn upon the minds of the mass of the membership. The great number of suspensions is due to too little confidence as well as too little money, and in some cases too much conscience. Inevitable conditions are chasing the evil spirit out of that tender, persuasive word, protection. No one ever had legal authority to slander its meaning by making it synonymous with fraternal life insurance.

In Ft. Scott a little six-year-old boy told a neighbor that when his mother died he would get lots of money. At home he got the idea of setting a money value on his mother. She called it protecting her child. Parents, why do you want your children to eat the bread which rightfully and lawfully belongs to other children? Is there anything in "Visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children?" My friends, you who are honest in other respects, you who are Christians in other respects, make a new cart and send this stolen mammon god back.

Our Bro. Alwell, a Baptist colored preacher, had preached faithfully for some time; so the congregation concluded to have a "festival" and raise money to pay their minister. They had a big time, but it took about all the money to pay expenses. Bro. Alwell said he heard there was fifty cents left, but he didn't see it. Men go to the lodge and listen to that boasted phrase, "Is any member sick or in distress?" when half the time and money spent there, if used in relieving the needy, more would be accomplished. Romans 12:10: "Be kindly affectioned one to another in brotherly love, in honor preferring one another." Can a fraternal order give better instructions in charity than this? What is the use to pay so much in initiation and dues when Bibles are so cheap.

In this town a man got sick, and the lodge to which he belonged employed a nurse to wait on him. The member died, and a bill for services of nurse was presented to the widow and she paid it. This is lodge charity, hired and paid for. If a rich man was sick, and a neighbor, with only common humanity, should render him attention and relief and then present a bill for it to his estate, he would be justly condemned by the community. Of the two millions of people who belong to these orders, how many will say, as I heard a man remark; "Right or wrong I'll get this insurance money if I can?" "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God."

How many have joined them because it is popular and influential? "Man looketh on the outward appearance but the Lord looketh on the heart." How many have joined them with an honest purpose but without due consideration? "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts." W. B. DENTON.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN CHINA.

FROM BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

It cannot be denied that, owing to the general maladministration of the country, China offers a thoroughly congenial soil for the growth of all sorts of illegal combinations. Under oppression and tyranny secret societies spring into life as weeds grow on a rubbish-heap; and so iniquitous and cruel is the political system of China, that it is only by combination that the people are able to resist the more flagrant wrongs which the mandarins seek to impose upon them.

In some provinces, where large family clans exist, the members band themselves together under the patriarchal head of the tribe, and succeed in resisting the illegal, and sometimes even the legal, exactions of the local authorities. In Fuhkien, for example, the Chang-clan numbers something like ten thousand persons; and so well are they organized that the emperor's writs only run among them by the consent of the elders. Such a combination unquestionably presents a difficulty in the government of the province, and the luckless mandarins, finding themselves powerless to enforce the usual exactions from the members of the clan, are driven to impose even heavier burdens on the still more luckless people who are left outside the protective influence of the potent tribe.

Failing these social associations, the people are driven by misrule to combine in secret societies. Throughout the long course of Chinese history the existence of these "Hui," or associations, has been recognized and recorded. At various times they have adopted different titles. We read of the "White Lily" sect, the "Yellow Caps," "The Society of Heaven, Earth and Man," the "Triad Society," the "Hung League," the "Kolao Hui" and countless other associations. More often than not these bodies have been started as benevolent societies, but almost invariably, certainly in the cases of those we have named, the philanthropic zeal of the founders has degenerated into political fanaticism. Some of the greatest political changes in the empire have been due to their action. The Mongol dynasty, established by Jenghiz Dhan and his followers, mainly owed its downfall to the energetic action of the Hung League; and it is beyond question that had it not been for the support that we gave to the government of China in its struggle with the T'ai Pings, who trace their origin to the same secret society, the present Manchu dynasty would have shared the fate of the Mongol emperors.

At the present time the Kolao Hui is numerically the most powerful secret society in China. Its members number upwards of a million, and its organization is in theory as nearly perfect as the loose ideas possessed by Chinamen on such a subject can make it. It is a direct descendant of the Hung League, the universality of which is expressed by the symbol, composed of parts signifying "a mighty flood," which is employed to write the word Hung. This society was governed by three chiefs, who were known as the "Ko" or Elder Brothers. For reasons best known to themselves—probably the hostility of the mandarins may have had something to say to it—it was considered advisable to change the name of the "Hui," and the title "Kolao," derived from the epithet of the chiefs, was adopted in its place.

From the illegal and secretive nature of the society it is difficult to get at particulars concerning it, but it is an open secret that the southern and central provinces form the main centers of its activity, while the provinces of Hunan, Fuhkien and Canton are especially honeycombed with its branches. Although, however, it is not easy to gain access to direct information with reference to its present proceedings, we are able, from the knowledge acquired of the doings of the society which gave it birth, to describe its general features. "Faith" and "Righteousness" are the watchwords inscribed on its banners, in bitter mockery of the ends and conduct of its proceedings. The claims put forward by the leaders to religion and morality have at various times induced the Chinese government to relegate all religious sects other than Confucianism, Buddhism and Taoism to the category—hateful to bad governments—of political and therefore dangerous organizations. Under the influence of this confusion of ideas the heavy hand of persecution has more than once fallen upon Christian communities; and in his celebrated commentary on the maxims of K'anghi, the Emperor Yungcheng classed Roman Catholicism with the "White Lily" and other sects as dangerous associations. It was in the reign of this sovereign that the Hung League, the forerunner of the Kolao Hui, took a new lease of life. The iniquitous cruelty and exactions of an infamous judge in Fuhkien set the spark to the powder of discontent, which is always ready for an explosion in the flowery land, and the destruction by this man of a celebrated Buddhist temple was the moving cause which prompted the five priests who survived the outrage to raise the standard of revolt.

COME OUT FROM AMONG THEM.

BY REV. J. S. T. MILLIGAN.

Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you. 2 Cor. 7:17.

This text teaches that separation from unclean things is the condition of acceptance with the Lord. It is implied that Christ is the universal Lord of all, and that to be accepted of him is the highest duty of man. It is from his standpoint that we are to judge of things as clean or unclean. It is by his Word alone that we can learn the mind of Christ. Ministers of the Word must first learn from the Bible the will of God for their own guidance, and having conformed to this standard they should teach others by precept and example, declaring the whole counsel of God.

They, of all others, should call no man master or lord. They, of all others, should keep their garments unspotted, and wear no livery but that which is loyal to Christ. The complicity of ministers with lodge iniquity is most unfortunate and pernicious. If the light in these reflectors be darkness, how great is the darkness! They and others will fall into the ditch. They are quoted in their relation and example as the highest authority. They are utterly disqualified to echo the Master's command, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate." It is therefore fitting in those of them who "touch not the unclean things" to sound the alarm and echo the command in their ministerial character. We will then consider:

1. The tests of unclean things. The character of the God of holiness as he has revealed himself in his Word and works is a prime criterion. Sin cannot dwell with him nor sinners stand before him. God is light, and in him is no darkness at all. He has revealed himself to the fullest capacity of man to know him. He is also the revealer of secrets. It becomes to know him, and what we hear in the ear to proclaim on the house-tops. His command is, be ye holy for I am holy. Without holiness no man shall see the Jehovah. Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God. It is in the immaterial and moral sense that he is holy and that he requires holiness in us. The first essential is to be in God, for God and like God. As it is impossible for fallen man to attain to this of himself or by any human power, he must avail himself of the helps that is laid upon him that is mighty, even almighty to save, even Christ the Mediator between God and man.

He is the holy One and the just, who is faithful and just to cleanse from all unrighteousness. There is no other name under heaven given among men whereby we can be saved from the uncleanness of sin or from its guilt. It is his blood that cleanseth from all sin. It is his righteousness that covers all deformity; we must then be found in him. We must put on Christ, and do all in the name of the Lord Jesus; God is in Christ reconciling the world to himself. He is the second creation. There is, however, a word of reconciliation. We must hearken to its voice. It has shaken the earth. It will also shake the heavens. It is the portraiture of God. It is the revelation of Christ. To it we do well to take heed. It must be hid in our heart. It must fashion our lives. We are sanctified by truth; God's Word is truth; by the criteria of God's character owned and honored; of Christ's blood and cross and crown, and of the Word of God's truth most pure we must judge and be judged. These are the standards of purity, of cleanness and uncleanness.

2 The danger of touching anything that does not square to this standard is that we follow the teaching of the carnal mind, which is enmity against God, is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. Or we follow after natural men, who cannot receive the things of the Spirit of God, neither can they know them, for they are only discerned by the Spirit of God, or they follow the god of this world who has blinded the eyes of men. He is the prince of darkness, and to follow him is to go down into the blackness of darkness forever? We are not to have fellowship then with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them.

We do not hear to heed the voice that speaketh from heaven. How shall we neglect to hear the voice of this charmer who charms so wisely? It is the voice of God's own and only Son; shall we not hear him? They did not escape who only heard apostles and prophets. They did not escape who heard the Word spoken by angels. They shall not escape who will neither hear nor heed the Word of God's own Son. But experience also warns of danger and death. A thousand voices of victims of sin and of Satan's devices tell of danger in the awful deeps of unbelief, secretism, intemperance and lust.

3. It is our duty to separate because association produces assimilation, lest we "learn of them their ways" how unsafe it is to companion with fools. But safety in the matter of both chastisement and penalty demands separation. Though hand joins in hand the wicked shall not be unpunished. Therefore, your lives tell the only way of safety when doom hangs over Sodom. It must be to the mountains of separation, for not even a Zoar is safe.

But if we are to have the peace of God that passeth all understanding, we must be like him who is light and in whom is no darkness at all. Like him with whom sin cannot dwell, and before whom no sinner can stand. To be able to feel and say, truly our fellowship is with the Father and with his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ.

We must not "fellowship unfruitful works" or those whose fruit is grapes of gall and clusters of bitterness. We must not be Odd-fellows or Sons of Malta if we would be "true yoke-fellows," and "sons of God without rebuke." The latter and not the former must be the main, the controlling characteristic. "Do thyself no harm" sounds out as the voice of God from the prison cells of sin, from the haunts of vice and the lodges of Christless folly and sin.

Esther, Pa.

Only as Masonry is an enemy of Jesus can it be a proper object of hostility on the part of a Christian; and a citizen, as such, has no case against it except where it is a foe to the government.

THE SABBATH.

The Sabbath has been represented as a Jewish institution. But it was instituted in Eden, more than two thousand years before the Jewish nation came into existence. "And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made, and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had created and made. And God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it, because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made." Gen. 2:2,3. "The Sabbath was made for man," in the evident sense of that word; for Adam was the common father of the human race, and no more related to the Jews than to the Gentiles. God "hath made of one blood all nations of men, for to dwell on all the face of the earth." Acts 17:26.

There is no positive evidence that the apostles changed the Sabbath from the seventh day to the first. The primitive Christians seem to have observed both the seventh day and the first. They observed the seventh day as a memorial of God's resting from his works of creation, and the first as a memorial of Christ's resurrection from the dead. The first day of the week is never called the Sabbath in the New Testament, but is distinguished from it, even after the resurrection of Christ. Acts 13:14; 16:13; 18:4.

The Jews celebrated their Sabbath "from even to even," as their day commenced on the evening before. Lev. 23:32. At the close of the Sabbath Christians assembled, on the evening of the first day of the week, to break bread and contribute for the poor. Acts 20:7; 1 Cor. 16:1. But it is naturally impossible for people living on opposite sides of the globe to observe the same identical time. JOHN BROWN.

You send missionaries to overthrow nature worship among other nations, but drive away from their pulpits ministers who rebuke the same thing among people of your own nation.

A. P. A.'S LATEST OATH.

"I, ——, do solemnly promise, declare and swear that I do not belong to, and for five years past have not been a member of, any sect or religious body whose commands I would obey should they conflict with the laws and Constitution of the United States. Furthermore, that my wife is not a member thereof, nor do my children attend any institution of the same, either educational or religious. I also swear that my highest civil and political allegiance is to this, my country, and that I regard my duties and obligations thereto paramount to all others, be they civil or ecclesiastical. I solemnly declare that I am opposed to the appropriation of any public funds or property for sectarian uses; that I am in favor of one general non-sectarian free school system throughout the United States, and that I will not vote for, appoint nor assist in electing or appointing to any political office whatever any person who is known to me to be opposed to the principles of this order. All of which I do solemnly promise, ratify and confirm on my sacred honor; amen."

Place your right hand upon the Constitution of your country, your left on the open Bible, and repeat after me:

"I hereby denounce all who are enemies of the United States of America, whether covert or open, seen or unseen. I denounce all those, whether lay or clerical, religious or secular, who may, at this time or hereafter, seek to abridge the right of free speech, a free press or full and unrestricted liberty of conscience in matters religious or secular. I denounce all who would unite church or state, even in the remotest degree. I denounce all clericals, priests, ministers, prelates, popes or patriarchs, who claim or exercise a right to influence the secular vote of their communicants or followers by threats of clerical displeasure or divine punishment after death. And I do solemnly bind myself to oppose by all means in my power all who may seek to pervert the institution of this Republic in the interest of any person or organization, whether religious or secular."

It is said that the Odd-fellows during January last sent in their old rituals and received their new ones. The chameleon changes its color but never its character.

SAM JONES A KNIGHT TEMPLAR.

On the night of Dec. 29, Rev. Sam Jones, according to reliable press reports, was made a Knight Templar in Rome, Ga. A great banquet was arranged for, sufficient details of which have been let out to show that drunkards and blasphemers figured prominently at the board.

Did Sam Jones think that to thus participate in the cup of devils with men of profane and dissolute character, as a preliminary to his revival work here in Boston, would commend that work to intelligent Christian men and women, or bring down upon it the blessing of the Holy Spirit?

He is reported as saying in one of his recent meetings that if he should go into a saloon and take a drink it would be telegraphed all over the United States. But we know, and there are thousands that know, both Christians and scoffers, that Sam Jones, not many weeks ago, drank wine from a human skull. And it was not "telegraphed all over the United States," because he drank it, not in a saloon, but behind the tyled doors of a secret lodge, with men of whom we can only say in the words of Scripture, "O my soul, come not thou into their secret; unto their assembly, mine honor, be not thou united."—Elizabeth E. Flagg in the Boston "Home Light."

Why should paganism be your business in the Eastern hemisphere, and none of your business in the Western?

REFORM NEWS.

SAM JONES' APOSTASY.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 19, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—God has vessels of wrath fitted unto destruction. After the prophet Elijah had convicted the Masons on Mt. Carmel in the presence of God, they were all put to death as an example for modern Masons suffering the vengeance of eternal fire. Their death was the only remedy; therefore, modern Masons do not like Jehovah Adonai, and they have dressed the devil in the livery of heaven and taken him for their god. Why then do the Sam Joneses, the Lorimers, the Fallowses, the Meldrums, the Carsons and the Smith Bakers, preach the Gospel of the Son of God? Because, like their prototype "Balaam, who taught Balak to cast a stumbling-block before the sons of Israel" so as to cause them to worship the Masons' god—"point within a circle"—they too love the wages of unrighteousness. They may pray as Balaam did, "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his;" but the Lord Jesus Christ does not know them; and he will say to them on the last day, "Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity. I never knew you."

In regard to Bro. Stoddard's visit to Sam Jones, perhaps God does not want Sam Jones hewn into pieces; for notwithstanding his low slang and flash sayings in the pulpit, it takes with some minds, and he may be preaching the true Gospel of Christ, salvation by faith in him alone, which the Romish church virtually denies and anathematizes (see the Anathemas of the Council of Trent, quoted in Shedd's History of Christian Doctrine, Vol. 2, pages 325-6). Commenting upon Jeremiah 23:22, Zinzendorf says: "If I knew that my teacher was a most abominable miscreant, personally, and in heart the worst enemy of God in his parish; so long as for any reason he preaches, expounds, develops, inculcates the Word of God; even though he should betray here and there in his expressions that his Word was not dwelling in him, if only he does not ex professo at one time throw down what at another time he teaches of good and true quasi alind agendo; I assure you before the Lord that I should fear to censure his preaching." Quoted in Lange's Jeremiah, Am. Ed., p. 223.

But tear off the mask, the livery of heaven stolen from the Bible, from Freemasonry and then Freemasonry is seen to be a low, mean, lying, contemptible devil-worship. And, therefore, the Sam Joneses do designedly and professedly at one time throw down whatever at another time they may teach of good and true doctrine. For the first Masonic obligation is confirmed every step of the way through to the Mystic Shrine, or which ever way you may go in Masonry, to be a soul-sealing, soul-damning lie of the devil. There is nothing in the Bible mentioned under the condemnation and wrath of God so damnable as Freemasonry is. The Masonic oaths are superadditions to all that is recorded as damnable in the Bible. See the "Requisitions to make a good Mason."

"Behold, my dear brother, what you must fight against and destroy, before you can come to the knowledge of the true good and sovereign happiness. Behold this monster which you must conquer, a serpent which we detest as an idol that is adored by the idiot and vulgar under the name of religion." (Bernard's Light on Masonry, Knights of the Sun, p. 260.)

The author of the History of Jacobinism, who wrote one hundred years ago, when Speculative Masonry was about 80 years old, says of the above language: "It is much to perspicuous for many Masons, who would have been disgusted with anything but emblematical figures susceptible of various explanations.....When initiated into this higher degree it was no longer possible for the adept to dissemble with himself how incompatible the Masonic code was with the slightest remnant of Christianity." Vol. 2, p. 292. So Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship and other secret society ritualism embraced, defended and winked at by the leaders of Christendom indicate that as in the days of Jeremiah, when, "From the prophets of Jerusalem is hypocrisy gone forth into all the land" (Jer. 23:15), so it is to-day.

But we have not only "the sure word of prophecy, to which we do well to take heed," but its fulfillment as recorded for a warning to the Sam Joneses and his deluded followers: "Woe unto them! for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perish in the gainsaying or contradiction of Moses by Korah." Jude 11. God, however, knoweth them that are his own and he will save his people, notwithstanding the lying hypocrites who, worshiping the devil and serving the Lord, think to enthrone their god, the devil, whom they symbolize with the point within a circle. God's people will be saved by their preaching and they themselves will go to hell. God's honor will be vindicated in the warnings of his own word in the Holy Ghost.

MISSOURI STATE MEETING.

SAINT JOHN, Mo., Feb. 9, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Our State meeting went off very smoothly, though the inclemency of the weather kept some away and others were prevented from attending by misrepresentation. I judge that there were about fifty adults out at each day session, and these were present for a purpose. I was glad that the place chosen to meet in was at Kirksville. The house was not full every night, but the power of giving and the spirit of receiving was excellent. The opposition to the reform in the meetings centered in the Episcopal minister, Rev. Canfield, and E. M. Painter, an Odd-fellow, and two "jacks." By the term "jacks" I mean professed Christians that say that they know nothing about Masons and yet defend them.

I believe if the old minister present who had been a chaplain in the Masonic lodge for twenty-nine years should be truly converted, he could be a help instead of a hinderance to the cause of Christ. If the Odd-fellow, with all of his oratorical style, could see that charity is a free-will offering to the needy without hope of reward, he might yet become useful to his fellow-men. And if the devil's apes, who eulogize secret orders because they are in popular favor, would "prove all things and hold fast that which is good," or better still, "prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God," how different would be their final reward. Oh, if they could just see the folly of praising organizations that God has positively condemned, they would soon begin to cry out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?"

J. P. Conder, of Kirksville, is a young man in his twentieth year. He said, "I came out of the lodge for Christ's sake. If the door had been opened at the time that I took that awful oath, with one hand on the Bible and the other on my heart, I would have broken away."

I could not say too much in praise of Bro. Ely's address of welcome,—his earnest, deliberate and convincing presentation of the truth. His fervent defence of the cause at the close of the meeting was admirable. Bro. Swartz was with us until the last lecture and reasoned with the earnestness of a father and with the pleasantness of a good old-time Methodist.

President Blanchard did not get to the convention until 11:40 A. M. Friday, but oh, he was mighty while he was present. Several that have heard campaign and reform speeches during the last twenty-five and fifty years, say that they never heard as good a speech as his was in all their lives. (Rev.) J. T. CULLOR.

The Armenian Relief Committee, of Chicago, recently forwarded to Turkey $3,200. Word comes from the International Committee at Constantinople, of which the British Ambassador is chairman, stating that the funds in hand are entirely inadequate to meet the awful suffering and destitution, and that careful investigation has shown that not less than 40,000 children have been made orphans by the late massacres. Further massacres are threatened, and to save these suffering people from starvation, generous gifts should be sent at once to Mr. E. G. Keith, Pres. of the Metropolitan National Bank, Chicago, who is the authorized treasurer.

CORRESPONDENCE.

JOSEPH R. DUNLAP GOES TO STATE'S PRISON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 17, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The National Mothers' Congress held its first session to-day, with an attendance that fully met the expectations of its projectors, and everything indicates that the Congress starts a movement that will not be allowed to stop and that will be productive of much good. Anything that tends, even in the slightest degree, to increase the capacity of the mothers for good must necessarily be of lasting benefit, for all intelligent people will agree with Rev. W. W. Van Arsdale, who said in a sermon on "Mother, Home and Heaven," last Sabbath: "It is mother who makes the home; she who leads us by wise and loving counsel to heaven. Take away the home and you destroy all hope of good government for mankind. So it is that the mother who makes a good home does more for the advancement of civilization than the statesman or the great captain."

The U. S. Supreme Court by a unanimous decision upheld the decision of the District Court of Illinois that sentenced Joseph R. Dunlap, publisher of a Chicago paper, to two years' imprisonment for violation of the law against sending obscene matter through the mails, by sending his paper through the mails when it contained advertisements of an obscene nature.

Whether Miss Clara Barton will go to Cuba to carry aid and comfort for the suffering will depend upon whether our people care to contribute the money to pay for such aid and comfort. Spain followed the example of Turkey and declined the proffered assistance of the American Red Cross Society, and again followed the same example by consenting that Miss Barton and her assistants should go to Cuba to distribute any contributions made by citizens of the United States for the relief of suffering and destitute Cubans, just as they did to Armenia. Miss Barton has as yet received no contributions, and the rules of the Red Cross Society prohibit her asking for any. She is ready and willing to go, if the people signify by contributions their wish to have her do so. C. A. S.

FROM A MISSOURI VETERAN.

SIDNEY, Mo., Feb. 8, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—You have ere this a report of the Missouri State convention held at Kirksville. I was there but did not have a chance to say anything on the subject, "Have persons who hold membership in secret societies a right in the Church of God?" The first time that Israel worshiped at a false altar God slew thousands of them. See Num. 25:2-9. Solomon's kingdom was divided because of idols. Israel suffered famine and lost all their prophets but one for going after Baalism. God deals in fury and will not pity nor hear the cry of those who use imagery and turn their backs to his altar. For their sake shall Zion be plowed as a field. We cannot follow Jesus where he does not go. He said, "In secret have I said nothing." We cannot fellowship devils nor use the cup and tables of the Lord and of devils.

By the grace of God I withdrew from them, and will stand separate the remainder of my life. This was fifteen years ago. The pastor who allows Balaamism in his church is in danger of the Lord's sword. Rev. 2:14 6: "If a man worship the beast and his image, or receive his mark, he shall drink the wine of the wrath of God." Lodgery is fearful unbelief and abominable idolatry in rejecting Jesus and his law. They make lies their refuge, and have covenanted with death and agreed with hell.

Brethren, do bear with me for the Lord's sake. I am now in my sixty-third year. My soul was stirred, and how glad I was to see the manifest gift of God in raising up and inspiring such heroes as Bros. Ely, Swartz and Blanchard, who addressed the convention. But it made me sad to think of so many good anti-secretists who are living in church fellowship with men who will persist in the error of Baalism for reward, and must perish unless they obtain repentance and recovery from that awful snare.

EVERY SHOULDER TO THIS WHEEL.

DE GOLIA, Pa., Feb. 18, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I know I need make no apology before I ask you to publish this communication, well knowing your willing readiness to further Christianity and free speech. I have placed in the hands of Hon. R. A. Dempsey, to present to the Pennsylvania legislature (he promised he would do so at once, and I expect by this writing it has been done), a bill; the following is a copy:

An Act, etc —Be it enacted, that on and after the passage of this act, the use of all common school-houses of this commonwealth, when situate where churches or halls cannot be obtained, shall be granted for holding of Sabbath-schools and for religious services, except in such common school-houses where the majority of the parents sending scholars to certain schools object; said objection shall be in writing under the objectors' signatures, and shall be presented to the school board of the district wherein such objection is made. When the said board of school directors has satisfied itself that a majority of the parents, as aforesaid, are opposed to the use of a certain school house for Sabbath school or religious service, one or both, then they shall close the schoolhouse against such Sabbath-school or religious service in accordance with the wishes of said majority. Nothing in this act shall be construed to give power or license to in any way interfere with the discipline or efficiency of any common school of this commonwealth.

Some school boards have closed their schoolhouses against religious services. Will the dear friends extend a helping hand by impressing upon all the need of addressing our legislators, House and Senate, personally if possible or by delegation, but by all means by letter, that they vote for and secure the passage of the bill? None are too poor, none too small, none too unlearned to tell your representatives what you want done with this bill; its conditions are modest and fair, and greatly needed in many places.

Will our brother, Rev. W. B. Stoddard, kindly remember the bill as he visits Pennsylvania's ministers and people, speaking a kindly word? Will the ministers and laymen write their denominational papers, call the people's attention to the bill and strengthen hands all along the line? Let each be a committee of one to write the editor personally and so enthuse him to write an article in favor of the bill; by these means, and only so, I fear, will our legislators give due attention. Dear friends, help the bill along at once; delays may kill it. J. C. YOUNG.

INTERESTING LETTERS.

We are glad to obtain from Director J. M. Hitchcock the following letters he received while working up our last annual N. C. A. meeting. They are from prominent Congregational ministers, and we are glad to publish them even at this late date. The first is from the pastor of the Northern Congregational church, Toronto, Canada:

TORONTO, May 5, 1896.

MY DEAR MR. HITCHCOCK:—I have read your little booklet, "Facts and Photographs," with much interest and wish it Godspeed in its mission. I have no reason to change my estimate of secret organizations as being opposed to the spirit and teaching of the New Testament. Any man wishing to know the "secrets of the Lord" will soon see that separation from and not fellowship with the world is its grand condition. From what I have learned of Masonry, I cannot see how any intelligent child of God could put himself in such an anomalous position as loyalty to the lodge implies. Sincerely yours,

T. B. HYDE.

The second letter is from the pastor of the Congregational church at Germantown, Pa:

GERMANTOWN, Pa., May 6, 1896.

J. M. Hitchcock, Esq :

DEAR BROTHER:—In answer to your inquiry I may say that the most serious objection to certain secret organizations is their attempt to set forth a religious system which is neither Christianity nor Christian. No one with the Bible in hand could recognize in their teachings, forms and titles either the Church of God or the Gospel of Christ. There are two infallible touchstones by which their religious professions must be tried: the deity of Christ and the need of his atonement of sin. An insistence of these two fundamental truths of Christianity, if made today, would leave nothing but a shattered organizations to-morrow.

It is by a defective and deformed teaching which is not the glad tidings of a divine salvation, and by works which are not of faith in Christ, that many are deceived. Every unselfish effort, therefore, to enlighten men to discern the true from the false in such vital and momentous questions will be according to the mind of God and for the eternal welfare of men.

Yours sincerely, W. J. ERDMAN.

FROM THE SOUTH CAROLINA SENATE.

SENATE CHAMBER, COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb. 11, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I am of Covenanter stock, and am a member of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian church. My father, now dead, was a preacher and used to turn a man out of the church for belonging to the Masons. We have a mission church in this city. I am here as clerk of the South Carolina Senate, and as I always go to my own church, I attended services at the mission about two weeks. Services were held in the hall of the Woodmen of the World. The congregation has to do the best it can for a place of worship until a church is built. I am editor of the Abbeville (S. C) Medium, and wrote up my impressions of the place of worship. I send you the following clipping of what I said:

"Sabbath morning I attended the Associate Reformed Mission church. The seceders have undertaken to build up a church in the city, and have given the work to Rev. J. P. Dale. Services were held in the hall of the Woodmen of the World, one of the new oath-bound secret societies. When we entered the hall and saw the mysterious symbols arranged around the walls, it struck us that the surroundings were somewhat incongruous with the purpose of the assemblage. A polished section of a tree stood at each point of the compass, on a small raised platform. Beside each section of timber was a nice easy chair, we presume to be handy for a fellow to take his seat in when tired of chopping wood.

There was one stump with the bark still on it, and an ivy vine clinging to it; we have no idea as to its mystic significance. The chandelier was ornamented with festoons of hanging moss."

When my letter appeared some one sent me a copy of the Christian Cynosure of Feb. 4, 1897, which I read with much interest.

ROBERT R. HEMPHILL.

A PHILADELPHIA BEACON LIGHT.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 15, 1897.

The Beacon Light Mission, conducted by Bro. and Sister Powers, 1231 Dauphin St., Philadelphia, Pa., is sending out no uncertain light and sound. Many who were once walking in darkness, led by a cable-tow about their necks like a lamb led to the slaughter, are catching the rays of the light and are turning their faces toward the True Light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world. What a blessed truth, yet alas, how few even of professed Christians know from personal experience that "If we walk in the light as he is in the light we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin."

Walk in the light of the noonday sun, my brother, if you would enjoy the fellowship of the triune God and have his purity, peace and love abide in you. Walk in the light, not in darkness, not blindfolded, not with a cable-tow about your neck, not on the verge of some deep mysterious chasm, not sitting on a heated chair, not groping in doubt and fear, not in ignorance and superstition, not bowing down to heathen customs and binding yourself by illegal and blasphemous oaths.

Get your eye of faith fixed upon Jesus. Repent of all your sins toward man and God, and step out upon his promise. If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and cleanse us from all unrighteousness. Then walk in the clear sunlight of heaven, with his Word, the Holy Bible, as your only guide-book, the Holy Spirit as your guide-counsellor and teacher into all truth, and your abiding comforter and indwelling God. Fellowship with believers, not unbelievers. Don't cover your light. Don't put it under a bushel. The world is needing help. If you have a good thing tell it to all. God is no respecter of persons; as a Christian, how can you be?

Be free in Christ Jesus, bound only by the band of love, washed in the blood of Jesus, filled with his spirit, kept by his power, used for his glory; no time or desire then for secret conclaves. Come out from among them.

Oh, what blessed fellowship divine!
Oh, what joy supremely sweet!
Companionship with Jesus here,
Makes life with bliss replete.

In union with God's only Son
I find my heaven on earth begun.
Oh, wondrous love, oh, joy sublime,
To live with Jesus all the time.

THE HUNTINGDON CHURCH CASE.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Jan. 22, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—At first reading of the statement in your issue of Jan. 7th respecting Dr. J. G. Yoder, I had thought of taking no notice of it; but as part of it is misleading, it does injustice to the parties referred to, to the Huntingdon church, and the committee sent by our Annual Conference to investigate the case. Therefore, I feel it a duty on my part to explain.

1. How widespread the feeling is that he did not get justice I don't know, but think it reaches only a few. We hear no such feeling expressed by any who were present at the meeting. The committee men were selected by the Conference Standing Committee, and are known to be above suspicion and acquainted with committee work. Dr. Yoder's trial was as fair as it was possible to make it. The committee said that they never conducted a trial where the parties charged were more willing to give the information desired.

2. This statement that they declined to take out their demits is not correct, because there was no such demand made either by the church or the committee. To get a demit it would be necessary for the parties to re-establish themselves in the lodge and pay all back dues. The parties had severed their connection from the lodge. One was back on his dues several years, and the other a less time. And the church very wisely decided that it would be far better to let that relation remain without the demit, than to have them return to the lodge, pay their dues and get a demit, which would mean a separation only as long as they held their demits, but at any time could restore themselves by handing in their demits. We don't care to have our church members carry such demits. Better have them allow themselves to be discharged from the lodge because of a refusal of paying their dues. Demits were not demanded from the parties because the Annual Conference has wisely never so decided. A demit in the hands of an ex-Mason is very similar to a church certificate in the hands of an unlocated church member. As long as he holds it he has no church home; and so with the ex-Mason, he has no lodge home. All that is necessary to do in either case to be again a member is to deposit the certificate. If we want to make it easy for those who withdraw from the lodge to get back again, by all means they should be required to get a demit.

As to secret societies I want it fairly understood that the Huntingdon church stands squarely against them, and it does not like to be misrepresented before the public in this way.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH.

A DECOY-DUCK PREACHER.

WELLINGTON, O., Feb. 15, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—When I look over this country and see its extent, its possibilities, its colleges, churches and asylums for the unfortunate and all its free institutions, I am startled at the impending danger that menaces this nation. That emissary of Satan in whose councils the destruction of so many nations were concocted, that old harlot, Freemasonry, the mother of the countless secret societies whose members hold three-fourths of all the civil offices in the country, is our most dangerous foe. The military offices of secret organizations and the thousands upon thousands of Knight Templars, armed and drilled as no other men are drilled, with means of communicating with each other in signs known only to themselves; these secret conspiracies are growing at a rapid rate. This fact is admitted by some of our reputable citizens who join them with the motive of benefit to themselves, and never give a thought to the principle involved that it's pure selfishness at the expense of others.

They do not think that they are the greatest hindrance to young men becoming Christians. This is seen in the fact that three-fourths of the church members are women; and to us of Wellington the sadest fact of all is that the most prominent pastor in our town is a member of three secret societies; and it is announced in flaming letters in our local paper that he is an officer in all three of them. He is used as a decoy duck to lead ignorant or thoughtless young people into these conspiracies against the home, the church, state and nation, so that it can be truthfully said that he is a success in leading sinners into the lodge, but a failure in leading them into the church or Christianity. No lodge minister was ever eminent in leading sinners to Christ as Finney, Moody and a host of other Anti-masons were.

WATCH OUT FOR THE ENTERED APPRENTICES.

NORTHWOOD, Iowa, Feb. 10, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—As a rule Masons are careful to rush their candidates through the three degrees lest something might turn up and stop the good work. The other day, however, I struck one who had taken one degree. He had been compelled to learn all, by heart, as nothing was printed, they told him. I happened to have my "Ecce Orient!" with me and gave him some extracts. He became interested and accepted an invitation to call at my study. We spent about two hours going through standard works on Masonry. We also made use of "Ronayne's Handbook," and took in some of the third degree. As the man was open to conviction he declared that he had got enough of Freemasonry. He was convinced that as far as he had gone I had the mysteries of Masonry. Let those who are posted watch out for the Entered Apprentices.

O. T. LEE.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON.

BY REV. J B. GALLOWAY.

Wherefore thou art no more a servant but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ. Gal. 4:7.

This is a specimen of divine logic. This is the royal road to the inheritance that is incorruptible, undefiled and that fadeth not away. This is the inmutable decree of our heavenly Father. He has made his will, and it is in the hands of the Mediator. The New Testament or covenant has been ratified, signed, sealed and delivered, for the death of the Testator has taken place; and now the will is of force. It is in probate, so to speak, and its provisions are being meted out to the heirs of promise.

The question which most concerns us is not with regard to the inheritance, but with regard to our meetness for it. Its sufficiency cannot be questioned. The heirs will not, and others cannot question that. The great question is, are you heirs? Now the will is explicit on this point. Am I a son? am I a child of God? To this some will say yes; others, no; others, how can I become a child? how can I be adopted? This was God's question with regard to Israel of old, "How shall I put thee among the children?"

1. We become the children of God by redemption. Gal. 4:4, 5; 3:13. "Christ came to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons" We cannot be children except by redemption. We must be free from the claims of the law before we can take the place and do the work of children. And we cannot be freed from the claims of a broken law until the question of sin is settled. But faith says, "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures," "Bought with a price," "Redeemed with the precious blood or death of Christ." 1 Pet. 1:18. In short, the law demanded death, and Christ died. Do you believe it? Believe what? That Christ died as your substitute. Do you say, yes? Then let us rejoice together.

2. We become children by regeneration. 1 Pet. 1:23; Jno. 1:13. We are adopted into God's family by the new birth, the new nature, the new relation, the new name, the translation from the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of his dear Son. There are two kingdoms, two Fathers, two seeds, two families, two ways and two places of final abode. There is no such doctrine in the Bible rightly interpreted as the universal fatherhood of God. Did not Christ say of some in his day, "Ye are of your father the devil?" This is simply one of the devil's methods of deceiving men. It is not his purpose to have it publicly known that there are tares in the world and that these are the children of the wicked one. He has many ways of hoodwinking the silly sons of Adam. He would even have them regenerated by his own methods, i.e., by personating Hiram Abiff in the high places of modern worship.

3. We become children by faith. Gal. 3:26; Jno. 1:12. "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." This is the human side of this great doctrine. "He that believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God." And this faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." Do you believe? Then this is evidence that you are a child.

4. We become children by the quickening spirit. Rom. 8:15, 16. For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear, but the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry Abba, Father; for the Spirit himself witnesseth with our spirit that we are the children of God; and if children, then heirs, heirs of God and co-heirs with Christ." This is the ground on which Paul could say, "as poor, yet making many rich."

Oh, fellow believer, what an unspeakable prospect is this that looms up and fills the spiritual vision. Our inheritance is only limited by that of our Lord's.

"His large and great dominion shall
From sea to sea extend,
It from the river shall reach forth,
To earth's remotest end."

"All are yours," oh, ye heirs of promise! Therefore, let there be no fear, no doubt, no discontent, no jealousy, for this will can never be broken. Behold, the Testator who was dead is alive forevermore, to execute all its provisions; and shall we not be satisfied when we awake with his likeness? Amen.

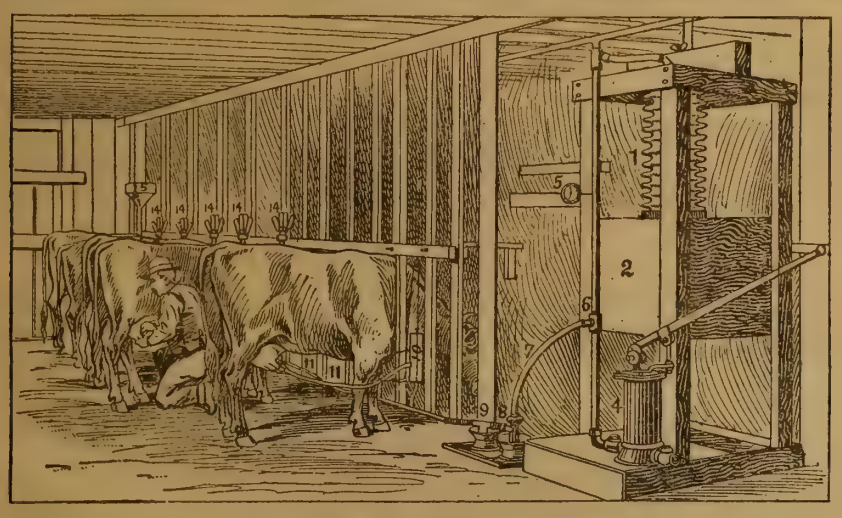
MILKING MACHINE.

Another Invention to Save Hand Labor on the Farm.

Here are an illustration and a description of the milking machine now in use in the dairy department of Hiram C. Wheeler's farm in Iowa. They are copied from the Chicago Times-Herald:

No. 1 represents a collapsible vacuum storage chamber, fastened by the top and inside of the frame, which is shown. No. 2 represents a box, which will contain about 1,200 pounds of sand or dirt, which is so made that it will slide up and down inside the frame, and is suitably fastened to the lower end of the vacuum storage chamber (No. 1). No. 3 represents a metallic air pipe or tube leading from the top end of the vacuum storage chamber (No. 1) to the air pump (No. 4). The air pump (No. 4) is suitably provided with check valves, one being an inlet and the other an outlet and air pump (3), it is apparent that the air in the milk receptacles and branch tubes will be immediately drawn into the vacuum storage chamber and that the weight (2) will descend. The operator can then pump out all the air that has been drawn into the vacuum storage chamber, and the machine is ready for the milking. The operator takes a set of teat cups, with compound tee and branch tube, from the hook and successively applies them to the animal's teats and opens the valves in the compound tee belonging to them, whereupon the teats are instantly drawn into cups by suction. The operator then goes to the next animal and repeats the operation. The milk flows from the teat cups through the branch tubes into the main milk conducting pipe and thus into the milk cans. As soon as the milk rises in the first can so that it covers and seals the mouth of the T shaped tube referred to, that projects down into the can, it will be apparent that the



THE MILKING MACHINE AT WORK.

Attached to the main pipe (No. 3) is the vacuum gauge (No. 5). No. 6 represents a branch nipple fastened to the main air pipe (No. 3). No. 7 represents a rubber air hose, one end of which is attached to No. 6 and the other end to the air valve (No. 8). The valve (No. 8) has a nipple which extends through the cover of the end milk can. The ordinary eight and ten gallon milk cans are used for the milk receptacles, and enough of these cans are always used with the machine to contain the milk of all the cows to be milked, so that the vacuum can be created in all the cans at one time and before the milking is started. No. 9 represents the tubes attached to the milk can covers and the rubber tubes connecting the several cans.

It will be noticed that the end milk can has an L shaped tube and that the next can has a T shaped tube. All of the T shaped tubes extend through the cover down into the can about five inches. The can nearest to the main milk conducting pipe (10) is connected by suitable rubber tube to it. The main milk conducting pipe (10) is fastened along the stanchions as near the ground as practicable, the end nearest the milk cans being lower than the opposite end. No. 11 represents special rubber milk tubes which branch from the main milk conducting pipe to a point in front of the cow's fore feet, but a little to the right, so as not to interfere with the cow's lying down in the stanchions. One of these tubes (11) branches from the main pipe for each cow in the herd. Attached to the other end of the branch tubes (11) are the compound tees and teat cups.

The manner of using and operating is as follows: The cows being in their proper stanchions, the operator works the air pump (4) by hand, drawing the air out of the vacuum storage chamber until it is practically fully collapsed and has drawn the weight box up as far as possible. The operator then puts the milk cans into their proper places. The covers, each one of which has a small rubber ring around it, are put on the cans and pressed down so that with the help of the rubber ring an airtight connection is made with the cans. The valve (8) is then opened. There being a vacuum in the vacuum storage chamber suction will be arrested for that particular can, and hence no more milk will enter it. The milk will simply enter the tube until it runs over into the next can, and so on.

The vacuum storage chamber when fully collapsed will milk from 10 to 15 cows before it is necessary to pump the air out of it again, the number of cows depending on the quantity of milk they give. At any time during the milking operation the operator can step to the pump and pump out a part or all of the air in the vacuum storage chamber. When a large number of cows—as, for instance, 100—are attached to the machine at one time, it would be necessary to have some one at the pump nearly all the time.

The milker has been found to be a great labor saving machine, as with it one man can milk from 25 to 50 cows per hour, the average speed of the average man with an average lot of cows, under ordinary conditions, being about 35 cows per hour.

KNIGHT TEMPLAR SAM JONES.

Rev. O. M. Owen writes in the Free Methodist: "The Masonic Tyler of recent date says: 'Rev. Sam P. Jones, the noted evangelist, received the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta degrees in Rome (Ga.) Commandery, December 29. A wreck on the railroad below Cartersville prevented Mr. Jones reaching Rome on time, and a special train was despatched to bring him, arriving at eight o'clock. A banquet was subsequently given, followed by toasts and responses. Sir Knight Jones made one of the most eloquent speeches ever heard inside a temple in Georgia.' After Judas denied his Lord we read, 'And he went out and it was (k)night.' Sir Knight Judas —'Sir Knight Jones.' The names sound quite similar. The writer, ever since he had a conversation with Sam Jones in reference to his smoking, has not had a very high opinion of his piety, and now that the gloom of (K)night has settled upon him, what shall we say? 'Good (K)night,' or 'good-bye?'"

LINCOLN'S INAGURATION.

The contrast in the condition of the country between the time of Lincoln's first inauguration and that of President-elect McKinley is said to be vividly portrayed in an article by Stephen Fiske for the March Ladies' Home Journal. In telling of "When Lincoln was First Inaugurated" Mr. Fiske graphically describes Mr. Lincoln's journey from Springfield, Ill., to Washington, and the incidents of the inauguration and the attendant festivities. There were grave fears that Lincoln would be assassinated as he rode in the inaugural procession to the Capitol, and every possible precaution was taken for his safety. Mr. Fiske will recall the safeguards placed around the President. Special officers and detectives in citizens' clothes were stationed in numbers among the crowds that lined the sidewalks, and sharpshooters occupied positions of vantage on housetops, etc., along the route of parade.

The military escort of the President-elect was heavily armed, ready to promptly meet any hostile demonstrations, and the crowds were kept a distance from the President's carriage—so far that they could not distinguish Mr. Lincoln from Mr. Buchanan, who rode beside him. The police were instructed to arrest all persons making opprobrious threats against Mr. Lincoln, or uttering disloyal sentiments. The tension was great and the whole country was in a state of suppressed excitement. During the late Presidental campaign we heard the fear expressed by thoughtful, sober-minded men, that if Mr. Bryan had been elected the country would have experienced a similar tension during his inauguration. Are there not many indications that we are nearing another revolution in the history of our nation?

THE LATE WALLACE J. GLADWIN.

One of India's most noble and devoted missionaries has entered into his rest. Since the death of his son Victor, last October, W. J. Gladwin has been in declining health. After trying the homes of several of his devoted friends, he returned to the European hospital at Bombay, from which his great soul took its flight Jan. 11, 1897. He was born of Methodist parents at Corning, N. J., Aug. 15, 1842, and, as he was wont to say, he was born again Oct. 3, 1858.

Being an only son, he had early to begin the battle of life in working to support a mother and sisters. While still a lad he was employed for a time in the office of a home missionary society. He served as soldier three years during the war, and for a time in the Christian Commission. He worked his way to an education and labored as a Methodist minister in Missouri and Arkansas.

He was one of the first to respond to Bishop Taylor's call for missionaries. and first went to Cawnpore, India, He was afterward stationed at Agra, Nagpore and Secunderabad, and finally at Bombay, where his work was chiefly among English-speaking people, although he could preach and converse in Hindustani with ease. He established the India Watchman, a monthly magazine devoted to the spread of the Gospel. He also established a book and tract depot, and he and his wife were the first to join as officers of the Salvation Army in India. He afterwards organized a Purity Crusade, while Mrs. Gladwin took charge of the Home of Hope, an institution for friendless boys and girls.

Mrs. Gladwin died in 1888, and the next year he took his first furlough to America, where he placed his two motherless boys under the care of a sister for their education. He spent nearly two years in this country, and did much to arouse a missionary interest. His career in India was altogether unique, and to many he seemed more like one of the ancient prophets than a modern missionary. He was a devoted anti-secretist, contributing often to this paper, and keeping a supply of N. C. A. literature which he widely circulated in India, and was the means of keeping many from entering the lodge. His death leaves a great gap in the ranks of missionary reform workers.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Wm. H. Clould, of Haddonfield, N. J., was a visitor at the Cynosure office last week.

—Editor M. A. Gault preached in his former pulpit at Bloomington, Ind., on Sabbath, Feb. 14.

—Attorney T. H. Gault addressed the Christian Citizenship meeting in Willard Hall at the noon hour, last Monday.

—Which is Masonry, a friend of Jesus or an enemy? It would be a strange friend who would not tolerate the mention of his name.

—Secretary W. I. Phillips is visiting a number of points this week in Indiana and Michigan, looking after the financial interests of our work.

—Rev. Henry T. Cheever, D. D., died at his home in Worcester, Mass., Feb. 13. We will publish a fuller account of his life-work next week.

—Evangelist R. B. Godfry has been a frequent caller at the Cynosure office lately. He is writing and preaching mostly on the line of church union.

—Rev. J. N. Bedford, of Shabbona, Ill., preached two excellent sermons last Sabbath in the Wheaton College church in the absence of the pastor.

—Rev. T. C. Sproull, of Cedarville, O., made the Cynosure an interesting visit recently when enroute for Minnesota. He addressed the State convention at Willmar this week.

—Rev. W. H. Chandler, of the College church, Wheaton, is assisting Rev. J. N. Bedford at Shabbona, Ill., in a series of meetings which have now continued with deep interest for two weeks.

—Rev. S. H. Swartz made the Cynosure a call in returning from the Missouri State convention. He reported it as the best meeting he had attended since the Beaver Falls, Pa., convention.

—Miss Clara Smith, a popular teacher of Bloomington, Ind., says she values the Cynosure highly, and considers its discussions of the Christian Endeavor topic are the best she has found.

—A city attorney of a railroad corporation once said: "There are sixty-eight aldermen in the city council of Chicago, and sixty-six of them can be bought. This, I know, because I have bought them myself."

—Rev. H. H. Hinman has recently been on an important lecture tour of a number of Southern cities, including Selma, Ala., and New Orleans. He distributed quite a supply of anti-secret literature sent from this office.

—Rev. Frank Barton, of Wheaton, recently assisted Rev. A. Simpson, the pastor, in an interesting three weeks' season of protracted meetings. The weather was very cold but the attendance and interest remarkably good.

—Miss Mattie McCaughan, who died at Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 11th, is greatly missed in the Covenanter church there where she was known from childhood. It was the privilege of the writer while pastor in Bloomington to reside in her home for two years, and never have we known a more lovely Christian character. She was cheerful, kind, unselfish, a devoted worker in the church and in the Sabbath-school, of which she had been superintendent, and a ministering angel in the sick room. There are many homes in that city that will sadly miss her comforting words and midnight vigils by the bedside of the sick and dying.

—Rev. R. J. Dodds, a returned missionary from Syria, was a welcome caller at our office recently. He is preaching for some time in St. Louis, and is deeply interested in the anti-secret agitation. His experience in foreign lands has intensified his conviction that there is no more serious obstacle with which missionaries have to contend than Freemasonry.

—Bro. John Dorcas has written enquiring as to the possibility of attending the N. C. A. Annual Meeting on his way to the United Brethren Conference at Dayton, O., on the 27th of May. No one will receive a warmer welcome than Bro. Dorcas, for few have sacrificed more, or been oftener found in State conventions, doing with his might whatever needed to be done.

—Bro. Oel Perrin, we are sorry to hear, died in Brookfield, Vt., at the home of Mrs. T. J. Russ, his daughter, Jan. 30, 1897. He was in his 92nd year, and was born in Royalton, but had lived in Brookfield about 43 years. He was an Anti-mason in the Morgan times and till his death, and his character was that of an honest, upright Christian man.

—The Inauguration number of The Century, which will be issued Feb. 27th, is to contain an article on the personal life of a President in the White House, written by Mr. C. C. Buel, and accompanied with many illustrations. Mr. Joseph B. Bishop will have a paper, in the same number, describing "Inauguration Scenes and Incidents," from the time when Washington first assumed the Presidency.

—Those who have sneered at the attempt to stop the sale of intoxicants in the Capitol building by means of the bill which the House passed sometime ago and sent to the Senate, where it remains unacted upon, have not hesitated to say publicly that it never had been intended that the bill should be allowed to come to a vote in the Senate. It is difficult to believe that such is the fact, but it cannot be denied that all indications now point to that belief, humiliating as it is.

—Bishop Horne has this to say of the Psalms: "The fairest production of human wit, after a few perusals, like gathered flowers, wither in our hands and lose their fragrance. But these unfading plants of paradise become as we are accustomed to them still more and more beautiful. Their bloom appears to be daily heightened, fresh odors are emitted and new sweets are extracted from them. He who hath once tasted their excellencies will desire to taste them yet again, and he who tastes them oftenest will relish them best."

—The new Congressional Library in Washington has been completed within the time limit, and at a cost of only sixty-three cents a cubic foot, including decorations. The cost of the gigantic municipal building in Philadelphia, which was begun in 1872 and is only now being completed, has already been $1.60 a cubic foot. In the March Century the library will be described by the librarian, A. R. Spofford, while William A. Coffin, the art critic, will write of the decorations. There will be twenty-six illustrations in the two articles.

—The celebration of the 400th anniversary of the birth of Philip Melanchthon, Martin Luther's co-reformer, was begun on Sabbath, Feb. 14, at Washington, by the delivery of memorial sermons in all the Lutheran churches, and by Dr. Hamlin, pastor of the Church of the Covenant (Presbyterian), and was continued by meetings held Monday and Tuesday evenings under the auspices of the Lutheran Young People's Union. Dr. Domer truly said in his sermon: "Like Luther, Melanchthon, his companion and fellow reformer, belongs to the civilized world, and all Christian people can join in thanksgiving to God for the services he rendered to the new departure of Christianity."

—H. W. Blowers, of Westfall, N. Y., writes: "I have been led to see the error of secret societies as being contrary to the teaching of Scripture. They are a great swindle, when you take into consideration the amount of capital they waste. I take my ledger and note the ones indebted to me and who won't pay me, and find they are those who have dues to pay, something which is not as honest a debt as mine. Can you tell me the amount of capital invested in these concerns? It strikes me that it is more than is invested in the liquor traffic. It, therefore, must be about as big a question. I think my name was on your mailing list ten or fifteen years back, sent by my grandfather deceased, Abel L. Blowers, who spent time and money in the cause. I have not seen a copy of the paper since "

—Secretary P. B. Williams is too well known and beloved by Cynosure readers to need any commendation from us. As a preacher and platform speaker he is winning, convincing and inspiring, and is well able to meet the most powerful lodge advocates. He proposes to attend the next Annual Meeting in Chicago, provided he can hold meetings along the way as he did last year, and thus meet his traveling expenses. We suggest that friends of our cause on or near the line of the Santa Fe R. R. between Los Angeles and Chicago arrange as soon as possible one or more meetings in their vicinity, and write either to this office to W. I. Phillips or to Bro. Williams at Los Angeles, Cal. The lecturer at each point will expect a collection of at least $5. The date of these meetings will be some time in May.

—J. R. Sharp, of Blanchard, Ia., writes us as follows: "The political leaders and the press, both secular and religious, deceive the people and have always done so. The people are bound to their parties with bands they cannot break, for they believe that this attachment is patriotism. Politically this nation has declared that it will not acknowledge nor obey God. This in a very emphatic and awful way is the nation's greatest achievement. Nothing that it has ever done approaches to this in the terribleness of the consequences that will come out of it. An old minister said that no nation in all the past had rejected God in a way so definite and knowingly as our nation has done. And now the contest for supremacy is on between the Lord Jesus and this nation. What will be the result? 'The Lord reigneth; let the people tremble.'"

—Rev. W. B. Stoddard writes, Feb. 18, from Pittsburgh: "Last Sabbath I addressed two good audiences in the North Coventry German Baptist church, and received a collection for our work. I visited Spring City, Parkerford, Pottstown, East Coventry and Reading. After looking up the interests of our work here, I go to Esther, Pa., next Sabbath to preach for Bro. Milligan's people. Returning, I fill three appointments near Johnstown, Feb. 24, 25 and 26; after which I expect to hold meetings at Hyndman, Pa., for the next Sabbath. I was much impressed by listening to the address of Dr. A. T. Pearson at the Christian Alliance convention this afternoon. This convention is in session in Carnegie Hall, Allegheny. His reference to the vanity and pride in hearts where Christ does not have complete control was especially impressive. How little we appear when we see ourselves as we are."

—Rev. D. H. Coulter, D. D., of Winchester, Kan., sends us an excellent article on "Secret Societies and Insurance," which came too late for this issue. He adds in an accompanying note: "I wanted you to know that I am yet alive and reading your paper carefully each week with much interest and satisfaction. The conviction with me grows stronger that the system of organized oath bound secrecy is one of the greatest foes, if not the greatest of all, both to genuine piety and good government; and that you are doing a great and greatly-needed good work in battling against it from your present strong position. I had planned to appear unexpectedly, at my own expense, at the Missouri convention and try to help fill any vacancy that might occur, but the grippe laid its hand on me and nullified my desire and purpose. If Greece and Turkey come to blows, Europe consequently becomes involved in war, prophecy may yet soon be fulfilled very rapidly."

—The good people of Illinois will be hoodwinked into an endorsement of the high-license principle if the House Ways and Means Committee grant what Representative Woodman, of Illinois, eloquently pleaded for several days ago, an increase in the revenue tax on cigarettes from fifty cents a thousand to $50 a thousand. Mr. Woodman stated that his object was to put the purchase of cigarettes out of the reach of school boys by raising the tax to such an extent that their retail price would be beyond the average school boy's means. He said the evil would continue to grow as long as these death-dealing articles could be bought by small boys at a cent a piece or two for a cent, as they could be now, and that the only way to save a large percentage of our boys was to put cigarettes out of their reach. Raising the price for indulgence in any vice is simply going back to Tetzel's Romish scheme of selling indulgences in the fifteenth century.

—The California Voice says: "Before a public audience a week or two ago we heard a gentleman hold forth as follows: 'Something more than two years ago the California Voice declared the A. P. A. an adjunct of the Republican party and warned Prohibitionists to stay out of it. We said to the editor that he ought to come into the organization and learn his error in such assertions; that every man in it was "left free to continue with his own party." But we have learned by bitter experience that the editor was right in his declarations, and that the Republican party has absorbed the organization that some of us went into hoping thereby to effect reforms.' We were told by A. P. A. journals that the organization would cut McKinley, but instead of doing so it supported him. It never was anything but a tail to the Republican kite. When it came to the surface in this county its members were expected to vote the Republican ticket. It lived its short life by misrepresentations, and after the St. Louis convention, was scarcely heard of."

—Rev. C. M. Larson, of Little Cobb, Minn., writes: "We had a funeral here a few weeks ago of a Workman. The members of the lodge were present, for he had secretly been a member. I asked them before the whole audience if they came to bury their brother and used me as their chaplin? One said, "Go right on, we did not come to interfere. We came to bury a friend, simply." I asked again, "How did he become your brother? Was it through the means of money or a ritual?" No answer. Then I asked the lodge to kindly come forward and take charge of the dead. I had spoken the Word of God to them, which I hope will bear fruit in time. That was enough for me. I asked them to come and do their duty. No answer. The congregation was thunderstruck. The lodge was very uneasy, not knowing what to do. There was silence for some time as I went and took a seat. The spokesman finally said, "We surrender." With all their dingle-dangle they disappeared in their cutter. It is very mean to have anything disorderly at a funeral, but I could not help myself. If it is repeated I shall leave them, quoting the words of Jesus, "Let the dead bury the dead."

THE KIRKSVILLE CONVENTION.

WHAT THE LOCAL PRESS SAID OF IT.

The Kirksville (Mo.) Journal, of Feb. 11th, says of the late anti-secret convention in that city:

"In this town where almost every man you meet is an active or passive member of some secret society the idea of organizing a society in opposition to secrecy can hardly be regarded seriously. Yet last Thursday and Friday there was a State convention held at the Christian church in Kirksville for the purpose of extending the national organization against secretism, or rather for the purpose of reviving the Missouri State Auxiliary Association, which, as National President S. H. Swartz explained, has fallen into decay.

"In his address last Thursday evening at the Christian church, President Swartz set forth the reasons for the existence of the National Christian Association. Mr. Swartz is a Methodist minister whose home and pastorate are at Morris, Ill. He looks much like Mr. R. G. Ingersoll, but of course he does not talk like the great infidel. He is a fluent speaker, however, and seems to have the courage of earnest conviction.

"Dr. Swartz said that he did not intend to abuse anybody, and he would not say anything here that he could not say in his pulpit at home. He said he had Biblical reasons for opposing secret societies. The first step a candidate takes on entering a lodge, said Mr. Swartz, he stultified his manhood by making oath that he will not reveal anything that he may see or hear. He opposed secretism because it put itself abroad as a religion. Masonry claimed to be a religion and all its ceremonies are prefaced and ended with prayer; but it ignored Christ. He did not consider the Templar and the other high degrees of Masonry that recognized Christ as anything but adenda to Masonry. Masonry itself was a Christless, heathenish institution, and it was the head of all the secret orders, and the others were pygmies beside it. The secret society men talk about charity. Why, said the speaker, they haven't learned the first letter of the alphabet. Death benefits and sick benefits were not charity; they were paid for by the beneficiary. Lodge charity was restricted to lodge members, while the charity of the church is as wide as the earth.

"The speaker indicted the lodges on the ground that they were robbing the church of its young men; destroying homes by impairing the confidence of wives in their husbands; pretending to be religious and saving institutions. Mr. Swartz had a horrible example to prove each count in his indictment.

"On Friday the convention had three sessions. morning, afternoon and evening. In the morning the question—'Ought Freemasons to be granted the privilege of advertising themselves at the expease of the state by the laying of corner-stones of public buildings erected by money raised by general taxation?' was discussed. This question was printed in the official program, and the only point of special interest about the discussion of it was the doubtless surprising development of the fact that Freemasons do not 'have the privilege of advertising themselves at the expense of the state;' that neither the state nor any individual pays the Masons for laying the corner-stones.

"The question whether a man can be a Christian and a Mason at the same time was also raised. President Swartz seemed somewhat in doubt about it, but would go no farther than to say that a man could not be an active, earnest Mason and at the same time an active, earnest Christian. Rev. C. H. Canfield took issue with him on this point and boldly defended Masonry.

"Friday afternoon the topic was—'Ought those who intelligently and determinately adhere to secret societies be allowed membership in the church?'

"Friday evening President Blanchard of Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill., delivered an address. Elder Simpson Ely presided at the meetings of the convention."

The Journal also says in a leading editorial:

"A few well-meaning people in the United States have the strangely cranky notion in their heads that the great benevolent secret societies are a menace to the Christian religion and to the peace and dignity and prosperity of the state itself; and these good people have formed an organization to combat the secret orders. Seeing that there are some bad men in secret societies; that some men are so devoted to their lodge work that they neglect their home circle; that some church members value their lodge connection more than their church connection; that the benevolences of the lodges is largely confined to membership of the lodges; the anti-secrecy crusader commits the fallacy of treating the bad exception as the rule and wants to wipe out the secret societies altogether.

"What a thankless, impossible labor the so-called National Christian Association has undertaken! The Roman Catholic church, with its matchless organization, has opposed the secret secular orders for centuries—yet with what result?

"Each year swells the ranks of the great secret orders—the Masons, the Odd-fellows and the Knights of Pythias—and of the dozens of lesser secret orders. Each year their untrumpeted benevolences endear them to a greater number of hearts. Each year the circle of brotherhood widens. Each year the great lessons of the lodge rituals, often most impressively taught, are wrought out in more virtuous lives.

"The churches, especially the Protestant churches, have nothing to fear from the fraternal and benovolent societies. Rather than to try to destroy them it were better policy to conserve what is good in these societies, and to keep them well permeated, as they now are, with a strong leaven of Christianity."

TRAGEDY OF THE SEA

A TERRIBLE TALE OF THE LOSS OF THE COMMODORE.

How the Chief Engineer of the Famous Filibustering Steamer Met His Fate—Interesting Story Told at the National Marine Engineers' Convention at Washington.

An exceedingly interesting story was told by a delegate from New York city to the national marine engineers' convention, recently in session in Washington. The chief engineer of the ill fated Commodore, which was wrecked off the coast of Florida several weeks ago, was an active member of the New York city local organization. He was a young man of good character and ability, and his love of adventure induced him to offer his services to the Cuban junta. His services were accepted, and he was ordered as a chief engineer of the Commodore. Against his protest an assistant was assigned him whom he knew nothing about and who had not belonged to any local marine engineers' association. Upon the pretext of being ill the assistant engineer of the Commodore shirked work for several days before the ship went to sea, so that when the vessel took her departure the chief engineer was practically exhausted, there being only two mates and two engineers in the list of officers.

"After the Commodore left harbor," says the narrator, "the assistant engineer, upon the plea of continued illness, kept the chief on watch for the greater part of the day. At midnight, after leaving port, the assistant volunteered for duty, and when things were turned over to him everything about the machinery was working well. The chief engineer had thoroughly tested all the pumping appliances before leaving harbor, and they were found to work excellently. Particular attention had been given to the adjustment of the inspirators for clearing the bilges of water.

"Within two hours from the time the chief engineer had been relieved he was awakened by one of the firemen, who told him that the ship was sinking and that practically everything in the engine room had become disabled. The chief immediately went to his station and found that the assistant engineer, who had been a beach comber and an ex-convict and whose services had been secured because they could be obtained cheaply, had practically wrecked the machinery.

"After a vain attempt to put things to rights the vessel was abandoned, the deck officers taking to the boats and the engineer force being left to find safety on a raft. The captain of the Commodore gallantly stood by the raft, and after battling with the storm for 30 hours reached one of the Florida keys, but in the attempt to effect a landing from the raft all of the engineer's force were lost.

"While the raft was being towed the men from the captain's boat carefully kept watch over it, and a short time after the crew left the vessel a scuffle took place on the raft, which resulted in the chief engineer and one of the firemen throwing the traitor into the ocean.

"It is unnecessary to state that the leaders of the Cuban junta have now learned at a great cost that not only ability but integrity and character are required even in the engine rooms of filibustering steamers.

"Weakened by continuous work and exhausted by his duties in charge of the raft, the chief engineer of the Commodore lost his life in the surf in attempting to make a landing. His comrades in the New York Association of Marine Engineers, in connection with friends of the Cuban cause, propose to make some substantial recognition of his excellent services in fitting out the Commodore and his pluck in sealing the doom of the traitor who had betrayed his ship.

"The belief has too long prevailed that the mate in charge of the deck can undertake to supervise the work of the engineer officer below. The unfortunate fate of the Commodore will probably be a practical object lesson to the naval officials of even great nations in teaching them that naval warfare has greatly changed during the past decade and that the man below as well as above the protective deck is an important factor."

The marine engineer delegates from New York city declare that the story as told above was from the official statement as furnished by President Palma of the Cuban junta in New York city. The committee of New York marine engineers distinctly told him that the organization would boycott every filibustering steamer starting from the coast unless the exact facts in regard to the death of Chief Engineer Hartigan were furnished them.

The story has never before been in print, and from the earnestness and sincerity of the Cuban leaders the New York engineers are convinced that the tale is a true one.—Washington Post.

Judge Harlan a Giant.

Justice Harlan of the supreme court is a physical as well as an intellectual giant and can be depended on to meet whatever emergency confronts him.

A drunken man boarded a cable car in Washington the other night and made himself obnoxious to the few people, principally women and children, who had braved the weather. The judge was on his way to Columbian college, where he delivers law lectures.

The conductor tried to quiet the drunken man, and, failing in this, he tried to put him off the car. Judge Harlan was quick to see the difficulty. He jumped to his feet and moved toward the end of the car just as the conductor had his hand under the intoxicated individual's chin and was trying to choke him. The judge reached over and, seizing the drunken man's arm, calmly and methodically worked him out of the car, down the steps and finally threw him into a snowdrift on the snow covered street.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 28. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—From what does Christ save men?—Titus iii, 1-7.

The work of Jesus Christ in the world was to seek and to save the lost. "Behold," said the angel to the shepherds when Christ was born, "I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people, for unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." When, eight days later, according to the custom of the Jews, Jesus was circumcised and named in the temple, He was called Jesus, which means Saviour, since saving was to be His mission in the world.

But from what does Christ save? In a word, Christ saves from sin. The angel, in speaking of Christ's birth to Joseph, said, "Thou shalt call His name Jesus, for He shall save His people from their sins." In introducing Christ to the multitude upon the bank of the Jordan river John the Baptist said, "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." But there are several phases of sin, from all of which Christ saves us, as set forth in our topical reference.

1. Christ saves men from the fruits of sin. Paul is writing to Titus, whom he has left over the church in Crete. He practically tells him to put the people in mind to follow after righteousness and to give up the fruits of sin. At one time before Christ saved him he had followed after the things of the flesh, but now through the kindness and the love of God he was saved and followed instead the things of the Spirit. When we are saved, our whole lives are changed. We cease to do evil and begin to do well. We are new creatures in Christ Jesus. In times past we walked in sin, but when saved we walk in righteousness. The ability to give up the sins of the past is the test of the genuineness of our salvation.

2. Christ saves from the power of sin. Christ saves us not because of the works of righteousness which we have done, but we have been able to do the works of righteousness because He has saved us from the power of sin by regenerating us, giving us a new life in the Holy Ghost. Before salvation sin has dominion over us. It reigns in and through us. The principle of life is evil. But when converted and saved a new principle of life possesses us. Sin has no power in the inward life, and hence cannot manifest itself in the outward life.

3. Christ saves us from the penalty of sin. The penalty of sin is death eternal, spiritual death, but the moment we are saved we are justified by God's grace and at once are made heirs to the hope of eternal life. Christ has paid the penalty of sin for us, and the moment we accept salvation through Him we are freed from the penalty of sin and look forward to eternal life instead of eternal death. What a wonderful Saviour! What a wonderful salvation! Has Christ saved us?

Bible Readings.—Ps. xxxiv, 18; Prov. xx, 22; Isa. i, 18; xlv, 22-25; lix, 1, 2; Jer. viii, 19, 20; Math. i, 21; xviii, 11; Luke xv, 1-10; xviii, 13, 14; xix, 10; John i, 29; iii, 14-17; v, 34; xii, 47; Acts iv, 12; v, 29-31; xiii, 38, 39; xvi, 30, 31; II Cor. ii, 14-17; Eph. ii, 4-8.

Convention Gavels.

The present foreign tour of the president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor will bear fruit in many ways at the San Francisco convention. Dr. Clark writes that he has secured for use as a gavel at the convention the shoemaker's hammer that was used by William Cary before he went as a missionary to India. This is the contribution of a prominent English Endeavorer. Another convention gavel that Dr. Clark will bring home with him is now being made by a Hindoo society in India.

The San Francisco Convention.

The finance committee has secured from the business men of San Francisco contributions to an amount hitherto unknown in the annals of Christian Endeavor conventions. The business men have subscribed $17,500, which, with the $5,000 contributed by Golden Gate union and the $2,500 from Alameda county union, will make $25,000, the amount estimated as necessary to pay the expenses of the immense gathering.

Read Your Bibles.

Read your Bibles. Fill your whole souls with the thought of Christ. Make of Him not only a Redeemer, but a brother; not only a Saviour, but a friend.—Canon Farrar.

On Sensitive Scales.

Life is continually weighing us in very sensitive scales and telling every one of us precisely what his real weight is to the last grain of dust.—Lowell.

Christian Endeavor Notes.

Great Britain now has more than 4,000 Christian Endeavor societies.

Two Protestant Episcopal churches in Providence have Christian Endeavor societies.

Three members of a St. Louis Christian Endeavor society are on the way to Africa as missionaries.

One psalm a month is committed to memory and used in their meetings by the Endeavorers of a Beverly (Mass.) society.

A company of girls in Sidney, O., are taught sewing regularly by the young ladies of a Christian Endeavor society.

A Man With His Head On.

Some people pretend not to admire Hon. John Wanamaker. He could not be elected senator from Pennsylvania. There are those who think he makes too much parade of his piety and Sunday school business.

Well, those things are matters of taste. But for our part, when we wish to instance a man who keeps his head on in trying situations, who is cool as a cucumber and knows exactly how to do the right thing in the right place, we shall hereafter mention John Wanamaker. A man who could do as he did during the late fire at his Philadelphia store is a genius, a person of infinite resources.

The fire was raging at daylight. Mr. Wanamaker was on the premises from 7 o'clock on. He had a well drilled fire brigade among the men and boys of his establishment, in anticipation of just such an event as this. The amateur fire brigade undoubtedly saved the great store from going up in flames. Furthermore, Mr. Wanamaker drew from his vast supplies of rubber overcoats and boots generous quantities of these articles and bestowed them without price not only on his own brigade, but on the regular firemen who were on duty in the ice of the zero weather. What is more, he saw to it that from the bakery close by hot coffee and rolls were distributed to all the fire fighters on that dreadful day.

In person he directed every movement of his own men. He aided the city fire force in many ways. He knew better what to do than almost any one else there. Long live the Hon. John Wanamaker, and may he always prosper!

About the Cuban Republic.

The Cleveland Leader asks a number of questions pertinent to the recognition of the Cuban republic by the United States. The New York Sun reprints the questions and answers each in detail as follows:

"If a resolution should be adopted declaring that the republic of Cuba existed, and the president were willing to act on that resolution, where should official notice of its adoption be sent?"

Send it to Cubitas, province of Puerto Principe, Cuba.

"To whom should the message of good cheer be addressed?"

Address it to President Cisneros. It will reach him as expeditiously as it would if addressed to Captain General Weyler.

"By what route should the message be forwarded?"

It may safely be forwarded by dispatch messenger via Havana, or by the like to Nuevitas, which is situated near the inland headquarters of the revolutionary government.

"When were the officials of the Cuban republic elected, and under what articles do they serve?"

They were elected in the first year of the war, and the charter under which they serve contains some of the best features of the constitution of the United States.

Very little has been heard of the state of Nevada for many years. School children find it still on the map, but that is about all. Lately, however, Nevada has been mentioned. The manner of the mention is so little to her credit that it would have been better if she had not wakened even temporarily from her hypnotic sleep. She waked up only long enough for her legislature to pass a bill permitting prize fighting within the state on payment of a license of $1,000. This was to pave the way for the alleged fight that is to come off between Corbett and Fitzsimmons. Nevada must be poor indeed—poor in spirit as in purse.

The earnest, prayerful and fruitful work Rev. Dwight L. Moody is doing the present winter in New York city and elsewhere cannot fittingly be called "stirring up the animals," as Rev. Sam Jones styles it. Furthermore, if Rev. Sam Jones should succeed in inducing Colonel Ingersoll to accept his challenge to discuss Christianity, the contrast between the pure English of the agnostic and the slang of the ex-gambler and drunkard would be so distressing that the debate certainly could not redound greatly to the glory of Christian doctrines. Let Rev. Sam Jones keep out.

The first society of Christian Endeavor among the Japanese in the United States was organized a few weeks ago at Santa Cruz, Cal.

A Christian Endeavor society holding weekly prayer meetings at the noon hour has been organized among the young people in a Pittsburg office.

A blind man is led to church every Sunday by the missionary committee of a St. Thomas (Ont.) Christian Endeavor society—a practical endeavor.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems of Truth Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Methods must not be confounded with principles. Methods are changeable; principles are firm as everlasting hills. Few men are willing to die for methods; thousands for principles.—Rev. De Witt M. Benham, Presbyterian, Pittsburg.

What Mormons Believe.

The Mormons accept the two testaments as the revelation of God's will and law. Their church is founded on Christ—not on Joseph Smith, as is falsely and persistently misrepresented. They accept as religious belief the doctrine of the fall of man. They believe God created Adam a perfect man, yet free to fall of his own determination. They believe in redemption.—Elder B. H. Roberts, Mormon, in Cincinnati.

The March of Death.

Every new day breaks a family up somewhere, dims the firelight and sunlight both. Some one walks heavily today as one who mourneth for his mother. Night is pleasant, for it brings the family together, but sooner or later it is sad when a night comes with one missing. We cannot fence our homes against one uninvited, much unwelcome guest. "The fell Sergeant Death is strict in his arrest."—Rev. Myron Reed, Congregationalist, Denver.

The True Religion.

The true religion is always attractive—a lamp, an illumination. It is always precious and glorious, and we are won by beauty, sweetness and brightness; we are repelled by darkness and dullness. Human nature is weak, full of faults and harassed by unspiritual tendencies, which mar the loveliness of the soul. To adorn the doctrine is to live, in inward disposition, as Christ lived in outward condition.—Rev. W. D. Williams, Congregationalist, San Francisco.

Wyclif's Great Work.

In 1366 the English parliament refused to pay tribute to the pope. A gifted monk makes reply to parliament. Wyclif is chosen to reply to the monk. He accepts the task with the words, "As the king's chaplain I take upon myself this task." His argument, strong and impressible, is this: That Cæsar's things belong to Cæsar, and God's to God; that the state must take care of national things and the church of religious things, and that what God has put asunder no man should join together. The centuries since Wyclif's day have revealed the weight and influence of the reformer's mighty blow for a pure church and a free state.—Rev. Kerr B. Tupper, Baptist, Philadelphia.

Unpleasant Preaching.

There are a good many people who object to the sort of preaching that refreshes their memory with unpleasant facts. They want the preaching that soothes. They say, "Don't preach morality; just preach Christ's doctrine, believe and be saved." Yes, but that doctrine is only a part of the plan of salvation. God does not condone sins, the modern sins of rich men. These easy going so called Christians say if you attack modern sins from the pulpit and rail against the rich you will make yourself unpopular, you will offend the wealthy element and reduce the revenue from pew rents. Think of such philosophy as that—as though the chief aims of a minister were personal popularity and increasing the pew rent fund.—Rev. John Hemphill, Calvary Church, San Francisco.

RUM FILLS THE JAILS.

Drunkenness Is the Main Cause of the Commoner Crimes.

The courts of any country are especially qualified to render authoritative opinions regarding the effect of the liquor business. There is probably no man who ever won a higher place in the judicial circles of any country than the late Lord Chief Justice Coleridge of England. After years of service at the head of the highest court of Britain, Lord Coleridge died two years ago and was succeeded by Lord Charles Russell, the present chief justice. Lord Coleridge was profoundly impressed with the evils of the rum business from his experiences on the bench, and frequently spoke his opinions in the plainest language. At Durham in 1877, referring to the drink business, he said:

"The crimes of violence, which in a large proportion fill the calendar, without a single exception have begun in public houses and are due to drunkenness. I think it is in the course of my duty to say that, within my experience as a judge, and having lived some considerable time in the world among other judges and judges of much larger experience than myself, it is certainly the case that if we could make England sober we might shut up nine-tenths of the jails."

The next year, at Bristol, he expressed himself thus:

"I suppose it is because the fact is so plain that nobody pays the slightest attention to it—viz, that drunkenness is a vice which fills the jails of England, and that if we could make England sober we could do away with nine-tenths of the prisons."

At Manchester, in 1881, he made this remarkable statement:

"All the cases that have come before me, with one exception, have had their beginning or ending in drink."

Ten years later, in a speech at Birmingham, he gave it as his opinion:

"Drunkenness is mainly the cause of the commoner sorts of crime, and if England could be made sober, three-fourths of her jails might be closed."

Two years before his death, at Liverpool, he made this public declaration:

"At a moderate estimate something like nineteen-twentieths of the crime that has to be tried in courts is due to drink."

This is the cold opinion of one of the greatest judicial minds that Great Britain ever produced.

On another occasion Lord Chief Justice Coleridge said:

"I can keep no terms with a vice that fills our jails; that destroys the comfort of homes and the peace of families, and debases and brutalizes the people of these islands."

PROGRESS OF TEMPERANCE.

The Habitual Drinker Is No Longer Tolerated In Business.

After all, however, the thing of main importance is the story of the progress of temperance during nearly a quarter of a century that the Union has been in existence. In the course of this comparatively short period a remarkable change has taken place in public sentiment and in private conduct with regard to the sale and use of intoxicating liquors.

There is no longer any indulgence for the public man who gets drunk, nor is it possible any more for a man to maintain a first class standing in private life if he is known to be given to intoxication. It is exceedingly difficult for the habitual drinker to prosper in any profession or to secure a situation in any branch of business. Most of the corporations make sobriety one of the tests of fitness for employment, and society shuts its door in the faces of those who cannot or do not control their appetites. This gain for temperance has brought with it a general elevation of the standards of morality and propriety.—St Louis Globe-Democrat.

Whisky's Yearly Work.

In the Cuban army are some 50,000 men. Should it come to pass that General Weyler seizes and butchers all of these men, what a righteous protest would go up from the American continent! Civilization would turn livid with grief and rage. And yet the rum power of the United States is guilty of the massacre of this vast number of human beings, and thousands more, every year.—Exchange.

Mark It Poison.

There is a good deal of talk about passing a law fixing the standard of beer. As the stuff is poison the law ought to make that standard declaration, have the commodity marked with the regulation cross bones and skull, and then let it take its chances as a beverage with the other death dealers.—Voice.

Rum Kills One-tenth.

Dr. Benjamin Ward Richardson, the famous English authority, from a lifetime of study estimates that one-tenth of the total deaths of England are attributable to the use of alcohol. Applying this ratio to the United States, the deaths due to drink would amount to from 70,000 to 80,000 per year.

The Old, Old Story.

He was one of the fellows
That could drink or leave it alone,
With a fine, high scorn for common men
Who were born with no back bone.
"And why," said he, "should a man of strength
Deny to himself the use
Of the pleasant gift of the warm, red wine
Because of its weak abuse?"

He could quote at a banquet,
With a manner half divine,
Full fifty things the poets say
About the rosy wine,
And he could sing a spirited song
About the lips of a lass
And drink a toast to her fair, young worth
In the sparkling, generous glass.

And, since this lordly fellow
Could drink or leave it alone,
He chose to drink at his own wild will
Till his will was overthrown.
And the lips of the lass are cold with grief,
And the children shiver and shrink,
For the man who once could leave it alone
Is a pitiful slave to drink.

—British Temperance Advocate.

The Burden Would Be Light.

I have said a hundred times, and I am willing to say it again, that if anybody will take charge of all the poverty and crime which result from drunkenness the South Congregational church, of which I have the honor to be the minister, will alone take charge of all the rest of the poverty which needs relief in the city of Boston.—Rev. Edward Everett Hale.

A collecting agency in New York is run by women exclusively.

The London Lady says that the fashion of wearing red gowns has led to an alarming revival of dyed hair and painted faces, for red necessities dark locks and a high color.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON X, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 7.

Text of the Lesson, Acts viii, 26-40—Memory Verses, 29-31—Golden Text, Acts viii, 35—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

26. "Arise and go toward the south." Thus spake the angel of the Lord to Philip while he was in the midst of this great work in Samaria. He is sent from what seems to be a very great work out into the desert, and he is not told why he is sent. Simple and whole hearted obedience is the one thing required of a servant or a soldier. Angels that excel in strength do His commandments, hearkening unto the voice of His word. They do His pleasure (Ps. ciii, 20, 21). If we are good servants and soldiers, we will hold ourselves according to II Sam. xv, 15; I Chron. xxviii, 21; II Sam. iii, 36.

27. "And he arose and went, and, behold, a man of Ethiopia." Philip sees what may be the object of his mission, one man, an Ethiopian, the treasurer of Queen Candace, who had been to Jerusalem to worship. The time will yet come when Ethiopia shall stretch out her hands to God, when from beyond the rivers of Ethiopia suppliants shall bring an offering to the Lord (Zep. iii, 10; Ps. lxviii, 31). But, whether a nation or an individual, God regards all who truly seek Him (Job xxxiv, 29).

28. "Sitting in his chariot, read Esaias the prophet." What he had heard or seen at Jerusalem we are not told, but we may well imagine that he had heard somewhat concerning those who had filled Jerusalem with their doctrine and concerning Him of whom they spake. He must have been an earnest seeker after light, for God sent Philip all the way from Samaria to be his teacher and to lead him to Christ.

29. "Then the Spirit said to Philip, Go near and join thyself to this chariot." Whatever Philip may have thought he now knew the object of his mission. His trained ear heard the message of the Spirit, and without hesitation or question he obeys. I believe it is possible to live always and fully under the control of the Spirit and have God working in us both to will and to do of His good pleasure. If this is our whole hearted desire, He will fulfill the desire of them that fear Him (Ps. cxlv, 19).

30. "Understandest thou what thou readest?" With this question Philip introduced himself to the man in the chariot, having run to him as soon as he was commanded by the Spirit. When the Lord sees any one intent upon understanding His word He will take pains to instruct him. The marginal reading of Job x, 8, is very suggestive, "Thine hands took pains about me." Gabriel was sent from heaven to Daniel to make him understand and to show him the truth (Dan. x, 14, 21; xi, 2). The Holy Spirit has been given to every believer to teach and to guide into all truth (John xiv, 26; xvi, 13).

31. "How can I, except some man should guide me?" Thus graciously answered the treasurer, and he invited Philip to step into the chariot with him. How smoothly everything goes when the Spirit is working! Philip, sent by the Spirit, finds one in whom the Spirit has been working, and therefore one ready to be taught. The Spirit might have taught the eunuch Himself without the help of any man (I John ii, 27), but He saw fit to use human instrumentality. How blessed to be used of God! Only be willing, and He will use you.

32, 33. "He was led as a sheep to the slaughter." Thus he read in what we would call Isa. liii, 7, 8, concerning Him of whom Moses and all the prophets did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the Son of Joseph (John i, 45), but he knew Him not. This whole chapter will doubtless be the general confession of Israel as a nation after they shall have looked upon Him whom they have pierced (Zech. xii, 10) in the day when they shall say, "Lo, this is our God! We have waited for Him, and He will save us" (Isa. xxv, 9).

34. "I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this?" Whether the prophet was speaking of himself or of some other man, the eunuch could not make out. The prophets were types of Christ and did in their lives foreshadow in some measure the sufferings of Christ. Isaiah and his children were signs in Israel (chapter viii, 18), and Jeremiah says of himself, "I was like a lamb or an ox that is brought to the slaughter" (Jer. xi, 19).

35. Philip began at the same Scripture and preached unto him Jesus. He would probably go back to the Passover lamb of Ex. xii and to the daily burnt offering, and possibly to the coats of skins of Gen. iii, 21; then on to the Lamb of God, of whom John the Baptist spake. He could easily find in Isa. liii the sufferings, death, resurrection and future glory of Christ. But whatever line he took, he must certainly have shown Christ to be the only Saviour of sinners and the fulfillment of every type and shadow.

36. The treasurer evidently took it all in and received Jesus Christ as his Saviour, for, coming to water, he asked for baptism. Having received Christ, he would as quickly as possible confess it before all who journeyed with him, and doubtless he would preach Christ to many, for he could not keep the good news to himself.

37. "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest." This is the one only essential to salvation, that Christ be truly received in the heart. "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved" (Rom. x, 9). To believe on Him is to receive Him (John i, 12), and if He be not truly received there is no saving faith (I John v, 12).

38. The driver of the chariot and other attendants may have overheard and understood the whole conversation. They certainly now beheld that which the treasurer could more fully explain to them as they went on their way. Whether the one baptized was immersed or had the water poured upon him does not clearly appear. If those who think that immersion is the right way—cannot love and bear with those who think pouring or sprinkling sufficient—there is more grace ready for them if they will have it.

39, 40. The eunuch goes on his way rejoicing, and Philip, caught away by the Spirit, is found at Azotus, and preaches the gospel in all the cities from there to Cæsarea. The joy of the eunuch was due to his faith in Christ and to the fact that now he was accepted in the Beloved, justified from all things and a joint heir with the man at God's right hand (Eph. i, 6; Acts xiii, 38; Rom. viii, 16, 17). He believed and was thus filled with joy and peace (Rom. xv, 13). God had other work for Philip, or rather more of the same work in other places, and sent him off to it. If he never saw the eunuch again on earth, he has certainly met him long ere this in glory.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

WHAT THE LAWMAKERS ARE DOING AT SPRINGFIELD.

Procceedings in the Senate and House Boiled Down—Bills and Resolutions Introduced and Other Matters of Interest to the People of the State.

Springfield, Feb. 18.—A revenue bill was introduced in the senate yesterday providing for appraisement of property on a fair cash value; another bill is to prevent the introduce and spread of San Jose "scale," an emeny to fruit. One bill is for a street railway commission which shall practically manage the operation of street railways, fix fares, dictate the manner of heating cars, etc., and it is provided that street railway companies shall pay from $500 to $2,000 per mile of line; they shall also pay a tax of 3 per cent. on the gross earnings. Another bill requires children between 7 and 14 not employed to attend school at least sixteen weeks each year. Several other bills were introduced.

A number of petitions were presented in the house asking that the word "male" be stricken from the constitution. A bill for a board of pardons was introduced and one for the execution of all death sentences in the penitentiary. There was a "raft" of other bills on all sorts of subjects introduced, including a revenue bill. A resolution was adopted giving the Farmers' Institute of Illinois the use of representatives' hall the afternoons of Feb. 23, 24 and 25.

Springfield, Feb. 19.—Governor Tanner sent to the senate yesterday the following appointments: J. H. Pierce, H. H. Green and Thomas O'Shaughnessy, Joliet penitentiary commissioners; P. H. Donnelly, James Alexander, Andrew Yeager, T. D. Kelliger and S. M. Dalzel, labor commissioners; T. C. McMillan and William Jackson, managers Pontiac reformatory. They were all confirmed. A number of bills were introduced, one being to establish a board of medical examiners to regulate the practice of medicine. The bill fixing the salary of judges of election in Cook county at $5 per day, was passed.

Bills were introduced in the house fixing the charge for berths in sleeping cars, reducing the rates, and declaring all express companies doing business in the state common carriers, giving the railway commission control over them. Revell's bill to repeal the libel law was defeated, after a warm debate—62 to 66—with twenty-four absent and not voting. Revell moved to strike out the emergency clause and vote on the bill without that clause, but the speaker ruled against him, holding that it was only when a bill had a majority and failed to pass that such action could be taken. Debate on the point was pending at adjournment.

At a caucus of the Republican members of the senate it was decided to take an adjournment from Feb. 26 to March 9, to permit the members to attend the inauguration of the president.

Springfield, Feb. 20. — The senate adopted a resolution to adjourn Feb. 26 to March 9, and concurred in a house resolution to adjourn from Friday to Tuesday instead of Monday evening. Bills were introduced—that death sentences be executed in the penitentiary; granting women the right to vote at special town meetings and at elections for supervisor, town clerk, collector and highway commissioners; to amend the law as to teaching in the public schools the bad effects of alcohol.

The house adopted a resolution asking the government to see that Scovel, the correspondent arrested in Cuba, has his rights, and a resolution asking congress to pass a bill to compel the marking of all convict-made goods. A bill was introduced to amend the law of 1873 regarding artitration of damage suits.

It seems that W. S. Matthews, whom Governor Tanner removed as trustee of the Anna insane hospital had resigned nearly a month ago, as stated by Representative Barnes.

Green P. Crabtree Acquitted.

Cairo, Ills., Feb. 20.—On last July 26 Green P. Crabtree stabbed and killed Dr. Isaac N. Coffee, president of the Illinois state board of pharmacy, and was indicted for manslaughter. Yesterday he was acquitted by a jury on the ground that he acted in self-defense.

State Notes.

Rev. W. W. Clark, who has been making a fight at Chicago against Sunday saloons, applied to Justice Martin for a warrant charging Mayor Swift with malfeasance in office. The justice refused the warrant.

The Cook County, Ills, Busniess Men's association has been organized to fight the department store.

The president has refused to pardon Lucien Hubbard, convicted in Illinois of counterfeiting, whose sentence has expired and who seeks to be restored to citizenship.

Rev. James C. Rucker, of Clinton, Ills., a superannuated preacher of the Methodist Episcopal church and over 80 years old, was arrested by the Evanston police while preparing to take his own life.

Lewis Hargrave, chief engineer, and John McMillan, head pressman, of the Chicago Chronicle, were seriously, and five or six others more or less injured by a combustion of crossed electric wires and natural gas, causing the usual explosion.

McClaughry to Take Charge at Joliet.

Springfield, Ills., Feb. 20.—The commissioners of the Joliet penitentiary met here yesterday and appointed Major R. M. McClaughry, at present superintendent of the state reformatory for boys at Pontiac, warden of the penitentiary. Ex-Representative George Torrance, of Pontiac, was appointed superintendent of the state reformatory for boys by the trustees of that institution.

Gov. Oglesby's Sister Dead.

Decatur, Ills., Feb. 19.—Ophelia W. Peddecord, wife of Jasper J. Peddecord and sister of ex-Governor Richard J. Oglesby, died at her residence in this city yesterday afternoon, aged 77. She was a native of Kentucky and came to Decatur with her brother, ex-Governor Oglesby, in 1836. She was connected with prominent families of central Illinois.

Little Interest in a Horse Sale.

Indianapolis, Feb. 19.—At the horse sale at the stock yards yesterday J. G. Voss' Princeton brought $875. The sale attracted little interest.

Herbert Rewards a Hero.

Charleston, S. C., Feb. 19.—Secretary of the Navy Herbert went on board the Maine yesterday and in person presented Landsman Creelman with the gold medal awarded him for heroism in jumping overboard to save one of the men washed off the cruiser during the storm Feb. 8.

Awaiting a Jewish Moody.

When the Jewish Moody becomes known, we shall have revivals having the Jewish spirit and encouraging a warm devotion to the ancient faith, in which the woman's council and the Hebrew associations will be conspicuous. There is nothing in the physique of the average Jew that prevents his growing enthusiastic in religion as well as in art or politics; he merely awaits the man and the opportunity. The true Jew is not indifferent. Given the occasion, and he will promptly display his warmth of spirit. We can well picture the crowds of excited worshipers hailing the words of Isaiah or Joel, who, before the approach of these prophets, showed little interest in things spiritual. And in some respects Moody may be called the Isaiah of today.—Jewish Messenger.

The Telltale.

"Yes, my dear, I'm a gay bachelor," said a masked man to a masked lady at a masquerade party the other evening. He felt queer when she said to him in a low voice:

"Don't be a silly, John. I know you by that wart on your thumb."

It was his wife.—London Fun.

Who pays for all the clothes, etc., that are worn out and torn to pieces in the wash? Whoever it is, he or she ought to insist that the washing shall be done with Pearline, and with Pearline only. Then that ruinous, expensive rub, rub, rub, over the washboard, which makes all the trouble, will be done away with. It isn't a little matter, either, this needless wear and tear. It's big enough to pay any man to look after it, and stop it. Pearline saves not only hard work, but hard-earned money. 493

1 Shoehammer.
1 Bottle Rubber Cement.
1 Bottle Leather Cement.
1 Harness and Saw Clamp.
1 Ball Wall.
1 Ball Shoe Thread.
1 Bunch Bristles.
4 Harness Needles.
1 Soldering Iron.
1 Bottle Soldering Fluid.
1 Box Rosin.
1 Bar Solder.
1 Directions for Use.

All these tools are full-sized, practical, neat, and cheap; not mere toys. They enable any person to do his own half-soling, boot, shoe, rubber, harness, and tinware repairing.

This Outfit is the result of years of study, experiment, and correspondence in the manufacture of Iron Lasts and Repairing Outfits; and its practical advantages need only to be seen and tried to be appreciated.

Our Improved Iron Lasts and Standard are one of the handiest tools you can have about the place. The Lasts are four in number, smooth and solid, 4, 6, 8 ,and 10 inches long, thus enabling one to half-sole all sizes of foot-wear. The Standard is made with an iron base, which can be easily fastened to the bench. No method of half-soling is now used on common work, except that of iron last and wire clinch nails. The writer of this has been in the business 20 years, and has seen the changes from the old wooden lasts and pegs to the modern method, and knows it to be complete.

Our Improved Harness and Saw Clamp is an indispensable tool in sewing a harness or filing a saw. The jaws are thrown open mechanically by a coiled spring on the bolt.

The weight of this outfit is 18 lbs. Price, all complete, packed in a neat, strong box, only $3.00.

The Home Repairing Outfit No. 2.

COMPLETE BOOT, SHOE AND RUBBER REPAIRING OUTFIT, consisting of 31 first class tools and materials. The No. 2 outfit contains the same articles as the No. 1 except ing the Harness and Soldering Tools, and is gotten up for those who have no harness or tinware repairing to do. Price of No. 2, neatly boxed, $2.00, or with the paper one year, $2.75. Price of No. 1, neatly boxed, $3.00, or with the paper one year, $3.75.

LAND VALUE RAISED.

EFFECT OF IMPROVED HIGHWAYS IN INDIANA.

Consensus of Opinion of the Farmers of the State Is That Good Roads Enhance the Price of Property—Key to the Solution of the Road Question.

That good roads have a direct money value seems to be proved by Professor W. C. Latta of Purdue university, Indiana. He asked the farmers of the state to give their views on the subject, and their replies, summarized by Professor Latta, were published in the Quincy (Ills.) Farmers' Call.

Over 40 replies to these queries were received. As would be expected from the difference in soil, surface and distance from gravel beds, there is a wide range in the estimates of the different correspondents. Many of the estimates are necessarily mere guesses, while others are based on a thorough knowledge of the matters under consideration.

A VISION OF GOOD ROADS.
[From L. A. W. Bulletin.]

The averages of these estimates should give—and they probably do, approximately—the consensus of opinion held by the most intelligent farmers of the state as to the cost and money value of improved highways and the loss due to poor roads.

The approximate averages for the 40 counties are as follows:

First.—The average estimated increase in the selling price of land due to existing improved highways is $6.48 per acre. The estimates from which this average is made refer in most cases to lands near the improved roads, but in a few instances they apply to all the lands of the county. The average increase, therefore, of $6.48 per acre is lower than was intended for the lands near the improved roads.

Second.—The estimated average increase per acre that would result from improving all the public roads is $9.

Third.—The estimated average cost of converting the common public roads into improved highways is $1,146 per mile.

The estimated average annual loss per 100 acres from poor roads is $76.28.

If these estimates are even approximately correct, they furnish a key to the satisfactory solution of the question of highway improvement from the money standpoint. On the basis of the last mentioned estimate, the average annual loss per acre from poor roads is over 76 cents. In five years the losses would aggregate $2,432 for every section of land, and this sum would construct two miles at a cost of $1,216 per mile, which is $70 per mile above the estimated average cost given by the farmers themselves. The present road tax, which, under existing laws, is largely thrown away, would, under a proper system of road maintenance, doubtless keep improved highways in perfect repair.

If the foregoing statements are a near approach to the truth, it follows that the losses and expenditures which farmers actually incur on account of poor roads would also secure permanently good roads. Can any sane mind doubt the wisdom of exchanging the losses, delays, accidents and vexation of spirit occasioned by bad roads for the comfort and other advantages of good roads when the cost is the same?

But there is another side to this question—viz, the increased value of land from highway improvement. As already stated, this increase is estimated by the farmers consulted at $9 per acre. This would enhance the value of each section of land $5,760, which is more than double the estimated cost ($2,292) of the two miles of improved highway, which constitute the quota for the section.

Just here the objection may be raised that the improved roads would not increase the productive capacity of the land, while the enhanced commercial value would increase the taxes. Let us, for the sake of argument, grant this plausible but fallacious objection, and then find what it amounts to. Let us suppose the increase in appraisement for taxation to be $4 per acre, and the tax rate 1¼ per cent.

This would mean an annual increase in taxes of 5 cents per acre or $5 per 100 acres. Would not our objector, after enjoying the benefits of good roads, be willing to give therefor the extra $5 if necessary? Would he keep the money and go back to the thraldom of mud roads? If so, he has the option of selling his farm at an advance, according to the average estimates of his brother farmers, that will more than doubly reimburse him for his expenditure on highway improvement, and he can then remove to some native wild whose quiet waters have not been "troubled" by the spirit of progress.

I am aware that many intelligent farmers will not accept the estimates of their fellow farmers as to the money value of good roads—many who will even deny that improved highways have any appreciable money value. I am glad to know, however, that many of these very same farmers favor good roads, and would aid in their construction for the same reason that they would build comfortable and even luxurious homes.

Road Progress In Massachusetts.

The Massachusetts legislature will be asked to add $800,000 to the $700,000 already appropriated for good roads. The improved roads are very popular, and as soon as the farmers learn not to always drive in one track they will be durable.

Road Notes.

The value of the horse depends on the character of the road.

No intelligent farmer should waste his time in hauling half loads to market.

Texas is now actively and intelligently advocating good roads, and a change for the better will be apparent soon, no doubt.

The man who never blankets his horse in the winter is the one who insists the roads are good enough.

A poor road offsets the advantages of a good market.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co, Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and is made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

PEACH TREES.

FOR THE NORTH. Why not grow your own peaches? I have an Iowa peach that has been grown in the State for sixty years. The original tree is still alive and fruiting.

This peach is of good size, best quality, free stone, and has fruited unprotected after winters of 30 degrees below zero.

It is the peach for the North. Send for prices and history; also prices of other reliable nursery stock.

A GOOD, RELIABLE WATCH CHEAP.
FREE FOR A CLUB OF TWENTY SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the demand for a good cheap watch, we have made arrangements to furnish this reliable and durable timepiece at a very low figure. This is no "below cost" or "sheriff sale" watch. The price we ask is more than we pay, but so little more that we could not send them a cent less if you ordered a bushel. ☞ There is

No Reliable Watch Cheaper Than This!

READ CAREFULLY! The movement is a 7 jeweled Elgin or Waltham with stem wind and stem set. To set the watch: Pull out the stem until it "clicks," when you can turn the hands at will. Press back in position to wind. By this arrangement you only need to open the watch to regulate it, and your movement is kept as nearly dust-proof as possible. The case is Silveroid (not silver), yet can hardly be told from solid silver. Will keep its color always. Is screw back and bezel, tight fitting, handsome and strong and will last a lifetime. Before the late reduction in price of this movement the retail figure was $12.00. WE GUARANTEE this watch to be perfect, and will refund the money if not exactly as represented. REMEMBER, this is not a Chronometer, nor will it regulate the sun, but it is a good, reliable timekeeper. Sent by express for $5.75. If wanted by mail add 25c. for postage.

This movement in a solid silver case, described as above, only $9.50.

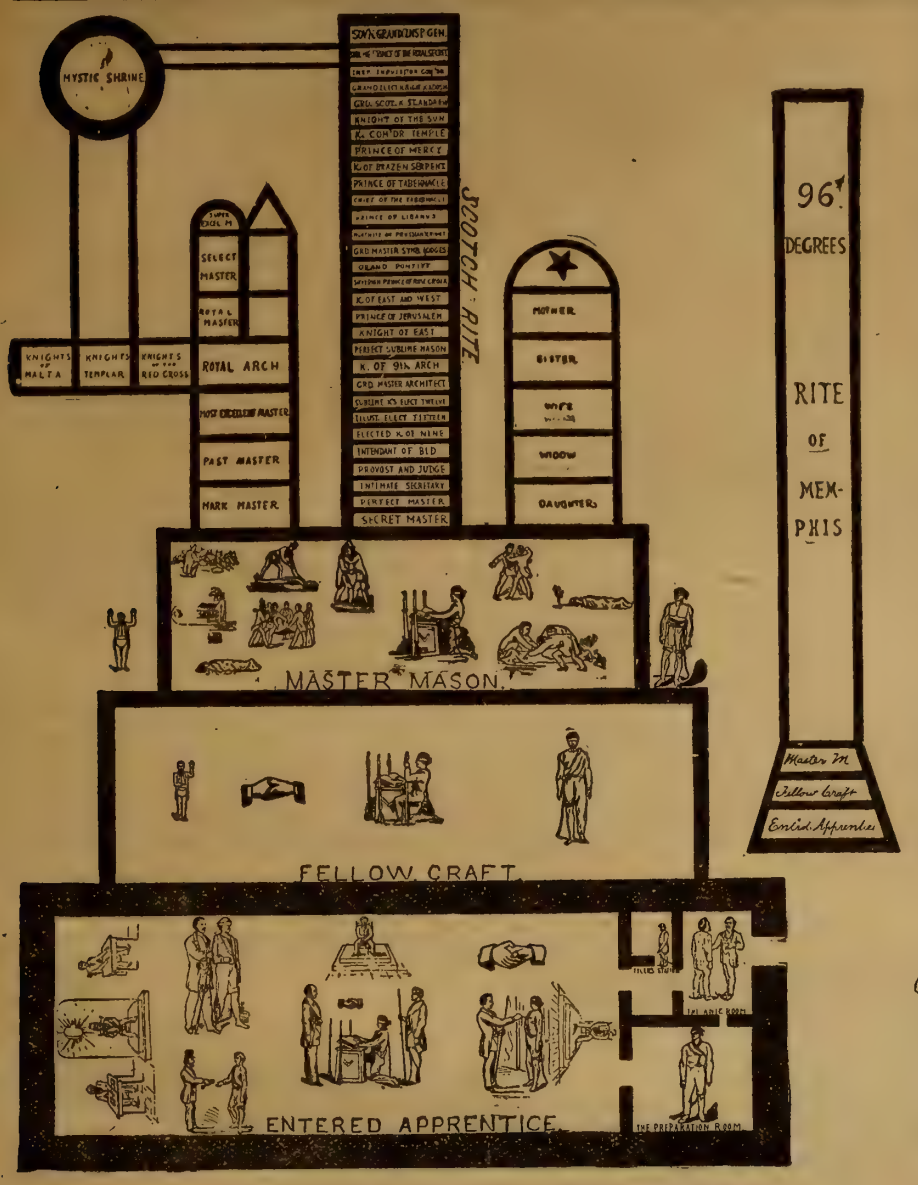
G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christain Cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. 50c. each.

Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover, 25c. each.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge, and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc.



MASONIC CHART.

ILLUSTRATING THE RELATION OF SOME OF THE DEGREES AND RITES IN FREEMASONRY TO EACH OTHER.

The accompanying chart represents one hundred and forty two degrees.

1. The American Rite of 13 degrees;
2. The Scotch Rite of 33 degrees;
3. The Egyptian Rite of 96 degrees.
4. The Mystic Shrine of one degree.
5. The Eastern Star of 5 degrees for Master Masons and for women. These are side degrees, and not genuine masonry.

The Symbolic degrees, or Blue Lodge of three degrees, are common to every Masonic rite, whether American, Scotch, or Egyptian, or whichever of the Masonic rites, named in Mackey's Masonic Encyclopedia one may choose to investigate.

This chart shows in the Blue Lodge the position of the Worshipful Master and some of the other officers of the lodge. Several positions of the candidate who is being initiated are also shown. In the Master Mason's degree is recognized the murder, burial and resurrection scene so full of religious significance to Freemasons.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. 341 pages, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated, 2 vols. Per vol., cloth, $1.00: paper, 65c.
The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive.
Vol. II comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 19th to 33rd degree inclusive.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. 274 pages, flexible cloth, 50c.
By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. 110 pages, paper, 25c.
The genuine old Morgan book republished.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry. By Avery Allyn. Cloth, $5.00.
Contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, and the Orange Societies.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Cloth, $2.50.
Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market, it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated."

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 75c.
Contains the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual.

Look to the East. A ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Cloth, $2.00.
Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or the Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. Cloth, $1.00: paper cover, 50cts.
The complete revised ritual of the Lodge Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. Cloth, 50c; paper cover, 25c.
This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor of Evangelical Lutheran church. 10c. each.
This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and, the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias, Illustrated. Cloth, 50c: paper cover 25c.
An exact copy of the new official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the world, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association. 10c. each.
Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Constitution and By-laws of the Association.

Secret Societies. Cloth 35c, paper 15c.
A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev Edward Beecher.

The Master's Carpet or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical. Bound in fine cloth. 400 pages. 75c.
Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. 5c.
By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard, Cloth, $1.50. paper, 75c.

Finney on Masonry. Cloth 75c., paper 35c.
The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By ex-Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasony Self-Convicted. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40c.
This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them.

Judge Whitney's Defence before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. 15c.
Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. 10c.
This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life-undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder and Oaths of 33 degrees. 304 pages, cloth, $1.00,
"Composed of Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's, Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees."

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor of United Presbyterian church.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in New Berlin trials 10c.
The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiation by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties,

Grand Lodge Masonry. 5c. each
Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to Republican Government. 15c.
By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio.

Story of the Gods. Postpaid, 10c.
By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of the past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood.

Masonic Outrages. Postpaid, 20c.
Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts. etc.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. 25c.

Athens Replies to the Outrage With a Meeting of 40,000 Which Cheers King George — The Latter Declares He Has Enlisted for the War If It Comes.

Canea, Island of Crete, Feb. 22.—A fusillade having continued since morning, despite the warnings of the foreign admirals, the united squadrons bombarded the insurgent camp outside of Canea. The foreign admirals have warned Colonel Vassos, the commander of the Greek forces on the island of Crete, of their intention to attack his troops with four men of war anchored off his camp at Aghioi Theodoroi, should he attempt to advance to the interior of the island.

Constantinople, Feb. 22.—A dispatch from Janina says that the authorities are arming the Mussulman population for a descent upon the Greek frontier near Arta.

Athens People Cheer the King.

Athens, Feb. 22.—Over 40.000 persons participated in a demonstration yesterday afternoon on University square in favor of the union of Crete and Greece. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed. An address was adopted declaring that the king and people were ready for any sacrifices of blood and treasure to bring the present Cretan policy to a successful issue. The crowd then marched to the palace and a deputation presented the address to the king. Tremendous cheering followed. His majesty King George, Crown Prince Constantine, Duke of Sparta and other members of the royal family occupied places on the balcony. The king adressed the crowd as follows: "You are executing the true mandate of the Hellenic people. I thank you for this imposing display of your feelings. May God protect our beloved country and strengthen our common efforts Long live the Hellenic nation." The address of King George was followed by vociferous cheering.

Will Annex Crete, Regardless.

This address, taken with the still more definite statement the king made Saturday is a distinct defiance of all the European powers. On Saturday The Asty printed a statement made by the king to the effect that he had sent an envoy to one of the powers and made every effort to call the favorable attention of Europe to the situation in Crete, but with the exception of the mixed gen d'arme and the so-called reforms nothing had resulted. Continuing the king said: "My patience became exhausted, and I decided to annex the island of Crete, which body and soul is Greek. This decision will provoke, however, the powers to adopt coercive measures against me. I have ordered my army not to abandon the island under any circumstances. Crete will be administratively organized as soon as possible."

Gen. Pleasanton Is Dead.

Washington, Feb. 18.—The death of General Alfred Pleasanton, which took place at 3 a. m. yesterday at the Gregson House in this city, ends a career that was remarkable for brilliancy in the field of war and later for the hermit-like life the general led. He was born inthis city in 1824 and was educated at West Point, serving afterwards in the Mexican war, on the Indian frontier and in the civil war,where he earned his laurels as a cavalry commander. His only attendants at death were his private secretary, Mr. Murphy, and Henrietta Roane, a fathful colored nurse, who were with him when he passed away. Dropsey, the effect of wounds and age and the grip, caused the end.

Terrible Disaster on the Atlantic.

Boston, Feb. 22.—The German tank steamer Diamant, Captain Wischausen and thirty-five men, was probably lost with all hands, 280 miles southeast of Halifax, Feb. 17, or else she has been drifting at the mercy of the elements ever since. Such is the opinion of Captain Forth, of the Furniss Line steamer Galileo. Captain Forth attempted to tow the Diamant and to save her crew, but the hawser parted and the tank steamer disappeared from view so quickly that it is believed that she went down.

Gary to Have a Portfolio.

Canton, O., Feb. 20.—At 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon Hon. James A. Gary, of Baltimore, left the private room at the McKinley home, where he had been in consultation with the president-elect for several hours and gave the following statement to the Associated Press: "Governor McKinley has tendered me a portfolio in his cabinet. While it is not definitely settled which one, I am assured that it will be one which I can accept."

Expected Happens at Gen. Harrison's.

Indianapolis, Feb. 22.—At 5:30 o'clock yesterday morning a baby girl weighing eight and one-half pounds was born to Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, Dr. Henry Jameson being the attending physician. Mother and child are doing well. Mrs. Lieutenant Parker, of New York, is with her sister, Mrs. Harrison. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison were married in St. Thomas' church, New York, April 6, 1896. The ex-president is in his 64th year.

Mothers' Congress Adjourns.

Washington, Feb. 20.—After a very successful and enthusiastic meeting of three days, the first mothers' congress last night finished its work and adjourned to meet next year in Washington. This city will be the general headquartrs of the new organization and the meeting every other year will take place here, while in the alternate years it will be held at some city to be chosen by the congress.

THE WEEK IN CONGRESS.

Synopsis of the Proceedings of the National Lawmakers.

Washington, Feb. 18.—The senate yesterday passed the immigration bill as revised by the conference committee—34 to 31—did a little routine business, held an executive session and adjourned.

The house passed a bill opening to use and occupation under the right-of-way act of March 3, 1891, all the reservoir sites—138—reserved by the geological survey in the arid regions of the west. The conference report on the legislative bill was agreed to and a bill passed to remove the political disabilities of Colonel W. E. Simms, of Kentucky. Debate on the Hopkins-Kendall contested election case from the Tenth Kentucky district occupied the rest of the day.

Washington, Feb. 19.—The open session of the senate yesterday lasted only twenty minutes, during which a bill was passed that provides for using a patent postal cord and envelope with coupons attached. The postmaster general is authorized to suspend the system if it proves unsatisfactory on a test. The executive session lasted until 6:30 and was mostly devoted to confirming Charles F. Amidon, appointed a district judge in North Dakota. The arbitration treaty was considered briefly and will probably be postponed until after March 4 next.

The house adopted the conference reports on the bills to pension the widows of Major General Stoneman and Major General Julius H. Stahl at $50 and $75, respectively, and seated Hopkins in place of Kendall from the Tenth Kentucky district—197 to 91. The committee reported in favor of Kendall.

Washington, Feb. 20.—After eight hours in executive session the senate adjourned yesterday without a vote on the arbitration treaty, the opposition filibustering to prevent action. Sherman and Lodge pleaded with those opposed to action to take a vote or agree to take a vote, but the minority was unyielding and forced an adjournment. Teller and Daniel spoke against the treaty and Lindsay for it. Nothing else was done in the senate.

In the house there was a long debate over the general deficiency bill, during which Walker of Massachusetts denounced the rules committee for its alleged "tryanny." The bill was not completed. Grow made a speech for the free homes bill. Nothing was done at the night session.

Washington, Feb. 22.—The senate Saturday adopted a resolution of sympathy with Greece in the present dispute in Europe over Crete. Quay tried to get up the bill for a commission to look into labor troubles, but after a brief talk it was displaced by the Indian appropriation bill. This gave rise to a long debate in which the silver question cropped out and also the old dispute about granting money to churches for Indian education, the senate committee having added a clause to continue that practice. The bill was not acted upon at adjournment. A bill was passed giving the widow of General Carr $60 a month pension.

The house put in the day on the general deficiency bill, striking out an item of $12,000 to pay members who had been "docked" for non-attendance by a rule of the Fifty-third congress. McMillan made a hot speech against the supreme court for deciding against the income tax referring to the "thick hide" of Justice Shiras, who changed his opinion on that case and calling the majority opinion "slush." No action on the bill. The bill for an international commission was reported favorably.

MURDERED BY INDIANS.

The Bodies of Six People Discovered Near Winona, Minn.

Winona, N. D., Feb. 19.—A terrible sextuple tragedy was discovered one mile from this place yesterday on the ranch of Rev. Thomas Spicer. The horribly mutilated bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Spicer, their daughter Mrs. William Rouse, with her 1-year-old twin boys, and the aged Mrs. Waldron, the mother of the postmaster of this place, were discovered scattered about the ranch, and there is as yet no positive clue to the perpetrators of the horrible crime. The appearance about the ranch, the condition of the bodies, and some other circumstances have led to the suspicion that the murder was committed by Indians, and this suspicion was in part started from the known fact that one Indian was seen in the neighborhood of the ranch yesterday.

Educators Conclude Their Meet.

Indianapolis, Feb. 19.—The concluding sessions of the department of superintendence were held yesterday. They was largely business meetings. Charles R. Skinner, of New York, introduced an anti-scalper resolution, which he said was of great importance and had direct bearing on the act now before congress. After a lively debate the resolution was adopted by a narrow margin. As the place for holding the next session Chattanooga, Tenn., was chosen. President-elect Schaeffer then made his bow to the audience.

Philadelphia City Election.

Philadelphia, Feb. 18.—The strongest fight in the city election between the "combine" and anti-combine factions of the Republican party was in the Fifteenth ward, the latter faction by 680 votes electing Clinton Rogers Woodruff, secretary of the National Municipal league, a member of the legislature to fill a vacancy. Mrs. William B. Riley was elected a school director. In three other wards women who received the regular Republican nomination for school directors were elected.

LATEST NEWS FROM JACKSONVILLE.

Cuban Insurgents Having Their Own Way with the Forces of Weyler.

Cincinnati, Feb. 22.—A special to The Commercial-Tribune from Jacksonville, Fla., says: Letters from Pinar del Rio to Colonel Corbo give details of engagements in that section recently, in all of which the insurgents were successful. Near Joreta Major Morales engaged San Martin's troops and after a two hours' fight the Cuban machete charge drove the Spanish from the field in utter rout, they leaving 125 dead on the field. The insurgents decoyed the Spanish into a trap in Jopeta swamp and cut their rear guard into pieces and routed a squadron of 500 men.

At the woods of El Toveo was another disaster for the Spaniards, Colonel Lorento defeating Colonel Martin's detachment of 600 men and forcing him to retreat to San Juan y Martinez with heay loss, leaving his dead on the field. At Janta the Spaniards made a plucky fight, but the Cubans routed them after three hours' fighting. The insurgents secured 20 rifles and 1,500 rounds of ammunition. Their loss was less than thirty, while the Spaniards acknowledged a loss of over 140.

A special to The Commercial-Tribune from Key West, Fla., says: A report has reached here of rumors in Havana of a big fight in Santa Clara province between 1,500 Spaniards and 1,200 Cubans under Gomez, which lasted eight hours. The insurgents cut down the Spanish forces first with artillery and then with the machete, the Spaniards fleeing for their lives in the greatest disorder. The losses on both sides were heavy, the Spaniards losing the most men. The Cubans captured all the ammunition, stores and guns, including four field pieces and quantities of small arms.

PLOT TO BLOW UP A PRISON.

Friends of Four Unhung Thugs Brewing Trouble at Santa Fe.

Santa Fe, N. M., Feb. 22.—Governor Thornton has placed the local company of infantry on guard at the penitentiary on account of the discovery of a plot to blow up the building on the part of friend of the four members of the Borrego gang of assassins, who were condemned to be hanged next Tuesday, but have been granted a respite for thirty days by President Cleveland in disregard of an appeal from the governor and other authorities to let the law take its course.

Another ominous feature of the trouble is the appearance of the cabalistic chalk figures "B—302—40" on the pavement and doors of the officials, which the knowing ones describe as similar to the call for meetings of the secret "Button" gang, which appeared frequently in 1892 just prior to the assassination of ex-Sheriff Frank Chavez.

KRUGER'S BILL AGAINST JOHN BULL.

He Wants $5,000,000 for "Moral and Intellectual Damage."

London, Feb. 19.—The secretary of state for the colonies, Joseph Chamberlain, announced in the house of commons yesterday that an official telegram had been received from the British agent at Pretoria, capital of the Transvaal, conveying a bill of indemnity presented by the Transvaal as a result of the Jameson raid. The bill, he added, is divided into two heads. The first asks for the payment of £677,938 3s 3d as a material charge, and under the second head the Transvaal asks £1,000,000 for "moral and intellectual damage." Chamberlain further said of the telegram that the foregoing demands do not include the legitimate private claims which may be advanced.

Makes Fusion Impossible.

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 20.—There were exciting scenes in the senate over the consideration of the chapter of the code governing elections. As amended the law gives fusion a body blow by providing that no candidate's name may appear on the official ballot more than once. The debate throughout was characterized with much acrimony, and at one point Healy charged that McKinley got the vote of Iowa only through the votes of gold Democrats, which the proposed bill would drive away. The discussion lasted until the middle of the afternoon session, when the bill was finally passed by a vote of 31 to 17.

Mother and Child Fatally Burned.

Louisville, Feb. 18.—The overturning of a lamp at the home of John Myer in this city resulted in the fatal burning of Mrs. Myer and a 2-year-old child. Myer was severely burned while trying to extinguish the flames.

Raising Children by Convention.

Washington, Feb. 18.—The mothers' congress, the first national meeting of the kind, met here yesterday with a very large attendance. The day was spent in discussing the best means of bringing up children.

Dr. Steinitz Reported Dead.

London, Feb. 22.—A dispatch to The Daily Mail from Paris says that Dr. Steinitz is dead at Moscow. He was the famous chess player, and was born in 1836.

There will be a meeting of the Board of Directors next Saturday, March 6th, at 9 A. M.

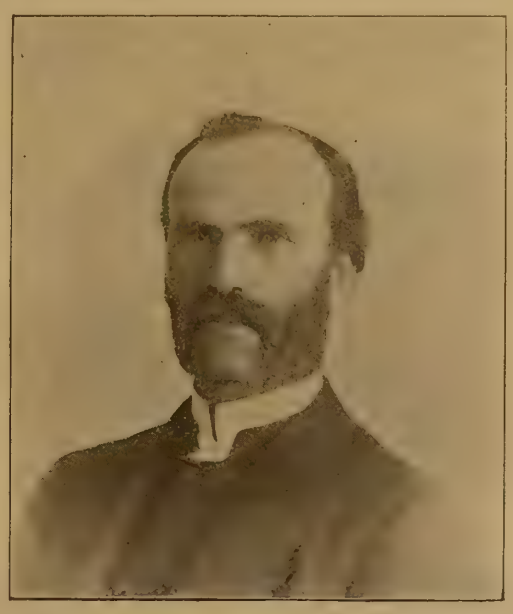
Rev. P. B. Williams has undertaken to work up a Southern California Anti-secret Convention for April 14, 15.

A large number of this issue of the Cynosure will go to friends of the cause in Great Britain. We request those who receive it to return us a postal card on which they will answer this question, "How to resist the tide of secret orders in Great Britain?" We desire to publish a postal card symposium on this question, and wish to get expressions from our friends across the water.

The Dunkards, or German Baptists, have purchased 41,000 acres of land in Brown county, Ind., and are contemplating the purchase of the entire county. They are prohibitionists and will need no jail or prison of any sort. In the event of completing their purchase the taxes of Brown county will be reduced two-thirds or three-fourths, for it will not be cursed with saloons or anybody to patronize saloons. We would like to live in that county.

No church has paid so dear a price for the lesson that secret societies are dangerous to civil government as the Covenanters. In their early struggle for civil and religeous liberty in Scotland they were betrayed by Freemasons. In their blindness to the tyranny and diabolical intrigue of that institution they brought over from Holland Charles II., a Royal Arch Mason, and placed him upon the throne. And when he had secured the reins of government he crimsoned the heather of Scotland with the blood of thousands of Covenanters.

Ten street car companies in Philadelphia for ten years paid a profit of 26 per cent on their invested stock. If the city had invested the original capital on behalf of the citizens at 5 per cent, and put the profits in the city treasury, it would have made an annual profit of $1,200,000 in addition to an actual investment in the value of the property amounting to $3,250,000 a year. Philadelphia, therefore, lost nearly $4 500,000 a year because the city did not run the street cars.



REV. JAMES KERR, D. D.

We are glad here to introduce to Cynosure readers a prominent reform leader in Scotland. His ancestry were those who sacrificed their lives for freedom, civil and religious, in times of Scottish persecution. In his veins is blood that has come down through generations of heroic reformers. He has that close-hammered mind and character forged on the anvil of persecution, and inspired and regulated by God's Word and the catechism which makes sound Presbyterians, the soundest of men. He is a born leader, and the great reform convention in Glasgow last summer, gathered from various lands, and composed of the descendants and sympanhizers of those who stood for civil and religious liberty in Scotland, was of his planning and execution.

Dr. Kerr has added a valuable contribution to the reform literature of the day by the publication of the addresses at this convention in a Memorial Volume of 470 pages. It contains interesting reports of memorial services and addresses given in connection with this convention at martyrs' graves and on battlefields celebrated in the history of Scottish persecution. The addresses at the Glasgow convention cover all the current reforms of the day and make the volume specially valuable to every reformer. We give extracts in this paper from the addresses in this volume on the lodge question. They were given by Dr. C. D. Trumbull of Morning Sun, Iowa, and Dr. T. P. Stevenson, of Philadelphia. Dr. Kerr recognizes the secret lodge question as one of the great issues of the day; and as will be seen from his article and letter in this Cynosure, he believes the time is ripe for the organization of an anti-secret movement in Great Britain. We hope his appeal will meet with a wide response.

Rebold, the Masonic historian, says that after the death of King Charles I. of England, in 1649, the local Masonic lodges worked in secret to restore the throne which Cromwell was destroying. Charles II., a profligate and libertine, whose conscience was destroyed by Masonic oaths, was in exile over the water in Holland. The English Masons placed a tub of water in their lodges, touched their glasses over it and drank to Charles over the water without pronouncing his name, and so avoided the law of treason.

Dr. Crafts of the National Reform Bureau says: "Perhaps there has been moral progress in the world at large since 1867, but it would be hard to prove moral progress in the United States since that date. The consumption of liquor by the gallons, and the divorces and murders have multiplied three times as fast as the population. It is the period of labor insurrections and municipal corruption. It is also the period when Christian (?) nations have broken down in a measure the total abstinence customs of Buddhism and Mohammedanism."

THE BIBLE.

Holy Bible, book divine,
Precious treasure, thou art mine.
Mine to tell me whence I came,
Mine to teach me what I am;
Mine to chide me when I rove,
Mine to show a Saviour's love.
Mine art thou to guide my feet,
Mine to judge, condemn, acquit;
Mine to comfort in distress,
Mine to lead to promised rest.
Mine to warn of sinner's doom,
Mine to teach that doom to shun;
Mine to show the living faith,
Mine to triumph over death.
Mine to tell of joys to come,
Mine to bring an earnest home;
Mine to point me to the road,
Mine to lead my heart to God.
Oh! thou precious book divine,
Precious treasure, thou art mine.

WHY A COLLAPSE THREATENS.

BY W. I. PHILLIPS.

"At no time during the half century now closing have the missions to the heathen been in greater peril of utter collapse."—Rev. A. T. Pierson, D. D.

Foreign missionary religion is the popular religion of our country. This has been true for almost a century. Men and women of our churches who would not touch the hem of the garment of our national sins, were and are enthusiastic for helping missionary work in foreign lands.

The homes of church members are readily opened for a missionary meeting, that money may be raised or missionary intelligence given, all of which is right and commendable; but abolition or anti-secrecy or prohibition meetings, for giving intelligence and enlisting sympathy, has seldom found an open door, bidding welcome, in any Christian household.

Shunning our own sins and those of our age, results in a sentimental missionary religion, popular but not Apostolic, and the beginning of the end of the collapse is evident.

The foreign mission boards in condoning the sins of our age have been as unfaithful as our churches, and so have accelerated the threatening disaster.

The writer's wife was born on missionary ground, and her father left the work of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions because fellow missionaries of the Board, without rebuke or reproof, used the money received from the churches to purchase slaves for their own use and profit. To-day the American Board, in harmony with other foreign missionary societies, are sending out men, paid with the money of the churches, without a question as to their relation to Freemasonry. Men who were idolaters before leaving their own land will very readily favor a mixed religion in the lands to which they are sent. There are some honorable exceptions, for the Reformed Presbyterian church, when they found that they had sent out a Freemason, immediately recalled him.

In a report to the Grand Lodge of Iowa by Grand Secretary Parvin on Freemasonry in Mexico, he speaks of the activity of two missionaries sent out by one of our largest denominations. The lady was from Iowa and the gentleman from Michigan; the former had labored so efficiently in female Masonry, and the latter in building up male Masonry, as to call for special mention in the Grand Secretary's report.

In Mexico there are several lodges of female Masonry organized on exactly the same plan as the male lodges. The women have to go through the same form of initiation as the men. These lodges have been recognized by the Grand Lodge of Mexico, and have enjoyed all the privileges granted to the male lodges until very recently. This abomination—female Masonry—was promoted by a lady missionary whose support came from churches which had sent her to give the Gospel to Mexico.

Rev. J. E. Wolfe, of Gwenndale, Ind. Ter., told the writer that there were missionaries in that Territory who made special efforts to persuade the Indians to join the Masonic lodge.

Mrs. Bridgeman, of South Africa, for many years past, and also at the present time, a missionary of the American Board, has sent to the National Christian Association several times for literature to stay the lodge idolatry around her. Numbers of other missionaries in Africa and in other foreign lands have sought the same kind of help.

Rev. W. J. Gladwin, for twenty-five years a missionary, and who went to India under the Methodist Episcopal Board, wrote to the Christian Cynosure:

"There are many persons in foreign lands who are greatly interested in the peculiar conflict which the Cynosure has in hand, and not only because of the prevalence of the evils of secrecy in civilized lands, but also for the reason that modern secret societies have extended very largely into most foreign countries, and necessarily affect the work of Christian missions. Several of your publications show the heathenish ancestry of most of the popular secret societies; but your readers in the Christian lands of America and England cannot well conceive the effect such societies have in our mission fields.

"They have just enough of theism and whitewash of morality to administer an effective opiate to an awakened conscience. Men whose eyes have been opened by Western education te see the absurdity of much of their mythology, at once find in these secret orders that which takes the very cream of their old religions (a compound of mysticism and morality), puts away the excrescencies of more vulgar idolatry, takes in their place a high sounding ritual and gaudy paraphernalia of uniform, and so the awakened minds of thousands of educated natives in foreign fields are lulled to sleep again by this secrecy poison, administered by the hand of a professed Christian."

There are but few missionaries who will take a position different from that of the home churches which now furnish the money for their missionary boards and which send it to them. The introduction of Masonic idolatry into these heathen lands has affected the cause of Christ there, just as Baalism did the Jewish church and nation.

Our home churches are the fountain from which foreign lands must be blessed if at all. We agree with Rev. Dr. Pierson that here is the source of the threatened calamity. What he says of sectarianism, the low level of piety, etc., is true enough, but he overlooks the chief cause of our distress. Like Solomon, we have become yoked together with unbelievers and God has a controversy with us.

Freemasonry includes the crime of blasphemy and the sin of idolatry. And as long as the churches fellowship Masons and refuse to allow the facts about secret societies to be taught from their pulpits, so long will the evils complained of by Dr. Pierson be prominent.

Let the churches stand for God against the lodges, and for man against the saloons; refusing to fellowship those who adhere to the former, or who vote to license the latter; and prayer would abound and piety be deepened and money would be forthcoming. This is my belief.

"Reforms," says Lowell, "are a 'new Messiah' sent to separate the friends of truth from the friends of falsehood."

Oppositian to secret societies is a new Messiah and a fundamental reform, and, like Aaron's serpent, swallows all the rest. Take the mere question of money for foreign missions and see how it is affected. The general fact is that the male membership of the church is giving to secret societies what otherwise would go to the church, and which, indeed, belongs to it.

The Boston Congregationalist said, editorially, that "the church cannot ignore secret societies for they are a potent influence in every community." The Chicago Post commenting on the above editorial of the Congregationalist, said: "It is difficult to escape the conclusion that the men of America are rapidly leaving the paws to their wives and daughters." A few weeks ago a Presbyterian pastor came to our office for aid in rescuing his male membership from the lodges; for, said he, "They cannot support both the lodge and the church, and somehow the lodge seems to have the first claim." This is a general condition in our country. The leader of the Y. M. C. A. a few Sabbaths ago in Rochelle, Ill., took the position that God did not give him any more than his family needed, and hence he had nothing to give to the church. He found plenty, however, to keep up his lodge dues.

When Rev. Dr. Pierson declared that "Never had the church such wealth at her disposal," he should also have declared for a separation of church members from secret societies, and then if heeded he would not hear "our drums beat a retreat and our Boards loudly call for retrenchment!" The decay in missionary enterprise is declared to be due—

> "On one hand to a laxity of doctrine, which, at least, leads disciples to indulge a vague 'eternal hope,' like Dean Farrar, that the heathen are not really lost without Christ; and on the other hand to a laxity in practice, which leads to a practical recognition of all religions as belonging to a universal brotherhood of faiths, and to the fellowship of their representatives as entitled to our 'Christian charity.'"

The above is true except, perhaps, "laxity of doctrine" ought to be named first, since doctrines are changed to cover up laxity in practice. It is to be noted that the doctrine and practice complained of is universal salvation and the acknowledgment of a universal brotherhood of faiths.

It is scarcely needful to tell the readers of the Cynosure that these are the foundation stones of the religious philosophy of secret societies. Then churches, having received lodge members into their fellowship, have finally adopted their doctrine of the universal "Fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man"—or as Masonry puts it, "Around this common altar bows the Christian, Mohammedan, Jew, Parsee and men of every religious faith, and worship a common Father."

The Holy Spirit declared to the church that "He that hath not the Son hath not the father," but we have taken Freemasons into church membership and made pastors and evangelists of the Boltons and Lorimers and Sam Joneses until suddenly we are made aware that the church has practically taken position in harmony with lodge theology.

The first thing to do, we are told, is "to get the truth center." This we are informed "is prayer—a new approach to God in believing supplication and intercession."

We must pray, but we must cleanse the church. Jesus found in the church things which had no right there, and he purified his temple, and wonderful manifestations of divine grace followed. As the Father sent him so he has sent us, and what he did in the temple we are to do in the church. We are his witnesses, and our weapons are the testimony of our voices and the pages of our printing presses and the discipline of the church, these, faithfully used, with prayer, God will honor, and "the call to separation and self-denial" will be heard, and the nations that "sit in darkness" shall then see a great light.

THE FALSE CHRIST OF FREEMASONRY.

BY REV. JAMES KERR, D. D., GLASGOW, SCOTLAND.

A cursory study of the Masonic institution will convince all who are open to conviction, that it is a deadly foe to the dearest interests of humanity. Like a grasping octopus, it is crushing out the life of the individual, society and the church. The circles are few that are still free from its ruinous influences. Its growth and demands compel its examination by every man resolved to secure personal and ecclesiastical independence and save his country from disunion and despotism.

The silence of public teachers in the presence of such an enemy of our race is highly culpable. This silence, however, may be accounted for as Dr. Moses Stuart, of Andover, explained his silence: "For a long time I neither knew or cared about the subject; but recent attention to it has filled me with astonishment as to some things contained in it, with horror." A perusal of the rituals and their authoritative books of the order affords overwhelming confirmation of the following propositions:

1. Freemasonry asserts a despotism over the conscience of the individual. Nothing less than an unreserved surrender of the right of private judgment can satisfy its audacious demands. From the moment the Christian takes oath ever to conceal and never reveal the secrets into which he is to be initiated, he wilfully commits to others one of the primary rights with which Christianity endows him; and the man who so swears yields up ignobly that independence of mind and conscience which distinguishes and ennobles him as a rational creature.

> "The conscience, that sole monarchy in man,
> Owing allegiance to no earthly prince;
> Made by the edict of creation free;
> An individual authority that none
> Created might, unpunished, bind or touch
> Unbound, save by the the eternal laws of God,
> And unamenable to all below."

What shall be said of him who bows in the lodge room and expresses a willingness to be blindfolded and then, with the body in the attitude of subjection and servility, swears away the light of the understanding and the rights of conscience—that vice-gerent of God within? What of the institution which requires this servile surrender of body and soul? If an institution which can live only and does live by the assertion of a tyranny as sweeping and heartless as ever claimed by pope or prince in days when the elementary principles of modern civilization were sought for in vain? And what of churches who will not raise a trumpet note of warning against this arrogant invasion of human rights? And who will welcome into their membership those who have manacled their souls and have made an abject surrender to the tyrant demands of a human institution? Is this deluding Delilah shearing the locks and putting out the eyes of even the churches of Christ by its shameless fascinations.

2. Freemasonry is an audacious foe to society. Beginning with the husband and wife it carries its separating and disrupting forces into all ranks of social life. The mutual relations of the members of families are ignored and revolutionized by the obligations laid on husbands, fathers and sons. It prevents the unreserved affection and the sterling confidences without which no home can rightly illustrate the true ideal of family life. The wife, daughters and sisters feel that a barrier has been raised between them and their dearest relatives fit to stem the flow of their loves and joys. The abiding sense of the neighboring lodge casts a shadow over the family brightness. The lodge stands behind the father's chair as a specter—too real—casting a gloom over the home happiness. The tyrannical hand of Masonry has effected a cleavage on the very heart of the family.

In the business of daily life the hand of the divider is also in evidence. A spurious brotherhood has established itself under which, by its own inexorable laws, any Mason the world over, who only reveals himself by the "grip," has the first claim on the benevolence and aid of a brother, though this brother may have relatives and friends of irreproachable character of the "household of faith." And more, Freemasonry has laid and is bound by its laws to lay its iron hand on civil society and interrupt it in the administration of justice. Masonic advocates have often declared that their laws are superior to the laws of any land; and the consistent attempt of Masons to shield their brothers in crime from the grasp of the law have been repeatedly matters of history. With its own laws, courts, officials and its claim of power to inflict death on its "traitor brethren, Freemasonry is an empire within an empire. It haughtily defies the self government of the state. It is a harpoon flung into the very heart of national life and prosperity. Genuine patriotism demands its immediate expatriation.

3. Freemasonry is a powerful foe to the Church of Christ and the salvation of mankind. The system makes profuse professions of religion. In its lodges and demonstrations it makes a loud display of the Scriptures. It has its oaths, priests, rituals, hymns, chaplains, prayers, altars, burial ceremonies and temples. It professes itself a worshiper of the "Grand Architect of the universe" and claims to be a school of preparation for the "Grand Lodge above." It puts the novitiate symbolically through the whole course of salvation—illumination, regeneration, resurrection and glorification. One of its highest officials has publicly declared that "Masonry is a religion of the highest and purest type," and another that "Genuine Masonry is a pure religion."

But when dragged into the light of day and examined by the very Word which it so lavishly uses, it is seen at once to be one of the false Christs, a Judas-religion betraying the author of Christianity with a kiss. At its very threshold it shatters that independence of judgment which Christianity commends and commands. It requires acceptance of oaths with imprecations so horrible that, as President Quincy Adams says, "Even a cannibal would be ashamed of them." It makes a profane use of the titles of Jehovah. Its ceremonies derive their origin and complexion from the mythology of paganism. Its brotherhood comprehends all kinds of religionists—Jews, Deists, Mohammedans, while it excludes women and men who are not physically strong. It obstructs the course of justice and humanity by shielding its votaries from the legal consequence of criminality. And it excludes and rejects Christ Jesus the Lord, the only Saviour, from its prayers, rituals, hymns, and whole ceremonies. While audaciously claiming to be a saving institution, it is Christless from base to apex. Were Christ rightly acknowledged the whole Babel of Masonry would crumble instantly into ruins. "The church must," said the late Pastor Fisch, of Paris, "stand as one man against Masonry or be destroyed."

All the Christians and churches of Britain should guard jealously against the growth of this anti-christ within the British Isles. In the interests of Christianity and the commonwealth, it should not receive any quarter. As Joseph Cook, of Boston, said at Chicago a few years ago, "Let those who are out of oath-bound secret societies stay out. I exhort you to stay out in the name of personal independence; stay out in the name of patriotism; stay out in the name of Christianity. And to you who are inside oath-bound organizations I say, come out as patriots; come out as Christians; come out as unmanacled men."

SECRET SOCIETIES AND INSURANCE.

BY REV. D. H. COULTER, D. D.

Multitudes of people are captivated with any scheme founded on the principle of paying out little and getting back much. Whether it be honest or righteous has little to do with the case, if it only promise two dollars in return for one invested. How many new secret mutual insurance associations are put into successful operation on this plan! The dictionary is almost exhausted to find names for them; and language becomes prematurely sterile in the effort to produce titles of dignity for the officers of these swarming fraternities.

Not a few good men and women too, who think they are opposed to secret societies—"just as much opposed to Masons and Odd-fellows and all that as you dare be," they will tell you—are picked up by some shrewd, smooth-tongued agent, and initiated into some secret oath-bound insurance company. They are caught by the insurance feature. It is on the mutual plan and it is so cheap. You take out a policy of $3,000, and pay only a few dollars a year. The matter of sworn secrecy, grips, signs, passwords, stilted titles and the other paraphernalia of the genuine lodge, they are made to believe, is a thing of no consequence. It is an insurance company, you must understand, rather than a secret society.

But an observing person will notice that when people have once joined any sort of secret organization, you cannot induce them to render aid to the anti-secrecy reform. Their lips are sealed. their hands are tied. They are ill at ease when the subject is mentioned. They do not want any N. C. A. lecturers or conventions around. Freemasonry is Satan's masterpiece of enginery for evil, the central citadel of his visible empire, and to protect it he has secured the organization of multitudes of minor strongholds held as outposts for defense. It is remarkable how many intelligent and capable business men are carried away by the idea of cheap mutual insurance.

Notwithstanding that so many comparatively strong companies of this character have gone to the wall, and although the prospect is that the next ten years will drive the last of them into bankruptcy, yet almost every season witnesses the birth of some grand new brotherhood with catching name and catching terms of insurance at which swarms of gullible people bite, as eagerly as the swarming trout of Yellowstone Lake bite at the cheap artifical fly. There is a sharp-pointed and barbed hook just under the sham fly. But if one talk in this style they fly mad, and say you are the paid agent of some stock insurance company. The writer has for years doubted the righteousness of the entire insurance business. He got bitten or hooked twice, which may in part account for his present tenderness of conscience. But that is another story.

RAISE THE MORAL STANDARD IN POLITICS.

BY REV. J. R. WYLIE.

We have always had somewhere in the world the godly church. It has been small sometimes, as it was in the dark ages, but it has always existed as a tangible fact. But the godly state has existed down through the ages more as a theory than as a fact.

In Dr. Crafts' address before the W. C. T. U. National Convention at St. Louis last November, we find these astounding words: "The churches will adopt moral reforms as part of their regular work early in the twentieth century." He illustrates his thought by a reference to foreign mission work. We can conceive in our minds of a church, a true church, without a foreign mission arm of work; but who can think of a church without a moral arm of work? Has morality departed from religion? Are our churches trying to save men without changing their moral condition? Let us be as charitable as possible. Dr. Crafts can mean no less than that the churches while having a kind of morality connected with their religion, yet they have ceased to work regularly for morality in the realm of the state.

But some one may ask, should the church work for morality in the realm of the state? We may answer, yes and no. The church as a church possibly ought not to be under the necessity of working for morality in the realm of the state; but as her members are also members of the state, she cannot but be interested in the morality of the state, for the morality of her members cannot rise higher than the morality of the state, so long as they incorporate with it. This has been the trouble with the church in the past, and is still the trouble to-day. She has thought to save men without reference to their political character; not realizing that their political character is their real character.

In consequence, the character of the average church member to-day is represented by the character of the government, which breaks the Sabbath, runs saloons, charters lodges, legalizes prostitution and shows little respect for God or Jesus Christ. Although he may have some faith in divine truth, and like the devils believe and tremble, yet such faith won't save him. If the churches are to preserve and advance the morality of their members, they must either lift their members out of the state, or else lift the state to the plane of Christain morality. We rejoice that some of the churches and some of the church members are beginning to see this. You ask, cannot the state be lifted without the church? We answer, no. God has ordained that "the law shall go forth from Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem." She must proclaim the law which is part of the Gospel, and she must enforce that law within her own sphere. This we believe to be the duty of the home.

But it is a patriotic duty as well as a Christian duty. How shall it be accomplished. Our denominational and political prejudices militate most forcibly against the practical performance of this duty. Every church should begin within her own borders, and establish a practical, moral standard that will apply to the state as well as the church. For instance, if a man cannot uphold the saloon in the church, then let it be decreed that he cannot uphold the saloon in the state and remain in the church. But how can the churches do this when their members are the guilty parties?

It will be sometime before the churches will solve this problem. But we raise the question, cannot something be done in the meantime in a civil and patriotic way to attain this object? The National Reform Association has been teaching the principles of the Christian state for thirty years. These principles are known and held in theory by the ablest and best thinkers all over our land. My denomination employs one of its ablest ministers to preach loyalty to Christ in the realm of citizenship and he has been well received, east and west, north and south.

We live in an age of organization. And while we believe that organization has been overdone in some quarters, yet the organization that will raise the standard of morals in politics must one day come, for it will be the nucleus of the Christian state. Men are already seeking to realize this. We have the Christian Citizensship movement and the Christian Citizenship League, and other similar organizations are springing up all over our country. Why cannot all these organizations be combined in one containing all the principles of the Christian state? Let them place the standard up to the level of God's truth. And let the members of the organization be bound in the name of the author of truth, to loyalty to these principles in political action, and let them emulate the true prohibitionist, who will not even vote when he cannot vote for his principles.

LODGE AND STATE IN CONFLICT.

Jacob Hirschkoph and others were sentenced as firebugs in Brooklyn and New York City, but Jacob Klein, an associate, has three times escaped conviction for the same offence by hanging or disagreement of the jury. This result has been achieved by proving an alibi through the Secretary of the Nathan Bertel Lodge. Zachariah Schneider, the Secretary, has now been indicted for perjury, and there is a fair chance of showing the power and purpose of secret societies to defeat law and justice or endanger their members or dupes. To swear to the truth is perjury by the laws and interpretation of the lodge, but to swear to a lie is perjury by the laws and interpretation of the state. There is no escape from the horrors of the dilemma, and it is a snare for prison and for the bottomless pit, whether or not lodge oaths are more than blasphemy. It involves a glaring inconsistency in moral or civil law, government or religion, and the dupe is riding, or attempting to ride, horses in opposite directions, and liable to be rent in impossibilities. The way of the transgressor is hard and leads to entanglement and perdition. A READER.

The present pontifical army of Rome consists of about 500 picked men, made up of Italian aristocrats, grendarmes and ex-Italian soldiers, all well-officered and armed and doing police and firemen's duty at the Vatican.

THE MINNESOTA ANTI-SECRET CONVENTION.

ROUSING STATE CONVENTION. LARGEST HALL IN THE CITY CROWDED. MANY COULD NOT OBTAIN SEATS. A MINNESOTA BLIZZARD NO CHECK TO THE HARDY SCANDINAVIANS.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 26, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—The Minnesota State Convention just held at Willmar is another of the many evidences that God hears and answers prayers for the success of such conventions. It was held in the hall of the seminary of which Prof. H. S. Hillehoe is the president. He is unquestionably a God-fearing, courageous man. We are told that five times the cowardly rum-sellers have tried to intimidate him with cowardly white cap letters. Here are 230 students under his care being trained in the way of righteousness and to abhor that which is evil.

The convention was most cordially welcomed by all the better portion of the citizens of Willmar. The meetings from the first to the last were crowded with deeply interested listeners. The last meeting was held in the largest hall in the city, "the Rink;" all the seats were occupied and scores were standing during the entire meeting.

The exercises of the seminary were suspended on Wednesday to afford the faculty and students an opportunity to attend the convention. A large number of Scandinavian pastors were present, some of whom spoke in their native language; and as some one said, they fired "hot shot," not a cold pistol bullet such as some one put into the hat for the contribution. One pastor from North Dakota expressed a strong desire for such a convention in his State.

And why not have such conventions held oftener in this State? There are other educational centers in the State where such truth is needed even more than at Willmar, because the heathen darkness is more dense where Anti-mason light has not shone at all. There is Albert Lea, Faribault, St. Peters, Duluth, Red Wing, Stillwater, and some one suggested Sauk Center. At all of these and many more places conventions might, with the blessing of God, be held with perhaps as fruitful results as in sending missionaries to Asia or Africa.

The Recording Secretary, Rev. Jno. Halvorson, was re-elected to his position, and he has the minutes of the convention which he will report for the Cynosure. Press reporters from Minneapolis and other cities were present; but I have not yet had an opportunity to read their reports. Rev. O. T. Lee, of Northwood, Iowa, was in attendance at the entire convention and did good service for the cause. Rev. N. Giere, of Belgrade, Minn., was present with quite a large delegation from his parish, and took active part in the meetings with good effect both in his native language and in the English language.

Rev. T. C. Sproul also heartily co-operated in the spirit of the convention besides in his excellent address, according to the program. Bro. David Campbell came with him from Glenwood and acted on one of the committees. The citizens of Willmar opened their hearts and their homes most cordially to the work of the convention. So far as I could see not a snake dared to show his head above the grass.

We had a terrible prairie blizzard on the second day and it was very cold, but it did not keep these hardy Scandinavians away from the meetings, the hall being filled all day long. The secretists have got something to fear from them when they become thoroughly enlightened and aroused by the mighty Spirit of God.

WORKING AMIDST RAIN AND FLOODS.

Cambria Co., Pa., Feb. 25, 1897.

Dear Cynosure:—I find myself at the home of Elder Hiram Lehman in the country between Geiston and Scalp Level. Last night I spoke to an audience of three hundred or more in what is known as the Weaver Menonnite church. To-night I expect to speak in the G. B. Brethren church, Scalp Level. To-morrow night I am advertised to speak in Maple Grove.

The week past has been filled with labor. Some days were spent at McKeesport, Pittsburg and Allegheny. Sabbath was spent with our ever faithful friend, Rev. J. S. T. Milligan, in Beaver Co. It rained much of the time while I was with Bro. Milligan. I could scarcely have found a place to have spent the time with greater pleasure and profit. At the morning service in the Fair View U. P. church, I presented the anti-Christian character of the lodge to a good audience.

My evening appointment was in the R. P. church, Rev. G. W. Brownell, pastor. It was a pleasure to again meet Bro. Brownell and speak to his people. The church is in the country. The rain was falling and the mud plenty. The attendance was not large, though more than expected such a night. Collections were taken that had the appearance of hard times, but a disposition to aid the work.

Sabbath afternoon I was privileged to hear Bro. Milligan preach in a school-house. Bro. Brownell brought a contribution to the work from our tried friend, Irvine Caldwell. May the Lord bless Bro. Caldwell and the others who are helping in the advance of the work here. Bro. Milligan's horse and carriage did us good service in securing Cynosure readers Monday. It was announced that I would speak in the school-house Monday eve, unless the rain was falling and the mud knee deep. As both the conditions were manifest there was no lecture Monday night.

The floods about Pittsburg have been greater than for years. The paper reported the height of the water at Pittsburg thirty-four feet. The greatest flood remembered was thirty-seven feet. I stayed over night Tuesday at the Home hotel. The basement was said to be full of water. Many houses were flooded in Pittsburg, Allegheny, Braddock, Turtle Creek and other towns in the valley. I find a vast difference between the roads here and in Beaver Co., only 100 miles west. The roads here are frozen and in good condition. There has been but little rain of late, and snow enough for sleighing remains on the hills.

Sickness and death are found everywhere. The great reaper gathers many at this time of the year. Among those who showed me kindness and subscribed for the Cynosure when last in Johnstown about one month ago, was Bro. A. Carstensen. He was 31 years of age and strong and active. Last Friday he was called from the scenes of earth. A wife and three little ones are left. The blessed hope of meeting again beyond this vale of tears is the only sunlight that penetrates the dark clouds.

I learned that Prof. W. McClure, of Pittsburg, is a very sick man. The professor has given us many cheering words and contributions in aid of the work. We trust it may be God's will to raise him up again. Our good friend John R. Steele of New Alexandria has been greatly afflicted in the severe sickness of his wife. She was very near the gates, but God answered prayer and we are informed she is rapidly recovering. Many will rejoice in her recovery, as she is much respected in the church and community.

Time and space forbid much that I should like to write. As usual there are more doors open than I can enter. Bro. J. B. Noffsinger arranged the series of appointments I am now filling. He will act as agent for the Cynosure and the sale of our books. His experiences in encountering lodge men are very interesting as related to me. Perhaps he will write for the Cynosure. Many encouraging letters continue to come from friends relative to the petitions. I hope to report them next week.

Bro. W. I. Wishart, of a U. P. church, Allegheny, invites me to present our work to his people next Sabbath evening. I hope to accept his invitation, although I must get home as soon as possible to prepare for the friends who are to favor us with a visit during the inauguration.

W. B. Stoddard.

MISSIONATING ON THE TRAIN.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 17, 1897.

Dear Cynosure:—I believe I promised in my last letter to give some experience with the lodge folks on the trip from Portland here. After we left Ashland, Oregon, a gentleman came up to me in the coach and asked:

"Are you not a minister?" at the same time extending his hand to shake.

I answered, "I am." Then came the question: "What denomination?"

I answered, "United Brethren in Christ."

He immediately said, "Let's shake again. I am a United Brethren, a member of Mr. Pittman's Official Board in Los Angeles."

I said, "I believe Mr. P., your pastor, is a Freemason, and a member of two or three other secret societies."

"Yes, I believe he is."

"Well," said I, "I do not claim any kin to that sort of an outfit, called United Brethren."

"Oh, you're a Radical."

"No, I'm a United Brethren. A member of the denomination that always opposed secret societies and all other popular evils." In a few minutes I found he was not so anxious for me to call on his pastor, and "be sure and get acquainted with him."

A lady from San Diego boarded the train at Montague. She was very talkative and soon picked up a conversation with Mrs. W. and myself, telling us among other things that she was a Spiritualist and a member of the "Daughters of Rebekah." It was not long until we had stirred up every lodge person in the car. One man was an Episcopalian and an Odd-fellow. Another, a Campbellite, Knight of Pythias. The conductor and brakeman, though they stopped at times to listen to the arguments, they kept their jewel well. The K. of P. in discoursing on the beauties of the lodge said: "I just buried my wife to-day, and during her long sickness the church people did not come near to help; but I was never without friends from the lodge." I suggested that he paid the lodge for the services they rendered, and the church people who have to pay so much more church dues, because of lodge men paying to the lodges, soon get so they are willing to let the lodge take care of the fellow or his wife in sickness.

He confessed that a man soon got more attached to the lodge than to the church. The next day after we landed here I saw the same Knight of Pythias on the street with another woman hanging to his arm. She might have been his sister, though I confess she neither looked nor acted like his sister. There were two aged men in the car who were greatly interested in our discussion. I afterward learned that one was an M. E., and the other a Congregationalist, both on my side of the question. And using their own language to me, said, "You done the whole crowd up in good shape." Thus we have an opportunity to sow the good seed "beside all waters."

The second night after our arrival here, I went to Peniel Hall and heard the noted English evangelist, Henry Varley. He is one of the plainest speakers against some prominent evils I ever heard. Though I wrote him a kindly note suggesting that he could do the cause of humanity a great service by speaking out against the secret lodge evil, he never opened his mouth on the subject.

I took occasion to distribute hundreds of tracts to the large audiences which he drew. On the first Sabbath I spoke twice at Clearwater U. B. church. Rev. E. Dewitt was engaged in a revival at this place, and there was some interested in the salvation of their souls, but seemed unwilling to pay the price. On last Sabbath I spoke there again in the morning to a good audience, but had to hurry back home on account of the severe illness of Mrs. Williams. She has been very sick for nearly a week. At the present writing she is some better. I ask all friends to pray that she may be restored to usual health again.

On Monday night I left her in care of Sister Sargeant (a dear, good friend of hers for years at Salem, Oregon,) while I ran down to Santa Ana, and spoke in the city hall to only a small congregation. The meeting had been arranged by Rev. D. G. Shepherd, pastor of the Free Methodist church, who thought by obtaining the hall a larger crowd could be secured to hear the truth, but in point of numbers it was a failure. A few lodge men were out and we hope that some impressions for good were made. I had intended to speak there two nights, the last one in the Free Methodist church; but on account of wife's sickness I had to return. The Lord be praised, she is better.

P. B. Williams.

Chicago is now scarcely less under Jesuitical rule than a few years ago when the following principal officials were Catholics: The mayor, chief of police, chief of the fire department, postmaster, city attorney, clerk of the circuit court, clerk of the probate court, clerk of the superior court, a number of the judges and forty-five of the sixty-eight aldermen and a large majority of the policemen.

MEN NO BETTER THAN THE GOD THEY WORSHIP.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 11, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—At St. Olaf's church, Minneapolis, last evening a large choir of students from the Augsburg Seminary provided the music. The theme of the lecture was, "The Demoniacal Possession of the Members of Secret Societies and the Prince of Liars their God." At the close of the meeting a lady came forward, and, whether in jest or earnest is a matter of doubt, asked me why I did not say something good about secret societies. As if, while the Apostle Paul was constrained by the Holy Ghost to say, "I know that in me, that is, in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing" (Rom. 7:18) people possessed of demons and worshippers of their father, the devil—the father of lies—could be expected to be any better than the god they worship. The lodge obligates men to selfishness, hypocrisy and lying. A man that joins the lodge is taken in and done for; to get out may be a matter of life-long repentance. No one but the Lord Jesus Christ can deliver him from the lodge god; for, if he breaks the lodge obligation and leaves the lodge without Christ, he will still be under the control of the devil; as the Lord Jesus Christ said of unbelievers, "Ye are of your father the devil."

The "Volunteers of America" have come to this city. I asked the captain, Mr. Shaw, if Freemasons and Odd-fellows could be members of their society. He replied, "Yes;" and added that he himself is an Odd-fellow, and that he likes Odd-fellowship and intends to join another secret society.

Are the Volunteers of America God's people? If so, let them take heed to the warnings of God's prophets and apostles against idolatry, hypocrisy, lying and blasphemy; for Freemasonry, Odd-fellowism and other secret society ritualism is all that. Ballington Booth might as well have remained in the Salvation Army if he does not adopt better principles than the Salvation Army has.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FREEMASONRY IN GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

A CLARION NOTE FROM SCOTLAND; LET EVERY LOYAL BRITON HEED THE CALL

No. 19 Queen Square, Regent Park,
Glasgow, Scotland, Feb. 3, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—I very gladly respond to your request to render what assistance is possible to me in organizing a movement to resist the present alarming invasion of these countries by secret oath-bound associations, and especially Freemasonry. The coming sovereign of the British Empire is now the present Grand Master of the Masonic lodges of Great Britain, and this contributes very tangibly to the extension of "the craft" throughout the United Kingdom. The heads of municipalities, as provosts and mayors, are drawn into the order on such occasions as the laying of foundation-stones of public buildings, as they deem themselves bound to qualify for the performance of such functions in a semi-pagan fashion by initiation into the Masonic order. Ministers and members of Christian churches are also, in increasing numbers, being allured within the outer eddies of this devouring charyldis; and on discovering their perils have not the courage to strike out for the shores they have thoughtlessly forsaken.

For several years I have thought that some combined effort, such as your noble institution represents in the States, should be attempted in these countries; and I am fully convinced the time is now ripe for immediate action. It will be a pleasure to me to receive the names of all in Great Britain and Ireland into whose hands this copy of the Cynosure may fall, who may be willing to unite in an Association for the defence of personal and public rights against a system which, as observation amply testifies, blights spirituality, jeopardizes justice and deceives men as to their everlasting salvation. At your request I have endeavored, in paper herewith, to formulate some grave objections to the institution of Masonry—objections which might readily be substantiated by quotations innumerable from the standard manuals of the Christless fraternity.

I earnestly invite all who are in sympathy with this proposal to forward their names and addresses without delay, that a meeting of these may be called soon in some central locality for deliberation on the whole question, and the adoption of such measures as may be considered necessary in face of present dangers. I need not assure you and the National Christian Association that the counsels your experience is fitted to convey to those who shall join in this effort will be eagerly sought and highly appreciated.

I am most truly yours, James Kerr.

All friendly to this movement in Great Britain and Ireland should forward their names and addresses at once to Rev. James Kerr, D. D., No. 19 Queen Square, Glasgow, Scotland.

LETTER TO THE SEATTLE CONVENTION.

Arlington, Wash., Jan. 15, 1897.

Dear Bro. Williams:—We were pleased to hear from you again, and to know of your continued activity in the work of the Lord. Were it not that our revival meetings are in progress at Arlington, I would try and be at your convention. I thank God that he has put it into the hearts of so many to take their stand with the anti-secrecy movement. No reform movement is more needed than this one. None offers a better chance to test a man's grace. How any Christian minister can be silent on this question I do not understand. While organized secrecy curses the home and interferes with the state, it is in the church that its baneful influences are most felt. The devil knows well that whatever wrecks the church will destroy both state and home. I am with you, all there is of me.

May God have mercy on the preacher, and on the people whose mouths are closed on this subject. I believe that the best way to oppose evil is to oppose it. It is a poor kind of either wisdom or love which is silent with regard to sin. I pray God's blessing on the convention, and may the influence which shall go out therefrom be multiplied many fold. Your brother in Gospel bonds,

Edwin H. Stayt.

BROTHER GLADWIN'S LAST MESSAGE.

The following letter from the late Wallace J. Gladwin to Mrs. H. L. Kellogg, of Wheaton, she has kindly furnished us for publication. It will be of special interest to our readers as among the last letters written to this country by this heroic missionary reformer shortly before his death:

Bombay, India, Sept. 16, 1896.

Dear Sister in Christ:—Thanks for your encouraging letter. May the Lord bless you and your family with many spiritual blessings, that you may be a blessing to others. God said to Abram, "I will bless thee, and thou shalt be a blessing." As God pours light and blessing into our souls, he intends that we shall give it out to others. When we thoroughly get hold of the idea of doing everything for the glory of God, and see that we are only the instruments that he uses for his work, it puts quite a different phase on things. With this view before us, there is no room for self-praise or anything of the kind to come in; but we feel that after we have done all we can we are still unprofitable servants. But, though we are unprofitable, I am glad we need not be unfaithful.

God is blessing the work he has placed in our hands here in this land of darkness and superstition. Though things seem to move slowly, yet the seed are being sown, and we are sure that some will fall on good ground and bring forth fruit. "He that goeth forth and weepeth bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." Psa. 126: 6. God is putting more of the weeping, prevailing spirit on our souls of late for India's lost souls, and we know he cannot turn away the prayer of faith unanswered.

India's greatest need is thoroughly crucified, cleansed, and Spirit-baptized workers who will stand by God's clean work and lift up a standard for the people. Daniels are needed who will dare stand alone on principles of righteousness and true holiness.

Yes, we still remember our native land, and while our first duty is to the land to which we have been called to give our lives, yet we pray and labor as opportunity permits for souls in other lands. Our books, papers, letters, tracts and prayers are not limited to India alone, but reach also to many other countries. Will any of your children write to me? My sons and I shall be glad to hear from them. God bless you. Pray for us.

Wallace J. Gladwin.

THE MINNESOTA CONVENTION

WAS A GRAND SUCCESS

Paynsville, Minn., Feb. 25, 1897.

What is the matter with Minnesota? She is all right. This is the sentiment of all those who have attended the Minnesota State Convention. The convention in every way was a grand success. The Seminary Hall, which is not small, was filled at every session with attentive listeners. Ministers and laymen, men and women had come from the surrounding counties and towns to receive light on secretism. And they got it. Those that were engaged to speak came well prepared. The inside of the lodges were brought to light. This convention has, without any doubt, been productive of much good. Yours truly, O. T. Lee.

SALOONS AT THE CAPITAL MAY STAY.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 24, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—The annual meeting—the sixty-fifth—of the Congressional Temperance Society was held this week, and after listening to several addresses and the annual report of Rev. F. D. Power, secretary, a resolution was unanimously adopted requesting the Senate to pass the two temperance measures, which have been passed by the House, the bill against selling liquor in the Capitol and a bill amending the liquor license laws of the District of Columbia. There is little hope, however, that the Senate will act upon either, owing to the pressure of appropriation bills, which has already caused the Senate to meet an hour earlier every day and which will make night sessons necessary for most of the short time remaining of the session.

No secret is made of the intention of Representative Barrett, of Mass., who introduced a bill carrying an amendment to the act of 1865, permitting each State to place two statues of its distinguished citizens in Statuary Hall, in the U. S. Capitol. Mr. Barrett's amendment prohibits the setting up of any statue in Statuary Hall until it has been accepted by a joint Congressional resolution. The immediate aim of the amendment is to prevent the carrying out of the proposal made in the Utah Legislature to send a statue of Brigham Young to Statuary Hall, although, if it becomes a law, it will doubtless be utilized to keep out any statue that may be objectionable to a majority of both branches of Congress.

The report of the Senate committee on Post-offices on the Loud bill dealing with second-class mail matter says there is little expectation of action on the measure at this session of Congress, and recommends the creation of a Postal Commission, to be composed of the Chairman of the House and Senate P. O. committees, the Postmaster General, and two civilians, to investigate the alleged abuses of second-class mail privileges, the extension of free delivery in rural sections, the reduction of railroad transportation of mails, one cent letter postage, and kindred subjects, and report to the next Congress.

INTERESTING CAMPAIGN IN THE SOUTH.

Beloit, Ala., Feb. 11, 1897.

Dear Cynosure:—I have recently found time for some direct work in the anti-secrecy reform, having visited Selma, Ala., and New Orleans and Hammond, La. I addressed the students of Knox Academy, and Selma University. The latter is the institution founded by the late Pres. Woodsmall, whose memory is still held as precious by his former associates.

The school is now under the care of Pres. Dinkins and is in a flourishing condition. So also is Knox Academy under the care of Prof. McIsaacs. These schools are doing a grand work in the education of colored teachers. Selma University, which has a theological department, is training quite a number of young men for the ministry, a work of unsurpassed importance to this people. In each of these schools I had the best of attention from some hundreds of thoughtful listeners, and the hearty endorsement of the able professors who were in charge.

At New Orleans I had an excellent visit with and was most kindly entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Starry, who continue to feel a deep interest in your work. I also had a pleasant visit with Eld. F. J. Davidson, pastor of the St. Matthew's Baptist church, who kindly invited me to preach for his people, which I was unable to do. Bro. Davidson is endeavoring to build a new house of worship, and will be very thankful for any aid that may be given him.

I visited Straight University, where I met a cordial greeting from some of the instructors I had formerly known. I left a quanity of anti-secrecy literature, which Pres. Atwood promised to put in the reading room. He spoke of the visit of Pres. C. A. Blanchard, a year ago, as having afforded great pleasure and profit. I also visited Leland University, where I was most kindly received by Pres. Mitchel, who also received our literature gladly, and spoke appreciatively of the visit of Pres. and Mrs. Blanchard. Feb. 5th I went to Hammond, La., 53 miles north of New Orleans, where I stayed till the 8th.

This is a town of 2,500 people mostly from the North and Northwest. They have no saloons, and it is an exceptionally moral and religious community. I was most kindly entertained by Eld. G. W. Lewis, pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church. On the evening of the 5th I attended a delightful prayer meeting in his church. I preached for them on the morning of the 6th, and attended the S. C. E. in the afternoon. The Seventh Day Baptist church is the leading religious organization in the place, and they have a very neat house of worship. Both pastor and people received my testimony on the lodge question. A pleasant revival of religion had prepared their minds and hearts for the reception of the truth.

On Sabbath evening (7th) I preached, by invitation, in the Congregational church. Their pastor was absent in New Orleons. They have a nice house of worship and a fine society of C. E. They seemed an intelligent and cultured congregation. The principal industry of Hammond is market gardening. Some five-acre fields of strawberries were very beautiful. Other fields of cabbages, beets, onions and carrots that were being gathered and shipped, spoke of the mildness of the climate and the energy and thrift of the people. Two well-conducted weekly papers seem to be fairly supported. On my way east from Jackson, Miss., I found the cars largely occupied by men going to the Grand Lodge of the A. F. & A. M. at Biloxi, Miss. I reached home on the 9th, greatly refreshed by my "outing."

ROMANISM A SECRET COMBINATION.

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 22, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I read the article by Miss Flagg, in a recent issue of your paper, with considerable interest. At first I was inclined to doubt her position, that while the papacy is openly and bitterly opposed to Freemasonry, and has repeatedly placed it under the ban of the church, it is secretly in harmony with that fraternity A reference to Mr. Ronayne's "Master's Carpet," pages 145–6, has convinced me that in the main she is correct in her conclusions.

"The Church of Rome," says Mr. Ronayne, "is fiercely opposed to all secret societies outside of her own communion, and more especially to the Masonic; but her opposition to the latter arises not because of the anti-Christian and infidel doctrines of Freemasonry, for the religion of Rome is equally false and un-Scriptural. Neither has the antagonism between the two systems arisen because of the principle of secrecy, for Romanism is as much of a secret combination as Freemasonry is, if not more so.....From the fact that the two are rival institutions, both being so much alike, one would be almost led to suspect that jealousy has something to do with the conflict between them, and that Romanism is opposed to Masonry on the principle expressed in the old adage—'two of a trade can never agree;' but the real cause of their opposition to one another is the confessional." This fact is well-known, and I will not now enlarge upon it. "The contention between them," continues Mr. Ronayne, "is not for truth and purity, but for power and supremacy. It is a mere conflict of (civil) authority, and nothing more." For a fuller exposition of this statement, read Mr. Ronayne's entire chapter.

When the unification of Italy, with the dissolving of the papal states in that kingdom, was accomplished, the temporal power of the papacy to an end, and a new order of things was established, the Pope, nominally a "prisoner" in the Vatican, remaining only an ecclesiastical prelate.

Since then, even if it was not so in 1870, the government of Italy has been largely, if not wholly, sustained by Freemasons, who have no affiliation with the confessional and other ordinances of the Church of Rome. Towards them, seemingly, have the thundering bulls of the papacy, from time to time, been directed with less effect than firing paper wads at a ship-of-war. In other countries there may exist the harmony between the Church of Rome claimed by Mr. Ronayne and Miss Flagg; but the Freemasons of Italy having the civil government of the kingdom in their hands and holding the balance of power, cannot be said to be his friends and supporters in any attempt to recover the temporal authority of the Pope.

This exposition of the existing condition of things in Italy is a sufficient explanation of the Pope's subserviency and his ambition to overcome his captors and keepers by re-organizing the obsolete pontifical army. H. M. HUGUNIN.

What a coward Masonry is. It dare not face the truth. Yet how insensible it is to genuine shame, and how vain of its fuss and feathers.

ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

OAKLAND, Cal., Feb. 16, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The world is moving. New England used to withhold funeral honors from suicides. The Puritans understood that word to mean self-murderers. Out here in California the people have got over that folly. In Oakland there are many of the children of New Englanders. These have learned another way of dealing with suicides. Do you ask an illustration? I have it for you. The other day one of our honored saloonists who thought he wasn't getting rich fast enough, and who had been in a long-continued drunk, while sitting in his own house and talking with his wife about ordinary matters suddenly drew a pistol from his pocket and fired two bullets into his brain, by which deed he instantly killed a man, a saloon-keeper, a drunkard and an Odd-fellow. Well, what followed? Yesterday I saw in an evening paper a long funeral notice to the friends of the deceased, and to the "members of Lodge No. 313, I. O. O. F.," requesting them "to be at their lodge room to attend the funeral of our late brother."

There is no joke in all that. It is full of sadness. What have we here? A saloon-keeper, a drunken saloon keeper, a self-murderer. Can you conceive of any man less worthy of honor? But that man was an Odd-fellow. Birds of feather flock together. Of course his fellows must give him an honorable burial. If they did not, would others join the order? For all men wish to have something better than "the burial of an ass." Other saloonists, other drunkards, other suicides (?) will not enter that lodge unless the dead man be honored by his fellows.

But what do we see here? A drunkard may be an Odd-fellow; a saloon-keeper may be in regular standing in an Odd-fellow lodge; and such a self-murderer may be honored after he has made his wife a widow and his children orphans. But the saddest of all remains to be told. Odd-fellows who honor saloonists are welcomed into most of the churches; and even ministers who belong to the lodges are called to be pastors. Oh, the iniquity of the lodge system! And how great is the guilt of the churches that receive lodgemen and honor them. N. R. J.

The infidel cannot think of damnation, the effect of sin, without horror; nor of sin, the cause of damnation, without pleasure.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON.

BY REV. J. S. T. MILLIGAN.

And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: Whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things. Acts 3: 20,21.

In my last sermon I gave two reasons why I cannot accept the pre-millenarian theory that Christ will come and reign in person on the earth during the millennium. The presumption is against it in the first place, and secondly it is unphilosophical. The idea of taking Christ from his throne of glory in heaven to live and reign in Jerusalem is certainly not philosophical. It is true, Palestine may become again the glory of all lands, and Jerusalem a praise in all the earth, but who will compare earth with heaven? How can it be done? Here on earth all nations may serve him, but in heaven angels, principalities and powers are subject to him as well as the nations of earth. Has he not said, "Heaven is my throne and earth is my footstool?"

Not only are we to lay up our treasure in heaven, but he, for the joy set before him, for a time endured the earth, but is now forever seated at God's right hand, and is not merely Lord of earth and saints, but Lord of all, God blessed forever. The pre-millenarian theory is not merely unphilosophical, but degrading to Christ and glorified saints.

3. This theory we claim is un-Scriptural. It is true that a few texts in their literal interpretation favor this view; yet to confine ourselves as they claim to the very letter, the things unseen and eternal do not appear at all, or at least but dimly and feebly. An un-Scriptural feature of the theory is its denial of the sufficiency of the Bible for the world's conversion. David says it was a light to his path and a lamp to his feet. Again he says the entrance of it gives light, makes wise the simple and converts the soul. An apostle says it is a sure word of prophecy unto which we do well to take heed; that it is a light that will shine until the day dawn and the day star arise upon our hearts. A prophet declares that it shall not return void, but accomplish that for which it was sent; that it abideth forever; that it is the power of God and the wisdom of God for the salvation of those who believe.

This theory also calls in question the sufficiency of the preached Word. This instrumentality Christ himself authorized and appointed. He has promised to be with the ministry to the end of the age. He meant the age of darkness in need of saving light. The apostle says it has pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save those that believe. Christ says he that heareth you heareth me. We do not need to bring Christ down from above, nor up from beneath, nor from beyond, for he is nigh in the word of faith which we preach.

This theory disparages the church and makes it end in apostasy without accomplishing the design of its existence. The Bible teaches that the church is the fullness of Him that filleth all in all. Eph. 1: 24 In the same verse it is called His body; and in Eph. 4: 11, Paul says that Christ gave apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers for the edifying or building up of the body of Christ. His church never can apostatize. Elements in it which are not of it may apostatize, but Christ's body and bride never can. It is dear to him as the apple of his eye. His marriage vow will be performed. His covenant shall not be broken. The millennium will be the marriage of the Lamb, and his wife makes herself ready. She shall be a bride adorned for her husband. No longer shall she be a weeping Rachel, for she shall see her children flocking as doves to their windows. The city shall flourish; her citizens shall be like grass of the earth. The church shall last like the sun and endure like the moon, and all good people shall call her blessed.

This theory also disparages the work and efficiency of the Holy Spirit. If anything is plain in the philosophy of the Christian religion, it is the work and the perfections of the Holy Spirit. Christ said to his disciples, it is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go I will send him. John 16:7. The Holy Spirit takes the things of Christ and shows them unto us. He is everywhere present as the embodied Christ is not and cannot be.

VALUE OF A LAMB.

Worth When Measured by What Is Called the Block Test.

Professor Curtiss of the Iowa experiment station has published in The Breeder's Gazette an account of how the different breeds of lambs pan out when their carcasses are cut up by the butchers. He takes the style of cutting used by two of the leading slaughter firms of the country. He says:

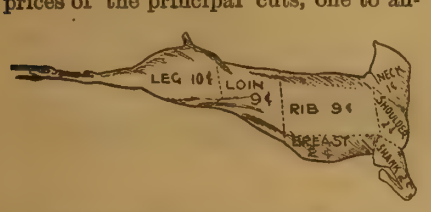
In the slaughter test the Merinos averaged 51.8 per cent of dressed mutton; Dorsets, 52.6; Suffolks, 53.6; crossbreds, 53.7; range, 55.6; Southdowns, 55.4; Cotswolds, 54.9; Lincolns, 55.7; Oxfords, 55.2; Shropshires, 56.3; Leicesters, 57.8, and yearling Shropshires, 62.8.

The block test was made by cutting as indicated in the accompanying diagram. This particular drawing is one furnished by one firm that I have had prepared for illustration in class work, but the other firm use practically the same method except that the parts marked "breast," "shank," "shoulder" and "neck" generally go as one piece called "chuck," and this cut was rated uniformly at 2 cents a pound in each lot of the station sheep. When the "neck" piece is sold separate it usually brings about a cent per pound. All of these prices are wholesale.

The prices put on the other cuts of the station sheep varied somewhat in the different breeds, owing to quality and size. The Southdown and Shropshire lambs were rated highest, the prices being as given in the illustration.

It will be seen that there is a marked variation in the value of the different parts of a carcass of mutton according to the Chicago wholesale market. There is also more or less variation of the prices of the principal cuts, one to another, but a prime leg of lamb is always a choice cut. The leg cut in a good carcass of mutton constitutes 30 per cent by weight and sells for 40 per cent of the entire value. All of the hind part of the carcass, it will be observed, consists of high priced mutton, while the cheap mutton is all found in front. In the wholesale market much of the mutton is only cut through the middle, leaving all but the last rib on the front cut. This puts the loin and leg into one cut, termed a "saddle" of mutton. The front half, then, contains the "rib" and the other cuts, which together constitute the "chuck," and the whole half taken thus is called the "rack." Cut in this manner a carcass consists of a "saddle" and a "rack." Packers rate a sheep that cuts as much weight in the saddle (rear half) as in the rack (front half) a good one. In the station lambs the saddles taken entire were valued at 8 cents a pound and the racks at 4 cents. This makes the rear half of a lamb worth twice as much as the front half. These lambs also cut on the average more than half in saddles, making the difference still greater. Sheep or lambs unnecessarily heavy in shoulder, head and neck are objectionable. By way of explanation I will here say that this objection was given as a reason for rating the Dorsets below the others. The slaughter and block tests to some extent substantiated this objection, though it is probable that it was overestimated.

In addition to the foregoing comparisons, the legs, loins and ribs of two representative animals in each lot were photographed on the block in such position as to give cross section views, showing the thickness and other characteristics of each cut. All of the internal organs, fat and offal, were weighed and the percentage of the whole determined.



BUTCHER'S CUT OF LAMB CARCASS.

Full Corncribs and Lean Cattle.

With overflowing corncribs everywhere and corn selling in the country as low as 11 cents a bushel, says The Stockman, it is difficult to account for the large numbers of half fat cattle that are being sent to market. Great numbers of 1,100 to 1,200 pound steers that have been fed 60 to 90 days keep coming here and have to be sold at ruinously low prices—$3.60 to $4 per 100 pounds. Then there are lots of 1,250 to 1,350 pound steers selling between $4 and $4.50 that are too light for either the eastern shippers or the exporters, and consequently they are taken by dressed beef concerns. If these 1,250 to 1,350 pound cattle were only made heavy enough for the wants of eastern shippers or exporters, they would easily sell for 25 to 40 cents per 100 pounds more. By holding them back and putting on this extra flesh the feeder would certainly consult his own interests, as he would add largely to his profits.

Devon Cattle.

Comparatively little has been heard of Devon cattle of late years, says an exchange, but there are now some signs of a revival of interest in them. Their hardiness and ability to take care of themselves commend them to ranchmen, and those who have tried them on the range are giving very favorable reports. Their disposition to thoroughly ripen at a light weight is also in their favor now, when heavy fat cattle are losing and light ones gaining in popularity. At one of the Pittsburg yards recently Devon steers averaging in the neighborhood of 1,000 pounds brought $4.75 per hundredweight, an exceedingly good price for the weight. They were tidy butcher beeves, the kind most wanted these days. This change in market demands should be favorable to these beautiful and useful cattle.

Overfeeding Young Calves.

A correspondent of Hoard's Dairyman says that in starting a delicate calf the greatest care should be taken not to overfeed. He says that he knows of but one rule that can be relied on, which is to feed slowly, watch the sides of the little one and as soon as they are flush with the shoulders and hips, or very little more, stop feeding. By this rule he can safely feed the most delicate Jersey calf without measuring the milk, and he prefers this rule to measurement. It is now about20 years since he lost a calf

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 4, 1897.

THE HAMMERS, NOT THE ANVIL, WEAR OUT.

Apropos of some of the recent attacks upon the Bible, Hon. John W. Foster, ex-Secretary of State, read the following poem, written by Rev. Dr. John Clifford, in the course of a lecture recently at Washington, D. C., on the authenticity of the Bible:

Last eve I paused beside a blacksmith's door,
And heard the anvil ring the vesper chime;
Then looking in, I saw upon the floor
Old hammers worn with beating years of time.

"How many anvils have you had," said I,
"To wear and batter all these hammers so?"
"Just one," said he; than said with twinkling eye,
"The anvil wears the hammers out, you know."

And so, I thought, the anvil of God's Word
For ages skeptic blows have beat upon;
Yet though the noise of falling blows was heard,
The anvil is unharmed—the hammers gone.

INTERNATIONAL KNIGHT TEMPLAR BALL.

On the eve of his departure for the national capital, Gen. R. A. Alger, the new Secretary of War in Mr. McKinley's cabinet, was given a grand reception, on Feb. 23rd, in Detroit, Mich., by his brother Knight Templars of Michigan and Canada. Masonic greetings and military salutations characterized the occasion. Addresses of welcome were given by the Most Worshipful Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Michigan, and others. In reply Gen. Alger said in part:

"A man would indeed be made of stone were he not impressed with such a greeting as this. I cannot adequately express my appreciation. I feel that I am unworthy of so much honor and consideration. I trust you will pardon on this occasion a personal allusion. It was thirty-six years ago I took the first degree in Masonry at Grand Rapids. Almost immediately afterward I enlisted and hurried off to war. I assure you, my friends, I regret going away. The glitter of the office, the honors that surround it, can never compensate for all the regretful reflections that rush upon me in turning the key in the old front door. My heart is bound up in my Masonic and military friends in Michigan and old Detroit."

MASONIC DOINGS AT GREENOCK, SCOTLAND.

Dr. James Kerr, of Glasgow, sends us the Herald of that city containing a report of how the corner-stone of a new Masonic Temple at Greenock was laid, Feb. 6, with Masonic ceremonies. The building was to cost about $20,000. The order of exercises were similar to those so often witnessed on like occasions in this country. Deputations from various lodges formed in procession, with municipal officers, military companies and brass bands playing "Rule Britannia;" rather should it have been "Rule Masonry," for if the arrogant claims of this sect were carried out it would subordinate to itself all authority, human and divine. These prompous ceremonies and mutual admiration speeches were fittingly closed with a wine banquet in the saloon of the town hall.

It might seem to many that this Masonic institution has an equal right with any other to thus parade itself before the public. But if a church in laying its corner-stone were to draw into its procession civil and military bands and close with a wine banquet it would certainly cause surprise; and much more if that church was to adopt the same principles as Freemasonry. If it were to swear its members never to reveal what was done inside, under the fearful penalty of having their throats cut and of being disemboweled, tongues torn out by the roots, etc; and then if it was to blind its windows and tyle its doors; if it was to bind its members not to wrong or defraud a brother member, knowing them to be such, or not to have illicit carnal intercourse with the wife, mother, sister or daughter of a member in the same church, knowing them to be such; or if it was to exclude all women and children, and all unable to pay their dues, would it not be considered impudent for such a church to parade itself before the public as a benevolent institution? And yet all this and many more inconsistencies are true respecting Freemasonry, which is to rear this imposing temple at Greenock.

Let the light of pure Christianity be turned upon such dark institutions, and they will fade away as snow beneath a tropical sun. We would suggest to the friends of light in Scotland that on every occasion when Masonry thus seeks to advertise itself before the public, to scatter among the multitude brief, pointed tracts revealing the anti-Christian and anti-republican principles of the organization.

MOST IMPORTANT TO MAINTAIN.

Dr. C. D. Trumbull, of Morning Sun, Iowa, while at the Glasgow, Scotland, R. P. convention last July, said in an address on "Our Distinctive Principles": "I mention one more distinctive principle—one which has been maintained from the first, and is still enforced by discipline, viz., that all secret oath-bound, and even pledge-bound, secret orders are 'anti-Christian in their character, pernicious in their tendency, and perilous to the best interests of church and state.' Secret orders trace their history to the ancient heathen mysteries. 'Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean?' We maintain that they are unnecessary in normal conditions of society, to further any good end, and are liable to be used, indeed are often used, to further bad ends; that the principle of secrecy on which they rest is anti-scriptural (see Matt. 5: 16; John 3: 19, 20; Eph. 5: 11); that they have the appearance of evil, which we are to avoid (1 Thes. 5: 22); that they lead to evil companionship and the corruption of the morals and manners of many men; that their tendency is to draw men away from Christ and his church; that the tendency of the lodge is antagonistic to true religion. We cannot serve two masters; we cannot countenance that which is derogatory to his honor and glory, hence we are unflinchingly opposed to all secret orders."

DANGEROUS MONOPOLIES.

A striking fact illustrating the danger of monopoly, and especially of the rum monopoly, was once given in a lecture by Prof. Kirk at Greenock, Scotland. He said that 40,000 sheep had been driven from the Highlands, and the tenant cotters had been driven off. Five large estates were rented by such brewers as Bass, Alsopp and others, for the purpose of turning them into a deer forest or a hunting ground for these wealthy aristocrats. The last remnant of the shepherds must be banished, for the deer are disturbed when human beings are within sight.

Thus the liquor oligarchy threatens to depopulate this land consecrated by the blood of martyrs. A few capitalists in Great Britain own the liquor interests, and are operating it with immense profit. The license money from liquor alone, it is claimed by Robert MacKenzie, pays £40,000,000 annually of the £75,000 000 required to run the British government. These same English capitalists own and control almost the entire liquor interests of United States. Their aim is to saddle the license of rum upon this country as a permanent source of revenue. There are many indications that the last death struggle with anti-christ will be against the rum power, as it will be intrenched behind wealth. But as indicated in Rev. 18th chapter, this Babylon that hath made all nations drunk with the wine of her fornication shall suddenly go down as a mighty millstone into the depths of the sea. May God hasten that day.

A STRANGE OVERSIGHT.

We have often wondered why those who have written the history of the persecuted Covenanters in Scotland and Puritans of England, have ignored that secret engine of despotism, Masonry, which was the hidden machinery used by tyrannical kings to destroy civil and religious liberty. Scottish historians tell us that in the time of Cromwell there was a party in Scotland called Malignants, who by secret intrigue and deception betrayed the people and during the administration of Charles II. overthrew their liberties and brought on a long, bloody persecution. They were titled aristocrats, vicious in morals, devoted to arbitrary government, remarkable for their immorality and opposition to reform.

But they should have told us that this party was largely composed of Masons. Emmanuel Rebold, a high Masonic authority, in his History of Freemasonry, p. 54, says: "During the troubles which desolated England about the middle of the seventeenth century, and after the death of Charles I. in 1649, the Masonic corporations of England, and more particularly those of Scotland, labored in secret for the re establishment of the throne destroyed by Cromwell; and for this purpose they instituted many degrees hitherto unknown and totally foreign to the spirit and nature of Freemasonry, and which in fact gave to this time-honored institution a character entirely political.

"The discussions to which this country was a prey had already produced a separation between the operative and accepted Masons. The latter were honorary members, who, according to long-established usage, had been accepted into the society for the advantage which their generally influential position made them at this time naturally the adherents of the throne and the strong supporters of Charles II., who, during his exile, was received as an accepted Mason by their election; and in consequence of the benefits he derived from the society, gave to Masonry the title of Royal Art, because it was mainly by its instrumentality that he was raised to the throne and monarchy restored to England.

"Thus we see that if the reformers of the sixteenth century had been alive to the secret workings and dark and despotic designs of Freemasonry, it would have saved the shedding of the best blood of their times."

LIFE SKETCH OF REV. WM. FENTON.

The following additional facts from the life of Rev. Wm. Fenton, our efficient Minnesota lecturer, whose portrait appeared in our last issue, will be interesting to Cynosure readers. With the exception of a few additions they are taken from the Biographical Record of the Rennsselaer Polytechnic Institute:

Rev. Wm. Fenton took preparatory studies in civil engineering in the Polytechnic College of Philadelphia, Pa., and was afterwards elected to the office of city engineer of West St. Paul, Minn. After serving that city for a year or so he took a full course of civil engineering in the Rennsselaer Polytechnic Institute of Troy, N. Y., graduating in the year 1861.

It was while he was a student in this school that his reason, by means of scientific studies, became convinced of the existence of God; and a belief in his attributes followed so that he was plunged into the deepest convictions of sin; his distress was so great that for some time he could neither pursue his studies nor eat his daily food. But at length he gave his heart to God "a living sacrifice;" it was accepted, and he found peace and joy. Subsequently the plan of salvation in its most essential elements was unfolded to his mind as clear as a sunbeam or the solution of a mathematical problem. It was not long until he was in the condition of the Apostle Paul as described in the seventh chapter of Romans, "Oh, wretched man that I am," and the warfare has been going on for many years.

He spent the summer of 1862 in St. Paul drawing plans for and superintending the erection of a block of buildings in that city. In the winter of 1862 and 1863 he was employed in Brooklyn, N. Y., in the construction of iron-clad war ships for the United States Navy during the daytime, and teaching mathematics and drawing evenings.

While engaged in the ship-yard, one of the foremen of the yard whispered to him that they were all Masons, and that he had better join the Masons, for he would then stand a better chance of being promoted. But the advice was unheeded, and he was soon discharged. However, he immediately found a much better situation as assistant in the office of the city engineer of Jersey City. He had not been in that position six months before he was offered the position of instructor of mathematics and geodesy in the Rennsselaer Polytechnic Institute, his Alma Mater; the position was gladly accepted, and he remained a teacher in the Institute for seven years. During that time he was incited by Christian friends to engage publicly in the work of the Lord by beginning a Sabbath-school. The work was greatly blessed and prospered so that it soon grew into a church, and is now the Sixth Avenue Baptist church of Troy, N. Y.

Notwithstanding his success as a teacher, and also in the work of the Lord at the same time, he conceived the idea of resigning all of that and devoting his time exclusively to the ministry of Christ. Accordingly he entered the Baptist Union Theological Seminary of Chicago, Ill, as a theological student. While so engaged he was called to the pastorate of the Baptist church at Lamartine, Wis. Here he did the work of an evangelist; his labors were blessed with a revival, and he was ordained to the Christian ministry by the laying on of the hands of elders. They were true, Godly ministers. Elder A. Whitman and Elder Sharp were in the council.

It was while serving another church in the State of Wisconsin that a deacon said to him, "Are you going to preach against Freemasonry?" He replied, "No; I do not know what it is." But he had grave suspicions that it is a wicked thing. And the deacon, who had lived in Western New York about the time that the Masons murdered Morgan for writing the Masonic secrets, knew it to be a wicked thing, and he feared that the preacher would attack it as he had done spiritualism and Universalism, and so make trouble in the church; for he said that there were Masons and Odd-fellows in that congregation who would be offended if anything was said from the pulpit against their secret societies, and advised him not to oppose them.

Soon after that he met with Rev. H. H. Hinman, who was then Anti-masonic lecturer in the State of Wisconsin, and who gave him some light on the character of secret societies; but being in Chicago at the time that a State Anti-masonic convention was held there, and stepping into the hall where the convention was held, he heard the late Rev. Johnathan Blanchard, president of Wheaton College, saying that a certain pastor of a Congregational church in Massachusetts by the name of Quint was a Freemason, and "would sink his church in hell if he could."

When Edmond Ronayne seceded from the Masonic fraternity and worked the Masonic degrees in public he was invited to assist him, and accepting the invitations he learned much about Freemasonry; that it is nothing but a black, infamous, hell-born conspiracy against the Almighty God, his church, and the human race. Of course that settled the question as to his fellowship in the Baptist denomination, for no minister with such a public testimony against Masonry can be in harmony with the leading spirits of that denomination. Many incidents from his experience could be cited to verify the truth of that observation.

The cunning of the serpent is seen in their methods of working God's people so as to silence truth. For instance, two very prominent Baptist pastors that are Masons had highly commended him for a certain position as teacher in a Baptist institution, but the appointment rested with a jack-Mason, who pretends to be an Anti-mason, and he very promptly decided against him; and so Masonry was exalted and the truth put down by a lying hypocrite outside of the lodge. True Masons and their pimps know how to do it. Like Voltaire's method, "Strike, but conceal the hand that strikes."

He made the acquaintance of the National Christian Association, and for the last fifteen or twenty years he has been one of its ablest and most convincing lecturers.

In 1868 he was elected a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and previous to that time had been elected a member of the American Association of Civil Engineers.

—Mrs. L. H. Plumb and daughter, Bertha, have gone to Florida to spend a season.

—Secretary W. I. Phillips returned from Detroit last Thursday evening, whither he had gone on N. C. A. business.

—Bro. Geo. W. Ellis, of Portland, Ore., visited the Cynosure office last week. He is publisher of The Way, the Truth, the Life; and also agent for a large paper company in New York. He reports that Rev. P. B. Williams and wife are doing a grand work on the Pacific Coast in turning the light into dark places.

—Mrs. P. B. Williams, of Los Angeles, who has been temporarily ill, we are thankful to hear is able to be about again.

—A few orders from Kirksville, Mo., for books and tracts from the women of that city is one result of the recent convention.

—Rev. H. H. George, D. D., of Beaver Falls, Pa., and Miss Ella M. Martin were married Feb. 18th at the bride's sister's home in Wilkinsburgh, Pa.

—Miss Ruth A. Pierce and Rev. M. H. Nichols, of Seattle, Wash., were united in marriage by Rev. A. G. Boyd, on Dec. 5, 1896. Miss Pierce is a native of Arcade, Western N. Y., and Rev. M. H. Nichols of Chillicothe, O. He was formerly field agent of the N. C. A. for the Pacific Coast, and has rendered valuable service to the cause.

—Rev. J. P. Stoddard sends an excellent article on "Dwight L. Moody in Boston," which is too late for this issue. Bro. Stoddard says he expected to attend Mr. Moody's closing services Feb. 27th. He sent out 7,000 copies of the last Home Light, containing a report of his interview with Sam Jones and other important testimony which has deeply stirred the lodge members.

—Ex-President John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky., writes that they had another discussion of the lodge question Tuesday evening, Feb. 16th, and the agitation still continues. Berea is a radiating point from which many hundreds of young men and women are coming and going. These fountains of influence should be salted with the truth of anti-secrecy. We rejoice that God has spared Bro. Fee to labor so long in this great reform.

—Elder James Wylie, of Northwood, Ohio, passed into glory Feb. 20, 1897, at the home of his son in Toledo. He was the father of Rev. J. M. Wylie, of the Chicago Reformed Presbyterian Mission, Cottage Grove Avenue. He was born in Beaver county, Pa., enlisted as a soldier of Christ at the age of 18, and for twenty-five years was elder in the Northwood R. P. church. He took an active part in the anti-slavery reform, and afterwards in the anti-secret and National Reform movements. He was gathered unto his people as a shock of corn fully ripe, at the age of 76.

—Rev. O. H. Perry, pastor of the M. E. church, Hanover, Mich., writes: "I am a suspended 13 degree Mason and Anti-mason. I left attending from conscientious reasons, and for the same reason concluded not to place any more money in that reservoir. Conviction has been growing on me against the lodge system. This has been used against me as a minister by a former presiding elder. Our M. E. ministers of the younger class are joining in astonishing numbers. We have a superannuated preacher, Rev. A. A. Knappen, who has been elected Grand Lecturer at a recent session of the Grand Lodge."

—"Thoughts from the Mount of Blessing" is a new book but is already in its second edition. The purity of its expression, the beauty of its style, and the aptness of its illustrations, all unite in making it a book that will be valued highly by all. As indicated by the title, the book is a commentary on Christ's Sermon on the Mount. It is divided into the following general chapters, and these chapters are divided into forty-five subheads: "On the Mountainside," "The Beatitudes," "The Spirituality of the Law," "The True Motive of Service," "The Lord's Prayer," "Not Judging, But Doing." It contains 201 pages; fifteen half-tone and line engravings; is printed on a fine grade of paper, and is strongly bound in the following style: Cloth, with side stamp in gold, 75 cents; half calf, marbled edges, $1. Send for a sample copy to the Pacific Press Publishing Co., 39 Bond St., New York.

—Rev. O. T. Lee, of Northwood, Ia., has done excellent work for the cause in Minnesota in connection with attending the State convention. He writes from Elbow Lake, Minn., Feb. 26: "Last night a fair audience had assembled in the court-house hall, of this place, to listen to an address on secret societies by your correspondent. For two hours the audience, lodgemen and profane, listened to the doings of secretism. A lively debate followed the lecture. A Modern Woodman said the revised ritual is all right. The A. O. U. W. had an entertainment for everybody in order to keep people away from the lecture. The Presbyterian minister, a Knight of Pythias, had a revival meeting in his church and kept some from coming out. The lodge question is stirred up in Elbow Lake, and some good people here are on the right side. Several books were sold."

—"Mother Cobb, or Sixty Years' Walk with God," is the title of an interesting 237-page biography of an eminent Christian woman, Mrs. Eunice Cobb, and published by Bro. T. B. Arnold, 104 Franklin St., Chicago. It is one of those interesting biographys that illustrate many of the finest traits of Christian character. One cannot read the book without being impressed with the importance of keeping in constant touch with God. Mother Cobb was no ordinary Christian, and Bro. Arnold has rendered important service to the cause of Christ by giving us this precious example of close walking with God.

WHO WILL RESPOND AT ONCE?

Rev. H. H. Hinman, so long and favorably known to Cynosure readers, can be had for a month's N. C. A. work, beginning March 25th, if we can raise $20 for him. He could put in one week in Mobile. There is to be an important gathering there of ministers. He would go to Selma and speak in the schools where he is well known. From there he would go to Birmingham and Attalla, Ala., Rome, Ga., and Chattanooga, Tenn. Who will help us to take advantage of this opportunity? We must hear from you at once.

W. I. PHILLIPS.

ARTIFICIAL BROTHERHOODS.

The attempt to establish new and artificial relations among men—not organizations of specific and limited ends, but brotherhoods—is also an attempt to prescribe and to bind upon the consciences of men certain moral duties growing out of these relations. Love, sympathy, help, these are moral duties which, by the law of God, we owe to all our fellow-men in the various relations in which he has placed us. We owe them to our brothers and sisters, born of the same parents, and forming with ourselves one family. We owe them to our fellow-Christians, members with us of the body of Christ, to our fellow-countrymen or fellow-citizens, members of the same nation, and, in the widest sense, to all our fellow-men, members of the one family of mankind. All these are divinely-established relations, and the duties we owe in these relations are part of our duty to God.

But six brothers out of a family of ten have no right to organize an artificial brotherhood and to bind themselves to be more to each other and to do more for each other than for the other four. Neither have a portion of the members of one church, nor a part of the citizens of one nation, the right to organize into a narrower circle of brotherhood, for the practice towards each other in this narrower circle, of the virtues which they owe equally to all. To do so is not to promote but to restrict the exercise of these virtues; not to widen but to narrow the circle of their operation.

When the Freemason engages to help, favor and assist a brother Mason in his labors, what of his brother-man, or his brother-Christian, to whom he owes equal obligations? What of other men's wives and daughters, when the Freemason engages: "I will not violate the chastity of a Mason's wife or daughter, I knowing them to be such?" Could any more vivid illustration be afforded of the fact that Freemasonry, and all such artificial brotherhoods, cut across the lines of social relationship which God has drawn around men, and disturb the due and generous discharge of the social duties which men owe to their fellows? Their very purpose is to withdraw from the many, for the greater advantage of the few, the help and favor which are due from each to all. If all the ten brothers were to oin the artificial brotherhood formed in the family, the motive for its existence would disappear. If all citizens in the state were to unite with any artificial brotherhood established within the state, the motive for its formation would cease to operate, and it would be replaced by some other form of organized selfishness.—From an address by Dr. T. P. Stevenson, of Philadelphia at the Glasgow, Scotland, Convention, July 3, 1896.

THE CHINOOK COMES.

EVEN THE CATTLE RECOGNIZE THE BENIGN WIND.

How the Warm Southwest Wind Makes Its Advent Known to Man and Beast on the Great Northern Slopes of Montana. The Story of Last December.

Picture to yourself a wild waste of snow, wind beaten and blizzard furrowed until the vast expanse resembles a billowy white sea. The frigid air, blowing half a gale, is filled with needlelike snow and icy crystals, which sting the flesh like the bites of poisonous insects and sift through the finest crevices. The sun, low down in the southern horizon, looks like a frozen globe, with halves, crescents and bright prismatic bars encircling it.

Great herds of range cattle, which roam at will and thrive on the nutritious grasses indigenous to the northern slope, wander aimlessly here and there or more frequently drift with the wind in vain attempts to find food and shelter, moaning in distress from cold and hunger, their noses hung with bloody icicles, their legs galled and bleeding from breaking the hard snow crust as they travel, appealing to the hardest heart for pity. It is sure death for human beings to be caught out in one of these awful blizzards, with the temperature down to 30 or 50 degrees below zero, unless rescue is speedy.

Would the "chinook" never come? The wind veered and backed, now blowing as if in derision, and anon becoming calm as if in contemplation of the desolation on the face of nature, while the poor dumb animals continued their ceaseless tramp, crying with pain and starvation. At last, on Dec. 1, at about the hour of sunset, there was a change, which experienced plainsmen interpreted as favorable to the coming of the warm southwest wind. At sunset the temperature was only 13 degrees, the air scarcely in motion, but occasionally seeming to descend from overhead. Over the mountains in the southwest a great bank of black clouds hung, dark and awesome, whose wide expanse was unbroken by line or break. Only at the upper edge the curled and serrated cloud, blown into tatters by wind, was seen to be the advance courier of the long prayed for "chinook." How eagerly we watched its approach! How we strained our hearing for the first welcome sight of the gentle breath! But it was not until 11:35 p. m. that the first influence was felt. First, a puff of heat, summerlike in comparison with what had existed for two weeks, and we ran to our instrument shelter to observe the temperature. Up goes the mercury, 34 degrees in seven minutes. Now the wind has come with a 25 mile velocity. Now the cattle stop traveling and, with muzzles turned toward the wind, low with satisfaction. Weary with two weeks' standing on their feet they lie down in the snow, for they know that their salvation has come, that now their bodies will not freeze to the ground.

The wind increases in strength and warmth. It blows now in one steady roar; the temperature has risen to 38 degrees; the great expanse of snow, 30 inches deep on a level, is becoming damp and honeycombed by the hot wind, and we retire satisfied that the "chinook" is a genuine and lasting one.

Twelve hours afterward there are bare brown hills everywhere; the plains are covered with floods of water. In a few days the wind will evaporate the moisture, and the roads will be dry and hard. Were it not for the "chinook" winds the northern slope country would not be habitable, nor could domestic animals survive the winters.—United States Weather Review.

He Saw Speaker Reed.

Representative Washington of Tennessee recently called on Speaker Reed to secure action on the claim of the Methodist Publishing House of Nashville for $100,000 as reimbursement for their building, destroyed by troops during the war. Mr. Reed's policy against mortgaging the next administration with large appropriations is well known. Mr. Washington had pleaded several times for recognition in vain, and the speaker had listened attentively. Finally Mr. Washington said:

"Mr. Speaker, what can I tell my constituents to show that I am doing something in their behalf?"

The speaker looked at the genial Tennessee member for a moment and drawled, "Joseph, just tell them that you saw me." Then the speaker smiled, paused a bit and added, "Tell them sometimes you think I will, and sometimes you think I won't."

All Fine Orators.

"Missouri will have the best lot of representatives in the next congress that she ever had," said Mr. George J. Vest, the son of the senator. "Nearly all the new men are fine orators, and three of them are regular cyclones. Champ Clark, who is coming back, needs no introduction, and Benton and Cochran are his equals in every way. Benton has been prosecuting attorney in his district for many years and is a fine stump speaker. He is a nephew of Thomas Benton and has all the fire and vigor of the old senator. Cochran is a well educated and brilliant man and will make himself known very soon to the house and to the nation."—Washington Post.

Hudson Bay Exploring Expedition.

The Canadian government has chartered the sealing steamer Diana to convey an exploring expedition to Hudson bay. The expedition will start May 1 and be absent seven months. Captain John Bartlett of Peary expedition fame is likely to command the Diana.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning March 7. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Opportunities to do good; seeing them; using them.—John iv, 5-15; I Cor. ix, 19-22.

Opportunities to do good are all around us in life. The sun of no day need set without looking upon some act of philanthropy if we only have the desire to use the opportunities which we see about us. There are many about us who are in temporal want and distress whose wants need to be supplied. Many are suffering mental agony because of the trials, hardships, tribulations and afflictions of life, and they need the sympathy and encouragement of loving hearts and helping hands. Many are in spiritual woe. The burden of sin lies heavily upon them, and they need some one to lead them to the Saviour, at whose touch the burden of sin will roll away. There is many a weary soul at the wells of life with nothing by which to draw. There is many an unfortunate person who has fallen among thieves and robbers and lies bruised and bleeding and unable to care for himself. The mission of Christ in the world was to do good. This should also be the mission of His followers.

We see many opportunities in life to do good, but we do not always use them. There are many reasons given perhaps for our indifference or our neglect. Sometimes it is because we cannot do as much as we would like to do, or in the way that we would like to do it. Often we think if we only had the means or the ability of certain others to do good how much we would do. This is a serious mistake. Because we cannot do all we would like to do is no reason why we should not do all we can do. If ten men are starving and I can only save one of them, it would be folly not to save the one because I could not save the other nine. If God has only given us one talent, He will only require us to account for one, but He will demand an account for that one. Again, we sometimes think men do not deserve our sacrifice and labor. The question of desert is not for us to decide. If God dealt with us on this basis, not one of us could stand before Him. It should only be a question of need and our ability to supply the need.

There are many reasons why we should use all opportunities for doing good to our fellow men. It is a positive pleasure to benefit others. It is the desire of the Lord Jesus Christ, and for His sake, if no other, we ought to do it. In feeding the hungry and clothing the naked and visiting the sick, Jesus looks upon it as being done unto Him. It pays to be philanthropic. The reflex influence is always good, and one good turn not only deserves another, but in the providence of God usually receives it. We know not when we may need what some one else now needs. Let us do to them as we would have them do to us under changed conditions.

Bible Readings.—Jer. viii, 19, 20; Math. v, 16; xxv, 34-46; Acts viii, 26-39; Luke x, 25-37; John ix, 4; xii, 35, 36; I Cor. xv, 58; II Cor. viii, 1-12; Gal. vi, 10; Phil. iv, 10-14; II Thess. ii, 16, 17; Heb. x, 23-25; xi, 13-16.

Chinese Mission Hospitals.

Nearly every missionary society at work in China has established medical missions, and the missionaries consider the presence of a Christian hospital an immense advantage to them in their work of soul winning. One missionary declares that even itinerancy is of less value. In one case a patient traveled 1,000 miles to reach a Christian hospital. In another case last summer 180 patients were on the mission premises at one time.—Golden Rule.

Seeing Christ.

It is in Him that we meet the highest we know. In His person, speaking human language, mingling freely in human society, the world saw that which permanently raised its idea of God. Seeing Christ, it was God men saw, and they saw Him to be more and better than they had thought. God is revealed in Him, and our hope of knowing God better is our hope of knowing Christ better. —Professor Marcus Dods, D. D.

Appearance Versus Character.

Personal appearance at first attracts the greater attention, but personal character produces the most lasting impression. While dress and manners are to be duly cultivated, our chief concern should be to so feel and act that we may make the deepest, most vital and most beneficent effect upon all with whom we come in contact.—Presbyterian.

Influence of Conventions.

The influence of Christian Endeavor conventions never adjourns. There has been reported from Chicago a band of 15 Endeavorers, who, as a result of the Washington convention, meet weekly for Bible study and preparation for evangelistic work and after the meeting take entire charge for the evening of the services in a rescue mission.

A Suggestion For Endeavorers.

Dr. Clark sends from Europe, as a suggestion to the Christian Endeavor societies of the world, the plan of occupying a few moments in every Christian Endeavor prayer meeting, or at least occasionally, with a summary of the pastor's morning sermon. The plan should prove helpful alike to young people and pastor.

Sin Is Attractive.

It is a mistake to say that sin is repulsive and unattractive. The truth is there are thousands of naughty things that the unregenerate think are nice. Sin is often attractive and enticing, else fewer people would be sinners. Too often men are in sinful ways because they like the ways of sin.—Rev. C. B. Mitchell, Kansas City.

Failures.

The failures in Christian life are not due to lack of power, but to failure to use the power that is in us.—G. F. Pentecost.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems of Truth Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

It is Protestantism that has given the greatest uplift to the race, because it encourages liberty of individual thought, and, though it does not attempt to control the politics of the individual citizen, yet its teachings tend to political liberty and produce the most prosperous conditions for the race.—Rev. T. B. Neely, Methodist, Philadelphia.

Christians In Business.

One of the greatest needs of the age is Christian bankers, Christian merchants, Christian editors, Christian lawyers, Christian doctors, Christian teachers, Christian statesmen, Christian housekeepers, Christian mechanics, Christian farmers—in a word, Christians everywhere, in every place of business, industry and activity.—Rev. P. H. Smith, Methodist, Chicago.

Our Country.

Our country is the most self contained and self sufficient on the globe—isolated, independent and inexhaustibly rich in resources. Our people, by natural instinct, are optimists and opportunists. Whatever is wrong with us and can be mended is constantly tinkered with until the evil is ended. We do not admit that anything hurtful is possible to us that cannot be cured and must therefore be supinely endured.—Evangelist Sam Small at St. Louis.

God's Love.

The Bible declares that God loves his only begotten Son, he loves the angels and all the heavenly inhabitants. But the Bible also declares that God loves the world, and by the world is meant all the people who populate the earth, whether they be morally good or bad. They may be Pharisee or publican, civilized or savage, criminal or Christian. It matters not what may be their creed or character or conduct, God loves them. —Rev. W. G. Russell, Baptist, Camden, N. J.

The Banking System.

Men sometimes assail the banking system. We know not what is in store for us in the future or what better plans may be devised and carried out hereafter, as nothing is perfect or improbable. But up to date the banks are the best system. It is necessary to deposit cash somewhere, to have funds on call, or business would be impossible. If there were no banks and no reserves, there would be no business, no manufactories, no stockyards and no civilization.—Rev. W. P. George, Presbyterian, Kansas City.

Training Young Ministers.

The power to prepare and deliver great sermons is not the only power for which God designed the pulpit. Is the church training men how to develop faith, patience, perseverance and the tenacity of purpose so needed in the missionary field? Is she at pains to prevent men from becoming mere book students? Is she training them how to find the consciences of men and how to tenderly draw them out? Our seminaries are not trying to do it, but the training in them is such as to give them an inordinate longing to spend their ministry in the largest and most attractive parishes possible.—Bishop White, Episcopal, Indiana, at Philadelphia.

Modern Preaching.

Modern rosewater preaching produces respectable deacons and elders and stewards and trustees and a certain amount of morality. Civilization goes on, but scoffers increase, and men and women in the church as well as outside see that the carnal tastes are carefully cultivated by priests and people. They see that Christ and many of the churches are parting company. The Divine Carpenter and the lowly Fisherman are models no longer. The sword is thrown away instead of the scabbard. Their photograph is in the fifty-sixth chapter of Isaiah, "They are ignorant, all dumb dogs, cannot bark, sleeping, lying down, loving slumber."—Rev. W. W. Case, Methodist, San Francisco.

Duties of Corporations.

Let our corporations honestly set themselves to identify the interest of their employees with those of the corporation itself, and this monster man will humanize itself. A portion of the stock of every corporation can be placed within the reach of its employees, and thus the principle of profit sharing can be embodied in the corporation. If this demoralization grows out of the fundamental immorality of the corporation as an artificial personality outside of the limits and restraints, the responsibilities and obligations and penalties of the natural man, then the corporation itself must experience a change of heart.—Rev. R. Heber Newton, Episcopal, New York.

The Sunday Newspaper.

The advertisements of the Sunday paper tell us to expect so many pages of fun, several short stories, and so on. I would ask, Is that fit reading for the Sabbath? If a minister bored a hole in a man's head who had been reading that stuff, he could not inject a serious thought of eternal things. Then the indecent pictures, the "personal column," the manicure advertisements under the classification of "female situations wanted," and other things of the kind —I don't believe that the newspapers of Sodom and Gomorrah (if they had any) were guilty of worse things in their worst days. Let us apply the golden rule to this question. Would I like my own daughter to read the filth that is printed in the Sunday papers? Would I like to see my own son selling them on the streets? Would I like to be running trains and taking part in their distribution, so that I lose my Sabbath rest? Certainly not. Then the golden rule demands that I shall not force or tempt others to do these things. Would to God that I had the power to stir the 30,000 churches of the country from Maine to California. If the church would only rise in its might, we could stamp out this Sabbath desecration which is eating into the vitals of the moral and religious life of our land.—Evangelist Moody in New York.

An Old Hymn.

A pathetic and yet charming story is told of the origin of the well known hymn, "Blest be the tie that binds," which was written by Rev. John Fawcett, an English Baptist, who died in 1817, having spent nearly 60 years in the ministry.

It was in 1772, after a few years spent in pastoral work, that he was called to London to succeed the Rev. Dr. Gill. His farewell sermon had been preached near Moinsgate in Yorkshire. Six or seven wagons stood loaded with his furniture and books, and all was ready for departure.

But his loving people were heartbroken. Men, women and children gathered and clung about him and his family with sad and tearful faces. Finally, overwhelmed with the sorrow of those they were leaving, Dr. Fawcett and his wife sat down on one of the packing cases and gave way to grief.

"Oh, John," cried Mrs. Fawcett at last, "I cannot bear this! I know not how to go."

"Nor I either," returned her husband, "and we will not go. The wagons shall be unloaded and everything put in its old place."

His people were filled with intense joy and gratitude at this determination. Dr. Fawcett at once sent a letter to London explaining the case, and then resolutely returned to his work on a salary of less than $200 a year.

This hymn was written to commemorate the event. When Mr. Coffing, a missionary at Aintab, in Armenia, set out in 1860 to explore the Taurus mountains, he was to penetrate an entirely new and dangerous field. This fact was fully realized by the inhabitants of Aintab, and they gathered to the number of 1,500 at the roadsides and bade farewell to the missionary and his family in the Armenian words of this hymn, written nearly a century before by the devoted Yorkshire preacher.—Youth's Companion.

Took the Law Literally.

A very ignorant but well to do citizen from the backwoods was elected coroner of a small county. A few days after his election he amazed the ordinary by asking that functionary to point out his duties for him.

"Why," said the ordinary, "when a man drops dead, or is killed by an engine, or blown up with dynamite, you simply impanel a jury and sit on him and then render a verdict."

"That's jest what I done two hours ago," said the coroner, "an the citizens air kickin!"

"Kickin about what?"

"The man what I sot on."

"Well?"

"Well, you see, hit wuz this away: He drapped by the railroad thar an hollered out, 'Boys, I'm dead!'"

"Well?"

"I wuz standin within three feet of him, an as he hollered them words I jumped him."

"Jumped him?"

"I mean sot on him, jest like the coroners air required by law, an, as I weigh right smart, he kep' purty quiet after I landed."

"But he was dead before you reached him, wasn't he?"

"Thar's whar the question comes in. Ain't but one thing erbout it that's shore an certain, an that is he wuz dead when I got up!"—Atlanta Constitution.

WHY HORACE SIGNED.

He Was a Loyal Soldier and Not Ashamed of His Colors.

It was a momentous occasion, and, like many such, had come upon Horace so unexpectedly as to take him completely by surprise. He had not known that this special Thursday evening meeting had been assigned to temperance work, and when the orator took his stand near the pulpit Horace felt disappointed. He was not in need of advice of this sort, as he conscientiously abstained from the use of tobacco and all alcoholic beverages. "Let each individual wage a war against Bacchus," said the orator. "Against Bacchus," mused Horace; "that means against drinking." But the orator was so thoroughly in earnest that Horace was not only obliged to give up his musing, but also began to feel the great responsibility that rested upon him. "The strongest foe this country has ever had to fight is that of intoxicating drinks."

Horace was appalled, but at the same time filled with strong conviction. From a boy the life of a soldier had seemed desirable, and there was no other play which so well seemed to please his youthful fancy. When he became a soldier of the cross of Christ in later years, he thought that implied everything connected with Christian work, but here was a part of the warfare which he had not considered, "Mourn the thousands slain, but reach out a hand of pity to the fallen." Was it really such serious work? Was there such tremendous evil lurking in the innocent looking wineglass? Horace had never been fully awake on the question before and was glad to sign his name to the pledge which was presently offered.

"But, Horace," said a schoolmate to whom he related the experience, "why should you sign the pledge, a fellow who never touches anything?"

"To let the world see where I stand, if for nothing else, Will. A loyal soldier is never ashamed of his colors. If I do not need the help which the pledge gives, some one else may need the stimulus and confidence which my name may bring to help him fight the battle. Then, Will, none of us stands so sure that we may not fall. Often when we think ourselves most secure is when greatest temptations assault us. I am convinced there is but one safe plan to pursue, and that is, 'Stop before you begin.'"

The day when Horace signed the pledge was a memorable one, and a more fearless and faithful soldier never annexed his name or battled for the weak and fallen in our midst.—Christian Intelligencer.

ALCOHOL SHORTENS LIFE.

The Regular Drinker In More Danger Than the Periodical.

People who drink the standard moderate dose of alcohol in whisky, wine or beer, taking it twice daily, are never free from alcohol. It requires 20 hours for a moderate dose of liquor to be eliminated from the system.

From the insurance standpoint alcohol "shortens life" if drunk in any quantity whatever. The daily use of a moderate quantity has a greater effect to shorten life than the periodical use of an excessive quantity. This is true provided the "life" is otherwise a healthy one.

If other disease is present, alcohol may, like other remedies, have an effect to lengthen life.

I am aware that instances are recorded where even daily intoxication has been indulged throughout a long and prosperous life. These cases are, however, very rare. The power and resources of variation and adaptation have so long been sufficient to keep this world populated notwithstanding disease and an inborn disposition of people to destroy not only each other's lives but their own. These forces were properties of life long before wars and poisons, and yet maintain their biological hold upon humanity. It seems incredible that a human constitution—flesh, brains, blood —can acquire and maintain a resistance to a poison so deadly, and which is verified to cause so much disease, and so greatly shorten the average duration of human life.—Dr. L. E. Keeley.

Profits of Saloons.

According to the sworn statement of saloon keepers before the supreme court of the United States, the average daily income of a saloon is $15. There are in Cincinnati 1,770 saloons. Assuming that each receives $15 a day, the aggregate is $2,600,000 a year. How much of this is profit? A gallon of beer sells at wholesale for 25 cents. The saloon keeper receives for it 80 cents, a profit of 220 per cent. The profits on whisky are even greater. Surely the people of this city must be prosperous when they can pay such profits to 1,770 saloon keepers, while they support but 1,101 grocers, nearly one-fourth of whom sell liquor besides.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Worsted mats can be washed without fading by using salt in the water.

Women have gone in heavily for politics this fall, and are fast becoming potent factors in the political arena. There are feminine adherents of every faction, who do all in their power to influence votes.

No more eloquent plea for the higher education can be urged than the statistical fact that two-thirds of the teachers of this country are women.—Baltimore American.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON XI, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 14.

Text of the Lesson, Acts ix, 1-12, 17-20. Memory Verses, 17-20—Golden Text, I Tim. i, 15—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

1, 2. We last heard of Saul making havoc of the church at Jerusalem after the martyrdom of Stephen. We still find him in the same spirit of enmity against Christ and His followers, but now he is reaching out to other cities, even to Damascus, with authority from the high priest to arrest and bring to Jerusalem all such disciples of the Lord as he might find. They are spoken of as men and women of the way (see margin), reminding us of Christ's own words, "I am the way" (John xiv, 6). God thus far suffers Saul to be satan's agent in purifying His church. Not even satan can touch a child of God without God's permission (Job i, 10; Zech. ii, 5), and when the adversary is allowed to try the people of God, either directly or by human instrumentality, we are to see only the hand of God and remember Rom. viii, 28, 29. See Ps. xvii, 14; lxxvi, 10; Dan. xi, 35; xii, 10; Rev. ii, 10, as very helpful.

3, 4. "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me?" Thus far and no farther is heaven's decree for Saul, and now He who loved him in all his sin and who had suffered him thus far in his devilish work arrests Him as he is about to enter Damascus. The light from heaven smites him to the earth, and the voice from heaven enters his soul. The light was brighter than the sun at noonday, and the voice spake in the Hebrew language (chapter xxvi, 13, 14). All the party saw the light and fell to the earth in fear, but Saul alone heard the words which were spoken, for they were only for him.

5. "Who art thou, Lord? I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest." In one of Saul's accounts of this he gives the Lord's answer as "I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest" (chapter xxii, 8). In all Saul's life he had never heard anything so startling or upsetting as this. He verily believed that he was doing right in the sight of God in persecuting these followers of one whom the highest authorities had put to death as a blasphemer. See his own testimony in chapters xxii and xxvi.

6. "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" He is full of trembling and astonishment, but in a moment he sees that he has been all wrong and the persecuted ones have been right. He seems sincerely humbled and by the spirit confesses that Jesus is Lord (I Cor. xii, 3). He is told to go on to Damascus and await orders. The "What wilt Thou?" of this verse and the "Where wilt Thou?" of Luke xxii, 9, when sincerely addressed to the Lord, will not fail to obtain sure guidance.

7. It is evident that those with Saul heard a sound of words, but it is also evident, from chapter xxii, 9, that they heard not the words spoken. Something of the same kind is written in Dan. x, 7-9. It is sometimes asked if those who are left when the church is taken shall hear the Lord's voice or see the event. Perhaps the records concerning Daniel and Saul may give some light.

8, 9. Three days in Damascus, blind and fasting and awaiting a further message from the Lord! What remembrances, what persistence, what searchings of heart, what humbling before God, what light from heaven must have shone in his soul during those days of outward darkness! How he would think of what Stephen saw and said and of the patience and faith of others who had suffered for Christ through him! The Lord was dealing wondrously with him, but, oh, so lovingly, by His Spirit and His word.

10. "The Lord knoweth them that are His, and He knoweth them by name" (II Tim. ii, 19; Isa. xliii, 1). He could send an angel to do His bidding, as He often has done, for they excel in strength and do His commandments, hearkening unto the voice of His word. They are His ministers who do His pleasure (Ps. ciii, 20, 21), but He sees fit to use human instrumentality and calls a Philip in Samaria or an Ananias in Damascus to do His bidding. If we hold ourselves ready for any manner of service wholly at His commandment (I Chron. xxviii, 21), He will surely show us His way for us and guide us into the good works prepared beforehand (Eph. ii, 10).

11, 12. Ananias is sent to the street and the house, and the person is named to whom he is to go, and his occupation at the time is also mentioned. Ananias is also told what Saul sees as he prays. Let us not forget nor fail to believe that God is thus intimately acquainted with each of us. Our ways and words and thoughts, both in the darkness and the light, are all known to Him (Ps. cxxxix, 1-12; Ezek, xi, 5); therefore let our honest prayer be, "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me and know my thoughts."

17. It must have been another new experience for Saul to have a disciple of Jesus put his hands upon him and address him as "Brother Saul," but I am sure he did not feel like knocking him down for thus addressing him, though I once heard a minister of the gospel, in good standing among men, say that he would like to treat a man that way who would call him "brother." True humility is never vexed nor irritated, but is at rest when nobody praises, or even when blamed or despised.

18. He received sight, he was filled with the Spirit, and confessed Jesus as Lord in baptism. He is a new man, a new creation, old things are passed away and all things are become new (II Cor. v, 17). He is crucified with Christ and risen with Christ to a new life. Although he still lives, it is no longer Saul of Tarsus, but Christ Jesus who now lives in him as Lord (Gal. ii, 20). He has become blind to all but Jesus Christ. He knows no other master. He has a heart only for Him and a body that is henceforth wholly at His disposal.

19. He partook of food and was strengthened and continued some days with the disciples at Damascus. Every disciple would soon hear of it; it would spread far and wide that the great persecutor had become a disciple of Christ. Many would want to see for themselves before they could believe such a thing, and even the disciples at Jerusalem would not at first believe that he was a disciple (verse 26). Many of us are apt to believe that some things are too hard for the Lord, but we should remember Jer. xxxii, 17; xxxiii, 3.

20. "And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that He is the Son of God." He increased the more in strength and spake boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus, proving that He is indeed Israel's Messiah (verses 22, 29). Both at Damascus and at Jerusalem the enemies of Christ sought to kill him, but God took care of His chosen vessel and for a time sent him to his home in Tarsus. As witnesses for Christ we must shine for Him among those w[illegible] know us best.

LATEST FROM THE ISLE OF CRETE.

Delyannis Says That Greee's Determination Is Irrevocable.

London, Feb. 27.—A dispatch to The Standard from Athens says: The long visit of the prime minister to the king yesterday revives the rumor that England favors the Greek claims in Crete. A dispatch to The Times from Athens says: "Prime Minister Delyannis, in an interview Thursday, assured me that the decision of the government to maintain the army in Crete was irrevocable. On the other hand Greece had no intention of declaring war against Turkey. Such a step would only be taken if the Turks invade Thessaly, or the great powers render the position of the Greek army in Crete intolerable. There was no intention of invading Macedonia. Greece was not desirous of embroiling Europe in a general war. No understanding exists between Greece and Bulgaria in regard to Macedonia."

The Athens corespondent of The Times adds: "The calmness of moderation of Premier Delyannis impressed me most favorably. He is evidently averse to desperate measures. I do not believe in the end he would reject any solution which Greece could honorably accept, but neither he nor the king could restrain the wild excitement of the populace. Nothing could be more unwise than for the powers to drive the Greeks to exasperation."

Fort Wayne Scorched by Flames.

Fort Wayne, Ind., March 1.—A destructive fire broke out yesterday morning in Morgan & Co.'s hardware store, extending to other buildings, and destroying half a block, entailing a total loss of $125,000. The fire rapidly spread to buildings owned by Margaret Hamilton, Mary Williams, J. C. Meyer, Romary Coeglein & Co. (doors and glass), Nathan & Kircheimer (paper), Julius Nathan (liquors), Alex Staub (stoves). Morgan & Co. lost heavily on stock. Total insurance, about $90.000. Three firemen were caught under falling walls, and George Klingman was dangerously hurt in the spine. The fire raged seven hours.

McCook Will Not Be In.

New York, Feb. 27.—The Commercial-Advertiser says: "Colonel John J. McCook, will not be New York's representative in the next president's cabinet. Colonel McCook, it is announced, has been considering an offer to enter the cabinet as secretary of the interior and has declined the honor. Senator-elect Platt was informed by Colonel McCook of his intention. The department of justice alone had attractions for Colonel McCook and when McKinley decided to make Judge McKenna his attorney general Colonel McCook thankfully declined preferment in any other capacity in the cabinet.

Warrant for an Ex-Treasurer.

Omaha, Neb. March 1.—A special to The Bee from Lincoln says: At noon Saturday a warrant for the arrest of ex-Treasurer J. S. Bartley was sworn out by Attorney General Smythe and placed in the hands of Sheriff Trompen, of Lancaster county, for service. There are fourteen counts in the complaint and summed up they sharge Bartley with embezzling state funds to the aggregate amount of $537,762.93. Bartley gave himself up.

New Revenue Law for Iowa.

Des Moines, Ia., March 1.—The ways and means committees of both houses in conference have agreed on a new revenue law, including many new provisions. Both houses have adjourned until Tuesday on account of the municipal elections to be held. The house passed the bill to permit the manufacture of liquor by a vote of 52 to 46. The house refused to pass an amendment making liquor bills collectable.

Senators Compliment Stevenson.

Washington, March 1.—The senate Saturday evening, through a committee consisting of Hoar, Cullom, Blackburn, Carter, McMillan, Gorman, Faulkner, Brice, Bacon, Jones of Arkansas, Murphy, Elkins and Chandler, presented to Vice President Stevenson in his apartments at the Normandie a handsome and valuable silver table service. It is inscribed as follows: "To Adlai E. Stevenson, vice of president of the United States and president of the senate. 1893-1897. From members of the senate in token of the strict impartiality, unfailing courtesy, and unsurpassed wisdom and discretion which, in the discharge of his high office, have endeared him to the senate and earned for him the gratitude of the American people."

Cooney Held for Trial.

San Francisco, Feb. 26.—Ex-Notary Public J. J. Cooney has been held to answer to charges of perjury in connection with the alleged acknowledgement of the late James G. Fair to deed giving $2,000,000 worth of property to Mrs. Nettie Craven, a school teacher. In his decision Superior Judge Cook intimated that in addition to perjury the evidence was sufficient to conclude that of forgery had also been committed in preparing the lead pencil deeds held by Mrs. Craven.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

WHAT THE LAWMAKERS ARE DOING AT SPRINGFIELD.

Proceedings in the Senate and House Boiled Down—Bills and Resolutions Introduced and Other Matters of Interest to the People of the State.

Springfield, Ills., Feb. 24.—In the senate, save the introduction of a large number of bills, very little was done yesterday. One of the bills provides for a board of three assessors in each county to be elected for two, three and six years, respectively. Bills were passed: Appropriating $2,264.40 for balance due the members of the state board of equalization for sessions of 1895 and 1896; providing for the holding of an additional term of court in Boone county; appropriating $900 for a deficit in the state board of arbitration.

In the house the bill providing for the consolidation of the state supreme court at Springfield was amended so as to consolidate it at Ottawa and passed—66 to 62. An attempt to reconsider the vote on the Revell libel law repeal bill was declared out of order.

Springfield, Feb. 25.—The senate yesterday passed the bill appropriating $31,000 to furnish the G. A. R. memorial hall in the Chicago library building. A number of bills were introduced, among them a local option bill for towns of less than 15,000 population, and another appropriating $437,650 to complete the insane asylum at Peoria.

The house defeated the resolution to adjourn during the inauguration week—100 to 19. A revenue bill was introduced that exempts all G. A. R. property from taxation, and taxes all mortgages, exempting property covered by mortgages. A bill was introduced permitting newspapers to refuse to tell where they get information, even to a legislative committee, and another forbidding the cutting of ice for domestic uses from waters containing any deleterious matter. The house defeated the bill authorizing the governor to borrow $250,000—69 to 41. The bill is now dead.

Springfield Ills., Feb. 26.—The senate held a brief session yesterday of fifteen minutes' duration. Two bills were advanced to third reading, and several introduced, among them one fixing a maximum fare of 3 cents on all street car lines outside of Chicago, and providing that the man in charge of the motive power on such cars shall be employed not longer than ten hours each day. The senate has practically adjourned until after inauguration, many of the senators intending to go to Washington.

In the house a bill was introduced authorizing the governor to borrow $250,000, confining the loan to the present emergency. A bill to regulate the selling of grain, aimed at boards of trade, etc.; one to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors, and one to regulate the manufacture of wearing apparel were introduced; anotner bill provides that persons selling articles on the installment plan shall not be permitted to take back into their possession any article so sold by process of law, unless they refund to the buyer 75 per cent. of the money paid. The legislature has now been in session eight weeks and hasn't passed an important bill, while over 500 have been introduced.

Springfield, Ills., Feb. 27.—The senate was in session five minutes yesterday with scarcely a quorum present. Four bills were introduced, one providing that children between the ages of 7 and 14 years shall attend school at least sixteen weeks in the year.

Roll call in the house showed but fifty-nine members present, but as no one made objections business was proceeded with, and a resolution adopted giving until March 19 next for more bills to be introduced. Some bills were advanced. No business is likely to be done next week.

Conference of Illinois Editors.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—An informal conference of editors and business managers of the leading Illinois dailies outside of Chicago was held here yesterday afternoon. Among those present were H. O. Davis and C. C. Marquis, of the Bloomington Pantagraph; J. B. Barnes, of the Peoria Journal; E. E. Bartlett, of the Rockford Register-Gazette; J. V. Riley and R. S. Chapman, of the Rockford Morning Star, and Dr. Wilcox, of the Quincy Whig. No formal organization was made and the meeting is said to have no political significance, but was merely a gathering to talk over business matters connected with the managment of papers and advertising rates.

Winners at School Oratory.

Bloomington, Ills., March 1.—The second annual oratorical contest of the State Normal school was held Saturday at Normal. The decision of the judges gave Chester M. Echols, of McLeansboro, first place. His subject was "Destiny of Religion." The prize of $100 and a gold medal goes to the winner. Albert B. Wolfe, of Normal, second; Walter F. Pike, of Normal, third.

Cracksmen Fail to Get the Cash.

Golden, Ills., March 1.—Crackmen wrecked the private bank of H. H. Emmings yesterday morning about 3 o'clock, with dynamite, but failed to force the inner vault, containing a large sum of money.

State Notes.

Mrs. Lillian Nugent, wife of William Nugent, of Chicago, died from the effects of a dose of carbolic acid taken in mistake for medicine.

The A. P. A. of Illinois will meet at Chicago in September, 1898.

Governor and Mrs. Tanner, of Illinois, have left the state capital for Washington to attend the inaugural ceremonies.

Illinois Swine Breeders' held a meeting at Springfield. The following officers were elected: President, Fred H. Rankin, Athens; secretary, Charles F. Mills, Springfield.

The striking tanners and employes of Chicago have agreed to leave their differences to be settled by the state board of arbitration. The men will return to work Monday at the old wages and hours.

Frank I. Moll, a workman employed at Deere & Co.'s plow works, Moline, Ills., walked out of an open door on the third floor and was instantly killed.

The South Dakota house has passed a bill extending the period of residence from three months to a year before action for divorce can begin in that state.

Michigan Family Disturbed Through the Vagaries of a Son.

Weird scenes are being enacted in the village of Marcellus, Mich., where the family of William Betts professes to believe that the house it occupies is haunted by spirits.

The claim is made that spirits visit the place in response to the demand of a supernatural power wielded by Irving Betts, a son aged 18, who, it is alleged, has developed the power of materializing them. The family is unable to sleep at night by reason of the strange manifestations, which take the form of rappings and moving of furniture, and the house is regarded with awe by the villagers.

The parents of young Betts are devout church members.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Hero of the Rails.

Another railway hero is added to the list of gallant fellows who have sacrificed their lives to save the lives of others. At Trenton Isaac Slack, a freight conductor, saw four cars break loose from a train he had just left and start down the track for a head on collision with an approaching passenger train. He made a rush and succeeded in climbing to the top of the first car and in putting on the brake. It was too late to prevent the collision, and the shock threw him to the ground and instantly killed him. But his effort had nearly stopped the freight cars, and the crash was not great enough to injure any one else. The American soldier and sailor in their best estate are not more faithful or devoted than is the brave American railroad man.—Washington Times.

Signaling From Mars.

Any citizen who is tired of mundane concerns and wants to fix his mind on something higher is invited to consider the allegation of Sir Francis Galton, made in the London Fortnightly Review, that some one on Mars is signaling to earth. The information seems not as yet to be very generally confirmed by astronomical observers, but Sir Francis is quoted as authority for the report that in one of the European observatories an apparatus has been devised for recording the Martian flashes, and that the record shows that three signals and no more are made, and that they differ, as all flashlight signals do, in the length of the flashes and of the intervals between, so that if we had the key they might be read like telegraphic messages.

Of course this is not a yarn to be swallowed whole, but the association of the name of Sir Francis Galton with it is enough to entitle it to consideration. There seems to be no intrinsic impossibility of our having relations with people in Mars. It sounds preposterous, of course; but, like other marvels, it seems preposterous chiefly because it is unusual. We have to nudge ourselves from time to time in this age of swift surprises and remind ourselves that nothing that is new to us can possibly be more marvelous than many things that have grown familiar.—Harper's Weekly.

4 Harness Needles.
1 Soldering Iron.
1 Bottle Soldering Fluid.
1 Box Rosin.
1 Bar Solder.
1 Directions for Use.

All these tools are full-sized, practical, neat, and cheap; not mere toys. They enable any person to do his own half-soling, boot, shoe, rubber, harness, and tinware repairing.

This Outfit is the result of years of study, experiment, and correspondence in the manufacture of Iron Lasts and Repairing Outfits; and its practical advantages need only to be seen and tried to be appreciated.

Our Improved Iron Lasts and Standard are one of the handiest tools you can have about the place. The Lasts are four in number, smooth and solid, 4, 6, 8 ,and 10 inches long, thus enabling one to half-sole all sizes of foot-wear. The Standard is made with an iron base, which can be easily fastened to the bench. No method of half-soling is now used on common work, except that of iron last and wire clinch nails. The writer of this has been in the business 20 years, and has seen the changes from the old wooden lasts and pegs to the modern method, and knows it to be complete.

Our Improved Harness and Saw Clamp is an indispensable tool in sewing a harness or filing a saw. The jaws are thrown open mechanically by a coiled spring on the bolt.

The weight of this outfit is 18 lbs. Price, all complete, packed in a neat, strong box, only $3.00.

The Home Repairing Outfit No. 2.

FRUIT AND FLOWERS

TRANSPLANTING TREES.

Hard Wooded Trees Require Severe Pruning as a General Rule.

While it is often the case that trees that die after transplanting do so because the earth has not been packed in tightly about the roots, yet a great many fail from exhaustion from lack of pruning. As Meehan in his illustrated monthly explains, a tree in full vigor has enough roots to supply it with all the sap it needs, but as soon as it is transplanted it is unable to draw moisture from the earth until new roots are made, and the tree again becomes established. All this time the branches and leaves are drawing on what sap there is in the tree, and when this becomes exhausted, if new roots have not yet grown, the tree dies. This explains why trees die after they have pushed into leaf, and, in fact, sometimes into growth.

All trees need more or less pruning when transplanted. Just how much depends a great deal on the tree to be pruned. The authority quoted says: A maple, poplar, birch or elm will do with very little pruning, while an oak, beech, chestnut, walnut or ash requires severe cutting. The roots that a tree has must also be taken into consideration. If it is well furnished with roots and fibers, it will require less pruning than if it has but a few stout roots devoid of fibers.

In a general way, it may be said that hard wooded trees require severe pruning, while those having a soft, sappy wood need but a light pruning. This does not always apply. A pin oak has very fibrous roots, as a rule, and moves quite easily without much pruning, though some will consider it advisable to do severe cutting even in its case. On the other hand, the larch, which has a very soft, sappy wood, but practically no fibers, and, in fact, but little root, must be pruned closely to get it to transplant well. The illustration shows what quantities of fibrous roots the pin oak has.

Keeping Apples.

A contributor to The Rural New Yorker writes:

My experience in keeping apples is that they will keep quite as well in a cool cellar or storage room if the barrels are not headed, provided they are not disturbed. If, however, the doors or windows are left open at times, causing sudden changes in the atmosphere, then the barrels should be headed up tight, so that the apples will not feel the change. The evener and lower the temperature can be kept the better it is for the apples, always keeping it above the freezing point, however. If apples are to be kept in a warm atmosphere or shipped during warm weather, I should prefer to slit the barrels to prevent heating, in the same way that peaches, pears and vegetables are shipped.

Mulching Chrysanthemums.

A contributor to Gardening writes:

There is a point about growing chrysanthemums which I have not seen mentioned elsewhere—that is, you must keep the foliage clean by mulching around the plants and close up to the stems to prevent the mud made by rain being splashed on the underside of the leaves, this, of course, for plants in the open ground. This may be trite to most of your readers, but I have been three years in getting my plants to retain their lower leaves, and, being careful in this respect, they are now nice looking specimens right to the pot. Sometimes some little trifling matter like this that goes without saying just discourages amateurs like myself who have neither time nor opportunity to ask others for information.

Treatment of Cactus.

Here is what is said in Vick's Magazine: As a rule, cactus plants do not require large pots, very rich soil or much water. Excessive moisture is especially harmful in the dull season, when they are dormant and are satisfied if only the soil is not allowed to be come dust dry. A soil of fibrous loam and sand in equal parts will suit them. Most kinds can be kept in a somewhat low temperature—50 to 60 degrees—during winter. In March give them a warmer place, syringe them once a day, and when growth starts give water once a day, but still sparingly. The full sunshine suits them.

Pinching House Plants.

A geranium, if left alone, will grow up loose, straggling and perhaps misshapen. Properly trained, it might grow up into a round, handsome, well balanced plant. The secret of a good shape in a plant lies in "pinching." Pinching a plant means to squeeze or pinch off between thumb and finger the tender, growing tip of a growing stem on the plant. The immediate effect seems to be an injury. The plant appears to stop growing. It is checked for a day or two, but the ultimate result is a great gain to the plant. The single stem becomes a double or quadruple. The plant becomes many branched. Pinching is a fine art. It enables the plant lover to train and guide his plants into fine shapes. It makes stronger and better plants and increases the crop of flowers and fruits, says The American Agriculturist.

Things Told by Others.

Among this year's novelties in carnations are: New York, a dark pink; Sunbeam, a bright scarlet; Mrs. Duhme, a shell pink; C. A. Dana, a large pink, a shade darker than Mrs. Duhme; John Young, a new white; Brower, a new white; Abundance, a pink, very prolific, and Blush, a large, beautiful flower with just the faintest tinge of color.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and is made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

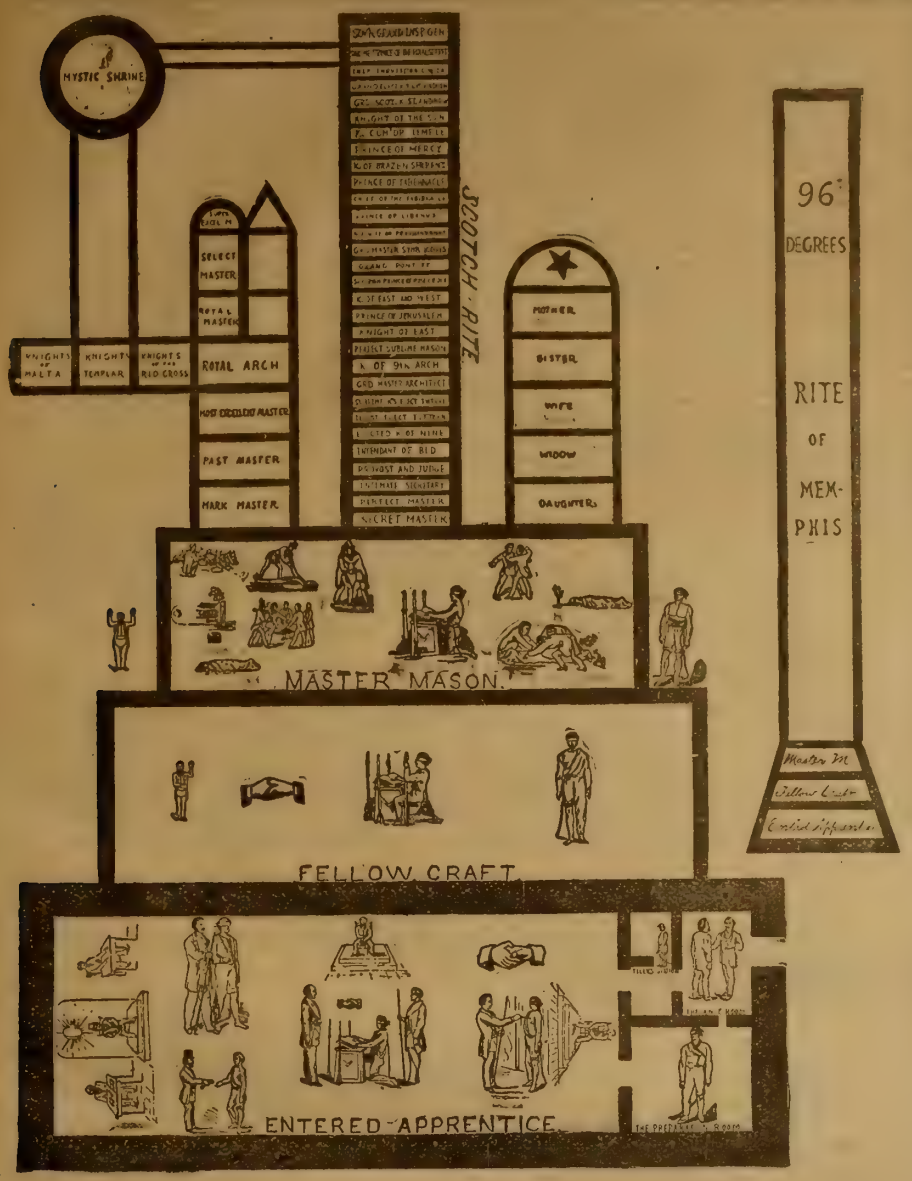
Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge, and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc.



MASONIC CHART.

ILLUSTRATING THE RELATION OF SOME OF THE DEGREES AND RITES IN FREEMASONRY TO EACH OTHER.

The accompanying chart represents one hundred and forty two degrees.

1. The American Rite of 13 degrees;
2. The Scotch Rite of 33 degrees;
3. The Egyptian Rite of 96 degrees.
4. The Mystic Shrine of one degree.
5. The Eastern Star of 5 degrees for Master Masons and for women. These are side degrees, and not genuine masonry.

The Symbolic degrees, or Blue Lodge of three degrees, are common to every Masonic rite, whether American, Scotch, or Egyptian, or whichever of the Masonic rites, named in Mackey's Masonic Encyclopedia one may choose to investigate.

This chart shows in the Blue Lodge the position of the Worshipful Master and some of the other officers of the lodge. Several positions of the candidate who is being initiated are also shown. In the Master Mason's degree is recognized the murder, burial and resurrection scene so full of religious significance to Freemasons.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. 341 pages, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. 2 vols. Per vol., cloth, $1.00: paper, 65c.
The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive.
Vol. II comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 19th to 33rd degree inclusive.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. 274 pages, flexible cloth, 50c.
By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. 110 pages, paper, 25c.
The genuine old Morgan book republished.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry. By Avery Allyn. Cloth, $5.00.
Contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, and the Orange Societies.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Cloth, $2.50.
Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market, it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated."

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 75c.
Contains the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual.

Look to the East. A ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Cloth, $2.00.
Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or the Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Finney on Masonry. Cloth 75c., paper 35c.
The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By ex-Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasony Self-Convicted. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40c.
This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them.

Judge Whitney's Defence before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. 15c.
Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. 10c.
This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life–undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder and Oaths of 33 degrees. 304 pages, cloth, $1.00,
"Composed of Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's, Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees."

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor of United Presbyterian church.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in New Berlin trials. 10c.
The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiation by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties,

Grand Lodge Masonry. 5c. each
Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities.

SANGUILLY NOW SAFE

WELCOMED WITH GREAT ACCLAIM IN A FREE LAND,

When He Sets Foot on American Soil at Key West—Gives Consul General Lee All the Credit for His Release and Doesn't Mention Olney.

Key West, March 1.—Julio Sanguilly has arrived from Havana by the steamship Mascotte. He was at first indisposed to say anything further than what would express his lasting gratitude to Consul General Fitzhugh Lee, whom he described as a truly noble American and a man who should long ago have been in Cuba." Had he been there years ago," Sanguilly exclaimed, "there would have been less shedding of American blood." He was very much agitated as he expressed his feeling toward Consul General Lee. As to how he was treated during his confinement he begged earnestly not to be compelled to recall his experience during the last two years.

When he Heard of Maceo's Death.

"Why," said he, "I have not been allowed to read one solitary newspaper except those published on the island. When I learned of the death of brave General Maceo it almost made me collapse, not because I thought the death of any one man would check the progress of the Cuban cause, but because I knew then that the butcher Weyler would not be recalled, as Spain would try to pacify the people by pointing to Maceo's death as a great victory for the government."

Speaking of his plans for the future, Sanguilly said: "I do not know them myself, but I am now going to Washington to attend the inaugural parade, having been invited by the old veteran boys to parade with them. I have been given a place of honor in the parade. After that I shall go to New York to see my brother, who has worked so faithfully for my release; and then I shall keep my promise to the people of Key West to return to see my fellow countrymen."

His Wife's Gratitude to Lee.

Sanguilly's wife was equally loud in her praise of Consul General Lee. "He is the best of men,' she said; "also noble and firm in his convictions, and true. To him we owe the final release of my dear husband, who has been confined in a damp dungeon for the past two years on a trumped-up charge, entirely unsupported by any proofs. To Consul General Lee and to the people of this glorious nation, whose noble representative he is, we shall be eternally grateful for my dear husband's release."

SPANISH CORRESPONDENT MOROTE

Gives Three Cheers for "Cuba Libre" and Roasts General Weyler.

Senor Morote, correspondent of El Liberal, ofMadrid, on being interviewed stated that he had been a prisoner of Maximo Gomez, and that while in the camp of the insurgent leader he was treated with marked courtesy. He learned that the reforms proposed by Spain would never be accepted by the Cubans, and that nothing short of the independence of the island would bring about a cessation of hositilities. Morote said that his study of the Cuban cause had convinced him that it was a just one. Referring to General Weyler, he said: "We have a general there who is causing devastation and ruin to the whole island simply because he now sees that it is lost to Spain, and that the Cubans will win in spite of all opposition Spain can offer."

With Senor Brinas, Morote gave three ringing cheers for Cuba Libre. A deputation met Sanguilly at the wharf. He was discovered and pointed out by the crowd the moment the steamer reached the dock. The throng in waiting shouted "Viva Julio Sanguilly;" "Viva Consul General Lee;" Viva Cuba Libra;" "Viva Los Estatados Unidos." Sanguilly was escorted with his family to El Polaco restaurant, where he dined. The restaurant was crowded with his friends and countrymen, eager to have a word with him and to embrace him.

When questioned by a friend as to the Competitor's crew he replied earnestly that if the United States government did not take prompt and energetic action to secure their release he feared the worst would befall them. Consul General Lee's son passed through Key West en route to Washington. Among the passengers on board the Mascotte were Eva Adah de Rodriguez, who was arrested at Puerto Principe, and Buhigas Dalman, vice consul at Tampa.

Illinois Farmers' Institute.

Springfield, Ills., Feb. 25.—At the state meeting of the Illinois farmers institute the following were elected for two years, even numbered congressional districts being selected this year: Eighth district, C. D. Bartlett, Bartlett; Tenth, J. H. Coolidge, Galesburg; Twelfth, F. J. Mann, Gilman; Fourteenth, Oliver Stewart, Magnolia; Sixteenth, A. P. Grout, Winchester; Eighteenth, A. A. Sawyer, Hillsboro; Twentieth, I. N. Beal, Mt. Vernon. These directors will select the officers of the institute for the ensuing year.

Call for Silver Republicans.

Washington, Feb. 24.—Senator Teller and ten other silver Republican congressmen have issued a call to all who are willing to co-operate with them to take immediate steps to perfect organization, and as soon as possible all the states to designate a member of a provisional committee, which shall have charge of calling a national convention. Charles A. Towne is named as chairman of that committee, which is called to meet at Chicago, June 8 next.

Republicans Nominate Judges.

Decatur, Ills., Feb. 25.—In the convention here to nominate three Republican candidates for judges in the Fourth judicial district the present incumbents, E. P. Vail, of Macon; F. M. Wright, of Champaign, and F. Bookwalter, of Vermillion, were renominated without contest. F. K. Dunn, of Coles, the only other candidate for nomination, withdrew as the result of a caucus before the convention was called to order.

Examination for State Inspectors.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 27.—Colonel J. D. Roper, of Springfield, has been appointed assistant secretary of the Illinois board of laobr statistics for the ensuing four years. The board of state mine examiners is sending out notices calling for a state examination of the state inspectors of coal mines for the seven districts in the state to be held here March 9.

NAME ADOPTED BY POPULIST EDITORS AT KANSAS CITY.

Will Work with Other Parties—Sovereign Elected President of the New Organization—Memphis Wing Receives Charges Against Vandervoort, But Promptly Exonerates Him.

Kansas City, Feb. 24.—The Union Reform Press association was brought into existence yesterday, and Grand Master Workman J. R. Sovereign, of the Knights of of Labor, was made its president. This is the outcome of two days' work by the half hundred Populist editors who refused to recognize the right of President Paul Vandervoort to call a meeting of the National Reform Press association at Memphis, and who came here in response to a call of National Secretary-Treasurer A. Rozelle. Probably the most interesting event of the day came at the very close of the gathering, when the national secretary of the executive committee, J. A. Edgerton, whose work in the meeting had been most active, refused to subscribe to the constitution of the new order. The next annual meeting of the new association will be held at Omaha a year hence. The other officers elected were: Vice president, J. M. Gass, Des Moines, Ia., Farmers' Tribune; secretary-treasurer, Warwick Sanders, Columbus, Neb., Argus.

Throws Out a Peace Proposition.

The pith of the resolutions upon which the new organization stands is as follows: "While we favor principles above party, yet we as a press association counsel the preservation of the People's party organization and at the same time favor a co-operation with other friendly bodies, locally or otherwise, to the end that the People's party organization may be more beneficial. We hold ourselves in readiness to affiliate and consolidate with the National Reform Press association whenever that association shows a disposition to indulge in that spirit of toleration and liberality which we accord to them, and to this end we recommend that the executive committee of this body place itself in communication with the constituted authorities of the National Reform Press association and take such other steps from time to time as may be necessary to accomplish the desired end, subject to written approval of the majority of the members of this association."

Charges Against Paul Vandervoort.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 24.—Yesterday's session of the Reform Press association was full of interesting talk. The discussion was precipitated and the anger of the delegates aroused by the statement of Secretary Parker that he had received an official communication from the Nebraska Reform Press association which preferred charges against ex-President Paul Vandervoort, and asked that Vandervoort be tried and expelled from the association. Parker said the communication had charged Vandervoort with being a paid spy of the Republican party and a traitor to Populism.

Ex-President Fully Exonerated.

The convention howled at the charges and showed in a moment it had the utmost faith in Vandervoort, both as a man and as a member of the Populist party. Vandervoort demanded an investigation, however, and a committee of three was appointed. At the afternoon session the committee rendered its report exonerating Vandervoort from any and all charges made by the Nebraska State Reform Press association and National Secretary Edgerton, and condenming his accusers. A vice president, secretary and executive board was elected during the day.

Interesting Exchange of Telegrams.

An interesting exchange of telegrams between the Kansas City and Memphis conventions was one of the day's important events. The Kansas City meeting desired to know if members who joined the organization at Memphis would be requested to sever all connection and co-operation with the free silver forces in opposition to the policy adopted by the St. Louis national convvention. The Memphis convention, through its officers, in reply cited sections 1, 2 and 3 of the association's constitution, which give the executive board power to suspend any member who is not heartily in accord with the St. Louis and Omaha platforms.

Disastrous Blazes at Aurora.

Aurora, Ind., March 1. — Fire destroyed the Aurora chair factory yesterday. Loss, $20,000; partly insured. Later fire destroyed the Wymond cooper shop, an immense establishment. Loss, $80,000; insurance $40,000. The two fires throw 500 operatives out of employment.

THE WEEK IN CONGRESS.

Synopsis of the Proceedings of the National Lawmakers.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The senate yesterday put in the whole session debating the Indian bill, agreeing to the clause to open for settlement the Uncompahgre reservation. A resolution was adopted asking the state department for the facts about Dr. Ruiz's death in a Cuban prison.

The house passed the naval bill, the last of the appropriations, and spent the balance of the day in a political discussion on the civil service law.

Washington, Feb. 25.—Three resolutions on Cuba were introduced in the senate yesterday—one calling for the immediate and unconditional release of Julio Sanguilly; another calling for protection to American citizens in Cuba and the dispatch of a warship to that island, and another calling for all the correspondence with Fitzhugh Lee relative to Americans imprisoned in Cuba. Little was done on the Indian bill except talk.

The house did little or nothing—nothing of importance—having finished the last appropriation bill. During the day William J. Bryan visited the chamber and was warmly welcomed by his former colleagues on both sides of the chamber.

Washington, Feb. 26.—The senate spent the whole day in red hot debate on the Sanguilly case in Cuba and the result was that on a roll-call the Sanguilly resolution was given precedence over the appropriation bills—40 to 27. A night session was held, but no progress made on the Indian bill, though one or two bills of small importance were passed. The Sanguilly resolution is first today and the appropriation bills are in peril.

The house agreed to conference reports on the agricultural and army bills, and passed a bill authorizing national banks to take out currency equal to the par value of their bonds. Sulzer of New York introduced a bill declaring war with Spain.

Washington, Feb. 27.—The senate devoted most of the day to the Sanguilly case, which was finally laid aside. A resolution was adopted asking for information of the arrest in Cuba of George Washington Aguirre, captured in Cuba, an American citizen. A resolution asking for information about the Dr. Ruiz case of the death in prison was objected to. At a night session the Indian bill was passed and the postoffice bill taken up.

Washington, March 1.—The senate was in session, with the exception of two hours' recess, from Saturday at 11 a. m. to Sundy morning at 2:30, when it took recess to meet at 3 p. m yesterday. During this time it passed the postoffice and sundry civil bills, the latter carrying more than $51,000.000. An amendment was agreed to unanimously rescinding the president's recent order setting aside 21,000,000 acres of land in the west for forest reserves. The sugar bounty clause was agreed to.

The house Saturday passed the anti-scalping bill which makes it a misdemeanor for scalpers to sell cut-rate tickets. Some other bills of minor importance were passed.

The California State Convention will be held at Los Angeles, on April 14 and 15. Address Secretary Williams, 526 South Spring St., Los Angeles, Cal., for further information.

The Annual Meeting of the National Christian Association occurs May next. The first meeting to be held in connection with our convention is in the Chicago Avenue church. There will be a day session in Willard Hall as well as in our own—the Carpenter Building. We expect to report progress each week.

The apostles did not merely denounce heathenism and expose its mysteries and sins. Their work was never purely destructive but always essentially constructive. Our work in opposing the paganism called Masonry is in danger of being done in too exclusively a negative or destructive way. Magnifying the truth that Masonic error assails would give us intrenchment. Christ's mediatorship, for example, gives room for good work, making our Anti-masonry positive and effective.

To the amazement of all Europe the little kingdom of Greece boldly announced that it would prevent the Turkish army trying to suppress the uprising in Crete. This Island has long been under the despotic heel of the Turk as Cuba has been under Spain. Now when the long-suffering Cretans attempt to break their galling yoke, the English and French war vessels interpose to quell the insurgents. The latest news points to a crisis that is likely to involve the great powers of Europe. The governments of England and France seem more desirous of protecting the interests of Turkey than of the Cretan Christians.

Merely to tear down is not reform. To tear down an old house may be necessrry in preparing to rebuild. To dethrone tyranny is not to reform government. This requires that a new government be formed. It is not the whole reform to tear down the lodge; it also involves building the church; and building either involves pulling down the other, or injuring it in some degree.

GENERAL GRANT.

This portrait is of the most famous of American soldiers, if not of the soldiers of the world. He was President of the United States from 1869 to 1877, and won his great reputation in the war of the Rebellion, into which he entered as the colonel of an Illinois regiment, and out of which he came as the successful leader of the national armies, and holding a place in the hearts of his countrymen hardly less exalted than that so long held by Washington.

General Grant made no pretentions of scholarship and yet his autobiography proves that though all untaught of silken phrase makers, he could link words together with an art surpassing the art of schools, and put into them something that will still bring to Americans ears, as long as America shall last, the roll of his varnished drums and the tread of his marching troops. His open candor and honest sincerity led him to say more than once in public; "All secret oath-bound political parties are dangerous to any nation, no matter how pure or how patriotic the motives and principles which first brings them together."

In his horror at the denial of Christ by the lodge, the Anti-mason may forget to magnify Christ as Mediator in order that others may see the greatness of lodge sin. Peter also said, "I know not the man," but it was not until the man looked at him that he "went out and wept bitterly." It is when men see the Mediator that they are most likely to go out of the lodge, where he is denied as not known, and weep in repentance.

The Morgan case was only one. It was not the first nor the last one. No other produced the same effect on the lodges, or went so much into politics. It is more historic than others. But the impression should not be allowed to be so prevalent that it is solitary, or that bloodshed itself is the only form of Masonic persecution. Fresh cases demand attention whether bloody or otherwise. The Newmarket riot in New Hampshire and the Griswold case at Hartford are among more recent examples.

The Odd-fellowship lodge of the State of Wisconsin, according to the report of Milwaukee newspapers, is on the verge of bankruptcy. At the beginning of this year the number of deaths among the members of the lodge began to increase suddenly and unexpectedly, so that it became impossible for the lodge to pay all the policies, and now owes about $47,000 to policy holders. About $100,000 are due the lodge by members who have been remiss in paying their fees. About one-half of the members have already forfeited their membership by failure to pay, although their duty to pay their arrears did not cease on that account. An attempt will be made to force these members by law to pay their arrears, and if this proves a failure, bankruptcy will be inevitable. In view of this fact, does it pay to join a lodge?

Our Washington correspondent writes us, that one of the most disagreeable, and to many disgusting, features of the immense crowd which gathers in Washington every four years to see a President inaugurated is the drunkenness on the streets, something rarely seen in the daytime at other times. About the only consolation one who wishes well to his fellowman can extract out of this condition, is the perceptible decrease in drunkenness; but there is still entirely too much of it, and it is easy to see that many of those who indulge in it are not habitual drinkers at their homes. Unfortunately there are many men, especially the young ones, who seem to change their entire natures as soon as they get away from their home restraints. That drunkenness at inaugurations is lessening is an indication that it will some day be unknown, but it is a great pity that some sure method of hurrying up that day cannot be adopted.

"I notice with great interest," writes Elizabeth E. Flagg, of Boston, "the suggestion that our Association be extended and reach across the water to those who, however separated from us by lines of latitude or of nationality, are one with us at heart, having the same great foe to fight. The secret empire, as we know, is world wide. Its membership is everywhere. Everywhere it is the malignant enemy of God, the contemner of his Christ, and the adversary of the brethren. However diversified its workings or various the methods it employs, it is always the same old dragon. Already the W. C. T. U. belts the globe, and has its all-around-the-world missionaries; but Masonry is as universal as the drink curse; and it will be found that everywhere, whether in Great Britain or America, or far-away India, this, as well as all other abominable evils, hide under its shadow. Nor do I think that Christ's kingdom can ever come in the world till this devil's empire is destroyed. I hope that the movement for an International Association opposed to secret societies will meet with an earnest response."

"A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM."

(Isa. 40:6.)

BY MRS. JOEL SWARTZ.

Not only may the young child lead,
He also may profoundly teach;
Happy the parent who shall heed,
And learn the sermons he can preach.

Thus was I taught to my great joy,
But not in phrase that can be told,
By the example of my boy,
When he was less than four years old.

There stretched across a rapid stream,
Whose eddies wrought a mazy pool,
A long and swaying oaken beam--
A footbridge to the Sabbath-school.

How oft my trembling limbs would shake
This swaying foot-bridge to essay;
And often wished that I could take
Some safer though a longer way.

But my brave boy thought it a joy
To run across the slender beam;
Without a fear or anxious care
He passed the eddies of the stream.

My blood ran chill to see the child,
Before he gave me time to think,
Start down the path with gladness wild
And run the bridge from brink to brink.

But he was gallant, too, as brave,
And offered me his manly hand,
And all his care and wisdom gave,
Until we stood upon the land.

Thus leading me he too was led;
Our mutual conduct thus began;
And still he leads the path I tread,
And now I lean upon the man.

More timid I, more cautious he,
But not less brave though far more wise
His loyal love still clings to me,
And more and more his lead I prize.

DWIGHT L. MOODY IN BOSTON.

BY REV. J. P. STODDARD.

Hundreds were turned away from the Temple this afternoon, and though on time, I was one of them. Two services to-morrow, I am told, ends Bro. Moody's protracted efforts in Boston. On the whole it has been a notable campaign, in which good generalship is no less conspicuous than incisive preaching and pathetic appeals. Whatever he knows or does not know of old or new-school theology, Mr. Moody evidently knows the voice of God in the Scriptures, and in the human heart, and his power lies in bringing the "Divine Logos" and the inner consciousness of men face to face with each other in the sanctuary of the soul. The regenerated and unregenerated respond to the vigorous truths which he presents in a severity always tempered with loving sympathy, compelling recognition even when not accepted.

His methods have been anomalous and full of surprises to those most familiar with his tactics. Apparently oblivious to his own personality, he has exalted Christ and the Holy Spirit, and smitten the leperous sinner without "respect of persons." Honoring the true church, he has boldly challenged her enemies to make good their railing accusations against his Master's bride. Extending to every loyal pastor or Christian worker a helping hand, he has disturbed the drowsy, warned the recreant, and inspired the timid by the "faithful wounds of a friend," bestowing merited commendation upon the press, when true to God and the people, but not shunning to reprove their immoralities and denounce their Sunday issues.

The brothels, the gambling dens, the lodges, the saloons and the theatres he has grouped as kindred associations with which Christians should have no fellowship; and repeatedly warned believers to come out from this cage of unclean birds, and cease to destroy their influence and defile their garments by contact with these wicked abominations. While I have no knowledge that Bro. Moody has directly assailed or discussed the mysteries of secret orders, at not less than five different times he has classed the Masonic and Odd-fellow fraternities with the vilest and most disreputable haunts which infect society with the black plague of sin and death. How Dr. Lorimer, Dr. Gumbart, Dr. Berle, et. al., can still delight in the shadow of this upas and commend its death-dealing fruits to the young men is only comprehensible in the light of the Scripture truth that "Satan is transformed into an angel of light," and men "blinded by the god of this world are given over to believe a lie."

One hopeful feature is that fraternity men have been less conspicuous on the platform since Bro. Moody has been giving "them a portion in due season," indicating that they are not wholly lost to all sense of shame. Taking Bro. Moody's estimate of the lodge as shown by the associations in which he classes it, it would seem embarrassing, even to a Knight Templar, to appear in such a "role" before an intelligent audience in presence of his accuser. The actual facts as recognized by Mr. Moody when set in living characters upon the platform would be a notorious gambler, a conspicuous rum distiller, a plethoric Odd-fellow, saloon-keeper, a plumed Knight Templar Mason, a theatrical dancing-master, a Christian (?) minister reading the Sunday newspaper and the un-Scripturally divorced and heartless adulterer, each so enamored with the "craft" he worthily represented that he boldly declared his unwillingness to surrender its privileges and emoluments in exchange for anything the church can give in return, would not present a very attractive picture to the eye of any virtuous man or woman.

The Christian heart would revolt at the spectacle, and every enlightened conscience would cry, "unclean! unclean!" away with such an abomination from the house of God. Suppose, further, the master of ceremonies should select from the motley crew one to pray for and exhort sinners, which would be the most appropriate person to perform that holy function? Would it be the gambler, the distiller, the Mason, the Odd-fellow, the dancing-master, the saloon-keeper, the brothel tender or the adulterer?

Admitting that some are deeper dyed than others, by what law of God may any one of these stretch forth the hand in benedictions upon the people, in the name of our only Lord and Saviour whose authority they all alike disobey, and whose example and teachings they reject? Would not such presumption be the sacrifice of apostate Saul, offensive to God and every true Samuel among his prophets? Now that Bro. Moody has recognized the near kinship of all these brotherhoods of iniquity, is it strange that Knight Templars seldom masquerade before the Temple crowds since he has declared their paternity, and assigned them to their own place? Is it not rather a marvel that such exorcists and conjurors with lodge jugglery should have the "cheek" to "pose" as saints before those in whose "presence vile men are contemned?" Who will offer a better solution to this perplexing question than the Scriptures give, when in Job's day "The sons of God came to present themselves, and Satan came also among them?"

Since hearing the Word of the Lord, such sanctimonious religionists who adhere to their lodges and continue their pious cant about the atonement and sanctification are carrying a burden of responsibility upon their guilty souls, to the judgment seat of their rejected Christ, such as they never knew before. Brethren and sisters, pray for me, that my voice of warning may be of no uncertain sound, and that not a drop of their blood be found upon my skirts.

MASONRY A PERVERTER OF JUSTICE.

BY EX-PRES. JOHN G. FEE, OF BEREA COLLEGE.

Gerrit Smith said: "Masonry murdered Morgan. If it could not conceal his murderers, it nevertheless protected them; it over-ruled the laws of the land and ruled the courts and ballot boxes; moreover it is capable of repeating the crimes." So evident was it that Masonry abducted and murdered Morgan, that thousands of good men speedily withdrew from the lodges, and several State legislatures forbade the administration of the Masonic oaths. Masonry not only offers facilities for subverting justice, but, as we shall see, the oaths taken require the concealment of even crime, when that crime is given as a secret. The penalty for breaking the oath is barbarous and horrible in the extreme. A part of the oath of the Entered Apprentice is:

That I will ever conceal and never reveal any of the secrets, arts or points of the hidden mysteries of Ancient Freemasonry, which have heretofore been, may at this time, or shall at any future time be communicated to me as such, to any person or persons whomsoever, except it be to a true and lawful brother Mason, or within a regularly constituted lodge of Masons .....To all of this I most solemnly and sincerely swear, with a firm and steadfast resolution to keep and perform the same, without any equivocation, mental reservation or secret evasion of mind whatever, binding myself under no less a penalty than to have my throat cut across, my tongue torn out by its roots, and my body buried in the rough sands of the sea.

For violation of the oath of the second degree, the applicant invokes the penalty of having his left breast torn open and his heart plucked out. In the third degree that his body be severed in twain and his bowels taken out and burned to ashes.....So help me God. In this third degree the Master Mason swears:

Furthermore, I will answer and obey all due signs and summons sent to me from a lodge of Master Masons, or given to me by a brother of this degree, if within the length of my cable-tow.....Furthermore, that I will keep the secrets of a worthy brother Master Mason as inviolable as my own when communicated to and received by me as such, murder and treason excepted, and them only at my own option.

The execution of the above oath has its illustration in the abduction and murder of Morgan, and of Dr. Cronin by the Clan-na Gael. The tendencies of these terrible oaths to "hail, conceal, never reveal the secrets of a brother"..... "recognize the signs or tokens of a brother, rebel or savage"—for Masonry, in such cases, knows not character but only Masonic relationship and oaths—the tendency of these oaths we say will have an influence on the minds of men so as to disparage in many cases their fitness to sit as jurors or to be safe defenders of government in time of war. This latter was seen in our late war.

Here we want to say, there is in these terrible oaths a power symbolized by the "cable-tow" which takes away from lodge members that frankness which men ought to have in the consideration of an institution widely extended in civil society. Good men who have been members of these lodges say that this power will lead many members not only to conceal but to actually prevaricate. We all know Masonry is a work of darkness, and that Masonry dare not unfold her works to the world.

We may here emphasize the truth that a good cause has no need of concealment; such as a Bible society, missionary society, a thousand and one aid societies. If good men have a good thing they should want the world to see it and receive the benefit of it. Our Lord said, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

FREEMASONRY IN ROMAN CATHOLIC COUNTRIES.

BY H. M. HUGUNIN.

There is no doubt that the Grand Orient (Masonic) exerts a wide-spread influence in the affairs of Roman Catholic France. Italy, if the Roman Catholic press may be believed, is largely governed by Freemasonry; and, as was recently shown in these columns, upon the same authority, Freemasons are ruling the Roman Catholic Republic of Ecuador with a malevolence which greatly distresses the citizens of that faith. The Catholics complain that one of the evils propagated by the Freemasons, wherever they gain the power, is felt in the education of the masses in secular schools, from which all religious influence is banished, and that this system is turning loose upon society a class of students capable of committing the most heinous crimes known to courts of justice.

On this subject, making all due allowance for sectarian exaggeration, the London Tablet, one of the oldest, sauciest and most influential Catholic journals, quotes the following from a prominent prelate:

"The control of education, it cannot be too often repeated, is the ultimate aim of that great movement of the present century which works in different countries by various means to the same end. In those where its strides havs been most rapid, and its progress most favored by circumstances and events, it can venture more boldly to avow the purposes which it pursues with no less persistency, though with more circumspection, elsewhere. It derives its force from the fact that though the negation of all existing religions, and the unrelenting foe of all so-called dogma, it is in itself a religion, with a fierce dogmatism of its own, inspiriting in its votaries a zeal amounting to fanaticism.

"We have only to look at the history of the countries in which it has been triumphant to see how far it is from respect for the liberties of others, and how in the spirit of tolerance carried to the length of sanguinary persecution, it vies with the propogandists of all false creeds. In the Republic of Ecuador, in Spanish South America, the scene of its latest excesses, we have seen how it has used its victory in a civil war against the Catholic population to expel priests and monks, and punish with death even the profession of religion. Where public opinion is not yet ripe for open violence, it works by more insidious means, and seeks by capturing the educational machinery to secure for itself the empire of the future. It finds its most serviceable ally in the fog of prejudice and ignorance which makes the well-meaning dupes of their own perversity, and the professors of religion champions of veiled infidelity. Thus we see the strange spectacle of those who call themselves Christians driven to fury at the proposal to teach any form of Christian (Catholic) dogma in the state schools of a Christian (Catholic) country, and ready to fight to the death for the propagation of atheism under the specious name of undenominational education."

BIBLICAL PROPHECY.

BY T. DARLEY ALLEN.

The fulfillment of prophecy affords perhaps the most satisfactory of all the evidences of the truth of Christianity with the exception of the proof which comes through the experience of conversion. The history of the Jews and the present state of many Oriental lands and cities, taken in connection with prophecy, present us with an argument so powerful for the truth of Scripture that we are forced to declare, if sincere inquirers after truth, that "holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

H. L. Hastings, of Boston, in a pamphlet entitled, "Infidel Testimony," places side by side prophecies of the Old Testament and extracts from the writings of the great French infidel, Volney, which show that that noted enemy of Christianity unconsciously bore testimony to the truth of a religion which he was doing his utmost to destroy. It is said that scores of prominent skeptics have been converted to Christianity through studying the prophecies, a fact which should teach us a way of reaching infidels as well as strengthening any of us who may be weak in the faith. If we were all familiar with the evidence of prophecy we could show infidels the folly of their views, for as a rule infidelity is the result of ignorance, and in many cases, if made acquainted with Christian evidences skeptics would renounce their unbelief and accept Christianity.

WEEKLY COMMUNION.

BY REV. JOHN BROWN, A. M.

It is generally admitted by the most eminent ecclesiastical historians and divines that the Lord's Supper was observed weekly by the primitive Christians. Justin Martyr and Tertulian record the weekly celebration of the eucharist as having been the universal practice of the churches of the second century. Calvin, the reformer, Wesley, the founder of Methodism, Scott, the celebrated Episcopal commentator, Brown of Haddington, a distinguished minister and professor of the Secession church of Scotland, Archbishop King of Dublin, Ireland, and Jonathan Edwards, the prince of American metaphysicians and divines, all pleaded, in their day, for the revival of the primitive practice.

Calvin, speaking of the infrequency of communion in his day, says: "It ought to have been far otherwise. Every week, at least, the table of the Lord should have been spread for Christian assemblies." (Inst. Lib. 6, chap. 18, sec. 56.) Wesley, in his letter of advice to America, says: "I also advise the elders to administer the Lord's Supper every Lord's day." Scott, in his commentary on Acts 20: 7, remarks: "Breaking of bread, or commemorating the death of Christ in the eucharist, was one chief end of their assembling. This ordinance seems to have been constantly administered every Lord's day." Archbishop King, in a "Discourse concerning the inventions of men in the worship of God," says: "It is manifest that if it be not our own faults, we may have an opportunity every Lord's day when we meet together.....that is, by celebrating this holy ordinance." Willison, in his "sacramental directory," says: "In obedience to Christ's authority, the apostles and primitive Christians did frequently partake of the Lord's Supper; yea, it was their ordinary practice every Lord's day, as is evident from Acts 20: 7." President Edwards was a decided advocate for the celebration of the Lord's Supper every Lord's day. In a letter to Mr. Erskine, he says: "I should think it would be best to plead nothing at all short of Christ's institutions, namely, the administration of the Lord's Supper every Lord's day; it must come to this at last; and why should Christ's ministers and people, by resting in a partial reformation, lay a foundation for a new struggle, an uncomfortable labor and conflict in some future generation, in order to a full restoration of the primitive practice?" (Memoirs of Jonathan Edwards, by Sereno E. Dwight.)

The institution of the supper is recorded in 1 Cor. 11: 23-26: "For I have received of the Lord," says the apostle, "that which also I delivered unto you, that the Lord Jesus, the same night in which he was betrayed, took bread; and when he had given thanks he brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is my body which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me. After the same manner he took the cup, saying, This cup is the new covenant, in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it in remembrance of me. For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come."

From the phrase, "as often as," it has been inferred by some that we are left without law as to how often the ordinance is to be repeated. The phrase points out the design of the institution as the memorial of Christ's death as an atonement for sin. It implies frequency; but we are not told in the words of institution how often the ordinance is to be observed. But this information is elsewhere supplied. As the show bread, which was a type of the body of Christ, was set in order by the Jewish priest, every Sabbath day (Lev. 24: 8), so "the bread of blessing," which is a symbol of the same body, ought to be broken and distributed by the Christian presbyter every first day of the week. We read that "upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them." Acts 20: 7.

From these words it appears that the breaking of bread was the weekly practice of the church at Troas. The example of the church at Corinth leads to the same conclusion. It appears to have been their practice, professedly, to "eat the Lord's Supper" (though they abused it so much that the apostle would not dignify it by that name, 1 Cor. 11: 20, 21) as often as they "came together." And we are assured that "the first day of the week" was the day on which they assembled for public worship. 1 Cor. 16: 1, 2.

It is admitted that the evidences afforded by these passages are only inferential; but the inference is so strong that it amounts to a moral certainty. It is as strong as the Lord's day. It is not more evident that the primitive Christians "came together on the first day of the week" at all, than that they "came together to break bread." Should it be argued that it is not said, "they came together to break bread every first day," it is replied, neither is it said they came together for any purpose. But if it be admitted that they came together every first day, then it must be admitted that they broke bread every first day, because the evidence is the same in both cases. Weekly communion and the weekly observance of the Lord's day are, therefore, equally evident. The two institutions stand or fall together. The same argument which establishes the weekly observance of the first day, establishes the weekly observance of the Lord's Supper; and the same argument which invalidates weekly communion, invalidates the weekly observance of the Lord's day.

Does my reader inquire, how is it, then, that most of the churches in modern times only observe the Lord's Supper once a month, once a quarter, or it may be less often? I answer, because they have deviated from the apostolic model; and I would beseech them to return to the "old paths," and to walk in the "good way," from which they have "wandered in the cloudy and dark day." Let us study to be "followers of the churches of God, which in Judea were in Christ Jesus," doing all things according to the pattern, and "keeping the ordinances as they were delivered."

MINNESOTA STATE CONVENTION.

REPORT OF THE RECORDING SECRETARY.

The Minnesota State Convention against secret societies, which was held at Willmar, Feb. 23d and 24th, was a great surprise to the workers and to the public; both on account of the large attendance and of the interest shown by the people in the proceedings; and we were all most gratified by the result. Willmar is a village of some 2,000 inhabitants; a large proportion are Scandinavians, and large Norwegian and Swedish settlements surround it. It contains three Lutheran churches and a Lutheran Seminary and Institute, which in the winter term has over 200 students.

The convention had been extensively advertised by the press in several languages, announced in the churches; and the local committee on arrangements had obtained the use of the large Seminary Hall for the meetings. Still the heavy snowfall, inclement weather and uncertain railroad facilities made the outlook dubious. But in spite of cold and snowstorms, which hid the view and almost blinded vision, the second day the hall was crowded; during the day from three to four hundred, and at the evening meetings over 500 were in attendance, and standing room was at a premium.

The program was carried out with only one case of substitution, and there was no lack of speakers. A number of lodge people were present, especially during the last meeting, held in the Opera House, but no open remarks were made, although they were repeatedly challenged by Rev. Wm. Fenton. The students were so interested in the proceedings of the convention the first day that they asked permission to be free from class in order to attend in mass the second day. Permission was granted, and the principal, Prof. Hilleboe, was chosen president of the State Association. He is an ardent, energetic worker, and was two years ago candidate for governor of Minnesota on the Prohibition ticket.

Prof. Hilleboe, who was chairman of the local committee on arrangements, made the speech of welcome, showing that the societies which in our day had become so numerous and a great factor in politics and social life, demanded public inspection and criticism; that this was possible as their secrets had been revealed, and that it was our duty and right to educate the people and open their eyes to the dangers and pitfalls which wicked men had made in order to live on the labor of their dupes. Secretary Fenton responded in a powerful speech, showing how God had opened a hole in the wall of the foe, that we might look in and behold the abominations perpetrated under the veil of secrecy.

Record of previous convention in Minneapolis was read and approved; several committees appointed or elected and letters of encouragement and congratulations from different parts of the State were heard. As the president, Rev. C. J. Petri, was absent, Wm. Fenton presided.

An address was delivered in Swedish by Rev. C. J. Collin, of New London, on 2 Cor. 6:14-18, "What Relation a Christian Should Take to Secret Societies." He showed that the obligations and oaths of secret lodges are unauthorized by law and are profanity against God; that their worship and use of Bible passages is blasphemous and ungodly, as they exclude the name and work of Christ, and propose to regenerate, sanctify and save men by obedience to their rules and principles generally taken from the pagan mysteries of Egypt, India, Mexico, etc.; that the assurance made to candidates for membership, that there is nothing in the lodge conflicting with their duties outside the lodge, is deceitful and false; the obligations to the lodge conflicting with their duties they owe to home, church and state; that the charity, of which they boast, is a farce, as they sometimes spend three-fourths for salaries, regalia and nonsense, and one-fourth only for the support of their own needy members; that the result of their insurance business was that the greater number were defrauded of the expected assistance in time of need.

At the first evening session every chair was taken and more seats were procured. Rev. T. C. Sproul, of Glenwood, Minn., delivered a lecture in English on "The Religion of Secrecy, True and False," followed by Secretary Fenton on "The Fundamental Principles of Freemasonry and their Perversion of the Bible." Rapt attention and great interest was evidenced.

Thursday, the 24th, A. M. a speech in Norwegian was given by Rev. C. E. Gynild, of Willmar, on "The Relation between the Christian Church and the Lodge;" and in the open parliament following, testimonies against the lodges were given by Rev. O. T. Lee of Northwood, Ia., Rev. N. Giere of Belgrade, Minn., Rev. Jno. Halvorson of Minneapolis, Rev. Dr. Johnston of St. Paul, Mr. Rollefson of Willmar, Rev. T. C. Sproul and the chairman, most of the speakers using the English language. In the afternoon committee reports were in order, and officers were elected for the ensuing year.

Prof. H. Hilleboe, of Willmar, president.

Rev. Wm. Fenton, first vice-president and corresponding secretary.

Rev. Jno. Halvorson, of Minneapolis, recording secretary.

Rev. Wenner, of Atwater, Minn., treasurer.

A lecture was delivered by the secretary, on "The Relation of Freemasonry to Mohammedanism in the Light of Christian Truth." The lecture gave the origin, teachings and history of Mohammedanism, with quotations from the Koran; its influence in the world; its denunciation, hatred and persecution of Christianity; the present aspect and tendencies of the Mohammedan world in its relation to the Christians in Armenia and Crete. Going through the ritual of the Mystic Shrine, the obligations, principles, oaths and ceremonies, it was plainly seen how the Masons here worshiped the Mohammedan god, and bound themselves to the abominable religion and atrocious tendencies of the Mohammedan fanatics in the East. The audience was very attentive, although the discourse lasted about one hour.

A general discussion followed, where the many minor societies, as the A. O. U. W., Modern Woodman, Odd-fellows and others, were treated. At several meetings it was shown that the minor societies copied the older and gradually introduced more of their rituals and practices. The last meeting was held on the evening of Thursday, Feb. 24th, in the Opera House, in order to draw a greater number of the city people and lodge friends. Long before the time for opening, the hall was filled to overflowing, but on account of the bitter cold the doors had to be closed.

The feature of the evening was a written lecture by Rev. Dr. Johnston, of St. Paul, on "The Evils of Secret Societies." He was followed by a number of speakers who were seated on the platform. It was noticed that the lodge members present of both sexes were very numerous; laughter and noise was attempted, and threats and curses were later reported from several, but they were hushed and the exercises of the evening were gone through without notable disturbance.

Resolutions were then presented by the committee, expressing thanks to the citizens of Willmar for their kind entertainment of delegates, and to the press of the State for advertising the convention.

WHEREAS it is written: "If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things thou shalt be a good minister of Christ, nourished up in the words of faith and of good doctrine." Be it

Resolved, That we express our recognition in this Scripture of an incentive to faithfulness in warning our brethren against the dangers of secret societies.

Resolved, That we see reason for special thanksgiving to God in the establishment of schools for Christian culture which bear a faithful testimony against the lodge system, where parents and guardians may send their children to receive a thorough training for work in the Church or Christ and the practical duties of citizenship, and we commend all such to our friends for their patronage and support.

A large number of farmers and pastors from the neighboring settlements and counties were hospitably entertained in the homes of the residents. Two collections were taken which more than covered the expenses, and a large number of books were sold, exposing the iniquity of the lodges, both in English and Norwegian.

The lodge members who previously had scoffed at our endeavors, certainly learned to respect the work done; and we hope that the seed of truth here sown in the minds of students and citizens may work like a leaven and spread its influence far and wide. Such a work of education certainly has its blessing from God, and many expressions of gratitude and admiration were made, showing that the people felt it was a needed and valuable work for them and their surroundings.

J. HALVORSON,
Recording Secretary.

—To appeal "so help me God" after the stuff that is repeated in joining a lodge is appalling.

REFORM NEWS.

NEARING THE GREAT APOSTASY.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 4, 1897.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I was glad to read the article on foreign missions; it seems to me to be timely and necessary. There are many young people here quite enthusiastic on foreign missions and do not care to give one thought to the lodge idolatry.

A young Syrian Christian told me the other day that his uncle was converted in Syria, became a minister of Christ, and was driven by persecutions to America, and came to this city where a Masonic member of Dr. Carson's old church waited on him and tried to persuade him to join the Freemasons, assuring him of Presbyterian aid if he did so. The Satanic offer was declined by the Syrian preacher. He is now preaching the Gospel in Egypt.

The papers tell us that Rev. Pleasant Hunter, pastor of a Presbyterian church in Minneapolis, recently assembled the Royal Arcanum and preached to them in favor of secret societies. This same Royal Arcanum had the Metropolitan theatre, in this city, for a play to increase its membership.

Not long ago the Woodmen assembled on the steps of the Central Presbyterian church of this city to have their pictures taken. This is the church that had its church doors tyled with a Freemason and a policeman to keep out an Anti-masonic "cowan." How far are we in point of time from the great apostasy that marks His coming? These pastors say they see, but they are blind. God says, "the mouth of them that speak lies shall be stopped;" but they say that the mouth of them that speak truth shall be stopped. The result is, the Lord comes, and is exactly equal to what God says. But I have written more than I had intended.

Yours truly, W. FENTON.

FROM SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

BRO. WILLIAMS' EASTERN APPOINTMENTS.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 2, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Rev. D. G. Shepherd and the Free Methodist church of Santa Ana can be depended upon as friends of the anti-secrecy cause and foes of the lodge system. Bro. W. W. Curtis, of El Monte, is another true friend of the cause here, who is not afraid to invite the agent to come and speak on the subject. He secured the Salvation Army hall by promise, but when I sent out my bills for advertising, the captain went flat back on him, but Bro. Curtis did not give up. He went across the street, rented the A. O. U. W. hall, paid the cash and notified me to come on at the appointed time, as they could not go back on us now, only by staying away.

When the time came for me to speak, the hall was comfortably filled. The lodgemen were out in full force. One merchant said, "I can tell in five minutes whether he knows anything about what he talks about." From the start he was determined to bluff me. He yelled out, asking me to tell what George Washington said of Freemasonry. I took up the Lodge Lamp and read the extract from Washington's "Farewell Address," and then the extracts from Gov. Ritner's official report concerning Washington's connection with the lodge.

The merchant said, "You can tell that to any who are not Masons."

I answered immediately, "Does the gentleman propose to tell this audience that Masons are not susceptible of truth?"

I then gave him to understand that I was there to deliver an address on the opposite side of secret societies, and did not propose to be bluffed or bulldozed, and they could have the whole year and access to any church in the town to reply to me, but they could not hinder me now. By the time I was half through with my addresss the Masons and Odd-fellows concluded that I knew entirely too much about it for their comfort, and so they made themselves scarce. We had a good time. Here I was introduced to a gentleman by the name of Haddox.

I asked, "Have you any relatives in Ohio by that name?"

"Yes, I have."

I said, "My last charge in Ohio was at Payne, Paulding county. I had a dear friend there by the name of Jacob Haddox. I took three of his children into the church, and lived a year in the same house with one of them.

He says, "Jacob Haddox, of Payne, Ohio, is my father." We were acquainted at once. He says I must come and speak at El Monte again, and visit him and family. Thus we meet friends wherever we go.

A party here tried hard to defend the insurance societies; but I am sure that he, and all present, thought he got the worst of it. He and another took the Lodge Lamp a year. I had the privilege, the past week, to look in several times on the "Congress of Christians," held in the Simpson Tabernacle. The opening address by Rev. Herbert Lathe, pastor of the Congregational church at Pasadena, was by far the best.

He hammered unmercifully the "Higher Criticism," the exchange of the Holy Spirit's help for education, the false methods of fairs and festivals, bazars and tea parties as a means for raising money for God's cause, and contended for the Bible principle of direct giving. The addresses were all good, but this extremely so. It was very evident that the speaker in his heart was opposed to secret societies, though he did not mention them.

We have arranged a preliminary meeting at the pastor's study of the First U. P. church next Tuesday afternoon, to plan for a State convention here, April 14th and 15th. All the friends of the cause in the State are requested to assist in making this a still better convention than the very good one at Seattle. I have arranged appointments for May, with friends as follows:

Metz, Ind., by Rev. G. W. Bechtol.
Sherwood, Ohio, by Rev. E J. Kast.
Montecello, Ohio, 2, by S. Lowry and others.
Grand Rapids, Ohio, 2, by Rev. G. W. Coss.
Elida, Ohio, by Rev. J. M. Sherer.
Lyons, Kan., by John Motter.
Sterling, Kan., Rev. T. J. Allen.

My coming East will depend on my securing at least fifteen more appointments within the next six weeks. Please address me here, or Rev. W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MORE ABOUT THE MINNESOTA CONVENTION.

GLENWOOD, Minn., March 3, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I had the pleasure of attending the Minnesota State Anti-secret Convention, held in Willmar, on Feb. 23 and 24. Your efficient agent, Rev. Wm. Fenton, had evidently been busy and did good work in arranging for the convention. I have seldom seen more interest or a larger attendance at an anti-secret convention. The sturdy sons of Sweden and Norway, robust and hearty of frame and honest of countenance, were out in force. Their preachers are evidently not afraid of being caught in an unpopular convention nor of expressing their anti-secret sentiments boldly and fearlessly. It was refreshing to hear them and see them, when so many who profess to be followers of Christ and foes of darkness appear to be afraid to be seen in such assemblies.

Two addresses were delivered in Scandinavian, in opposition to the secret lodges; and from the earnest attention given by those who were able to understand the language, they were evidently appreciated, and their sentiments indorsed by the large majority of the audience.

Four of the sessions were held in the Willmar

Seminary hall, and were attended by a large proportion of the 235 students of the college. We trust that much good seed was sown in these young hearts which may bring forth the good fruit of keeping them and others out of the dark lodge. These are the minds we desire to reach. It is hard to get a man out who is once entangled in the meshes of the lodge; so many influences operate to keep him there. We imagine it is easier to influence in the right direction the honest, unprejudiced mind by showing up, as we may be able, the deceit, dishonesty and devil worship of the dark institution.

The last meeting on Wednesday evening was held in the Rink. The main address was delivered by Rev. L. A. Johnston, followed by remarks by four or five others. The building was filled to overflowing, and the best of order was maintained, although we were informed that the members of the secret empire were out in force.

It devolved upon the State agent to describe and lay bare the secret abominations and idolatrous mysteries of secrecy. Most of the other speakers dwelt upon the anti-Christian nature of the lodge—its antagonism to Christ, his religion and his church. Abraham Lincoln said: "This Government cannot exist half free and half slave." So the Church of God cannot long exist a church of the living God while her members are affiliated with the kingdom of darkness, and give any part of their allegiance to its king. "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all." "I am the light of the world. He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."

Particular attention was also paid to secret assessment associations, which appear to be the rage in this part of the country at present. Their unbusiness-like principles, their false and deceptive promises and the general dishonesty of their promoters were pointed out.

(Rev.) T. C. SPROUL

FRAUDULENT INSURANCE.

KANSAS CITY, MO., March 2, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Under this head the Kansas City Star of Jan. 27th gets in a ringing editorial on the so-called benevolent insurance orders. Gov. Stone and the Star call loudly on the legislature to take prompt and vigorous action to protect the community against these irresponsible cheap-John fraternities that are "swindling" thousands of apparently intelligent citizens out of their earnings. The "Fraternal Aid," "Knights and Ladies of Security," "A. O. U. W.," "Modern Woodmen" and their ilk are taking in the "suckers" by the regiment and the brigade. It is a serious matter, and again Missouri is in the lead in a crusade that other States should join in at once.

These "miserable humbugs" have stood in the way of the anti-secrecy reform and have given the Masons and Odd-fellows a temporary boom, but the reaction sure to follow will prove a boomerang. A burned child is afraid of the fire; and when these little confidence machines do collapse they will make lots of Anti-masons. How can any truly pious Christian woman get down on her knees and thank the Lord God Almighty for a rainfall of two thousand dollars when her husband dies, when she knows as well as that she lives that this money represents the miserable scrimpings and hard earnings of perhaps twenty poor families for years?

Let every Anti mason in Kansas and Missouri get a copy of that Star and show it to the insurance apologists of lodgery. That editorial will shake anyone's confidence and cause a hesitation when the next fraternal assessment comes. Life insurance, at the best, is a costly, risky and often dangerous experiment. How many sudden and mysterious deaths have followed in the wake of the life insurance agents! It is an awful temptation to get rid of hen-pecked husbands and undesirable relatives. Thousands of ministers and good church people are upholding oath-bound paganism and despotism because of "lodge insurance." They are pitting their souls against a "bogus insurance" policy. They must die to beat the game, and when they are dead their souls are lost. Strange that governors and legislatures must step in between these "swindlers" while professed Christians are joining and abetting the humbugging orders.

Now let the Star and other secular papers assail the major as well as the minor orders that are duping and oppressing the people. Masonry is the old cat and these are the little kittens. When you want to kill a rattlesnake don't jump on his tail; strike the head. When run to earth, these manipulators are invariably Freemasons, and learned their methods in that organization. They are adepts and experts in chicanery, and in the final round-up the grip and sign clears them in the courts, while their poor dupes are left to hold the bag and suck their thumbs. Multitudes, these hard times, are longing for some excuse to drop out of these financial traps that are a vast octopus in every little town, draining the community of its cash. M. N. BUTLER.

GOD'S LAW DEFIED BY CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—It is nothing new for those who are interested in moral reform and temperance legislation to be disappointed at the close of Congress, but in the case of the Fifty-fourth Congress they were both disappointed and deceived. Positive promises were made that the bill prohibiting the sale of intoxicants in the Capitol building and the bill amending the liquor license laws of the District of Columbia would be passed by the Senate. These promises were made before either bill was passed by the House, but although they were passed by the House several months ago, they were not passed by the Senate.

That more than three-fifths of the Senators would have voted for both measures if they had been given an opportunity, is as certain as that the promises that they should be passed were made in good faith; but under the rules of the Senate the opposition of one man, Senator Hill, of New York, was sufficient to prevent a vote on the first named measure, although petitions from temperance and religious organizations in almost every section of the country were presented to the Senate asking that it be passed.

Protests were ignored and the Senate held two business sessions last Sabbath, the excuse being that it was absolutely necessary to do so in order to dispose of the regular appropriation bills. This excuse has grown threadbare from long usage, as these Sunday sessions almost invariably accompany the closing days of every alternate regular session of Congress. They claim it was necessary on account of the status of the appropriation bills, but was not the backward status of the appropriation bills brought about by wasted time, not only during the weeks that the Senate only held short sessions for four days, but by the personal bickerings and sensational speeches of Senators during the sessions held? It should be illegal for Congress to hold a business session on Sabbath, even if it is made to appear in the official record as a continuation of Saturday's session. C. A. S.

LETTERS TO THE MINNESOTA CONVENTION.

REV. W. BARHAM, FT. RIPLEY, MINN., FEB. 5, 1897:—Dear Bro. Fenton.—I have been in the country holding meetings, so your kind letter has remained unanswered. I would be glad to attend the convention, but it is not possible. I bid you Godspeed and pray the Lord to give you great success.

REV. A. WRIGHT, BUSHFORD, MINN., FEB. 13, 1897:—Dear Bro. Fenton.—I am obliged for your invitation to attend the State convention at Willmar. But owing to my being at several conferences during the last few months, I will be unable to attend. I have conspicuously posted the notices you sent me.

L. H. NOREM, SIOUX FALLS, S. DAK., JAN. 25, 1897:—Dear Bro. Fenton.—Oh, how I wish I could be at your convention at Willmar, but my health will not permit. I am longing to get away from Sioux Falls because of no many lodges and saloons. So I wish you to help me sell my lot. I wish to go to some small town where there are Scandinavians. My prayer is that the Lord may be with you always.

REV. C. M. DAMON, GLENVILLE, MINN., FEB. 12, 1897:—Dear Bro. Fenton.—Neither my health nor finances will enable me to do more by way of encouragement of your coming gathering at Willmar, than to send you this note of sympathy. The work of arousing the churches and the conscience of Christian citizens to the Christless character, the arrogance and the danger of the secret lodge system is a thankless, and but for one's faith in the God of righteousness and judgment, a hopeless task. But the cause of truth is not hopeless. Just now I am holding a revival meeting, being transiently in charge of the Free Methodist church here on this south line of the State, with manifest help of the Spirit, and yet the work of the Lord is confronted with a masquerade ball to-night. This looks as though Satan's forces are jubilant. But one must not be dismayed at such exhibitions of his Satanic majesty. The kingdom of Christ is ordained to conquest. "Only be thou strong and very courageous," said the Lord to Joshua, "I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee."

For the first time, in a ministry of thirty years, I was lately trapped into a false relation to the lodge. I was invited to preach the funeral of one an entire stranger to me, and for the express purpose of heading off the Order of Modern Woodmen, with which the lady's husband was indifferently connected, as also another pastor in the place. The friend, into whose hands the entire arrangements had been placed, assured me that no display of the order should be permitted. It was not till I came out at the head of the corpse, after officiating at the house, that I discovered their presence in a body in regalia. To avoid a scene and excitement at such a stage of the service, I performed my part under a semblance of association with them, though I avoided passing between their ranks.

What insufferable arrogance, absurdity and idolatry (is this word too strong?) is involved in the official relations and ceremonies of secret orders at corner-stone layings, and on public occasions, especially such as the above. When will the citizenship of our land resent the affront and throw off a yoke that threatens a dangerous civil and religious tyranny? May you be made strong for the battle, and have a successful convention.

NOTE FROM LONDON.

LONDON, England, Jan. 29, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The nobility of your work in spreading the truth in Christ against the iniquitous lodge system, and the great need of such light in Great Britain, makes me feel closely knit in spirit with you in the United States. I feel that Satan lends all his cunning and wiles to those who bind themselves under these unlawful oaths.

Those who seek to extricate them need all the wisdom of God. They should realize their need of humility and love for souls. I believe that in saving men from the lodge we should separate ourselves from all relations with them, and show them by our manner of life that we truly love them, and only expose the craft in response to the divine direction, "Let your light so shine that others may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

COLLEGE SECRET FRATERNITIES.

STATE UNIVERSITY, IOWA CITY, IA., Feb. 25, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I friend of mine is a subscriber to the Christian Cynosure I have read its many instructive articles with interest. But you have failed to touch one society which, as much as any other, influences the youth of our land. I have failed to notice in any copy of the paper any reference to college fraternities. It is here that the minds of so many of the young men are poisoned, their morals here become corrupted, their highest ideals abased. The initiation rights are even more degrading than those of the greater secret lodges.

You may not feel the full force of the influence of the fraternities; you may not have seen their effects upon young men who have entered college. While they may in a measure owe their origin to such societies as the Masonic, and doubtless pattern after them to a certain extent, yet they directly encourage a young man to enter these older and more powerful lodges. As with all sin, a young man having here obtained his first taste, he is very likely to wish to drink deeper.

The college fraternity is a direct feeder for the Masonic, Knights of Pythias or Odd-fellow lodges. Corrupt in their social relations, the fraternities are opposed to a college spirit. A few men attempt to govern the action of the student body. Perhaps the greatest wrong is to the individual. A young man enters school, pure in mind and body. He joins a "frat;" the change comes at once. He no longer attends religious meetings; he breaks from his old associates and wraps himself, his very existence, within his fraternity halls. Soon he smokes, drinks and uses profanity like an old member. He becomes a scoffer at religion and all things pure and good.

The influence of the college fraternities cannot be over-estimated. I should like very much to read an article from your pen upon this subject. Hoping you may see fit to comply with my request, I remain sincerely,

ASBURY D. ARTHUR.

SOME POINTS CONFIDENTIALLY.

GOODWINE, Ill., March, 3, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Sometime ago a widely-advertised lecture was given on Sabbath, in one of the finest churches in this section of Illinois—a church that cost about $25,000, by a presiding elder. The object of the lecture was to sound the praises of Freemasonry. Thus this grand church, but recently erected, was used as an idol temple. If ever there was a time when we needed bold, fearless, determined and learned men to meet lodge arguments and deception, it is now. We need a host of such men, and women too, such as we had in the anti-slavery struggle.

It does my soul good even yet to read the speeches of Wendell Phillips, Beecher, Lovejoy and others who assaulted the strongholds of American slavery, and to read such books as "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Life of John Brown" and the "Impending Crisis." May the Lord enlist such leaders in this crusade against the lodge—this modern form of heathen idolatry.

A young man related recently how the Modern Woodmen tried to rope him into their order. His wife was interested and went to a lady, whose husband was a member, in order to learn the kind of performance her husband would have to go through. She had heard that this lady's husband had given her some pointers "confidentially," and she consented to give lady number two these pointers, of course "confidentially," and so I will give them to the Cynosure "confidentially." She said, while her husband was changing his undergarments she saw branded on his bare back the letters, "M. W. A.," and she exclaimed:

"What are those letters doing on your back?"

He had to explain that they were painted there with a branding iron in the lodge room, while they played they were burning them in with an icicle.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS

TO SECRETARY W. I. PHILLIPS.

REV. L. A. MUELLER, WALL LAKE, IOWA, FEB. 2, 1897.—I am pleased to see a paper work against secret societies as yours does.

G. B. COLLINS, SWIFTON, ARK., FEB. 5, 1897.—I am an ex-Mason and ex-A. P. A. I was formerly president of the Free Speech League of your city. Now I am a fully saved man and all out for God.

H. S. CURTIS, DUNLAP, KAN., JAN. 26, 1897.—We get so many papers we do not look at more than half of them. But I would give them all up before the Cynosure, as it is good food for all, and especially for the young people.

JOHN BRUNNER, MELLVILLE, IND., FEB. 12, 1897.—I have distributed those tracts you sent me and they are doing good. I heard one young man say, if he had read those tracts a few days sooner he would not have gone into the lodge. Others, I find, are sick of the lodge and soon leave it.

WM. MCCOY, BELLAIRE, OHIO, FEB. 21, 1897.—There is nothing new in the lodge business here. They are moving along in the same old style. They appear to think they are sure of going to heaven if they belong to the lodge and pay up their dues regularly, but are not sure of heaven if they only belong to the church.

REV. R. N. COUNTEE, KANSAS CITY, MO., JAN. 18, 1897.—My health is very much impaired, but I am not anyways alarmed, for I realize I am to do much work in this city for the Master. Do you get the Magnet? I shall have full control of its columns shortly. I hope then to have it speak with no uncertain sound. God bless you and yours.

J. F. BAIRD, BLUE SPRINGS, MO., JAN. 26, 1897.—Many of the best people of this place are earnestly opposed to the lodge, yet they are timid about placing themselves in a position to incur the displeasure of the secretists. Since the lecture of Rev. P. B. Williams in this place last June, the lodges have not been so popular, and it seems that their growth has been much retarded.

LEMUEL HILLERY, TEEGARDEN, IND., FEB. 22, 1897.—I have not forgetten to ask God to bless you in your noble work in opposing that great curse of the church and the nation, secret societies. There is a "Keely Cure" for the whisky and tobacco habit, but there is no cure for the secret society habit but the Word of God. You are faithfully doing your part to save the moral interests of society, by applying this only remedy.

PRES. CHAS. MANCHESTER, FINDLAY COLLEGE, OHIO.—When I was principal of Barkeyville Academy, Pa., you sent me a number of books against secret societies. Our library here at the college needs just such a set of books. If you can send them as you did to the Barkeyville library, I shall be glad to see that they are placed where they will secure a reading and use. [Would that our funds might enable us to comply with this and many similar requests. Will not friends, who have means, consider the importance of salting these fountains of learning with the principles of anti-secrecy?—ED.]

A SKETCH OF MY LIFE.

BY ELDER S. C. KIMBALL.

CHAPTER XLIX.

The first State convention of the New Hampshire Christian Association was held in Story's Hall, Lake Village (now Lakeport), Nov. 23, 24, 1875. Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Elder J. F. Browne and the writer were the principal speakers. The first hour was spent in worship and an excellent spirit prevailed. Bro. Rathbun, a reformed Freemason, briefly related his Masonic experience. Bro. Stoddard spoke in the afternoon, and Bro. Rathbun in the evening.

The second day a constitution was adopted, resolutions passed and a permanent organization formed. J. Franklin Browne was chosen president and the writer, secretary and State agent. We were much indebted to the National Christian Association for sending Bro. Stoddard at great expense to our assistance at this critical time. Bro. Rathbun's services were also very valuable.

I had read Pres. Finney's renunciation and exposition of Freemasonry, and believed it; and yet there was in my mind a lingering apprehension that there must be some mistake about it as applying to present Freemasonry. It hardly seemed possible that high-standing ministers like David Moody, Benjamin Manson, Runnels, True and Mariner could be guilty of taking and keeping the horrible oaths of Freemasonry as described by Pres. Finney.

Bro. Rathbun's experience, lectures and scars, exhibited as witnesses of the truth of his statements, removed all doubt from my mind. He was the first renouncing Freemason I had ever met. Masonic papers made fun of our small numbers and feeble meeting. To human view it seemed so, but two young men were in that convention that our Masonic friends have heard from several times since, Eld. J. F. Browne and Rev. Lucian C. Kimball, then a student at Strafford Academy. As an indirect and remote result of this convention, Rev. E. B. Wylie and John Tanner were given to the reform cause and many others.

Its good influence was not only far-extended in New Hampshire, but quite perceptible in several neighboring States. The cash expense of the convention was $56. The collections amounted to $12.29. It was the privilege of the writer to pay the balance, $43 71, a part of which was long afterwards made up to me by a few friends. The recorded number of sympathizers in attendance at this meeting was twenty-one. Of this number Elders J. G. Smith and I. Jackson, Harris Leavitt and Ezra Maxfield have fallen asleep. It is pleasant to remember that we have stood up for right when its confessed friends were few. To God be all the glory.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON.

BY REV. J. B. GALLOWAY.

That ye be not soon shaken in mind or be troubled...,... as that the day of the Lord is now present. 2 Thess. 2:2. (R. V.)

Bro. Milligan has given us two fine discourses on this verse. I have been asked to say a word on the other side; and I hope to do so without making myself obnoxious to the brother or anyone else. The difference between the two schools of interpretation, in the main, has been fairly stated. So I will endeavor to avoid repetitions.

1. I would remark that the opening verses of this chapter are clearly on the side of the Pre-millenarian. The Thessalonians being, as yet, illy instructed in regard to this subject, were on the verge of falling into a grevious error with regard to the day of the Lord. Their mistake was as to the time. The revised reading is no doubt correct as given above. They thought on account of the dreadful times and fierce persecutions that the day of the Lord had actually set in, and that they perhaps were left behind to endure the great tribulation. Hence he entreats and assures them by two events, viz., the coming of the Lord and our gathering together unto him. These it would seem must precede the day of the Lord. This leads us to notice:

2. That there is a distinction between the day of the Lord and the coming of the Lord. Although they are closely related, they are not one and the same thing. The day of the Lord is an extended period, probably including the millennium, the terrible tribulations preceding and the little season succeeding. It would require a volume to unfold what is said of this day in both Testaments. All things are not going to continue as they are or were, if the book of Revelation is true.

As to the coming of the Lord, most Pre-millenarians believe that it is divided into at least two stages: First, his coming for his saints; and second, his coming with them. The coming referred to in our text is for his saints, where he meets them in the air. See 1 Thess. 4: 14-18: "We entreat you by the coming of the Lord, and by our gathering together unto him." How long this coming and gathering will be before he begins to speak to the nations in wrath and wield his rod of iron (Ps. 2.), we cannot say; but before the day of the Lord fully sets in, the mystery of iniquity will become manifest in the man of sin and son of perdition. This mystery has had its rise, and it will have its fall in this dispensation, viz, "by the breath of his mouth and the manifestation of his presence," verse 8; also, 1:9. This destruction of mighty powers and evil workers all takes place before the thousand years of peace and glory, and that, too, by the Parousia of the Lord. Therefore the personal presence or coming of the Lord is pre-millennial.

We have no sympathy with interpretations which wrest the plainest passages of the Word, especially when there is no necessity for it. We admire his victory at the cross and over death—why should we not also love his appearing and glory in the display of his mighty power in the destruction of the man of sin, together with all the powers of darkness that have cursed the earth and will continue to do so until the consummation?

> "The just shall flourish in His day;
> While lasts the moon shall peace extend;
> From sea to sea shall be his sway,
> And from the river to earth's end."—Ps. 72.

In another sermonette we will endeavor to show why these things will not be accomplished by present means.

NIAGARA FALLS.

How Long the Great Cataract Will Probably Endure.

Professor Spencer has made calculations on behalf of the state reservation commissioners in which he says that the huge cataract which has tumbled over the Niagara river precipice for 31,000 years cannot continue that monotonous operation for more than 5,000 more. Professor Spencer's computations are very carefully reasoned, being based mainly on the rate of recession during the last half century, plus all other collateral data. He also takes for granted that the rate of erosion has always been, and will always continue to be, the same—a supposition which it is by no means impossible to dispute. However, many other estimates equally plausible have been made. It would appear indeed that whenever a geologist finds time hanging heavily on his hands, he utilizes it by a fresh recalculation of the possible birth and death of Niagara. More than 60 years ago it was estimated that in 30,000 years the 25 miles between the falls and Lake Erie will have been worn away and the Niagara river have become a placid link between it and Lake Ontario. It is almost universally accepted that the original fall was between Lewiston ridge and Queenstown heights, about seven miles lower down. The excavation of the gorge stretching between this point and the present cataract is variously estimated to have occupied from 200,000 years to a seventh of that time. But even this is denied by Dr. Julius Pohlman, who contends that the gorge between the falls and the whirlpool is older than the ice age.

How to Remove Grease Stains.

A mixture which is excellent for removing grease stains from carpets and clothing is made of 2 ounces of ammonia, 2 ounces of white castile soap, an ounce of glycerin and an ounce of ether. Cut the soap into small pieces and dissolve in a pint of water over the fire; then add 2 quarts of water and the other ingredients. This should then be mixed with more water in the proportion of a teacup to an ordinary sized pailful. The soiled articles should be thoroughly washed in this.

How Curry Powder Is Made.

Pepper, ginger, garlic, coriander seed and various other strong spices are used in the manufacture of this condiment, so highly prized in the east, and it gives a very pleasant flavor when judiciously used. The quantity must depend upon its strength and the degree of spiceness desired. Many persons who are fond of curry find it disagrees with them when too much is used.

How to Clean Lamp Wicks.

When lamp wicks become hard, work badly and emit an offensive odor, boil them in strong soap suds, rinse and wipe dry.

When you wish to extinguish a light, turn it down quite low; then with a light breath from the top of the chimney put it out. Thus you will avoid danger and a disagreeable odor.

How to Select Shades of Green.

This color never should be chosen without being seen by artificial light. Pale olive and other shades of green are much used for wall papers, furniture stuff and draperies, but some of the colors that are beautiful in the sunlight are a gloomy brown shade at night.

How to Wash Oilcloth.

After washing oilcloth and linoleum be sure to dry it properly. If left damp, it will speedily rot and finally become totally spoiled. It is a great mistake to use too much water for washing it. The cloth should be wrung out and passed over the surface.

How to Improve Old Furniture.

For a first coat there is nothing equal to raw oil. If the article is made of any hard wood, one coat will be sufficient. If of pine, two or three may be desirable. Simply apply with a brush and let it dry. Repeat, if necessary, and then sandpaper until smooth. For any soft wood, finish with a coat of varnish such as any painter can supply. But if you have been more ambitious and made your desk or cabinet or what not of hard wood, you must use beeswax and turpentine if you would have a really beautiful polish that will grow brighter as the years go by. Melt the beeswax with a little turpentine, apply with a flannel rag, rub in with a soft brush—an old nailbrush is good—and finish the polishing with old flannel. This gives a brilliant polish quite different from the shiny surface of a varnished article.

How to Make Limewater.

Take a lump of pure lime as large as a goose egg and put it in a quart glass jar; fill the jar with cold water and let stand. What is not absorbed by the water will remain in the bottom; then fill the jar again with water. Two teaspoonfuls to a tumbler of milk is the right proportion.

How Servants' Caps Should Be Made.

The sweeping cap is made of gingham and it is not beautiful. It is circular in shape and entirely covers the hair of the sweeper. It is purely utilitarian. It is made of material heavy enough to prevent the dust from filtering through.

The waitress' cap may be either square or triangular. In either case a point lies directly above the middle of the forehead of the wearer.

The nurses' caps are round, not unlike the sweepers' in shape. They make up for their simplicity of form by their elaborate material.

How to Administer Medicine to Infants.

In giving medicine in liquid form to a baby place the point of the spoon containing the medicine against the roof of the mouth. Administered it in this way it will be impossible for the child to choke or eject the medicine.

How to Darken Brown Boots.

Wash constantly with saddle soap and soda water. The soda has the effect of gradually darkening the leather and does not destroy it. After the boots are dry, polish with a dark polish.

How to Take Nauseous Medicine.

The patient should first take a bit of alum into the mouth. The medicine can then be taken with as much ease as though it were so much sugar.

PEACH TREES.

FOR THE NORTH. Why not grow your own peaches? I have an Iowa peach that has been grown in the State for sixty years. The original tree is still alive and fruiting.

This peach is of good size, best quality, free stone, and has fruited unprotected after winters of 30 degrees below zero.

It is the peach for the North Send for prices and history; also prices of other reliable nursery stock.

THE LODGE IN POLITICS.

An excellent editorial in the Century of May last, on "The Mischief of the A. P. A.," says: "The political success of this conspiracy is due, of course, to the machine politicians. A secret organization whose vote can be controled almost absolutely, whose official head can promise to throw it bodily into either side of the scale, does not need to have a very large membership in order that it may dictate nearly all the nominations of one or the other of the two parties. If twenty or even ten per cent of the voters of a community can be handled in this way, one of the parties will be sure to give their leaders nearly everything they ask for. Ambitious minor politicians will make haste to join the society; there will be candidates enough in its membership to fill all the offices; and for a time the party which secures its alliance is sure to elect its candidate. In this way, in many communities, the control of one or the other of the parties has passed almost entirely into the hands of the 'patriotic' orders."

BALAK AND BALAAM.

The king of Moab, apprehensive of danger, called a council. An embassy was dispatched to a prophet of reputation. Balaam entertained the messengers. The Lord told the prophet definitely what he should not do, but he parlied with the tempting bribe. He entertained a second and more noted delegation. God consented and Balaam started. The angel warned and withstood him in the way. He confessed his sin but persisted in his course. Balak received him with flattering words. The prophet protested his fealty to God, but consented to worship with the heathen king in the high places of Moab. God answered by a message, of which Balak grievously complained but still persisted. Balaam again yielded and received from the Lord a more severe rebuke than the preceding. Balak asked the Lord to stand neutral (neither curse nor bless) but sought and obtained a further parley. When the final word came the king was wroth, and the prophet apologized by putting the responsibility upon God. He then suggested means for Israel's corruption, and departed.

SERIOUS QUESTIONS SUGGESTED.

This Bible narrative raises some important questions:

Was Balaam a prophet of the Lord? Should he have obeyed the word of the Lord without parley? Was he forgiven when he confessed but did not forsake his sin? Did Balak seek the honor or the destruction of God's people? After protesting his fealty to God, was the prophet justified in worshiping with an idolatrous king? Which was most consistent, the prophet or the king? Which showed truest devotion to the interest he represented? Was the prophet justified in shielding himself by putting the responsibility upon God? Was it Satan or the Holy Spirit who suggested means for Israel's corruption and captivity? Does not the sequel show that Balaam left the throne and kingdom of Balak stronger than when he came?

But these queries suggest others more practical:

Do prominent evangelists compromise with Baal-zebub when in revival campaigns they follow the example of Balaam in Moab by yoking up with adhering lodge priests? Was idolatry more offensive to God in the high places of Moab than the same sin in secret chambers in our day? Has the word of God less authority now than when he spoke to Balaam? Does the modern Baal-worshiper honor or corrupt the Church of Christ? Is God pleased with religious service in which Christian ministers and idolatrous priests unite in worship, as did Balak and Balaam in the high places of Moab? Which is most consistent, the minister who adheres to his lodge like Balak to his altars, or the minister who classes the lodge with the saloon and the brothel, and then fellowships its high priest as a brother in the Lord? Is it Satan or the Holy Spirit who suggests an indiscriminate commingling of Odd-fellow and Masonic priests with Christians as preachers and teachers in our modern revival meetings?

PAPISH ARROGANCE.

In an article commending the sale of "indulgences"—a practice which led Luther to begin the great European Reformation in 1517—the Western Catholic News observes:

"No other religious body but the Catholic Church has the power or right to grant indulgence. No more have they the right to preach the Gospel or administer sacraments; in fact, they have no right, power or authority from God to perform any of those spiritual functions. Their assumed right is acquired from men like themselves. But Christ said to his church, 'I will give to thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven. Whatsoever thou shalt loose upon earth shall be loosed also in heaven.' Here was full power and authority to grant or to refuse to grant indulgence."

"If ye love me keep my commandments." "Ye are my disciples if ye do whatsoever I command you," is the principle that determines the true church from the false. If the Church of Rome measures up the closest to this standard; if the fewest of its members are in the saloon business or occupy the cells of our prisons, or are members of secret lodges, then they may talk with some consistency about having the keys of the kingdom of heaven.

SOWING IN GOOD GROUND.

Last week Secretary Phillips attended the conference on Christian Stewardship, which the several Baptist Missionary Societies held in this city. He sought to show them why Christian stewardship included sustaining the National Christian Association by circulating a tract from which we quote:

"It is plain that the church should be the great reforming and benevolent agency in the world. By right there would never be societies for the promotion of temperance, anti-slavery, opposition to secret societies, or other moral reforms. The only excuse for the origination and maintenance of these societies is that the church becomes worldly, conservative or cowardly, and refuses to perform its duty. When the liquor shop, the lodge, the tobacco farm, the auction-block or any other moral evil becomes intrenched in the church, individuals must combine for the overthrow of that specific iniquity. When that work is accomplished the society will naturally dissolve, while the church, intended to antagonize not some evil but all evil, to maintain not some truth but all truth, will live on.

"For a time, however, all those who are enlightened respecting the vast evils resulting from secret orders should make some offering each year to diffuse information concerning them. We are not giving for mere temporal relief when we teach men the dangers arising from secretism; we are warning them against a paganism that destroys the soul. Our labor is not to advance some one sect, but to save men from Christ-rejecting lodges, which are destroying all churches and tending to make them retreats for women and children. The ruin of secret orders would tend to restore our Sabbath, which they use for their railroad travel to conclaves, etc. It would also help to close the saloons which are gay with bunting when a lodge conclave comes to town. We earnestly request all those who love openness, fair play among men, and, above all, the church of Jesus Christ, to send to our Treasurer, W. I. Phillips, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill., at once some offering for the work."

MOODY, JONES AND MURPHY IN BOSTON.

The Boston Journal, of recent date, publishes an extract from a sermon by Rev. J. M. Foster, in which he says of the three evangelists' work in that city:

"These evangelists are entirely unlike. Murphy makes pathetic appeals to the drinking man; Jones smites sin, hypocrisy and double dealing. Quit your meanness, is his message. Moody is an all-round reformer. They are like David's three mighty men, but Moody excels the others. They are all alike in this, that they appeal to the emotions, and seek to reach results through that channel. They make their audiences laugh and cry alternately, and people go expecting this, and they respond with a promptness that shows they are alive to the occasion.

"Now this has a tendency to unfit them for the quiet ministrations of the regular pastor. The pastor addresses himself to the intelligence, and through that reaches the conscience. These addresses by the evangelists and the sermons by the pastors compare as a novel to an essay on philosophy. And after people have been gratified in this way for a month they are apt to think the regular services in their churches uninteresting.

"It is also known that Sam Jones was made a Knight Templar in Rome, Ga., on Dec. 26, 1896. This fact was published all over the country. He had taken the Apprentice oath, to have his throat cut from ear to ear if he revealed the secrets; the Fellow Craft oath, to have his heart cut out, and the Master Mason's oath, to have his bowels taken out if he revealed their secrets. And he drank wine out of a human skull as a part of the rite of initiation. He stood before Boston as an advertisement of the Masonic lodge without saying a word. He was a living epistle of Masonry, known and read of all our citizens. Mr. Moody is not a member of any secret society. But his meetings are held in Tremont Temple, and the pastor of that church, Rev. Geo. C. Lorimer, D. D., is a Knight Templar and a 33 degree Mason, and in clasping hands with him the lodge received a quasi endorsement. If Jesus Christ were here, would he stand beside a member of the lodge in such a work and not rebuke him? I am sure he would not. We are his true yokefellows. 'Take my yoke upon you.' We should do as he would do. 'Come out from among them, and be ye separate.' Would that every lodge were banished from our land."

ANOTHER OF THE PLAGUES OF EGYPT.

The rapid rise of secret societies is illustrated by one of recent date. In the cipher of "Ecce Orienti," Essene is used as a substitute to disguise Freemason. It is now being used as a designation by "the Knights of the Ancient Essenic Order," six thousand of which were initiated in fifteen months in Massachusetts, and it is believed that twenty thousand will be initiated in eighteen months in New York. The most of its membership of forty-five thousand are at present in the Western and New England States according to the Utica, N. Y. papers. It is founded upon the strict life of the Ancient Essenes, but is undoubtedly intended for a cover to orgies and debauchery, and this is why it is said to be heartily favored by Masons, Odd-fellows and other secret societies.

Our readers will note that we have quoted frequently of late from a book entitled "A Conspiracy Against all Religions and Governments." It was written by an Edinburgh professor and published in New York in 1798. We attach great importance to it because it was the first Anti-masonic book on record. The prominence of the author, who was a Freemason and distinguished educator, and who had intimate relations with European governments, and who was familiar with the actors and history of the French Revolution, all contribute to make this book the most striking testimony against the lodge hitherto published. It is highly probable that this book had much to do in opening the eyes of William Morgan and the Anti-masons of his time.

The following facts regarding the life of Dr. John Robison, the author of this remarkable book, we take from Johnston's Universal Cyclopædia.

He was born at Boghall, Sterlingshire, Scotland, in 1739, and graduated at the University of Glasgow in 1756. He was employed as tutor in the British Navy, and accompanied the expedition to Quebec in 1759. He was called to the professorship of Natural Philosophy in Glasgow University in 1766. He went to Russia as secretary to Admiral Sir Charles Knowles in 1770, and was made inspector of the corps of Marine Cadets at Cronstadt, with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, in 1772. He was professor of Natural Philosophy in the University of Edinburgh from 1774 till his death, Jan. 30, 1805.

Besides his book on Masonic conspiracy, he was the author, in 1803, of two volumes of lectures on the Elements of Chemistry. In 1804 he published "Elements of Mechanical Philosophy." He was also the author of numerous contributions on natural science to the Encyclopædia Britannica, and of four volumes entitled "A System of Mechanical Philosophy."

PERSONAL MENTION.

—A professor in Willmar Seminary writes: "The convention created quite a stir; secret societies are discussed everywhere; in the stores, barbershops and on the streets. The secret society men say the agitation will serve as an advertisement for them, but still they are indignant."

—Rev. J. P. Stoddard writes: "Bro. Phillips' article in last Cynosure I have read with great interest and satisfaction. It is timely and a true bill. It cannot fail to do great good. It is the very best thing I have seen on missions, and hits the nail on the head. If you put it in tract form please send me 1,000 or more, C. O. D., for Boston."

—Rev. J. M. Wylie, of the Chicago U. P. Mission, writes: "The last number of the Cynosure is of very special value. I am coming more and more to see the evil of secretism as a great arm of anti-christ. I recently met old Mr. White, of South Chicago, who says he has been brought to see the evil of secret societies by reading the Cynosure."

—Mrs. Diantha M. Myers, of Independence, Iowa, writes: "I have only kept the Cynosures long enough to read them and have sent them to different parties. I have always believed secret orders to be a very bad thing. I would not take a good deal for what I have learned through your papers. Secret orders are much worse than I had suspected."

—Rev. F. J. Davidson, pastor of the St. Matthew Baptist church, New Orleans, whose church was twice burned in recent years, writes us that his residence was again destroyed by fire on the night of Jan. 25, together with the greater part of his household goods. Bro. Davidson has long held aloft the anti-secret standard in New Orleans, and he has the deep sympathy of our readers.

—Bro. C. Coleman, of Sabetha, Kan., writes: "We have three churches furnished after modern style and using various methods to raise money. One of them recently closed a four-weeks' revival effort with no special results. We have four Masonic physicians. One of them waited on a sick family, which was a county charge, and presented his bill for $100. The blighting influence of Freemasonry is everywhere felt."

—Rev. O. H. Perry, of the M. E. church, Hanover, Mich, writes: "Rev. A. A. Knappen, a superannuate of the Michigan Conference, has been elected Grand Lecturer of the State. I wish to discuss this proposition in a debate. 'Masonry is a religion. It is not Christian; hence a Christian cannot be loyal to both at the same time.' I have an idea that the ministry could be made dreadfully uncomfortable if followed up persistently with such a challenge."

—"Rev. J. M. Foster, of the Chambers' Street Presbyterian church at Boston," says the Orange, (Mass.) Enterprise, "makes a serious mistake when he refers to Freemasonry as an evil, as he did in a sermon a week ago last Sabbath. Furthermore he lowers himself in the estimation of those who do know, by pretending to state facts relating to the secret work of the order, of which he knows nothing. He winds up with this statement: 'Would that every lodge were banished.' This may be a Christian spirit, but we want none of that kind."

—Ex-President Harrison has written of "A Day with the President at His Desk" for the March Ladies' Home Journal. The article is said to be singularly interesting in the detail with which it describes the wearisome routine of the President. It is said that General Harrison, in this article, has delivered himself with great directness and vigor, relative to the annoyances that are visited upon a Chief Executive by persistent office-seekers, and he suggests a unique plan by which the President's burdens in that direction could be greatly lightened, and he be enabled to devote more attention to more important matters.

—Bro. T. B. Arnold, one of our Board of Directors, is superintendent of the Chicago Industrial Home at Woodstock, Ill. It is a home for destitute children, and has two buildings and a forty-three-acre farm. Bro. Arnold held meetings recently in the interests of this home at Crystal Lake and Marengo. He is now arranging for a trip as far as Pennsylvania, on which he will hold meetings and find homes for orphaned children.

—The Preacher's Magazine for March, with a table of contents of great excellency, is at hand. A sermon, by Rev. W. L. Watkinson, on the "Sympathy of Christ," is a choice production. "With Both Hands" is the title of Rev. Mark Guy Pearse's superior paper. "The Parable of the Sower," by Rev. A. H. Walker, is a delightful study. The Homiletical matter is very rich and full. "The Ascension," "Pleasing God," "The Two Ways," "Hager's Escape," "Obedience and its Blessings," and "Power for Service" are among the subjects treated by able pens. $1 50 per year. Wilbur B. Ketcham, Publisher, 2 Cooper Union, New York.

—Mrs. Lizzie McClelland of New Castle, Pa., writes: "For the encouragement of others in getting signatures to petitions, I got four to sign it who were members of secret orders. They confessed that the lodge was wrong. One said the example of his pastor who belonged to a secret society stood in his way. An Odd-fellow wished to sign but his wife would not consent, for she said the night he went to lodge was the only night he came home sober. Another said I was like Paul when he persecuted the church, but afterward saw his sin and repented. But nevertheless I will continue to persecute the secret lodge, for I can't find one iota of sanction for it in the Bible."

—Rev. H. N. Couden, Chaplain of the House of Representatives, said in an address at Washington, a good word for the prohibition work that is being done by the Salvation Army; and Representative Willis, of Delaware, who said he thought the temperance advocates had good reason to feel encouraged; that prohibition was slowly gaining like the spread of the Gospel, and the saloon would eventually have to go. He denounced the saloon as immoral, the enemy of law, peace and the community, and the producer of poverty and crime, and said that enough money was spent in the saloons of the United States every year to pay off the national debt. He closed by expressing the opinion that the Anti-Saloon League's plan and platform was the best yet presented, and that it would succeed in abolishing the saloon.

—Walter N. Brubaker, of Rockton, Pa., writes: "Rev. W. B. Stoddard was with us last December and gave us two lectures on Freemasonry. I was one of those who subscribed for the Cynosure, and find it as its name implies a true pole star. I supply three of my neighbors with the paper by turns. I do not know all that is done in the lodge, but I know that Christ said, 'In secret have I said nothing,' and what is written in Rev. 13th chapter. Last Sabbath the P. O. S. of A. met at their hall and marched to the Lutheran church to hear the sermon. There were nineteen wearing their regalia, and in that number there were not more than five professors of religion. The rest were all acknowledged followers of Satan. Verily it looked as though they had never read 2 Cor. 6:14, 15. May all read and think of these things, is my prayer."

—Mrs. Ballington Booth is writing two little volumes which will soon be published by the A. D. Randolph Company. One of them, under the title "Look Up and Hope," is specially prepared for distribution among the prisoners in the various prisons where Mrs. Booth has taken up her work. The other volume under the title of "Branded" is an account of Mrs. Booth's prison work which has attracted such wide attention and commendation. Shortly after the inception of the Volunteers of America, Mrs. Booth took up the great and needy field of work represented by our State prisons. Since then she has come into personal touch with many prisoners, and the thousands of letters she has received from those who are full of new hopes, brave resolves and blessed experiences will do much towards disproving all heretofore arguments against the possibility of reclaiming the convict.

—Bro. T. B. Arnold, an extensive publisher of this city, at 104 Franklin St., is publishing this year a new Sabbath-school lesson leaf entitled, "Inductive Lesson Study," prepared by Abbie C. Morrow. It has, among others, the following advantages: It requires study of the lesson at home. The answers being written are thereby fixed on the memory of the student. All the scholars answer all the questions. While one member is reading his answer, great interest will be awakened in other members of the class, by watching to see if his answer agrees with their own. The answers being written, the teacher will be able to mark every scholar's work accurately and give each the proper credit for correct answers. It will inspire the teacher to study the lesson as well as the scholar, that she may be able to mark the lessons correctly. And best of all, it opens and applies the Scriptures in the most forcible and convincing manner. The Bible is its own best commentator when "rightly divided." Under Mrs. Morrow's apt and able hand what would at first appear as a "dry" lesson is found full of interest and profit. To get this new system introduced, he offers to send this leaf the first quarter on trial at half price, or 1¼ cents each per quarter.

TRIBUTE TO WALLACE J. GLADWIN.

(From the India Watchman of January, 1897.)

The India Watchman has been a faithful witness to both natives and Europeans under Bro. Gladwin's management, and hence it is proper to call the following fruitage a tribute to his memory:

We are glad to see that some of the Watchman literature is taking effect in the following practical way:—"Since reading your Masonic tracts, I am convinced that a true child of God must not belong to such an organization; and so, after nearly twenty years' service in the ranks of Freemasonry, during which time I have gone through all the different degrees, I gladly relinquish them for the sake of the truth. I am determined never to enter a lodge room again."

Another from the same paper:

"I was a 32nd degree Mason and have been a member of several secret societies. In all that I belonged to, the association was with the men of the world, without respect to their religion. Such men as atheiests, infidels, heathen, and professing Christians can all unite together in these secret associations, on an equality. These things led me to see I was going contrary to the Word of God. (2 Cor. 6: 14-16.) I saw that the unlawful oaths that I was required to take were blasphemous. If I had to join a society where I was required to take an oath of secrecy, I could not do it and live a Christian life. My chief duty as a Christian man was to serve God—to give him all my mind, soul, heart and strength. I could not do that and belong to some of these secret organizations. I saw that they were antagonistic to the Gospel, and to Christian life and growth. 'No man can serve two masters.' I could not serve my God and my lodge. I made up my mind to stand by God and the truth. On that line I have been wonderfully blessed."

(From the India Bombay Guardian of January, 1897.

Rev. W. E. Robbins, a missionary, said he had known W J. Gladwin for more than twenty-three years; intimately for fifteen. Few people were aware how successful he was as a missionary. After four years in North India, Mr. Gladwin joined the South India M. E. Conference and was stationed at Nagpur. Previously that station, with the adjoining one of Kamptee, had only been visited by Methodists, but in two years of work there, Mr. Gladwin built up in both stations good, live congregations, many of the members remaining to this present day, while others have fallen asleep. Mr. Robbins felt that he would be satisfied if, when his turn came to leave this world, he could show as much good, lasting work as Bro. Gladwin.

Rev. C. B. Ward, another missionary, wrote to the Bombay Guardian:

As says the Guardian, his character and work has been "unique." But I sincerely doubt, if the facts were known as God knows them, that ten men in India can be found who have in this generation exerted so wide and effectual an influence for the glory of God in so many ways as has W. J. Gladwin. His temperament and mental shade was very different from mine. But in the work of God we have been one to a greater degree than our friends have ever known. Among the three men who, since my conversion in 1869, have exercised the greater influence for good, Bro. Gladwin stands by far the first. William Taylor made an impression on my character that will outwear the sun. Simon Peter Jacobs helped to mightily anchor me in the eternal God. But Bro. Gladwin has done more than all others to help me.

PURSUED BY WOLVES

THRILLING EXPERIENCE OF A NORTH DAKOTA EMBEZZLER.

Julius Sorenson, Who Took Northern Pacific Express Funds, Underwent Terrible Suffering In His Flight—Nearly Frozen to Death and Eaten by Wolves.

Julius Sorenson, who embezzled $600 of Northern Pacific express funds while agent at Grand Harbor, Ramsey county, N. D., has been arrested and part of the money recovered. He confessed to the crime and agreed to return without requisition papers. His adventures in escaping from the snow bound town read like a romance.

As a result of a poker game New Year's day Sorenson appropriated $300 of the express company's money. The discrepancy was discovered by officials the following day, and a warrant was sworn out for his arrest, but before it could be served Sorenson took $300 more and in the dead of night left Grand Harbor. A terrible snowstorm was raging at the time, with the thermometer below zero, and all the railroads were blockaded. Sorenson's only avenue of escape lay in walking, and at 9 o'clock he commenced his journey to Devil's Lake, the nearest town, a distance of nine miles. The fugitive walked along the railroad tracks. He was severely frozen when he reached his destination, which was five hours after he started. Fearful that the officials at Devil's Lake would be notified of his departure from Grand Harbor, Sorenson walked across the lake to Fort Totten. The following morning he walked to New Rockford, 19 miles from Fort Totten.

The fugitive remained in New Rockford during that day, and at night again commenced his tedious and perilous journey to a place of safety. He chose the Northern Pacific railroad tracks, and when between Carrington and Jamestown a new danger came upon him. Dismal howls of the prairie wolf were heard all round him, and not infrequently one of the hungry beasts ran up closely to him. Sorenson was unarmed, save for a stout club he had with him. He had lived in Dakota for several years and was well aware that at this time of the year wolves are very ferocious. It was nearly midnight, and the howls and yelps of the animals could be plainly heard on all sides. The cries became more distinct at every step, and Sorenson knew that he was being surrounded. After walking for over a mile Sorenson saw a one story log house, and he hastened across the prairie toward it. The doors were closed, and he was unable to open them. The wolves by this time were gathered in great numbers.

"It seemed that the country was alive with the animals," he said. "I tried the doors of the hut, but could not open them. I finally found a long plank, and I raised this to the top of the house and crawled on to the roof, pulling the plank after me. The wolves remained near the house until daybreak and then left. I walked to the town of Spiritwood, and there caught a train for St. Paul. Before going into the city I disguised myself as a farmer because I was afraid the police would arrest me. I bought a paper, and the first thing I read was a dispatch from Grand Harbor that I was wanted there for embezzling the express company's money. I did not remain in St. Paul long and took a train for Chicago."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Ian Maclaren on American Life.

I was favorably impressed with the home life of America, because in all essential features it resembles the life in our English homes. The great difficulty is, of course, with servants, and persons of moderate income find it impossible to have their households thoroughly equipped in this respect. The richest classes aim at a close imitation of English country house life. Every visitor to America would agree that it is an expensive country. Prices are higher than we are accustomed to, except, perhaps, in the case of food. I doubt whether the large salaries paid in the States really represent a larger income than our own rates of payment. For a public man living in New York £3,000 a year would not go further, I imagine, than £1,000 or £1,200 in this country.—Interview in British Weekly.

A Hustler Indeed.

One man in Kansas who hustles with something besides his mouth is S. P. Leitner of Pawnee Rock, who had a new house on the site of one that was burned within 24 hours after the fire.

CURRENT EVENTS.

A bill has been introduced in the legislature of California appropriating the sum of $15,000 for a monument to be erected in Golden Gate park, San Francisco, in commemoration of the life and services of Colonel Edward D. Baker.

A prisoner of the Stillwater (Minn.) jail who ran away while on parole in 1895 has written the warden a letter asking if he may return. Transportation has been sent him, and he is returning alone to serve the remaining seven years of his term.

Prominent negroes in Atlanta are considering an enterprise which, if successful, will demonstrate the fact that negro labor is competent to do the work in cotton mills. The plan is to raise a capital stock of $25,000, divided into shares of $25 each, and with this to start a cotton mill which will be run by colored men only.

Under an agreement between the city authorities and the county court an experiment is being tried in Sedalia which promises satisfactory results. The prisoners from the county jail are employed in cleaning the city streets, the municipality paying the cost of the guards. The first day's trial of the scheme was successful in every way.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning March 14. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—How the Christian Endeavor pledge strengthens the Christian life.—II Kings xxiii, 1-3, 21-25.

The opposition to a religious pledge, such as the Endeavor pledge, is unreasonable and unjust. There is no important relation in life where pledges are not prominent. In the business world men take solemn vows and obligations upon themselves. In the political world men in being conducted into public office take most solemn oaths that they will faithfully discharge the duties of their office. The pledge forms an important part in the most sacred of all our social relations, that of matrimony.

This opposition is also unscriptural. The most devout servants of God in the Bible took solemn vows upon themselves. Josiah was a good king and a faithful servant of God. No one questions these facts. Yet he took a pledge upon himself and had all Judah do the same. This pledge was taken at the time of the finding of the lost book of the law of Hilkiah, the priest. It consisted in renewing the covenant which had originally been made between God and his people at Mount Horeb. This pledge had for the time at least two good effects upon the people, and these illustrate how the Christian Endeavor pledge strengthens the Christian life.

1. The Christian Endeavor pledge strengthens the Christian life by keeping us more faithfully in the path of Christian duty. This was the first effect upon the people of Judah when they renewed the covenant with God. They took the covenant upon them, and it kept them faithful. A pledge helps us to be faithful to God and to Christian duties. It places an additional obligation upon us to be faithful. In being faithless we not only sin in this way against God, but also in the breaking of the pledge. Human nature is weak. We need about us every incentive to right living and right doing. A solemn pledge is such an incentive. No one can question this fact. The drunkard who takes the temperance pledge makes a more determined effort to resist the temptation to drink than if he had not taken the pledge, and in the vast majority of cases with greater success. A pledge strengthens our purpose to do right, and in so doing helps us to do right.

2. The Christian Endeavor pledge strengthens us in our Christian life by restraining us from evil. Josiah because of his covenant not only kept faithful to God, but also put away evil from the people. He did away with all things that were abominations to God. Pledges help us to be faithful in duty and restrain us from evil, the two necessities to a strong Christian life. We must not only learn to do well, but also cease to do evil. The Christian Endeavor pledge helps us to do both, and in so doing strengthens our lives.

Preparing For the Convention.

General Secretary Baer of the Christian Endeavor society recently made a trip to the Pacific coast in the interests of the San Francisco convention. He found interest in the approaching convention high among the young people and the churches and preparations well advanced. The convention meetings will be held in two great auditoriums, one seating 10,000 persons and the other 6,000. The weather will be too cold in San Francisco to permit the committee to make use of the convention tents.

A Privilege.

Prayer is a privilege rather than a duty. God does not need our prayers, but we need His help and grace. It is a great condescension on His part to ask us to make known our requests unto Him, infinitely more so than it would be for a king to invite the petitions of his humble subjects. But God knoweth our frame. He remembereth that we are dust, and as He is our Father in Christ Jesus He pitieth His children and is not deaf to their sighings and longings.—Lutheran.

C. E. Societies In Germany.

Fifty Endeavorers, most of them from widely separated parts of America and Canada, were present at a Christian Endeavor reception given by Dr. and Mrs. Clark in Berlin a few weeks ago. A society is to be formed in the American church at Berlin, and another is already in operation in the American and British church at Leipsic.

Laziness.

A VOLCANIC BUBBLE.

An Extraordinary Freak of Nature Near the Mexican City of Puebla.

The Rev. F. S. Bortain of Puebla writes as follows: "It may be of interest to some of the readers of The Herald who visit Puebla to know of one of the less visited attractions in the vicinity of the City of the Angels. I refer to the Coxcomate. It is about 20 minutes distant from Puebla over the street car line to Cholula. Any street car conductor can point it out to the curiosity seeker. It is to the right of the car line about 500 yards distant.

"It looks from the car window to be a pile of white stones or a well bleached haystack, but upon closer inspection proves to be a tumulus of white calcareous stone evidently of water formation, about 50 feet in height and 100 feet in diameter at the base. The form is that of a truncated cone. At the apex is an elliptical shaped opening, about 25 feet along the minor and 50 feet along the major axis. It is a bell shaped cavity and lined with ferns of various descriptions. I should judge the depth to be at least 100 feet, and at the bottom, so far as visible, the opening must be 60 feet in diameter. In the bottom on one side are to be seen some gorgeous ferns and on the other side a pool of water.

"Tradition says that the ancient Aztecs were accustomed to worship here the genius of the spot and occasionally threw in a live victim to appease his subterrancan majesty. It is also said that a few victims of the inquisition were thrown down here to reflect upon the controverted points of doctrine. At all events, it is a most singular freak of nature, as it is in the middle of a level plain, or rather a barley field. It looks to have been some volcanic bubble, of which the Mexican upland is so full, and is well worth a visit on the part of the curious.

"Although I have inquired among my Mexican friends, I have found no one who could tell me the meaning of the name Coxcomate."—Mexican Herald.

The Singing French River.

As far as the eye can reach one swelling line of hill top rises and falls behind another, and if you climb an eminence it is only to see new and farther ranges behind these. Many little rivers run from all sides in cliffy valleys, and one of them, a few miles from Monastier, bears the great name of Loire. * * * The country is wild and tumbled rather than commanding, an upland rather than a mountain district, and the most striking as well as the most agreeable scenery lies low beside the rivers. There indeed you will find many corners that take the fancy, such as made the English noble choose his grave by a Swiss streamlet, where nature is at her freshest and looks as young as on the seventh morning. Such a place is the course of the Gazeille where it waters the common of Monastier and thence downward till it joins the Loire, a place to hear birds singing, a place for lovers to frequent. The name of the river was perhaps suggested by the sound of its passage over the stones, for it is a great warbler, and at night, after I was in bed in Monastier, I could hear it go singing down the valley till I fell asleep.—Robert Louis Stevenson in "A Mountain Town In France."

Papua Currency.

An American traveler in the island of Papua says: "The basis of exchange is arrack (Java rum), one-half gallon of which is reckoned equal to a day's work at fishing or rattan cutting. No money is used. When this nectar of the Papuan enters a home, every occupation is dropped, and the family devotes all its attention with enthusiastic energy to its consumption. Their efforts never flag while the rum lasts or strength remains. The resulting stupefaction lasts for days, but on recovery the family cheerfully proceeds by persevering industry to acquire the means of procuring more. Arrack is without a rival as the most villainous intoxicant known, and its only competitor in the affections of the Papuan is roast wild pig. Together they are simply irresistible."

WINCHESTER.

Something About General Sheridan's Famous Black Warhorse.

In January, 1876, General Sheridan sent the following letter to a friend:

"In regard to the black horse, I am glad to state that he is still living and is now in my stable. He has been a pensioner for the past eight years, never being used save in the way of necessary exercise. He is of Black Hawk stock, was foaled at or near Grand Rapids, and was brought into the army by one of the officers of the Second Michigan cavalry, of which regiment I was the colonel in 1862. Early in the spring of that year, while the regiment was stationed at Rienzi, Miss., this horse was presented to me by the officers of the regiment, and at that time was rising 3 years old. Consequently he must be nearly 19 years old now. He is over 17 hands in height, powerfuly built, with a deep chest, strong shoulders, has a broad forehead, a clear eye and is an animal of great intelligence. In his prime he was one of the strongest horses I have ever known, very active and the fastest walker in the army, so far as my experience goes.

"I rode him constantly from 1862 to the close of the war in all the actions and in all the raids as well as campaigns in which I took part. He was never ill, and his staying powers were superb. At present he is a little rheumatic, fat and lazy, but he has fairly earned his rest, and so long as I live he will be well taken care of."

In October, 1878, the famous horse died, and Sheridan then made a slight addition to Winchester's biography, saying: "He always held his head high and by the quickness of his movements gave many persons the impression that he was exceedingly impetuous. This was not the case, for I could at any time control him by a firm hand and a few words, and he was as cool and quiet under fire as one of my staff."

diers. I doubt if his superior as a horse for field service was ever ridden by any one."

Herman Melville, Buchanan Read and many other writers have made this horse the subject of poems, and several sculptors and painters have delineated him in marble and on canvas. On every returning Memorial day many aged survivors of Sheridan's Shenandoah troopers who remember the services of this

Are We More Courageous?

There can be little doubt but that the character of modern warfare and modern weapons develops the highest types of personal courage. The terrible destructiveness of the quick fire maxim guns, the long and deadly range of the newest rifle and the devastation of the torpedo, all call forth a moral courage which was unnecessary in the days of fierce hand to hand conflict.

The courage required to coolly work the machine guns amid a hurricane of bullets, or to dash across an uncovered tract of country where every inch is plowed with shot and the mathematical possibilities of escape are infinitesimal is of a much higher type than that requisite in a hand to hand struggle with knife or spear, sword or lance.

The first calls for moral courage, the second only animal courage. When the lust of fight and the heat of battle make man's blood run riot, he will struggle with his fellow man with all the pluck that is in his nature. Two dogs will do virtually the same. Seize one of the dogs, he will turn on you pluckily. Stone him, the probability is that he bolts.—Pearson's Weekly.

The First Watch.

At first the watch was about the size of a dessert plate. It had weights and was used as a "pocket clock." The earliest known use of the modern name occurs in the record of 1552, which mentions that Edward VI had "one larum or watch of iron, the case being likewise of iron gilt, with two plummets of lead." The first watches may readily be supposed to have been of rude execution. The first great improvement, the substitution of springs for weights, was in 1550. The earliest springs were not coiled, but only straight pieces of steel. Early watches had only one hand, and, being wound up twice a day, they could not be expected to keep time nearer than 15 or 20 minutes in the 12 hours. The dials were of silver or brass. The cases had no crystals, but opened at the back and front and were 4 or 5 inches in diameter. A plain watch cost the equivalent of $1,600 in our currency, and after one was ordered it took a year to make it. —Troy Times.

The Age of Progress.

Mrs. McCauber—Here's a notice saying that if the bill is not paid the gas will be cut off.

Mr. McCauber—Let 'em cut it off! Who cares?

"But what will we do?"

"Put in electric lights."

"But in time the bills for them will come in."

"Oh, well, perhaps something else will be invented by that time."—London Tit-Bits.

Irritating drugs—such as salts of arsenic, copper, zinc and iron—should usually be given after food, except where local conditions require their administration in small doses before eating.

Beggars' lice is the common name of the Cynoglossum morisoni. It is so called from the readiness with which the seeds adhere to fur, wool or cloth.

By and By.

In that bright and glorious country
Where my Saviour reigns on high,
With the blood washed throng in glory,
I am going by and by.

Where our tears shall cease their flowing
And we never more shall cry,
Where the aching hearts shall vanish,
I am going by and by.

In that land of life eternal
Where we never, never die,
Where the sun shall shine forever,
I am going by and by.

With our loved ones gone before us,
With our Saviour ever nigh,
Where we never shall be parted,
I am going by and by.

There with Jesus dwell forever
In the home beyond the sky,
Where we'll praise Him without ceasing,
I am going by and by.

RAILWAY DRINKERS.

THEY ARE CONSPICUOUS BY THEIR ABSENCE.

Employees of Most of the Roads Running Into Chicago Are Not Permitted to Use Intoxicating Liquors—Drunken Trainmen Are Not Employed.

Whatever may be said of the unwillingness or inability of municipal and state officials to enforce laws prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, the railroads of America appear to be of one mind as to the enforcement of their prohibitory rules. The Northwestern Christian Advocate of Chicago has made inquiries of the officials of leading representative railroads as to their rules concerning the use of intoxicating liquors by employees, and the result is assuring to travelers that so far as it is possible to guard against danger from drunken trainmen the railroads do so.

Reports are presented from 19 roads. In every case drinking while on duty is absolutely prohibited, and with the majority of roads it is clearly intimated that employees who wish to retain their positions must refrain from the use of intoxicants when off duty as well.

The Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton road inquires into the habits of applicants for positions and does not employ any person who is not strictly temperate. The Chicago and Alton road declares that any employee who is known to use intoxicating liquors or frequent gambling places, either on or off duty, "will be promptly and permanently discharged."

The Baltimore and Ohio road "does not retain intemperate men in its employ. The effect of the rule has been very noticeable, and the result has been a higher class of men in the train service than ever before." On the Illinois Central road "no person addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors shall be employed or continued in the service of the company." The Chicago and Eastern Illinois road prohibits the use at all times of intoxicating liquors, and the violation of the rule is a dischargable offense.

The Erie road inquires into the habits of all applicants for employment, and no one who is not strictly temperate is hired. The Chesapeake and Ohio road looks after the general conduct of its employers while off duty and does not allow them to frequent saloons. For the benefit of the men the road has established several Young Men's Christian Association buildings at terminal points. "The most stringent rules possible to adopt are in force on the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern road as to the use of intoxicating liquors by employees." The Chicago, Lake Shore and Eastern road "weeds out of its service all those whom it finds indulging in intoxicants at any time."

The use of intoxicants is a sufficient cause for dismissal from the service of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific road. The Lehigh Valley road not only prohibits the use of intoxicating liquors by employees while on duty, but tobacco also on passenger trains and at stations and smoking in or about the shops. The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road not only prohibits the use of intoxicants while on duty, but will not re-employ a man who has been dismissed for intoxication. The Compania Limitada del Ferrocarril Central Mexicano road does not tolerate "drinking when on duty or frequenting saloons," and gives preference "to those who do not drink at all."

CLEAR, COLD WATER.

The Oldest, Cheapest and Best Beverage the World Ever Saw.

Colonel George W. Bain of Kentucky, one of the most eloquent advocates of temperance in this country, in a recent address at Boston said:

"There are a great many intelligent men who do not know the temperance question. A noted scholar once said to me that alcoholic drinks were a benefit to man and beast. If that is so, I said, then God has made a mistake. He has made this great world and everything in it to run by water power, and he has created oceans, lakes and rivers to hold water. If alcoholic liquors are a benefit and a blessing to the people, then God would have created a few brooks and rivers to contain them. I stand here this afternoon to declare that the oldest, cheapest and best beverage the world ever saw is clear, cold water.

"Put all the gold and all the silver in the world together, and it would not pay the drink bill of this nation for 13 months. There is no question so fraught with magnificent results as the temperance question. There is no need of hard times or strikes or labor unrest or sorrow in this country. We have a country large enough to hold the world, and peace and plenty ought to abide everywhere within its boundaries. When I think of what God has given us for a country to live in, I bow my head in shame that we have made such use of his blessings.

"How grand it would be if all the restless elements in the country could come together and live happily. Why can't they do it? Because there are 240,000 saloons that stand in the way and won't let them. What a glorious country this would be if everybody had only followed God's word.

"Some people, and professed Christian people, too, are afraid to use hard words in dealing with the liquor traffic. Thank God for Sam Jones. People talk about high license and low license. Does license, high or low, make the liquor business more respectable? By making the license fee $1,000 you don't change the nature of the business or of the drinker. High license is the last state of the liquor traffic. I would rather vote for the low groggery than for the gilded saloon that opens wide the gates of hell to our young men.

The Paramount Question.

I believe that the miseries consequent on the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors are so great as to command imperiously the attention of all dedicated lives, and that, while the abolition of American slavery was numerically first, the abolition of the liquor traffic is not morally second.—Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON XII, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 21.

Text of the Lesson, I Cor. ix, 19-27—Memory Verses, 25-27—Golden Text, I Cor. ix, 25—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

19. "For, though I be free from all men, yet have I made myself servant unto all, that I might gain the more." For the sake of a temperance lesson we turn from the narrative in the Acts to a section of this epistle, but it is a temperance lesson in the sense of every form of restraint and control of the self life that the Christ life may be made more manifest, and thus the gospel be lived as well as preached in order to gain more people for Christ. The section in which we find our lesson begins with chapter viii, 1, and runs to the end of chapter xi, the beginning of each section being easily recognized by the words "now as touching" or "now concerning" (chapters vii, 1; viii, 1; xii, 1; xvi, 1). The central thought in this section seems to be chapter x, 31, "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God," the object of such a life being primarily that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ (I Pet. iv, 11), and then that some may be saved (chapters ix, 22; x, 33). Paul was indebted to no one for favors; he was under compliment to no one. He said to these very Corinthians that if he had wronged them it was in that he had not been a burden to them, and for this he asked their forgiveness. He sought them and not their possessions (II Cor. xii, 13, 14). Being thus free from obligation to all, except the obligation laid upon him by God to preach the gospel to all, he gladly became servant to all for Christ's sake that he might gain more for Christ.

20. "Unto the Jews I became as a Jew that I might gain the Jews." We must think of Paul as a servant of Christ, a member of the body of Christ in perfect joint and health, under full and complete control of Christ, the head, and ever seeking in all things to please Him (chapters iii, 6; xii, 12; Gal. i, 10; I Thess. ii, 4). He had a great desire that Christ should be magnified in his body whether by life or by death (Phil. i, 20). We must keep this in mind in considering this and the next two verses lest we might be tempted to think Paul guilty of some inconsistency or of conniving at a wrong thing in order to win men to Christ. He was a Jew and knew what it was to live under the law. In dealing with such he would, as far as he conscientiously could, put himself in their place and from their standpoint lead them to Christ.

21. "To them that are without law, as without law, that I might gain them that are without law." He often speaks of gentiles as "them that are without." He would have believers exercise special care in walking honestly toward them so as to win them. As far as Paul could in the sight of God, he put himself in their place, saw things with their eyes and from their standpoint sought to lead them to Christ that they might be saved.

22. "To the weak became I as weak that I might gain the weak. I am made all things to all men that I might by all means save some." In Rom. xv, 1-3, he takes, as he always does, Christ for his example and teaches us not to please ourselves, but others, and to bear the infirmities of the weak, and this even in the common acts of eating and drinking, as the context shows. There is a self centered life and a Christ centered life, and, though strange it is yet true, sadly true, that the former is often manifest in believers to the great grief of the Spirit and dishonor of God. Paul, like his Master, thought not of himself, but of how he could glorify Christ and win people to Him.

23. "And this I do for the gospel's sake, that I might be partaker thereof with you." What is this which, as a servant of Christ, he is aiming to be a partaker of? It cannot be eternal life, the gift of God, nor the forgiveness of sins, nor peace with God, nor justification, nor sanctification, for all these come to us in Christ freely by virtue of His finished work. See Rom. iii, 24; v, 1; viii, 1; I Cor. iii, 21-23; vi, 11. We do not work for redemption and its benefits; but, receiving Christ as God's unspeakable gift to us, we believe that His divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness (II Pet. i, 3). Being a saved man through the blood of Christ, Paul knows that denial of self in preaching the gospel will bring him a reward (verses 17, 18), and he wishes the believers at Corinth to share this with him.

24. "Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize. Go run that ye may obtain." Now, salvation is not obtained by running, for we cannot run till we have obtained salvation. Until we are saved we are dead in trespasses and sins (Eph. ii, 5), and dead people cannot run for God. To run in an ordinary race, those who desire to run must first enter; so in the race before us, the Christian life, or race, we must first enter, and the entrance is at the cross. The fee is paid for all who are willing to enter, for the blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin.

25. "And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now, they do it to obtain a corruptible crown, but we an incorruptible." The wreath, the reward, the honor associated with the victor in the Grecian games soon faded or passed away, but the Christian seeks a crown incorruptible to cast at the feet of Christ (Rev. iv, 10). That there are rewards for the faithful in addition to salvation, which is the free gift of God, and that it is possible to be rewarded or be saved and have no reward. See I Cor. iii, 14, 15; II John viii; Rev. xxii, 12; Luke xiv, 14, etc.

26. "I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air." In an ordinary race there is uncertainty as to who shall win, and only one can possibly win the prize. In the Christian race there need be no uncertainty, for Christ Himself will be the judge, and He will reward every one according to his works. All who will may have rewards for service—the crown of life for patient endurance, the crown of our lesson for denial of self, etc. (Jas. i, 12; Rev. ii, 10; I Thess. ii, 19; I Pet. v, 4; II Tim. iv, 8).

27. "But I keep under my body and bring it into subjection, lest that by any means when I have preached to others I myself should be a castaway." Not a lost soul, for none of Christ's sheep can perish (John x, 28, 29), but disapproved as to service. See R. V. Paul never questioned, nor ever taught others to question, the eternal safety of every true believer (Phil. i, 6; II Tim. i, 12; Eph. v, 25-27; Jude xxiv). But he did strongly emphasize the possibility of the loss of service and the necessity of a whole hearted denial and renunciation of the self life (Gal. ii, 20; vi, 14; II Cor. iv, 10, 11; Rom. xii, 1, 2).

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

Tuesday, March 2.

The Riverside steel works at Benwood, W. Va., have resumed work. Fifteen to eighteen hundred men went to work after an extended idleness.

An electric car on the South Milwaukee line, Milwaukee, slewed suddenly while descending a sharp grade on Pennsylvania avenue and capsized, rolling over and over on the steel rail. Of eighteen passengers, but one was severely hurt.

What appears to be a genuine volcano has burst forth in the great Salt Lake, Utah.

Cable dispatches received at Madrid from Manilla say that over 2,000 insurgents were killed in the recent battles fought with the government troops at Silang and Las Marimas.

Troops have been detailed to protect the Cherokee freedmen from swindlers during the payments to be made by the government at Fort Gibson.

One of the novelties of Cripple Creek is a lady miner. W. H. Edwards and Mrs. Purgett are working a lease on the Arequa Savage. Mrs. Purgett turns the windlass, while her partner pounds the drill in the twenty-five-foot hole.

Judge W. W. Crump, one of the most noted criminal lawyers of Virginia, died at his home in Richmond, aged 80 years. He was employed on one side or the other of nearly every famous case in Virginia for half a century.

Thursday, March 4.

The New York Herald correspondent in Montevidio, Uruguay, telegraphs that the country is again disturbed by news of the seriousness of the revolutionary movement on the Brazilian frontier.

The governor of Valparaiso, Chile, has invited the leaders of all political parties to meet at the palace. The object of the meeting is to devise means of insuring public peace during the elections without recourse to arms.

John D. Rockefeller has given Mount Holyoke college $40,000 for a dormitory.

Owing to a seizure by treasury of contraband opium valued at $400,000 and a further seizure worth $20,000 later, the price of opium at San Francisco has advanced $3 per pound.

A freight train on the Georgia Southern and Florida road broke in two and in the subsequent wreck N. C. Jordan, flagman, and two tramps were killed.

Friday, March 5.

The Lake county, Ind., grand jury has indicted the four watchmen of the Tolleston club who shot poachers on the club's premeises some weeks ago.

One of the last remaining relics of the World's fair is to be changed. The big Chinese theatre in Sixty-fourth street, Chicago, is to be remodeled into an apartment house. The cost of the improvement will be $25,000.

A. Streicht & Bros.' wagon factory at Oshkosh, Wis., was destroyed by fire. The loss is about $100,000; fully insured.

Advices from Manilla say that the army of Spain in the Philippine islands is being decimated by ague and dysentery.

The health department of San Francisco is conducting a crusade against venderes of impure food and fifteen grocers who are accused of selling bogus honey, tomato catsup, maple syrup, etc., have been arrested.

The total number of cases of bubonic plague in the city of Bombay up to date is 8,383, of which 6,979 proved fatal.

Saturday, March 6.

Kay county court house, fifty miles north of Perry, O. T., was burned at 4 o'clock in the morning. Court has been in session two weeks, and it is believed that parties to suits are responsible for the fire.

Fire at Worcester, Mass., destroyed two business blocks at a loss of $400,000 and seriously injured eight persons, none fatally.

Cleveland has declined to let the New York chamber of commerce, of which he is an honorary member, give him a grand banquet as a testimonial of their regard for the ex-president.

The employes of the Lehigh & Wilkesbarre company, whose wages were reduced, struck and the colliery at Hazelton, Pa., is idle.

The Sliger Lumber and Manufacturing company, Huntington, W. Va., has gone into the hands of Charles Nash as receiver. Assets, $200,000; liabilities unknown.

Near Mallory, N. D., a locomotive struck a broken rail derailing the train, killing Fireman Lamb and fatally injuring Engineer Henry Gowenlock.

John Hay seems to have a "cinch" on the mission to the court of St. James. He has rented a house in the aristocratic part of London.

A warrant has been sworn out against George A. Taylor, ex-cashier of the defunct Argentine (Kan.) bank, charging him with receiving deposits when he knew the bank was failing.

GREECE'S REPLY TO THE POWERS.

Hardly a Doubt That It Will Be "No" to the Demand.

Athens, March 8.—[Copyright, 1897, by the Associated Press.]—The answer of Greece to the identical notes of the powers was discussed at a meeting of the cabinet and approved by King George yesterday. It is reported that the reply is a refusal to recall the Greek fleet and troops from Crete, on the ground that the recall would be a signal for pillage, incendiarism and murder.

The gravity of the situation is recognized on all sides, and all those interested seem willing to arrive at a peaceful settlement of the difficulties, if possible. Greece is displaying undiminished firmness in her intention to carry out at all cost the programme which she has mapped out for herself in regard to Crete, while at the same time supporting the pacific intentions of her advisers. Advices from Crete say that the insurgents have formed a cordon around Canea and that Saturday evening the insurgents attacked the Turkish positions at Malaxa and Keratidi, where they attempted to destroy the blockhouse with the use of dynamite. The fighting, however, was of a desultory nature, and yesterday morning hostilities were reported to be at a standstill.

The trains are bringing in thousands of reserves from the provinces, and these are parading the streets with their accoutrements. Squadrons of cavalry and batteries of artillery traversing the principal thoroughfares to embark for Thessaly give a peculiar vividness to the scene. Great crowds join the soldiers in hurrahing for war and proclaiming loyalty to Greece, to King George and the government. The decree summoning the remainder of the reserves is held back at the last moment. The troops already on the frontier are deemed sufficient for the present; and more than this, it is believed that the presence of the foreign men-of-war near the Piraeus indicates that the blockade will commence today, thus severing communication with the frontier by sea.

Bank to Resume Business.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 5.—The German-American bank of Tonawanda, which was closed by the bank examiner, will resume business next Monday. An agreement has been reached by the largest depositors to leave their money in the bank under certain conditions which will enable it to carry its $600,000 worth of discounts until better times. The entire impairment of the capital stock has been made good and a surplus satisfactory to the banking department provided.

Weyler Will Stay in Cuba.

New York, March 8.—A Madrid special to The World says: Premier Canovas has again assured the Spanish reporters and the Cuban deputies that the government still has confidence in General Weyler and shares his opinion that the reforms cannot be carried out in Cuba until "the military operations are more advanced."

Chicago Newspaper Founder Dead.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 8.—John M. Dandy, founder of the Chicago Saturday Evenig Herald, died Saturday evening at the home of his brother, after a brief illness. Several weeks ago Mr. Dandy contracted a severe cold in Chicago and upon the advice of his physicians he came to Los Angeles to recuperate.

THE LAST HOURS IN CONGRESS.

Four Appriation Bills Fail to Get on the Statute Books.

Washington, March 3.—The senate was in session until 12:25 this morning. During the session it agreed to the house amendments to the monetary conference bill, and passed the fortifications and deficiency bills.

The house, besides having an acrimonious debate over the question whether Justice Shiras, of the supreme court, changed his mind on the income tax, in which Dalzell defended the justice, declared Black entiteld to the seat contested by Tom Watson, of Georgia; received a veto of the immigration bill; agreed to the sugar bounty provision in the sundry civil bill and modified the senate provision invalidating the president's forest reserve proclamation, by leaving it to the next administration. Reports of conference committees were the order of the session, which lasted from 10 a. m. yesterday to 3:05 this morning.

Washington, March 4.—The senate put in its long session yesterday discussing conference reports and agreeing to them in some cases. Meantime a number of house bills of no particular importance were passed, the president's veto of the immigration bill was received, the Frye shipping bill was agreed to in conference report that added the words "Flogging on board of vessels of commerce is hereby prohibited." The anti-scalping bill was abandoned and several vetoed private pension bills passed. Quay threatened to defeat all further legislation if the house fixed the price of armor at $300 a ton, but when he learned that it had done so and passed the bill, gave it up.

The house put in the day considering conference reports and passing bills not objected to. The president's veto of the immigration bill was negatived --193 to 37. The senate amendment to the naval bill fixing the price of armor plate at $300 per ton was agreed to. At 2:30 this morning the sundry civil bill was agreed to, leaving only the deficiency bill in conference.

A rough estimate of the total appropriations for the session fixes the amount at $425,000,000.

At 2:30 this morning the house and senate had agreed on all the bills except the deficiency bill.

Washington, March 5.—The senate yesterday adjourned sine die after the usual votes to the president and president pro tem. The session was devoted entirely to attempting to agree with the house on the deficiency bill, which failed to pass. Vice President Stevenson delivered a brief, but eloquent address of farewell and closed the business. The senate was later reconvened as part of the next congress, with Vice President Hobart in the chair and adjourned to today.

The house was engaged on the same business as the senate—trying to agree on the deficiency bill until the time for adjournment, when a unanimous vote of thanks was given with cheers to Speaker Reed, who spoke briefly in farewell. These bills failed to receive the president's signature—agricultural, sundry civil and Indian—making four bills that failed.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION AT BOSTON.

Six Persons Killed and a Score or More Injured.

Boston, March 5.—The worst accident of its kind ever known in Boston occurred shortly before noon yesterday when an explosion of illuminating gas in the subway at the intersection of Tremont and Boylston streets caused the death of six persons and the injury of a score or more of others, although not more than ten were severely hurt. Buildings for hundreds of feet in all directions were damaged by the concussion and several electric cars which were passing were wrecked. One caught fire and was burned to the trucks. The property loss probably will amount to $35,000, including losses from a general demolition of goods in adjacent stores.

The corrected casualty list follows: Killed—Rev. William A. Start, Medford, bursar of Tufts college; William T. Vinal, Salem, Mass.; Miss A. M. Bates, Boston; Guildford D. Bigelow, driver West End Street railway; Benjamin Downey, Boston; Delano Sibley.

Senators Compliment Stevenson.

Washington, March 1.—The senate Saturday evening, through a committee consisting of Hoar, Cullom, Blackburn, Carter, McMillan, Gorman, Faulkner, Brice, Bacon, Jones of Arkansas, Murphy, Elkins and Chandler, presented to Vice President Stevenson in his apartments at the Normandie a handsome and valuable silver table service. It is inscribed as follows: "To Adlai E. Stevenson, vice of president of the United States and president of the senate. 1893-1897. From members of the senate in token of the strict impartiality, unfailing courtesy, and unsurpassed wisdom and discretion which, in the discharge of his high office, have endeared him to the senate and earned for him the gratitude of the American people."

Weyler Is Back at Havana.

Havana, March 5.—Captain General Weyler returned yesterday from Calbarien. He specifically denied to the Associated Press that he had resigned, adding that he had never even contemplated it.

NEW IRON LASTS and HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT

The Latest, Neatest, Cheapest and Best Outfit Ever Invented.

THE HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT NO. 1.

Consisting of 38 First-Class Tools and Materials (neatly boxed) Shown in Cut, viz.:

1 Iron Last, 8 inches.
1 Iron Last, 6 inches.
1 Iron Last, 4 inches.
1 Iron Standard, with Base.
1 Package Assorted Nails.
1 Package 4-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 5-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 6-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
6 Pairs Star Heel Plates.
½ lb Copper Rivets and Burrs.
1 Steel Punch.
1 Sewing Awl, complete.
1 Pegging Awl, complete.
1 Wrench for above.
1 Stabbing Awl, complete.
1 Shoeknife.
1 Shoehammer.
1 Bottle Rubber Cement.
1 Bottle Leather Cement.
1 Harness and Saw Clamp.
1 Ball Wall.
1 Ball Shoe Thread.
1 Bunch Bristles.
4 Harness Needles.
1 Soldering Iron.
1 Bottle Soldering Fluid.
1 Box Rosin.
1 Bar Solder.
1 Directions for Use.

All these tools are full-sized, practical, neat, and cheap; not mere toys. They enable any person to do his own half-soling, boot, shoe, rubber, harness, and tinware repairing.

This Outfit is the result of years of study, experiment, and correspondence in the manufacture of Iron Lasts and Repairing Outfits; and its practical advantages need only to be seen and tried to be appreciated.

Our Improved Iron Lasts and Standard are one of the handiest tools you can have about the place. The Lasts are four in number, smooth and solid, 4, 6, 8 ,and 10 inches long, thus enabling one to half-sole all sizes of foot-wear. The Standard is made with an iron base, which can be easily fastened to the bench. No method of half-soling is now used on common work, except that of iron last and wire clinch nails. The writer of this has been in the business 20 years, and has seen the changes from the old wooden lasts and pegs to the modern method, and knows it to be complete.

Our Improved Harness and Saw Clamp is an indispensable tool in sewing a harness or filing a saw. The jaws are thrown open mechanically by a coiled spring on the bolt.

The weight of this outfit is 18 lbs. Price, all complete, packed in a neat, strong box, only $3.00.

The Home Repairing Outfit No. 2.

COMPLETE BOOT, SHOE AND RUBBER REPAIRING OUTFIT, consisting of 31 first class tools and materials. The No. 2 outfit contains the same articles as the No. 1 except ing the Harness and Soldering Tools, and is gotten up for those who have no harness or tinware repairing to do. Price of No. 2, neatly boxed, $2.00, or with the paper one year, $2.75. Price of No. 1, neatly boxed, $3.00, or with the paper one year, $3.75.

WINTER PASTURE.

Views Expressed on This Subject at Iowa Farmers' Institutes.

In its special farmers' institute edition the Iowa Homestead reports some remarks made on winter pasture. A Jefferson county (Neb.) farmer is reported as saying: "For winter pasture here we have been using cornstalk fields since the early settlement nearly 40 years ago. Cattle, horses and sheep keep in about as good condition as they do in summer on prairie grass. Of course there are exceptions to this rule when the cattle are not properly managed, and they get the so called cornstalk disease soon after they are first put into the field. In cases of emergency stock can live reasonably well on good prairie grass and stubble fields during the winter season. We usually have sufficient cornstalks in the fields with straw and hay for all feeding purposes, so that it is not absolutely necessary to devote fields expressly to winter pasture."

Another farmer expresses these views: Blue grass is pre-eminently the winter pasture. All other grasses, indigenous or acclimated, in our latitude kill with frost and bleach out until their palatability and most of their nutritive elements are wasted away. But blue grass lives and seems to even improve with frost. Until recently it has been thought that Kentucky and southern Iowa had a corner on blue grass. Those southern Iowa fellows even had the arrogance to build a blue grass palace and invite the rest of us to come and see blue grass. Just as if blue grass did not grow very far north of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad! Every farmer in the northwest may have his winter blue grass pasture, no matter where he lives. There is only one danger to securing a good winter pasture, and that is too much pasturage in the summer. This is the common evil in all pastures.

Timothy is the best nurse for young blue grass, although common red clover may form a part. However, it is doubtful whether the clover is needed as a nutrifying agent with blue grass. A heavy blue grass sod probably gathers more nitrogen by filtration of rain water and the accumulation of the dead bodies of insect life than could be gained by the symbiotic process in the clover roots. It requires about four years of blue grass to supplant its nurse, timothy, and then a good while longer to become thoroughly carpeted over the ground. Age gives vigor to blue grass. Sheep cannot be raised profitably in the long, cold winters of the northwest without the blue grass pasture in winter.

Feeding Potatoes.

It is possible that in absence of other roots feeding a few—very few—potatoes to cows may be beneficial, but my experience in feeding them in any considerable quantity is bad. It was awfully hard work to get the butter to come from the cream of cows that had been on potatoes, and the potatoes were to blame, for when they were taken from the cows the butter came all right. When they were again fed, the same trouble was met with. Then the butter was hard. I think that I have seen the complaint made that butter from potatoes was live salve. But mine was hard—so hard that you could not spread it. I fed altogether about two bushels to 12 cows twice a day, mixing them with grain. No more potatoes to my cows, says the writer of the foregoing in The Western Plowman.

New Points About Asparagus.

Two new points in asparagus culture are brought forward by a contributor to The National Stockman and Farmer. The points are to remove from new beds all female or seed bearing roots as soon as the incipient berries appear and to cut in old beds all female or seed bearing stalks before the seeds mature. These troublesome shoots grow largely, possibly not entirely, from seeds dropped from the pretty but mischievous little red balls with which the foliage is decorated and will in a great measure disappear if no seed is allowed to ripen.

Farm Products.

In Secretary Morton's report attention is called to the fact that during the fiscal year just closed we shipped abroad $570,000,000 worth of farm products, or $17,000,000 more than in the preceding year. Sixty-six per cent of our total exports was farm products against 72 per cent in 1894 and 74 per cent in 1893. The less per cent was caused by an unprecented sale abroad of our manufactured products, the exports jumping from $184,000,000 in 1895 to $228,000,000 in 1896.

When Pork Is Cheap.

When pork is cheap, salt it down. The Farm Journal in giving this advice explains as follows: Careful experiments prove that pork salted in brine and kept for six months to a year loses little or nothing in weight, and experience demonstrates that at some time during the year salt pork invariably brings a much higher price than fresh pork during the glut of prices. Unlike eggs, there is little or no risk in keeping pork, and the profits in the risk are sure.

Odd Mention.

The Ohio experiment station has successfully tried the method of scalding seed oats to prevent smut.

Articles of incorporation have been issued by the secretary of state of Illinois to the Farmers' National Chautauqua association.

Cranberries are being extensively cultivated in Washington.

Oregon is coming to the front in raising Angora goats.

The University of Illinois recently sent out a warning to the public on the danger from surface wells.

According to a Colorado exchange, potatoes in Colorado do best on sod or virgin soil or on land that has been renewed in fertility by a growth of alfalfa.

Agricultural Brevities.

Kaffir corn is adapted to all soils and to regions too dry for corn.

In tests with tomatoes at the Minnesota station the largest yield was obtained from the Early Advance, Belmont ranking next. The largest percentage of good fruit (95) was produced by Landreth No. 1.

At the Minnesota station French Chevalier proved to be the best out of 84 varieties of barley, followed by Odessa, Champion of Vermont, Highland Chief, Black Hulless and Salzer.

The acreage of alfalfa will steadily increase in Oklahoma. It has proved to be one of the most profitable crops that can be grown in the west.

In Washington and Oregon extensive tests of sugar beets have been made under the auspices of the state stations. The report is that "there is no doubt about the ability of vast areas in both these states to produce beets as good as those in California. The same is true in large measure of other sections of the arid west."

☞ A GOOD, RELIABLE WATCH CHEAP. ☜
FREE FOR A CLUB OF TWENTY SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the demand for a good cheap watch, we have made arrangements to furnish this reliable and durable timepiece at a very low figure. This is no "below cost" or "sheriff sale" watch. The price we ask is more than we pay, but so little more that we could not send them a cent less if you ordered a bushel. ☞ There is

No Reliable Watch Cheaper Than This!

READ CAREFULLY! The movement is a 7 jeweled Elgin or Waltham with stem wind and stem set. To set the watch: Pull out the stem until it "clicks," when you can turn the hands at will. Press back in position to wind. By this arrangement you only need to open the watch to regulate it, and your movement is kept as nearly dust-proof as possible. The case is Silverold (not silver), yet can hardly be told from solid silver. Will keep its color always. Is screw back and bezel, tight fitting, handsome and strong and will last a lifetime. Before the late reduction in price of this movement the retail figure was $12.00. WE GUARANTEE this watch to be perfect, and will refund the money if not exactly as represented. REMEMBER, this is not a Chronometer, nor will it regulate the sun, but it is a good, reliable timekeeper. Sent by express for $5.75. If wanted by mail add 25c. for postage.

This movement in a solid silver case, described as above, only $9.50.

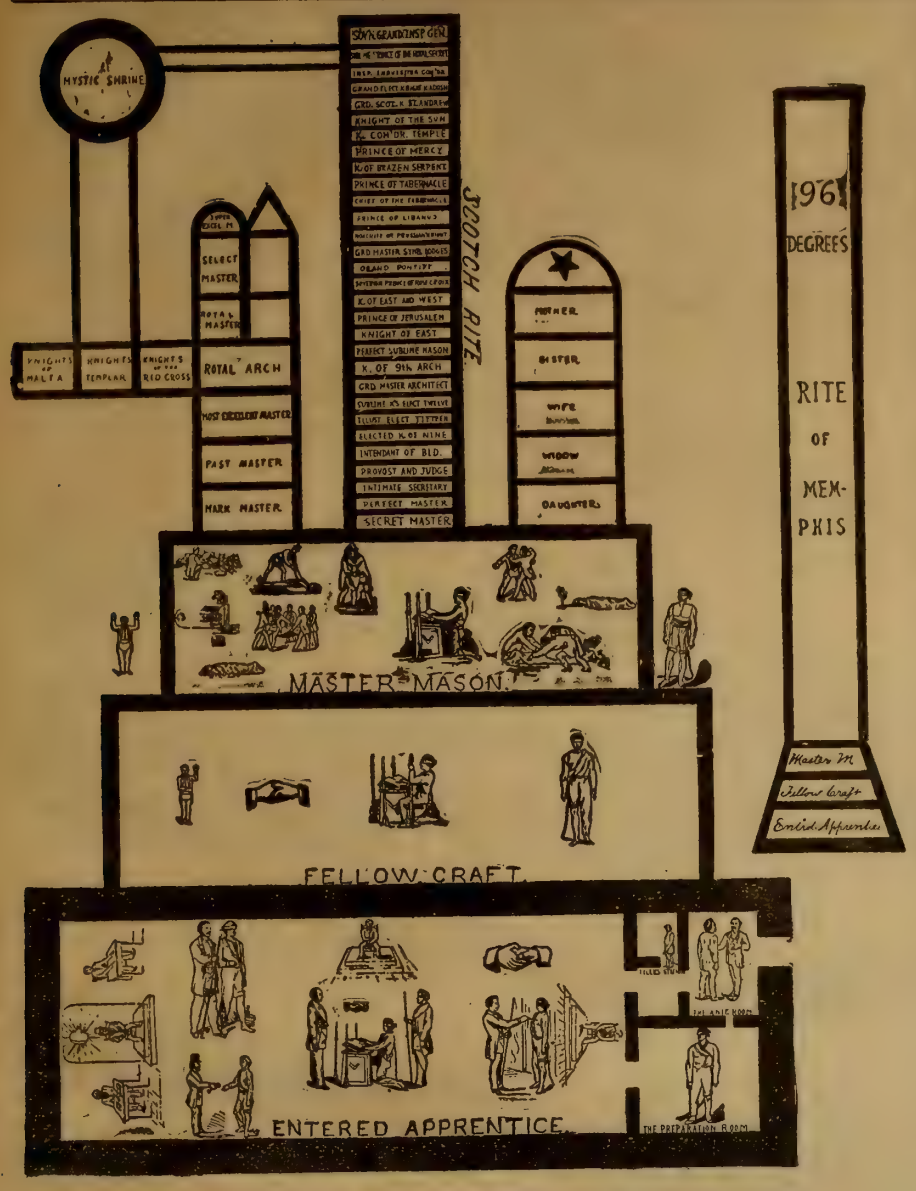
Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge, and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc.



MASONIC CHART.

ILLUSTRATING THE RELATION OF SOME OF THE DEGREES AND RITES IN FREEMASONRY TO EACH OTHER.

The accompanying chart represents one hundred and forty two degrees.

1. The American Rite of 13 degrees;
2. The Scotch Rite of 33 degrees;
3. The Egyptian Rite of 96 degrees.
4. The Mystic Shrine of one degree.
5. The Eastern Star of 5 degrees for Master Masons and for women. These are side degrees, and not genuine masonry.

The Symbolic degrees, or Blue Lodge of three degrees, are common to every Masonic rite, whether American, Scotch, or Egyptian, or whichever of the Masonic rites, named in Mackey's Masonic Encyclopedia one may choose to investigate.

This chart shows in the Blue Lodge the position of the Worshipful Master and some of the other officers of the lodge. Several positions of the candidate who is being initiated are also shown. In the Master Mason's degree is recognized the murder, burial and resurrection scene so full of religious significance to Freemasons.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. First three degrees. 376 pages cloth, 75c; paper, 40c.
The accuracy of these expositions attested by affidavits of Jacob O. Doesburg and others.

Freemasonry Illustrated. 640 pages, cloth, $1.00; paper, 75c.
A complete expositon of the Blue Lodge and Chapter consisting of seven degrees. Profusely illustrated.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. 341 pages, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. 2 vols. Per vol., cloth, $1.00: paper, 65c.
The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive.
Vol. II comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. 274 pages, flexible cloth, 50c.
By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. 110 pages, paper, 25c.
The genuine old Morgan book republished.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry. By Avery Allyn. Cloth, $5.00.
Contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, and the Orange Societies.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Cloth, $2.50.
Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market, it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated."

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 75c.
Contains the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the high degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual.

Look to the East. A ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Cloth, $2.00.
Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or the Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. Revised and enlarged edition, 40 pages, paper, 25c.
An Illustrated Ritual of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. This is a Side Masonic degree conferred only on Knights Templar and on Thirty-two degree Masons.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 16 pages, 5c.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. By "Spectator," Atlanta, Ga. 16 pages, 5c.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. 16 pages 5c.
This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. 16 pages, 5c.
Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge.

Mah-Hah-Bone; 589 pages; $1.00
Comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. Cloth, $1.00: paper cover, 50cts.
The complete revised ritual of the Lodge Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. Cloth, 50c; paper cover, 25c.
This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor of Evangelical Lutheran church. 10c. each.
This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and, the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias, Illustrated. Cloth, 50c: paper cover 25c.
An exact copy of the new official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the world, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. 15c each.
The full Illustrated Ritual of Ancient Order of the Orient or the Oriental degree. This is a side degree conferred mostly in Knights of Pythias lodges.

Good Templarism Illustrated. 25c.
A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and council.

Exposition of the Grange. 25c.
Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic. 10c. each.

The Complete Illustrated Ritual of the Improved Order of Red Men, comprising the Adoption Degree, Hunter's Degree, Warrior's Degree, Chief's Degree, with the Odes, etc.

The Foresters Illustrated. Paper. cover 25c. each, $2.00 per dozen.
The Complete Illustrated Ritual of the Foresters, with Installation Ceremonies.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. 15c. each.
A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. $1.00, each.
Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated."

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association. 10c. each.
Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Constitution and By-laws of the Association.

Secret Societies. Cloth 35c, paper 15c.
A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev Edward Beecher.

The Master's Carpet or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical. Bound in fine cloth. 400 pages. 75c.
Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. 5c.
By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard, Cloth, $1.50. paper, 75c.

Finney on Masonry. Cloth 75c., paper 35c.
The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By ex-Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasony Self-Convicted. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40c.
This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them.

Judge Whitney's Defence before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. 15c.
Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. 10c.
This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder and Oaths of 33 degrees. 304 pages, cloth, $1.00,

THE INAUGURATION.

PRESIDENT M'KINLEY INSTALLED IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

Escort of the Presidential Party from the White House to the Capital Building—Hobart Assumes the Chair in the Senate Which Adjourns and Reconvenes.

Washington, March 4.—"William McKinley, president of the United States," is the way he signs himself at this writing. It was done quickly—a raised right hand, head uncovered, a few words reverently uttered—and William McKinley, citizen, was William McKinley, president. The ceremonies that led up to this climax began with the departure of President Cleveland and President-elect McKinley and Vice President-elect Hobart and the senate committee of arrangements, and their escort of 5,000 troops, from the White House for the Capitol, where the oath of office was administered to the new chief executive. Major McKinley drove over from the Ebbitt House to the executive mansion at 10:30 today, and met the president in his private office. The presidential party, with its escort of United States troops, Troop A, of Cleveland, and the District National Guard, left the White House at 11 o'clock and reached the Capitol shortly before noon.

Proceedings in the Senate Chamber.

Vice President Stevenson did not accompany his successor, the vice president-elect, as Stevenson was engaged in presiding over the session of the senate. Hobart, instead, was accompanied by the senate committee of arrangements, consisting of Sherman, Elkins and Mitchell. At the Capitol the president and other officials, the president and vice president-elect assembled in the senate chamber, the members of the supreme court and of the senate and house being present. Vice President Stevenson administered the oath of office to Hobart, and at the stroke of 12 declared the senate of the Fifty-fourth congress adjourned without day. The new vice president, an extra session of the senate having been called, then administered the oath to the newly elected senators.

The senate then took recess, and the procession moved to the stand at the east portico in front of the rotunda, President Cleveland and President-elect McKinley leading. On the stand the oath of office was administered to President-elect McKinley by Chief Justice Fuller. President McKinley then made his inaugural address. On concluding he returned to the president's room in the senate wing of the Capitol, and from there he was escorted to the White House by the inaugural parade, Points in the Inaugural Address.

President McKinley's inaugural address takes up finances first and says that our system needs revision; that the currency shoudl remain "under the supervision of the government," but that the several forms of paper currency are an "embarrassment to the government and a safe balance in the treasury." The first thing to this end, however, he says is the securing of adequate revenue. A word is said for economy of expenditures. The best way for a government to keep out of debt, he says, is "through an adequate income, secured by a system of taxation, external or internal, or both." The bulk of this income should be secured by taxing imports, direct taxation being avoided except in time of war.

MRS. WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

"In the revision of tariff, especial attention should be given to the re-enactment and extension of the reciprocity principle of the law of 1890," he says, and adds that legislation helpful to the producer is beneficial to all. "Lynching must not be tolerated" is another clause in the inaugural, and mob law must go. He advocates legislation against trusts; improvement of the immigration laws to keep out the illiterate and vicious; civil service reform—real, not perfunctory.

Reviewed by the New President.

It was a little after 3 o'clock when the new president and his predecessor reached the White House through cheering crowds, escorted by the Black Horse troopers, of Cleveland. In the Blue room Cleveland took formal leave of his successor and bidding good-bye to all who were present left the mansion, and in company with Captain Robley D. Evans, of the navy, drove to the Seventh street wharf to take the lighthouse tender Maple for a ten days' fishing trip in the Carolina sounds. He had nothing to say as he went aboard save that he was bound for North Carolina, and when an Associated Press reporter asked how long he would be gone jocosely remarked "There's no hurry."

The city never saw such a perfect parade as that which escorted President McKinley from the Capitol to the White House and then passed in review under his eye. The feature of the splendid pageant was the perfect balance between its contrasting parts and the high order of skill that was shown in the handling of the 20,000 or more men that stepped along or bestrode the splendid steeds that danced and reared their way in the parade. It was the universal opinion that there was just enough and not one bit too much of any one class of paraders. There was no long-drawn-out massing of uniformly attired regular troops or militia, pleasing enough to the military eye, but wearisome to the spectators who made up the vast crowd.

President McKinley reviewed the parade from a stand erected on the avenue in front of the White House grounds. When he stepped into the stand to review the parade he was received with tumultuous cheers from the tens of thousands of his fellow citizens who crowded the streets and acres of viewing stands in the vicinity. His wife and mother and their party had preceded him by half an hour or more, and were shown to the seats which had been reserved for them just back of the little projecting platform to be occupied by him while the procession was passing. He was accompanied by vice president Hobart.

PERSONNEL OF THE CABINET.

All the Portfolios Now Given Out—Inaugural Preliminaries.

The chief event of Wednesday was the definite completion of the cabinet which probably wil be sent to the senate on Friday for confirmation by that body as required by the constitution. The last name added to the list was that of Cornelius N. Bliss, of New York, who will become secretary of the interior. He declined a cabinet proffer some days ago, but yielded yesterday to the pressure of his friends. It was reported that Bliss had consented to serve six months only, but it can be stated on authority that the appointment was accepted without conditions. The new cabinet, therefore, will be made up as follows:

Secretary of State—John Sherman, of Ohio.

Secretary of the Treasury—Lyman J. Gage, of Illinois.

Secretary of War—Russell A. Alger, of Michigan.

Attorney General—Joseph McKenna, of California.

Postmaster General—James A. Gary, of Maryland.

Secretary of the Navy—John D. Long, of Massachusetts.

Secretary of the Interior—Cornelius N. Bliss, of New York.

Secretary of Agriculture—James Wilson, of Iowa.

CAIRO VISITED BY A TORNADO.

Baby Burned to Death in the Ruins of a Residence.

Cairo, Ills., March 6.—A storm struck Cairo from the southwest at 5:30 a. m. yesterday, accompanied by rain and heavy thunder, with continuous flashes of vivid lightning. The residence of James Darnell was in the track of the storm and was entirely demolished and all the occupants more or less hurt. The ruins caught fire, but the fire companies and heavy rain prevented it spreading to other buildings. The badly wounded were Mrs. James Darnell, back broken; Mrs. Cary, injured internally, will probably die: Sol Pettis' child was burned to death, but the others in the house escaped with slight injuries.

A great deal of damage through roofs and skylights being blown off was caused by floods of water. The principal buildings damaged were the Douglass high school, roof of one wing blown off; Lutheran church just completed, cupola blown down; Gilbert block damaged $200; falling chimney crushed the slate roof of the First Missionary Baptist church. The storm was very severe south on the river. The steamer Buckeye State came into port with the tops of both chimneys blown off. No serious damage is reported from the country.

Chicago, March 6.—Dispatches from Illinois points report the worst rain storm for years. At Vandalia, over six inches of water fell in less than six hours. All the streams are out of their banks and many bridges are washed away. The Okaw bottoms are a sea of water. Many families residing in this district were rescued in boats. Considerable live stock perished and hundreds of rods of fencing were washed away. At Lawrenceville, the heaviest rain ever known fell. The Embarrass river rose eleven feet in ten hours and the latest reports say Sumner, Bridgeport, Pinkstaff and Birds are under dater.

ILLINOIS WANTS THE CONTROL,

Of the Grain Business at East St. Louis, Instead of Missouri.

Springfield, Ills., March 8.—The state railroad and warehouse commissioners returned from St. Louis, where they held a conference with the Missouri railroad and warehouse commission upon matters concerning the grain department at East St. Louis. Ever since the grain business was established at East St. Louis the board of trade has had charge of the work of inspection, handling, etc. The two commissions decided that the Illinois commission should take steps toward securing control of the work at East St. Louis.

The Illinois commission has the matter under advisement. The idea of having so important a business under control of a corporation in an adjoining state, and operated by men whose every interest are connected with other states made the determination of the conference the more strong to break up the practice and have the grain business of East St. Louis controlled by the Illinois railroad commission.

Death of Senator Wells.

Quincy, Ills., March 6.—Senator Albert W. Wells, for twelve years a member of the state legislature, and present Democratic leader and chairman of the caucus and steering committees in the upper house, died yesterday morning. He had suffered from corosis of the liver for some time. He was born at Woodstock, Conn., May 9, 1839, and served in a New Jersey regiment during the war. He was graduated from Columbia college and settled in Quincy as a lawyer in 1870. He leaves three brothers and a sister in the east, and a wife and three children here. He was president of the Quincy board of education, and director in half a dozen corporations and one of the most prominent and best-known politicians in the west. He will be buried Sunday.

Elevator at Peoria Destroyed.

Peoria, Ills., March 5.—At 10 o'clock last night Union elevator No. 2, capacity, 1,000,000 bushels, and the property of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, was destroyed by fire of unknown origin, with its contents of nearly 900,000 bushels of grain. The loss is estimated at close to $350,000, but no statement of insurance can be given. The grain was owned by several firms in this city. T. A. Grier & Co., being the heaviest losers.

Postmaster Pleads Guilty.

Springfield, Ills., March 3.—Samuel Sparks, postmaster at Sidell, Vermillion county, pleaded guilty in the United States district court yesterday to embezzling $2,300 of postal and money order funds. He was fined $500 and costs and sentenced to six months in the Vermilion county jail.

Strike at Kankakee.

Kankakee, Ills., March 5.—Thirty foundry men, receiving $2.25 and $2.75 daily from the David Bradley Manufacting company struck yesterday. They objected to the employment of non-union men and the use of labor-saving machines. Their places will be filled by Chicago men.

Young Man Dies of Hydrophobia.

Quincy, Ills., March 6.—Henry Weiseman, a young man who lived east of Quincy, has died of hydrophobia. He has bitten by a vicious dog six weeks ago, and recently began to bark and snap like a dog. His struggles at times were violent and death was a positive relief.

"Dr." Rutland Held to the Grand Jury.

Chicago, March 3.—"Dr." Rutland was held to the federal grand jury in the sum of $5,000 by United States Commissioner Humphrey yesterday. Rutland is charged with making fraudulent use of the mails in the disposition of diplomas from his alleged medical college.

State Notes.

At Richmond, Ills., Rev. Mr. Bennett. a Methodist divine, was assaulted by a man who was informed that the minister had spoken disrespectfully of his sister.

Charles F. Strong, the Rockford, Ills., "healer," has been sued for divorce. His wife charges extreme cruelty and non-support.

Lucius Bugbee, of Evanston, Ills., has been chosen class president by the seniors of Boston university.

Fire at Casey, Ills., burned over an hour, destroyed or damaged a dozen buildings and cost the town about $200,000, partly insured.

Chicago Unions Expect to Win.

Chicago, March 8.—The strike agitation that has kept twenty-one allied unions of the Building Trades' council in a state of turmoil since Thursday last subsided yesterday, and the strikers rested to await the action of the employers today. No meetings were held yesterday, but a general feeling of victory was manifested by the men.

It is doubtful whether ordinary street profanity is as wicked as the profanity of ordinary Masonic initiations.

The California State Convention will be held at Los Angeles, on April 14 and 15. Address Secretary Williams, 526 South Spring St., Los Angeles, Cal., for further information.

Masonry is a scandal. Whoever belongs to it is smirched. It is not easy to believe in the intellectual and moral completeness of a devoted Mason, yet Christian men allow themselves to stand in this light.

The Annual Meeting of the National Christian Association occurs May next. The first meeting to be held in connection with our convention is in the Chicago Avenue church. There will be a day session in Willard Hall as well as in our own—the Carpenter Building. We expect to report progress each week.

New members are caught because they do not know the facts. If they knew them many would not join. Possibly it could be said not many would join. The safeguard would be knowledge of facts. The duty of the spiritual guard is to give these facts. Truly the people perish for lack of knowledge.

When a Christian minister knows that the vile, pretended morality and the apostate religious quality of Masonry are known, not only by men in the lodge who need his best influence and example but also by many persons outside, there is a question whether he can make any pretence of a right to retain even an inactive affiliation without letting his virtual or actual withdrawal be known.

One feature running through lodgery is the sacrilegious or tasteless desecration or degradation of names honored or held sacred. The dead cannot protest save by their record, but there should be an expression of the disgust and indignation of the living.

REV. P. B. WILLIAMS.

The above excellent cut of our Pacific Coast agent was used recently by the California Voice, a paper which appreciates Bro. Williams' growing popularity as an evangelist and reform lecturer. The testimony of many pastors on the Coast is that in his lectures and sermons he not only bears powerful testimony against the lodge, but has marked success in leading sinners to Christ. One pastor writes: "He assisted me in a two weeks' revival last winter in our church, giving the very best satisfaction to the whole church as well as myself."

Bro. J. F. Baird, of Blue Springs, Mo., writes that, "Since the lecture by Rev. P. B. Williams in this place last June, the lodges have not been so popular, and it seems that their growth has been much retarded." As will be seen by a reference to our eighth page Bro. Williams expects to attend our next Annual Meeting in this city and will fill two months lecture appointments in coming and returning from California. Those who wish to secure him should write him at once to Los Angeles, Cal., before his dates are all taken.

The public have been treated to a facetious report in the press that "at a public meeting in Boston a prominent evangelist made a statement that the Prince of Wales had been obliged to withdraw from the Masonic fraternity, because the Freemasons did not believe in the Bible, and that "a well-known Boston Mason" had written His Royal Highness and received from his Right Worshipful Grand Secretary a positive denial of the charge, with assurances of the Prince's devotion to the craft.

The vague allusion to "a prominent evangelist" and "a well-known Boston Mason," without name or date, looks suspicious and suggests the pertinent inquiry, "Is not the hand of Joab in all this?" Was such a declaration actually made? If so, by whom? Was Dr. Geo. C. Lorimer or distiller Sam'l. C. Lawrence, the 'well-known Boston Mason," who obtained the denial? It smacks strongly of "a colored gentleman in the briar patch" somewhere, and looks very like to a shrewd little game gotten up to furnish a pretext for the lodge guardians to air their boasted loyalty to the Bible. The occasion called for something, and what better device than this writer incognitio demolishing a mythical evangelist?

The skulking scribbler adds, "The notion that Masonry implies the denial of God is absurd, as every Mason knows," and instances in proof the action of the Grand Lodge of England, "when the French Masons struck out the name of deity from their ritual." But he did not add another cogent fact that when English and American Masons struck out the name of Christ from their rituals, they cast contempt upon the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, and thus severed all connection between the lodge and the living God. If this is not a fact Christ simply lied when he said, "No man cometh unto the Father but by me."

Whatever absurdities a lying spirit might put into the mouth of a mythical character, no real evangelist, intelligent in the systematic theology of Masonry, would assert that Freemasons, if true to their faith, deny either the Shaster, the Koran or the Bible; nor is the "Grand Architect of the Universe" any less essential in the faith of a Jew or Christian (?) than in a Hindoo or Brahmin. They meet on a level, swear fealty to the same creed and worship one deity, which they denominate the "Grand Architect of the Universe," which to a Christian taught in the Scriptures is simply a slang phrase, but to the untaught worshiper may mean a deified ape, monkey or bull according to his religious faith.

While in Boston Bro. Moody dealt the question of church and lodge membership a staggering blow, but deftly as it appears left the lodge itself unscathed save by implication. Of course all the "fraters" who are not past feeling are ingeniously parrying the stroke. Dr. Lorimer, we are informed, has brought from its sequestered nook the "brazen image" which De Molay Commandery caused to be set in the house of the Lord, to perpetually advertise the pagan brotherhood, while upon this symbol of Baalism the pastor offers weekly oblations of worship as if it were the altar of Jehovah.

TRUE REFORMERS.

BY WILL H. KEIL.

There is no reformation true,
  But in the hearts of men;
A party that has gone astray,
  Can't be brought back again;
Because when once it has the power,
  It always works for evil;
To hold that power it always makes
  A compact with the devil.

So if you wish to work reform,
  And do it true and hearty,
Do not expect to gain your end
  In any rotten party.
Just break the ranks and join the cranks,
  It will not be uncivil;
It is the only party that
  Is fighting 'gainst the evil.

You may get down upon your knees,
  Hand in a long petition;
You'll only wear your breeches out,
  Nor better your condition;
For they will always do the same;
  The rum power's not divided;
They'll whip you in with false pretense;
  'Twas long ago decided.

So do not longer waste your time,
  Break off the iron fetter;
You cannot hope to gain your end,
  They never will do better;
For true reform always begins
  With men, in parties never;
Begin at once and be a man,
  For that is true endeavor.

So come at once and join with us;
  We're in this fight to win;
And sooner we will gain our end,
  If sooner you begin.
Then hand in hand we'll onward go;
  The victor's song be singing;
"Praise God from whom all blessings flow,"
  O'er hill and valley ringing.

MASONIC OATHS BLASPHEMOUS.

BY EX-PRES. JOHN G. FEE, OF BEREA COLLEGE.

The oaths of Masonry are blasphemous. Blasphemy is not the mere malicious speaking against the name of God, but is perpetrated in evoking divine assistance in doing what we know not, and which may be wicked in itself. Beyond all doubt taking such oaths is taking the name of God in vain.

Again, these oaths are "extra-judicial." An oath may be taken before a legally constituted authority for the maintenance of what we solemnly believe is truth; but an oath before a person not legally or divinely constituted, and that for things unknown and possibly wicked, is what is not only impious, but extra-judicial; and as Webster said, "Should be suppressed by law." We can also see that Freemasonry is the suggestive mother of the scores of lawless secret orders all over our land; such as Knights of the Golden Circle, White Leaguers, White Caps, Ku Klux, Mollie Maguires, Clan-na-Gaels and other like orders. All these are dangerous elements in civil society.

Another reason why we should oppose Freemasonry is the shameful and debasing manner in which the members are initiated. The applicant does not walk into an open door as into a church or temperance meeting, but goes up to a closed door and knocks for admission. The door being opened the candidate is taken by the Junior Deacon into the "preparation" room, there stripped of all of his clothes save his shirt and drawers; the drawer on his left leg is tucked up above the knee; the left sleeve tucked above the elbow; a hoodwink put over both eyes, a rope, called "cable-tow," put around his neck and a slipper on the right foot.

Being thus introduced he is led around the room by the Senior Deacon, and kneeling before the altar on his left and naked knee, a sharp instrument is placed against his left breast. In this condition the applicant takes the barbarous oath previously referred to. No wonder women are excluded from such lodges. No man in a civilized country would be willing to have his wife or sisters see him so induced. Well might the apostle say, "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them, for it is a shame even to speak of the things done of them in secret." In connection with this we may say, some of the ceremonies are ridiculous, as the murder of Hiram Abiff by "Jubela, Jubelo and Jubelum." The searching for his body and the "Master's word"—kneeling around the assumed grave and praying to the god of nature. Not finding the Master's word they substitute the word Ma-ha-bone.

All this became disgusting to Geo. Washington; he called it "child's play." It is worse—it is sacrilegious. And it is very sad to see professing Christians and even professed ministers of the Gospel engaged in such ridiculous nonsense and sacrilegious ceremonies; better that they be in prayer and praise meetings.

MANUAL OF FREEMASONRY.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

The book bearing the above title, by Richard Carlisle, is a combination of sense and nonsense, of superstition, skepticism and fanaticism. He puts Judaism, Christianity and Masonry, Egyptian idolatry, Chaldean astrology and Grecian mythology, the Bible, heathen mythology and Grecian architecture, Doric, Ionic, Corinthian, all in one hodge podge. And after boiling them down in the crucible of his own cracked brain, he produces this volume as the true wisdom for man. He was in prison for ten years in London Tower. This may account for his strange presumption. Listen!

"It remains to make the revelation more ample and to show the Masonic brotherhood that, though never in a lodge, I can teach them the very essence or spirit of Masonry, such as they do not find taught in any lodge now existing." "Having done for Masonry what I have also done for the Jewish and Christian religion, the Old and New Testament, shown how it may be made respectable and useful, I seriously propose to the Masonic lodges that they allow me to come among them and openly and publicly to lecture among them on the subject. I cannot consent to go through any of their obligations because they are neither legal nor moral; but I offer to give a scientific and moral explanation of those principles of Masonry which are the true revelation of their mysterious language."

I am at a loss how to characterize the man or the book. He seems to be sent to put the devil to shame. He wears Satan's livery and uses Satan's weapons to demolish Satan's house.

CHRISTIANITY AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

Secret sins, and our duty as Christians and good citizens in relation to them, is a subject attracting the attention of good people everywhere, for it justly merits it, on account of the real nature of the subject. People are afraid to discuss it either privately or in public, and in the face of these facts they acknowledge everything that is good, noble and grand and based on Christian principles—are and ought to be open for investigation, discussion, reproof and correction. In 2 Tim. 3:16,17 we read: "All Scripture as given by inspiration of God is profitable for doctrine, for reproof for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." Every thing else, if founded on on God's eternal truth, will bear the same application; if it does not, it is none of his.

Dear reader, with the assisting grace of God, I will present for your careful consideration the above subject which is denied the freedom of public discussion, and endangers our civil and religious liberties. The proclamation of Jesus Christ our Lord in the beginning of his ministry when upon this earth was, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Not only did he preach repentance, as also did his disciples, but he told the people plainly what to repent of. And those who accept him by faith as their personal Saviour he commands, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glory your Father which is in heaven." Again he said, "Ye are the light of the world; a city that is set on a hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel but on a candlestick, and it giveth light unto all who are in the house." "Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted; it is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out and to be trodden under foot of men."

As salt has saving and preserving qualities, so we are to be the preservers and keepers of mankind, and retain Christ's kingdom amongst the children of men, through and by the saving grace bestowed upon us by the gift of the Holy Spirit, whereby we can let our light shine by testifying to the goodness and mercy of God by experimental knowledge, bestowing deeds of charity wherein the donor does not expect to receive as much again, and in the spirit bestow acts of kindness upon those who are our inferiors, either by birth, race, color, sex or of their own imprudence from which they have repented, or any other cause, wherein we as Christians do not commit ourselves. It is only in and through the grace of God we are what we are, and that we can do those things acceptably in the sight of God and man; and had it not been for some person whom God used as an instrument in his hand and his mercy, in pointing out our sinfulness and waywardness toward God, probably some of us who are enjoying the saving grace of God now, otherwise might have come short of that glory.

In view then of these facts and the many things that men are engaged in, which we who have light and knowledge of the same know to be positively sinful, I say it is our duty before God and man to let our light shine, by giving timely and Christian warning to the downward tendency of the road they are traveling, By giving them publicity and through the press, others will be convinced of the error of that way, take warning, shun and avoid the same.

In order that men belonging to secret orders may know what they have to repent of, we will now proceed to point out the ungodliness of the orders and the inconsistency of Christians and good citizens belonging to the same. I will call your attention to such revelations as I have read, seen and heard concerning secret orders. Their truthfulness has been firmly established in my mind by what adhering ones have acknowledged, as well as seceders whose veracity and integrity cannot be questioned.

Some people tell me it is impossible for you to know or even find out any of their secrets. But listen: Christ positively declares, "There is nothing secret that will not be revealed, and nothing hid that will not be found." Please read Matt. 10:26, Luke 8:17 and 12:2, Rom 2:16, Heb. 4:13, and we who have accepted Christ, the hope of glory, cannot and dare not go back on his teaching without rejecting him. For proof from a human standpoint of reasoning, we will use this illustration, hoping you will pardon me for so doing, for it is the best I could find to fit the place. We will take a gang of robbers; their nightly operations are as carefully guarded as any secret order dare be; and for all the precaution used by them, some one is wily enough to ferret them out just the same; and both organizations carry on their work under cover of darkness, and know one another by signs, grips and tokens; gain admission to their assemblies by passwords and due-guard signs. The one robs a man of his money and valuables, and the other deprives him of his civil and religious liberty. This I will prove later on, and then you may judge for yourselves what relation they sustain to one another. Again, for example, we will take the Jesse James gang of highway robbers, who bound their members under one of the most blasphemous, blood-curdling oaths I ever read or heard tell of. You might just as well tell me that their secrets could not have been exposed, as to tell me that the secrets of those secret orders cannot be found out, for the Lord hath so decreed it, and so it is.

I have made secret societies a careful study from my youth, with no other motive in view than to ascertain their real nature, and the relation they sustain to Christianity. Since then I have been mightily moved by the Spirit of God to warn you well-meaning men, into whose hands this may fall, who belong to secret orders, if possible point out the dangers connected with the same; and I assure you as we enter into the discussion of this question, I do it with malice toward none and good will to all. In order to point out the ungodliness of the orders, etc., it will be necessary to expose a part of the secret work of the orders, which I will proceed to do in another letter. JOHN HELFRICH.

KNIGHTS OF THE GOLDEN CIRCLE.

Of the K. G. C., a writer in the Continental Monthly, for January, 1862, says: "This organization, which was instituted by John C. Calhoun, William L. Porcher, and others, as far back as 1835, had for its sole object the dissolution of the Union, and the establishment of a Southern Empire;—empire is the word, not confederacy or republic;—and it was solely by means of its secret, but powerful, machinery that the Southern States were plunged into revolution, in defiance of the will of a majority of our voting population. Nearly every man of influence at the South (and many a pretended Union man at the North) is a member of this organization, and sworn, under the penalty of assassination, to labor, 'in season and out of season, by fair means and by foul, at all times and on all occasions,' for the accomplishment of its object."

The following exposition of the work of the K. G. C. was first published in the columns of the Louisville Journal, in July, 1861. Of its authenticity there can be no doubt. Geo. D. Prentice, Esq., the editor of the Journal, gives his "solemn assurance as an editor and as a man" that the documents from which he derived his information are authentic. He asserts, moreover, that he received them from a prominent Knight of the third degree. The genuineness of these documents has never yet been denied by any man whose word can be regarded as valid testimony in the case.

[Extracts from the Louisville Journal, July 18, 1861.]

We are not prepared to state how long the Order of the Knights of the Golden Circle has been in existence. It never assumed in public estimation much importance until after the springing up of the great question of union or disunion in our land. It is believed to have materially changed its character since then, and certainly it has played a prominent part in the political affairs of the nation. It is an intensely disunion concern. Its members bear the same relation to other disunionists that regular soldiers do to the militia. The association is upheld and applauded as patriotic and noble by the whole disunion press everywhere. Every imputation made against it is resented by the disunion press as a blow at the disunion cause.

The success with which the Knights of the Golden Circle have kept the secrets of their order has been a matter of wonder to many. The chief of the order has pretended to publish all the written portion of the ritual or rituals, but we know perfectly well that he was attempting a fraud upon the community. Hundreds of members of the order have sworn dreadful oaths that they would kill any one of their fellows who should dare to reveal, and any editor or printer who should be guilty of publishing their mysteries. Probably the knowledge of these oaths has kept many persons silent who felt that they were under a solemn obligation to their fellowmen to speak what they knew. For ourselves, we care not for their threats.

A public man is miserably unfit for his station if he hesitates to do his duty and trust the consequences to God and his fellowmen.

We have before us all the secret documents of the Order of the Knights of the Golden Circle. That they are authentic, we give our solemn assurance as an editor and as a man. We proceed to publish such portions as will give a correct and full idea of the character and purposes and plans of the order.

There are three degrees to the order; the first Military, the second Financial, the third Governmental.

The ritual of the first degree contains little of special importance.....

Treasurer:—Gentlemen, we must now tell you that the first field of our operations is 2 (Mexico); but we hold it to be our duty to offer our services to any Southern State to repel a Northern army. We hope such a contingency may not occur. But whether the Union is reconstructed or not, the Southern States must foster any scheme having for its object the Americanization and Southernization of 2 (Mexico), so that in either case our success will be certain.....

From the second, or Financial degree, we need give but little. The following is the closing part of the initiation:.....

Name—18 (True Faith); sign—25 (fore finger and thumb of right hands joined, while with the rest of the hand upon the right eye is touching with middle finger); answer—26 (same with left hand and left eye); password—27 (Monterey); night word of distress—32 (St. Mary); response 31 and say 5 (grasp by wrist and say Rio Grande); emblem—28 (gold circle encasing Greek cross in center of which is star). This is the 29 (key) to our 30 (secret alphabet); use of 33 (K. G. C.) 56 (George Bickley); guard sign ½28 (gold circle encasing Greek cross in center of which is a star); silence 25 (fore finger and thumb of right hand joined, while with the rest of the hand open the right eye is touching with middle finger) on hips; danger—right—same with left.....

Third or Political degree of the 33 (K. G. C.)—named 57 (Knights of the Columbian Star).

Instructions:—Officers of the Council shall be a Governor and a Secretary. Every 57 (Knight of the Columbian Star) is qualified to act in either capacity.

QUALIFICATIONS FOR MEMBERSHIP.

Candidates must be familiar with the work of the two former degrees; must have been born in 58 (a slave State), or if in 59 (a free State) he must be a citizen; 60 (a Protestant) and 61 (a slaveholder). A candidate who was born in 58 (a slave State) need not be 61 (a slaveholder) provided he can give 62 (evidence of character as a Southern man).

Object:—To form a council for the 33 (K. G. C.) and to organize 63 (a government) for 2 (Mexico). No 57 (Knight of the Columbian Star) shall admit, except to a brother 57, that he has this degree, for reasons that will hereafter appear. Any two 57's can confer the degree on others, the oldest 57 acting as Governor.

Approaching Candidates:—Of course all 33 (K. G. C.) know each other. There being two 57 in hailing distance of the court house of said county—that is, 64 (within the county). They will confer together as to the worthiness of any 33, whom they may think a proper person to be made a 57, and, having agreed, one or both of them will go to the person, each knowing the other is a 33, and tell him that there is a gentleman 64 (within the county) who has the power to confer the third degree, and propose to him that all three shall, or more, if so the case is, go and apply for it—telling him, or them, at the same time, that the fee will be 65 (ten dollars). If he assents, propose a time and place, and all be punctual. Let it not be exactly the place where the degree is to be conferred, but near. The 57 (Knights of the Columbian Star) act as if they also sought the degree. Also, tell the candidate that, as he or you may be rejected, it will be expected that he will not mention the matter to any one till the result is known.

When in the room, the Governor will take the Bible, and will cause all to lay their hands thereon, when each will repeat after the Governor the following:

INITIATION.

We three (or other number, as the case may be), citizens of 58 (a slave State), do hereby and herein, in the presence of each other and the great Jehovah, solemnly and sincerely pledge our faith and honor to conceal and never reveal to any mortal being, save such as we know to be 57 (Knights of the Columbian Star), any circumstance or thing that may here transpire during the next hour, and to keep the knowledge of this hour forever secret from all but 57. In the name of God. Amen.

[All take seats.]

Secretary:—What are you that you are thus leading off in this work, with which you seem so familiar?

Governor:—I am, what you are, a 57; you being the Secretary and I the Governor of this Council, and I here promise to conscientiously do my duty at all times while I hold fellowship with the 33. But, sir, will you explain why it was necessary to proceed as we have?

Secretary:—We thus proceeded because the laws of the order demand it—and because the order will lose its efficiency as soon as it ceases to be absolutely secret. It is not permitted that we shall be known to any person living except to those who are 57. You will find nothing in the order of which to be ashamed. Not even the 33 must know who has this degree. This is, perhaps, the only real secret order in the world. It must be kept secret.

Governor. .....

1. ..... 2. ..... 3. ..... 4. .....

Secretary:—Judging from what you have seen of the 33 project, and by what you know of us, are you now willing to be united with us in a society from which you can never resign, but which can in no way compromise you, since the only work and responsibilities we put on you are these:

1. Secrecy as to who the 57 are. 2. To attend every call of a Council made by the governor general of this State. 3. To do for every brother what every brother has sworn to do for you. 4. To inform the nearest working brother known to you, of danger to the 33 or 57. 5. To exercise a cautious prudence in counteracting false impressions of the 33, and to report to 56 (George Bickley) or his successor or successors any improper or dangerous actions you may know of. 6. To respond to the call of any brother in your county. 7. And never to speak of the work and character of this degree of the 33 to any one except 57 only as you express sentiments taught by the order. We shall not force you to work unless you desire to do so—but on the call of five brothers you must respond, if in your power so to do. Once a 57 (Knight of the Columbian Star) so you will live and die, though no mortal man may know it but 57.

Governor:—Are you willing to proceed?

(Candidate answers, yes.)

Secretary:—Every knee shall bow to God, and every tongue confess his name.

Governor:—Brothers, we will kneel for prayer.

.....

Governor:—Mr. Secretary, collect the fees of this (or these) candidates, and we will proceed in the work of initiation.

OBLIGATION DELIVERED BY GOVERNOR.

Before God and these witnesses, I do vow that I will never reveal the signs, grips, passwords, tokens or significants of the 57 (Knights of the Columbian Star) to any man, woman or child, except to a 57 in good and lawful standing, and then only as hereafter directed, and for the lawful purposes of this order. And I pledge and commit myself fully and freely to each of the following obligations, and in perfect good faith.

1. ..... 2. No matter what secrets may be given to me by a 57, if given as the secret of a 57 and because I am one, I will hold the same sacredly in my own knowledge, and never recommunicate it even to a 57 (Knight of the Columbian Star), unless authorized so to do by the brother whose secret it is. I will never speak evil of a brother 57, either before his face or behind his back. I will never dishonor the wife or daughter of a 57, I knowing them to be such, but I will shield and protect the character of all 57 whom I may know to be such—their wives, daughters and families.

3. I will oppose to the utmost of my ability, and never consent, but vote against the admission of any confirmed drunkard, professional gambler, rowdy, convict, felon, 68 (Abolitionist), negro, Indian, minor, idiot or 69 (Foreigner), to membership in this department of the 33. But I will get as many good and elegible 70 (Southern-born men) to join this degree as I can. 4. ..... 5. ..... 6. I do promise and vow that I will use my best exertions to find out any and every 68 (Abolitionist) in my county, whether 71 (man, woman or child).....

7. If any 75 (insurrection) shall be started, and it comes to my knowledge, I will do all I have promised above. Or should my State, or any other 76 (Southern State) be 77 (invaded) by 68 (Abolitionists) I will muster the largest force I can and go to the scene of danger, if well and able to go. I further promise to do all I can to build up a public sentiment in my State favorable to 18 (the expulsion of free negroes), that they may be sent to 2 (Mexico). I further promise that no 79 (free negro) shall marry 80 (my slave), or 80 marry a 79 if I can prevent it.

8. ..... 9. ..... 10. All civil places of prominence shall be given, as far as my influence goes, to 57 (Knights of the Columbian Star), and when these are supplied, to the 18 (True Faith); then to the 1 (Knights of the Iron Hand). I will advocate the establishment of 63 (a Government) which shall place the power in the hands of the most educated and moral, and oppose the recognition of any 87 (Negro, Mulatto, Indian or mixed blood) to citizenship. I will sustain the effort to reduce the 88 (Peon System) to 89 (Perpetual Slavery), and to divide them to 1 (Knights of the Iron Hand), 18 (True Faith), and 57 (Knights of the Columbian Star), in proportion of 1, 2, 3, to have and hold forever. But the same laws shall be enacted for their protection as are recognized in every other 58 (Slave State).

11. Until the whole civil, political, financial and religious re-construction of 2 (Mexico) has been completed, I will recognize 90 (Limited Monarchy) as the best form of 63 (Government) for the purpose in view, since it can be made strong and effective.

12. To prevent the entrance of any 68 (Abolitionist) into 2 (Mexico), I will sustain a passport system, and any and every 73 (stranger or traveler) shall go before the customs officer at the port of his entry, and there take an oath, stating whether he intends to become a citizen, and if so, that he will sustain and support the government then in existence, and that he will not interfere with the system of 89 (perpetual slavery) then recognized, but that he will obey the laws then recognized. If he be a traveler merely, he shall give up his passport to the chief of police on his entrance into each town, and which shall be returned to him on demand of the same officer, when about to leave for another place. And any 73 who shall pass or attempt to pass without a passport, shall be arrested and expelled from the country, and upon resistance he shall be shot; but every traveler so entering 2 (Mexico) must be informed of this rule. 13. .....

Secretary:—Perhaps you had better hear the whole degree and then sign, for unless we have your entire approbation, we do not wish to commit you to anything. I am well aware that this whole scheme is a bold and daring one, that can but surprise you at first, as it did me, and for this reason I beg to state a few facts for your consideration. In the rise and progress of Democracy in America we have seen its highest attainment. In the very outset it was based on high religious principles, and adopted as a refuge from despotism. In the North, Puritanism molded it, and went so far as to leave out the natural conservative element of all Democracies —97 (domestic slavery). As a result, we have presented now social, religious and political anarchy. From Millerism and Spiritualism, every Utopian idea has numerous advocates. The manufacturer is an aristocrat, while the working man is a serf. The latter class, constantly goaded by poverty, seek a change—they care not what it may be. Democracy unrestrained by 97 (domestic slavery) multiplies the manufacturing classes indefinitely—but it debases the mechanic. Who ever knew a practical shoemaker or a maker of pinbeads to have a man's ambition? They own neither land or property, and have no tie to the institutions of the country. The Irishman emigrates, and the Frenchman stays at home. The one hates his country; the other adores his. The Frenchman is a slaveholder and a man. The Irishman is a serf and an outcast. The South is naturally agricultural, and the farmer being most of the time in the midst of his growing crops, seeing the open operation of nature, his mind expands, he grows proud and ambitious of all around, and feels himself a man. He wants no change either in civil, religious or political affairs. He cultivates the soil, and it yields him the means to purchase labor. He becomes attached to home and its associations, and remains forever a restrained Democrat—restrained by moral and civil laws from any and all overt acts. He needs and makes a centralized government, because his property is at stake when anarchy prevails.—From the February Lodge Lamp.

ONE MASTER.

But which one—Christ or Satan? One fellowship; but which one—with the heaven or hell-born company? One body of redeemed ones, differing as stars in magnitude and glory; one confederation, diverse as vermin in size and semblance. One way upward to prepared mansions in the "Holy of Holies;" one way downward to the synagogue of Satan, "Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched." One life of opportunity, and one judgment seat, are the Alps and Andes of revelation. With becoming reverence to their Author, Bro. Moody pays fitting homage to these eternal truths. He preaches Christ the Saviour, and Satan the destroyer of men, and heaven or hell as their final portion, with equal assurance. Discerning between the sheep and the goats, according to "their fruits" he awards the lodge its own place among cesspools in modern society.

Recognizing the heart and features of "the father of lies" in his offspring, Bro. Moody introduces each in turn to his Boston audience as legitimate children in the same household. The lodge, the brothel, the dram-bar and the gambling-den are accounted departments in one kingdom, ruled by one sovereign. Thus grouped in a common brotherhood, the sycophantic Knight, fawning upon the gaping crowd; the simpering, smiling hag, at the door of her house; the saloonkeeper, plethoric in person and pocket, behind his bar, and the sanctimonious gambler, "steering" his victim into a den of robbers, are coworkers in a single interest and loyal subjects of the "one master." This is no "blow at a venture." It is God's verdict; and when Bro. Moody classes Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship with the dens and dives and slaughter-houses emanating from the dragon's mouth, he simply re-affirms what the Scriptures affirm with emphasis. The Holy Ghost makes them kith and kin with every device of Satan that perils virtue, integrity and life in human society.

For taking this stand Bro. Moody is justly entitled to the grateful honor of all who "rejoice in the truth." By his timely utterance he has stamped the mark of Cain upon this image of the Apocalyptic beast, and left all who believe Bro. Moody or the Bible without a cloak for their sin.

It means much when Bro. Moody sharply draws the line and warns his brethren not to enter themselves or cast their children into the arms of this devouring Moloch; and would that he had been equally explicit in defining the proper attitude of God's ministers towards men and preachers adhering to these abominable orders. Does he offer his example as all sufficient without explanation? Are we to infer that having denounced the haunts of vice, their devotees should be set in honor before the people, or should they be rebuked and restored to fellowship only on repentance and reform? If amnesty be granted to a Masonic Knight, why should the model gambler in broadcloth be denied the same boon? If a man who has invoked double damnation on himself is exhibited as a model of piety, why condemn the blasphemer who assumes only the responsibility of his own guilt? Will the prayer of a common sinner be granted, and a petition for double damnation be denied at the judgment, or will one be damned and the other doubly damned according to their respective invocations?

These are questions upon which more light is needed. The Scriptures surely teach that God answers prayer. Bro. Moody believes in prayer, and asked the people to pray for him. If there is one passage in the Bible indicating that when kneeling at the Templars' shrine, and calling God to witness, the candidate solemnly repeats: "May all the sins committed by the man whose skull this was be heaped upon my head, in addition to my own," is not answered with double damnation, except he repent, I would be profoundly grateful to Bro. Moody Dr. Lorimer, Dr. Bates, or anyone else, to name that passage. Until it can be shown that God will not answer his prayer, every adhering Knight Templar's soul is justly accounted under this awful curse. Though eloquent as Balaam, son of Beor, spiritually he is a galvanized corpse manipulated by his master to betray the bride of Christ as Judas betrayed her husband with a kiss. What should be the attitude of Christians towards such men? We know how Christ and the apostles dealt with them; and are ministers to follow their example, or is there a more excellent way?

CORRESPONDENCE.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS

BRO. H. D. WHITCOMB, BLOOMINGTON, ILL., MARCH 6, 1897.—B. Fay Mills, the evangelist, has been holding meetings here the past two weeks to considerable quickening of the religious feeling of the place. He closed with three pay lectures, the last of which was on "Christianization of Christianity." This was quite a masterly arraignment of the church, for her worldly spirit and practices. Universal brotherhood; the strong to bear the burdens of the weak; business to be a co-operation instead of competition, and love to be the mainspring of society instead of selfishness, were his theme. We had just opportunity at the close to shake his hand, congratulate him on the wholesome truths of his effort, and suggest that he touch on the "secret empire" as a rival of Christ's kingdom which he sought to introduce. He looked sober and replied, "Such societies might be good or might be bad." Possibly he has not read John 3:20.

C. A. S., WASHINGTON D. C., MARCH, 1897.—The President and Mrs. McKinley have given two informal dinner parties, one to their relations and the other to visiting neighbors from their old home, and at both wine was banished from their table. This is pleasing to all the temperance folk, and just what was expected by those who were closely acquainted with the domestic habits of the President and his wife. That intoxicants will be shut out of the private dining room of the White House for the next four years is certain, but no formal announcement has been made, and probably none will be made, as to whether wine will be served at the State dinners given by the President, or the cold water example set by President and Mrs. Hayes will be followed in its entirety. There will be no more State dinners given at the White House until next winter. Mrs. McKinley has been formally thanked for not having wine upon her table, in a letter from an official of the W. C. T. U.

J. S. HICKMAN, GOODWINE, ILL.—How rapidly everything is moving. Once it took scores of years to work out reforms that are now being brought about in a short time. People will soon be clothed and in their right mind, and will refuse to be hoodwinked and take obligations before knowing what they are. People will soon refuse to pay preachers who are lodge members. Such a preacher near here recently put a statement in writing and signed it, that he was not connected with any secret order. This was in order that he might have a pull on certain of his members who were anti-secretists. But the minister was afterwards found to be an active, adhering Freemason. In the case of Rev. J. A. Edmundson, of the M. E. church, Onarga, Ill., than whom there is not a stronger, more learned or eloquent minister in Eastern or Central Illinois, yet the lodge is working against him in all manner of ways to starve out and silence him, because he is a power in a quiet way against the lodge. Publicly he scarcely ever arraigns the orders, but with his pen and by word as he passes around among his people he is simply a terror to lodge ways, falsehoods and trickery.

IMMINENCE OF CHRIST'S COMING.

BELOIT, ALA., March 6, 1897.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The two able articles on the coming of our Lord, by Rev. J. S. T. Milligan, have greatly interested me; and while I cannot accept the conclusions of the learned and excellent brother, I am glad to have the subject brought before the readers of the Cynosure. There is one insurmountable obstacle to the acceptance of the doctrine of the Post-millennial advent of our Lord. The personal coming of our Lord, his "coming in the clouds with power and great glory," is everywhere spoken of as imminent.

1. It is impossible to predict the time of his coming. "Of that day and that hour knoweth no man; no, not the angels in heaven, but my Father only." Matt. 24:36, 1 Thess. 5:1,2, 2 Pet. 3:10.

2. It will come upon an unrepentant, unexpectant and unprepared world. "As it was in the days of Noah, so also shall the coming of the Son of man be. For as it was in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the flood came and took them all away; so also shall the coming of the Son of man be." Matt. 24:37-39. "Likewise, also, as it was in the days of Lot, they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be when the Son of man shall be revealed." Luke 17: 28-30.

3. The coming of the Lord will be with great suddenness and without any premonition, except to those who are ready and waiting for his coming. "For as the lightening cometh out of the east and shineth unto the west, so shall the coming of the Son of man be." Matt. 24:27, Luke 17:24 "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." 1 Thess. 5:4.

4 The attitude of all Christians should be that of constant waiting and expectation of his coming, as an event already due. "Watch ye, therefore, for ye know not what hour the Lord doth come." "Therefore, be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man doth come." Matt. 24:42 44, Luke 21:36, Mark 13: 33-35.

5. The imminence of the Lord's coming is set forth as a special incentive to holiness. "The very God of peace sanctify you wholly, and I pray God that your whole soul, body and spirit be preserved unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Thess. 5:23; also 1 Cor. 1:8. "Teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present evil world; looking for that blessed hope, the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." Titus 2:12,13.

Now in the nature of things it is impossible to "watch" for an event that is more than a thousand years in the future. Either our Lord did not command his people to watch and "wait for the Son from heaven," or he did not give us reason to believe that his coming is many hundred years in the future. Which of these conclusions is logical and Scriptural I leave your readers to decide.

That there are some prophecies remaining to be fulfillled is doubtless true; but there are none that must necessarily precede the coming of our Lord. This is the one great event for which the church is now waiting. "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh." H. H. Hinman.

SEE MEN AS TREES WALKING.

Oakland, Cal., March 8, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—Some good men do not see the whole truth. In the conversion of sinners God may bless the instrumentality of either good or bad men who may be very limited in the knowledge of truth. More than that; of all the multitudes of good men in the Christian world very few understand and believe the whole truth. And so in what I am about to write in reference to Rev. Dr. Munhall, the able and distinguished evangelist, I must not be understood as saying anything against his piety or sincerity or greatness. He has recently closed a series of successful evangelistic meetings in our city. His sermons and Bible readings were of wonderful power. I hope that thousands have been awakened to a higher and better life. Many popular evils were exposed and Christians warned against them. In this probably he would compare favorably with the great evangelist, D. L. Moody.

But I have to bear testimony against Dr. Munhall. At the close of one of his afternoon Bible readings he announced that on the next afternoon he would speak against Christians being "unequally yoked together with unbelievers," and among other things mentioned secret societies. In repeating the announcement in the evening he did not mention secret societies. Lest he might not speak of them, before the opening of the next afternoon's address I sent up to him a question (he called for them before every afternoon meeting) in some such words as these: "What about the secret orders? Are they good or bad? May Christians join them? or not? or is it optional?"

His custom was to answer questions before he began the address. Having read my question, he added: "I will speak of that subject after awhile." In due time, and after testifying faithfully against Christians going into various entangling and sinful relations with unbelievers, he spoke of secret societies. At the beginning he told us that he had belonged to quite a number of them. Secret societies, he said, are not necessarily sinful. Presumably they are for one or two purposes, or both, viz., sociability and benevolence. If they adhere to these two objects they are not evil but good. But when they are turned to other uses they are evil, and then Christians should not be associated with un-Christian people. To illustrate his point he told of a lodge to which he had belonged, that on some special occasion had voted to have champagne and a dance. He was asked to contribute his share of the expenses. He replied, "No, I will have nothing to do with such sinful pleasures," and then took his hat, saying, "Good night, gentlemen," and walked out.

This is about the sum of his testimony against secret societies. He did not answer any of the questions sent to him. He did not condemn membership in any of the lodges. He did not advise anyone to come out of any of them, or warn anyone against going into them. As he said he belongs now to two of them, he may be a Mason. When he was done with his talk on the subject, I thought it would have been better if he had said nothing at all. He did more harm than good.

Whether Dr. Munhall was influenced by the knowledge of the fact that in his own church as well as in most of the other denominations there are multitudes of the people, and many ministers also, who belong to the lodges, I do not know. Some of the ministers on the platform at the time are reported to be Masons.

Since the meetings here closed Dr. Munhall is now holding others in Alameda, near Oakland. A week or ten days ago I wrote to him and kindly asked the privilege of a brief interview at any time or place that would be convenient to him, saying that I wished to talk over a subject that he had discussed in one of his addresses. I have had no reply. Subsequently I asked permission of the editor of the Occident, the Presbyterian weekly, to occupy a brief space in his columns on the subject of secret societies. He courteously declined, though he gave several reasons more or less satisfactory. The substance of them is that he cannot afford to agitate the question, and deprecates any discussion of it. The truth is that the churches are full of lodgemen and do not wish agitation; much as it was in the days of slavery, when members of pro-slavery churches said, "Don't agitate; let us have peace." Perhaps it would be better for the Cynosure and lecturers to say less about the lodges and more against the churches that receive and retain members of them.

The moral of what has been written above is this: The lodge system is an awfully dangerous and blinding evil.

P. S.—Since the above was written I have received a letter in which Dr. Munhall promises me an interview. After this is enjoyed you may probably hear from me again. N. R. J.

THE LODGE IN POLITICS.

Bloomington, Ill., March 6, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—The following extract is from one of our dailies, announcing what we have long been expecting, viz., that demagogues would seek to avail themselves of the prevalent secret society craze, to advance their party interests and secure the emoluments. The fate of popular institutions, when such tactics become universal in politics, would not be hard to imagine. The moral and intellectual grade of those now enlisted in the movement can be inferred by the 'possum supper and "stag" dance which accompany it so far; but there is time enough yet for the minister, deacon and Sabbath-school superintendent to dignify or even sanctify the secret political (cabal) brotherhood. Here is the extract:

"A few days after the election of last November six or eight men met in the Mail office in Greenview one night to talk over the feasibility of organizing an association having for its object the promotion of the principles and doctrines of the Republican party. The first officers chosen were E. H. Brunsman, commander; J. H. Stone, vice commander; Frank West, scribe; J. E. Jackson, financier; C. L. Hopkins, escort; G. C. Roberts, assistant escort; Dr. Miller, guard; R. L. Walker, sentinel. A committee on ritual was appointed, and it is due mainly to their efforts that the association has achieved such success in so short a time. After much discussion the name, 'Order of Lincoln Republicans,' was decided upon. The initiation fee was placed at one dollar.

"The first meeting for the purpose of initiation was held November 24. That evening six candidates took the degrees, the whole ending with a banquet at the opera house of oysters and 'possum. This meeting was so successful that applications for membership came in rapidly. It was decided to hold the ceremonials several weeks apart, ending each one with a banquet. On December 22 four candidates were instructed in the mysteries of the order. Upon adjourning to the opera house, some of the members had a 'stag' dance, and the whole evening was one of merriment. On Friday night, January 29, Sheriff Hatch with six other candidates were invested with the secret work. After the banquet Messrs Hatch and Tice gave the members assembled good talks, and the meeting closed."

PRESIDENT AND VICE-PRESIDENT AT CHURCH.

Washington, D. C., March 10, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—The President and Mrs. McKinley expect to attend Foundry M. E. church, the same they attended during their former residence in Washington, regularly; but last Sabbath Mr. McKinley and his mother attended the Metropolitan church especially to hear a sermon preached by Bishop John P. Newman. Seated in the pulpit was Rev. Dr. Manchester, of Canton, the former pastor of Mr. and Mrs. McKinley. Bishop Newman's sermon made no allusion to the new administration, unless the following reference to the arbitration treaty, which has been so strongly endorsed by the President, and which it is expected the Senate will speedily act upon, now that it has again taken it up, could be considered such: "I have a vision of the time that will come when illustrious statesmen will meet at St. Paul's, London, or St. Peter's, Rome, or St. Sophia's, Constantinople, or here in Washington, representing all countries of the earth, who will agree upon a basis of arbitration which shall insure the peace of the world for all future time," although a sermon on currant public topics was expected when the first hymn was given out—

"Watchman, tell us of the night;
What its signs of promise are."

The Vice-President and Mrs. Hobart are Presbyterians. They have not yet decided what church they will regularly attend during their residence in Washington. The choice of churches has been left with Mrs. Hobart, and she is undecided, although it is reasonably certain that she will choose either the New York Avenue church, the pastor of which is an old friend of the family, or the Church of the Covenant. They attended the latter last Sabbath, and occupied the pew of the pastor, Dr. Hamlin. Secretary and Mrs. Alger and their daughter, Miss Frances, were connected with the Presbyterian church in Detroit, of which Dr. Radcliffe was pastor for thirteen years, so it was very natural that they should choose the New York Avenue church, of which Dr. Radcliffe is pastor. They attended that church last Sabbath, and together with Mrs. Radcliffe, occupied what is known as "President Lincoln's pew." Dr. Radcliffe's sermon was on how the belief in the immutability of the soul influences the future, and incidentally he took occasion to utter some harsh criticisms of the professional politicians. Secretary Long and his daughter are Unitarians. Last Sabbath they attended services at the Church of All Souls and listened to a Lenten sermon preached by the pastor, Rev. E. Bradford Leavitt. They have not definitely decided, but it is probable that they will attend this church regularly. Attorney General McKenna, who is a Roman Catholic, attended services at St. Matthew's church. The other members of the Cabinet are not known to have attended any church last Sabbath. C. A. S.

FROM NORTHWESTERN IOWA.

Glidden, Ia., March 8, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—We want you to lecture and preach at Glidden on the subject of secret orders. The town is woefully lodge-ridden by Masons, Knights of Pythias, Modern Woodmen, Good Templars and Sisters of Rebekah. Some of the members say it cost them $25 a year, and some can scarcely keep up their assessments. The churches seem to have lost their power.

At the funeral recently of a woman who was a Sister of Rebekah, and also a church member, the Odd-fellows and Rebekahs conducted the funeral, sending to Carroll for a minister who was an Odd-fellow and Mason, and who gave a sermon extolling the lodge and ignoring the church. Even the pastor of the church of which the woman was a member was ignored, although he stood at the door, book in hand, expecting to take part.

LETTER FROM D. L. MOODY.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 26, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—You have very kindly responded to my request for notices in the past, and I should esteem it a favor if you would announce that the conference for Bible study at our Institute will be in session from Tuesday, April 6th, to Friday, the 30th, inclusive. Pastors will be able to return to their charges for the first Sabbath in May. They will thus have four weeks at the Institute, with but three Sabbaths' absence from their churches.

In the afternoon, at two and three each day, there will be special lectures by Rev. Wm. Patterson, the celebrated pastor of Toronto, Rev. W. W. Clark, the well-known Bible teacher, and R. A. Torrey, superintendent. Rev. W. W. Clark will speak on the following subjects: "The Old and New Testaments Contrasted and Harmonized," "The Plan of the New Testament," "The Special Features of the Gospels" (illustrated by a large chart), "The Gospel of Mark," "Christ in the Hebrews," "The Person and Work of the Holy Spirit," "Law and Grace Contrasted and Harmonized," "The Deep Things of God—Six Layers of Truth," "The Dispensations, Past, Present and Future" (illustrated by a diagram), "The Book of Revelation," and other subjects.

D. L. Moody.

A PRESIDING ELDER'S INITIATION.

Olean, N. Y., March 8, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—I have secured from a reliable source the proof that the ridiculous performances of the "Day Mare" and "Wild Ass of the Desert" are obtaining largely among various lodges with increasing demands. "About six hundred" of those "side-splitting" machines "have been sold to different lodges during the past year." Who among notables are committed to those lodges? How it hurts to tell it. There are bishops and clergymen of all grades, and laymen in abundance in church and state, from the president-elect down, all endorsers of such consummate nonsense, to say the least.

Can Christ dwell in the lives and hearts of those who lend their influence thereto? Do they not, professing to be Christians, play the harlot and perform the part of hypocrites? Can Christ and Belial dwell together? Can "two masters" be served? Only think of it! A bishop, who should be a holy man, having sport with all sorts of characters all Saturday night, and striding homeward to prepare for entering the sacred desk to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ to an anxious congregation on Sabbath morning, urging upon their attention the divine precepts, "Be ye holy for I am holy. Be ye holy in all manner of conversation," etc., etc.

To say nothing of the degrading nonsense noticed by your former illustrations of the "Day Mare," etc., used by the lodges, a certain man in this city who took the Master Mason's degree informed me but a few days since that he became disgusted, at the time of the initiation, with a certain presiding elder present, and that he lost all confidence in and respect for him. The same presiding elder has since been initiated in the Scottish Rite degree, and now unblushingly wears attached to his heavy gold chain an insignia of his exalted discipleship. Now, which master does he serve, Christ or Belial?

This presiding elder contends that Pres. Finney was a despicable man because he exposed Masonry, which argues that presiding elder is true to the craft. Therefore the order must be his "master" acknowledged. Then the reverend sir has a Christ-denying master. Christ is excluded from Masonry (see ritual by Daniel Sickels). In the lodge, being a true Mason, he is a Christ-denier. If not, he is there playing the hypocrite. Being a true Mason, he is, when in the church professing Christ and preaching him, there also playing the hypocrite.

Dear reader, tell us what he is. Is he not of that class spoken by 2 Tim. 3: 13, "deceiving and being deceived;" and as 2 Peter 2: 13 says, "Spots they are and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceivings while they feast with you?" It is not my province to call such hypocrites, but this I am satisfied of, that if I conducted myself thus I would be hypocritical. To his own master he stands or falls; for though he recognizes two masters there is only One who "shall judge him in that day."

Masonry is a religion, but it is pure theism (Mackey's Lexicon, p. 404); and farther, Chase's Digest of Masonic Law, p. 206, says, "To require that a candidate profess a belief in the 'divine authenticity of the Bible' 'or a state of future rewards and punishments' is a serious innovation in the very body of Masonry."

It is this anti-Christ that said presiding elder is aiding and abetting by his influence everywhere. Where does such an one stand? Sworn to defend anti-Christ and professing at the same time to be a friend of Christ! Serving anti-christ and professing to be a friend of Christ! Did Judas do any worse?

When this mighty Mason enters into the lodge and has shut to the door, and the poor desolate man, lame, and blind, and weak, and feeble, and infirm, and hungry, and naked, knocks at the door, crying, "Let me in," a voice from within says, "Who's there?"

"Oh, it's me; a poor, afflicted unfortunate one."

INITIATION OF A PRESIDING ELDER.

A voice again, "We shield none here but the hale and healthy and the athlete. Begone! go to the church."

Another loud knock. "Who comes there?"

"It's me."

"Well, who are you?"

"Don't you know me? Why, I was at one of your open meetings. I keep one of the firstclass hotels on Broad street; and I have a splendid liquor store containing all new brands. Why, you have called on me, and I was at your conference. I am going to help pay your claim. I am Jacobus ———."

"Oh, I see. Wait, we will let you in."

Another rap. "Who comes there?"

"Oh, its me; don't you know me? I have been instructing your children in the "science" of dancing, and have laid up something by my profession. Am well and hearty."

"All right."

Hark! Rap, rap, rap. "Who's there?"

"It's us."

"Who?"

"All sorts; only we have strength and maturity and money enough left. We are a respectable class of no-religionists, only we believe in a Supreme Ruler of the universe. We don't know anything about your Christology and have no theological notions. We are free men. We go to theaters, balls, horse-racing, and gamble all we please; visit saloons and fast houses and help support them, and keep fast horses, too. We don't care anything about fanatics nor decalogue of Moses, etc. Our nationalities are diverse, but we are hale and hearty, sound in purse and person."

"Oh, I see, gentlemen. We extend to you the right hand of fellowship."

Hail, fellows, well met.

"Hail, Masonry divine, Glory of ages shine."

OUR WEEKLY SERMON.

BY REV. J. S. T. MILLIGAN.

It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, the comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart I will send him unto you. John 16:7.

In my previous sermons I have given reasons why I cannot believe that Christ will come and reign in person on the earth during the millennium. Such a theory I think is unphilosophical; the presumption is against it, and it is un-Scriptural. It disparages the sufficiency of the church as a reform organization, and the efficiency of the Bible and the Holy Spirit. It is in the person of the Spirit that Christ dwells richly in every renewed heart; that we are made wise to salvation and quickened into new life. As in nature this quickening agent is sent forth and the stars shine and the ocean as well as earth teems with life, so in grace the word returns not void; Paul may plant and Apollos water, but the increase is by the Spirit.

My fourth objection to this Pre-millenarian theory is, that it has so many wrong conceptions of the kingdom of grace. This kingdom is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost; that it is not carnal and earthly, but spiritual. It is not in a visible, personal Christ, so much as in Christ formed in us the hope of glory. Christ said, "The kingdom of God is within you." How irreconcilable is this with Dr. Pierson's declaration that Christ had not received his kingdom yet, and will not until the millennium.

Christ's providential kingdom was set up when the first promise was made, and his kingdom of grace when the first family believed. It was set up in heaven when the Father said, "Let the angels of God worship him." It was at hand when John the Baptist preached in the wilderness. In its New Testament sense it was reorganized at Pentecost. In the same sense most of Christ's disciples did not see death until the kingdom of God came. In the same sense we see not yet all things put under him, but we see him crowned with glory and honor, and made Lord of the works of God's hands.

Christ's kingdom in the hearts of men, in families and in the church has long been set up. It is his kingdom in the state, not his providential kingdom over it, that is now the issue. Up to date we see that kings have set themselves, and rulers have taken counsel together against the Lord. There is a vision in Dan. 2, of the stone cut out of the mountain representing the kingdom of Christ smiting the great image or world powers. It would be as proper to say the millennium will be a kingdom of literal stones and mountains, as to say it will be a kingdom of the literal Son of man. Christ himself gave anew the key to this matter in the case of John the Baptist. John had said to the Jews, I am not Elias, meaning in their literal idea of his coming. But Christ told his disciples that John was the Elias predicted, meaning that the prediction was to be understood in a spiritual and figurative, and not in a literal and personal sense. In his own words he came in the spirit and power of Elias.

We see the wisdom of this view in the case of Elias and John. Elias had been received up into celestial and ineffable glory without tasting of death. His work on earth was so grandly finished that he had the honor of translation. How unwise the conjecture that he should either change his celestial and glorified body for one of earth, or be sent back in his glorified body to such a life as John lived, and to such a death as John died. Yet this was the conjecture of the Jews and some of the disciples. So in my opinion is the view unwise that would take Christ from his celestial throne to wear only an earthly crown, and sway a literal scepter here on earth for a thousand years. Too unwise and cruel would it be to bring Christ, and those already glorified with him, back to this mean, sin-cursed earth, even to reign upon it. Their work on earth is done, and the judge himself has pronounced it well done. Their works have already followed them and their celestial reward has been bestowed. Already they occupy with Christ upon the highest and most glorious throne in the universe. God's thoughts and God's plans are heaven-high above such earthly conceptions.

CALIFORNIA ROADS.

$18,000,000 EXPENDED ON THEM IN TEN YEARS.

No Permanent Result From This Vast Outlay—Lack of System Causes Waste of Money—State Bureau of Highways Offers Suggestions For Improvement.

The bureau of highways of California has completed a very elaborate report of its work since it began operations in July, 1895, and sent it in to the governor. The bureau has ascertained from the auditors of the various counties the amount of money spent on roads for the years 1895-6, inclusive, exclusive of many payments for bridges out of other than road funds and private subscriptions to encourage road work, and finds that the amount is $17,919,324, that there remains a very poor lot of roads generally in this state, that the work has been carried on without method or system, and recommends a definite system of highway construction throughout the entire state. To this end the roads should be classified as state highways, county thoroughfares and district roads, the first class to be constructed by the state as main arteries, the second by the counties under direction of the supervisors and the third to serve the needs of localities.

The bureau further says that there is scarcely any permanent highway construction in the state and ascribes this state of affairs to work carried on without method or system and money wastefully and injudiciously expended. The introduction of a definite system of highway construction throughout the state is the remedy prescribed.

Changes and revisions of road laws are recommended with a view to harmonizing conflicting sections, and also penalties for noncompliance with the laws; also the reduction of the limit of taxation from 40 cents to 35 cents per $100 for county highway purposes, and a state levy of one-fourth of a mill per $1 of total assessed valuation for the state highway fund. The bureau is of the opinion that better results can be accomplished through system and economy with this lesser expenditure than is now accomplished with the greater tax levy.

The recommendation for wide tires is three inches minimum width of tire for the ordinary farm and road wagon, four inches for wagons intended for loads between four and six tons, five inches for loads more than six and less than eight tons, six inches for wagons more than eight tons; law not to go into effect immediately; after Jan. 1, 1899, fine for having wagons on sale not in conformity with the wide tire law. After Jan. 1, 1900, use of wagons not conformable to the law to be subject to license.

The bureau favors substitution of bridges and culverts made of stone, concrete or brick for wooden bridges. Where wooden, steel or combination bridges are necessary the floors should be protected by a pavement of asphaltum or bituminous rock; wooden bridges to be roofed over; iron and steel parts to be kept free of rust and painted regularly.

Roads in valleys and rolling country, generally located along land subdivision lines, and in mountains along old Indian trails, should be located along the best grade and alignments which the nature of the country will permit.

Construction and Maintenance of State Highways.—About 4,500 miles of road, varying in cost from $500 to $4,500 per mile.

County Thoroughfare.—The main road of each county to serve the general interest of the county, constructed under the direction of the supervisors and to serve as feeders to the state highways.

District Roads.—Constructed by people of particular localities to serve the immediate necessity; the people to organize themselves into road districts after the manner of the organization of school districts and to construct such roads as they desire.

The bureau is of the opinion that the sentiment for good roads at the present time is such that the movement must result in the early adoption of a definite system, or no improvement will be made for several decades. A definite system must be substituted for the present haphazard methods. The plan recommended is based on the experience of other states and other countries modified by the conditions peculiar to California. The adoption of the plan proposed and the inauguration of the system recommended, together with the minor recommendations, would make the Golden State the ideal highway community of the world.

GOOD ROADS FOR ALL.

They Are Not Intended to Benefit Any One Class, but Everybody.

Two or three years ago the farmers allowed themselves to believe that the good roads agitation was wholly in the interest of the wheelmen, and that the burden of providing them would fall upon the farmers' shoulders.

That idea has exploded. While the farmers know that good roads mean increased comfort and pleasure for those who ride the wheel, they have come to understand that good roads mean more than that for them; that they not only mean pleasure and comfort for them, but a high degree of profit—profit in time saved, profit in vastly larger loads while marketing their products, profit in saved horseflesh, profit in a large increase in value of their farms.

They have come to realize that good roads are cheap roads, the cheapest that the farmer can have. They have only to point to here and there patches of good road that have needed no attention, in some instances, for a quarter of a century.

Good roads are a logical, happy necessity for all—not a luxury for the few.

A Wasteful Repair System.

It is a curious fact that farmers, who are the class most benefited by good roads, are usually the last ones to move toward their improvement. They go on, in many communities, year after year working out road tax, doing the work in a slipshod, half way fashion, drawing soft earth up from the roadsides to the middle of the highway, making a thick cushion over which teams and wagons struggle until the yielding mass is ground and cut and crumbled back again to the ditches from which it came. This performance is the regular order, and the results are just what one might naturally expect—almost impassable mud and deep cuts, dangerous alike to vehicles and the faithful beasts that draw them.—New York Ledger.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 18, 1897.

THE LATE DR. HENRY T. CHEEVER.

This distinguished preacher and reformer died at his home in Worcester, Mass., Feb. 13th, at the age of 83. He was born in Hallowell, Maine. His mother was Elizabeth Bancroft, aunt of the distinguished historian, Geo. Bancroft. Another sister of his grandmother, Mary Bancroft, was the mother of the anti-slavery pioneers, Elijah P., Joseph C., and Owen Lovejoy. He graduated at Bowdoin College in 1834.

After a tour in Europe he graduated at Andover Theological Seminary and labored as pastor of churches at Lodi, N. J., Chrystie street, New York City, Westbrook, Conn., Greenport, L. I., and at Jewett City, Conn. He was active in literary labors and was a facile and graphic writer. He was a pioneer in the anti-slavery agitation, and for the prohibition of the liquor traffic and of the secret lodge. On almost all subjects of social reform he held radical views, and was persistent in his convictions and earnest in their expression. He was confined to his room but a short time before his death, which at last came suddenly.

TO OUR READERS IN THE WEST.

As you will see by Bro. P. B. Williams' letter in ast week's Cynosure he expects to occupy the time rom April 16th to June 15th with a lecture tour extending from Los Angeles, Cal., to Chicago. He will take the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe route from Deming or Albuquerque in New Mexico; and all friends living on or near this route have an opportunity to secure a popular lecture on the lodge question from this well-posted, interesting and logical speaker.

His terms for a lecture are entertainment and the small sum of $5, which may be easily raised by a collection or by solicitation among friends. Bro. Williams has the nack of enthusing his audiences and putting them in excellent humor for a collection. We expect a large number will at once avail themselves of this rare opportunity to hear the lodge question discussed. A number of appointments have already been made, and it is expected that meetings will be secured at Pueblo, Colorado Springs, Denver, Loveland, Greely, Evans, La Junta, in Colorado, and at Sterling, Wichita, Newton, Walton, Eskridge, Topeka, Denison and Winchester, in Kansas. Beginning at Kansas City we expect a number of important meetings can be arranged in Missouri; and also at Blanchard, Coin, College Springs, Clarinda and other points in Iowa, as well as at points in Illinois.

We hope friends at these points will respond promptly before Bro. Williams' dates are all taken. Write to Rev. P. B. Williams, Los Angeles, Cal., or to W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Salust said the strength of a nation was not in its armies but in its friends. The strength of the Cynosure is in its friends. We wish to express our grateful appreciation of the friends whose letters and articles have made these pages so interesting for years past. The number of writers who wish to be heard through the Cynosure is constantly increasing so that it is a serious question how to afford the necessary space. Either our pages must be enlarged or our writers must condense what they have to say.

Another reason for condensation is that the arguments against the lodge have been so often stated that to many the repetition grows wearisome. We hope our writers will boil down every fact and argument as much as possible. Before sending your letters or articles for the press, read them over carefully and strike out every redundant word and sentence, and then re-write them. In this age when men talk by lightning and telephone and write letters on postal cards they have not time to read long articles. An article is readable and valuable not in proportion to its length, but to its original and briefly stated facts and arguments. Always remember that facts are God's arguments.

We wish, also, to remind many of our contributors that far too much of our time is spent in putting poorly prepared manuscript in shape for our compositors. It is unfair to require them to waste time in deciphering illegible manuscript. For this reason many of the leading papers require their manuscript to be type written. If you cannot use a type writer then write on one side of the paper in plain, large, legible hand, without interlining, and give your sentences plenty of room. Put your manuscript as nearly as possible in the shape you wish it to appear in print, and above all things be brief. Many good articles have to lie over from time to time because they are too long, and the editor has not time to condense them.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. Charles R. Hunt is now in charge of a congregation at Union, Iowa.

—Editor M. A. Gault preached last Sabbath morning and evening in the Seventh U. P. church, Chicago.

—Rev. W. L. Farris, so prominent in our anti-secret work in Iowa, has a membership of over 300 in his congregation at Cherokee.

—Rev. Edwin R. Worrell, pastor at Waverly, Kan., has been giving convention addresses recently in the interests of Sabbath-school work.

—Attorney Thomas H. Gault will lecture at 6530 Cottage Grove Ave., Thursday, March 18, 8 P. M. Subject, "Prosperity Dependent on Morals and Religion." All are cordially invited.

—Elder Rufus Smith's fine portrait adorns the first page of the last Purity Review of Chicago. The elder has been confined to his home lately by an attack of the grippe, but we are glad to know that he is getting about again.

—Rev. T. C. Sproull, who addressed the Minnesota State Convention, is now preaching at Houston, Ill. He writes: "I find the weather much milder here than in Minnesota, where the snow lies two feet deep on the level."

—Rev. S. A. Manwell, of Pittsford, Mich., preached the funeral sermon of Mrs. S. M. Tuttle, who died Feb. 18, at Eau Claire, Mich. The bereaved husband, R. J. Tuttle, writes us an interesting report of the very comforting sermon.

—Rev. J. M. Faris of New Concord, O., who has done good service for our cause in that State, has been called to a pastorate at Glenwood, Minn. If he chooses Minnesota as his field of labor, Bro. Fenton will find him a strong helper in the State work.

—The Progressive Varnishers' Union has decided to make the trade of varnishing a closed one to every man unwilling or unable to pay an initiation fee of $25 The initiation fee was raised to that amount on March 1. The union is powerful and controls all the work in its line in New York.

—Josiah W. Leeds has written an able essay on the theatre, which H. L Hastings of Boston has published in the form of a booklet of 90 pages, at the rate of two for 15 cents. It deals with a variety of aspects of the theatre, which are usually not discussed in treating of the play-house and its perils.

—The speedy collapse of the A. P. A. is indicated by the fact that at a recent meeting the leaders of the American Protective Association of New Haven, Conn., decided definitely to disband the organization. Two years ago in New Haven there were four councils, with memberships aggregating several thousands.

—Rev. N. R. Johnston, of Oakland, Cal., writes March 8th: "Yesterday the voters of Oakland had the opportunity of saying whether or not they wish the saloons shut up. By an overwhelming vote they said no. And so our two or three hundred 'hell gates' will continue open, who knows how long, O morales! O mores!"

—The Daily Journal, of Minneapolis, says that the Norwegian Lutherans held a meeting, Feb. 23, at Calmar, Ia., denouncing the orders of Knights of Pythias and Modern Woodmen. They distributed pamphlets containing an alleged expose of the secret workings of the above mentioned societies. A number of the younger members of the church belong to both orders, and every effort is being made to get them to withdraw.

—A lady visited us lately whose husband is a prominent business man in a western town. They are Cynosure subscribers and in sympathy with our work. But she said their town was so completely under lodge domination that she could not, for the sake of their business, write us for publication or take any open stand against the orders.

—Master Workman James R. Sovereign in a New York address recently favored civil war as a means for obtaining redress for the enforced idleness of the 2,000,000 toilers who, he says, cannot obtain work. It seems that there are secret revolutionary orders like the "Iron Brotherhood" and the "Industrial Army." Men who carefully read and observe are alarmed at these indications of an approaching revolution.

—Miss Eva M. Sbontz, the proficient elocutionist of the National W. C. T. U., writes from Toledo, O.: "I have a great deal of hard work ahead of me. Six nights in each week are taken up with dates for 'The Temple.' I am to be in Zanesville, Marietta, Delaware, Cincinnati, Dayton, Columbus, Toledo and other places. The State secretary of the old crusade State, Mrs. Clark, of Columbus, has arranged the work. You know it is $150,000 we hope to raise this year, if God will only open up the way and show us where to follow."

—Miss Ellen D. Morris of Kansas City, Mo., Corresponding Secretary of the State W. C. T. U., writes: "Yes, I am at the same old place (serving my tenth year). Your letter and papers were received by Mrs. Hoffman just before she left for the Pacific Coast. In reply to your question as to whether I have 'decided convictions on the secret society question,' I must say that I have; but am not ready to give the same to the public. I have not studied the subject sufficiently. I wish you success in all work undertaken in the Master's name and for his sake."

—The rules of the lately organized Executive Council of the Carpenters' and Wood Workers' Unions of this city put a big tariff upon carpenters and wood workers from outside places who came here to work, although they may be members in good standing of unions in the locality they came from. Each non-resident will be required to pay $5 every three months to the council for a card, without which he will be treated as a non-union man and ineligible to work in this city alongside union men. In addition he will have to pay dues to the union of which he is a member. This is another fact showing how completely labor is enslaved by the lodge.

—Mrs. M. B. Park, of Alexandria, Neb., writes: "I heard a young United Workman, of Ohiowa, say that Rev. Mr. Litherland, our former pastor but now of Council Bluffs, Ia., that he went through all the initiation ceremonies and seemed to enjoy the joke. This young man held up Bishop Newman, who was a Mason, as an example of true Christianity. Oh, that God's ministers could see where they are leading our young men. If these ministers would take a stand against the lodge their members would soon follow. Then the churches would be cleansed and ready for the promised blessing. Let us not weary in well doing for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

Four quarter sections of land in North Dakota for sale to the highest bidder. Two of these quarter sections are in Kidder County, and there is a good house on one, and a total of 130 acres at present in wheat. They are within five miles of railroad stations. The other two sections adjoin each other and are in Morton County. Address W. I. Phillips, 221 West Madison street, Chicago, Illinois.

—The Minneapolis Journal, of Feb. 24, said of the State Anti-secret Convention: "The opening gun of the much advertised Anti-secret Society Convention did not jar any windows in this vicinity. The convention opened by devotional exercises and an address of welcome from Prof. Hilleboe, responded to by Rev. W. Fenton, of St.

Paul, secretary of the association. Rev. C. J. Petri did not arrive, and his address, 'Lodge Life Inimical to Church Life,' was not delivered. Rev. T. C. Sproull delivered a lecture, 'The Religion of Secrecy—True and False,' in the evening, followed by a historical sketch of the different societies, by Rev. Mr. Fenton. There were about 100 delegates present, and, with the exception of Rev. O. T. Lee, of Northwood, Iowa, all are from this State."

—Rev. O. T. Lee, of Northwood, Iowa, writes: "On Wednesday evening, March 4th, your correspondent addressed a full house in Hayward, Minn., on the subject, 'Secret Societies.' Albert Lea circuit had their semi-annual meeting at this place, Rev. T. O. Tolo, pastor. Several pastors were present. The Modern Woodmen turned out en masse and took front seats. They undoubtedly intended to paralyze the speaker by their looks; but apparently the meeting turned out to be a revelation to the Modern Woodmen. They did not expect to meet with their ritual at such a place. They were challenged to deny the authenticity of the ritual, but no one had courage to say one word. Revs. Smeby, Strand and Tolo struck heavy blows on the lodges. The meeting did much to open the eyes of the good citizens of Hayward to the follies of the lodges."

—Prof. Will H. Keil, of Senecaville, Ohio, a teacher and composer of music, is the author of the prohibition song on our second page. He writes: "I mail you a copy of a new Prohibition song book which I prepared and printed myself on a mimeograph. Would you kindly examine it, and if practicable give a brief notice of same in the Cynosure? You would be at liberty to publish the words of any of the songs that you think would be of interest and benefit to your readers. I have had in mind the preparation of a few songs on the anti-secrecy reform, a cause which was ever dear to my aged and now sainted father's heart, as was also the prohibition of the liquor traffic. I also regard these two reforms as worthy of more consideration and attention by the Christian and patriot than any other subject that can be brought up before the American people. I wish you abundant success and encouragement."

BOARD OF DIRECTORS' MEETING.

Saturday morning, March 6th, the Board of Directors of the National Christian Association met at the Association building, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. The following members were present: Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. Dr. J. A. Collins, Ezra A. Cook, Esq., C. J. Holmes, Esq., J. M. Hitchcock, Esq., Rev. T. B. Radabaugh, Prof. Eliott Whipple and Rev. E. B. Wylie. President Blanchard presided. Letters of regret were received from Prof. H. F. Kletzing and Rev. T. B. Arnold. After opening prayer, Mr. Hitchcock for the committee on arrangements of the Annual Meeting made a report of progress containing the following recommendations:

1. That the Annual Meeting be held May 12th, at 10 A M, at the Association building, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

2. That a mass meeting be held at noon of the same day at the Willard Hall, in the Woman's Temple, La Salle and Monroe Sts.

3. That a final business session be held at Willard Hall immediately after the noon meeting.

4. That the pastors of the city and vicinity be invited to speak on the subject of secret societies some time prior to the Annual Meeting.

5. That Pres. Chas. A. Blanchard and the president of the National Christian Association, Rev. Samuel H. Swartz, be engaged to speak at the Moody church, La Salle and Chicago avenues, Apr. 20th, at 7:30 P. M. The large auditorium of this church, of world-wide fame, has already been secured for the meeting.

The larger part of the morning was devoted to the consideration of the finances of the Association. That the interests of the Association should suffer in these times when many of its loyal friends are themselves embarrassed, is no surprise. Just men and righteous causes suffer with the unjust in this world. Notwithstanding the great needs of the Association, it was the unanimous conviction, hopefully expressed, that by the blessing of God all necessary means will be forthcoming when those who can help are made acquainted with the facts. Meanwhile there will be an endeavor to reduce the expenses without decreasing the effectiveness of the work of the Association

A committee consisting of Dr. J. A. Collins, Prof. Eliott Whipple and E. B. Wylie was appointed to consider the best method of attaining the above object, and to report at a called meeting. After a season of united prayer, lead by Pres. Blanchard, the meeting adjourned.

REFORM NEWS.

LET THE PETITIONS CIRCULATE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 6, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE: — There is commendable progress being made in the circulation of the petitions. It is evident that time will be required to secure the signatures of friends. It is not surprising that some hesitate and question the propriety of this move. Some reason thus: Many of the Senators and Representatives at Harrisburg are connected with lodges. In the petitions we ask them to legislate against themselves, which we may be sure they will not do. Again: The number who will sign the petitions will not be large. In signing a petition with the few we will hold ourselves up to be laughed at instead of getting what we desire. As suggestions of propriety are always in order, it is well to consider the bearing of all our acts. Were it absolutely certain, which it is not, that no consideration would be given the petitions by those to whom they are addressed, it would be well to circulate them.

1. We are asking for what is just. We have absolute proof of this. Those who refuse to listen to a fair presentation of such petitions will show themselves to be unjust. The fair-minded who see this will do what they can to prevent their re-election. We can't tell what they will do until they have a trial. A trial would at least awaken discussion and investigation. When national and other reform petitions have come to Congress, there has always been a Senator Morse, or someone else, to take up and push the matter before that body. It is just that those who are under special obligation to a few should not rule over the whole. Who knows but Senators and Congressmen will want to enact laws to make their successors just, if they are not themselves. Many a drunkard has signed the pledge and voted the Prohibition ticket. Many lodgemen have broken their galling chains, and many others are longing for a good chance to do so. The folly of going before these representative bodies with petitions having but few names attached is such that we are sure only those unacquainted with the leaders of this move could think they would do such a thing.

2: There are at least fifty thousand persons in Pennsylvania opposed to secret societies. If friends will stop doubting and questioning, and all work, at least ten thousand names can be secured in a very short time. You may be sure, friends, when you put your names on the petitions that they are not to be taken to Harrisburg to be laughed at. Until we have large, strong petitions no names will be presented at Harrisburg. I cannot take space to enlarge arguments. There are many reasons why the petitions should be circulated, and no good reason in my judgment why they should not. What are the last reports?

Philadelphia.—Beacon Light Misson sends six pages of names: The First Swedish Congregational church, per C. O. Lindrath, sends two pages of names and $2.50. Pastors of Reformed Presbyterian, United Presbyterian, German Baptist Brethren, Free Methodist and other churches there are securing lists among their people.

Pittsburgh has not reported progress. Several pastors in Reformed Presbyterian, United Presbyterian and other churches there are securing names.

Allegheny.—Bro. Coleman, of the R P. church, sends four closely-written pages with additions pasted at the bottom. Others are at work there.

Among those who have sent in petitions, or reported that they are being signed, are Bro. W. W. Kulp, of Pottstown; Bro. Park, of East Stroudsburg; Walter Koening, Pitcairn; Sister S. M. Griffin, Mount Clare; Bro. R H. Shaw, Mrs. Lizzie McClelland and others from New Castle; Bro. Irvine Caldwell, West Middlesex; H. M. Trego, Sundly; Miss Harley, Harleyville; J. H. Beer, Rockton; James Robison, McAlevy's Fort; D. M. Gray, Cambridgeboro; L A. Wickey, Eshcol; Bro. A. Gray, Clarksburg; Rev. J. A. Scraggs, Cannonsburgh: Bro. W. S. Gottshall, Schwenksville; Bro. Fretz, Souderton; Rev. John Purdy, Beaver; Rev. E. Cronnewall, Butler; Bro. J. C. Berg, Scottdale; Blanch L. Dolph, Scranton: Bro. C. A. Bender, Tub; Bro. A. S. Shelly, Bally; Bro. Burton S Fox, Alverton; Rev. J. R. Latimer, Rose Point; Rev. A. B. Dickie, Harrisville; Bro. C. E. Temple, Brockwayville; Bro. D. L. Anderson, New Bedford; Anna Durr, Woodside; David Horning, Penfield; Bro. A. Bonnet, Brookville; Mrs. J. M. Hogue, Grove City.

In answer to various questions, let me say that petitions should be signed not only to the Senate, but to the House. Get the women also to sign them. All residents of the State are invited. Work where it will count best. If any are not supplied with petitions, send a card and they will be forwarded. Let the petitions circulate.

FROM A MISSOURI REFORMER.

ST. JOHN, Mo., March 8, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—About 2,800 years ago there was a man that feared not to declare the whole counsel of God, and this is what he said: "I have been very jealous for the Lord God of hosts. For the Children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars and slain thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only am left, and they seek my life to take it away." And the Lord said unto him, "Yet I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him."

These 7,000 had not the means of conversing then as we have now. They were sustained in their zealous walk by the power of Almighty God, who said to Moses, "I am that I am." I am reminded of this Scripture when I read letters from so many good writers in the Cynosure, and especially from Bro. W. Fenton. And here I would like to say for his encouragement, that we have here a church known as the United Baptist church, which has a confession of faith (though the Bible is our discipline), and this confession declares:

"The moral obligation of every intelligent creature to believe what God says and practice the same, by forsaking every appearence of evil, renouncing the hidden things of dishonesty, having no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them, for it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret; therefore we have no right in the Church of God, unless we renounce all connection with all secret institutions of men or devils, for God's government is public."

'Tis true we are not educated, but we do feel thankful for the knowledge God has given us to know a tree by its fruit, or a child born into the family of God by his daily walk, or his relation to the world. We know that we "cannot serve God and mammon." We know that when a man holds allegiance to secret orders and is bound by the third and seventh degree oaths of Freemasonry he is in positive violation of the laws of God. Therefore to say he is a Christian, or permit him to say it through thu church of which Christ is the head, is undoubtedly lying before the God of heaven.

It was not I that said "Ye cannot serve God and mammon;" neither did I say, "Judge not, that ye be not judged; for with what judgment ye judge ye shall be judged." By this, and other Scriptures, I have a right to say that no man can call an affiliating Mason a disciple of Christ. The judgment is cast already. "Ye shall be judged by every word that proceeds out of your mouth." Paul says, "I was absent in body but present in spirit." Again, "God is not the author of confusion but of peace." Who is raising all this disturbance? Are we that keep the law of the Lord? We are told, "Them that sin, rebuke before all, that others may fear." 1 Tim. 5:2.

But there is a saying of the devil's ripened into a maxim: "If you can't say anything good of a man don't say anything at all." In this God's law and the devil's maxim is contradictory.

J. T. CULLOR.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning March 21.
Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—How our bodies influence our souls. —Dan. 1, 8-21. (A temperance topic.)

The human body is too much neglected, from the standpoint of religion and of Christianity. Its importance is properly emphasized in the Bible. It is said there to be for the Lord, to have been purchased by Christ, to be the temple of the Holy Ghost, to be cared for by God, and also it is stated that it will be raised. While all this is declared in the Scriptures about the body, how little its dignity, worth and glory are emphasized in Christian teaching! How few sermons are preached upon the subject! How few topics for religious meetings are along this same line! In the light of this neglect, it is not to be wondered at that the body is disparaged, vilified, tolerated by many as a nuisance and used by thousands as a creature of appetite and lust. This indifference and neglect has resulted largely in a misunderstanding as to the true relation of body, mind and soul. In thousands of lives the body rules supreme, while it should be held in subjection—be a mere servant to the higher powers of man. The proper relation is the body in subjection to the mind, and body and mind in subjection to the soul. The change of the order not only weakens and destroys the body, but also the mind and soul.

That our bodies have a tremendous influence upon our souls cannot be denied. Science proves it. The man is composed of the three parts—body, mind, soul—and yet he is one person. And these three parts are so intimately connected with one another that what affects one affects them all. Science cannot explain in all details how the body, mind and soul act and react upon one another, but that they do is an undisputed scientific fact. That the body influences the soul is proved by Scripture. If it did not, why would so much stress be laid upon the subjection of the body? The Scripture constantly exhorts us to mortify the members of our bodies. Paul says, "I keep under my body and bring it into subjection, lest that by any means when I have preached to others I myself should be a castaway" (I Cor. ix, 27). This language clearly declares that one of the means through which he might possibly become a castaway was the body. If the supremacy of the body can endanger the eternal life of the soul, it certainly has a tremendous influence upon it. Experience also teaches the influence of the body upon the soul. Daniel and his companions were all the better mentally and spiritually because they had taken care of their bodies. How much more useful many Christians would be if they did but cultivate physical health! Uncared for bodies become grievious burdens and woeful hindrances. Let us get a proper conception of the relation of the body to Christian living and carry it out in our daily lives.

Bible Readings.—Deut. xxi, 18-21; Prov. xx, 1; xxiii, 20, 21, 29-32; xxxi, 4, 5; Hos. iv, 9-11; Rom. xiii, 12-14; xiv, 21; I Cor. vi, 9-20; ix, 27; II Cor. vi, 16-18; Gal. v, 19-26; Eph. v, 18; Col. iii, 5-8.

Resenting Insults.

There is no need to cringe and ignore insults. We have a right, duty and ability to resent.—Jewish Voice.

Duty.

Duty is a powerful charm and sovereign remedy against all melancholy fits. —Central Presbyterian.

So Close We Cannot See It.

Sin may be clasped so close we cannot see its face.—Archbishop Trench.

The Second Coming.

We hear less about the judgment day than formerly, but more about the second coming of Christ. For that coming His people "look with uplifted head." To them that day is not so much "a day of anger, day of wrath," as it is a day of triumph of the Master and His church. He who is coming will bring His work on earth to a glorious completion. He is not coming only to take vengeance on those who do not believe, but He is coming especially to approve those who have been faithful.—Reformed Church Messenger.

Eternal Love.

The eternal love tireth not, the eternal wisdom knoweth the hearts of men, and, still, to us all crieth very longingly the voice of the Man of Sorrows, who is faithful to perform all He promiseth, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."—Sunday at Home.

No More Wonderful.

It is no more wonderful that we should live again than that we should live at all.—Ram's Horn.

Their Own Salvation.

The saved must become savers if they would enjoy their own salvation.—United Presbyterian.

Christian Endeavor Briefs.

Twenty-seven Albany Christian Endeavor societies were represented in a recent successful service in the penitentiary. After the meeting each prisoner was visited in his cell.

The use of all its car sheds has been granted by the Philadelphia Traction company to the Christian Endeavorers of the city for the holding of gospel meetings.

The Congregational Chinese Endeavorers of San Francisco have within recent weeks contributed $17 toward the international convention fund and $30 to the American board. These Endeavorers support six missionaries in China.

One of Maine's district secretaries is about to go out through his county organizing Christian Endeavor societies and speaking for Christ in places where the name of God is heard only in blasphemy.

The Portland Floating society recently received six comfort bags from a venerable Christian in Andover, Mass., who is 72 years old, but still working earnestly for the Master.

A lad of 13 years, the youngest member of the Presbyterian society of Pueblo, Colo., recently led the Christian Endeavor meeting, and when the organist failed to appear he played the instrument.

The District of Columbia union is considering the advisability of organizing a good literature union in order that the work of this character may be more systematically and thoroughly done.

Hoke Smith as a Missionary.

We learn from the Atlanta Journal that "the Hon. Hoke Smith, ex-secretary of the interior, has returned to active Christian work since coming back to Atlanta to live," and that he has resumed the position of superintendent of the Sunday school of the First Presbyterian church. We do not know a better field for active missionary work than Atlanta, and we wish Mr. Smith the greatest success in his labors.—Charleston News and Courier.

GOVERNOR BLACK.

The Chief Executive of New York a Great Walker.

An Albany dispatch says that Governor Black walks from the executive mansion to the capitol every morning and when his day's work is done walks back home. Governor Flower used to do the same thing, and it was a very rare occurrence for Governor Hill to ride when the walking was good. Governor Morton rarely walked. His carriage was always at his beck and call.

Governor Black won fame as a pedestrian in Troy before he was thought of as a politician. He used to take delight in long jaunts out into the country. His legs are several inches longer than those of an ordinary man, and consequently he can get over a deal of ground in a short space of time. Mr. Black thought nothing a few years ago of a stroll before breakfast to Wynantskill and back, a distance of probably five or six miles.

Before the trolley line was put in operation up Ida Hall way the most leisurely horse car line in the country accommodated the residents of that beautiful section of Troy. It was a ride of more than half an hour from Governor Black's office to his home. The cars went down the hill just as slowly as they crept up it. Unless the weather happened to be stormy the railroad company rarely had occasion to find a seat for Governor Black.

Bright and early in the morning the governor to be could be seen swinging out of Pine Woods avenue into Pawling avenue at a gait which would turn the veteran Weston green with envy. He could always beat the horse car.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Private Secretaryship Is No Snap.

"Whoever succeeds me will have his hands full," said Private Secretary Thurber the other morning. "I have no idea who it will be, but no matter, he will have to be a hustler to find himself equal to the emergency. It is an erroneous belief that the position of private secretary to a president is a snap. The very reverse is the fact. You have no idea how much trouble and annoyance I have here. Representatives, senators, office seekers and officials in the departments, all wanting to see the president at one and the same time. It takes diplomacy, I tell you, to run this office. The private secretary to a president of the United States is an anvil, on which 70,000,000 of people are continually pounding."

Secretary Thurber was asked what he has in view after the close of his official career.

"I'll go back to the law," he replied. "My post with the firm of Don M. Dickinson of Detroit has been held open for me, and when I leave here on March 4 next I will resume business at the old stand."—New York Sun.

Olive Schreiner's Opinion of Cecil Rhodes.

This is what Olive Schreiner thinks of Cecil Rhodes: "He is Napoleon over again, but Napoleon in a financial, industrial and political world. He has all Napoleon's greatness, not a little of Napoleon pettiness, and he will fall some day, overwhelmed, as was Napoleon, by the corruption of his own tools. What Napoleon did with steel Cecil does with gold. Around him there is a court of creatures who only live to minister to his will, but who would turn and rend him tomorrow if he were tripped up by fate. As Napoleon thought Providence was always on the safe side of the heavy battalions, so Cecil is convinced there is no god so omnipotent as that of the full purse."

Galusha Grow's Eyesight.

Ex-Speaker of the House and Representative Galusha A. Grow of Pennsylvania is 78 years old, but he writes without glasses as readily as a boy of 18. The other day he was writing in the secretary's office of the house some autograph passes to the reserved gallery, and some one complimented him on his good sight. "It is because I began to wear glasses as soon as I needed them," said the veteran Yankee, for he is a native of Connecticut. "I have at home the ones I wore when I was much younger, and they still fit me. I use them sometimes for reading the newspapers."—Washington Post.

Suggestions For Story Writers.

E. F. Andrews writes for The Cosmopolitan some useful hints for the great American army of persons young and old who would like to be successful novel writers. It is certain there is a need just now of somebody who can write novels. The ranks of the authors whose fame is already made are thinning rapidly, and thus far there appears none to take their places.

To begin, Mr. Andrews mentions the two classes into which works of fiction are divided—the romantic and the realistic. The realistic school of novelists depicts life as it is, or thinks it does. The romantic school paints life as it may be. To this we on our own account would like to add a third class—that which represents life as it ought to be. The novelist who should successfully do this would be sure of immediate and lasting fame. Humanity is dead tired of the repulsive and painful scenes which so called "realistic" writers paint for us. It is likewise dead tired of that kind of romance on which the 16-year-old girl is so fond of feeding her silly and morbid imagination. The great success of Bellamy's "Looking Backward" and one or two other stories with a like motif is proof that the race wants, even in fiction, something happier, brighter and better than it has known.

Mr. Andrews tells us that the three principal ingredients of a novel are plot, incident and character. Of these the most important is character. The novelist must have every one of the personages wrought out into a character of his own. It will not at all do for a writer to follow the mere type in this matter, as a typical old maid or a typical politician. He must struggle with his mind and produce a type of his own. Thackeray and Dickens were the most successful character painters.

Furthermore, the novelist must not follow real life too closely in his character painting or in his incidents, says Mr. Andrews. And he is quite correct. We have observed that the most successful characters in a story are not those who really have existed, but who might exist almost anywhere. The most successful incidents are not those which really have happened, but those which might happen. Mr. Andrews says one theme never wears out—that of love between the sexes. And yet the most successful novels recently have been those in which either occult or economic questions have first place in importance.

In the sixth century of the Christian era a chronologist named Dionysius established a system of dating the years and centuries which has been followed ever since. He was the first to systematize the reckoning of time from the birth of Christ. Later investigations, however, and more accurate ones, demonstrated that he had fixed the birth of Christ four years later than he should have done. In the textbooks of chronology, therefore, the curious fact is recorded that Christ was born four years before Christ—that is, four years before the commencement of the Christian era. Teachers do not always stop to explain that this happens because Dionysius made a mistake in his dates. That being the case, The Outlook points out that we are actually already living in the twentieth century. Instead of being the year 1897 of the Christian era, this is really 1901 of that era.

The very rich should not be taxed at any higher rate than the poor, but the very rich should be forced to make honest returns of their property. To make them do this is the task now before lawmakers, ministers and reformers. When the laws, the assessing officers and assessment methods are alike so lax that a man worth $15,000,000 may escape year after year the payment of all taxes beyond $20,000, as happened recently in a well known instance, it is time something or somebody was reconstructed. The voters of this republic have the remedy for such dishonesty and perjury in their own hands. They have only to elect honest and competent men to manage the assessment and collection of taxes. Yes, there is one other little point, too—they will have to make honest returns of their own property. That will set a good example to the millionaires.

Read what a Massachusetts tax assessor writes about his business and then take it to heart: "Take the majority of people, whom I call in everything else just about as honest as they can be, and they would not misrepresent for the world. But when it comes to taxation they are about as dishonest as they can be, and it is not in any class either. They lie about different things. They will lie about their real estate just as they will lie about their personalty."

A letter can be sent from one part of Paris to another more quickly than a telegraph message. It can be shot through a compressed air tube in a flash, faster than a telegraph message can be transmitted, copied out and delivered.

The Nebraska legislature must receive the credit of having before it for official action thereon the queerest bill introduced into any lawmaking assembly this winter. It is a bill to suppress football.

Very much has been done to civilize man in his outward surroundings. Now there should be a crusade to civilize him inwardly.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems of Truth Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

America, because of her geographical position, should be the arbiter for other countries. But Americans must convince other nations that they are not moved by a spirit of aggrandizement.—Bishop Lawrence, Episcopal, Boston.

Biblical History Is Reliable.

The truthfulness of the historic records of the Bible has often been assailed, but it has come forth from the attacks untouched, and is receiving confirmations daily in all the recent discoveries of the buried records of Egyptian monuments and tombs, and of Assyrian cylinders, tablets and the hardened bricks covered with inscriptions. The penknives, scalpels and microscopes of the critics have been no match for the picks and shovels of the archæologist, and the biographies of the Bible show us the heroes as they were with all their defects and sins, and reveal them as representative men, standing as types of life and conduct manifest in all the past and the present. There is in all of them the one "touch of nature that makes the whole world kin."—Rev. T. Beeber, Presbyterian, Norristown, Pa.

Doubt and Laziness.

Doubt is a good thing if honest, but as a lazy habit of the mind, to excuse one from investigation, is a mean thing. The man who believes in God as a tyrant will hate him; who believes in him as easy going, will do as he pleases and then run and ask for forgiveness. But the man who loves God as a father will obey him. The Bible is the chart of life, which shows all the reefs and all the headlands, that you may sail safely into the harbor. Alas for him who hopeless lays dead away!

It does not make a difference what one believes. It is one's duty to train the intellectual faculties to know the right from wrong; to free his mind from prejudice; to come to some decision on religious matters as well as political, and then stand for it, even if one is on the unpopular side.—Rev. F. O. Hall, Everyday Church, Boston.

Natural Inequalities.

The great inequalities of the world are the natural ones, for which God or the universe is responsible. Much unreasonable discontent might be cured if people would only learn to estimate the real value of the things that are within their reach. I would not have any one contented with today as a finality, and yet I would have every one contented with today as one step in the ever upward ascent in the growth of the soul. The ideal condition of society should be one of practical content and happiness with the day, and yet such a discontent with all imperfect conditions that makes man strive for that kind of growth which looks toward the perfecting of humanity.—Rev. J. M. Savage, Unitarian, New York.

The Modern Church.

The cemetery—the home of the dead—is not this the symbol of many of our churches today? As we enter one of these ecclesiastical graveyards no one meets us at the door. Tremblingly we take a seat, and in a few minutes the cultured pastor occupies his accustomed place, when a quartet away up in the organ loft rolls out the demisemiquavers of some unintelligible piece of music. The pastor's carefully prepared essay on some abstruse problem in theology has a soothing effect on many of his hearers, for already several have have taken refuge in slumber, to be awakened only by the screaming soprano, who is earning her salary by calling back into consciousness those who have fallen asleep.—Rev. C. H. Fitzwilliam, Baptist, Pittsburg.

CAUSES OF MISERY.

Alcohol and Narcotics Entail Vice Upon the Children of the Users.

We live in a sensational age, because the nervous stamina of our people is lessened—the very brain is going. And why? The silly cry is, "We live too fast!"—silly because it is in itself an effect. With less brain force, stronger outward appeals to excitement are necessary—sensational playbills, sensational amusements, sensational books, even sensational songs and sermons. What are the elements of this fast life? A fast life is a life of waste, of exhaustion, both morally and physically, and this has been going on in spite of temperance education and shortened hours of labor. What, then, are the chief constituents in this causation which can possibly account for the terrible effects? They are not far to seek, and they are vices entailed upon the children, cursing them evermore with each generation.

A tablespoonful of alcohol diluted, taken in the 24 hours, causes 4,300 extra heart beats, and in secondary effect narcotizes the recuperative forces. Consider the effect of £130,000,000 in value of this poison yearly consumed by 12,000,000 adults and then calculate the possible effect upon the nerve and brain of £16,000,000 worth of the narcotic tobacco consumed by another 20,000,000 of our population.

Gambling finds in these people a lowered tone of moral life and intellect, which responds to the temptations of custom, example and interest, flooding our country with corruption and crime and filling our homes with heartbreak and misery far beyond our skill to describe. Thrift is natural to the Celtic race, but the unnatural appetite for narcotics, on which brewers, wine growers and distillers thrive and grow wealthy, counteracts nature. First conquer alcohol, and then will foresight and economy resume their happy reign of amelioration and true glory.—Union Signal.

Alcoholism In Children.

M. Lancereaux, who takes an active part in the struggle against alcoholism, is now engaged in demonstrating its influence on children. On growing children its effects are particularly lamentable. M. Lancereaux has closely studied two young girls from 13 to 14, born of alcoholic parents, and accustomed to drink a liter and a half of wine per day since the age of 8 years. They are victims to visceral lesions typical of alcoholism and present all the signs of well marked "infantilism." These cases confirm the results of experiments on animals. The stunted growth frequently met with, especially among recruits, the increasing number of weak, sickly children, arrested alike in their moral and in their physical development, and the increase of crime, are all to be laid at the door of alcoholism.

Titled Rumsellers.

There are said to be 10 Scottish dukes, 5 marquises, 20 earls and 5 lords—40 in all—who have a direct financial interest in the continuation of the drink traffic. In England and Wales the names of no fewer than 172 members of the upper house appear as owners of one or more licensed places.

EVIL ASSOCIATES.

The Sad State to Which Drinking and Gambling Brought a Young Man.

"My dear boy," said a father to his only son, "you are in bad company. The lads with whom you associate indulge in bad habits. They drink, smoke, swear and I am afraid they gamble. They are not safe company for you. I beg you to quit their society."

"You needn't be afraid for me, father," replied the boy laughingly. "I guess I know a thing or two. I know how far to go and when to stop."

The lad left his father's house twirling his cane in his fingers and laughing at the "old man's notions."

A few years later, says The Youth's Temperance Banner, and that lad, grown to manhood, stood at the bar of a court, before a jury which had just brought in a verdict of guilty against him for some crime in which he had been concerned.

Before he was sentenced he addressed the court and said, among other things: "My downward course began in disobedience to my parents. I thought I knew as much as my father did, and I spurned his advice, but as soon as I turned my back upon my home temptations came upon me like a drove of hyenas and hurried me into ruin."

Hear that, boys, you who think you are wise enough to do without father's advice. Don't disobey your parents; I beg of you, don't.

Influence of Drink.

I think it would astonish many persons if they know how large a proportion of crime is traceable, directly or indirectly, to drink. I am almost afraid to name the proportion, but my own impression is, derived from constant experience in every county in England, that more than one-half of the crimes that are brought before us are to be ascribed to the influence of drink—sometimes the influence of drink upon the guilty person, sometimes the influence of drink upon the victim. The condition of the victim tempts the criminal into crime.—Lord Chief Justice of England.

The combined railroads are among the most powerful practical prohibition organizations in existence. Some employees doubtless regard the rules against intoxicants as offensive "sumptuary legislation," but the millions who travel on trains are well pleased with the existence and the rigid enforcement of the rules.—Chicago Record.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON XIII, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 28.

A Comprehensive Review of the Quarter's Lessons — Golden Text, Acts xii, 24—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

LESSON I.—Christ's Ascension (Acts i, 1-14). Golden Text—Luke xxiv, 51, "While He blessed them He was parted from them and carried up into heaven." The golden text for the review, "The word of God grew and multiplied," describes the work of the Holy Spirit through the apostles after the ascension of Christ. We must keep before us the great fact that it was and still is the purpose of God to bless the whole earth through Israel (Ps. lxvii, 1-7; Isa. lx, 1-3; Jer. iii, 17, 18; Rom. xi, 12, 15); but, Israel having rejected and crucificed their King, the kingdom is postponed until the King shall return (Luke xix, 11, 12; Acts iii, 20, 21). In the meantime we live in "the mysteries of the kingdom."

LESSON II.—The Holy Spirit Given (Acts ii, 1-13). Golden Text—Acts ii, 4, "They were all filled with the Holy Ghost." Although these disciples had been daily under the teaching of the Lord Jesus for several years, yet they were not qualified to be His witnesses, but had to wait until filled with the Holy Spirit, for He alone could accomplish in and through them what the Lord required. No wisdom or power of man can accomplish the work of the Lord, but only the Spirit of the Lord (Zech. iv, 6). When filled, they spake as the Spirit gave them utterance (Acts ii, 4).

LESSON III.—A Multitude Converted (Acts ii, 32-47). Golden Text—Acts ii, 39, "The promise is unto you and to your children and to all that are afar off." When the strangers at Jerusalem from all parts of the world heard these unlearned men speaking in all languages and declaring the wonderful works of God, they were amazed, and some said that the disciples were full of wine. Peter, then standing forth, declared in the power of the Spirit the facts of the case, and from the Scriptures preached Christ unto them with the result that about 3,000 believed and were baptized, and the Lord continued to add daily those being saved (verses 41, 47).

LESSON IV.—The Lame Man Healed (Acts iii, 1-16). Golden Text—Acts iii, 16, "His name, through faith in His name, hath made this man strong." The disciples seem to have frequented the temple, probably for the purpose of teaching, even as Jesus had done (see chapter v, 20), and on this occasion the Lord through them gave health to a man over 40 years old who had never walked a step (verse 2 and chapter iv, 22).

LESSON V.—The Boldness of Peter and John (Acts iv, 1-14). Golden Text—Acts iv, 12, "There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." As the power of God is increasingly seen the devil's anger increases, and the apostles suffer imprisonment and threatening.

LESSON VI.—True and False Giving (Acts iv, 32, to v, 11). Golden Text—I Sam. xvi, 7, "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." With such great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus that the grace of God was upon them all, and many sold their property and put all the proceeds in the common fund that none of the believers might lack anything; for then, as now among the Jews, those believing in Jesus would probably be cast off by their friends and find themselves destitute of temporal things. God's hatred of deceit is seen in His judgment of the liars.

LESSON VII.—The Prison Opened (Acts v, 17-32). Golden Text—Acts v, 29, "We ought to obey God rather than men." Satan's rage increases, and again the apostles are imprisoned, but no walls or bolts or soldiers can hold them unless the Lord is willing that they should be held; so He sends an angel, who delivers them and sends them to the temple to continue teaching the words of life. When again arrested in the temple in the morning and brought before the council, Peter again preaches Christ crucified and risen, and, although beaten for it, when let go they continued daily to teach and preach Jesus Christ both in the temple and from house to house.

LESSON VIII.—The First Christian Martyr (Acts vi, 8-15; vii, 54-60). Golden Text—Rev. ii, 10, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." The power of the Holy Spirit is as necessary to serve table as to preach the gospel, and if one is willing to serve whole heartedly in humble service he will be led forth to greater things. The wisdom and spirit which they were not able to resist was not any wisdom of Stephen, but that of the Holy Spirit in Stephen, even the wisdom and Spirit of God. Stephen's sermon, like Peter's, was chiefly quotations from or references to Scripture, and having given his testimony he went home to be with Jesus. He is the first recorded as seeing Jesus after His ascension.

LESSON IX.—The Disciples Dispersed (Acts viii, 1-17). Golden Text—Acts viii, 4, "They that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word." The last words of Christ ere He ascended were, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," and "Ye shall be witnesses unto Me unto the uttermost part of the earth" (Mark xvi, 15; Acts i, 8), yet up to the time of our lesson the witnesses do not seem to have left Jerusalem.

LESSON X.—The Ethiopian Convert (Acts viii, 26-40). Golden Text—Acts viii, 35, "Then Philip opened his mouth and began at the same Scripture and preached unto him Jesus." Perhaps none of the scattered abroad had gone to Ethiopa, but the Lord had His chosen ones even there and will somehow reach them also.

LESSON XI.—Saul, the Persecutor, Converted (Acts ix, 1-12, 17-20). Golden Text—I Tim. i, 15, "This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." Things impossible with men are possible with God, and there is nothing too hard or wonderful for God (Luke xviii, 27; Jer. xxxii, 17). The time came for this blasphemer to be stopped, and in His own way, by His own power, the Lord humbled him and brought him to Himself.

LESSON XII.—Christian Self Restraint (I Cor. ix, 19-27). Golden Text—I Cor. ix, 25, "Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things." Salvation is the free gift of God through the finished work of Christ, and no works or strivings of ours have any part in our redemption (Rom. iii, 24; iv, 5; Eph. ii, 8, 9; Titus iii, 5), but when saved through Christ it is that we may abound in good works (Titus iii, 8; Eph. ii, 10), as the evidence of our redemption, and for these works which God prepares for us we shall be rewarded at the coming of Christ (Luke xiv, 14; Rev. xxii, 12; II John viii; I Cor. iii, 14, 15. The special work of our lesson is denial of self.

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

VICTIMS OF A DISASTER ON THE E. AND T. H. RAILROAD.

Fireman Caught Under the Engine and Killed—Several Passengers in the Smoker Plunged Into the Water with the Car, Which Is Entirely Submerged

Princeton, Ind., March 11.—The southbound Chicog and Nashville limited train over the Evansville and Terre Haute railroad was wrecked about 4 o'clock yesterday morning at a point about a quarter of a mile south of the railroad bridge across White river, which is two miles north of Hazelton, this county. Backwater from the river had risen up to within a few feet of the road bed, which is on a very high embankment or levee. Other trains had passed over this place a few hours previous, and the road bed was then thought to be safe. This ill-fated train crossed the bridge and was running about twenty-five miles an hour. Without warning the embankment gave away under the train, precipitating the engine and the combination mail and baggage and the smoker into the ditch.

Released Just in Time.

In an instant the water from upstream rushed with terrific force through the break, tearing the levee away rapidly. The mail car went down end first, and the smoker plunged under it. By this plunge the entire top was torn from the smoker. Brakeman Haueisen was caught in this car between the stove and the end and was held fast. The car hung over the brink of the washout for several minutes. The brakeman finally released himself and escaped only a few minutes before the car plunged into the flood.

Terrible Fate of the Fireman.

It is certain that Conductor George Sears was in there and probably four or five others. All met death either by the concussion or drowning. A valise was found bearing the name "W. B. Phillips, Fort Wayne, Ind.," and cards inside indicated that the owner was traveling for this house, selling shirt waists. The ladies' coach was derailed, but did not turn over, and all the occupants escaped to the sleepers on the rear of the train and were taken back to Vincennes. The engine, No. 94, in charge of Engineer John McCutcheon, and Fireman Joseph Bowman, turned over on the east side into five feet of water. McCutcheon was thrown westward and fell into the water, but swam out. Fireman Bowman jumped with the engine and was caught when it fell. He lies buried under several feet of water and the body has not been recovered.

Smoking Car Their Sepulchre.

The wrecked smoker sank from view several hundred yards from the track, and the bodies in that car cannot be recovered until the water recedes. One of them is believed to be Herbert Allen, of Evansville, doorkeeper in the late legislature, returning home. The baggageman, Harry Hill, had a miraculous es...id was not injured. His car lies buried in water. The wreck-train with railroad officials arrived after some delay. A large force of men was put on work trying to keep the remainder of the embankment from washing. Waves fifteen and twenty feet high leap through the breach, and nothing dumped into the breach seems to be of effect in stopping the washing. Present indications are that it will be several days before traffic can be resumed over this place.

Four-Cornered Fight at Chicago.

Chicago, March 13.—The mayoralty contest in Chicago was made a four-cornered fight last night by the formal nomination of Washington Hesing at a non-partisan convention. A complete city ticket which will go on the official ballot under the caption "Business Administration of Municipal Affairs," was nominated.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

WHAT THE LAWMAKERS ARE DOING AT SPRINGFIELD.

Procceedings in the Senate and House Boiled Down—Bills and Resolutions Introduced and Other Matters of Interest to the People of the State.

Springfield, Ills., March 10.—The senate adopted a resolution providing for committees to visit the state institutions to ascertain their needs. Bills were introduced: Appropriating $124,000 for the Normal Orphans' Home; to incorporate and regulate pawners' societies; to give people accused jointly of crime separate trials; for police regulation of private banks. Committees were appointed to draft resolutions on the death of Senators Herb and Wells. Adjourned as a further mark of respect to Senator Wells.

In the house a resolution was adopted for a committee to investigate the doings of the Chicago drainage board—56 to 52. A bill was introduced to prohibit six-day bicycle contests without regular rests. Another bill introduced fines members absent without leave $5 per day. A number of other bills were introduced and others read a first time. The $250,000 loan bill came over from the senate and was advanced to second reading.

Springfield, Ills., March 11.—In the senate yesterday a large amount of routine business was transacted. A number of bills were introduced, others were advanced on the calendar, while several were passed. A petition from the railway employes of McLean county protested against the 2-cent fare railway bill. Bills were passed: Providing for the release of an assignee by transferring unsettled accounts to the county treasurer; providing that a wife shall be a competent witness to testify in a case of wife abandonment; authorizing the establishment of houses of correction outside the corporate limits of cities.

In the house bills were introduced: Providing for an inspection of beer, to see that nothing but pure beer is sold; providing for the payment of wages to convicts in all the prisons and reformatories of the state, the wages so earned by the convicts to be paid over to their wives or families; providing that no express company shall charge extra for the delivery of a package from the railway station or express office to the consignee; to regulate the sale of cocaine; providing that the minimum wages paid to laborers working on state contracts shall be $2 per day.

Springfield, Ills., March 13.—The senate was in session just five minutes yesterday, without a quorum present. Bills were introduced: Authorizing cities, villages or incorporated towns of organize under the general law by an election; providing for a library commission of five to promote free public libraries; to compel railroads to carry bicycles as common baggage. Adjourned to Tuesday. In the house there was scarcely a quorum. A bill was introduced to prohibit department stores and one to establish a court of conciliation to settle law suits. Adjourned to Tuesday.

CONDITION OF ILLINOIS WHEAT.

Much Damage Done by Winter-Killing All Over the State.

Springfield, Ills., March 13.—Owing to the rumors prevailing over the state since early in January as to the extent of the injury to winter wheat by winter-killing, the Illinois state board of agriculture asked for reports on the subject from correspondents in the wheat belt, the summary of which is given below. The reports corroborate the prevailing opinions and a very unfortunate condition is noted. The reports of damage from this source vary from 15 per cent. of the area seeded to the entire amount, the average being 59 per cent. of the area. Last fall 1,497,000 acres were reported seeded, and if the stimate of damage is confirmed but 682,000 acres will be left for harvest.

In many counties the entire area seeded will be plowed up. A reduction of the area seeded of 1,000,000 acres, which is reported, leaves by far the smallest area ever harvested in Illinois. Under the most favorable conditions from now on to harvest there is little reason to hope for more than 10,000,000 bushels yield in thes tate, which is not nearly enough to supply the home demand for consumption and seed for the next year's crop. But six counties report injury to wheat by Hessian fly, and to such a small extent that it cuts no figure in the result.

Death of a Great Land-Owner.

Keithsburg, Ills., March 15.—William Drury, known as the millionaire land owner, died at his country place, north of this city, Saturday night. He was the largest individual land owner in this country, having hundreds of thousands of acres in Colorado, Nebraska, Texas and Kansas, besides 6,000 acres of the richest farming land in this county. Mr. Drury was 87 years old, and came to this county in 1831.

Rabid Dog Bites a Drove of Hogs.

Springfield, Ill., March 15.—The Illinois Live Stock commission has been notified by the authorities of Sumner, Lawrence county, that a rabid dog has bitten a large drove of hogs in that locality, spreading hydrophobia, and that every hog bitten has been rabid.

State Notes.

Joseph R. Dunlop, editor of the Chicago Dispatch, has been sued by Theresa D. Dean, the divorced wife of Dr. W. Louis Tallman. She charges criminal libel in an article which refers to an alleged escapade at the Plaza hotel.

John Clemenger has been awarded $21,000 against the Chicago and Eastern Illinois and Chicago and Western Indiana Railroad company for injuries received at Chicago.

The Hodcarriers' council, comprising four unions, and the Plasterers' union held meetings and declared the building trades' strike at Chicago off.

LATEST ORDER OF WEYLER.

Will Abandon Towns Where He Is Not Provided Free Volunteers.

Havana, March 11.—Captain General Weyler has ordered all the regular Spanish troops to abandon the towns in which the merchants and landed proprietors do not provide, free of cost to the government, three volunteers for every government soldier of the garrison. He has been in communication on this subject with the proprietors, merchants and prominent people who are most interested in preserving their fortunes.

General Gonzalez Munoz, chief of the general staff, sailed yesterday for Puerto Rico with his family. From thence he will sail for Spain during the month of April. Tomas Armas Carrillo, Eduardo Hermandez Falcon, Victor Miranda, Julio Carbo and Miguel Cespedes, all well known in connection with the insurgent cause, with seven other prisoners, were sent to the Chaffarine islands yesterday and ninety-eight members of the Nanigo society from Matanzas were sent to the island of Fernando Po.

Senate Adjourns Sine Die.

Washington, March 11.—The senate yesterday adjourned sine die so far as the Fifty-fourth congress is concerned. The appointment of A. T. Wood as senator from Kentucky was announced and the credentials sent to committee. Hoar offered a change in the rules providing that when any bill or resolution had been under consideration more than one day any senator could demand that debate be closed. If a majority of the senators so decided, there should be a vote without further delay, and no motion should be in order pending the vote but one to adjourn or take a recess. In the executive session W. R. Jewett was confirmed as postmaster at Danville, Ills. His is the first appointment.

Injunction Against a State Law.

Topeka, Kan., March 15.—Judge Foster, of the United States district court, has granted a temporary injunction restraining the Kansas City Stock Yards company from putting into effect the rates fixed by the legislative act which has just become a law.

Cleveland Bicycle Race.

Cleveland, March 15.—Harry Wood, the Oberlin boy, won the six-day bicycle race with ease. The final scores were: Wood, 728 miles, 5 laps; Schoch, 728; Gifford, 727, 8 laps; Ashinger, 726, 5 laps; Dench, 715, 10 laps.

Don't Need Three Trains.

Chicago, March 15.—Arrangements were originally made to send out three special trains from this city to Carson City carrying the sporting men of Chicago and vicinity to the fight. The sales of tickets, however, were not nearly as large as had been anticipated, and the special trains resolved themselves into three excursion parties, consisting of about thirty each, or in the neighborhood of 100 in the aggregate.

They Will Quarrel No More.

Little Rock, Ark., March 10.—Orlando Howe, of this city, quarreled with his wife, and they decided to separate. Being without money, Howe took his twin sons, aged 10 years, and started to walk to Stillwell, Mo. A train struck the father and two sons on a trestle near Oliphant, instantly killing Howe and one son, and fatally wounding the other boy.

Hunter's Election Nearly Assured.

Frankfort, Ky., March 15.—The sudden death of State Senator John P. Salyers at his mountain home was announced by telegraph yesterday, and it created a profound sensation among the legislators. Salyers was a Democrat and prominent in the senatorial fight of last winter. His death removes nearly the last doubt that Hunter, the present Republican nominee for United States senator will be elected whenever the joint ballot is had.

NEW IRON LASTS AND HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT

The Latest, Neatest, Cheapest and Best Outfit Ever Invented.

THE HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT NO. 1.

Consisting of 38 First-Class Tools and Materials (neatly boxed) Shown in Cut, viz.:

1 Iron Last, 8 inches.
1 Iron Last, 6 inches.
1 Iron Last, 4 inches.
1 Iron Standard, with Base.
1 Package Assorted Nails.
1 Package 4-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 5-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 6-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
6 Pairs Star Heel Plates.
½ lb Copper Rivets and Burrs.
1 Steel Punch.
1 Sewing Awl, complete.
1 Pegging Awl, complete.
1 Wrench for above.
1 Stabbing Awl, complete.
1 Shoeknife.
1 Shoehammer.
1 Bottle Rubber Cement.
1 Bottle Leather Cement.
1 Harness and Saw Clamp.
1 Ball Wall.
1 Ball Shoe Thread.
1 Bunch Bristles.
4 Harness Needles.
1 Soldering Iron.
1 Bottle Soldering Fluid.
1 Box Rosin.
1 Bar Solder.
1 Directions for Use.

All these tools are full-sized, practical, neat, and cheap; not mere toys. They enable any person to do his own half-soling, boot, shoe, rubber, harness, and tinware repairing.

This Outfit is the result of years of study, experiment, and correspondence in the manufacture of Iron Lasts and Repairing Outfits; and its practical advantages need only to be seen and tried to be appreciated.

Our Improved Iron Lasts and Standard are one of the handiest tools you can have about the place. The Lasts are four in number, smooth and solid, 4, 6, 8 ,and 10 inches long, thus enabling one to half-sole all sizes of foot-wear. The Standard is made with an iron base, which can be easily fastened to the bench. No method of half-soling is now used on common work, except that of iron last and wire clinch nails. The writer of this has been in the business 20 years, and has seen the changes from the old wooden lasts and pegs to the modern method, and knows it to be complete.

Our Improved Harness and Saw Clamp is an indispensable tool in sewing a harness or filing a saw. The jaws are thrown open mechanically by a coiled spring on the bolt.

The weight of this outfit is 18 lbs. Price, all complete, packed in a neat, strong box, only $3.00.

The Home Repairing Outfit No. 2.

COMPLETE BOOT, SHOE AND RUBBER REPAIRING OUTFIT, consisting of 31 first class tools and materials. The No. 2 outfit contains the same articles as the No. 1 except ing the Harness and Soldering Tools, and is gotten up for those who have no harness or tinware repairing to do. Price of No. 2, neatly boxed, $2.00, or with the paper one year, $2.75. Price of No. 1 neatly boxed, $3.00, or with the paper one year, $3.75.

SADDLER AND DRIVER.

The Combined Horse Can Be Ridden and Driven Equally Well.

A horse with all the saddle gaits that is properly broken to harness and showing therein only a clear trot is called a combined horse. It should be as much within the scope of a combined horse's usefulness to pull behind a collar as to carry weight.

There is today a demand unsupplied for this animal. The best saddle horses produced the past five years, as attested by the awards in the gaited classes at the largest fairs and shows, have all been good drivers, and the majority of them saddle bred on one side only. This makes the breeding of the combined horse within the reach of all, provided they insist upon stallion owners adding a saddle horse to their studs. A colt that is intensely saddle bred will decline to trot. This is to be avoided, as the trot is the foundation of all gaits. Therefore a toppy, square gaited, active trotting mare is a good beginning for a combined horse. Speed is not essential here. Spirit, together with what is known as a level head, is much to be preferred.

Pacing mares should never be used as a medium to bring forth a combined colt. The trot and the rack are similar. When performing at the rack, each leg moves independently of the other, the front legs out straight, with very much the same action as the trot, except that they move faster. When you trot the saddle horse, you improve his rack. Therefore it is not harmful, as many stoutly affirm, to work or drive a saddle horse. On the other hand, no saddle horse is altogether safely and properly broken until he has had sufficient experience in harness to teach him that what is behind him will not hurt him. By careful work with your horse, both under saddle and in harness, you will be surprised how soon he will understand to properly perform in the dual role. A snaffle only should be used in harness. And as it is the same bit he has been trotted on under saddle, he will take and keep this gait without a word from you.

Use the double bit when riding. These two bits, when properly adjusted, are much less severe on the horse than the single curb, and by its use you are better enabled to communicate to your horse, he knowing what gait you wish him to take from the lines you give the pressure on. To properly handle the lines with two bits, take the reins in the left hand at the place where they are joined, the curb lines being sewed together and held inside the snaffle lines, which are buckled. When seated in the saddle, put the fingers of the right hand inside the curb rein, the thumb on outside of snaffle, simply holding the reins while you take them up properly with the left hand by putting the little finger between the snaffle and curb reins on the left side, the third finger between the two curb reins, the middle finger between the curb and snaffle on the right side and bringing all four reins which have passed between the fingers up on the side of the index finger and held firmly in place by the thumb of the same hand, with right hand. After drawing the reins in as much as needed (never having removed it from the ends of the reins) put the third finger between the two right hand reins, the second between the snaffles and the first finger between the two left hand reins, all held in front of the left hand, leaving the thumb and little finger free to grasp the whip, which must be carried as nearly horizontal as possible.

always take your right hand away from the reins if you wish to use your whip or hand for any other purpose, returning it to place as soon as possible. The reins are always held firm by the thumb of the left hand holding them in place. All this can be put into action much easier than one would suppose. Practice holding the lines by first placing the bridle on the doorknob with the door ajar. The door will respond to the turning movements.

To make a double bridle take your single curb bit riding bridle. It is to be supposed that this bit is a mild, straight stem curb with chin curb strap. Slip a bridoon with snaffle bit through the brow band-loops. With a set of lines for each bit, place both bits in the horse's mouth. By holding your snaffle lines a little short you will get the best results, except in the rack, when the greater pressure should be on the curb reins. This manner of bitting is all essential for the proper handling of the combined horse.

With a very little extra time, which to a lover of a horse should be a pleasure, colts can be nearly doubled in value by the additional training under saddle if intended for the market, but if kept at home they will be a source of pleasure and health to every member of the family. The combined mare Lou Chief, with bad color marking, but with size, style, dash, good conformation and manners, sold for $3,000. Patsey McCord sold last month for $1,500.—Frank Tallmadge in National Stockman.

The first great work on ethnology was Balbi's "Ethnographic Atlas," published in 1826, which laid down the general principles of the science.

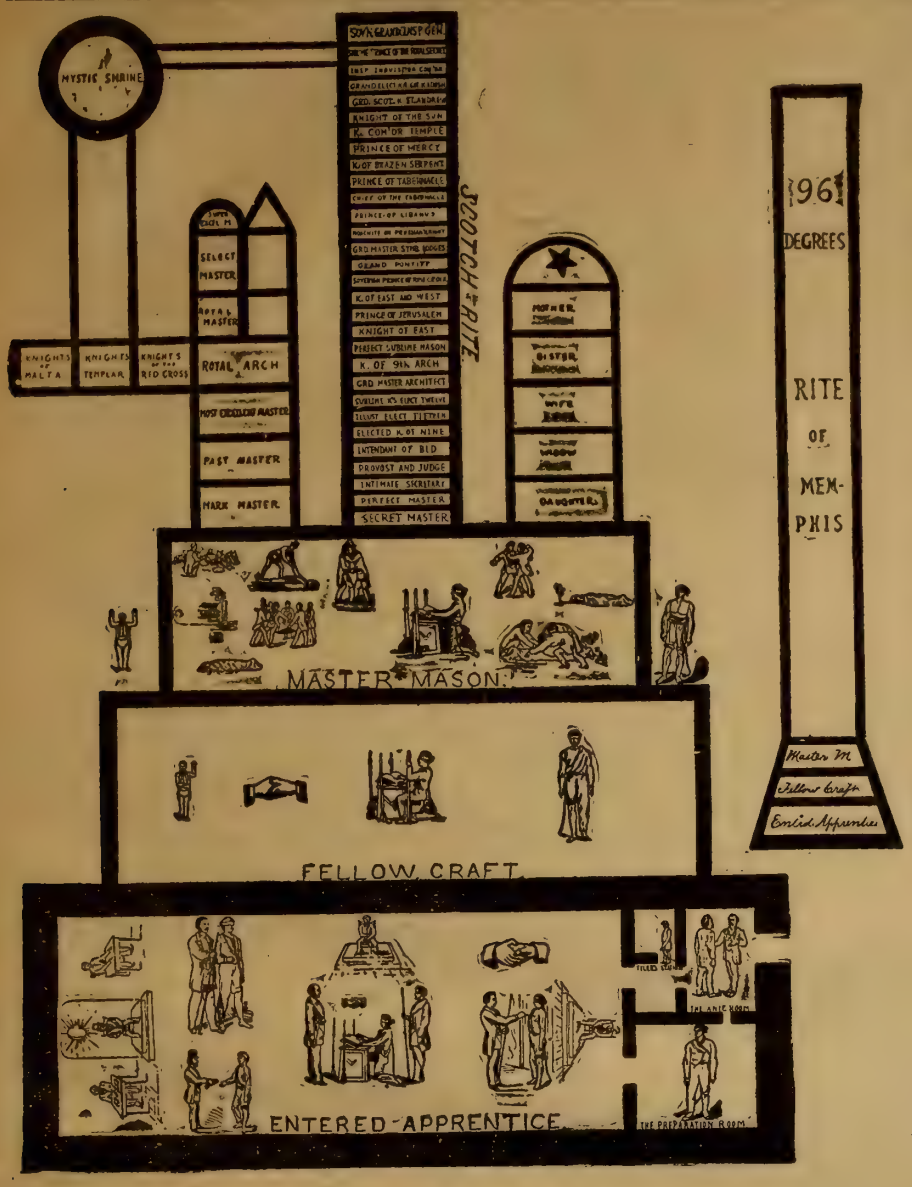
Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge, and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc.



MASONIC CHART.

ILLUSTRATING THE RELATION OF SOME OF THE DEGREES AND RITES IN FREEMASONRY TO EACH OTHER.

The accompanying chart represents one hundred and forty two degrees.

1. The American Rite of 13 degrees;
2. The Scotch Rite of 33 degrees;
3. The Egyptian Rite of 96 degrees.
4. The Mystic Shrine of one degree.
5. The Eastern Star of 5 degrees for Master Masons and for women. These are side degrees, and not genuine masonry.

The Symbolic degrees, or Blue Lodge of three degrees, are common to every Masonic rite, whether American, Scotch, or Egyptian, or whichever of the Masonic rites, named in Mackey's Masonic Encyclopedia one may choose to investigate.

This chart shows in the Blue Lodge the position of the Worshipful Master and some of the other officers of the lodge. Several positions of the candidate who is being initiated are also shown. In the Master Mason's degree is recognized the murder, burial and resurrection scene so full of religious significance to Freemasons.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. 110 pages, paper, 25c.
The genuine old Morgan book republished.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry. By Avery Allyn. Cloth, $5.00.
Contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, and the Orange Societies.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Cloth, $2.50.
Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market, it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated."

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 75c.
Contains the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual.

Look to the East. A ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Cloth, $2.00.
Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or the Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association. 10c. each.
Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Constitution and By-laws of the Association.

Secret Societies. Cloth 35c, paper 15c.
A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev Edward Beecher.

The Master's Carpet or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical. Bound in fine cloth. 400 pages. 75c.
Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. 5c.
By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard, Cloth, $1.50. paper, 75c.

Finney on Masonry. Cloth 75c., paper 35c.
The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By ex-Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasony Self-Convicted. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40c.
This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them.

Judge Whitney's Defence before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. 15c.
Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. 10c.
This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder and Oaths of 33 degrees. 304 pages, cloth, $1.00,
"Composed of Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's, Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees."

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor of United Presbyterian church.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in New Berlin trials. 10c.
The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiation by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties.

Grand Lodge Masonry. 5c. each
Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to Republican Government. 15c.
By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

IS READY FOR WORK.

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS MEETS TO PASS A TARIFF LAW.

Intention Is to Put the Measure Through by Next Saturday Week — Probable Course with the Vetoed Bills—Character of the New Revenue Measure.

Washington, March 15.—The Fifty-fifth congress met in extraordinary session today, in pursuance of President McKinley's proclamation. The house organized by the re-election of Thomas B. Reed as speaker and practically the remainder of the officers of the Fifty-fourth house, as decided by the caucus Saturday night, when Reed was given the renomination unanimously. The Democrats nominated Bailey of Texas The work before this congress—the passage of a tariff bill—is pretty well cut out in advance, but the indications are that it will be a stormy session, and its length and scope are yet mere matters of speculation. The present secretary of state remarked several years ago on a memorable occasion in the senate that the president, like Alladin, could rub the lamp and cause the genii to appear, but that once they had appeared they were masters of their destinies. So that congress once in session may go much further or not so far as the president may wish.

Reed Is for Rapid Work.

So far as the house is concerned the present determination of the leaders is to direct the energies of the lower branch to the accomplishment of the task before it with all expedition, and throw the responsibility for any complications which may arise out of delays in the senate upon that body. This was made manifest by Speaker Reed's speech at the Republican caucus Saturday, when he spoke of the necessity of bringing the work of the session to a speedy close. Whether the leaders will emphasize any inaction by the senate when the bill reaches that body by a programme of three-day recesses remains to be seen, but it seems likely that the speaker will—at least for the present—refrain from appointing any save the actual committees necessary for the transaction of the businesss in hand.

Arbitration Treaty in the Senate.

Vice President Hobart rapped the senate to order at noon today for the beginning of the work of the new congress. The week does not now promise to be a busy one in the senate except for talk on the arbitration treaty between this country and Great Britain. Davis, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, said that he would force the question of ratification to as speedy a determination as it would be possible. The treaty will be considered in executive session. There will be considerable opposition to it, even in its attenuated form, but the friends of the treaty assert that there will not be to exceed twenty opposing votes when the final result is announced.

NEW TARIFF BILL IS COMPLETE.

Bare Possibility of a Few Changes, but Will Be Practically as Outlined.

The new tariff bill upon which Republican members of the ways and means committee have been working laboriously for three months, is complete and will be formally introduced this afternoon. It will then be printed and submitted to the Democratic minority and receive formal consideration by the full committee. It is not expected that this will require more than three or four days at most, although the Democrats say, and probably will, protest vigorously against such expedition. At any rate the house leaders hope to enter upon the consideration of the bill in the house before the end of the week. Some of them fix Thursday as the day on which the debate would probably commence. Although the limits of the debate have not yet been decided upon the prevailing opinion is that it will not last over ten days.

Work on the bill was concluded last night. It is possible that changes may be made in some of the most important schedules even at this late hour, particularly the wool schedule, over which there are differences of opinion in the committee. The reciprocity scheme has not been formulated into words and some features of the plan are still subject to change. Apart from this possibility of revision the important features of the bill will stand as they have been heretofore determined upon and as they have been outlined from day to day by the Associated Press.

It has been quite customary to say that this bill is the McKinley tariff over again. This expression is misleading. The sugar schedule, for instance, is just the reverse of the McKinley policy. The largest single item in the new customs will be from sugar. This is very different from putting that article on the free list and then $9,000,000 or $10,000,000 a year for bounties to home sugar producers. The duty on iron ore under the McKinley law was 75 cents a ton; under the new bill it is 40 cents a ton. Iron in pigs was taxed $6.72 a ton under the McKinley law; under the new bill the tax is $4 a ton. Steel ingots valued at 1 cent a pound or less were put at .4 of a cent a pound under the McKinley law; under the new bill they are but .35 of a cent. Steel ingots valued at from 1 to 1.4 cents a pound paid a duty of .5 of a cent a pound under the McKinley law, though they will pay only 1-6 of a cent under the Dingley law.

Unless one unexpected hitch occurs the new tariff bill may be sent to the senate a week from next Saturday, or a fortnight after the session opens. There are in the house 206 Republicans, 122 Democrats and 29 fusion, silver and Populist representatives. The percentage of new members is unusually large. There are 148 new men. Of these 132 have never served in congress before and sixteen served prior to the Fifty-fourth.

AS TO THAT SCRIP DECISION.

Facts of Its Publication Made a Sensation in the Department.

Washington, March 15.—The McKee scrip decision written by Commissioner Lamoreux has raised the loudest "buzz" in the interior department that has been heard there for years, and it may become louder. Meanwhile Secretary Bliss has ordered the case to be reopened, and people who thought they owned about $50,000,000 worth of property in Chicago, which was swept out of their ownership by the decision of Lamoreux, breathe with more freedom. The secretary's order is made because Lamoreux in opposition to all the rules procedure delivered a copy of his decision to one of the parties interested.

The man who got the copy was, it is said, P. J. Somers, of Milwaukee, of the counsel for the scrip locators. The fact that the original decision was found locked up in the commissioner's safe makes it, so the department lawyers say, the same as if it had been locked up in his bosom—it is no decision until it is promulgated, and its promulgation was forbidden by Secretary Francis. The statement is made also that the whole of the original decision except the signature is in the handwriting of one of the counsel for the scrip locators.

Another fact is mentioned that makes the case peculiar, and this is a fact: On Aug. 3 last Lamoreux was asked for a hearing on an exactly similar case—scrip location on the same land—and refused even to hear the locators, saying that the case was not different from several other land scrip cases that had been decided adversely to the locators. The first knowledge of the higher officials of the department that the opinion had been formally drawn up and signed is stated to have been when ex-Secretary Carlisle, retained as associate counsel for the scrip side, came down to the department on the afternoon of the day that Secretary Bliss took the oath of office and asked that the opinion be promulgated. The department absolves Carlisle from wrong connection with the case.

MYSTERIOUS SHOOTING AT CHICAGO.

Gen. Bragg's Sister-in-Law Has a Bullet Through Her Head.

Chicago, March 11. — A bullet was sent through Mrs. Catherine E. Bragg's head as she lay in bed yesterday morning. Her adopted daughter, Josephine, sleeping with her, did not hear the shot. The police are inclined to think that Mrs. Bragg attempted to commit suicidee. They arrested the adopted daughter, however, and locked her up. Mrs. Bragg made a will some time ago, leaving nearly $50,000 to this daughter. The police were not notified for eight hours, and the woman lay bleeding all the time, yet she may live. Mrs. Bragg is the widow of Frederick A. Bragg, brother of General Bragg, of Wisconsin. Detectives searched the house, but neither found the bullet nor the revolver.

Chicago, March 13.—The mystery of the shooting of Mrs. Caroline Bragg is no nearer solution now than when first reported to the police. Absolutely nothing has been discovered upon which to base clues. Mrs. Bragg will probably recover. Late last evening Josephine Bragg, the adopted daughter, was released from custody.

QUART SHOP LAW A FAILURE.

Lawyers Find a Flaw in the Act That Makes It Ineffective.

Indianapolis, March 12.—Representatives Willoughby and Peckinpaugh and City Attorney Curtis made an examination of the law and declared at the close of their conference that the Nicholson law passed this session to abolish quart-shops and whisky-selling drug stores was ineffective, from the fact that it failed to amend the penal clause of the old law which this law seeks to amend. The Nicholson law amends the statutes of 1881 in three sections, so as to declare it unlawful to sell liquor in quantities less than five gallons without taking out a county license. These gentlemen are of the opinion that, because the new law fails to strike out of the old law in the section imposing a penalty the word "quart" and insert "five gallons," the law will be ineffective.

Scovel Is in Great Luck.

Washington, March 10.—Consul General Lee yesterday cabled the state department that Sylvester Scovel, the American newspaper correspondent who has been under arrest in Sancti Spiritus for several weeks, will be released. This action is taken as the result of strong representations this government has made in Scovel's behalf on the ground that he was in Cuba solely in a newspaper capacity, and was in no sense a combatant or abetter of the insurrection.

Chicago Democratic Ticket.

Chicago, March 12.—The Democratic city convention was held yesterday and resulted in the nomination of Carter H. Harrison, son of the late Mayor Harrison, for mayor: Ernest Hummel, for city treasurer; William Loeffler, for city clerk, and Miles J. Devine for city attorney. Harrison was nominated in the convention by A. S. Trude, who had been his chief competitor. The platform confines itself to local issues and reforms.

WILL RESIST TO THE DEATH.

Orders Given the Greek Cruisers in Cretan Waters—Warlike Situation.

London, March 13.—The correspondent of The Times at Canea says: The commanders of the Greek cruisers Alphios and Pinios are still in Cretan waters, and in a most difficult position. Their express orders are only to retire from Canea bay under protest, but on no account to leave Cretan waters. They are ordered to "resist to the death any attack upon them, for the honor of the Greek flag and the nation which reposes confidence in the sons of heroes." This latter allusion refers to the fact that the Greek commanders are descendants of the Greek chiefs Kondouriotis and Miaulis.

The crusiers are hourly expected to be fired upon. They are not allowed to revictual their crews. The men are living on biscuits and beans and the officers have not slept for three nights. Every man has written a letter of farewell to his relatives. It is probable that the Alphios will take the risk of a visit to another port for the purpose of revictualling.

Rome, March 15.—It is officially announced here that the rtsult of the pour parlers of the powers Saturday is a definite agreement not to reply to the Greek note, but to issue orders to the foreign admirals to establish an immediate blockade of Cretan ports, which will probably be in full operation today. This agreement is somewhat in the nature of a concession to Russia and France. Russia during the middle of last week proposed, with France seconding the proposal, another joint note to Greece insisting on the withdrawal of the troops, instead of an immediate resort of the powers to force.

Costly Fire at Chicago.

Chicago, March 13.—Fire broke out last evening in the building occupied by John A. Tolman & Co., wholesale grocers, corner of Michigan avenue and Lake streets. Driven by a strong northwest wind the flames quickly spread to the upper stories of buildings at 10, 12 and 14 Lake street, occupied by Chase & Sanborn's coffee and spice house. The adjoining buildings also caught fire several times from flying sparks, but were not seriously damaged. After three hours' hard work the fire was gotten under control. The Tolman company stock was valued at $400,000, and is probably a complete loss. Chase & Sanborn's loss will not be heavy. Both were fully insured.

Well-Known St. Paul Man Dead.

St. Paul, March 12.—Ex-State Auditor W. W. Braden of this state, one of the best-known Republicans of the northwest, died Thursday at Los Angeles, Cal., where he went over three years ago to recover his health. His death was not unexpected.

An important onward movement was planned at the Board meeting last Saturday, which will be announced in our next issue.

The California State convention will be held in the Women's Temperance Temple in Los Angeles, April 14, 15.

The convention will begin Wednesday evening the 14th, and will hold three sessions on Thursday. Among the speakers are Bishop Dillon. Rev. Dr. Bresee, Rev. E. Leonardson, and pastors Logan and Roberts of the United Presbyterian and Free Methodist churches.

If the church had treated the vice of intemperance as it has the vice of Freemasonry or lodgery, rumholes might have been as honorable and as carefully let alone as lodges.

The tendency of Masonry to destroy some of the men who join, must be well known. It is naturally adapted to do this. The brother stumbleth or is made weak. Let us then do no joining while the world standeth.

The Annual Meeting of the National Christian Association occurs May next. The first meeting to be held in connection with our convention is in the Chicago Avenue church. There will be a day session in Willard Hall as well as in our own—the Carpenter Building. We expect to report progress each week.

It seems a dangerous thing to call a Mason to the pastorate of a church, if for no other reason, because the distrust of honorable young people toward the false system of Masonry may render him not only powerless to help them, but actually liable to harden them, if not to develop skepticism.

Retrenchment is the order of the day. Even the devil is feeling the financial pressure, for theatres and impure literature and saloons are lowering their prices. Much more is the strain being felt by churches and Christian workers, and most of all by missionary and reform organizations. The latter suffers most because churches do not realize the vital importance of reform work, which is like preventing the enemy from breaking an army's center and destroying its base of supplies.

D. L. MOODY.

This world-renowned evangelist, it is announced, will hold two revival meetings a day for four days in the largest auditorium in Chicago, beginning Tuesday, March 30. These meetings will be free to the public, seats being reserved till fifteen minutes before the services for those that have tickets. There will be a monster chorus exceeding the choir of 900 now assisting at the service conducted by Mr. Moody in Cincinnati. No doubt these meetings will tend much to quicken the Christian activities of this city.

Mr. Moody shuns not to testify in his preaching against the lodge, saloon, theatre and other popular evils, although not as frequently and fully as many could desire. He applies the Gospel to individuals rather than to corporations. We attended his meetings twenty years ago in the Old Rink in this city when 8,000 were in attendance and were powerfully impressed. The fact that since then the saloons, lodges, theatres, houses of prostitution, divorces, murders and suicides have more than kept pace with our population has raised serious inquiries as to his method being the best to secure permanent results. But certainly no evangelist of our day has so stirred the religious thought of the world as D. L. Moody.

We will next week begin the publication of a postal card symposium on the question, "How to Withstand the Influence of Secret Societies?" We request as many as possible of our readers to write us an answer to this question. Write about what you can conveniently on a postal card. The response to this will show who are truly interested in the cause. It will be highly instructive to our workers, and will give our readers a chance to express their sentiment. Let us hear from you all as soon as possible.

Monday's dailies bring reports of very serious disorders at Tokat in Asia Minor. It is said that many Armenians and Turks have been killed. As we go to press there are no details as to the exact cause of the outbreak. Tokat is in the heart of the old province of Armenia, and has a population of 60,000.

It is claimed that the famine in India many years ago, in which two and a half million died, was like the present famine, caused by English capitalists storing the produce of the country in seaport towns, and making no provision for the supply of the inland population when their crops failed. This same money power has loaned an immense sum of money to Turkey. For this reason from various quarters comes the statement that the comparative clemency of the powers and slowness in applying coercion to Turkey is due to British influence.

Some of our readers are anxious to know if the Sultan of Turkey and his officials are not Freemasons, and if this has not much to do in preventing the murdering Turks from being brought to justice. The Cynosure believes that Freemasonry has much to do with it; but another factor that is too much lost sight of is that Turkey is under mortgage to Great Britain, France and Germany to the amount of $600,000,000. The principal part is held by the English Syndicate. Besides this Turkey owes Russia $155,000,000. If Turkey was wiped out as she deserves, it would be a loss to European capitalists of $755,000,000, and this has much to do in regulating the policy of the powers toward Turkey.

The following from the Chicago Record of March 22 indicates how much secret societies have to do with the present collision of Greece with Turkey: "Some details of the secret organization, Hetniki Heteria, or National League of Greece, which is playing an important part in Hellenic politics, are published. At first the organization consisted merely of a small secret committee of adventurous officers, but it has since grown rapidly, until in 1896 it showed its power by fomenting trouble in Crete and Macedonia. It now counts 1,300 out of 2,000 officers of the Greek army among its members, besides nearly the entire Greek nation. Its extraordinary development was greatly facilitated by the Olympic games, which aroused considerable patriotic feelings. The Hetniki Heteria is divided into four degrees. The members of each obey the orders of a superior degree without knowing wherefrom they emanate. It is stated that King George doubted the power of the league until some of its leading members told him plainly that if he did not march resolutely at the head of his people the Hetniki Heteria would depose him. It is believed in many quarters that this organization will really decide whether there will be war with Turkey or not."

A GRAND OLD WAR SONG.

This beautiful Psalm has lost none of its inspiration though sung by David and his men as they fought the battles of Israel and by our Lord and his disciples. It was a favorite hymn of Martin Luther and of Savonarola, the Italian martyr. It was Cromwell's battle song, and a favorite hymn of the persecuted Scotch Covenanters and of the English Puritans. It was sung by the Pilgrim Fathers as they embarked in the Mayflower, and after they landed in New England. It is still a favorite hymn with hundreds of thousands of Christians in this and other lands.

God is our refuge and our strength,
in straits a present aid;
Therefore, although the earth remove,
we will not be afraid:
Though hills amidst the seas be cast;
though waters roaring make,
And troubled be; yea, though the hills
by swelling seas do shake,

A river is, whose streams make glad the city of our God;
The holy place, wherein the Lord
most high hath his abode.
God in the midst of her doth dwell;
and nothing shall her move:
The Lord to her an helper will,
and that right early prove.

The heathen raged tumultuously,
the kingdoms moved were:
The Lord God uttered his voice,
the earth did melt for fear.
The Lord of hosts upon our side
doth constantly remain:
The God of Jacob's our refuge, us safely to maintain.

Come, and behold what wondrous works have by the Lord been wrought:
Come, see what desolation he upon the earth hath brought.
Unto the ends of all the earth
wars into peace he turns:
The bow he breaks, the spear he cuts,
in fire the chariot burns.

Be still, and know that I am God;
among the heathen I
Will be exalted; I on earth will be exalted high.
Our God, who is the Lord of hosts,
is still upon our side;
The God of Jacob our refuge forever will abide.

DR. TALMAGE'S FALSE HEADLIGHT.

BY REV. WM. FENTON.

The Christian Herald and Signs of our Times, edited by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., dated Feb. 24, 1897, has the following question and answer:

SUBSCRIBER, Glens Falls, N. Y.—Is it possible for a man to be a true Christian and a Freemason?

The editor of this journal does not belong to any secret order, so he is not in any position to state of his own knowledge whether there are any obligations that a Freemason has to perform which are inconsistent with a Christian profession He knows, however, several eminent Christians, both ministers and laymen, who are members of the Masonic order, who would not be members of it if they were required to do anything contrary to Christian principle.

What does Dr. Talmage mean by knowledge? If one reads the Koran will he know what Mohammedanism is? Or must one become a Mohammedan and slaughter a few Christians to know what that false religion is? "Let God be true and every man a liar" is a necessary truth.

Freemasonry is the same religion that Cain had,—the same that the prophet Ezekiel saw when, at God's bidding, he looked through the hole in the wall. When, of them that worshiped that religion, God said, "Therefore will I also deal in fury; mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity; and though they cry in mine ears with a loud voice, yet will I not hear them." Ezek. 8: 18. Therefore, to say that "eminent Christians" can be Freemasons, as the doctor does, would make God a liar.

Dr. Talmage is in a position to know, and he is in a better position to know, what Freemasonry is than if he had had the hoodwink over his eyes, and, on his naked knees, sworn to the Mason's god to forever conceal the "hidden (?) mysteries" of Masonry. It is the business of the Mason's god to blind men so that they cannot see truth; and he does that as, for example, he has done in the doctor's case, without leading them into a Masonic lodge and swearing them blind.

The Masonic fraternity has published the hidden mysteries of their religion in their books "Ecce Orienti" and "Cabala." If the doctor says these books are printed in cipher that I cannot read, let him get Jacob O. Doesburg's expose of Masonry, which is the same as the fraternity has printed.

About sixteen years ago I interviewed Dr. Talmage on this subject. His affinities then, if he had any in this matter, were not on the side of truth. He seemed to be too much like a man chasing butterflies to care for what wrung with anguish the hearts of holy men of God—the prophets—who spoke as they were moved by the Holy Ghost; or, there was no butter on that side of the bread upon which the truth lay.

His subscriber's question is answered by the Word of God: "Cursed be the man that maketh any graven or molten image, an abomination unto the Lord, the work of the craftsman, and putteth it in a secret place. And all the people shall answer and say, Amen." Deut. 27: 15. "And it came to pass, as soon as he came nigh unto the camp, that he saw the calf and the dancing; and Moses' anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and brake them beneath the mount. And took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire, and ground it to powder, and strewed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it." Ex. 32: 19, 20.

"Israel joined himself unto Baal-Peor, and the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel." "And those that died in the plague were twenty and four thousand." Num. 25: 3, 9. "And I will come near you to judgment; and I will be a swift witness against.....false swearers." Mal. 3: 5. "Neither be ye idolaters, as were some of them; as it is written, The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play. Neither let us commit fornication, as some of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand..... The things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God; and I would not that you should have fellowship with devils. Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord and the cup of devils; ye cannot partake of the Lord's table and the table of devils. Do we provoke the Lord to jealousy? Are we stronger than he?" 1 Cor. 10: 7, 8, 20, 21, 22.

"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron."..... "If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things, thou shalt be a good minister of Jesus Christ, nourished up in the words of faith and of good doctrine, whereunto thou hast attained. But refuse profane and old wives' fables." 1 Tim. 4: 1, 2, 6, 7.

Now Dr. Talmage, so far from warning the people against "these things," he encourages them in the practice of them; and that, too, at the same time that he says he does not know what Masonry is. Nobody but himself is responsible for his ignorance of the fact that Freemasons, such as he calls "eminent Christians," are "false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into apostles of Christ;" Satan's "ministers transformed as the ministers of righteousness." 2 Cor. 11: 13–15. The principles of Freemasonry published by the Masonic fraternity abundantly prove that Freemasons are precisely such as the Apostle Paul describes as Satan's ministers. And Freemasons that pretend to be Christians wear the stolen livery of Christ; they are lying impostors, and insult the truth.

But the doctor is not content to give his subscriber a merely negative answer based upon his professed ignorance of Masonry; he must needs speak a good word for that blasphemy by declaring such notorious lying impostors to be "eminent Christian ministers." Is he following the way of P. T. Barnum, the showman, who based his success upon his idea that the people loved to be humbugged?

FREEMASONRY ORGANIZED SELFISHNESS.

BY EX PRES. JOHN G. FEE, OF BEREA COLLEGE.

Another reason why we should be opposed to Freemasonry is that it is a supremely selfish institution—not benevolent, but selfish and clanish. It was organized not for public good, but for individual self-interest; and men now join such fraternities not to promote public good, but for supposed self-interest; as aid when traveling, success in business, promotion to office, care in sickness, burial in death, etc. No man should seek such aid by doing that which is wrong in principle and injurious to society and civil government.

Soon after I came to Madison county, where I now am, I was assured by a friend and a Mason, that even as an Abolitionist I would be protected from mob violence if I would join the Masons. Masonry, as such, knows no man by his sentiments—rebel or savage—but by his oath and Masonic relationship. I declined any such protection, and chose rather to do what I conceived to be my duty, and trust God. I had previously passed through the hands of two organized mobs, and afterward through the hands of five more, still more violent, and yet I live; and it is probable that few men in the county are so secure as I now am; and all the persecution and supposed danger "have turned out to the furtherance of the Gospel." We do not need to put our trust in the hands of ungodly men.

The selfishness of Freemasonry and like institutions is further seen in the fact that they invite into fellowship only those who can be of benefit to the fraternity—men who are "able-bodied and with visible means of support"—can take care of themselves and contribute to a fund of millions, as will be seen. The very objects of charity they reject—they help those who can help them. This is clanish—done for those who are members of their order and have paid for such benefit to themselves and their children. This benefit goes to such members as have paid up "their dues." Such an institution can no more claim to be a charitable institution than a savings bank—nor as much so; for a savings bank pays back all put into it, but most of these secret orders expend more than two-thirds for themselves, and less than one-third for the sick and the orphans.

Dr. Carradine is authority for saying "the United States statistics for 1883 show that the fraternity of 550,000 members received $5,000,000; of that sum $2,000,000 were paid out for help to members and orphans. So it took $3,000,000 to give away $2,000,000, and that to those who had paid their dues, and to orphans whose parents had paid for them. Odd-fellowship is reported as giving still a smaller proportion of the amount received. Some of our mission boards expend only five cents in the collection and disbursement of a hundred. All the sums gathered by these ungodly societies ought to go into the church and be carefully distributed in the name of Christ.

Here I may add, that to me it is a sad fact that the colored people of the South are as much fascinated with and deluded by these secret societies as the white people are. This I lament; for though the colored people, under adverse circumstances, have made commendable progress, yet they spend more money and time for these secret societies than for their churches or for the education of their children. This is especially true of the Kentucky towns and cities. I may notice another defect in Masonry—its proclaimed protection of chastity is like its proclaimed charity—it is clanish, not for chastity as such, but for those associated with its clan. A man who does not regard chastity as such, as a matter of principle, cannot be trusted anywhere.

FACTS ARE GOD'S ARGUMENTS.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

When Representative Morse, of Massachusetts, and Senator Frye, of Maine, introduced a joint resolution in Congress last December proposing an amendment to our National Constitution acknowledging Christ as king, the president of the A. P. A. at once sent out a manifesto opposing the measure. The reason was his order is secular. President McKinley received before his election a delegation from the A. P. A. to secure their favor, but afterward he denied all knowledge of them to save the Catholic vote.

We remember the fable of the fat dog and the lean wolf. The wolf asked the dog to take him home. As they trotted along the wolf noticed ugly marks on the dog's neck, He stopped and asked what it meant. The dog said, "They put a collar on me at night and keep me chained, but they feed me well." "Oh!" said the wolf, "I prefer the woods." President McKinley has the collar of secret orders around his neck. How humiliating that a nation of freemen send a man to the White House with a collar around his neck and a chain held by men hidden in the secret chambers of the lodge. The A. P. A. forges chains to bind freemen. What a shameful business! How base to submit to it!

Wendell Phillips said, in 1852, in a speech delivered near this place: "Men blame us for the bitterness of our language and the personality of our attacks. It results from our position. The great mass of the people can never be made to stay and argue a long question. They must be made to feel it through the hides of their idols. When you have launched your spear into the rhinocerous hide of a Webster or a Benton, every Whig and Democrat feel it. It is on this principle that every reform must take for its text the mistakes of great men. God gives us great scoundrels for texts to anti-slavery sermons. See to it, when nature has provided you a monster like Webster, that you exhibit him—himself a whole menagerie—throughout the country."

Mr. Moody has been holding meetings in Boston. He has no halter around his neck, but his meetings were held in Tremont Temple. The pastor of that church, Rev. Dr. Lorimer, is a 33-degree Mason. He did me the honor to reply to a sermon preached against the lodge, and said, "If ever the Masons went out of the church he would go along." Will the Holy Spirit work through the lodge in preference to the church? Will the Holy Ghost honor such a man as a channel for saving souls? Is there no difference between the synagogue of Satan and the church?

Dr. Lansing used this illustration: "A block of ice has force, but it is locked up. Melt the ice and the power begins to be set free. Put the water in the boiler of the locomotive and kindle the fire in the furnace and the water is changed into steam, and let into the steam-chest it moves the engine." In the Chicago riot, engineers drew the fires and left their locomotives and trains standing on the tracks. The power was locked up. Many churches have the fires drawn and the power locked up. Every church that is lodge-ridden is a church with its power locked up.

Last summer the Orange Lodge in Waltham, Mass., branded two men with a hot iron in the process of initiation. The case was taken to the courts and the penalty of a fine was the verdict. Yonder in Des Moines, Iowa, last November 18th, the Order of the Elks, in initiating a man named E. W. Curry, placed him in a sheet-iron chair heated by lamps. They expected him to get up, but he sat still and roasted. He died soon after.

TESTS.

BY J. M. HITCHCOCK.

Economists say it is possible to so fertilize and cultivate the soil of Illinois as to cause the State to produce sufficient foods for the inhabitants of the entire world. This may or may not be mere speculation. The theory without the test is emptiness. We who live in this commonwealth would be glad to witness the proof. Should the experiment be made, and the prediction verified, it would probably insure to the benefit of this one State—possibly to the disadvantage of some other States.

Though expensive, such a scientific test would not be without its compensations to the whole world. Farmers, fruit-growers, gardeners, herdsmen and other food producers everywhere would be interested and helped in knowing the possibilities of the soil under the most favorable circumstances and utmost tension of cultivation. Such an assay of the soil's productive wealth would be invaluable to all peoples for all time and a provocative stimulus to better work. Similar experimental tests are helpful in the domain of religious and reform activities.

During the long centuries between the gardens of Paradise and Gethsemane an expectant people anxiously awaited the advent of the world's Redeemer. At length he came. One after another of the prophecies were fulfilled. Christ was betrayed—crucified and coffined in the flinty tomb. Now comes the crucial test of God's scheme of redemption. Unless he bursts asunder the walls of that charnel house and comes forth, hope is blighted and the world is lost. What three days of expectancy! With what breathless solicitude is the verdict awaited. The redemption of the world hangs in the balance. What tiptoe of anxiety was there until it is heralded that the tomb is tenantless and that Christ is risen. The test verifies the doctrine of the resurrection and faith triumphs. "If there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen; and if Christ be not risen then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain."

In the year 1873, when the name of D. L. Moody was scarcely known outside the smoke of his own wigwam, he and Henry Varley, the English lay evangelist, first met. One beautiful June morning, before their breakfast hour, as these two young men, whose names have since become household words, were leisurely sauntering through a London horticultural and botanical garden their attention was called to the luxuriant growth of the plants and flowers. The man-made conditions by which they were surrounded made it possible for God to give such an exhibition of his love and power as they were then witnessing.

Mr. Varley remarked that God's power had never been exhausted nor fully tested as to what he would do with and through his servants who are wholly consecrated to his service and whose all is laid a willing sacrifice upon the altar. As if the thought were new to Mr. Moody, he at once suggested that they two, then and there, at that early hour, by the grace of God, dedicate themselves, their families, their reputation, time and talents for time and eternity, unreservedly and without condition, to the service of the Master. This was accepting God's challenge as made in Malachi 3:10: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse," etc. The covenant seems to have been entered into and ratified in that garden by God himself of the first party and these evangelists of the second party. How God's faithfulness has been tested, and how he has kept his covenant and set his seal to the labors of these two men in all these years, let the church witness.

As less is known in America of Mr. Varley than of Mr. Moody, let us speak only of the latter. That the life and labors of this devout evangelist have been a benediction and rich legacy to the church is without controversy. That this man, who covenanted with God to do his bidding, has been permitted to preach the Gospel in this generation to more people than any other man living, or that has lived, is universally conceded. But the vast multitudes who have come within the compass of his voice are scarcely more than a tithe of those with whom he has come in touch through his printed proclamations, Gospel hymns and other messages. His publications are to-day wellnigh ubiquitous. Into whatever land the missionary enters with the Bible, the simple a b c Gospel sermons of Mr. Moody, with their companion hymns translated in their native tongue, soon follow. Were this evangelist to be suddenly incapacitated from further ministry, his works would continue a faithful witness for time and eternity.

DIFFICULTIES IN THE WAY OF CHURCH UNION.

BY HENRY M. HUGUNIN.

Finding in the Christian Statesman for March 6th an article entitled "Doctrinal Conditions of Church Membership," presumably from the pen of Rev. Dr. McAllister, the editor-in-chief of that paper, and considering it primarily a plea for a union of all orthodox Christian churches upon a common basis of belief, some of the hindrances that lie in the way of such a desirable consummation have suggested the following thoughts:

The origin of the early church founded by Christ and his apostles is forcibly related in the first and second chapters of the book of the Acts. From the Saviour, Peter had previously received the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and on the day of Pentecost, aided by the power of the Holy Spirit, he opened the doors of the church of the first-born, admitting on that day 3,000 members, and subsequently 2,000 more, with as many others daily as should be saved.

This church, thus founded, was strictly a united body of Christians, for they lived together, had all things in common, and devoted their possessions to the support of the church and its membership. It was the substance of which the lives of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden, before the fall, were the type.

But, as in the Garden of Eden, the devil invaded the new church immediately, and made hypocrites of Ananias and Sapphira; and God has left on record their fearful fate.

Since the expulsion of Adam and Eve, the Garden of Eden has been swept from the earth; and since the fatal defection of Ananias and Sapphira, the imperfection of the human element in the Church of Christ has been a serious hindrance to its advancement and purity.

Not long afterward, as recorded in the book of the Acts, disturbing heresies began to creep into the various branches of the church, and the apostles and Paul had a busy time in striving to suppress these elements of separation. Paul's epistles bear strong evidence of these dissensions of doctrine and departure from the fundamental spirit of the church. "Oh, foolish Galatians," wrote Paul, "who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth?" and his rebuke of their declension is very pungent and well-deserved.

Before the death of the Apostle John, the Lord delivered to him those wonderful epistles to the seven churches in Asia, showing the great diversity existing among them, and their various faults or defection.

The deduction I have reached from the foregoing summary of church history is, that seldom since the Pentecost has there been a time when the Church of Christ was in a condition to unite all its disturbing elements and maintain its primary purity of doctrine and practice. Even our Lord, in his letters to the seven churches, seems to have found much to commend as well as to condemn; and the same mixed condition of good and evil in individual churches has always existed, even unto this day.

Dr. McAllister lays considerable stress upon the variance of the doctrinal standards of the numerous modern denominations for the "terms of ecclesiastical communion as a condition of church membership." This is undoubtedly a serious hindrance to church unity. The apostolic conference at Jerusalem had the same difficulty to contend with in relation to circumcision and the eating of meats offered to idols; and thus it has been ever since, while the heresies have increased and widened in every succeeding generation. Can this be remedied so far as to admit of universal church union? Not now, but in the future it will.

Space will not permit me to dwell longer upon these points of past difficulties. We turn, therefore, to the reasons why church union is impossible in these days.

Dr. McAllister, while approving the most careful preparation for membership in orthodox churches, denies "the right of any ecclesiastical court to exclude from the privileges of the Lord's house.....any one who gives good evidence of being united with Christ by a living faith, and who is willing to walk according to the practical rules of the church." Again: "The belief in Christ which made a man a true member of the Lord's body in the first century makes such a member now, and will to the end of time." That belief, according to Peter's sermon in Acts 2:38, 39, required repentance—something that, like the resurrection from the dead, is seldom taught now in the churches. But the doctor's remark reflects the carelessness of the modern church in the admission of proselytes as well as Christians to her communion. Will the doctor notice the distinction between proselytes and Christian, because it is a vital point in true church membership? A man may profess a "simple belief in Christ," without possessing a single spark of vital Christianity. He may hire a costly pew, give liberally to the church finances, and actively engage in the work of the church, and yet be unsaved. Too many of this class have memberships in our orthodox churches, and are spiritually unfit to commune with the true followers of Christ. They carry money and influence into the churches; and "Verily they have their reward."

"Whatever is of sin is not of God;" whatever is not of God has no business in his church. "Whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world" and sin. "Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus is come in the flesh is of God." This does not merely mean that a man may acknowledge that Jesus Christ once lived on the earth in human form. It has a deeper spiritual meaning. If a man can truly say, "I can do all things through Christ, who dwelleth in my flesh, guiding, directing and strengthening me," he makes the real confession that "Jesus Christ has come in the flesh." The Mason and the Odd-fellow, though they may rank high in church societies, in their secret lodges ignore the existence of Christ, despise his divine offices and do not allow lodge prayers to be offered in his name. Yet these Masons and Odd-fellows throng the churches; the churches not only tolerate them, but give them honor; and then mourn the loss of spirituality and revival power. The sanctuary needs to be cleansed of these "fraternal" abominations before union with Christ and his bride will be possible. This is a mighty hindrance to church unity and prosperity.

I am not slandering Masons by my accusations. James Hardie (Mason), in a Masonic "Monitor," says that the fraternity first borrowed the secret worship of Baal as a substitute for the religion of Christ; then they interspersed into its ritualistic jugglery the names of Solomon and Hiram, to recommend it to both Jew and Gentile; and lastly, they unblushingly appropriated the Holy Bible and the names of the Saints John, to render it acceptable to the Christian public. The whole system of Freemasonry is a deception and a mass of hypocrisy. What business have its members in a Christian church? "What fellowship hath light with darkness?" Freemasonry is, to say the least of it, as popular to-day as Christianity itself, while its pagan mysteries are as much respected and upheld, even by ministers of the Gospel, as are the mysteries of the Christian faith. (See Ronayne's "Master's Carpet," pp. 335, 336.) I believe that Dr. McAllister will hardly care to dispute these facts, or deny that this is one great hindrance to Christian progress and unity.

The basis of the true Christian church is found in Paul's desire to "win Christ and be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith." His desire did not stop here. He desired to "know Christ, and to magnify him, counting all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord," the Head of the Christian church, the Lamb's wife.

The Christian faith and practice, as set forth by the Saviour himself, is, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, soul and strength, and thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets, and the life of the church.

It is well enough to say that "God is love," for so he is; but men and women in the church must love him also to complete the harmony betweeen him and themselves. Without that harmony and love for the neighbor there can be no salvation, and consequently no God-loving and no God-loved church.

The church has yet to develop the idea in its practices that it has a direct mission to fight all the sins of the world, the flesh and the devil. When all the churches do this and cleanse their sanctuaries, they may hope for Christian unity to be universal, and not before. It is not doctrines alone that are keeping them at variance; it is their sinfulness in not obeying the Gospel and abjuring the practices and errors of the world and the flesh. "He that saith he abideth in Christ ought also to walk even as he walked—holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners." So must his church.

A SKETCH OF MY LIFE.

BY ELDER S. C. KIMBALL.

CHAPTER I.

Thoroughly convinced of the anti-Christian character of Freemasonry, and being personal witnesses of its degrading tendency among professed Christians, and stimulated by the noble example of Elders J. P. Stoddard and D. P. Rathbun, Bro. J. F. Browne and I determined to make a systematic attempt to enlighten our fellow-Christians and fellow-citizens as to the evils and dangers of organized secrecy.

Much credit is due Bro. Browne for whatever good resulted from these efforts. Radical, enthusiastic, conscientious and brave, Bro. Browne, who had come from Wisconsin to attend school under my instruction, proved a valuable ally in the reform cause. We lectured against lodgism in churches, town-houses, school-houses and halls as the Lord opened the way. It would too much enlarge this sketch to name the towns and villages in which we held meetings. The general monotony of these meetings renders a description of many unnecessary.

At the convention in Lake Village, when Bro. Rathbun related the mob violence he had encountered in New York State from the lodge, I stated with great assurance that any man could go the length and breadth of New Hampshire and say what he pleased about Freemasonry or any other lodge without fear of violence.

Bro. Rathbun quietly replied, "Then I must reconstruct my theology. I have been taught that there is one devil; but if what Bro. Kimball says is true, the lodge devil of New Hampshire is not the same as the lodge devil of New York." Subsequent events, as will be noted in these sketches to follow, proved that Bro. Rathbun's theology was correct. Satan's character is not changed by change of climate.

I will close this sketch by alluding to a very curious occurrence at one of my lectures. As illustrating how Freemasonry corrupts the church and tramples under foot the laws, I cited the case that had recently come under my observation of one Smith, a dentist in a neighboring village, a Free Baptist church member, superintendent of the Sabbath-school, of pious parentage, and soon to be made a deacon; but he was a Freemason. This Smith committed a rape upon a young lady who came to his office to have her teeth repaired, having first administered an opiate, contrary to her protest. Her father charged it upon him and he confessed the outrageous deed, and offered a great sum of money to hush it up. The indignant father proceeded at once to secure his arrest. By the evident collusion of the sheriff, Smith fled to the woods. His brother Masons followed him, hooting and howling as though in hot pursuit; but he has never been heard from by his neighbors from that day to this, although nearly thirty years have passed.

At the close of the meeting a fine-looking gentleman invited me to go to his home for entertainment. Being among strangers, I gladly consented. On the way home my new-found friend asked me if I knew the name of the young lady of whom I spoke. I told him I never learned her name.

He said, "She is my daughter."

Of course my astonishment knew no bounds. I said, "Did I state the facts correctly?"

He said, "You did, substantially," adding some important particulars and emphatically confirming the main point, that undoubtedly the Freemasons aided Smith in making his escape.

This outraged father had never before heard of the N. C. A. anti-secret movement, but subscribed for the Cynosure and proved a fast friend of the cause until his death. There is no end to such instances of Masonic villainy.

REFORM NEWS.

THE DOCTRINE OF DIVINE HEALING.

APPLYING IT TO THE BODY POLITIC.

VERA CRUZ, Pa., March 18, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I am again at work in the Pennsylvania German section. I am much cheered in seeing the progress our cause is making here. Friends who came to a knowledge of our work but a few years since are now staunch supporters. Some who have been rescued from lodges remain firm in maintaining the truth. It seemed wise that I be at home during the week of the inauguration to welcome the friends who favored us with a call at that time.

Leaving Washington March 8th, I spent a few days in Philadelphia. I always like to go to the city of "brotherly love." There are many grand Christians there willing to aid in every good word and work so far as they understand it. I must refrain from individual mention. To report all who favor and help would occupy all the space granted for my report.

In response to the kind invitation given by Bro. Heckler, I attended a Tuesday evening meeting held at Bro. Wilhide's mission on Lehigh Ave. This mission has been opened to call special attention to the doctrine of divine healing, and to help those who may desire anointing and prayer that they may recover from sickness. Passages from the Bible bearing upon this subject are presented together with the argument. The devil is shown to be the author of all sin and sickness. Christ is the one who came to destroy the works of the devil. Several testified that Christ had healed them in answer to faith and prayer. Those with whom I spoke regarding anti-secrecy, all expressed their disapproval of the lodge system. I noticed some who have been working against the lodge for years. Bro. Wilhide but recently expressed his opposition to secret societies in his article published in the Cynosure.

I learned that a story has been circulating in Montgomery county, that a man answered me in good shape at the meeting I held in Burrs' Sabbath-school house some months since; that I agreed to return and discuss with him at an appointed time, and had failed to do so; thus showing that I was completely whipped out. The facts are, at the meeting held at this place there were some eight or ten present, all men. The night was dark and stormy. After talking for a while I suggested that some might have questions to ask or remarks they would like to make. Two or three expressed themselves as in favor of secret societies; asked some questions and made some remarks. A man who manifested evidence of dissipation and lack of ordinary sense (seeming to be utterly unable to comprehend an argument), was running over in praises of the lodge. He presented no arguments, nor did he answer any that I had presented. I suppose that his talk gave rise to this report. I made no appointment for a discussion, nor a meeting in that place. I remarked that I hoped to speak there again in the near future, and hoped we could have a meeting when the weather and roads would favor.

Of course I would not discuss with a man of this kind. I have no time or talk to throw away. What's the use of discussing with a windmill, or a man that can not or will not recognize an argument? My only reason for noticing this report is that a few who might credit it may know the facts. It is thought that some unacquainted with lodge lies, who have not known the writer or our work long, may judge the report true. It is my purpose to speak again in that house as soon as circumstances will permit.

I have visited Chalfont, Souderton, Pennsburg, Bally, Bartos, Palm, East Greenville, etc., in this section. Sabbath morning I preached in what is known as the Washington Schwenkfelder church. Sabbath evening I preached in the New Mennonite church, Bally. Tuesday afternoon I addressed the professors and students of the Perkiomen Seminary. Tuesday evening I lectured in the United Evangelical church, East Greenville. Last night I spoke in the Mennonite church, Zionsville. To-night I give a second lecture in the United Evangelical church, East Greenville. To-morrow eve I lecture in the Evangelical church, Emaus. These meetings have all been attended with interest. Prof. Kriebel, at the head of the Perkiomen Seminary, kindly offered to give up the class recitations for an hour after dinner that I might address the students and professors. One hour proved to short, and our discussion was extended nearly a second hour. Many questions were asked. While a majority of the professors and students did not favor the lodge there were some who did.

That miserable little excuse of a secret society called the C. M. A., starting with the Masonic Hunter in Oak Park, Ill., has found a foothold here. A few of the boys wear ribbons and strut round imagining they are the "Coming men of America." I was requested to speak of this concern to-night, and expect to do so. How any one with two grains of common sense can be fooled by the miserable lies this Hunter sends forth is surprising. Surely Puck may continue to write, "What fools these mortals be."

The church was crowded at East Greenville Tuesday night. Unless all signs fail, the people who will want to hear the lecture to-night cannot all get into the house. Schwenkfelder, Mennonite and other friends are renewing as usual for the Cynosure. New names are being added to the list and the work moving right along. I write at the home of Henry N. Shelly. He has taken splendid care of me. He is now getting the horse and carriage to convey me to Emaus, where I get the train to Allentown, and later to East Greenville. Our good friends, Dr. Backenstoe and his mother, are advertising my lecture in Emaus Friday night. I find the best people in the country are either on our side or coming. That's the advantage the reformer has. He always gets the best, even if it comes in the shape of affliction at times. The Spirit of Christ within makes and keeps one happy. For Christ and reform, W. B. STODDARD.

THE WORK IN PENNSYLVANIA.

ROYERSFORD, Pa., Feb. 11, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—It seemed best that I spend a week looking after the interests of reform in this part of Pennsylvania. I find the wheat generally growing in spite of the weeds. There has been much sickness and some deaths. The brother of Elder Jesse Zeigler, at whose home I write, was taken in young manhood. His death occurred about one month ago. Last August, when I held meetings here, he became interested in our work and subscribed for the Cynosure. It is believed by those who knew him best that he lived the life of a humble Christian, and that their loss is his eternal gain.

I spent a few days in the "City of Brotherly Love." Found a welcome, as always, at 457 North Sixth street. Beacon Light Mission reported good meetings and a growing interest. A Bro. Wilhide, who has been assisting Dr. Dowie in Chicago, has opened a mission at 1515 Lehigh avenue, Philadelphia. Interesting meetings and many answers to prayer are reported. I was glad to respond to Bro. Falkenstein's invitation and preach for his people Sabbath morning. He is in charge of the German Baptist Brethren church, Germantown. When leaving he slipped a bill into my hand to aid our work, for which I felt thankful.

Sabbath evening I listened to an excellent sermon preached by Elder I. D. Bowman in the Brethren church. He presented thoughts suggested by the life and death of Samson. The probability that when Samson at last told Delilah the real secret of his strength, he made her pledge never to reveal, was suggested. When people do that which is wrong they naturally say, "Don't you tell." I stopped over night with our tried friend, Elder J. Z Gottwals, at Oaks. Friends there are much pleased with the results of our recent convention.

I have given considerable attention to the circulation of the petitions. The objections are being overcome and this work is moving along nicely. Over five hundred names are already secured. The letters and conversation with friends show that the confidence is growing. Many think this move will be a grand success. Let all who have petitions circulate them. If there are those who can aid this move who have not been provided with blanks, if they will drop me a card they will be supplied. I hope to give a report in detail soon. I remain over Sabbath (D. V.) in this section. Bro. Milligan, pastor of the U. P. church near Beaver, Pa., invites me to preach for his people Sabbath, Feb. 21. I hope to do so. So much to be done and so few willing to do! What a blessed privilege to be a co-worker with Him who has done so much for us.

CORRESPONDENCE.

COLLEGE FRATERNITIES AGAIN.

SENECAVILLE, Ohio, March 16, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I notice in your issue of March 11th, that a correspondent from the State University of Iowa states that he has not seen anything in the paper in exposition of the evil of college fraternities, and thinks the editor has failed in giving warning against the evil influence of such societies over young men. I at once take it for granted that Bro. Arthur has not been a reader of the Cynosure as long as I have, or it would have been the farthest from his thoughts to have made such a statement, either directly or by implication.

Having been a reader for a series of years, and, I may say, a pretty diligent one, I am prepared to affirm that college fraternities have received merited antagonism and faithful ventilation in the columns of the "Pole Star" from time to time. If any one supposes that these fraternities have been ignored by the Cynosure, such an one labors under a great mistake, to my certain knowledge.

No paper in this broad land of ours has made such a specialty of exposing and opposing all secret organizations and fraternities as the Cynosure has. And in this its course is worthy of all commendation. From week to week its columns are loaded with warning against the works of darkness and the secret abominations that so infest our country, and other countries as well. I feel well assured that if these hidden orders should ever be the means of our country's ruin, in any way, or have any part therein, the Cynosure will stand acquitted and clear of guilt in the great day of settlement. And I make no doubt will have well-earned the applause in that day, "well done, good and faithful servant."

I would that it were permitted to enter multiplied thousands of homes from which it is now excluded. Oh, how much good it would be, the agent in doing those unsupplied families. Long may it live to bless the world by opposing sin and exalting virtue. The blessings of grace and love abide on editor, publisher and agents.

WHITHER DRIFTING?

ROSE POINT, Pa., March 12, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—We are moving along in about our accustomed way here. Times are financially hard. Money is close. It is about all that my little congregation seems able to do to keep up the necessary expenses. I often wish we could do more to help on the good work in all departments. When I see so much need how I long for more of the gold and silver that I might make larger contributions. But the Lord knows best. If I had large means perhaps I wouldn't have the spirit of liberality.

I don't know what this nation is coming to. What sums of money are spent in show and in sumptuous living and feasting. What a vast sum of money was spent in the inaugural ball, and that is only one item of the many sinful ways in which money is spent. Then Congress has again trampled God's law of the Sabbath under foot. Then the whole nation almost is, in a sense, worshiping McKinley as its Saviour.

The family is being gradually undermined, and that by law. The lax divorce laws of the land are terrible. Human life is coming to be held less and less sacred, as seen in the alarming increase of suicides and murders. Murders have increased more than 700 per cent in a few years. Last year it is said there was one murder to every 8,000 of our population.

Political corruption is on the increase in bribe giving and bribe taking. Secretism is evidently largely in control in church and state and in our courts, etc. The church is doing little to oppose. It accepts secret societies, national atheism and Christlessness, etc. It exercises no discipline against any of these. Its members who are in political life can do just about as they please in that sphere and nothing is said.

Where is the Christ-likeness of the church? It preaches what it calls the Gospel, but it is not the Gospel in full as Christ preached it, as it has no "Woe to you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites." J. R. LATIMER.

AN EDITOR IS AROUSED.

From the following letter to the New York Examiner, we learn not only how the editor of a prominent paper is aroused by our agitation, but how the liniment should be rubbed in by the friends of the cause as they have opportunity—and such chances are frequent.

HAMPTON FALLS, N. H., March 17, 1897.

EDITOR EXAMINER:—Referring to two sentences in your issue of March 4th, will you please explain in what respect "the Anti masonic craze, so disastrous to our churches," differed from "Dr. Parkhurst's direct and merciless exposures of evil-doing," which you commend? Perhaps in your opinion a mere matter of taste and self interest, as at different periods people have espoused one side or the other of the Nazarene "craze," or the Protestant, the dissenter, the Abolition or the Prohibition "crazes."

On the other hand I recently listened to a very able discourse on "Divine Madness," presenting the truth that the Divine Spirit in fitting any man for important reform work inspired him to the extent of reputed madness or insanity. The speaker was a regular pastor addressing a Christian Endeavor convention.

Aside from the principles of the Christless devil's church, if I should send you the record of its member whom here I best know, it would be too indecent for your columns; not a low-down fellow but a college graduate, the only son of his father, a Baptist deacon, and an influential member of that un-Scriptural adjunct of a Baptist church, "The Society." He was never to my knowledge accused of robbing a hen's roost, but he did counsel the seduction of his own niece, and that was a sample of the man's moral character. But she was not the daughter of a Mason, and so perhaps fair game according to the principles of the creed. More's the pity if you have not learned what life-long experience has deeply impressed on my mind.

Imps of Satan, to fraternity true,
Are rum, tobacco and secrecy too;
Designed for the ruin of mortal man,
They're triplets after the Siamese plan.

WHERE THE PRESIDENT ATTENDS CHURCH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 17, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The Metropolitan has been selected as the "President's church" during the present administration, but it is understood that the President and Mrs. McKinley will retain their membership in the Canton, Ohio, church. Up to less than a week ago the officers of Foundry church thought they had good reasons for expecting that Mr. McKinley would accept their offer of "the President's pew" and attend that church. That is what I intended to write last week, instead of saying, as I did, that "the President and Mrs. McKinley expect to attend Foundry." There is, of course, more or less gossip among the members of the two churches as to why the President chose the Metropolitan, but as there are probably none who know, excepting the President and Mrs. McKinley who are not likely to be asked to tell, certainly not by me, no good can come of repeating it.

The Metropolitan church has a peculiar and interesting history. It is a national church, having been built by contributions made by the Methodists of the country, and not by its congregation. Its relations with the Baltimore Conference, which has jurisdiction over the other M. E. churches in Washington, differ from those of the other churches. Its pastor is selected by the board of bishops, and the conference merely ratifies the choice. When President Grant attended the church, a pew was set apart for the President of the United States, and the sum of $5,000 contributed by a friend of the church to dedicate the pew to the use and convenience of the President. The church has rented pews, and the President's pew has been rented, along with the others, since the retirement of President Grant, but always subject to the wishes of whoever may have been President. Although the corner-stone of the church was laid in 1854, the building was not erected until twelve or thirteen years later. It also has pews set apart for the Vice-President and for the Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, and for some of the States and large cities, all rented under the same conditions that govern the renting of the President's pew. C. A. S.

MASONRY AND THE TURK.

LEBANON SPRINGS, N. Y., March 15, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Perhaps readers of the Cynosure may remember an article on this subject that appeared in your columns a few months ago, expressing the opinion that more than all else (outside the Turkish Empire) Freemasonry is responsible for the wholesale butcheries of the Christian Armenians. Recent developments, though not offering positive proof, yet tend strongly to confirm that opinion.

As was stated in the article referred to, it is a fact, boasted of by Masons everywhere, that "the great Powers" of Europe (Russia, and possibly Austria, excepted) are Masonic Powers; that is, their chief dignitaries, from their sovereigns, down, are Masons; that all, alike, have taken the same tremendous oaths, and have all invoked the same fiendish penalties, and so are, each and all, sworn to stand by and defend any and every Masonic "brother," in any case, "whether he be right or wrong." And what is the outcome?

No intelligent reader of the papers needs to be told that probably more than 100,000 innocent Christian Armenians have been massacred, with the connivance, and probably, too, by positive command of the Turkish Sultan. Yet those same great Masonic Powers, "Christian Powers," they call themselves, and Russia and Austria with them, look on calmly and even with apparent complacency.

The N. Y. Advertiser of September 27, 1896, reports from "the Berlin correspondent of the Chronicle" that "the Frankfurter Zeitung asserts that ten days after the massacre in Constantinople, the German Ambassador there presented to the Sultan, in the name of the Emperor William, a large photograph of the German Imperial family." He adds, "The gift was received as a special mark of friendship." All this while the hands and the garments of the haughty Turkish Potentate were yet red, even dripping, with the blood of those 2,000 victims of Moslem bigotry and hate!

Again, the Advertiser, of the same date, reports that "A dispatch to the Times, from Berlin, says a well-known Armenian professor was advertised to address a meeting there, to protest against the Armenian outrages, but the police warned him to desist, on pain of expulsion from Germany."

Why all this? Why does that Emperor thus promptly (only ten days after that frightful massacre of more than 2,000 Armenian Christians), why hasten to thus practically assure that bloodiest of assassins and murderers that with him and his government, he, the Sultan, is still cherished and honored as "a brother beloved?" Why with the groans and cries of wounded, murdered men and the screams and moans of affrighted, outraged and murdered women and children still ringing in his ears, and the horrible image of that gory monster almost before his eyes; we ask again: why that unseemly haste; why in the very face of a horrified world is that Emperor so free, so effusive in his expression of his own personal, fraternal regard? Ah! those fiendish, those Satanic, Masonic oaths.....They tell the story. The report (evidently well-founded) is that both Emperor and Sultan are Masons! That recognition of the Sultan by the Emperor and the suppression of the Armenian professor by the German officials were—only too evidently—inspired by Masonry. They show that crimes, however great, if only committed by Masons, be the perpetrator or perpetrators peasant or Sultan, are condoned and defended by Masonry, and so by Masonic potentates and princes, and therefore by minor Masonic officials; that the criminal, if only a Mason, however black and damning his crime, can never lose caste or fellowship with "the fraternity." Whether "guilty or not guilty," "murder or treason not excepted," he may always count upon all the "aid and comfort" in the power of every true, adhering Mason to bestow. It proves what "loyal" Masons generally deny, whether infidels, or, as too often happens, professing Christians, that the revelations by Morgan, Pritchard, Bernard, Finney, Ronayne and a host of other "good men and true," are true; that Masonry is a vast mass of organized, oath-bound deviltry and violence and lies.

But this is not all. The promptness with which the great European Masonic powers, France, England, Austria and even Italy, now freely affiliate with the "Russian Bear" in his defence of Turkish and other Moslem oppressors and murderers, their boasted determination that Greece shall not defend the Cretans, even already using naval and military force to keep the people of that ill-fated island under the iron, bloody heel of their cruel Moslem oppressors, is another, a conspicuous and not very specious method on the part of those "powers," of yielding "strict obedience to the precepts and obligations of the fraternity."

All appearances now seem to indicate that by the connivance and co-operation of those allied Masonic powers, Greece, the would-be deliverer and protector of Crete, is to be driven away, and under the specious but deceitful promise of "autonomy," poor Crete is to be given back to the tender mercies of one of the worst, the bloodiest tyrannies that have ever cursed the world.

Such is Masonry. Such, too, is its influence whenever and wherever it can be brought into play. As "a religious institution," a counterfeit and a fraud. Its pretence of "charity," a deception and a lie. Though a pretended philanthropist, she is ever ready to crush and trample upon all, whether nations or individuals, who will not bend the knee to her arrogant, oppressive claims and will; and, with all the power at her command, to favor, protect and defend the bloodiest of tyrants, assassins or murderers, be he potentate or peasant—if only a "brother" of "the mystic tie." C. A. S. TEMPLE.

ARE ALL LODGE MINISTERS LIARS?

EAST LYNN, Mass., March 8, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Some time ago in conversation with my own Methodist minister, at that time preaching in the Cissna charge, and in my own house, he told me at one time he belonged to the Masonic order but had left it; he said he would not advise any one to join the Masons. While he had taken the third degree he really could not see any harm nor any real benefit to be derived from them.

He said he would not join the lodge but it didn't cost him anything, and had a curiosity to find out the the inside workings of the order. But in less than three weeks from the time I had the conversation, Mr. Jamson, as that was his name, attended the Rankin Masonic lodge and helped to initiate a young minister, at that time preaching at that place. At least Mr. Jamson told this in the presence of two good, reliable men who told me.

I have also had sufficient evidence since to fully demonstrate to me that Mr. Jamson is and was a Mason at the time he told me he was not. Only a few weeks ago I was told, by a reliable church member, that a certain elder of the Methodist church told her that he did not belong to any secret organization; but have been informed since, he is a high Mason.

I ask, do all ministers belonging to lodges lie? I will just say, since knowing the above to be facts, I have decided I haven't got one cent more to pay any ministers, knowing them to belong to secret organizations, as I don't care to have any of my money to go into these reservoirs or build lodge halls or Masonic temples. S. C. JUDY.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS

GEORGE M. WILDIN, LYNDON, KAN., MARCH 4, 1897.—Times are so hard it is almost impossible to raise money, but I must have the Cynosure. I can't take a Christian, or a so-called Christian, paper that won't fight the devil in and out of the lodge.

REV. A. M. FRETZ, SOUDERTON, PA., MARCH 11, 1897.—I am receiving the Cynosure regularly and am anxious to read the news it brings from the anti-secret battlefield. While I get many religious papers, and in my manifold duties as pastor cannot read everything, yet I am sure to go through as much as possible of the Cynosure. Keep at it, Mr. Editor. God bless you. Bro. W. B. Stoddard made a short stop with me to-day. He is on his misson, and does it flying sometimes. Your issue of March 4th was an excellent one.

JONATHAN H. GALLOWAY, MILTONVALE, CLOUD CO., KAN., MARCH 7, 1897.—I was in the war of the Rebellion nearly four years, and was in Louisiana when our army captured a large number of the Knights of the Golden Circle, an interesting account of which order I have just read in the Lodge Lamp. These captured Knights of the Golden Circle mentioned as their brother the editor in Chicago which you name in the Lodge Lamp. I have believed for the last four years that a simular movement is busy in our midst to-day.

—Do not confine your attention all the time to Morgan and others Masonically murdered or persecuted long ago. Remember them, but do not forget Bro. Griswold, of Connecticut State Prison. Don't forget Hartford Lodge and Connecticut Grand Lodge, with their third point of fellowship expulsion.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON.

BY REV. J. B. GALLOWAY.

And this Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come. Matt. 24:14.

Simon hath declared how God at first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name. Acts 15:14. See also parable of sower, Matt. 13. Pre-millenarians are not higher critics. We yield to none in our estimate of the power, sufficiency and efficiency of the written Word, of the preached Word, and of the ever present spirit. They are omnipotent for the accomplishment of that for which they were sent.

We believe also in the present power and future glory of the church which Christ loved and gave himself for; that it is the pillar and ground of the truth; that it is the body of Christ, the complement of Him "that filleth all in all;" "and that the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." But what has all this to do with the universality of righteousness in this present evil age; or with that nonsensical, un-Scriptural expression, the conversion of the world? It would be just as Scriptural to speak of the conversion of the devil or the flesh. The Word itself, and not man's vain philosophy, must decide what these agencies will accomplish.

1. As to the Word, and the Word preached. It will accomplish that for which it is sent. It is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, but to no one else; and it must be manifest to all that the masses do not believe. It has been, and will be, preached as a testimony unto all nations, but toward the end of the age, with much the same effect as in the days of Noah. For nearly nineteen hundred years the seed has taken effect as indicated in the parable of the sower, and we defy any man to prove that the effect will be different as long as the devil is loose to catch away the word, or the earth under the curse to bring forth thorns and thistles to choke it.

2. The visible church is instrumentally the sower of the seed, but the great mass of Christendom is to-day in apostasy, and has corrupted the Word of God with its traditions. We might almost say that you can count the denominations on the fingers of one hand that are holding fast the faithful word, and administering the ordinances according to Christ's appointment.

Yet in the face of all this the poor, silly, deluded, optimistic Post-millenarian believes that everything is going on grandly, and the world will soon be converted to Christ. They say God by his Word and Spirit through the church has the power. Yes, and in all the past he has had the same power, but has he and will he exercise it before the Parousia of Christ? Give us the Word for it, brethren. The church or ecclesia is the called-out ones, and will never be greater than the election of grace.

3. Gentile governments are wild beasts, and will continue to be so until they are merged into the nondescript one, which, together with the false prophet, is cast into a lake of fire. Rev. 19: 20. Is that conversion?

4. What has, and what will become of God's most mighty and faithful witnesses? The greater number of them have and will seal their testimony with their blood. Even the last two (Rev. 11:2) mysterious and probably supernatural witnesses must spend their three years and a half clothed in sackcloth; and although endued with superhuman, and for the time, invincible power, are finally overcome and slain by the beast from the pit; and the dwellers on earth make merry over them. But if men will not hear and believe these two sons of oil, how can we expect the pigmies of to-day to overcome and convert the powers of darkness that now exist?

But every faithful witness is himself an overcomer, and God is glorified by them whether men will hear or forbear. This is all the encouragement we need to fight anything and everything that is evil. Amen.

Against me though an host encamp,
my heart yet fearless is:
Though war against me rise, I will be confident in this.
One thing I of the Lord desired,
and will seek to obtain,
That all days of my life I may within God's house remain.

A BIRD CITY.

An Illinois Poultry Farm Where Thousands of High Bred Fowls Are Raised.

Near Quincy, Ills., is a farm whose fame is known to poultry fanciers all over the world. It is the largest of its kind and is a wonderful place.

Forty-eight acres of land and a number of fine brick buildings are devoted entirely to the raising of thousands of high bred chickens, ducks and geese, of which 3,200 were sold last year.

This farm for 17 years has been sending fowls for breeding purposes to all parts of the world. Only fancy breeds of fowls are dealt in.

More time and trouble are spent by the proprietors in getting proper food and water for their feathered charges than are spent by many a head of a family with half a dozen children to provide for. Each particular breed of chickens, ducks or geese has its own houses and yards. These latter are long runs, fenced in with wire screenings or neat palings. Big trees afford shade to the feathered population and in that portion of the farm devoted to the web footed fowls large artificial ponds and winding brooks have been constructed, through which there is flowing a constant stream of water.

Each yard or run has its own proper house so constructed that it can be heated by steam in winter and cooled by cold air in summer, thus insuring an even temperature throughout all seasons. Large fields are each season planted with wheat, barley and buckwheat, and through these the fowls can roam at all times, free to eat all they please of the tender young green sprouts or of the fully developed grain.

One peculiar feature of this farm is that all of the fowls are raised by artificial means. The incubator house is a long, low structure, excellently ventilated and lighted and kept at an even temperature throughout the year. Down the center of the long, narrow room are set two rows of what at first appear to be old fashioned dressing tables. They are hardly that, however, but are instead the most improved incubators, and each one is constantly filled with high grade eggs in a more or less advanced stage of incubation.

As soon as the tiny puff ball-like chicks emerge from the shells, be they ducks or geese or chickens, they are removed from the incubator and placed in another house, well lighted and scrupulously clean. Here they are kept for a few days until they familiarize themselves with the appearance of the world outside of an egg and until there is no doubt as to their health and strength. Then they are allowed outside in the runs if the season be warm, or if it is winter time they are kept in the house until springtime.

Each year, between the 1st of December and Jan. 15, competent judges visit the farm and "score" all the stock. When this is completed, such birds as are not up to the standard or are disqualified by any little mark or imperfection are at once crated and shipped to market. Although eggs can be hatched at any time of the year, most of the eggs are put into the incubator in February, March and April.

There are practically two farms in one of these big ranches, what is known as farm No. 1 being devoted principally to the hatching of eggs and the raising of fancy poultry. Farm No. 2 is given up almost exclusively to the raising of Peking ducks and Toulouse geese. There are altogether between 8,000 and 10,000 fowls raised annually on this farm; and they are sent all over the earth.

Make Use of the Scraps.

A small flock which receives the scraps from the table produces eggs when larger flocks are unprofitable. The fact is plain that the smaller flock receives better feeding. Table scraps are not grains. They contain a variety not found in the rations of a large flock. Bread, meat, potatoes, cooked vegetables of several kinds as well as the sour milk, and even cake and pie, are included, to say nothing of peas and beans, which are the best of all egg producing vegetables. This variety not only provides the hens with the elements needed for egg production, but it promotes digestion and prevents disease. This kind of food would be costly if it were not the waste of the table, for it requires labor to prepare it. But as the result of feeding scraps is a production of eggs it is safe to say that if the same food, labor and care could be bestowed on a thousand hens as a small flock receives the profits would be proportionately larger.

White Guinea Fowls.

White guineas are profitable fowls, and it pays to have a few on the farm. The egg is not large, but it has a fine flavor and comes in greatest abundance about the time your prize Plymouth Rocks are molting. The white guinea is not to be despised as a table fowl, having a rich yellow skin and delicate, fine grained flesh.

Poultry Points.

Because binding the legs of chickens and cats, carrying them with their heads down, does not kill them outright, it does not follow at all that it does not cause much suffering.

The biggest poultry ranch in the world is to be located near San Francisco. It is expected to yield 90,000 broilers and 2,000,000 eggs a year.

Russia has 57,000,000 hens. They average a yearly output of 4,000,000,000 eggs and beat the French and German layers by about 500,000,000.

When the hens are slow to lay, one of the best invigorators is a mess of lean meat twice or three times a week. About an ounce for each hen is sufficient at a meal.

A fresh egg has a limelike surface to its shell.

Boiled eggs which adhere to the shell are fresh.

Overfeeding is expensive. It not only costs more for the feed, but the hens get too fat and lay no eggs.

Too much soft cooked food is not good for fowls. They need some employment for the gizzard.

A western farmer made a small test in December of what his 28 Barred Plymouth Rocks were doing, charging them with every cent's worth of food and 10 cents an hour for the time taken in looking after them. At the end of the month the margin of profit was $3.37½.

PEACH TREES.

FOR THE NORTH. Why not grow your own peaches? I have an Iowa peach that has been grown in the State for sixty years. The original tree is still alive and fruiting.

This peach is of good size, best quality, free stone, and has fruited unprotected after winters of 30 degrees below zero.

It is the peach for the North. Send for prices and history; also prices of other reliable nursery stock.

The Christian Cynosure.

REV. M. A. GAULT, - - - EDITOR.
WM. I. PHILLIPS, - - - PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 1897.

PROPHECIES NOW BEING FULFILLED.

In Rev. 11:2, it is declared that "the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months." The period forty-two months is used as equivalent to 1,260 years. The power that has been treading Jerusalem, the holy city, underfoot for more than twelve hundred years, is the Mohammedan power. They took Jerusalem and built the Mosque of Omar on the ruins of the Temple in the year 636 A. D. If we add to this date 1,260 years, it brings us to 1896 as the period when Jerusalem will be emancipated from Moslem rule.

What are the prophecies that indicate how the Turkish power is to be overthrown, and how do these predictions tally with the signs of the times?

In Dan. 11:40, we read, "And at the time of the end"—that is at the end of the 1,260 years—"shall the king of the South push at him;" who is meant by the king of the South? Some have supposed this king was Egypt, others Italy, but in the light of recent events does he not seem to be the king of Greece? In his defiance of the Turkish empire has he not pushed most energetically at the great European power which is Turkey's mightiest support—the Czar of Russia? Who else are we to understand by the king of the North who "shall come against him like a whirlwind with chariots and with horsemen and with many ships; and he shall enter into the countries and shall overflow and pass over." Is not this the same power predicted in Isa. 41:25, "I have raised up one from the north and he shall come from the rising of the sun." And in Isa. 46:11, "calling a ravenous bird from the east"—the imperial flag of Russia is emblazoned with two ravenous eagles.

It is remarkable that this one who is to destroy the Moslem power now dominating the holy city is described as being raised up from the north, and as coming from the rising of the sun. Russia is in a northeasterly direction from Greece, but if he comes by way of Turkey and Austria with "his chariots and horsemen"—his land forces; and by way of Constantinople with "his ships" or naval forces, as is clearly indicated, then he will literally come from the east. "He shall enter into the countries and shall overflow and pass over," and shall finally destroy the Mohammedan system. "And he shall plant the tabernacles of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain; yet he shall come to his end and none shall help him." For here in the Valley of Esdraelon, in all probability, will be fought the great decisive battle of Armageddon. All this is more clearly predicted in Ezek. chapters 38 and 39. Then says Daniel, "there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time."

Surely the dark storm clouds so fast gathering in eastern Europe indicate wonderful overturnings in the near future and a rapid fulfillment of these remarkable prophecies.

THE YOKE.

There is a yoke that is easy, but there are yokes that gall. Some are unequal, forcibly and unnaturally joining together things that God had put asunder. Now and then men set free are again entangled. Entitled to be free in Christ Jesus they feel too often the weight of the galling yoke of bondage. Never pagans before, they became consecrated and outspoken Christians; they are again entangled in the world, and their last state is worse than the first. For they become sun-worshiping Freemasons, committing the abominations seen in Ezekiel's vision where elders of Israel were bowing toward the east. Bound by the bonds of Masonry they are slaves, and wear a yoke of bondage.

This yoke is the unequal one that binds them to the world,—a card-playing, smoking, drinking, swearing class of men claiming them as "brethren." When a man "belongs" to the Masonic society he does belong to it indeed, and it has him in its possession. It is a poor position for a Christian man, who ought to be redeemed from the world, its sins and its bondage, and to be Christ's freedman. He wears the yoke, and to the authority that locked it on his neck the slave belongs.

The yoke is a galling one. How many Masons have detested and hated Masonry. Its abominations are intolerable, its falsehoods contemptible, its puerilities and profanities alike insulting to God and man. How can a real Christian fail to find such a vile yoke galling? Alas for him! He discovers to what master he has sold himself, but thinks his discovery has come too late. Forever the odious yoke galls.

The yoke compels service to Satan and compels treason. Partaker of other men's sins, yoked up with sinners, the citizen is no longer free to do his duty, but must go wrong when the yoke requires; and the Christian must consent to disloyalty to Christ, apostasy from Christianity or its rejection by his Masonic "brethren." He must be a devotee of a religion that is avowedly not Christian. There must be prayer, yet it must be Christless prayer. There must be pagan rites and worship, and there must be pagan fraternity. Religiously he must fellowship Mohammedan lodges, and the twenty lodges of Bombay. He must consent to the outrageous moral principles of Masonry, which are pretentious but immoral. As a citizen he must agree with the Hartford lodge, which kept as an unimpeached "brother" Goodrich, who went to Wethersfield State prison, but expelled Jackson, whose testimony in a Connecticut court convicted Brother Griswold. What a yoke for loyal citizens, conscientious Christians or decently moral men to bear.

THE MOST CRUEL MONOPOLY.

There is no such dangerous monopoly in these times as the liquor traffic. It exerts a more blighting curse upon more people than any other evil. The most alarming feature of this monopoly is that it is fast being entrenched behind the capital of the great English syndicate. Our readers are aware that in all our large cities the great majority of the saloons and breweries are now owned and controlled by English capitalists. The Cincinnati Enquirer of Jan. 31, says:

"Three representatives of a gigantic London syndicate are in this city for the purpose of gobbling up all the biggest breweries here, and success has so far crowned their efforts. They have purchased an option of sixteen, and the deal has progressed so far that most of the brewers have been taking stock and summing up all the saloon chattel mortgages they hold for the purpose of knowing just how they stand. The deal will be closed during the coming week. The amount to be paid for the lot aggregates $9,000,000. One-half will be paid in cash and the other half in preferred stock, with guaranteed interest, so that the present owners will have some voice in the future administration of affairs.

"The syndicate intends consolidating under the laws of the State and make them all one grand corporation. The older brewers were the most eager to make the sale, owing to the condition trade has been in generally for some time.

"The deal has been under way with local brokers several months. One of these brokers was in London during the summer. It is stated that the syndicate also has options on the Fay-Egan Woodworth machinery plant of this city, the Hooven, Owens & Rentschler engine works at Hamilton and other factories."

A FRIGHTFUL LODGE INITIATION.

What new scare will Satan next invent to terrify the deluded lodge victim is difficult to tell. While candidates for initiation into secret societies usually nerve themselves for a pretty lively time and expect trouble of various sorts before escaping from the lodgeroom, a Quincy man, who joined one of the secret orders week before last, had more excitement during the evening than he had run across in all his life before.

After the initiation ceremonies, a brother arose and said that he considered it his duty, while the good of the order was under discussion, to inform the lodge that a brother visiting from another city had borrowed $10 from him a few days before and when asked for it had denied the obligation most vehemently. The speaker added that it was his belief that the visitor was in the habit of going around from place to place, getting acquainted in lodges of the order and borrowing money. When this charge was made the accused sprang to his feet and shouted: "You lie!" At the same moment he pulled a revolver and began firing over the heads of the jurors toward his opponent. The accuser also drew a gun and the bullets began to fly. In the excitement some one turned off the gas and there was a wild scramble in the darkness for safety.

The members dived under the tables and chairs and the new candidate squeezed in behind the stove, where he was almost choked to death. One member made a desperate effort to raise a window, and as the hall was on the forth floor it was just as well for him that he did not. In a moment everyone had found some place of hiding and the revolvers banged away until they were empty. Then the lights were turned on again and the duelists were discovered shaking hands in the center of the room and laughing heartily.

The whole thing was a cleverly arranged hoax, in which only two or three of the lodge members were concerned. It was conceived to make things interesting for the members and especially for the candidate and to determine whether he had any nerve. As he was pretty well roasted when they hauled him from behind the stove they agreed to let the matter drop there, but the story was to good to keep, and Quincy has been laughing over it ever since.

A GOOD MAN PASSES AWAY.

We learn with sorrow of the death on Thursday, Feb. 25, of Royal G. Wood, at his old-time residence near Brattleboro, Vermont. He was a faithful supporter for many years of the anti-secret reform. He was born in Brattleboro in 1807, and was near ninety years of age. He was of Puritan and Revolutionary stock, his father, Philip Wood, having been a soldier of the Revolutionary war. He was one of the most proficient Bible students in his community.

He was a friend and associate of the late Gen. John W. Phelps, and was an earnest sympathizer and co-worker with him in the anti-secret agitation. His views he held as a matter of conscience and religion, and he argued his principles in such a keen, incisive way as commanded respect for his sincerity, and put his opponents on their mettle. He had five children; three daughters survive, and two sons and their mother preceded him to the better land.

IMPEACHMENT OF FREEMASONRY.

Prof. Simpson Ely, of Kirksville, Mo., writes the following strong impeachment of Freemasonry.

I impeach it because it is secret.

I impeach it because it is Christless.

I impeach it because it is a mixture of Biblical and pagan influences.

I impeach it because of its horrible, un-Christian oaths.

I impeach it because husbands are oath-bound to keep its secrets from their wives.

I impeach it because its votaries are pledged to protect one another in all crimes, except murder and treason, and even these are optional.

I impeach it because it has the same burial service for Christian and infidel.

I impeach it because the wickedest member of the lodge is taught that he will go to the grand lodge above when he dies.

I impeach it because Christians, Jews, Mohammedans, deists and infidels are all brought into its fellowship.

I impeach it because it teaches only personal purity toward the wives and daughters of Masons.

I impeach it because it establishes lines of caste in society.

I impeach it because it belongs to "the unfruitful works of darkness."

I impeach it because thousands of its members substitute the lodge for the church.

I impeach it because of its lying claims to great antiquity.

I impeach it because it murdered Morgan.

I impeach it because its prominent members have told me that Masonry is Christ-dishonoring.

I impeach it because prominent Masons have told me that the lodge is draining the church of the money, energy and influence that properly belongs to it.

I impeach it because it violates the teaching of the Apostle Paul, that "all that we do in word or deed should be done in the name of the Lord Jesus."

I impeach it because it boasts of a "benevolence" that is unadulterated selfishness.

I impeach it because it is intolerant toward all who oppose it.

I impeach it because its votaries will not come out into the light and defend it in honorable discussion.

I impeach it because it gives itself to ways that are dark and to tricks that are vain.

I impeach it because it is clannish, and so opposed to the common brotherhood of humanity.

I impeach it because it excludes from its benefits (?) the poor, the outcast, the deaf, the dumb, the halt, the lame and the blind. Those who were the especial objects of our blessed Saviour's love and benevolence would be black-balled by Masonry.

I impeach it because it excludes woman.

I impeach it because its recognition of God is a farce, a delusion and a snare.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Bro. T. B. Arnold's wife, who has had a severe spell of sickness, is recovering.

—Christianity is truth; Masonry is falsity. Masonry silences Christianity in the lodge, but is thus only like all error in contact with truth.

—Rev. Chas. Clyde, a good friend of the cause at Velencia, Pa., has recently received calls to the pastorate of churches at Jonathan's Creek, O., and at Lochiel, Canada.

—Attorney H. Scott Howell, of Keokuk, Iowa, is a brother of Capt. A. O. Howell, of Champaign, Ill., and was a delegate to the Pan-Presbyterian Convention at Glasgow last summer.

—Bro. P. Bacon, of Hartford, Conn., says that any person who would be glad to co-operate in a plan now being inaugurated to save a few of the many starving children in India, can learn how by writing to him at Hartford.

—Bro. E. M. House, West Somerville, Mass., writes in renewing for the Cynosure: "I do so, gladly, not only to help a righteous cause, but because I get great good from reading its pages. May God bless this work and help us all to do our part in pushing the agitation."

—Mrs. Elizabeth A. Reed, author of two vols. of Hindoo and Persian literature, addressed the students of Wheaton College, Thursday of last week. She is lecturing in the interests of a University Extension Movement along the line of harmonizing the Bible with science.

—Rev. M. C. Pearson, of Leland, Idaho, writes: "I do not see how I can do without the Cynosure as a reform paper. It helps me greatly in my lectures and preaching, and I scatter many of them over the country as I go about. Some are pleased and interested, while others are offended."

—Bro. L. Desmarais, of Los Gatas, Cal., writes that he was surprised to read in March 4th Cynosure that some foreign missionaries when sent out to preach the Gospel had organized Masonic lodges. He thinks such news will effect the contributions for missions on the part of Anti-masons.

—Bro. Geo. Dudley Dodge, of Hampton Falls, N. Y., in referring to the New York Examiner's phrase, that "the Anti-masonic 'craze' was disastrous to the churches," writes: "I have yet to learn that even the Jews blamed Jesus for the manner in which Satan treated his victims in leaving them."

—Bro. A. O. Howell, of Champaign, Ill., writes: "I want to know if the Sultan of Turkey is a Freemason and if any of the Armenians are Masons, and how far the present attitude of the European powers may thus be accounted for. I am writing a small pamphlet on my observation and experiences in the army."

□—The corner-stone of the new court house in San Francisco was laid recently with Masonic ceremonies. More than 5,000 spectators and 1,000 Masons were present to witness the pagan rite of pouring the corn, oil and wine. Why send all our missionaries to Africa, China and India to instruct pagans when America is alive with them?

—Mrs. Elizabeth Blanchard Cook's "Bible Readings" are now used in the public schools of Philadelphia, Detroit, Minneapolis, Omaha, Dayton, Trenton, Arkon, Lincoln, Middletown, Terre Haute and Knoxville. Prof. A. G. Lane, Supt. of Chicago public schools, says he always speaks a good word for "Bible Readings."

—Malcolm McNeil, chaplain and superintendent of the Chicago Sailors' Institute and Mission, at 35 East Chicago Ave., conducts meetings every night, and is doing a much-needed work in looking after the moral and spiritual wants of sailors. He is an ex-Mason and shuns not to declare the council of God against the lodge wherever opportunity presents.

—Rev. Dr. James Kerr, of Glasgow, Scotland, sends us a list of ministers in Great Britain interested in our work and adds: "I am not sanguine as to the issue of our efforts, but duty is ours, and certainly the secret empire, against which America through your society has first put on her armor, has done much damage here; and its power for evil is not likely to abate. A few here may be able to dam the torrent in some slight directions at least."

—Bro. Jasper J. Tucker, of Spring Arbor, Mich., writes: "I was specially interested in your issue of March 11th. It was a heavy blow on the secret insurance orders. I am glad you are exposing the Modern Woodmen; they are strong here, and their members make no pretensions to religion. A Presbyterian minister lectures for them here Friday night. It was through the influence of a minister that I once joined the Masons, and I could not afterwards have any confidence in a Masonic minister's piety."

—Dr. Wm. Lawrence, D. D., in a recent lecture in Association Hall on "What is the Matter with the Churches?" indicated his estimate of Freemasonry by using the threadbare statement that bad men in the church do not vitiate its claims any more than bad men in the lodge vitiate the claims of that "noble institution, Freemasonry." Yet if the church would, like the lodge, attract so largely the vicious elements of society, the conclusion would be there must be something radically defective with a tree bringing forth such corrupt fruit.

—Ex-President Harrison, whose articles in The Ladies' Home Journal are creating such widespread interest, will write about "The Social Life of the President," in the April issue of that magazine. The ex President will tell of the dinners, receptions, etc., that are given by the Chief Executive, and detail the great social demands made upon him. He also gives a peep into the White House dining-room and silver closet, and notes the beauty of the service used for state dinners, which was bought at secondhand. It is said that he also pays heed to the oft-repeated question, "How much of his salary can a President lay aside?"

—Governor Thornton, of New Mexico, has placed the local company of infantry on guard at the penitentiary at Santa Fe, on account of the discovery of a plot to blow up the building by a party of friends of the four members of the Borrego gang of assassins, who were condemned to be hanged Tuesday, Feb. 23, but who have been granted a respite for thirty days by President Cleveland. Another ominous feature of the trouble is the appearance of the cabalistic chalk figures "B—302—40," on the pavements and on the doors of officials' houses, which the knowing ones describe as similar to the calls for meetings of the Secret Button gang, which appeared frequently in 1892, just prior to the assassination of ex-Sheriff Frank Chavenz.

—Bro. A. O. Swinehart, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran church, Washington, Kan., writes: "Several months ago I sent to the Lutheran Standard a copy of W. B. Denton's article on 'Fraternal Life Insurance Organized Robbery,' with the recommendation that it be republished. This was done several weeks ago. This is a most excellent thing to give light to all who want to see. I have little doubt some will also read it who will almost gnash their teeth at it now, all the more so because their little knowledge and conscience tells them that it is correct, but they do not want truth and honesty. After a while some of these who will be among the losers will be just as angry at themselves for not having acted on this and similar warnings—'all things come to them that wait.' I suppose that inside of 20 years there will be a general downfall of the great institutions that are now uppermost in the minds of thousands of people. Then I suppose that a great many churches and people who now connive at, or even openly promote these damnable things, will fairly fall over each other in their haste to get on the other side."

—Freemasonry is said by some not to be a religion nor to interfere with it; while many others believe it to be a religion and class it as such, as will appear from the following item from a New York paper: "Directors of the New York German-American Non-Sectarian Orphans' Dowry Society, it has been announced, will meet at the house of Lazarus Morgenthau, No. 178 East Seventy-second street, to-day to make arrangements for the first four weddings to take place under the auspices of the union. They are scheduled for February 22. On that day the announced program is that one bride will be a Catholic, one a Protestant, one a Hebrew and one the daughter of a Freemason. Each bride will receive $100."

—The corner-stone of the new Sabbath school for the revival of the lost mysteries of antiquity was laid on Point Long near San Diego, Cal., Feb. 24. The theosophic crusaders who have just returned from a trip around the world took a prominent part in the exercises. Mrs. Katharine A. Tingley, of New York, head of the esoteric cult, officiated, assisted by E. T. Hargrove, President of the Theosophic Society in America and Europe. Mrs. Tingley poured oil and wine upon the stone, at the same time uttering some mystic words. She then scattered dust, water and fire as emblems of man's qualities. The pronunciation of the sacred word "Aum" by the company and a chant in Sanscrit concluded the ceremonies This Theosophic order is designed to establish in this country the paganism of heathen lands.

—The Masonic Grand Lodge of California laid the corner-stone for the Affiliated Colleges of the State University at two o'clock Saturday afternoon, March 20th. The Regents of the University invited the Grand Lodge to officiate on that occasion. The Grand Lodge convened in special session at the Masonic Temple at 12:30 P. M. The Grand Commandery and Grand Consistory were invited to participate, and California and Golden Gate commanderies accepted invitations to act as escorts to the grand bodies. Ten special cars were placed at the disposal of the Regents and Masons to convey them to Golden Gate Park. At the western terminus of the Haight street cable line the bodies disembarked, formed the procession and marched to the site of the colleges where the corner-stone was laid with Masonic rites and ceremonies.

—We have a neat little 135 page volume of sermons, entitled, "Sermonica," from the pen of Dr. Baldwin, which are the products of over a quarter of a century of hard study under the high pressure of missionary, itinerant and evangelistic Christian work. His voice has been heard in many States; thousands have sat entranced, thrilled by his eloquent utterances in proclaiming the "unsearchable riches of Christ," and have wished and urged that these utterances might be placed before them in a permanent form. These discourses are a response in part to these wishes. They who desire to renew their acquaintance with the thought of the author, or the young minister in search of a model, or who seeks the reflection of a peculiar denominational life, or the excitation to a higher realm and exalted cast of thinking, or they who build fortresses against the onslaughts of infidelity, and the insidious attacks of dangerous heresies, or any who desire to more fully equip themselves for hand-to-hand work with sinners, will find much in the following pages very helpful. Nuggets of truth, brilliant illustrations and strikingly clear comments one may here glean and add to his general stock of knowledge. That this initial volume is worthy of a wide reading is the judgment of all who are acquainted with the ability and sincerity of the author, and it is believed that all others acquainting themselves with it will corroborate this judgment. The price of a single copy is 60 cents. Send for copy at once and for prices of quantities, to Rev. B. Baldwin, Montpelier, Oh

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning March 28. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—What Christian heroism is and does. —Luke ix, 18-26, 51-62.

Christian heroism consists of principles and not of definite, specific actions. What may be heroic at one time or in one place at another time or in another place may be the merest commonplace action. In Christian America it is an honor and a privilege to confess Christ. In heathen China or India confession of Christ may require the noblest kind of heroism. To kneel in prayer at our bedside when surrounded by loved ones of our own Christian homes is a matter of no thought so far as courage or boldness is concerned. To do the same in a room occupied by companions or schoolmates who are not Christians may demand a martyr spirit indeed.

The principles of Christian heroism are expressed by Christ when He says, "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, take up his cross daily and follow Me." These are the principles which He Himself followed, and the servant is not greater than his Lord. The Christian hero is not necessarily the one who is burned at the stake or slain by the sword or left to rot in damp prison cells. He is the one who, in will, surrenders his life entirely to God and daily bears the cross of Jesus and follows Him.

1. Christian heroism includes self denial. "Let him deny himself." The man who becomes a Christian hero must deny himself. He must lose himself absolutely in the will of God. He must be able to say with Paul, "I am crucified with Christ, and it is no longer I that live, but Christ liveth in me." When we lose self in Christ and God, hardships and sacrifices become easy for us, for it is no longer a question as to what we want to do, but what God in Christ wants us to do.

2. Christian heroism includes cross bearing. "Take up his cross daily." Christ not only denied Himself, but He also bore His own cross. So must it be with His disciples. Every life has its crosses—yea, even its daily crosses—and we not only have to deny self, but to take up and carry these daily crosses that come to us in the home, in the schoolroom, in the office, in the workshop and even in the church itself.

3. Christian heroism includes following Jesus. "And follow Me." As the Alpine tourist places his foot in the footprints of his guide, so we are to follow in the footsteps of Christ. To do so the dead may be left to bury their dead, the farewells may be left unsaid, yet still Jesus is to be followed.

And what is the result of such self denial and cross bearing? It saves the life. Those that debase themselves shall be exalted. They that lose their lives shall find them. The cross on earth will bring the crown in heaven. It will pay to be a Christian hero, though it costs us dearly.

He Who Truly Loves.

Some one has well said that he who truly loves the church of God is he who truly loves the God of the church. Church membership is a solemn obligation, and he who neglects the house of the Lord does so at a fearful risk. On the other hand, he who becomes a faithful attendant upon the services of the sanctuary will find a constantly increasing delight in taking his place among the people of God.—Presbyterian Messenger.

For Christians to Ponder.

A convict in the Indiana state prison has written these words, that are worth pondering by every Christian: "Had the same care and interest been manifested in my behalf in bygone years that Brother Curry and our prison Christian Endeavor society now afford me I would never have been a convict."

Shadows.

As a father in a garden stoops down to kiss a child the shadow of his body falls upon it. So many of the dark misfortunes of our life are not God going away from us, but our Heavenly Father stooping down to give us the kiss of His infinite and everlasting love.—T. De Witt Talmage.

Neglect of the Church.

The blood of Jesus was shed for every man, and every man that goes down to eternal ruin because of the neglect of the church will at the judgment bar of God stand as an accuser of the church for the wasted blood of Jesus.—Lutheran.

A Duty Enjoined.

It is not an act of charity to contribute to the support of the gospel minister, but a duty enjoined by him who calls men to the work of the ministry. —Free Methodist.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems of Truth Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Love is a necromancer of the best school and changes by a magic touch calamity into blessing, stormclouds into the glorious hanging curtains of divine promise, darkness into noonday, dirges into diapasons of praise, adversities into angels of blessing, and sullen despair into voiceful praise.—Rev. J. F. Stout, Methodist, St. Paul.

For Free Cuba.

In Cuba today they cry to be free. It comes from hearts almost crushed by ignorance and superstition of the worst form. Allow me to say our nation will be held responsible before God if we quietly stand by and hold the clothes of those who are now trying to destroy the liberty loving people, who cry for the God given right to have opportunity to know God's word and serve him as the only King eternal.—Rev. Charles H. Thomas, Baptist, Philadelphia.

Reverence For Goodness and Purity.

Reverence for a perfect character must be the basis of all development of human character. We must get a glimpse of God's perfect life that we may know our need of him. We must believe in an absolute goodness, purity and truth, by which we test ourselves before we can long to draw near to it. This consciousness must start with a sense of awe in the presence of infinite holiness. Peter's cry, "I am a sinful man, O Lord," was the true shrinking of one who felt himself in the presence of the holy Christ. It was the first step to his better service of the Master. It is true we dwell most today upon what we call the drawings of infinite love. We think, and rightly think, that the gospel emphasizes the attractive power of the cross. But we can have no mighty stirring of love in our hearts except for what we feel to be strong in its goodness.—Rev. Dr. Joseph N. Blanchard, Episcopal, Philadelphia.

What Is Luck?

The man who fails says "that's just my luck" or "it's my fate." The man who succeeds is entirely willing to take all the credit to himself. It is strange, however, that unsuccessful people use luck and fate as synonomous terms. Luck has a German origin, fate a Roman. There is a deal of honest faith in one's lucky star and in one's unlucky star. The Greeks built a temple to fortune, or good luck. The Romans consulted oracles or the entrails of animals for the omens of fate. We refuse to sit down to a table with 13 persons, to undertake a journey on a Friday, and say, "Beware of the third time." At Baden Baden, when the games were on, old gamblers would beg the youngest person present to take for them the first throw at dice. In Italy a highwayman will repeat a prayer before plundering a traveler. A good Christian in doubt about a question of diet will open the Bible at random and take the first text his eyes lights upon as a divine revelation. Today we shudder to see the new moon over our left shoulder and examine our teacups to see if a stranger is coming. We are troubled by strange dreams and believe in spirit rappings and faith cures. How shall we account for all these queer impressions and actions? Think they are a part of the inheritance we receive from the past. They are the remnants and fragments of superstitions cherished by our remote barbarian ancestors. It is not strange, therefore, that a belief in luck or fate still survives among us in many proverbs and customs.—Rev. W. W. Boyd, Baptist, St. Louis.

Reason.

The reason of one age has been the unreason of another. The deepest thinkers, thinking honestly and at their best, have differed widely. Reason, as the news which the senses bring of truth, is equally fallible. Every sunrise is a deceit of the senses. Every perspective in paintings is a deceit which experience must correct for the senses. Reason, however you define it, is better authority than tradition, but reason at its best is not infallible.—Rev. R. A. White, Universalist, Chicago.

Law For the Indians.

The dirtier and meaner the Indians are the more they need law to punish and elevate them. Their dirt and meanness ought not to debar them from the protection of law when they deserve it. Educate them by all means, lift them up in the scale of civilization, as President Cleveland in his message to congress advises, but underneath all this work place a firm basis of law, for upon this alone can any society successfully rest. The Dawes bill looked to this consummation, but further action of congress is necessary to establish courts of justice among the Indians.—Rev. William J. Harsha, Collegiate Reformed, New York.

"Books In the Running Brooks!"

There is no knowing where the Bodleian library at Oxford will leave off. At present it is literally overflowing with the literature, if not the learning, of the age. It has, like the library of the British museum, to be supplied with a copy of every work published, and naturally the strain put upon its limited resources has been too great for it.

A long time ago the library itself could hold no more books, and the Radcliffe camera was called into the service of the librarian. That got full, and then the basement of the Sheldonian theater was obtained. This is also full now, and the basement of the Ashmolean museum is now a home for what would otherwise be homeless books.

At the present rate it is not improbable that the library will spread and spread until it completely overflows and swamps the whole university town itself. That, however, is not likely to be just yet, in spite of the activity of the "lady novelist."—Pearson's Weekly.

Life In a London Shop.

"Assistants who consult their own interests will refrain from talking about their salaries." Such is a notice posted up in the dining and recreation rooms of a large drapery establishment in London. The evidence is unimpeachable, for it is that of Miss Collet, one of the assistant commissioners of the labor commission. Two things might be deduced from the possibility of such a notice existing. One is what a vast market of unemployed assistants there must be to draw from, and how hard it must be to get a situation, if men submit to be silent on the subject of their grievances, which even the fellahin of Egypt are not debarred from airing. The song which they sing in the very ears of their taskmasters is anent their cruel treatment and scanty wage. Another thing that notice testifies to is that the life of shop assistants must be duller than one thought. Think of their standing from morning till night, with their tranquil air of politeness unruffled by the fidgets and fuss of thoughtless customers, not daring to stretch or yawn as a relief to the nameless weariness of the stuffy shop, and the long day, and the gas, and the crowds of new and unsympathetic faces, the taking out and putting back of endless things, not permitted to speak to one another without risk of a fine (it is 2s. 6d. in some shops), and then to think they are not allowed that solace of every Englishman in all his troubles—viz, to grumble! Life in a mine must be easy, life in a factory bliss, life in a kitchen liberty, compared to life in a London shop or showroom.—Churchman.

Expensive Benevolence.

There is a venerable and benevolent judge in Paris who at the moment of passing sentence on a prisoner consults his assessors on each side of him as to the proper penalty to be inflicted. "What ought we to give this rascal, brother?" he says, bending over to the assessor on the right.

"I should say three years."

"What is your opinion, brother?" to the assessor on the left.

"I should give him about four years."

The judge, with benevolence: "Prisoner, not desiring to give you a long and severe term of imprisonment, as I should have done if left to myself, I have consulted my learned brethren and shall take their advice. Seven years." —London Telegraph.

Poisonous Serpents.

All poisonous serpents have movable fangs, which are found in the upper jaw, and when not in use close up like the blade of a penknife. The fang is provided with a duct leading to the poison sac, and the virus is ejected through this duct by pressure. At the base of every poison fang there are numerous germs of others, and the fang broken or lost is replaced in a few weeks by the growth of another.

Treaty and Canal.

If one fact looms up on the horizon of the twentieth century plainer than another, it is that the ship canal across Central America must be completed very soon. A second fact that should dwell in the breast of every American citizen till it becomes a part of his inner consciousness is that the United States and no other nation shall have the management and control of that canal.

There seems a well grounded suspicion that the warm feeling of kinship suddenly breaking out in Great Britain, the urgent desire on her part for a high court of arbitration which shall settle all differences between this country and herself, mean more than appears on the surface. At least it is well for the United States senate to consider very carefully indeed whether the treaty now before it can in any manner, directly or indirectly, give John Bull a pretext for putting his finger into the pie of the Nicaragua canal. If it does, let it be amended or rejected altogether. So say all the people of this United States.

In 1856 there was entered into between England and the United States the so called Clayton-Bulwer treaty. It contemplated even then the construction of a canal across the isthmus, over which canal the two countries should have a joint protectorate, the canal to be mutually constructed by them. Both countries agreed in addition that they would never attempt to erect fortifications or acquire territory for themselves upon the isthmus.

The canal was never constructed. England has violated the clause in which she agreed not to erect fortifications or colonize in Central America. The Clayton-Bulwer treaty is, therefore, a dead instrument. In fact, it never was anything else. Conditions have changed since then; nations have changed since then. For her own sake and for the sake of the weaker Latin-American republics in all the Americas the United States must control the Nicaragua canal. Let our senate see to it that England does not do us out of that control.

Getting Away From Care.

So far from being crazy or even eccentric, that Mrs. Carson who spent the last 13 years of her life journeying back and forth across the ocean was one of the sanest of women. From all the worries and frets of housekeeping, housecleaning, house repairing and tax paying she was delivered. She had no vexations with slovenly or dishonest servants; she had no family quarrels and no fashionable callers. Month after month, year after year, winter and summer, rain or shine, Mrs. Carson followed the fortunes of the big Cunarder Lucania from the time it was launched till she died, never missing a trip.

Whatever cares or sorrows she ever had she buried in the shining depths of the sweet, green sea. Its foam capped waves rocked her to sleep at night; its fresh, electric breezes quickened her pulses by day. No wonder she loved the sea, shining, glorious, ever changing. What were fashionable receptions and the jargon of society and conventionality to the grandeur, the everlasting peace and joy old ocean bestowed on her year after year! No wonder the judges whom her son-in-law endeavored to have pronounce her insane refused to do so, but said she had a right to spend her own money as she pleased, even though she had paid out $250,000 of it making trips across the ocean in the Lucania.

Mrs. Carson not only showed good sense and sanity and judgment; she showed remarkably good taste as well.

Representative Bartholdt objects to one of the clauses of the proposed immigrant educational bill. It is the clause which stops an illiterate wife from landing in the country with her husband who can read and write. Let Representative Bartholdt subside. That clause is all right. There is no country in civilization where people cannot learn to read and write if they wish to. The privilege of coming to the United States is worth the trouble of learning to read and write in order to be permitted to enter it, and those not willing to take so much trouble should not be allowed to come here at all. We do not want any more illiterate mothers in this republic. Illiterate fathers are bad enough. Illiterate mothers are worse, so far as the morality and intelligence of the country are concerned.

Those brakemen who went on strike against being forced to remain on the top of freight cars while the trains were moving are informed that the sympathies of the country are behind them. Such a requirement is inhuman and unnecessary.

Three evils everybody ought to fight till they disappear from the earth. They are evils which everybody from the age of 5 years up can fight. They are dirt, discomfort and disease.

In Boston the spiritualists have succeeded in having their temple of worship placed on the list of church property, and it is therefore nontaxable.

When a man is just dying to be appointed to an office, does he honestly say he wants it and would give anything to get it? Oh, no! He merely remarks in a casual, weary sort of way that if the place were offered to him he "would not feel at liberty to decline it." Of course not.

In 1896, 3,000 persons lost their lives in the earthquake on the Japan coast. Already, in 1897, 1,400 bodies have been found of persons killed in the recent earthquake on the coast of the Persian gulf.

DRUNKENNESS THE CURSE OF THE RUSSIAN PEASANT.

The Government Has Introduced the Dispensary System to Discourage the Country Drinking Shop—Spirituous Liquors to Be Distilled Under Its Supervision.

The liquor question can hardly be called a live issue in Russia, because that would imply the existence of a freedom of public discussion which is not possible in the empire of the czar. But to the very capable set of men who conduct the czar's government and who are not changed with the frequency common to more democratic states the liquor question has been for years a subject of careful study. Drunkenness is the curse of the Russian peasant, and a paternal government which expelled the Jews to protect the peasants against their wiles can hardly be indifferent to the agencies that are supposed to promote the drinking habits of the simple minded children of the czar.

Probably ignorant of the abject failure of the state of South Carolina to make a success of a government monopoly of the liquor business, the Russian administration has undertaken the control of the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages. Wine and beer it does touch, but all forms of spirits must be distilled and rectified under its supervision and sold through its established agencies.

The Russian government has set about this business with a full appreciation of the magnitude of the problem it has attacked. If the business yields as much as the existing excise duties, say $150,000,000 a year, the experiment will be deemed a success, but it is not expected that the government monopoly will be universal throughout the empire in less than 10 or 15 years.

The immediate purpose is first to provide a guarantee that only pure spirits are sold and next that they are sold under conditions least calculated to promote drunkenness. It is proposed to discourage the country drinking shop by providing that spirits shall be sold there only at the price at which they are purchased from the government depot and to reduce to a minimum in the towns the places where the sale of drink by the glass is the chief business. Russia consumes annually 3,250,000 hectoliters of alcohol, or about 86,000,000 gallons. This is rather less than the average consumption of the United States. It is calculated that the consumption may decrease 20 per cent without affecting the amount of revenue which the new system is calculated to produce.

On Jan. 1, 1895, the system was established in four provinces of the empire, having a population of 8,000,000, or 10 per cent of the whole. On July 1 last it was extended to nine other provinces, with a population of 21,000,000. On Jan. 1, 1897, it was established in another seven, with 10,000,000 inhabitants, and on Jan. 1, 1898, it will take in Poland, with another 10,000,000. By 1898, therefore, the system will be in operation over the most populous part of Russia and will apply to 49,000,000 persons.

The price at which liquor shall be sold is fixed by the imperial council, with approval of the emperor, and varies somewhat for different provinces. At the places where it is exposed for sale it can be had only in closed bottles and flasks bearing the wax seal of the state and a ticket indicating the quantity, the degree of strength and the price. The liquor cannot be consumed at the place where it is purchased. The "dispensary" system, with limitation, is, in short, the Russian plan, and it will be interesting to see whether it decreases drunkenness only at the cost of increasing corruption.

For that revelation, however, the world will have to wait some time.—Boston Herald.

WHISKY AND CRIME.

Ninety-four Per Cent of Massachusetts Criminals Were Drinking Men.

No more powerful indictment could be written against the rum business than the recently published report of the Massachusetts state bureau of labor statistics, giving the results of a year's investigations conducted under the direction of Horace G. Wadlin, chief of the bureau, by authority of the state legislature. These investigations covered the period ending Aug. 20, 1895. Summaries of the results given in this report show that 80 per cent of the cases of lunacy in Massachusetts, in cases ascertained, were caused by the use or abuse of intoxicating liquor, either by the patient himself or by some other person.

In a table, compiled from this same report, it is shown that 82 per cent of the persons convicted of crime in Massachusetts during the year were actually drunk when they committed the crime for which they were convicted. It appears, further, that 94 per cent of the year's criminals of Massachusetts were drinking men. Advocates of the use of "light" drinks, such as beer and wine, also strike a snag in this report. It is shown that more than 20 per cent of all the crimes were committed by persons who drink only wine and beer. It is also shown that 15 per cent of the persons convicted of drunkenness were persons who abstained from spirits and drank only wine and beer, "which does not intoxicate, you know."

Wine For Science Only.

In 1879 Sir Walter Trevelyan left a legacy to the late Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson, among which was a cellar full of wine. Sir Benjamin would not permit its use during his lifetime, except for scientific purposes, and now the question has arisen as to what disposition will be made of it. Mr. Aubrey Richardson, son and legal adviser to Sir Benjamin, has come to the rescue, and states to the London Mail that it will not be used except as it was used by his father.

North Nebraska Methodist Episcopal conference decided by a vote of 59 to 7 that women were eligible as delegates to general conference.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON I, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, APRIL 4.

Text of the Lesson, Acts ix, 32-43—Memory Verses, 32-35—Golden Text, Acts ix, 34—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

32. "And it came to pass as Peter passed throughout all quarters, he came down also to the saints which dwelt at Lydda." The last we heard of Peter he was with John preaching the word of the Lord as they returned from Samaria to Jerusalem, having witnessed the great work of the Lord through Philip in Samaria (chapter viii, 25). In Jerusalem the number of disciples multiplied greatly, and a great company of the priests believed (chapter vi, 7). In all the land the churches had rest, and were being built up, and were multiplying, walking in the fear of the Lord and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost (chapter ix, 31). Peter seems to be itinerating a little and helping the saints here and there. Notice this name "saints." We are not called to be saints, but we are called saints (Rom. i, 7, omitting the italics; also I Cor. i, 2) by virtue of our oneness with Christ. Every believer is a saint.

33. "And there he found a certain man named Æneas, which had kept his bed eight years and was sick of the palsy." We would infer that Æneas was one of the saints to whom Peter came, and finding him in this helpless condition he had compassion upon him. Possibly Æneas and others had been praying that the Lord would send some one that way through whom health might come, remembering Math. xviii, 19. How very suggestive of the utter helplessness of the sinner is the condition of this paralytic who had been eight years in bed.

34. "And Peter said unto him, Æneas, Jesus Christ maketh thee whole. Arise and make thy bed. And he arose immediately." Peter was greatly used of the Lord in the healing of the body as well as of the soul. See chapters iii, 6, 7; v, 15, 16. It would seem that some were healed even by the shadow of Peter falling upon them.

35. "And all that dwelt at Lydda and Saron saw Him, and turned to the Lord." God saw that this showing forth of His power through Peter would be the means of many turning to Him. He does not heal all who are sick, but to this day He does, both with and without medicine, heal many who are sick. He knows whether it is best for us to abide here or be with Him at home, and whether, abiding here, it is best for us to be sick or well. The great thing is to glorify God that people may turn to Him (Phil. i, 20; John xvii, 4).

36. "Now, there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called Dorcas. This woman was full of good works and alms deeds which she did." She was a Christian indeed, one of the kind that is missed when she goes away. All who truly receive Christ are saved (John i, 12). Disciples are those who live upon His word and follow Him fully at any cost (Luke xiv, 26, 27). Those who are both of these and also full of good works and kindness to the poor must come specially near to the heart of Christ, for He, being full of the Spirit, went about doing good and healing the oppressed.

37. "And it came to pass in those days that she was sick and died, whom, when they had washed, they laid her in an upper chamber." Her workdays over, she is absent from the body and present with the Lord; she has departed to be with Christ, which is far better (Phil. i, 21, 23; II Cor. v, 8,); she has truly experienced a great gain. We are not told if her sickness was long nor if she suffered much, but she has gone from them, and all they have of her is the body in which she lived and wrought among them. No, they have also her good works and blessed memories of her.

38. "They sent unto him two men, desiring him that he would not delay to come to them." Lydda was not far from Joppa, and the disciples, hearing that Peter was there, sent thus urgently for him, for they longed to have Dorcas with them once more. This is the natural longing of the heart to keep our loved ones with us even though we know that their departure is their gain.

39. "All the widows stood by him weeping and shewing the coats and garments which Dorcas made while she was with them." Fondly remembered by what she had done, they make us think of the words: "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth. Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them" Rev. xiv, 13).

40. "She opened her eyes, and when she saw Peter she sat up." Many miracles of healing had been wrought through Peter, but this is his first case of resurrection from the dead. Alone with the dead body, he poured out his soul to God, doubtless pleading the promises of God, the commission in Math. x, 8, the assurance of John xiv, 12, and withal asking in complete submission to the will of God (John xiv, 13, 14; I John v, 14, 15). He must have received some assurance that his request was granted, for he turned to the body and said, "Tabitha, arise." And she sat up, looking upon him.

41. "And he gave her his hand and lifted her up, and when he had called the saints and widows presented her alive." There are three resurrections of the dead in the Old Testament, three in the life of Christ, and this is the first of three after His ascension (Acts xiv, 19, 20; xx, 12). We have no record of any utterances of those who had been dead and had been brought back to this world. Paul says it was not possible for him to utter what he heard in paradise (II Cor. xii, 4), doubtless when he was stoned to death at Lystra.

42. "And it was known throughout all Joppa, and many believed in the Lord." The resurrection of Lazarus led to many believing on Jesus (John xii, 11), and here is another case in which the Lord saw that a resurrection would be the means of leading many to Him. It does not seem as if Dorcas would have been sent from paradise back to earth without her consent. She may have been informed of the results that would follow, and for the sake of winning these souls to Christ and for Christ's sake she doubtless came back cheerfully for His pleasure. We do not know of any results from the resurrection of the many who rose when Christ did (Math. xxvii, 52, 53), but there was a reason for their resurrection, and no doubt the result which God intended. I think they went with Christ to glory, while the nine previously referred to probably died again.

43. "And it came to pass that he tarried many days in Joppa with one Simon, a tanner." And here we will find him in our next lesson. Preaching the gospel, healing the sick, raising the dead or just tarrying with Simon, he is about his Master's business and doing as occasion serves him, knowing that God is with him (I Sam. x. 7).

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

Tuesday, March 16.

A robbery of 5,000 sovereigns was committed on board the steamship Oceanic, by which the last shipment of gold to the United States from Australia was made.

Developments indicate that the Sabbath association will put a municipal ticket in the field at Oshkosh, Wis., this spring.

Crook & Perham, wholesale coal dealers at New York, have assigned to Elihu E. Frost without preference. The amount is reported to be over $100,000.

Captain J. C. Dobbins, lighthouse keeper at Moose Beach, Me., has received a gold watch and chain from H. L. Davies, Canadian minister of marine and fisheries, in appreciation of his efforts in rescuing the crew of the schooner Ashton J. Wright, of Digby, N. S.

Secretary W. G. Pruett, of the board of Montana stock commissioners, says the stock on the ranges has had a remarkably hard time the whole winter.

The Paris Academy of Science has a standing offer of a prize of $20,000 for the discovery of a remedy for cholera.

Wednesday, March 17.

Mary Anderson De Navarro has sold for about $44,000 her house at 31 West Thirty-eight street, New York, a four-story brownstone dwelling.

Judge Colt in the United States circuit court at Boston ordered the public sale of the Atlas Tack corporation, known as the tack trust, which is in the hands of a receiver.

The attorneys for Mrs. Craven, who claims to be the "contract widow" of ex-Senator James G. Fair, has filed in the San Francisco superior court the original pencil deeds to property valued at $2,000,000 conveyed by Fair to Mrs. Craven.

Specials from Bismarck and other western North Dakota points state that the snow is rapidly melting under chinook winds.

Thursday, March 18.

Mrs. Blanche McInery, a trained nurse at Chicago, thought Willard McPherson, an attorney, was not paying her the attention a lover should, and she sought out his office and fired a shot at him. He was not hit.

Ella Burden, aged 11, heiress to $100,000, has been missing from her home at St. Louis since Monday, and it is feared that she has been abducted and is being held for ransom.

Mrs. Henry E. Abbey, according to a New York dispatch, is shortly to be married to a prominent and wealthy social lion of London.

Obituary: At London, Sir Edward Ebenezer Kay, 75. At Rome, Sig. Grimaldi, the Italian statesman and ex-cabinet minister.

Friday, March 19.

Herman Moses died at his home in Chicago as the result of jumping from an upper rear window. The police believe it a case of suicide. Moses was 53 years old and leaves a widow and three sons.

Igancio Francisco de la Cruz Garcia, who was said to be the oldest man in the United States, died at Los Angeles, Cal., aged 117.

A tray containing about $3,500 worth of diamond rings was stolen from the jewelry store of I. Dornberg, situated on a popular Spokane thoroughfare and at a time when the sidewalks were lined with pedestrians.

The New York Mail and Express has been sold to Robert C. Alexander and Robert E. R. Dorr, who have been editors and publishers of the paper for several years.

Saturday, March 20.

Two more naval vessels were launched at San Francisco. They were the gunboats Marietta and Wheeling, twin screw boats of 1,000 tons each, whose keels were laid last April.

Benjamin Emerson, Chicago's first milkman, was buried Thursday afternoon from his home at Northfield.

Wreckage marked "Utrecht" has been washed ashore near Grest, France, and it is feared that the Dutch steamer of that name has foundered.

Frank E. Thompson and Colonel Robert Eastham had a shooting affray at Cumberland, Md., and both were so badly injured that they may die.

Collis P. Huntington has offered $1,000,000 for the Galveston, Topeka and Houston roadway. The offer has been accepted.

There is a probability that there will be an alliance of the dispensing druggists of the United States and Canada.

Monday, March 22.

And now Governor Pingree is thinking that he will resign the governorship and hold on to the Detroit mayoralty.

The Christian Herald, New York, has sent to missionaries in India $30,000, which will be used in the purchasing of food for starving plague victims.

Because R. L. Short jilted a girl of that place for another woman, the feminine voters of Kansas City, Kan., snowed him under when he ran for mayor, although ordinarily his nomination would have been equivalent to an election.

The largest diamond in the world has arrived in London from Kimberly, South Africa. It is said to be worh $2,500,000 uncut.

A number of silver members of both senate and house will give a dinner to ex-Senator Dubois tomorrow evening as a compliment to him for his labors for silver.

Rotary snow plows are being used with some success in throwing water off the railway tracks in South Dakota.

DEATH IN THE FLOOD.

Man Drowned at Carmi, Ills.—General Review of the Situation.

Chicago, March 22.—The raging waters continue to roll on their work of ruin. Death rides on the flood, and the end is not in sight. Dams and levees are crushed aside, lives taken, crops swept away, stock drowned, homes and shelters crumbled, trees torn out by the roots, railroad tracks submerged, bridges go out in the torrents, and despair settles down with the uncontrollable waters. All this is in the country districts. In the towns the situation grows more alarming day by day. Illinois is suffering now. At Carmi Jacob Ziegler was drowned in the backwaters of the Little Wabash. The day before his mother was nearly drowned at the same spot. The neighbors saved her life.

The harvest of waters in the south is bad, but how appalling can only be guessed, as in most instances lives have been lost in out-of-the-way districts, where ignorance and terror exaggerate the disasters, and from whence information is unreliable and very hard to obtain. The Memphis people have made their city a haven of refuge for flood-stricken men, women and children. A committee is looking after the needs of the unfortunates who have lost homes and lands, and everything is being done to relieve their suffering and ease their minds.

Wisconsin towns are under water. In some cases factory fires are out and the city lighting plants submerged. Tales of peril and hardship and disastrous outlook come from Ripon, Plainfield and other cities. Iowa is suffering intensely. At Sioux City all the low land is submerged, and the Floyd river on a rampage. Every bridge on the Big Sioux between Sioux City and Hawarden has been swept out, and thousands of acres of farm lands along the river are under the torrent. The towns that are suffering the worst are Rock Valley, Charles City, Dubuque and Keokuk, reports from these places indicating that the worst is yet to come.

PROCEEDINGS IN CONGRESS.

Reed's Vote for Speaker Is 199—Vetoed Bills All Reintroduced.

Washington, March 19.—Little was done in the senate yesterday. A number of bills were introduced; a resolution also, inquiring of the state department whether the west Indian islands of St. Croix, St. Johns and St. Thomas could be purchased and the probability of their purchase by any European power. In the executive session Morgan made a long speech against the arbitration treaty.

Washington, March 20.—The senate open session lasted fifty minutes yesterday and was given almost entirely to the introduction of bills. Burrows presented a petition from J. Edward Addicks, of Delaware, claiming the seat now occupied by Kenny. Governor Lord, of Oregon, also forwarded a memorial on the Oregon senatorial situation, showing that the legislature had not organized and that he had the right to appoint. Most of the day was spent in executive session.

The house adopted rules for the debate on the tariff bill, which begins Monday, the vote to be taken on the 31st. It then passed the sundry civil and general deficiency bills.

Washington, March 22.—The house Saturday pushed through the two remaining "left over" appropriation bills according to Friday's schedule, the agricultural bill carrying $3,182,902 and the Indian carrying $7,670,220. After the appropriation bills were passed a resolution for extra mileage and stationery for this session of congress was adopted.

Frenchman's Slap at Bismarck.

London, March 22.—Considerable excitement has been created in the artistic world of Paris by the refusal of the hanging committee of the salon to accept a picture of Jean Weber, "First Sight." The picture represents the interior of a butcher shop, with a fine display of meat; but a close examination of the picture shows the butcher to be an allegorical Bismarck, and the carcasses exposed are human corpses and representative victims of the chancellor's ruthlessness.

Proclamation of Autonomy.

Canea, March 18.—The admirals of the combined fleets in Cretan waters made a formal proclamation of the intention of the great powers to confer upon the island an autonomous government, subject to the suzerainty of the sultan.

The proclamation announces that the powers have irrevocably decided to assure complete autonomy for Crete under sultan suzerainty, but that they are interested before all else to remedy and prevent a repetition of the ills which have desolated the island. They have therefore agreed upon measures intended to regulate the administration of an autonomous regime, to restore peace and order, to guarantee to every one—without distinction of race or religion—liberty, the security of property, the resumption of husbandry and industries and the development of the resources of the country.

The unprecedented reception of our Commentary for 1896, and the steady stream of warm and yet unsolicited testimonials which have been flowing in during the past years, have stimulated greater effort for the 1897 volume.

Even though you have another you need this.

THE ADVANCE: "The leading purpose of the Sunday-school teacher should be conversion. This book is prepared for aiding along this line."

THE UNION SIGNAL: "The special features of the Commentary are the excellency of the tabulated quarterly reviews, the Bible Dictionary for each quarter's lessons and the class record book bound within the same covers."

AMERICAN WESLEYAN: "Worth double the price to any teacher."

FREE METHODIST: "Fresh and inspiring, adapted to every department of Sunday-school work....Comments biblical and scholarly."

CHRISTIAN WORLD: In every sense practical and comprehensive ....Many of our teachers prefer this to any other commentary on the International Lessons.

STATE LEGISLATURE

WHAT THE LAWMAKERS ARE DOING AT SPRINGFIELD.

Proceedings in the Senate and House Boiled Down—Bills and Resolutions Introduced and Other Matters of Interest to the People of the State.

Springfield, Ills., March 17.—When the members of the legislature arrived at their desks in the house and senate they found a neat little pamphlet with a blue cover lying thereupon. The title of the pamphlet was "Street Railways of Illinois," and it was signed by Chas. T. Yerkes, G. H. Wheeler, C. L. Bonney and S. P. McConnell. The pamphlet was gotten up in the interest of street railway legislation. The senate passed resolutions of respect to the memory of Senator Herbert, of Alton, and Senator Wells, of Quincy. A few bills were introduced, among them one fixing a maximum railway fare of 2 cents a mile.

In the house bills were introduced: Abolishing the color line in all places of public accommodation; to tax fire insurnce companies; to tax all kinds of transportation, telegraph and telephone companies; regulating fares on railways; requiring truck stores to sell goods at current prices elsewhere. The bill was passed making an appropriation for the Tennessee centennial.

Springfield, March 18.—In the senate yesterday the Humphrey street railway bills were read a second time and made special order for next Wednesday week. A bill was introduced providing that the practice of science osteopathy as taught in the American School of Osteopathy of Kirkville, Mo., be not a practice of medicine within the state of Illinois. Nominations were sent in and confirmed as follows: Live stock board—J. P. Lock, of Chicago; James H. Paddock, of Springfield; James R. Goddard, of Galesburg. Trustees of the School for Deaf and Dumb at Jacksonville—George W. Harper, of Robinson; Gates Strawn, of Jacksonville; J. R. Smith, of Taylorville. Trustees of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, Quincy—W. O. Wright, for the term ending March 1, 1899; J. W. Nill, of Sterling.

The senate committee on licenses and miscellany have reported favorably on the anti-department store bill. In the house O'Donnell, of Bloomington, made a speech denying that he voted on the bill to consolidate the supreme court at Ottawa at the dictation of the Roman Catholic priesthood. The house passed the consolidation bill. At a senate caucus it was decided to seat Berry in the Manifold-Berry contest.

Springfield, March 19.—The governor sent to the senate yesterday the following appointments as trustees of the northern Illinois state normal school at DeKalb; Adam A. Goodrich, of Chicago; Isaac L. Ellwood, of DeKalb; W. C. Garrard, of Springfield; Charles M. Deere, of Moline. The senate took up the Manifold-Berry contest and the report of the majority of the committee was read, discussed and adopted, the minority report being defeated. The majority report gives Manifold $1,000 in lieu of his salary and appropriates $700 to each of the contestants for attorney fees and other expenses.

Lamonte introduced a measure in the house which if it becomes a law will make the publishing of a cartoon of a person libelous and punishable by fine and imprisonment or both. The senate bill authorizing the governor to borrow $250,000 for the purpose of meeting the current expenses of the state was advanced to third reading. No other business was done except the discussion of a few unimportant bills.

Springfield, Ills., March 20.—No business was transacted by the senate yesterday, as most of the members were at Champaign inspecting the state university. Adjourned to Tuesday. In the house a bill was introduced to prohibit the exhibition of kinetoscope views of prize fights. Another bill is to "regulate" boards of trade, and another is to prevent adulteration of food, drink or medicine. Another requires milk dealers to give bonds and otherwise regulates them.

Fire Nearly Catches Twenty Persons.

Peoria, Ills., March 22.—Shortly before 3 o'clock yesterday morning the Conigsky block on North Adams street was discovered in flames and some twenty people who occupied the second and third floors were rescued with much difficulty. The building was practically destroyed with all its contents, while the Murphy block adjoining on the north, and the Farrell block on the south, were both badly damaged. Loss, $85,000; insurance, $45,000.

Death of an Illinois Journalist.

Springfield, Ills., March 22.—William M. Glenn was found dead in bed. He had been dead for some hours. Glenn was widely known as a newspaper correspondent, and for several sessions of the legislature had been in charge of the Associated Press bureau at the state capital.

Costly Fire at Ottumwa.

Ottumwa, Ia., March 22.—Last night fire started in a brick business block on Main street. The losses known are: Cullend & Co., dry goods, $50,000; Prugh & Co., china and dishes, $15,000; Donlan & Co., dry goods, $25,000; J. G. Meek, dry goods, $15,000; building, $60,000; office tenants, $50,000.

SERMON BOOK.

By Rev. B. Baldwin, Evangelist.

Single copy, 60 cents; two for $1 00. (Postage stamps not taken.) Montpelier Ohio.

A friend says of it: "Every page is crowded full of most important matter. Every young minister should early possess a copy. Evangelists and all others who engage in revival work will find "SERMONICA" brim full of facts, illustrations, comments and themes which will inflame thought and zeal in pulling sinners out of the fire. It is a seed bed from which will spring many other sermons."

Follow the directions, and you'll get the best work from Pearline. Not that there's any harm to be feared from it, no matter how you use it or how much you use. But to make your washing and cleaning easiest, to save the most rubbing, the most wear and tear, the most time and money—keep to the directions given on every package of Pearline (use without soap). If you'll do that with your flannels, for instance (it's perfectly simple and easy,) they'll keep beautifully soft, and without shrinking. 500 Jas. Pyle, N.Y.

NEW IRON LASTS and HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT

The Latest, Neatest, Cheapest and Best Outfit Ever Invented.

THE HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT NO. 1.

Consisting of 38 First-Class Tools and Materials (neatly boxed) Shown in Cut, viz.:

1 Iron Last, 8 inches.
1 Iron Last, 6 inches.
1 Iron Last, 4 inches.
1 Iron Standard, with Base.
1 Package Assorted Nails.
1 Package 4-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 5-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 6-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
6 Pairs Star Heel Plates.
½ lb Copper Rivets and Burrs.
1 Steel Punch.
1 Sewing Awl, complete.
1 Pegging Awl, complete.

1 Stabbing Awl, complete.
1 Shoeknife.
1 Shoehammer.
1 Bottle Rubber Cement.
1 Bottle Leather Cement.
1 Harness and Saw Clamp.
1 Ball Wall.
1 Ball Shoe Thread.
1 Bunch Bristles.
4 Harness Needles.
1 Soldering Iron.
1 Bottle Soldering Fluid.
1 Box Rosin.
1 Bar Solder.
1 Directions for Use.

All these tools are full-sized, practical, neat, and cheap; not mere toys. They enable any person to do his own half-soling, boot, shoe, rubber, harness, and tinware repairing.

This Outfit is the result of years of study, experiment, and correspondence in the manufacture of Iron Lasts and Repairing Outfits; and its practical advantages need only to be seen and tried to be appreciated.

Our Improved Iron Lasts and Standard are one of the handiest tools you can have about the place. The Lasts are four in number, smooth and solid, 4, 6, 8 ,and 10 inches long, thus enabling one to half-sole all sizes of foot-wear. The Standard is made with an iron base, which can be easily fastened to the bench. No method of half-soling is now used on common work, except that of iron last and wire clinch nails. The writer of this has been in the business 20 years, and has seen the changes from the old wooden lasts and pegs to the modern method, and knows it to be complete.

Our Improved Harness and Saw Clamp is an indispensable tool in sewing a harness or filing a saw. The jaws are thrown open mechanically by a coiled spring on the bolt.

The weight of this outfit is 18 lbs. Price, all complete, packed in a neat, strong box, only $3.00.

The Home Repairing Outfit No. 2.

COMPLETE BOOT, SHOE AND RUBBER REPAIRING OUTFIT, consisting of 31 first class tools and materials. The No. 2 outfit contains the same articles as the No. 1 except ing the Harness and Soldering Tools, and is gotten up for those who have no harness or tinware repairing to do. Price of No. 2, neatly boxed, $2.00, or with the paper one year, $2.75. Price of No. 1, neatly boxed, $3.00, or with the paper one year, $3.75.

FRUIT AND FLOWERS

THE YELLOW RAMBLER.

A Promising Yellow Rose of Climbing Habit and Hardiness.

The new rose, Aglaia, marks an important epoch in the history of rose growing, with its yellow coloring, climbing habits and claims of hardiness. Peter Lambert, the German rosarian, is the originator. This new rose—Aglaia, or Yellow Rambler—is reported to have withstood unprotected and without injury a continued temperature of from zero to 2 degrees below, and, although it has not yet been fully enough tested to know positively about its capability for undergoing still lower temperatures, yet there is no reason to think that it will not also withstand a much greater degree of cold. In any event, it is believed that with very little protection in winter the yellow climber will do well anywhere that other roses succeed.

AGLAIA, OR YELLOW RAMBLER.

In producing the Yellow Rambler Mr. Lambert selected for "the mother" the Japanese Polyantha sarmentosa, a wild rose native to Japan and a vigorous, hardy climber. Flowers of this Polyantha sarmentosa were then fertilized with pollen of a yellow rose called Reve d'Or, which, on account of its having somewhat greater hardiness than most yellow roses, was a suitable variety for the purpose. The seed resulting from this hybridizing was planted, and the Aglaia, or Yellow Rambler, is the result. It is interesting to note that there is a very strong probability of blood relationship between the Yellow Rambler and the Crimson Rambler. There is considerable similarity in foliage, habit of growth and manner of blooming. The flowers of the Yellow Rambler are borne in trusses, like those of the Crimson Rambler, and are very sweetly fragrant and last a long time without fading.

Taking everything into consideration, the Yellow Rambler certainly gives promise of being an important and valuable addition to our list of roses.

A HOUSE GARDEN.

From Which Many Dozens of Carnations Are Sold In Winter.

Carnations do not do well in the window garden of ordinary living rooms, because the air is too dry and the variations in temperature are too great. They can be grown indoors, but they must have cool, moist air and a southern exposure. The Philadelphia Ledger calls attention to a lady in Philadelphia who sells many dozens of carnations in the winter from the plants in the second floor extension of her six room dwelling.

This extension is described as a square cornered bay window, with three sides of glass, the fourth being the opening to the sitting room and is closed by chenille hangings reaching to the floor. The extension faces the south. About the three sides are shelves, with room between the shelves and glass for the window shades. The floor is painted and slopes slightly toward an outside corner, where is a pipe connecting with the drain. Ordinarily the floor is covered with a rug, but when the plants are being watered this is taken up. The watering is by means of a fine rose and hose fastened to a faucet in the bathroom.

The heat from the sitting room is ordinarily enough, but in cold nights pails of water are stood around and the shades are lowered. On very cold nights a small kerosene stove and newspapers between the shades and the glass give protection. Whenever the glass is frosted, the shades are kept drawn until the glass in clean and for some little time afterward. The sitting room is heated by a small base burner coal stove, and on top of it is kept a wide top open urn filled with water.

In addition to carnations, tomatoes, strawberries and cucumbers are grown. The affair is on a small scale, but every inch of the space is utilized.

Four Magnificent Shrubs.

An Illinois florist calls attention in Farm, Field and Fireside to four plants of special value—Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora, Spiræa van houttei, Cornus sanguinea and Tamariske amurensis. The hydrangea, with its magnificent white flowers; the spiræa, with its long, graceful, snow white plumes; Cornus sanguinea, with its bright red, glossy wood, and Tamariske amurensis, draped with its odd, green, feathery foliage, make a combination which cannot be described and must be seen to be appreciated.

All of these shrubs are perfectly hardy, easily cared for and can be pruned or trimmed into almost any shape desired. They are especially adapted to this hardy border, and are valuable and highly ornamental as single specimen plants for the lawn and are very effective for grouping or general background planting.

Odds and Ends.

It is reported that the plans for the New York botanical garden are complete. The great glass house is to be of an area equal to one-third of the whole glass area at Kew.

A sharp penknife and a small wire is what we use in hunting beach borers.

Lye from wood ashes is an excellent wash for large fruit trees where insects are liable to harbor under the bark.

Beder Wood is an excellent strawberry. Rusty foliage is its only fault.

One each of rosea, candida and of the variegated weigelia and spiræ aurea make a nice group of shrubs for the lawn, says American Gardening.

According to a bulletin from the New York station, nursery stock does not exhaust the soil rapidly.

Probably Hansell is the earliest red raspberry. It is unusually firm and will carry as well as any other red raspberry.

The flowering shrubby begonias are of fine growth and profuse bloomers.

The Childs quince is pleasing to the eye, is highly colored and of a rich, golden yellow throughout, with a smaller core and the peculiar quince flavor strongly developed.

The fruit scientists are endeavoring to produce seedless and thornless fruit.

The lily of the valley bulbs forced in this country are all imported, being grown in France, Belgium, Holland.

MASONIC CHART.

ILLUSTRATING THE RELATION OF SOME OF THE DEGREES AND RITES IN FREEMASONRY TO EACH OTHER.

The accompanying chart represents one hundred and forty two degrees.

1. The American Rite of 13 degrees;
2. The Scotch Rite of 33 degrees;
3. The Egyptian Rite of 96 degrees.
4. The Mystic Shrine of one degree.
5. The Eastern Star of 5 degrees for Master Masons and for women. These are side degrees, and not genuine masonry.

The Symbolic degrees, or Blue Lodge of three degrees, are common to every Masonic rite, whether American, Scotch, or Egyptian, or whichever of the Masonic rites, named in Mackey's Masonic Encyclopedia one may choose to investigate.

This chart shows in the Blue Lodge the position of the Worshipful Master and some of the other officers of the lodge. Several positions of the candidate who is being initiated are also shown. In the Master Mason's degree is recognized the murder, burial and resurrection scene so full of religious significance to Freemasons.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. First three degrees. 376 pages cloth, 75c; paper, 40c.
The accuracy of these expositions attested by affidavits of Jacob O. Doesburg and others.

Freemasonry Illustrated. 640 pages, cloth, $1.00; paper, 75c.
A complete expositon of the Blue Lodge and Chapter consisting of seven degrees. Profusely illustrated.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. 341 pages, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. 2 vols. Per vol., cloth, $1.00: paper, 65c.
The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive.
Vol. II comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. 274 pages, flexible cloth, 50c.
By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. 110 pages, paper, 25c.
The genuine old Morgan book republished.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry. By Avery Allyn. Cloth, $5.00.
Contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, and the Orange Societies.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Cloth, $2.50.
Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market, it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated."

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 75c.
Contains the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual.

Look to the East. A ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Cloth, $2.00.
Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or the Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. Cloth, $1.00: paper cover, 50cts.
The complete revised ritual of the Lodge Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. Cloth, 50c; paper cover, 25c.
This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor of Evangelical Lutheran church. 10c. each.
This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and, the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias, Illustrated. Cloth, 50c: paper cover 25c.
An exact copy of the new official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the world, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. 15c each.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association. 10c. each.
Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Constitution and By-laws of the Association.

Secret Societies. Cloth 35c, paper 15c.
A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev Edward Beecher.

The Master's Carpet or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical. Bound in fine cloth. 400 pages. 75c.
Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. 5c.
By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard, Cloth, $1.50. paper, 75c.

Finney on Masonry. Cloth 75c., paper 35c.
The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By ex-Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasony Self-Convicted. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40c.
This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them.

Judge Whitney's Defence before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. 15c.
Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. 10c.
This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life-undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder and Oaths of 33 degrees. 304 pages, cloth, $1.00,
"Composed of Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees."

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor of United Presbyterian church.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in New Berlin trials 10c.
The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiation by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties,

Grand Lodge Masonry. 5c. each
Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to Republican Government. 15c.
By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio.

Story of the Gods. Postpaid, 10c.

MAKING AN ICEHOUSE.

An Ornamental Structure That Meets Modern Requirements—How to Fill It.

The whole secret of keeping ice lies in the building of a suitable place for its storage and surrounding it on all sides, top and bottom with some dry, nonconducting material. A writer in American Gardening, who has had to do with many icehouses, gives the following details, with illustrations, of a house that will meet all modern requirements. He says:

An icehouse ought to be built above ground and near two large trees. The site should be high and dry. To insure perfect dryness at the bottom it will be well to first of all mark out on the ground the size of the building—that is, its ground space. Then remove the soil to the depth of two feet, filling in again with some good drainage, such as rock or large gravel. From the bottom of this pit lead a drain to some lower part of the ground, so any water accumulating may be carried off.

Procure some posts 4 by 6 inches across and 10 or 11 feet long of good lasting wood, and put into the ground so as to stand 8 feet above. Make a double row of posts opposite each other, as shown on the ground plan at cut 2, putting the rows at intervals of about 2 feet and the posts of each row at about 3 feet distance. Well firm the posts into the ground and line them off squarely at the top, spiking on the top of each row a plate of wood 6 by 6, staying these plates so as to form a double frame. Now plank up the insides of each line of posts with 2 inch boards, fitting the pieces closely and carrying the work up to the wall plates. The space thus formed between the boards pack with tan bark or sawdust, which will make the sides of the house both sunproof and airproof. Matters of prime importance in preserving the ice. Lay across the inside and upon the ground some joists, upon which put loose planks as a floor. Cover the whole with a layer of dry straw a foot in depth and the ice receptacle is ready.

For the roof use 3 by 4 inch joists and have them long enough to form a pitch of full 35 degrees and also to extend over the outer wall far enough to carry the roof quite 4 feet beyond the wall plate. Short struts as shown in the first illustration may also be added to better support the overhanging roof. To the rafters, thus made secure, nail closely fitting boards. Make a superstructure here 6 inches in height, and board up as before to form a box roof and pack sawdust into it. Cut a doorway through the roof, through which to put in and take out the ice. At the top of the whole insert a piece of stovepipe to afford ventilation, covering it by erecting four short posts 2 feet high, on which is to be fixed a pointed cap. The house is now complete.

Take the ice from the purest water possible. The blocks are best cut about 2 feet square, and while they are being thrown in have a man on the floor to spread them over evenly and with a heavy hammer break enough ice to fill in the spaces between the large blocks. The whole mass may be rendered compact by throwing water over the layers of ice. When the house is filled to the level of the wall plates, put joists across, resting them on the wall plates, covering over by a floor of loose boards, leaving space for a trapdoor, and upon this floor a layer of tan bark or sawdust 6 inches in thickness.

THE CRANBERRY.

Establishment of a Cranberry Bog—Cranberries as a Money Crop.

The establishment of a cranberry bog requires time, expense and patience, but once in good form there is little outlay in keeping it in condition. A moist soil is necessary. Experience has proved a peat or muck soil, free from loam or clay, is required, clean sand for covering the peat and arrangements whereby the vines can be flowed when necessary, and finally thorough drainage. In the colder part of the country the vines are flooded in winter to protect them from frost, the usual time being from late October to the 1st of May, 18 to 24 inches of water being considered sufficient, according to The Orange Judd Farmer, authority for the following:

In preparing swamp lands bushes and stumps must be removed and the surface coated with 4 to 8 inches of sand. When properly drained and ditched, the land is ready for the vines. The sand is essential in order to choke the growth of weeds and grass. Clay and loamy sand should be avoided. On soils thus prepared the best method of planting vines is to place them in rows marked out 14 inches apart, two vines at each point, 14 inches apart in the rows. The plants are pressed into the ground with the roots close to the muck below. Another method sometimes employed in Jersey is to spread the vines evenly over the surface of the meadow, cover about an inch deep with sand, the young shoots later coming up as thick as wheat and making an excellent growth. Some succeed by sowing cuttings, the vines being passed through a straw cutter and chopped into pieces about an inch long. These are sown early in spring and on prepared ground and harrowed in. Much attention must be given to drainage, and this goes far to make or mar the work.

Cranberries are gathered in September and October and will ordinarily keep well in places suitable for storing apples or other fruit, with as low a temperature as possible to avoid freezing. Thorough ventilation is very essential. A successful Cape Cod grower, in estimating the cost of harvesting and marketing cranberries, places this at about $3.25 per barrel. This figure does not take into account the outlay of time and money before a cranberry bog is in bearing, nor interest on permanent investment.

Prices are governed not only by the size of the commercial crop, but also by the abundance or scarcity of other fruits. A year ago good to choice berries sold at $2.50 to $4, but in the seasons of great plenty, as the present one, the price is much lower, frequently down to $1 to $2 per bushel. In considering cranberries as a money crop some growers who have had wide experience claim the profit is small and uncertain. The market is small, consumption does not move at home and efforts to introduce cranberries abroad have amounted to little up to the present time.

Winter Workroom.

The accompanying cut of the workroom of a business gardener is from Dreer's book, "Vegetables Under Glass," and furnishes a valuable suggestion to farmers as yet unprovided with a comfortable workroom.

The room is well lighted and has both water and heat. The floor is cemented, with drainage under the washing box. The market wagon is backed into the same apartment and stands a few inches lower than the cemented floor. A wooden platform is provided for storage of baskets, crates, etc., while a stairway leads to another story or loft. There is a door both front and back, and the worktables can be put wherever desired. The cement floor makes it possible to "scrub up" frequently, and there is no danger of the floor becoming rotten.

Successor to Gen. Fitzhugh Lee.

Washington, March 19.—General Draper, of Massachusetts, may yet go to Havana as consul general, to succeed General Fitzhugh Lee. He admits that President McKinley has solicited him to accept the appointment, and while he is adverse to doing so, and has so expressed himself to the president, he does not feel like ignoring the president's wishes in the matter. This means that if he is pressed he will accept. In the event of his becoming General Lee's successor it is said to be the purpose of the president to allow Minister Taylor to remain at Madrid for the time being.

Postmaster Hesing's Resignation.

Washington, March 18. — President McKinley took no action last night on the resignation of Postmaster Hesing, of Chicago. The papers in the case reached him late yesterday afternoon, soon after his return from his daily walk, but he did not take up the subject. The president will act on the case very shortly.

IMPORTANT APPOINTMENTS.

Two Indiana Men Given Positions That Are Gilt-Edged.

Washington, March 17.—Three diplomatic appointments were sent to the senate yesterday. John Hay was appointed ambassador to England, Horace Porter ambassador to France and Henry White secretary to the embassy at London, a place he held for eight years previous to Cleveland's last term as president.

Washington, March 19.—The question of what John K. Gowdy and Perry Heath, of Indiana, get in the way of official recognition was answered yesterday by the president in the batch of nominations he sent to the senate. It was said during the weeks at Canton just before the inauguration that Perry Heath could have his choice and would select his heart's desire in the way of office. The nominations are as follows: John K. Gowdy, of Indiana, consul general of the United States at Paris; Perry S. Heath, of Indiana, to be first assistant postmaster general; Powell Clayton, of Arkansas, to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Mexico; William M. Osborne, of Massachusetts, consul general of the United States at London; Joseph H. Brigham, of Ohio, to be assistant secretary of agriculture.

CRETANS ARE SIMPLY WAITING.

Blockade Begins, but the Turkish Troops Must Leave Crete.

London, March 22.—The situation in Crete may be described as one of expectancy. Yesterday morning the fact that the blockade had formally begun was communicated from Canea to all points in the island in the telegraphic circuit. A dispatch from Constantinople to The Daily Mail says the Greeks in all the islands of the Archiptelago are arming, drilling and preparing to revolt as soon as war is declared. A correspondent at Athens says that the necessity of removing the Turkish troops from the island becomes more and more imperative. Nothing else will convince the Cretans of Europe's sincerity.

It may be regarded as certain that they will even prevent the departure of the Greek army by force until the Turks have gone. There is no time to be lost. It is impossible that Greece and Turkey could long support the armies they have mobilized. Either may prefer provoking a struggle to seeing its troops starve.

Why Europeans Are Safe Among Turks.

The explanation of the safety of Europeans among these fellows, even where the police were absent, is probably to be found in the tentative character of the Turk's violations of right and of law. In doing what is wrong he always begins an abject coward, gaining courage with impunity. The mere fact that a European would walk straight through a crowd of the bludgeon men, jostling against them in an unconcerned manner, convinced them that for some reason he was not a safe man to attack. In some cases Armenians walked safely through the mobs on the street simply by pushing their way with a determined air. In every case where an Armenian ran from them, or even hesitated on meeting them, his only chance of life was gone. The tentative character of Turkish aggressions is not sufficiently borne in mind. At the beginning of a wrong even a sultan will draw back when he sees that his course is resented by one whom he knows to have the right and believes to have the force to do so.—Yvan Troshine in Scribner's.

Grant's Demerits as a Cadet.

Grant's page of demerits at West Point shows scarcely a single mark for any real offense against good conduct. They are mainly "lates" and negligences. He was "late at church," "late at parade," "late at drill." He was a growing boy and a little sluggish of a morning no doubt. Once he sat down on his post between 5 and 6 in the morning. For this he received eight demerits. Twice in his second year as squad marcher he failed to report delinquencies in others and received five demerits each time. His amiability led to this. Once he spoke disrespectfully to his superior officer on parade. The provocation must have been very great to have led to this. The probabilities are the officer was mistaken.—Hamlin Garland in McClure's Magazine.

Eggs Are Useful.

According to The Medical Record, eggs are useful in the following applications: A mustard plaster made with the white of an egg will not leave a blister. A raw egg, taken immediately, will carry down a fish bone that cannot be extracted. The white skin that lines the shell is a useful application to a boil. White of egg, beaten up with loaf sugar and lemon, relieves hoarseness—a teaspoonful taken once every hour.

The California State convention will be held in the Women's Temperance Temple in Los Angeles, April 14, 15.

The convention will begin Wednesday evening the 14th, and will hold three sessions on Thursday. Among the speakers are Bishop Dillon. Rev. Dr. Bresee, Rev. E. Leonardson, and pastors Logan and Roberts of the United Presbyterian and Free Methodist churches.

It is somewhat strange that the ecclesiastical status of one so well and so favorably known as Mr. Moody should be misunderstood. He is not only a member, but a trustee and an elder of Chicago Avenue church and has been for more than a quarter of a century. Previous to Mr. Moody's residence in Chicago he was a member of Dr. Kirk's church in Boston, from which he brought his letter to and joined the New England Congregational church of this city.

The fact that President McKinley has become a member of the Mystic Shrine is quite significant. It is indicative that the heads of nearly all governments in the world to-day are banding themselves together in these higher secret orders. When we consider that all government is passing under the control of a great secret empire, it is a serious question what its outcome will be. Is there to be a world-wide reign of terror in emancipating government from this secret despotism?

All the materials for a great European war are collected. Turkish troops are massing along the Austrian frontier, and all the Austrian reserves have been called to arms. Greece has 27,000 troops on its frontier. Turkey has 100,000 troops along the Grecian coast. Servia and Turkey are putting their troops on a war basis, and are ready any time in an attack on Turkey. Russia is massing its armies near the Asiatic and European boundaries of Turkey. The European concert has broken up in discord, and any hour the curtain may rise revealing the great war in full blaze.

GEORGE DUDLEY DODGE.

Here is a picture of a sturdy New England reformer. After a membership in the church of his fathers at Hampton Falls, N. H., extending from his fifteenth to his fifty-ninth year, and with an enviable official record, he came out of this church a few years ago and became a member of one known as "The Church of the Open Bible." One of its cardinal doctrines and terms of communion was righteous voting. It required the Christian to go to the ballot-box with as solemn a sense of responsibility to Christ as when he went to the communion table. He had publicly advocated separation for many years, but being bound by strong ties of association he lingered till he found that further contest with the secret lodge, corrupt politics and ungodly wealth was hopeless.

Mr. Dodge believes the church to be God's only lodge for the Christian, deserving all the time and money he can spare. The lodge, he says, is the devil's rival church, to be shunned and opposed by every follower of Christ. Mr. Dodge was handicapped in the battle of life by hereditary ailments induced by the tobacco habits of his ancestors, and has an ever-increasing hatred of what he believes to be the power behind the throne of rum, and as fatal as the liquid poison itself. While one is never compelled to drink rum, yet he says the fumes of this devil's incense is ever in the air. At the age of twenty he was an official member of the Republican party, and stood the fire of a residence in the South during the trying years from '59 to '63. In the campaign of 1880, the Prohibition flags of his Granite State floated the names of Neal Dow for President, and George D. Dodge for Governor.

President McKinley when initiated this week into the Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine must take a fearful oath, closing with these words: "In willful violation whereof may I incur the fearful penalty of having my eyeballs pierced to the center with a three-edged blade, my feet flayed and I be forced to walk the hot sands upon the sterile shores of the Red Sea until the flaming sun shall strike me with livid plague; and may Allah, the god of Arab, Moslem and Mohammedan, the God of our fathers, support me to the entire fulfillment of the same. Amen, Amen, Amen."

What a different world this would be if only all of us would cultivate the grace of good nature. It is the best tonic for nervous disorders, the surest preservative of home happiness, and the most effective remedy for the divorce disease now unhappily prevalent. He who has learned how to take even the most disagreeable things and grevious disappointments good naturedly may never be a millionaire, but he will be what is much better, both happy and a source of happiness, and the atmosphere he carries with him will be like a bit of sunshine in the Mammoth Cave.

A leading organ of the A. P. A. says, that "The only living witnesses of the initiation of President McKinley into the mysteries of Masonry are Worshipful Master J. B. T. Reed, and George E. Jenkins, of South Dakota." He was made a Mason in Hiram Lodge, Winchester, Va., in 1865, receiving his degree at the hands of a Confederate Worshipful Master. He entered May 1, was passed May 2, and was raised May 3. This week when he joins the Mystic Shrine he will be a member of seven secret orders. We have every reason to believe he will be initiated into the Mystic Shrine in the regular manner, without hat, boots, coat or vest, and blindfolded, and receiving the 'Grand Salaam' while stooping very low on his knees with his head near the floor and his hips elevated.

The time for our next Annual Meeting is but a few weeks distant. Are you planning to be present? The prospects for a large meeting in Willard Hall (W. C. T. U. Temple) are very good. Notice a change in the time to Monday, May 10th. At 10:00 A. M. in Carpenter Hall, in the N. C. A. building, and at 12:00 M. in Willard Hall, "The Temple." Meetings are to be held in different places in connection with our Annual Meeting, both before and after the 10th of May, so that friends who cannot come to this city on the above date may be present in one of our "anniversary series." The one on the evening of April 20th of this month is in the (Moody) Chicago Avenue church, while that for May 23d is to be in Zion's Tabernacle, which seats 3,000, and, we are assured, will be well filled on this occasion. One session on this day will be given to testimonies from seceders, from various secret lodges, many of whom have renounced the lodge during the past year.

IF CHRIST SHOULD COME TO EARTH.

BY FAS F. MARTIN.

If Christ should come to earth,
Where think you would he dwell?
Would it be a stately mansion,
Or by a humble hearth
That we would find the Saviour
If he should come to earth?

Where would we find the Saviour
If he should come to earth?
Would it be among the sorrowing,
Or mid revelry and mirth
That we would find the Saviour.
If he should come to earth?

Where think you would he worship
If he should come to earth?
Would the church be grand and stately,
Or of poor and lowly birth,
Where the dear Lord would worship
If he should come to earth?

Would we find him in mansions fair,
Mid luxury and bliss?
Or in a humble hovel
Some dying lips to kiss?
Would he scorn the poor and lowly,
For those of noble birth?
Or would he be the poor man's friend
If he should come to earth?

I think that we would find him
In the humble walks of life;
Far from the care of riches,
Far from worldly strife.
And 'mongst those of lowly birth
I think we'd find the Saviour
If he should come to earth.

GOD IN ISRAEL.

BY REV J P. STODDARD.

Baal worship supplanted Jehovah's altar in the court of Samaria. Voluptuous Queen Jezebel ruled profligate King Ahab. Three years and a half of drouth preceded and prepared the people for a test at Carmel. Confronting Ahab, Elijah charged him with "forsaking the commandments of the Lord and following Baalam," as the cause of the evil that had come upon his kingdom. The king denied the charge, but consented to a test. By royal command eight hundred and fifty prophets of Baal met a single prophet at Carmel. Elijah took the initiative and called for a division. "If the Lord be God follow him; but if Baal, follow him." Perplexed and uncertain "the people answered him not a word." It was the crucial moment, and when Elijah proposed to settle the question then and there, the people responded, "It is well spoken." The people had stepped to the front, and unconditional surrender or a fair test was the alternative.

Forced to the crisis and desperate the prophets of Baal "cried aloud, and cut themselves with knives and lancets till the bloood gushed out upon them." Mid-day passed and evening came but "there was neither voice nor any to answer" their frantic appeal. Their cries were mocked by the sullen silence of their god. There was not a sound of rain or a note of revival in the air. Baal's union protracted meeting had expended its force and resulted in signal failure. Appealing to the people Elijah said, "Come near unto me;" and then laid the foundation of a complete triumph in obedience to God's commands. No new device, but the old broken-down altar, representing by its stones "the tribes of the sons of Jacob," upon which he laid the wood and the bullock, and then called upon "the God of Abraham, Isaac and Israel" to assert his presence, and to vindicate his servant. "The fire of the Lord fell." The people saw it and shouted, "The Lord he is God."

The smoking altar and the prophet's words met a grateful response from the common people. The priests of Baal were confounded. A sudden revolution of public sentiment had put Elijah in command. He proposed to hold revival services and bring Israel back to the altar of Jehovah. His first move decapitated Baal's kingdom by cutting off the heads of his prophets. This sanguinary act was his second heroic step in the Carmel revival. He gave no quarter to the priests, but spared and comforted their dupes. From the slaughter at Kishon he ascended to the top of Carmel to make intercession for the people, and there wrestled with God in prayer until "the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and there was a great rain." God answered by fire on the altar of sacrifice and followed with showers of blessing, reviving the whole land.

Elijah's disposition of Baal's prophets instinctively recalls the three thousand calf worshipers slain by command of Moses at Mount Sinai, and readily suggests Christ's method of dealing with conceited religious leaders. To his disciples and the multitude he gave warning, encouragement and instruction, but pronounced eight consecutive woes upon the rabbis in a single chapter. He began by saying, "Ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men," and closed the fearful catalogue with the scathing denunciation, "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell."

There is something very significant in Christ's methods and the methods of those ancient worthies in conducting revival meetings. Their tenderness and compassion for the people, and their relentless dealings with hypocritical religious zealots, each has its lesson. Should Christ or Elijah or Moses come to Boston and hold revival services, would they go up and worship in high places with the priest of Baal, as did Baalam in Moab? Would they honor conjurors and sorcerers because they occupied "the uppermost seats in the synagogues," and then hurl thunderbolts againts covenant-breakers, prostitutes and common villains who are pupils and victims of their betrayers? Consult the record and you will find Christ and his prophets and disciples "rendering honor to whom honor is due," but never "walking in the counsels of the ungodly" to secure their co-operation in "spreading Gospel holiness over the world;" and there is not the slightest reason to suppose they would make an exception if they held revival meetings in Boston. An autumn heath may glow for an hour while the fire sweeps over its withered verdure, leaving the roots unscathed, but the earthquake lifts foundations and changes the whole contour of the country. Moses, Elijah and Christ evidently believed in earthquake revivals or they would never have inaugurated reforms by such heroic measures.

FREEMASONRY ANTI-CHRISTIAN.

BY EX-PRES. JOHN G. FEE, OF BEREA COLLEGE.

The most serious of all objections to Freemasonry is that it is fundamentally and radically anti-Christian. This will be seen from its very nature, teaching and practice.

1. It is a religion: seen in that it has its altar, its songs, its worship, and in all lands carries a religious book. Its own authorities avow it as a religion. In Webb's "Monitor," page 286, we have these words: "The meeting of the Masonic lodge is strictly a religious ceremony." Again, "All the ceremonies of our order are prefaced and terminated with prayer, because Masonry is a religious institution." See also Mackey's "Ritual," page 44.

2. Whilst Masonry is a religion, it is a false religion. There can be but one true religion. The Christian religion is the only religion that purifies the heart and sanctifies the lives of men. Confessedly the Christian religion is from God. Confessedly Freemasonry is from man; projected in a tavern—Apple-tree Tavern—in London in 1717. It is of the "earth, earthy"—false.

3. Masonry is a deceptive religion. With its prayers and worship it has the appearance of a religion. The undiscerning take ceremony for piety as a sufficient religion, and often say, "Masonry is a good-enough religion for me." Masonry claims salvation not by grace but by the rites and observances of Masonry. In Drew's "Monitor," a Masonic authority, on page 170 we find these words, "We now as Master Masons find man complete in morality and intelligence, with the stay of religion added to insure him protection of deity and guard him from ever going astray"—without regeneration or sanctification.

Again, "These three degrees thus form a harmonious whole; nor can we conceive of anything suggested more which the soul of man requires." By the same author we have these words: "Acacian," a term derived from "Akakia" (innocence), and signifying a Mason, who by living in strict obedience to the obligations and precepts of the fraternity is freed from sin; thus an assumed salvation, without repentance for sin or faith in Christ.

Again, Masonry claims to fit the soul for heaven. Thus, Salem Town says, "In the fifth degree he (the Mason) discovers his election to, and glorified state in, the kingdom of his Father."

Again, Masonry is deceptive in the very carrying of the Bible. It, as Masonry, carries the Bible, not as the inspired word of God but as the book of the religion of the land; as it does the Koran in Turkey or the Shaster in India, but not as the inspired word of God.

In Chase's "Digest of Masonic Law," page 206, we have these words: "To require that a candidate profess a belief in the divine authenticity of the Bible or a state of future rewards and punishments is a serious innovation in the body of Masonry."

In Webb's "Monitor," page 16, we have these words: "A few private lodges append to the application a pledge to the effect that the applicants believe the Scriptures to be of divine import. All this is irregular and un-Masonic." Masonry, then, does not carry the Bible as the voice of God, but as the book of the religion of the land.

A FALSE RELIGION.

BY REV. J. A. FENWICK,

Every religion that is not built upon Jesus Christ is a false religion and deceptive. When Peter confessed that Jesus was the Christ, Jesus said, "Upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Paul declares Christ to be the chief corner-stone. "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ."

So we see that a religion not founded on Christ is false and of the devil, who is the father of all falsehood. Freemasonry is a religion. No well-informed person would deny this. But Freemasonry is not Christianity, for it is not founded on Christ, the sure foundation. His name is excluded from its manuals and from its rituals. The name of Christ is excluded from Masonic and Odd-fellow prayers. And a prayer that is not offered in the name of Christ is mockery in the sight of God, and belongs to Baal worship, even if offered by a professed minister of the Gospel.

Every religion that rejects Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit is of the devil and not of God. It is a refuge of lies in which many murderers and whoremongers and thieves and robbers and villains of all kinds are taking refuge. God has declared that the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies.

Many honest, well-meaning men are being duped by Freemasons and induced to join the lodge, thinking it to be a good thing; and when they wake up to the fact they are deceived, they are afraid to denounce and expose it as a deception. A third-degree Freemason in Oskaloosa, Iowa, told me, one day this week, that the meanest men in town belonged to the Freemasons. I believe it is true; and if so, how appropriate the words of the apostle: "Come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not tho unclean thing, and I will receive you;" which is better than to be received into a Christless, oath-bound, secret lodge.

TESTS.

BY J. M. HITCHCOCK.

The life and labors of D. L. Moody are so polysided as to make it difficult to determine in what direction they reach farthest, or what classes they most benefit. With all his original, persuasive, practical tenderness in presenting the Gospel to the unsaved masses, it may yet be fairly doubted whether or not his labors have proven a greater benediction to the outside world than to the church.

Where is there a pulpit throughout Protestantism whose methods and services have not in some measure been modified for good by the business naturalness of this unique preacher? Where the pastor whose labors have not been made easier, less conventional, less studied and stereotyped for the example of Mr. Moody? Where is the prayer meeting, the mission or the Sabbath-school, the character of whose music has not been revolutionized and spiritualized by the introduction of the Moody and Sankey hymns? Where in all christendom have not the labors of this evangelist, without the finish even of a common school education, been felt? All this the result of reverently testing God, and God testing Moody.

Certainly we are grateful for so stalwart a friend to the anti-secret cause. He gives the enemy an occasional staggering blow. But what have these tests and the life and labors of this evangelist to suggest to the readers of the Cynosure? If God can use so weak a vessel for so great a good to the church, may there not be some one friendly to the National Christian Association and the cause it represents, who, when tested, may prove a great emancipator to the lodge enthralled?

Since the anti secret sentiment of our land crystalized, some thirty years ago in the National Christian Association, the cause has had, possibly, its share of most worthy devotees. The Blanchards, Stoddards, Finney, Ronayne, Kellogg, Cook, Swartz, Hinman, Fee, Williams, Fenton, and scores of others scarcely less worthy of mention, are names that would do honor to any reform. From this galaxy of notables may be found men of scholarly attainments, giants in exegetical Biblical truth, masters in the law, and authorities in their respective professions and callings.

But will I be doing violence to the sacred memory of the dead, or give occasion of offense to the living by asking whether there has yet arisen among us a typical leader of the reform for which the N. C. A. is an exponent? Practical, experimental tests have abundantly proven unflinching heroism in some, while others have developed tactfulness of management, forcefulness as lecturers, a readiness with the pen or carefulness of the tongue in conversation. But which one has embodied all these requisites for leadership? True, all men have their limitation, but like the little fellow who explained to his mamma the cause of his falling out of bed was that he went to sleep too near the place where he got in; so many men come to the end of their tether too near the beginning.

What our reform needs is some man who towers above his fellows in resourceful and administrative abilities—a major general, to husband our strength, wisely direct, unify and centralize our forces, and show to the world the righteousness of the cause for which we contend.

Each pretty hand
Can steer a ship becalmed; but he that will Govern and carry her to her ends must know
His tides, his currents, how to shift his sails,
What she will bear in foul, what in fair weather;
Where her springs are, her leaks, and how to stop them;
What strands, what shoals what rocks do threaten her."

With no desire to be invidious the writer believes the tests up to date show Pres. C. A. Blanchard to possess more qualities for successful leadership in our cause than any other man.

FREEMASONRY AND REVELATION.

Romanism is the beast spoken of in Revelation and Freemasonry is the image of the beast. One is papal, the other is pagan. Catholics reverence the priests; Protestants kneel to the Worshipful Masters. Catholics worship the Pope; Protestant ministers bow to most Worshipful Grand Masters. Catholics say mass for the dead; Freemasons hold lodges of sorrow for the dead. Catholics use candles on Christmas and Easter; the Masonic altar is surrounded by three tallow dips. The Romanist dips his finger in the holy water and crosses himself; the Freemason crosses himself with the due guard and sign. The papist drops on his knee before the holy fire; the Mason does the same thing to the sun, the source of all light and heat. And so on to the end Masonry is the complete photograph of the beast. It is the papacy paganized. Like the papacy it received its deadly wound when Morgan was murdered; but to-day it encircles the globe.

Revelation mentions the dragon, the beast and the false prophet. Then it speaks of the image of the beast, the mark of the beast in the right hand or in the forehead, and the name and number of the beast. Was there ever a church that had a grip? Was there ever a lodge that did not have a grip in the "right hand," except the A. P. A.s? Was there ever a church that required a communicant to give the "name and number" of his church when visiting another church? Is there a lodge that don't require the "name and number" of your home lodge to visit any other lodge? Lodgery encircles the globe, and must fill a big chunk in prophecy. Yet the Bible declares that there is none with the mark of the beast in their "right hands," or the "name and number" of the animal, will ever get into the kingdom.

Let the Protestant ministers cogitate on these things. Why should they object to the papacy, of what they approve in paganism? Why should they rage at the Pope in Italy while they uphold forty Most Worshipful Grand Masters or pagan pontiffs in the States and Territories? Two supreme powers cannot occupy the same territory at the same time without coming into deadly conflict. The United States and the Southern Confederacy tried that to a finish. Neither Freemasonry or Romanism will brook a rival. We read of three unclean spirits like frogs that came out of the mouth of the dragon, that is paganism—Knight Templar Freemasons, Odd-fellows millitant, Knights of Pythias, Grand Army, Sons of Veterans, etc., out of the mouth of the beast—that is the Catholic military; and out of the mouth of the false prophet—that is the Mohammedan warriors, all these together to the last great battle of the Lord God Almighty.

The Turks are already opening the ball. The late great Catholic Council, at Trent, shows which way the wind is blowing. The forces here and there may patch up a truce, but it will only be temporary. The late corner-stone laying by the Freemasons and the papists may be only the shaking hands of two tremendous powers before entering the arena for the championship of the world. This great battle of Armageddon must begin in Armenia, but it will doubtless end in the Valley of the Mississippi, where alone all nations are already gathered and where the hosts are so conspicuously deploying.

AN ENGINE OF REBELLION.

The Knights of the Golden Circle enabled the 69,505 slaveholders of the South to carry into secession and rebellion with them 1,200,000 non-slaveholders capable of bearing arms.

'Treason and secretism kept together
As two yoke-devils sworn to either purpose.'

Historically the sketch on the third page of the Cynosure of March 18th is of interest. A number of influential editors in the North were said to be associate members of the K. G. C., among whom was Editor Storey, of the Chicago Times, whose paper was suspended, by military orders, for a short time during the war.

This secret order was charged with a conspiracy to liberate the Confederate prisoners here in Camp Douglas, and with sending fever-infested clothing to Northern cities, and also with planning the assassination of prominent Union men.

Whether the above charges are true or not, there is no question as to the great influence of the Knights of the Golden Circle in promoting the Rebellion.

Those familiar with Freemasonry will infer that the founders of the K. G. C. had first been drilled in that lodge. The Freemason swears: "I will not have illicit carnal intercourse with a brother Master Mason's wife....nor daughter, I knowing them to be such." The K. G. C. swears: "I will never dishonor the wife or daughter of a K. G. C., I knowing them to be such."—Lodge Lamp.

REMARKABLE CASE OF RESTORED SIGHT.

The service at Dr. Dowie's Tabernacle on Sabbath, Feb. 28, was a powerful testimony against the lodge. Some remarkable experiences were given of divine healing, among which was the following case of B. C. Dinius, of North Harvey, son of our N. C. A. Director, Rev. W. O. Dinius, who has been holding quite successful revival meetings at Huntingdon, Ind., lately. In the the course of his sermon Dr. Dowie said:

"Our young brother, Mr. Bert C. Dinius, though young in years, has proved himself to be a very expert and efficient electrician, lighting up this building in the beautiful way that you now see. Our brother has been working very hard. I did not know that he had not entered into full peace with God. He has been staying in Zion Home while superintending and carrying out this work, and has proved himself a very worthy young man, but the other night when attending to the arc-lights they suddenly blazed out upon him, and his eyes were unprotected, and he received a very severe injury in the eyes, and about two o'clock on Saturday morning my watchman knocked at my room and said to me: 'Bert Dinius is blind; he is in terrible agony and he cannot see anything, and is seeking God earnestly, but he gets no answer.' I said, 'Bring him right down to me,' and he was brought down from his room in Zion Home to my room. What followed I would like him to tell you himself. I am so thankful that he can stand here today and tell you that he belongs to God and that the Lord healed him.

"Mr. Dinius, just tell it in your own way.

"Mr. Dinius said: 'Well, the doctor has related the most of the transaction on Saturday morning. All I can add is that my soul was not at peace with God until I was in the doctor's room probably half an hour, and I was satisfied then that I was accepted, and the pain left my eyes at once. I left the room then and could see all right, and have been all right ever since. My eyes were inflamed yesterday, but the inflammation is leaving, and I am all right now, and it is all the work of God.'

"Dr. Dowie:—'You were practically blind, were you not?'

"Mr. Dinius:—'I was.'

"Dr. Dowie:—'And after your consecration to God when I laid hands upon you, your pain entirely left?'

"Mr. Dinius:—'Yes, sir.'

"Dr. Dowie:—'And the sight is entirely restored?'

"Mr. Dinius:—'Yes, sir.'

"Dr. Dowie:—'Is it as good as ever?'

"Mr. Dinius:—'Yes, sir.'

Dr. Dowie:—'Thank God.'

—The primary Masonic principle is to be unprincipled.

LET EVERY STATE FALL INTO LINE.

At the anti-secrecy convention, held in Oaks, Pa., November last, the following, with other resolutions, were adopted:

Res 7.—The State should require her officers to be free from all connection with secret orders; should refuse to permit such societies to lay the corner-stones of buildings erected and paid for by the public; should refuse them the privileges of corporate bodies, and should withdraw charters already given.

Res. 8.—The State Secretary is requested to prepare and circulate a petition addressed to our State legislators at Harrisburg, to accord with the sentiment of the seventh resolution. The State officers are requested, as our committee to present the same.

It is maintained that secret oath-bound orders are undermining the Government. One thing we do know, they are undermining most of the churches, and are greatly weakening their resources. Some of them are known to be Christless, and yet they are encouraged and assisted by men who profess the Christian religion. For our part, it always did seem inconsistent to employ secret societies to lay the corner-stones of our public buildings, especially so since the Government is not founded on the principles maintained by the oath-bound societies. In harmony with these resolutions, petitions are being widely circulated in Pennsylvania, and it is believed that they will be signed by a sufficient number of the citizens to prompt the lawmakers of the State to some action respecting the requests of the petitioners. If this can not be done, it might be a good idea to petition for the adoption of measures, requiring all corporate bodies to submit for record the rules, regulations, requirements and aims of organizations before they be granted incorporate privileges. This would treat them all alike, and bring to light all that has been kept dark so far. For further information concerning the petition referred to, address W. B. Stoddard, 215 Four and one-half Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.—Gospel Messenger, Feb 20.

A POINTED LETTER.

In an old number of the St. Paul Daily News, dated May 16, 1888, we find the following pointed letter from Rev. Wm. Fenton:

At Dr. Munhall'a Bible reading this afternoon, May 14, a written question was propounded to the doctor as follows: "Is it a sin to be a Freemason?" To which the doctor replied, "No! Unless they make an idol of it and trust to it for salvation, as many do." The doctor at the close of his special meeting on secret societies told a few of us, who stood around him, that he is a Freemason, and that he should continue in fellowship with Masonry until they did something wrong in connection with it. It is well known to everybody that Freemasonry requires all its members, in conformity to pagan usage, to swear to forever conceal all crime Masonically committed, except murder and treason, which are left to their own choice as to its concealment in the third degree, under the penalty of the violator being brutally murdered. Also that the oath is administered in connection with cermonies taken from ancient pagan sun-worship and symbolizing the candidate's inward experience of the new birth and sanctification of his soul, and in their third degree they also teach the doctrine of the resurrection of the body by means of a miserable, slanderous, lying myth, which they have invented concerning Hiram and King Solomon.

The myth is this, namely, that during the construction of King Solomon's temple, Hiram was murdered for his faithfulness to Freemasonry, and after he had been dead and buried fourteen days, King Solomon raised him from the dead. In the third degree of Masonry, as it is given in modern Masonic lodges of the present day, the candidate personates Hiram, and the sham tragedy of murder and resurrection is performed upon his body in the lodge room. Now, Dr. Munhall, if he was made a Mason in the regular way, must have played the part of victim in that "passion play" of the lodge; and much more of the same bad character. Thus the very doctrines which the doctor has been preaching in connection with the churches and from the Bible during these four weeks, he has caricatured in the buffoonery and pagan ceremonies of the Masonic lodge, and now tells us that it is not a sin to do that and swear to conceal it under penalty of murder. But what an anomally in the doctor's religious ethics. He told us in his Bible reading on secret societies that he had left one secret society because they built a stage in the lodge-room for theatricals. Thus, the doctor leads us to suppose that if the Masons should erect a stage in the lodgeroom for theatrical performances he would give up Masonry.

How sacred then must those Masonic doctrines of regeneration, sanctification, resurrection and salvation be to Dr. Munhall—so sacred, it seems, that the very lodgeroom, which the Masons call "holy ground," would be defiled by a theatrical performance; notwithstanding his answer quoted implies that it might be regarded as a sin to trust in Masonic doctrines for salvation. It seems to us that Dr. Munhall's ethics of religion presents a queer anomally to the true Christian. "The passion play" representing the crucifixion of Christ upon the public stage was suppressed by civil authority, of which suppression we approve. Is the caricature of the doctrines of that event on Calvary by a lying, slanderous myth in a Masonic lodge any less blasphemous than that which was suppressed by the civil authorities for its blasphemy?

EMPLOYMENT OF NEW ENGLANDERS.

We wonder what the Pilgrim Fathers would have said if they had risen from their graves and looked into the Bristol (Conn.) Odd-fellows' Lodge on a recent Friday evening. One of the local papers thus describes the scene:

"Those who had occasion to visit Linstead's block last Friday night received an uninvited initiation into the mysteries of Odd-fellowship. The degree team from Nosahogan Lodge of Waterbury paid a fraternal visit to Pequabuck Lodge and worked two degrees on two candidates. They brought all of their paraphernalia and prepared to do their work in tip-top shape. They brought a real live donkey and temporarily housed him in the public storeroom on the second floor of the block. When it came time for the animal to 'get in his deadly work' he refused to walk up the long flight of stairs to the hall. One man went for an apple, but in the meantime four men in regalia took the donkey by his forelegs and marched upstairs with him. The fun inside the lodgeroom was commensurate with that outside, and will stimulate many to join into the mysteries of Pequabuck Lodge."

A correspondent from Bristol writes us that while the donkey was waiting in the storeroom below, one of the local editors ran against him in the dark and was badly frightened. What folly for the sons of such sires to be engaged in.

REFORM NEWS.

WORKING UP THE CONVENTION

FOR SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 17, 1897.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I am working to make the coming convention a success. At the preliminary meeting there were not so many present as I wished to see, but we had as many as survived the flood. They represented five denominations. We applied for the Women's Temple, which is a nice hall and well located. They readily hired it to us for two nights and a day. I am pleased with the arrangements thus far. I find we must pay for every notice we get in the papers. Only a few smaller papers, such as the Voice and Pentecost, will readily advertise our work and do all they can to help us.

Among our speakers are Bishop Dillon, D. D., Rev. P. T. Bresee, D. D., Rev. E. Leonardson. Others are expected to speak who have not yet been heard from. We sincerely hope for the cooperation of all who are in sympathy with us.

I spoke at the Free Methodist church, in Los Angeles, Sabbath morning the 7th, to a good audience, and listened in the evening to an excellent discourse by Sister Roberts, wife of the pastor, Rev. J. B. Roberts. They are not afraid to ask an N. C. A. lecturer to speak in their church, nor are they afraid to say amen when he hits the lodges and other prominent evils. Mrs. Roberts spoke in the evening on the theme, "The Old Paths, and the Good Way." She showed up many of the divergencies from the good way. Last Sabbath I spoke again at Clearwater.

I wish to say that while Mrs. Williams was sick I read "The Pioneer Preacher" by Rev. Sherlock Bristol. It is a remarkable book, by a remarkable man. It is well written, bright, shrewd, exciting, witty and everything else calculated to make it a newsy, readable book. He is a pioneer Congregational minister, still living at Ventura, Cal. I am now reading his book, "Paracletos," or "The Baptism of the Holy Spirit." No one can read these books without being greatly benefited. May the author yet live many years and have many stars for his eternal reward. P. B. WILLIAMS.

—A Christian, who tries also to be a Mason, is in a false position. Since this is so in fact, he must not think it strange if the fact is recognized.

COMMISSION OF THE UNPARDONABLE SIN.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 22, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I want to thank Rev. J. T. Cullor for answering my questions, and express my pleasure to know of a regular Baptist church in which the Gospel is allowed to be preached. A seceding Freemason and very intelligent writer on the subject, a member of the British army, Bro. Hobson, says: "The commission of the unpardonable sin is with the Freemason an indispensable duty." I understand that to be a fact on the supposition that the Holy Spirit manifests the truth to the candidate at the time that he takes the first obligation in Masonry. Nevertheless the churches ought not to prohibit the preaching of the Gospel to Freemasons; for it is to be hoped that some who join the Masonic fraternity do not do their Masonic duty. How can we have any hope for the salvation of a true Freemason? The "requisitions to make a good Mason" consist in an obligation to destroy Christianity—the lying hypocrites. See Bernard's Light on Masonry, printed by the authority of 103 ex-Mason's degree, "Knights of the Sun." I enclose an old paper in which you will see how Dr. Munhall served his Master and the people in St. Paul about nine years ago. He makes me think of a certain gambler who tied his hat on with strings hid under false whiskers and then made bets with men that they could not knock it off. Of course he won all the bets.

W. FENTON.

—Exposure should hasten the time when men will be ashamed to be known as Masons.

VICTIMIZING THE BOYS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 25, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The second meeting at East Greenville fully met our expectations. The night was dark and rainy. The house was well filled with what proved to be an attentive audience. I learned of three who resolved to leave their lodges as a result of my lectures there. It is not always that the agent sees fruit from his labors. Many resolve to come to the light, no doubt, of whom we never hear.

The boys who were not connected with the C. M. A. gave special applause as I proceeded to call attention to some of the long list of lies published by Masonic Hunter in his pamphlet. The following are samples: "Teachers, ministers and business men are all in favor of it." "Never has a society flourished or lasted any length of time if it was not founded on good principles." "Every one who joins, marvels at the secret work and says wonderful, grand, magnificent!" "We only wish there was some way to let an outsider get a peep at the secret work, for then he would surely join without delay." I asked if there was a boy in the house that believed this to be true. As none attempted to defend, I enquired why any one should follow such a miserable liar? There was no reason given, evidently for the very good reason there was none to give.

The lecture in Emaus was not so largely attended. Two ministers and other thoughtful persons listened attentivefy. I felt that good was accomplished. I was splendidly entertained at the home of Dr. Backenstoe. For Sabbath work I found an open door in the Eighth U. P church, Philadelphia. Bro. Webster, the pastor, gave me the right of way at both morning and evening services. Several names were added to the Cynosure subscription list as a result.

Among the many friends found in Philadelphia was our old friend Edward Mathews. He has been running an Episcopalian rescue mission. Being unable to agree with the leaders, he is soon to engage in an independent mission. He is still as unwilling to be bound by the lodge, or anything else that is human, as formerly.

LETTER FROM INDIA.

INDIA WATCHMAN MISSION, DADAN, BOMBAY, India, Feb. 20, 1897.

DEAR BRETHREN AND CYNOSURE FRIENDS:—"Good news from a far country" are acceptable at any time, but doubtless they will be more so to you in these troublous times in this land. The goodness of the Lord is still extended to us in large measure. We have been subjects of God's special care and love since Bro. Gladwin's removal from us and his work; and he has been permiting some precious testings to come upon us that we might be proved able to press on in this great battle against sin. God has always done so with his children in every age. He aims to have a few tested, tried soldiers who will stand in their places, and through him win in the battle, rather than a great number—"a mixed multitude," to bring disaster and defeat in some critical and decisive hour. That is why Gideon's sifted-out "ten thousand" were brought down to the water and put through another and severer test. God is wise in his ways of working and full of love too, but some ways are severe. The battle before us is very great. We have been getting new views of it, and are getting re-adjusted to these changed circumstances, and we believe better fitted to carry it on. We have fresh encouragements in God's Word and are increasing in a determination to stand true to him and his truth.

There is not much additional news except that the plague is still sweeping on in spite of all efforts to stay it. There has been an increase in the death rate the past two weeks; and people in large numbers are still leaving the city. Bombay, the beautiful, the prosperous and proud city is brought very low. It can well be said of her soon, if not now, "How doth the city sit solitary that was full of people! How is she become as a widow? she that was great among the nations and princess among the provinces, how is she become tributary?" Sam. 1:1. Her prosperity has been built up in iniquity, and "the Lord hath afflicted her for the multitude of her transgressions." It is thought that the city will never recover its former prosperity as the result of this terrible visitation. The famine, too, does not diminish, but increases in intensity of distress. Surely God has a controversy with this nation, and will not all pray that the nation will acknowledge its sins and turn to the Lord. We are preserved in the midst of all these things in great peace. Continue to pray for us.

In His love and service,
Henrietta E. Muzzy.

LETTER FROM MEXICO.

Guadalajara, Jalisco, Mexico,
March 19, 1897.

Dear Cynosure:—On Feb. 13th, Mr. Blachly visited Sayula, situated at the foot of the mountains and very still and dead; the people are very poor as they have had no crops to speak of for two years, and it is a struggle for them to get enough to eat. However, Mr. B. sold there twelve Bibles, five Testaments and four Gospels. A poor woman pawned something for money to buy food and then spent part of her money for a Testament; a poor man took some cloth out of his loom and traded it for a Bible.

On the 17th he reached Guzman, which is quite a city. In many parts of Mexico Sabbath is the market day, but here it is Thursday, and the people gather in from some distance around. In his letters, Mr. Blachly writes (Feb. 20.): "Disposed of five Bibles, eight Testaments and three Gospels. A man took off his hat and traded it for a Bible. I sold the hat for 25 cents; traded another Bible for a pair of sandals, and a Testament for a faja (sash). There was a long article published against 'bad books,' and the priest told the people that there was an American selling them, and they should not buy under the penalty of excommunication.

"The opposition of the priest is strong here, and the people are very ignorant and fanatical, still we have reason to be encouraged and very thankful that God by his Holy Spirit has opened so many hearts to receive his Word. Have sold here nine Bibles, twenty-six Testaments and nineteen Gospels; much better than I did here two years ago." B. B. Blachly.

THE POWER BEHIND ALL THRONES.

Champaign, Ill., March 25, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—I am busying myself in reading the current news and writing my own autobiography, in which I felt it my duty to relate some facts in my experience during three years of hard fighting and suffering in the army. I have written some dastardly facts against Masonry. Since I read in the Cynosure of the reports from Missionary Dodds that "all Turkey was putrid with Masonry," I have kept thinking and wondering if Masonry was not the power behind all thrones and powers that was making the Sultan so inconceivably brutal and murderous. I am anxiously looking for more facts that might throw more light upon the true cause of all the inexpressible barbarity of the Turks towards Armenian Christians. It is certainly proven beyond the possibility of a doubt that Masons do swear to protect and defend each other, right or wrong, murder and treason not excepted.

Prince Albert is said to be the highest Mason in the world. All the British domain is putrid with Masonry. Then is it not true that all America is more than putrid, for here ninety per cent of all the lucrative and influential offices, from President down, are in the hands of the secret clans? Then with such sworn backing of all the Masons of the world, is not the intrenchments of Freemasonry more invulnerable than all other powers in the world combined? I don't wish to be unduly solicitous, but I prayerfully inquire if there is no way that a public sentiment can be aroused for the future safety of our own Christian citizens from like barbarity and butchery? Why does our prayer-hearing God permit such wholesale barbarous slaughter of his own faithful, true disciples? Incomprehensible as this may be, I feel that I can say that though he may permit me also to be slain, yet will I trust, love and serve him. A. O. Howell.

—Masons ought to cling to Masonry instead of leaving it in great numbers if it is nearly as good as some vaporing pretenders would make it.

WAR FEELING INCREASING.

Washington, D. C., Mar. 24, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—The opposition to the ratification of the arbitration treaty seems to be stronger than it has yet been, and Senators who favor ratification have expressed doubts of the result, although Senator Davis, of Minnesota, chairman of the committee on Foreign Relations, who has charge of the treaty, says he is confident that the amendments to the treaty, adopted this week, make its ultimate ratification almost certain. The opponents of the treaty have made the most of England's taking sides against the Christians of Crete and Greece and for the Turks in the existing disturbances in the East, and some of the most influential of the new Senators are outspoken against the treaty. President McKinley is using all the influence of his administration to bring about the ratification of the treaty.

The old-fashioned Methodists who believe in congregational singing, instead of leaving it all for the choir to do, have received a distinguished recruit in the person of President McKinley, who joins heartily in singing the hymns. It will be surprising if there isn't as great an increase in the congregational singing at this church as there has been in the size of its congregations. The example of prominent men goes a long ways everywhere, but I think it goes a little further in Washington than any other place I know about; and I am glad that in this case it is such a good one, for although the hymns are doubtless better rendered from an artistic point of view when sung exclusively by a trained choir, there can be little doubt that there is more feeling and worship put into them when the whole congregation joins in singing. The disposition in some quarters to call those who entertain this opinion old-fogyish does not change facts. C. A. S.

—The policy of saying nothing about Masonry has been tried by the church for a quarter of a century. The experiment has been faithful, but flatly unsuccessful.

POLITICAL VS. GOSPEL CONSCIENCE.

Chicago, Ill., March 26, 1897.

Dear Cynosure:—Human association demands rules of conduct governing it in all its interests. No one person has the right to do for himself that which shall injure another. This is the decision of our highest courts, and accords with the Gospel text that "love worketh no ill to his neighbor." Our American interests are largely dominated by class or partisan legislation.

Permanent national prosperity can be only the product of co-operative unity for the beneficence of all as against the competition of over-reaching destructiveness. What is true of our physical structures, that disease of one organ is injurious to the whole, is equally true of our business and governmental relations. Permanent national health is the requisite for national prosperity. The application of the divine law can be the only sustaining power for the general welfare of the body politic administered by God-fearing men. A physician is not employed to administer disease, but health. When the larger majority of American citizenship creates a party who shall legislate for an oligarchy to produce crime and pauperism, they can only do it in violation of every principle of divine law. Violate moral obligation, in the person or the nation, and you build over the bottomless pit of inevitable ruin. Nor can the blind and suicidal policy of electing good men into corrupt and partisan parties afford any remedial cure.

Here is what Hon. Samuel Adams said in 1764 in addressing the delegates elect for the town of Boston: "Being members of the legislative body, you will have a special regard to the morals of this people, which are the basis of public happiness, and endeavor to have such laws made, if any are still wanting, as shall be best adapted to secure them.....In the preservation of morals as well as of property and right, much depends upon the impartial distribution of justice, agreeable to good and wholesome law."

The abiding trouble with our professed Christian membership is that it has a gospel conscience to condemn iniquity, and a political conscience to legalize iniquity, especially if it belongs to its pet party. The salvation of our nation can only be determined by the creation of a political party whose principles shall represent the unity of civil and divine law.

CAN INFIDELS BE REACHED?

Kingston, Ontario, March 15, 1897.

Editor Cynosure: — "That depends," says H. L. Hastings, of Boston, "on whether we want to reach them and try to reach them." Many Christians will not attempt to defend their faith when they hear it assailed, because they think infidels are beyond all hope, and that it is unwise to discuss religious matters. But infidelity is in many cases the result of ignorance, and if Christians would show unbelievers the weakness of infidel objections and present the powerful arguments for Christianity afforded by prophecy, etc., infidels would be less bold, and many of them would be led to Christ.

C. J. Whitmore, a London minister, states that he knows sixteen preachers and workers in the cause of Christ who some years ago were prominent enemies of Christianity. H. L. Hastings tells us of skeptics who have been converted through his labors, and after many years' experience in studying infidelity he asserts that, "If we are always ready to give to every man that asketh a reason for the hope that is in us, it will not be difficult to reach unbelievers. Infidels are bold bacause Christians are timorous." Let us all strive to be intelligent Christians. If we familiarize ourselves with the subject of Christian evidences we shall fortify ourselves against the assaults of infidels and be in a position to show skeptics the folly of infidel contentions.

OUR POSTAL CARD SYMPOSIUM.

QUESTION—HOW CAN WE BEST WITHSTAND THE INFLUENCE OF SECRET SOCIETIES?

The following replies have been received to the above question:

FROM REV. J. S. MARTIN, NEW CASTLE, PA.

I would say, by faithfully exposing their seductive nature, their rivalry to the church of Christ, their essential selfishness, the utter absurdity of their claims to charity, their baneful influences upon society in general, as well as upon their individual members, and the extreme folly and ridiculousness of their initiation ceremonies, and by refusing to fellowship the members thereof in the church of Christ.

REV. JOHN C. SCOTT, KNOXVILLE, IA.

The church should make more of the Christian brotherhood than she usually does. It is evident from the early chapters of Book of Acts, which have been the subject of our Sabbath-school studies for some weeks past, that the Christian brotherhood meant much in the early church. The church to-day should occupy this ground so fully that no Christian man would ever be inclined to go to a secret lodge brotherhood for its cold, formal and selfish ministrations. Then let us try to cultivate open, straightforward manliness of the kind so prominent in the pages of the New Testament in the person of Jesus, of Paul, of Peter and of others.

REV. J. B GILMORE, YORK, N. Y.

"How can we best withstand the influence of secret societies?" 1. By a full declaration of the Gospel, which we are assured is a light able to dispel the densest darkness, and hence the darkness of organized secrecy. 2. By requiring, as a condition of communion in the church of Christ, separation from secret societies. 3. By enforcing by discipline the above requirement, so as to dispel the delusion under which many at the present day are laboring, that it is possible to "have fellowship one with another" and have "the blood of Jesus Christ cleanse from all sin" without walking "in the light as He is in the light."

REV. JOHN H. FAZEL, WICHITA, KAN.

We can best withstand the influence of secret societies by not standing with them. Psalm 1:1. Methods would doubtless vary with locality and circumstances. The disease is chronic. The cure will probably be slow; requiring patience, prayer, perseverance, great skill and tact. My own plan is to get men soundly converted; thus, too busy in the Lord's work to fool with lodge nonsense. Give a man something better and he will usually give up what he has.

REV. DR. W. H FRENCH, RUSHVILLE. IND.

All evil influences are best met by the cultivation and promotion of the opposing good. A constant and kind testimony against all evil influences is imperative; with this there must also be a conduct that will promote the contrary good. Repeatedly are we told by those who are members of the associations that the orders are sapping the vital piety of church members. This influence can only be met by the promotion of true piety. As love to Jesus Christ intensifies, love to everything from which he is excluded becomes unattractive and charmless. The Gospel of Christ is the universal panacea. All that is false in doctrine and wrong in practice must fall before it.

REV. S G CONNER, VENICE, PA.

In answer to this question I would say that the Gospel is the great remedy. Paul urged Timothy to "preach the word." He also assured him that the time would come when they "will not endure sound doctrine." They would also "be turned unto fables." Yet he should make full proof of his ministry. 2 Tim. 4: 1, 5 We then need to get ministers stirred up on the question. To stir them we must have instruction in the colleges and seminaries. Back of this we want the homes on the right side. Let the mothers warn their sons of the evil of the lodge, and teach their daughters to say to the young men, "You will have to choose between us and the lodge." The women have it in their power to weaken if not destroy its influence.

REV. JAMES D SMITH, LODI, WIS.

1. Let there be no toleration of the members of secret societies in the communion of the churches. None whatever. This is vital. 2. Let pastors, able to do so, prepare lectures or courses of lectures and deliver them on week nights in as many places as may be. 3. Preach, circulate literature, etc., of course. 4 Drill the children and youth of our Sabbath-schools in the main points of opposition, so that, as with strong drink, they may grow up strongly predisposed to the right way. 5. Let all the churches support the National Christian Association systematically, and so enlarge greatly its sphere. 6. Pray much that God would turn the counsel of these orders into foolishness and blow them away by the breath of his spirit.

REV. W. S. FULTON, IDANA, KAN.

We can only withstand the influence of secret orders by keeping in close touch with the living and true God. David, the man after God's own heart, and who abominated Baal worship, said: "I have set the Lord always before me. Because he is at my right hand I shall not be moved." (Ps. 16:8.) Get out of self into Christ and we are safe. Once in Christ, "Put on the whole armor of God that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." (Eph. 6:11) Before you are ensnared by these secret orders, compare the attitude of the candidate being initiated, as to what he has to "put off" and what he has to "put on," with the attitude of a Christian clothed in God's armor. Hold this comparison in your mind and see if you can not obey the Word, "If sinners entice, consent thou not."

REV. S. G. SHAW, CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

I do not feel that I can suggest any new method of resistance to the power of secretism. Nor do I think that there is any particular need in this direction. While the Cynosure leads the forces of light, ably supported as it is by our church and others, while valiant lecturers as skirmishers attack the enemy in their own territory, while conventions, whenever and wherever we choose to hold them, bring on decided battles with the foe, and while our opponents themselves, by their follies and sins, help to agitate the question, I see no cause for discouragement. If the full sunlight is not flooding the darkness, there is a crimsom streak in the east that means the coming day. Considering the spread and strength of this iniquity, and comparing our means with that of other moral reformers, I believe that excellent progress is being made. Let us push the conflict more vigorously along the old lines.

REV. W. M. GLASGOW, BEAVER FALLS, PA.

In my opinion, the most effective way to withstand the influence of secret societies is to clearly present the truth of God's Word in reference to the unfruitful works of darkness; and then reveal, from their own books, the spirit and workings of the lodge system. Any fair-minded person can see the contrast; and, if open to conviction at all, will be led by the truth of the Word and the contradictions of the lodge to leave or shun the whole anti-Christian system. No Christian can remain in the church and in the lodge at the same time, and have any respect for his conscience or his Bible. By showing the moral evils and civil injustice of the lodge, its influence can be materially weakened. We are just now dealing with a Masonic judge who confessedly granted liquor licenses to those of his own mystic circle only because of these oath-bound relations, and against the protest of the best citizens and business men of the ward. Secrecy is God-defying in its principles and unjustly discriminating in its practices. Its influence must be resisted, or we are all helplessly bound by its insidious power.

REV. THOMAS PATTON, ST. ANDREW, N. Y.

1. Begin in the home, constantly teaching the children that the secrecy they enjoy is wrong in principle and tendency, and evil in results. 2. There are frequent lessons in the Sabbath-school that furnish opportunity to teach the young both directly and indirectly on the subject. No true teacher or pastor will allow such opportunity to slip unimproved. The hope of success in the anti-secret conflict, as in the cause of temperance, is mainly in sowing young minds with good seed. Teaching on such subjects will have a wonderful effect in ennobling the character and lay a foundation for right views and a right stand on every reform. 3. Every earnest man or woman who has convictions on the subject will find many opportunities in his own community to show exactly where he stands on the question and why. Let him live and act consistently. Let him seek opportunity to express his convictions. With convictions of the truth and a good character back of his words one man "can chase a thousand." The Lord will abundantly reward those who labor with him to destroy the secret works of darkness.

REV. J. C. K. MILLIGAN, NEW YORK CITY.

1. Not by harsh words, epithets and denunciation of secretists or secretism. These indicate weakness, rouse opposition, and prevent the hearing of facts, arguments and persuasive truth. 2. By the Gospel. "By the fear of the Lord men depart from evil." The Gospel alone converts men. Conversion and not destruction is the aim of Christ and Christians. Christ "lifted up draws all men to him." This includes anti-secretism; yet preaching the latter as the whole sermon is rarely if ever profitable. Converts thus won may rest in anti-secretism, but fail of real conversion, and be haters of secretism and untrustworthy, but saved men will die to sin and live to righteousness. 3. By making our Christianity benevolent, brotherly and helpful to all Christians. A united church speaking the truth in love, receiving the weak in faith without disputations, using the discipline of patient instruction, loving entreaty, consistent Christian example and kindly forbearance, will "withstand" and uproot every system of evil, worldliness and sin; but this unity must first come in answer to Christ's prayer, John 17: 21, and ours with his, Eph. 4: 3, 13.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON.

BY REV. J. S. T. MILLIGAN.

But of that day and hour knoweth no man; no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only. Matt. 24:36.

Under the heading "The Imminence of Christ's Coming" our dear friend and brother, Rev. H. H. Hinman, takes exception to my view of the advent and millennium. This is done in his usual kind, concise and forceful manner. He gainsays nothing I have written in a special, but only in a general sense. The same is true of Bro. Galloway in his sermonette on the same subject. This in my view is a subject requiring special treatment, and hence conceding each of the five premises laid down by Bro. Hinman, I do not accept his conclusion.

His first is that "It is impossible to predict the time of his coming." This is true in the sense of his quotation, Matt. 24:36, so far as the "day or the hour" is concerned, whether viewed literally or prophetically (a day for a year), and as true in the Post as in the Pre-millennial view. His second, "It will come on a repentant and on an un-prepared world," we also concede, for at the close of the thousand years "the devil will be loosed" and the great "army of Gog and Magog" will be gathered; "The number as the sands of the sea," Rev. 20:7,8, "to compass the camp of the saints:" just as many, just as mighty, just as impenitent and unprepared as those gathered for the battle of Armageddon. which comes before the thousand years. Thus we find circumstances similar to his views both before and after the millennium. I as cheerfully concede his third and fourth, and think them compatible with Christ coming to convert men, to receive them to himself at death, to reign in the person of his saints or to personally judge the world in righteousness at the close of the thousand years.

His fifth is, however, the main one, and the one on which he chiefly relies, but is the one where his conclusion is most at fault. I concede, however, that Christ's coming for the work of grace, in the death of saints and now for the reign of righteousness, is imminent. His Word teaches uniformly that "now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation;" and as to death, "that we know not what a day or an hour may bring forth." The day of the coming of Christ to inaugurate the New Testament dispensation of grace in his church was also as imminent when Christ spoke in Matthew, Mark and Luke as was his coming in judgment to destroy Jerusalem; but these events are both past, and the duty of watching for them is now no longer required.

But as to watching commanded by Christ two thousand years ago the brother says, "Now in the nature of things, it is impossible to 'watch' for an event that is more than a thousand years in the future." Then by the brother's own reasoning Christ did not allude to either an advent before or after the millennium, for one was two, and the other three thousand years "in the future" when he said, "I say unto all, watch." So his argument from watching is against him. In 1 Thess. 5, in 1 Cor. 1:8 and in Titus 2:12,13 there is no allusion to either watching or imminence, but to deny ungodliness," "live soberly," and "look for the blessed hope," all just as proper for a Post-millennial coming as any other. These duties belong to the millennial as well as to other ages, in view of judgment at its close.

Do our friends forget that earth is still to some extent to be the abode of sin even in the millennium, that even the end of the 1,000 years is to reveal the Gog and Magog army of sinners? Do they forget that during this time sinners shall die, that submission to Christ shall be to some extent feigned? Did they even think of the discrepancy there would be between a glorified Christ and glorified saints on earth, with these few wicked and reprobate sinners yet in the flesh, and the many unconverted sinners to be brought into being by whom? By glorified saints? or by these undisguised reprobate sinners still on earth? Isaiah says, "The child shall die an hundred years old, and the sinner being a hundred years old shall be accursed." The words surely indicate that children shall be born and die, and that sinners shall live and die and be accursed. But the glorified can neither be born nor die nor sin nor suffer nor give birth.

A GOOD CUP OF TEA.

How Easily It May Be Made With a Little Care.

Have good tea to begin with; then be sure that you have freshly drawn, pure and filtered water of which to make the beverage. The water must not have been standing for hours exposed to the weather nor simmering on the range. It must be fresh, and then, if you have a brisk fire or the hot flame of an alcohol lamp, bring it quickly to the boil. A flat bottomed kettle is to be preferred, as it has a broad surface to expose to the heat, and the boiling is soon accomplished. Water is boiling when it bubbles and the steam comes in white puffs from the spout of the kettle. It does not boil when it begins to simmer and to sing. That is only the sign that it is near to boiling. You must make your tea when the water has just boiled. A kettle which has been standing on the back of a stove all day, filled up now and then by a dipper or two more of water, will not make good tea. You must boil the water on purpose.

An earthen pot is better for tea than a metal one. Pour a little boiling water in the pot to heat it, and after a minute or two pour it out. Now put a teaspoonful of tea for every cup of hot water—an even, not a heaping, spoonful—and add an extra one for the pot. Pour on as much water as will fill the number of cups you wish to make. Let it stand two minutes; then, with a long handled spoon, stir the leaves once through the water and instantly cover the pot again. Three minutes more, and your tea is done. Never let tea steep or boil or stand a long time. It is a quick, neat, nice process from beginning to end.

How Lemons Will Benefit the Lungs.

Lemons are an excellent remedy in pulmonary diseases. When used for lung trouble from 6 to 9 a day should be used. More juice is obtained from lemons by boiling them. Put the lemons in cold water and bring slowly to a boil. Boil slowly until they begin to soften. Remove from the water, and when cold enough to handle squeeze until the juice is extracted, strain and add enough loaf or crushed sugar to make it palatable, being careful not to make it too sweet. Add about twice as much water as there is juice. This preparation may be made every morning, or enough may be prepared one day to last three or four days; but it must be kept in a cool place.

How to Choose Floor Coverings.

For housewives of moderate means, with one servant, living in a small house or apartment, rooms can be kept clean with less labor if the floors or margins of them are stained and the center covered with a rug, which can be lifted every few weeks and taken to the yard or roof and shaken and thoroughly brushed. A good Smyrna rug will stand hard wear for ten years, longer than the best carpet will present a respectable appearance.

For bedrooms, whether for city or country, it has long been conceded that matting is the best, cheapest and most sanitary and artistic substitute. Good matting will give satisfaction for three years if turned once during that time and wiped once a month with a cloth wrung out of warm water containing a little soda.

It is more than possible, however, that matting, which has so long held the field, will be superseded by a comparatively new material called "floor fiber." It is as flexible as the best Chinese matting, is neat and unobtrusive in design, comes in many soft colors, and can be sewed together and bound like carpet. It forms one of the best backgrounds for rugs, and, it is said, will be largely used for dadoes as well as for ceilings. For hammock and floor and piazza cushions it is cool, durable and unrivaled from any point of view.

How to Prevent Black and Blue Marks.

Immediately after the accident mix an equal quantity of capsicum annuum with mucilage made of gum arabic. To this add a few drops of glycerin. The bruised surface should be carefully cleansed and dried, then painted all over with the capsicum preparation. Use a camel's hair brush and allow it to dry. Then put on the second or third coat as soon as the first is entirely absorbed. A medical journal is authority for the statement that if this course is pursued immediately after the injury, discoloration of the bruised tissue will be wholly prevented. It is also said that this remedy is unequaled as a cure for rheumatism or stiffness of the neck.

How to Mix Good Mustard.

Four tablespoonfuls best English mustard, 2 teaspoonfuls salt, 2 teaspoonfuls white sugar, 2 teaspoonfuls salad oil, vinegar to make smooth paste. Rub the oil into the mustard with a wooden or silver spoon until absorbed. Wet with vinegar to a stiff paste. Add the other ingredients, rubbing together thoroughly and adding more and more vinegar until consistency of cake dough. Beat five minutes and bottle. This will be mellowed enough for use in two days.

How to Make Brown Bread.

One cup of Indian meal, 2 heaping cups of rye meal, a teaspoonful of soda and 1 of salt, a cup of molasses. Mix well together, add a pint of hot water to the molasses and stir into meal and beat smooth. Put in a pudding dish or a lard pail and cover tightly and boil 3 hours in a pot of boiling water. Add raisins if cared for.

How to Wash Blankets.

Cut up some good yellow soap and boil it to a jelly with soft water. Put some of the boiled soap in warm, soft water, adding a large tablespoonful of ammonia to every tub of water to make a good lather. Wash the blankets in two lathers of this kind, then rinse in plenty of warm water slightly blued. Wring out thoroughly, shake them to raise the nap and hang out to dry. They will be much improved by being shaken twice more during the latter process. Take the blankets in at night before the dew falls, place them in a clothesbasket, cover with a cloth and stand in the kitchen. If possible, they should be hung out of doors for three or four successive days to dry thoroughly, and care should be taken to select a sunshiny, breezy day for the washing.

How to Cure Warts.

Apply twice or thrice daily some aromatic vinegar with a very fine camel's hair brush, taking the greatest care not to touch the surrounding skin. A course of epsom salts is also likely to cure the disposition to warts.

The Christian Cynosure.

REV. M. A. GAULT, - - - Editor.
WM. I. PHILLIPS, - - - Publisher.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 1, 1897.

OUR NEW PLAN OF WORK.

For several years two subjects have increasingly demanded attention in the meetings of the Board of Directors of the N. C. A., but until recently no decided change has been agreed upon. As our friends know, a gradual and hopeful development of the anti-secrecy movement has resulted in the establishment of vigorous auxiliary associations in various parts of the country, and the continuous employment of such efficient district secretaries and lecturers as Rev. W. B. Stoddard, with headquarters at Washington, D. C.; Rev. J. P. Stoddard at Boston; Rev. P. B. Williams on the Pacific Coast and Rev. Wm. Fenton in Minnesota.

Meantime the great Central States, in which the present movement had its birth and from which its principal support has always been derived, have been neglected and for some years no regular lecturers have been employed therein. The connection between the national headquarters and the bulk of its constituency has thus been suffered to relax by degrees.

When Rev. M. A. Gault came to us two years ago with his known ability as a public speaker and long experience as a lecturer on reform questions, it was hoped that the difficulty might be remedied; but the exacting duties of editing a weekly paper has kept him pretty closely tied to the office, while the lack of means has prevented the employment of another man to take the field as a lecturer.

The other question has been whether or not the Cynosure should continue to be a general newspaper, with departments devoted to general news, farming and gardening, temperance work, home life, discussions on adventism, peace, divine healing, S. S. Bible Lesson and a multitude of other topics important in themselves, but to which other publications are specially devoted. In this day of specialization of work, whoever would make a strong impression upon the nation at large needs to concentrate all his energies in one direction, and this is no less true of organizations than of individuals.

Readers of the Cynosure will remember that at the Annual Meeting of the Association two years ago a report favoring the above idea was referred to the Board of Directors and adopted by them.

Connected with the forgoing is the notable tendency lately manifested by some of the leading religious publications to reduce the size of their pages to a form more convenient for readers, and better fitted for permanent preservation.

Some of the Directors have long thought that a monthly gotten up in attractive style and on better paper, packed with the very best of what is now printed in the Cynosure, and devoted exclusively to the defence of the kingdom of Christ from the assaults of the secret lodges, would, in this busy age, obtain a circulation much larger than at present, and consequently be far more effective in promoting the cause of anti-secrecy than our paper in its present form can ever become.

The Board of Directors has considered the matter carefully and prayerfully, and has not failed to take into consideration the numerous objections that many friends of the cause will see to the change, but has finally decided that, beginning with May 1, 1897, the Cynosure shall be published monthly, having thirty-two pages with an illustrated cover and costing one dollar per year.

This change will save many hundred dollars per year previously spent in printing matter having no relation, whatever, to the cause of anti-secrecy and will enable Brethren Gault and Phillips to go together in apostolic fashion and hold meetings and conventions in all the States easily accessible from Chicago. It is thought that they can devote at least one-half of their time to field work, and thus come into closer touch with that portion of our constituency which has been too long neglected. During their absence from headquarters an office clerk will attend to correspondence, and sell books and tracts as heretofore.

Subscribers who have paid in advance will find the publisher authorized to make equitable and satisfactory adjustments with them. We shall be able to hear from our agents in the field only once a month, and we hope that their reports, always interesting, will in future be much more so.

The able and faithful contributors to the columns of the Cynosure will bear in mind that no extended discussion can be admitted on any topic except that which called the paper into existence, and that in writing on that subject they must make each and every sentence, nay, every word, express all the meaning possible.

We trust that the circulation of the Cynosure in its new and popular form may be largely increased. At one dollar per year many will be able to take it, who would not feel that they could do so at the former price. We expect that our subscribers can get others to contribute one dollar per year to the work and receive the paper in return. This will perhaps be the most pleasant way to extend the subscription list. A monthly, devoted exclusively to our work, reaching ten thousand families will be far more effective for good than a general paper reaching three thousand families each week. We are satisfied that this result can be attained. Let each subscriber obtain three or four new readers and the work is done.

We do not know that more needs be said. Our readers are men and women who believe in God and are seeking to do all that in them lies to hasten the coming of his kingdom on earth. They know that among the foes which resist that coming world-wide enterprise, none is more deadly, more determined than the lodge demon, who in his thousand disguises seduces men from their faith in Christ and his church. It is possible that they by one strong and united effort should much more widely than heretofore extend the knowledge of the truth for which the National Christian Association and the Christian Cynosure contend. We believe that they will do it, and that the changes thus announced will be the introduction to the most successful period in our history.

By order of the Board of Directors.

FREEMASONRY S HOLD ON GREAT BRITAIN.

Secret societies have not the hold here upon people which they have in America, I am glad to say. There is not, so far as I know, any anti-secret organization in this country; nor any one who is conspicuously fighting secret societies. I believe the best way to stem the tide of this evil is to preach a full and pure Gospel, and pray much for the Holy Spirit to give effect to the Word. I have faith in the "expulsive power" of the cross and the throne of Jesus Christ, and very little faith in anything else. Is there not danger when one confines his attention to one evil that he shall degenerate into a faddist?

The above note came last week from the pastor of a congregation in Belfast, Ireland. Many years ago he was a pastor in Ohio, and a co-worker with the writer in the National Reform field. Is it a well-ground joy he takes from the impression that secret societies have not the hold there upon people which they have in America; and is this a sufficient excuse for the fact that they are without any anti-secret organization, or any who are conspicuously fighting secret sosieties?

We are somewhat suspicious that the dear brother, like many pastors we know, is so busy with other forms of church work that he overlooks this hidden and dangerous anti-Christ. The lodge is an enemy in ambush, working by secret tactics and strategy, and unless a minister is often on his watch-tower he is in great danger of being deceived as to the number, extent and influence of secret orders. We are confirmed in our suspicion that the brother is not sufficiently awake on this question from the following testimony in a recent letter from Dr. James Kerr, of Glasgow, Scotland, who wrote:

"I very gladly respond to your request to render what assistance is possible to me in organizing a movement to resist the present alarming invasion of these countries by secret oath-bound associations, and especially Freemasonry. The coming sovereign of the British Empire is now the present Grand Master of the Masonic lodges of Great Britain, and this contributes very tangibly to the extension of 'the craft' throughout the United Kingdom. The heads of municipalities, as provosts and mayors, are drawn into the order on such occasions as the laying of foundation-stones of public buildings, as they deem themselves bound to qualify for the performance of such functions in a semi-pagan fashion by initiation into the Masonic order. Ministers and members of Christian churches are also, in increasing numbers, being allured within the outer eddies of this devouring charyldis; and on discovering their perils have not the courage to strike out for the shores they have thoughtlessly forsaken."

Another prominent pastor and editor, Rev. R. Dunlop, of Paisley, Scotland, recently wrote us these alarming words:

"Secret societies are a great curse in Britain as well as in America. From the Prince of Wales, down to the artisan and laborer, Masonry has a large part of the population in its grasp. Ministers of various denominations are identified with it, and speak of it in terms of highest commendation. In our publications we have occasional articles against Masonry and other secret societies; but there is no active organization in the country to do battle with the accursed system of secrecy."

A London correspondent wrote us last December: "Freemasonry is spreading rapidly over here in Great Britain in its influence over the churches. It boasts in newspapers of this fact publicly, knowing how little the public understand of its real origin, pretensions or workings."

An elder in a Scotch congregation wrote us last December: "Since the Masonic lodge was started in this place our spiritual church membership has suffered. My friend, an elder in my church who used to be zealous in open air work, prayer meetings and other church work, suddenly backslid, telling me that it was better to leave church work to the minister. The date of my brother's declension in spirituality was the date at which he was initiated into Masonic membership. The uninitiated here know nothing about Masonry, and numbers of young men are being absorbed, thinking it to be only a benevolent society."

The same correspondent writes of several other cases of young men forsaking the church for the lodge, and adds: "Few are satisfied here with remaining in the minor societies, such as the Rechabites, Foresters, etc., but sooner or later they are found to have joined the Freemasons. Lo, this great order seems to be the common parent of many families. Everywhere it is working havoc. Ministers are not only creeping in, but in many cases publicly defending Masonry as a help to morality."

What a fearful responsibility rests upon the pastors of Great Britain. Why is it that the uninitiated know nothing about Masonry and numbers of young men are being absorbed, thinking it to be only a benevolent society. Why is it that "everywhere it is working havoc" in Great Britain? Is it not because the ministers, the watchmen on Zion's walls, are so silent on this question, and none of them are "conspicuously fighting this evil?" Like this Belfast pastor, their eyes are blinded to its magnitude, and they are afraid of being called faddists. They forget that all great reformers from Elijah down to the present day were denounced as faddists or hobbiests. But when God in his providence brings a hobby to the front and saddles and bridles it, we have to ride it. There is no getting around it. The question of Baal worship in Israel was Elijah's fad. The anti-slavery question in United States was the fad of the Abolitionists, just as prohibition is now with the temperence people.

They are the enemies of these reforms who in this country speak of them as fads. They are the cowardly, time-serving ministers who scarcely ever allude to them in their pulpits who prate about preaching a pure Gospel. The purest Gospel in their estimation is that which does not interfere with a man's secret societies, his politics or his business. They are like some temperence reformers, who profess to save the drunkard by not interfering with the saloon-keeper. To try to save souls without trying to shut up the saloons and secret lodges, is like permitting batteries to shell towns and then trying to save the people by teaching them how to dodge the shells.

PRESIDENT M'KINLEY JOINS THE MYSTIC SHRINE.

"I see by the papers," writes Rev. O. T. Lee, of Iowa, "that President McKinley walks the sands and enters the Mystic Shrine, Wednesday, March 31, of this week. What an awful disgrace to the nation for its head to submit to such degrading ceremonies. The American Tyler, of March 15th, gives a long description of Mr. McKinley's Masonic career. The reason of his becoming a Mason is said to be that he observed the friendly feeling existing between Confederate and Union Masons during the war. This is certainly a low and selfish reason."

One of our exchanges says: "Acca Temple, Ancient and Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Richmond, Va., will join about twenty-five other Shriners in Alexandria, March 31, and go to Washington to help initiate President McKinley into the membership of the order. For this notable event Acca Temple is drilling nightly, so as to make a good impression. President McKinley was elected to membership in the order in Cleveland some time ago, but the initiation was postponed by reason of his many engagements incident to his election."

The Order of the Mystic Shrine was established at Mecca, Arabia, in 1608. The ritual, which is one of Ezra A. Cook's publications, was compiled at Aleppo, Arabia. It was at first organized to promote the Arabian and Egyptian Inquistion or vigilance committee to dispense justice and execute punishments upon criminals whom the tardy law did not reach. Its membership is limited to Knights Templar Freemasons of the York Rite, and to thirty-second degree of the Scotch Rite.

They seem to be a higher order of White Caps or of the Vigilance Committee which was once such a terror in California. It was first brought to this country in 1871, and was in the hands of 33rd degree Masons. It can be used with fearful effect should Freemasonry try to control this government as it did France a century ago. Why our chief magistrate at this time should subject himself to its low and degrading initiation, part of which is too obscene to be printed in these pages, is a question for serious reflection.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. P. B. Williams lectured at Fullerton and at Compton, California, last week Wednesday and Friday evenings, and preached last Sabbath at Pasadena.

—Bro. T. Fraser, of Galt, Ontario, writes of a meeting of synod in that town in which he distributed our anti-secret literature. They had discussions on the dangers from foreign immigration and rum and Romanism, but none on the secret lodge, which is sapping the life-blood of both church and state.

—A correspondent from Bloomington, Ind., writes: "They still worship secret societies and the saloons here. When poor people were suffering last winter, the names and amounts subscribed by six saloon-keepers, of Bloomington, for the relief of the poor were published in the Telephone. Thus were honored the very men who were probably the chief causes of the suffering."

—Bro. A. O. Howell, of Champaign, Ill., who is confined to his home most of the time by infirm health, writes: "It is rather hard to be alone every day for several months past. But I shall soon pass on to be forgotten on earth, but not, I trust, by the dear Saviour and my loved ones who are waiting and watching to welcome me to the home where all sin and consequent sorrow are felt and feared no more, and where the weary are forever at rest."

—Rev. A. Mayn, of Whitehall, Owen Co., Ind., writes: "In reading what Paul says, 'Wherefore, he saith, awake thou that sleepest and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light,' I have often thought that Paul knew something of the Eleusinian mysteries which are imitated by Masonry—that he knew something of the bandages being removed from the eyes, and the candidate being brought to light just after he had been emblematically raised from the dead. Notice that this expression comes right after the exhortation to reprove the works of darkness."

—Rev. W. L. Ferris, of Cherokee, Ia., writes: "Please send to my address two copies of 'Facts and Photographs.' I wish a copy might be put in the hands of every person in America. I want to say that our cause is growing in favor every day. The lodge is coming into disfavor even among many godless people; they can discern the un-American spirit of the institution. I am more and more opposed to organized secrecy. I believe Masonry is anti-state and anti-church in its very nature."

—Bro. M. L. Worcester, of Kingston, Ill., is in quite feeble health. He writes March 5: "The Great Physician, the sympathizing Jesus, knows best what is before me. I am—in this earthen vessel which is all consecrated to him—waiting and watching to do his will as it is done in heaven. I must close, my hand trembles so. I am in much pain. With kindest regards to all." We trust our readers will remember in their prayers this faithful servant of God who has so many years testified for the truth as it is in Jesus.

—Bro. Jacob Holsopple, of Geistown, Pa., writes of the Dunkards or German Baptists, of which church he is a member. He says, "Our motto is 'Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature,' etc. That we are prohibitionists is true to the fullest extent of the word. We have never tolerated those who belong to secret oath-bound societies. These are the tests of membership: no secretism, no swearing, no combatants, no conformity to the world, no going to law one with another, no unequal yoking together with unbelievers. We apply the New Testament to sin in all its phases."

—Rev. Louis F. Schwartz, of the Evangelical Lutheran church, Kansas City, writes: "Perhaps it will interest your readers to know that they are not alone in this fight against secret societies. The Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other States, comprising more than 1,300 pastors, is one solid phalanx against secret societies. And what is preached in this synod is practiced also. Members of a secret society cannot become members of the church, but must choose between Christ and Belial; leave their society or be eventually expelled from the church. Your Christian Cynosure has often helped me in my conflicts with secretists."

—A committee of the W. C. T. U. is engaged in the very laudable work of trying to persuade the Commissioners, of the District of Columbia, to prohibit the proposed exhibition of Kinetoscope pictures of a prize fight in Washington, taking the indisputable ground that the exhibition of the pictures will be quite as demoralizing and brutalizing in its effect upon those who witness it, particularly those who are young and impressionable, as the actual fight would be. Much sympathy is felt in Washington for the efforts that are being made in several State legislatures to prevent the exhibition of these pictures. There is little doubt that a few resolute officials could, if so disposed, find authority enough under the law prohibiting prize fights to stop these exhibitions, but there is little hope that they will do so.

—Dr. B. D. Collins, in a talk, in Washington, D. C., to the Y. M. C. A., on "Underground Jerusalem," aroused the explorative instinct, which is inherent in most persons to a remarkable extent, by his predictions of what might yet be found in the old city of Jerusalem which was covered by the leveling of the embankments erected by Titus while he was besieging the city. Dr. Collins says that when the new city was built it was directly on top of a portion of the old one, which he believes to contain much that would have great effect upon Biblical history, if it could be thoroughly explored. He spoke of the discoveries made by Dr. Barkley, a Baptist minister, and Lieut. Warren, an English engineer, whose investigations were stopped by the government; also of the discovery of the tablet in the outer wall of the temple, warning Gentiles to venture no further, which is now in a public museum at Constantinople. Dr. Collins was himself a member of the party which forty years ago attempted to make some explorations in underground Jerusalem, and, so far as he knows, is the only surviving member of it. Not a few of those who heard his talk expressed an earnest desire to participate in an authorized exploration of the buried city at some time, and some of them may do so. Who knows?

THE NEXT ANNUAL MEETING of the California Christian Association will be in Los Angeles, on the 14th and 15th of April next. The place of meeting and the program will be announced in due time.

PHILO CARPENTER ESSAY CONTEST.

WHO GAINED THE PRIZES.

The judges selected to examine the essays submitted for the prizes offered from the estate of Philo Carpenter met in Boston on Feb. 7, 1897. None of the committee knew or were made aware of the names of the writers, and no essays were allowed to come before the judges with any distinguishing marks. The judges first took the sealed envelopes containing the names of the writers and sealed them in a package, and deposited them with Rev. J. P. Stoddard until after the competition should be decided.

There were submitted in all twenty-one essays. The committee in open session divided these into two classes, selecting from the entire number ten which they were unanimous in considering the best. These the judges divided into three groups for extended examination. Each of these essays was carefully read by each of the judges, and judged independently. The judges appointed as the date of their final meeting, Tuesday, March 24th.

The judges met at 2 o'clock P. M. at 218 Columbus Ave., and voted by ballot. The ballot for best essay resulted in the award of the prize to the essay marked, "Frankness and Candor." The second prize in like manner was awarded to the essay marked, "Franklin Freeman." The third prize was in like manner awarded to "757."

Mr. Stoddard placed in the hands of the judges the sealed package containing the envelopes with the names of the contestants. The original seal was then broken, and the prizes were found to have been awarded to the following persons:

First: Rev. I. J. Lansing, Boston, "Secrecy and Citizenship," "Frankness and Candor."

Second: Rev. B. F. Trueblood, Boston, "Good Citizenship and the Secret Orders," "Franklin Freeman."

Third: Rev. D. M. Sleeth, Lyndon, Kansas. "757."

The judges have performed their work to the best of their ability, and with entire impartiality. They have endeavored to consider the various interests involved in the production of a good essay, not only as to matter and style, but also with regard to the spirit and originality of the author, the relevance of the subject matter and the convincing power of the essay upon candid men.

The judges do not hold themselves responsible for opinions expressed nor for the correctness of statements made in the essays, but have accepted those which seemed to them most candid, able, scholarly and convincing. (Signed)

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning April 4. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Lessons from Christ's miracles.—Math. xi, 2-6; John xiv, 8-14.

The word miracle is derived from miror, which means to wonder, and therefore signifies primarily that which excites wonder. The miracles of Christ are sometimes called wonders. They must certainly have aroused the wonder and amazement of all who witnessed them. To define a miracle so as to apply to every wonder is a difficult thing to do. But Christ's miracles were performed contrary to the natural laws of the world. The testimony in favor of these divine miracles is substantial. Eyewitnesses competent of judging have narrated the wonderful events. The character of Christ and His mission in this world corroborate this testimony. There is no more reason for doubting the miracles of Christ than any other part of His life. The fact is, the miracles were performed to dispel doubt and unbelief.

The lessons that come to us from Christ's miracles are contained in the purpose of miracles. Miracles were not only wonders, but also signs. God confirmed His word by them in both the old and new dispensations. The sacred writers in both appealed to these wonders as proofs that they were the true servants of God. In the New Testament it is said that God confirmed the testimony of the apostles by signs and wonders. In his pentecostal sermon Peter tells the Jews that Jesus Himself was approved of God by "miracles and wonders and signs." Christ constantly appeals to His works to prove His divine mission. "The works," He says, "which the Father hath given Me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of Me that the Father hath sent Me" (John v, 20, 36). "The works that I do in My Father's name, they bear witness of Me." "Though ye believe not Me, believe the works" (John x. 25. 38).

The purpose of miracles, therefore, being to prove the divine character and mission of Jesus Christ, their greatest lesson is to the weak in faith and to the doubting. It was in this character that Christ used them in both of the topical references. In the first instance John, discouraged and disheartened in prison, sends his disciples to Christ to ask Him if He was indeed the Messiah, and Jesus said to them, "Go and show John again those things which ye do see and hear—the blind receive their sight and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, and the dead are raised up." Here Christ uses miracles to strengthen weak faith. In the other case He appeals to doubting Thomas to believe Him "for the work's sake," if for nothing else. God has confirmed the claims of His Son and our Saviour. Our faith should be strengthened, our doubts should all be removed, for that Jesus Christ was and is the Son of God and all He claimed to be has been proved by wonders, signs and mighty works.

Bible Readings.—Math. viii, 5-13; ix, 27-35; xiv, 22-33; xvii, 19, 20; Mark ii, 3-12; viii, 22-25; Luke v, 1-11; xvii, 11-18; John ii, 1-11; iv, 46-54; v, 36; ix, 1-4; xi, 1-4; Acts ii, 22-24; Heb. ii, 3, 4.

Better Than Success.

Success is not always to be measured by money, position, reputation, although these visible marks of achievement are the usual spurs to ambition. In what the world calls failure God often stores the richest success. We judge by the finished building, the completed work, the rounded career. But it is to some of us given to be but torsos, fragments, suggestions only, that under other conditions might have attained successful development, but are now failures to men, although not to Him.—Jewish Messenger.

Overdoing.

Overdoing is undoing. A cake burned to a crisp is as much a failure as a cake half baked. An audience wearied, confused and vexed with too many points in a sermon or too many addresses at an anniversary is an audience hindered instead of helped. It is a great faculty to "make things go," but one of the ways to do it is to stop before going too far. —Churchman.

All For Our Good.

Many things happen that we cannot understand. But if we love God we have a right to believe that He is in all of them, and just as surely as we have that belief it will give us constant and perfect peace. Not a trouble can come to us in this life while we are trusting in God that we will not thank Him for when we get to heaven.—Churchman.

What Juniors May Do.

What one company of children can do is well illustrated by the 11 months' work of the Juniors of the Mount Morris Baptist church, New York city. They have sent a library of 114 volumes to a western Sunday school, have collected 13,620 canceled stamps and have made other benevolent and missionary gifts to the amount of $100.

Judging Christianity.

Do not judge Christianity by the conduct of the professors of religion who violate its precepts.—Christian Uplook.

Golden Rule Nuggets.

The next time you take part in a prayer meeting—which will be next week of course—do something new. Get out of your own ruts.

Spiritual frost has bitten the society that would rather be well represented at a union rally than at its own midweek prayer meeting.

The next time you visit that neighboring society which meets on a different night from your own tell who you are and whence you are.

A pastor of a church without a Christian Endeavor society sent his young people to a recent Kentucky district convention. He knew how to arouse them to active work.

Man and the Mammoth.

A remarkable discovery was made a few years ago in the sandstone rock at the Nevada state prison. The "find" was considered wonderful not only from a geological standpoint, but from an ethnological point of view also. While the convicts at the institution were unearthing some huge blocks of stone they uncovered some peculiar indentations in one of the slabs. Closer investigation proved that these queer marks were the tracks of some gigantic beast of antediluvian time—perhaps a mastodon or a mammoth. When the startling intelligence was announced to the prison officials, they had the sandstone slabs containing the tracks carefully cleaned, whereupon another wonderful discovery was made. In the same pieces of stone, sometimes at the side and sometimes between the tracks, made by the great prehistoric beast, were a series of human footprints, which proved conclusively that man and the mammoth lived not only at the same time and in the same age, but that the huge beast and the man had passed that way during the same year, and perhaps on the same day. These wonderful relics of a bygone age were found in a quarry at a depth of about 15 feet from the surface and had previously been covered with a stratum composed of hundreds of tons of stone—the accumulation of the ages that had intervened between the date upon which the tracks were made and that upon which they were revealed to the scientists. Expert geologists who have since passed an opinion on the matter say that at the time the tracks were made that which is now hard sandstone was a mucky deposit of soft sediment, probably the border of a lake, where the man had been fishing, and where the mammoth had come to bathe or drink.—St. Louis Republic.

A Wonderful Bird.

One day a wonderful bird tapped at the window of Mrs. Nansen's home at Christiania. Instantly the window was opened, and the wife of the famous arctic explorer in another moment covered the little messenger with kisses and caresses. The carrier pigeon had been away from the cottage 30 long months, but it had not forgotten the way home. It brought a note from Nansen, stating that all was going well with him and his expedition in the polar regions. Nansen had fastened a message to a carrier pigeon and turned the bird loose. The frail courier darted out into the blizzardly air. It flew like an arrow over 1,000 miles of frozen waste and then sped forward over another 1,000 miles of ocean and plains and forests and one morning entered the window of the waiting mistress and delivered the message which she had been awaiting so anxiously. We boast of human pluck, sagacity and endurance, but this loving little carrier pigeon, in its homeward flight, after an absence of 30 months, accomplished a feat so wonderful that we can only give ourselves up to the amazement and admiration which must overwhelm every one when the marvelous story is told. Mrs Nansen's pigeon is one of the wonders of the world.—Churchman.

CAT KEEPS HOUSE.

The Remarkable Performance Once a Year of Tante Sophie's Nick.

Living on the outskirts of this city, away out on Villere street in the neighborhood of St. Roch's chapel, there is a queer old character, Tante Sophie by name. Tante Sophie is a little bit of a brown Frenchwoman, whom her neighbors know scarcely at all, and who rumor says is possessed of considerable more wealth than her humble surroundings would lead one to believe.

Tante Sophie's only companion in the little one roomed, one storied cottage among the china trees is a black cat, Nick, that is a terror, not only to other felines, but to all the children and many of the grown folks of the neighborhood.

It transpires that once a year Tante Sophie leaves home, remaining away for three days at a time, reappearing as suddenly as she departs. Just where and why she goes none of her neighbors have yet discovered. The most superstitious aver that she walks the whole length of the Ridge road and back with dried peas in her shoes to do penance for her sins, while the most sensible perhaps believe that she goes by boat to St. Martinsville or elsewhere to collect her rents. But be that as it may, during the old woman's absence she leaves her house and possessions with no other protector than the cat Nick.

The intelligent feline seems perfectly adequate to the responsibility of solitary housekeeping, and to the ordinary observer Tante Sophie's cottage during her absence presents the same appearance of being occupied as when she is herself at home. Before she leaves she lights the gas and sets the door partially ajar, leaving space enough for Nick's exit and entrance. Of course the burning gas is not observed through the blinds in the daytime, and Nick goes in and out and about the place quite as he does when his mistress is at home. At night he has only to push a light block against the door to close it, when the little cottage is as cozy and habitable as may be with its glowing light shining through the chinks.

This idea of a cat's keeping house is no doubt a novel one, but Tante Sophie's plan is none the less a wise one. Nick's reputation for witchcraft makes him an adequate guardian of the effects in the superstitious eyes of her neighbors, and the house's general appearance of being inhabited probably keeps it from being entered by strangers.

At all events nobody was ever known to take advantage of Tante Sophie's absence, and Nick's housekeeping seems to be altogether successful.—New Orleans Letter in Philadelphia Times.

The Election of Judges.

Ex-President Harrison writes of "The Judicial Department of the Government" in The Ladies' Home Journal, and says with reference to the general mode of selecting judges in the majority of states: "There has been much discussion as to the proper tenure for the judicial office, and the tendency, as expressed in the later state constitutions, has been in favor of limited terms. The earlier state constitutions gave the appointment of the judges to the governor or the legislature, but along with the demand for limited terms for the judges came another for their election by the people, and in a majority of the states they are now nominated in the party conventions and elected by popular vote, just as a governor or sheriff is chosen. I do not think that either of these changes is a reform. Limited terms, if they are long, may be supported by many considerations. But short terms, combined with popular elections, have not in my opinion secured as high a judicial standard as prevailed before. A judge who must go at short intervals before a political convention for a nomination and before the people for an election cannot have the same sense of independence and security that he would have if his term were long or during good behavior. The judicial office should be so organized that men of the best abilities and attainments would enter it as a career and give their lives and their ambitions wholly to it."

Measuring Temperatures.

Messrs. Holborn and Wien are reported in the Chemiker Zeitung as having made thorough tests of the different methods of measuring high temperatures. In making these measurements three methods are known. In one of these an air thermometer of refractory material is used; the second depends on the change in the resistance of a platinum wire with change in temperature, and the third is based on the employment of a thermocouple of difficult fusible metals. The air thermometer method was valueless until recently, as suitable vessels could not be made. But now they are produced from some refractory clays and permit of measurements up to 2,732 degrees F., the results being vitiated, however, by the effects of capillarity in the interior of the vessel. The resistance method has some great disadvantages. At high temperatures the absolute resistance is generally found to increase constantly, but the coefficient of the temperature diminishes very irregularly. The third or thermopile method has proved the best, and the most favorable circuit consists of platinum and an alloy of the latter with 10 per cent of rhodium.

Pine Waste.

An estimate of the possible profit to be realized in utilizing pine stumps and pitchy waste may be made, according to The Lumber World, by assuming that every cord of fat pine will yield 40 bushels of the best quality metallic charcoal, 20 gallons of turpentine, 40 gallons of tar, 40 gallons of tar oil and 60 gallons of pyroligneous acid. By a process of redistillation this pyroligneous acid will yield 1½ to 2 gallons of alcohol, with from 4 to 6 gallons of acetic acid, besides a quantity of creosote. Calculating these first named products at the lowest usual price, the returns from a cord will net $15. Young sapwood will yield more than one-half this quantity of products. A plant for this purpose can be built in the shape of retorts, each retort of sufficient size for one-half cord of wood, at an outside expense of say $300. The time required for each charge of one-half cord of wood is eight hours, each retort thus handling 1½ cords of wood in 24 hours, resulting, therefore, in some $20 profit per day from a retort costing not more than a coke oven.

Relics of Buddha.

Within two hours' ride of Yokohama the traveler may see the most wonderful statue in the world. It is a seated image of the god Dia-butsu, but it is built upon such gigantic proportions that its height is 63½ feet. The total weight of the metal in this great statue is 450 tons, 500 pounds of which is pure gold. Near the statue are several shrines of Buddha. In one of these the visitor is shown some of the bones of Buddha and the table vessels which he used during his earthly career. In Ceylon there is a Buddhist shrine which contains one of Buddha's eyes.—St. Louis Republic.

The Latest Antitoxine.

Medicine is indeed a progressive science. True, it has made claims in the past few years that have never been substantiated, but it has made some marvelous strides within that period nevertheless.

Its latest triumph is in the discovery of another antitoxine for blood poisoning and its resulting malady, lockjaw. If it succeeds in conquering it, one of the most sinister and stubborn of human maladies will be deprived of its terrors. Almost everybody knows that blood poisoning is an exceedingly painful and usually fatal disease. Tetanus, or lockjaw, often results. The disease has its characteristic microbe, which has been recognized, isolated and reproduced by artificial culture. The tetanus antitoxine is similar in nature and action and in method of preparation to the antitoxine of diphtheria. It is put up in four forms—a dry powder, a liquid solution and in two degrees of strength. One record of a cure having been made from it in a German hospital has been officially and minutely given. It appears that a young man experienced, after a thorough wetting, severe pains and stiffness in the muscles of the neck and throat. Two days after a physician was called, who prescribed treatment, but the patient continued to get worse. Finally, after about ten days of suffering, symptoms of tetanus had developed so violently that he was transferred to a hospital. A careful examination revealed a small cut or scratch under the right ear. It had nearly healed and was so slight in outward appearance that it was not at first noticed. The patient continued to grow rapidly worse. The usual treatment seemed to be of no avail. There being no doubt of a fully developed case of tetanus, 5 grams of the so called hundred unit antitoxine were dissolved in 50 grams of water and injected hypodermically in three places on the breast. During the evening of the same day a slight improvement was observed. This condition was maintained for two or three days, when the acute symptoms gradually returned. Finally a second dose was administered, and from that time improvement was so rapid and sustained that in 16 days the patient was discharged from the hospital at his own request.

The physicians in charge maintain that this was a typical and conclusive case, in which life could not have been saved by any other treatment known. They also maintain that the disease might have been arrested and shortened had the antitoxine been administered before the case had become fully developed. The antitoxine has been used experimentally in this country and in France, the tests having been made upon animals. In every case the indications are that its use entails no injurious results.

It is a little too soon, of course, to estimate the exact value of the new remedy, but physicians seem to have great confidence in it. And physicians are proverbially conservative, as they have a reason and a right to be.

The Sioux Indians are proving successful live stock men. The worst possible Indian policy was that which fed up the government's wards in idleness, permitting them to run wild like savages between the periods of distribution of supplies. At the Sioux agency, in the arid part of the Indians' lands, which was fit only for stock grazing, a few cattle were given to the heads of families as stock. These they were not allowed to sell till the increase amounted to a given number. At the same time the Indians were told that they might raise cattle to fill the government beef contracts. This they did with such alacrity that at the Pine Ridge agency the red stockmen have brought in 600 beeves for sale.

The Chinese Equal Rights league of America, which has been incorporated at Springfield, Ills., is worthy of consideration. The object of the league is ultimately to obtain citizenship for the Chinese in America. The Chinese exclusion laws are now so stiff as to prevent Mongolians from flooding the country in such numbers as they formerly did. The number of Chinese in the United States is not increasing much. Those already here show more and more disposition to rear families in accordance with the customs of Christian people.

On your life never speak of a "salary" of so much per year. The word "salary" itself expresses the fact of a given sum paid annually. If you want to announce the fact that John Smith is paid $5,000 a year, say simply that John Smith has a salary of $5,000. Then stop unless you want to advertise your ignorance by telling people that he gets a salary of $5,000 a year.

WOULDN'T DRINK BRANDY.

A Young Soldier Refused It, Though Told It Would Save His Life.

The following true incident is from the lips of Captain Henry H. Ayer of the Third regiment of New Hampshire volunteers, relates a correspondent of the New York Voice:

"We were lying on Morris island, that God forsaken place, digging trenches, watching, fighting, taking our chances from bullets, shells and fever, but our men were patient and brave, heroes every one of them, with the granite of their hills in their blood. To show you what stuff they were made of, I will tell you of one of the boys, a member of my company.

"One day this fellow, not more than 19 years old, was brought in from the picket line badly wounded. A painful surgical operation was necessary. The surgeon examined him and prepared a glass of brandy, which he offered him. He refused to drink it. The surgeon appealed to me, saying: 'He has lost much blood, and his vitality is low. If he does not take this, I cannot answer for his life.' I said, 'Frank, to oblige me you will drink this brandy.'

"He said, 'Captain, I would do almost anything to oblige you, but not this.'

" 'Frank,' you have never disobeyed me. You must not now. I command you to drink this.'

"He looked up to me, his blue eyes dim with the anguish he endured, and replied, 'Captain, when you command me to go to the cannon's mouth I will do it if I can, but this I will not do.'

"I was getting excited, for I loved this boy as if he had been my brother, and tears I could not restrain began to flow. I cried: 'Why do you pain me so? You are putting your life in peril. You have no right to do it. Drink this for your mother's sake.'

"He trembled, and tears his agony had not wrung from him came to his eyes as he replied: 'Captain, it is for my mother's sake that I will not drink this brandy. My father died a drunkard, and she has told me I may have inherited his terrible appetite, and I promised her never to taste the deadly poison that made her a widow and me an orphan. If I die, tell her I kept my promise.' "

By that time we were both crying like girls.

"Did he die?" I cried.

"Oh, no; he made a rapid recovery. From that time my faith in brandy has been growing less."

SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE.

First Cure the Disease of Inebriety; Then the Rest Is Easy.

The management of the inebriates calls for reform. No case of drunkenness, as such, should be punished, for punishment as a rule only fixes and clinches vice as well as illness. It is right to restrain criminals for reformation, though disease or degeneration often enough underlies crime, and it is right to restrain lunatics and inebriates and even consumptives for purposes of cure. The victims of germ diseases will eventually be restrained by the state for cure and to prevent dissemination of these diseases. Inebriates who will not be cured should be put under restraint for purposes of cure.

Moral and psychic influences, as cures, no doubt have their influence, but it must be admitted that the ancient incantation as well as the modern prayer is a variety of the same attempts to move a mountain of granite with a faith no larger than a mustard seed. Disease is chemistry and mechanics; it is not mind. Prayer may relieve hunger, but it is not food in the stomach. A pledge may overcome the sensation for a time of the craving for drink by psychic influence, but it does not cure the disease of inebriety. Good resolutions organized into societies and fortified by mutual encouragement will not alone prevent such chemical mechanics as an epidemic, nor will it hold up a superstructure of total abstinence. Organizations or combines among people for moral, political, religious or other social ends are right, if not oppressive, but do not reach phenomena and things outside the control of voluntary effort. "Temperance work" must hereafter mean the cure of inebriety first and the "temperance" oragnization afterward. Scientific temperance must recognize that inebriety is a physical disease that is not controlled by moral or spiritual methods.—Dr. Leslie E. Keeley.

Alcohol and Suicide.

At the recent international congress of psychology Dr. Muller gave an interesting historical sketch of the etiology of self murder, and, by means of an elaborate series of statistics, traced to alcohol the primary cause of its marked increase of late years. The author estimates the number of suicides in Europe at 50,000 a year, thus showing that the evil is increasing at a greater rate than the population. The most favorite month for suicides is June, the least December. Early morning is chosen in preference to the night, while the mechanic class furnishes the largest number of subjects and the peasant the least. Dr. Muller considers brandy the most pernicious form of alcohol, and traces to its influence the blunting of those weapons which in the struggle for life are the most necessary to sustain the conflict.—Westminster Gazette.

Liquor In India.

So convinced were the authorities at one time that Europeans could not live in India without alcoholic stimulants that they actually prohibited the formation of temperance societies among the soldiers. The theory is now altogether changed, and the English soldiers in India today include no fewer than 20,000 total abstainers.

Danish Temperance Society.

The Denmark Temperance society has a membership of 40,000 members, and receives a government subsidy of $1,500 per year. After this year it is to receive $2,000 per year.

During the last year 190 patents have been granted to women. Among these are a scrubbing machine, a baby jumper, a bed for invalids, an improved hook and eye and an adjustable bracket for a curtain.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON II, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, APRIL 11.

Text of the Lesson, Acts x, 30-44—Memory Verses, 36-38—Golden Text, Acts x, 43—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

30. Peter and six men from Joppa (chapter xi, 12) have arrived at the house of Cornelius, the Roman centurion in Cæsarea. Cornelius was a just and God fearing man, much given to prayer and good deeds and beloved by all the Jews of the city (verses 1, 2, 22), yet not a saved man (chapter xi, 14). But God saw his earnest desire, and in the way here recorded brought Simon Peter to him as He had before brought Philip to the eunuch. Cornelius, with his kinsmen and friends, welcomed Simon Peter and the brethren, and Peter, having explained why he, a Jew, had come to uncircumcised gentiles, asks for what intent they had sent for him, and Cornelius here begins his story.

31. "A man in bright clothing" is his description of the angel who came to see him. The appearance of the angel at the sepulcher was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow (Math. xxviii, 3). Some day we, too, shall shine as the sun (Math. xiii, 43). The angel's message was, "Thy prayer is heard and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God."

32. Heaven is interested in Simon Peter also and knows just where to find him and how to make him willing to take this journey and do this work. Consider the "all things working together" in this record—the hungry man, the delayed dinner, the trance, the vision, the visitors, and everything just at the right time. Be not afraid to believe that heaven is interested in you, and have faith in God.

33. Immediately the centurion sent to Joppa. Peter did well to come, and now they are ready to hear the message from the God of heaven. They were assembled before God to hear the message from God through Peter. They wanted none of Peter's thoughts or wisdom or eloquence, but only what God had commanded him to speak. The Lord Jesus Himself only spoke what the Father commanded Him. (John xii, 49), and every messenger of the Lord may take all possible comfort from Ex. iv, 12; Jer. i, 7-9, etc.

34. "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons." Thus Peter began his message. God took great pains to teach him this (verses 11-16), and he never forgot it, but long afterward referred to it in I Pet. i, 17. See also Paul's reference to the same in Rom. ii, 11. If necessary, God will give a vision or send an angel to instruct us, but blessed are the simple and teachable who, like Mary, sit at Jesus' feet and hear His word (Luke x, 39).

35. "But in every nation he that feareth Him and worketh righteousness is accepted with Him." This does not conflict with chapter iv, 12, and the great truth that there is none other Saviour besides Jesus Christ, but wherever any one, Jew or gentile, earnestly seeks after God, He will regard them and so reveal Himself to them that they may be saved. To conclude from this verse that if we do the best we know how we are safe would be a perversion of Scripture, for by the deeds of the law (and the law is holy) no flesh can be justified (Rom. iii, 20-24).

36. "Preaching peace by Jesus Christ." Made nigh by the blood of Christ, for He is our peace, having made peace through the blood of His cross. The work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance forever. Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ (Eph. ii, 13, 14; Col. i, 20; Isa. xxxii, 17; Rom. v, 1). That which every soul needs is peace, peace with God, and it cannot be found apart from Jesus Christ.

37. "That word, I say, ye know which was published throughout all Judæa." They had heard of Jesus, they knew something of the way, but they needed clearer light. They evidently knew something of the deeds of the law, of prayer, of almsgiving, of the one living and true God and the righteousness which He required, but they knew not the way to get it. They were ignorant of God's righteousness (Rom. x, 3).

38. Jesus of Nazareth was righteous and did righteousness. He was God manifest in the flesh and set forth before men perfectly the righteousness which God required of man. He never pleased Himself nor lived unto Himself; but, being filled with the Spirit, went about showing men by word and deed the love and goodness of God. He revealed God to men; He glorified God.

39. Peter was with Him during all His public life and saw His acts and heard His words and as an eyewitness could testify that He was what He professed to be, the Son of God, the Messiah of Israel, the Saviour of sinners. He saw Him cleanse the leper, heal the sick, raise the dead and send the penitent sinner away with the assurance of all sins forgiven. He also saw Him crucified on Calvary.

40. "Him God raised up the third day and shewed Him openly." All Scripture concerning His life and death and resurrection had been fulfilled, and that to the very letter, and, as He in His lifetime had repeatedly foretold, He rose from the dead on the third day, taking out of the tomb the very same body that was put in the tomb, having the unmistakable evidences of the nails through His hands and feet and the spear thrust into His side.

41. "Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God." Unbelievers have not seen Jesus since He was crucified, but as many as 500 of the disciples saw Him at once after His resurrection (I Cor. xv, 6), and He appeared not less than ten different times, and He actually ate with them, as Peter here says (Luke xxiv, 41).

42. "It is He which was ordained of God to be the judge of quick and dead." He will judge His redeemed at His own judgment seat (Rom. xiv, 10; II Cor. v, 10). He and His redeemed will judge the nations when He shall come in glory, bringing His saints with Him (Math. xxv, 31, 32; I Cor vi, 2; Col. iii, 4), and then at the end of the thousand years, at the great white throne, He will judge the ungodly who took no part in the first resurrection.

43. "To Him give all the prophets witness that through His name whosoever believeth in Him shall receive remission of sins." See Isa. i, 18; xliii, 25; xlv, 22; Jer iii, 14; xxxi, 34; Mic. vii, 19; Ps. xxxii, 1, 2; ciii, 12, as some of the places where the prophets testify that through Him is the forgiveness of sins as a free gift without any works or merit on our part.

44. "While Peter yet spake these words the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word." And thus on uncircumcised gentiles God wrought as He had done at Pentecost on circumcised Jews, and they were there and then baptized (verses 45-48).

TORNADO AT AUSTIN.

THE CAPITAL OF TEXAS VISITED BY A SMALL CYCLONE.

Trees Split Asunder, Houses Wrecked, Lumber Yards Distributed Promiscuously—State University Damaged and a Dormitory Unroofed.

Austin, Tex., March 29.—Yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock this city and the surrounding country was visited by a terrific cyclone that did no end of damage to property and cost several lives, probably. The wind came from the southwest and blew at about sixty miles an hour for nearly twenty minutes, tearing down trees or splitting them assunder. Several large electric light towers were blown down, entailing a loss of some $4,000 or $5,000. The iron frames were twisted as though they were of the very smallest wire and will be useless. In addition to this quite a number of houses in the residence portion of the city were blown down, and in several cases narrow escapes from deaths are reported. The new and unoccupied residence of Burt McDonald, one of the prominent residents, was blown down, striking against the residence of William Vinig and narrowly escaping killing two little children that were in a room playing.

Lumber Scattered in All Directions.

The wind played havoc with several lumber yards in the eastern portion of the city, blowing piles of lumber in every direction and scattering ruin and waste on every side. The roofs of a number of residences were torn off and blown a great distance, and in addition to doing much damage to the state university, the wind blew off the entire roof of the adjoining dormitory, letting the rain drive full into the four-story building, doing great damage to the building and property of the 200 students therein, many of whom fled for their lives when the roof was carried away.

House Falls on Four Occupants.

The roof was carried 100 yards, lighting on and crushing the roof of a cottage in which four people were seated, but none was even injured, though all were entombed by falling debris. A church just to the north of the university had the entire east side blown in and was unroofed, the wind carrying the roof a block away. The residence of Dr. Graves, immediately north of the church, was lifed from its foundation, twisted completely around and set down in the same place, so badly damaged, however, that none of the doors could be opened to permit the escape of the frightened inmates.

People Badly Maimed at Clarksville.

The small town of Clarksville near this city was swept by the winds and many horses were killed by flying debris. while a number of small houses were blown down. Fortunately the inmates were not killed, but several were badly maimed. With the terrific wind came a driving rain that was little short of a flood and swept everything before it. Persons arriving on the evening trains tell, and reports from the surrounding country are to the effect, that the storm was general in this section.

DELUGE OF RAIN OVER THE STATE.

Drowns Out the Railways—Three Persons Fatally Injured.

The small town of Buda, near here, was badly handled by the storm, quite a number of houses being blown down and one or two persons killed, though their names are not obtainable owing to the fact that most of the telegraph wires are down and news is very meagre. This is the worst storm that has ever visited this section, and it has laid waste everything in its track, though fortunately so far the reports of deaths resultant are few. The storm was over in an hour and the sun came out as brightly as though nothing had happened.

Texas was visited by a general rain and wind storm yesterday. The rain was general nearly over the whole state, while the wind seems to have done its worst in the south central section. Austin and Calvert suffered most, three fatalities resulting at the latter place. Rain poured all day, the average fall being one and one-half inches, and as much as three inches in some places. All trains south of Dallas were abandoned on acount of washouts. Estimates of the amount of damage are impossible. It will be several days before details can be received from the great stretch of country included in the reach of the storm.

At Calvert alone the loss is over $100,000. At Austin it will reach the same figure. Railroads are damaged at least $100,000. At Corsicana and Calvert many fine dwellings were demolished. At Calvert an old lady and two children who were in their house were fatally injured by the collapse of the building, which was partially destroyed by fire notwithstanding the torrents of rain which were falling. Many roofs and chimneys were blown down. People living here for twenty-five years say they never witnessed such a fearful storm before. All telephone and electric as well as telegraph lines were prostrated.

Drowned in Chartiers Creek.

Pittsburg, March 29. — At McKee's Rocks, a suburb of this city, yesterday Willie DeWalt, 5 years old, and Elmer, his brother, 10 years of age, were carried off by the swollen Chartiers creek to almost instant death. The little fellows on their way home from Sunday school stopped to play on the creek bank, and Willie slipped down the embankment into the water and was carried rapidly down stream.

He called piteously for help, and Elmer, though unable to swim, heroically made an effort to save his brother, but was carried off by the swift current and both boys were drowned. The drowning was so quickly accomplished that some men at the electric light power house near by who saw the accident could not reach the scene in time to be of service.

Costly Fire at Ottumwa.

Ottumwa, Ia., March 22.—Last night fire started in a brick business block on Main street. The losses known are: Cullend & Co., dry goods, $50,000; Prugh & Co., china and dishes, $15,000; Donlan & Co., dry goods, $25,000; J. G. Meek, dry goods, $15,000; building, $60,000; office tenants, $50,000.

Sherman Thanks De Lome.

Madrid, March 25.—Secretary of State Sherman, it is semi-officially announced here, has thanked the Spanish minister at Washington, Senor Dupuy de Lome, for the conduct of Spain in releasing from imprisonment the American citizens recently set at liberty in Cuba.

TURKS BOMBARDING INSURGENTS.

Real War Going on at Malaxa, in the Island of Crete.

Canea, Island of Crete, March 26.—At 8 o'clock last evening the insurgents succeeded in blowing up the blockhouse at Malaxa with dynamite. The whole structure was soon in flames, and the Turkish warships commenced bombarding the insurgents.

The fleet fired ninety shells upon the insurgents, and some of these fell inside the blockhouse. Of the Turkish garrison, numbering sixty-four, one escaped to Nerokhuri and eighteen others to Suda. It is believed that the others perished.

Athens, March 26.—The news of the dynamiting of the Malaxa blockhouse as the culmination of a day of fierce fighting and a prolonged siege has made a tremendous sensation here. It is regarded as an event of far-reaching importance, both in its effect upon the insurgents themselves and upon the Greek mind at this stage of the crisis. It confirms the belief generally entertained here in official circles, as well as by the people at large, that the Christians in Crete are not in the least deterred by the blockade, and not in the least beguiled by the appeals of the admirals or the implied arguments of the autonomy proclamation.

Constantinople, March 27.—It was asserted here last night on what is regarded as reliable authority that in consequence of the refusal of Lord Salisbury to join in a blockade of Greek ports Germany has given notice to the powers of her intention to withdraw from the concert.

Athens, March 27.—The bombardment of Malaxa has produced a painful impression here. The newspapers are filled with indignant protests. The Cretan delegates in Athens have published a pamphlet in English protesting against autonomy and declaring that they prefer the Ottoman yoke, just as they did after the failure of the insurrection in 1866. The pamphlet closes with the declaration: "The Cretans will die if necessary for the sake of the cause of union with Greece."

Athens, March 29.—The ministers of the powers held a conference yesterday and it is stated drew up the terms of a collective note to the Greek government reuesting that the Greek troops be recalled from the frontier. It is understood that a similar note will be presented to the porte and that if either power refuses its principal ports will be blockaded.

When the Crown Prince Constantin left Athens Saturday he was given a tremendous ovation by the populace. The dominant cry was "Union and War."

Admiral Canevaro, commander of the international fleet in Cretan waters, is stated to assert that conditions in the interior of the island are so terrible, as the result of famine and hardship, that even the lepersq are leaving the lazar house; the inhabitants are panic stricken, and the dead lie by the roadside unburied.

Another Initiation Accident.

Kansas City, March 29.—Lenna R. Winslow has brought suit here in the circuit court for $2,500 damages against the Knights of the Maccabee for injuries received while being initiated into the order. Winslow claims that he was tossed in a blanket and pushed off a high plank, falling to the floor and receiving permanent injuries.

State of Manhattan Not a Joke.

Albany, N. Y., March 29.—The proposal to establish the state of Manhattan, including within its boundaries the territories now included in the greater city of New York, is now before the legislature. It was at first laughed at, but the sentiment has changed and it will be given serious consideration.

All of the Winter Wheat Killed.

Appleton, Wis., March 25.—Farmers report that practically all of the winter wheat and rye of Outaganie county has been killed during the last winter by a lack of snow to protect the grain

The unprecedented reception of our Commentary for 1896, and the steady stream of warm and yet unsolicited testimonials which have been flowing in during the past years, have stimulated greater effort for the 1897 volume.

Even though you have another you need this.

The Advance: "The leading purpose of the Sunday-school teacher should be conversion. This book is prepared for aiding along this line."

The Union Signal: "The special features of the Commentary are the excellency of the tabulated quarterly reviews, the Bible Dictionary for each quarter's lessons and the class record book bound within the same covers."

American Wesleyan: "Worth double the price to any teacher."

Free Methodist: "Fresh and inspiring, adapted to every department of Sunday-school work....Comments biblical and scholarly."

Christian World: In every sense practical and comprehensive ....Many of our teachers prefer this to any other commentary on the International Lessons.

NEWS OF THE STATE.

ITEMS WHICH WILL BE OF INTEREST TO OUR READERS.

A Condensed Report of the Proceedings in the State Senate and House, Showing What the State Lawmakers Are Doing at Springfield.

Springfield, Ills., March 24.—Governor Tanner yesterday sent to the senate the following appointments: Members of the state board of arbitration—Horace R. Calef, of Monticello; Daniel J. Keefe, of Chicago, and Joseph B. Gill, of Murphysboro. Trustees of the central hospital for insane at Jacksonville—James A. Glenn, of Ashland; F. L. Sharp, of Jacksonville; Morris Emerson, of Mount Vernon. Members of the board of commissioners of public charities—J. C. Corbus, of Mendota; R. D. Lawrence, of Springfield; William J. Calhoun, of Danville; Ephraim Banning, of Chicago; Julia C. Lathrop, of Rocfdord.

Over 300 men from Cook county were in the senate galleries yesterday. They were merchants interested in the bill to prohibit department stores. The bill was amended to include all cities of 50,000 inhabitants, and sent to third reading. The judicial apportionment bill was advanced to third reading, as was the bill appropriating $31,000 to furnish the soldiers' memorial hall in the Chicago library building. Resolutions of regret at the death of William M. Glenn were adopted by a rising vote in the house, which passed the bill amending the exemption law.

Springfield, Ills., March 25.—By a vote of 39 to 4 the senate yesterday passed the anti-department store bill and sent it to the house, where it was placed on the order of first reading. A round dozen of the senators voted in favor of the bill with the firm conviction that it is unconstitutional for the purpose of giving the supreme court a chance to pass on its legality. The following bills were passed: Providing that officers who print the official ballot shall publish the same in two newspapers; giving highway commissioners on petition of a majority of the property holders the right to reduce the width of roads to not less than forty feet; providing that a fine shall stand as an unsettled judgment after imprisonment.

Two revenue bills were reported to the house. They provide for a grand assessment every five years and fix the basis of assessment at 10 per cent. of the actual cash value. Allen's hard road bill was beaten after being debated at length. This was a bill desired by the bicyclists. The department store bill was taken up and a motion made that it be read the first time. This was hotly opposed, and a motion to suspend the rules to read the bill was pending when a motion to adjourn was carried.

Springfield, Ills., March 26.—There arrived in Springfield yesterday morning a delegation from Omaha, Neb., in the interests of the bill appropriating $100,000 for Illinois' participation in the Trans-Mississippi exposition, to be held at Omaha next fall. The delegation appeared before the senate committee in the afternoon and urged the adoption of the measure. Governor Tanner sent to the senate the following appointments, which were confirmed: Trustees of the Illinois Charitable Eye and Ear infirmary at Chicago—Dr. J. W. Pettitt, of Ottawa; Dr. Frances B. Phillips, of Bloomington; Dr. L. S. Lambert, of Galesburg. The governor has appointed J. Fred Wilcox, of Joliet, a member of the Illinois commission at the Tennessee centennial. The Torrens land title bill was read a second time in the senate and made a special order for third reading for April 1. An anti-trust bill was introduced.

An attempt to have the anti-department store bill read the first time failed in the house. The house Republican steering committee has indorsed the bill.

Springfield, Ills., March 27.—The only thing of interest done by the house yesterday was to revive the bill to force railways to carry bicycles as baggage and send it to third reading, after a lively debate.

The senate was in session about ten minutes yesterday morning, with Senator Baxter in the chair. No business of importance was transacted. Adjourned to Tuesday.

Situation Improves at Cairo.

Cairo, Ills., March 26.—The river situation here continues to improve. The Ohio has been on a stand at 51.6 feet all day, and river men believe the worst is past. A Bird's Point, Mo., special says the high wind has wrecked a number of buildings in that flood-stricken town and washed away a part of the depot platform.

Rising Nearly an Inch an Hour.

Quincy, Ills., March 25.—The Mississippi is rising at the rate of nearly an inch an hour. Families on the bottom lands at West Quincy have been driven from their homes and all roads west are flooded. Men are at work protecting the levees north of the city, but another rise of two feet will break them and flood thousands of acres.

State Notes.

R. O. Lincoln, who for forty-five years has been the owner of one of the finest farms in northern Illinois and breeder of blooded stock, is seriously sick at Piano with tuberculosis of the throat. Mr. Lincoln is 78 years old and very wealthy.

B. L. Garber was found unconscious in a Chicago alley with a bullet wound in his head. He is lying at the county hospital in a critical condition. Garber's home is in Belleville, O.

Some one in Evanston, Ills., has mutilated several books in the public library by running a red hot iron between the pages.

The Illinois Central railway has decided to use electricity in place of steam on its suburban service.

John Lattimore is to be hanged and Henry Rucker imprisoned in the penitentiary for twenty-five years for the murder of Louis Marvic at Summit, Ills., Nov. 28, 1896, so says a Chicago jury.

The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific has decided to abandon the American plan of serving meals on dining cars, and after April 1 will adopt the a la carte system.

Transvaal Raid Inquiry.

London, March 24.—The Transvaal raid inquiry was continued yesterday, Hon. W. P. Schreiner again being examined. He denied that the Boers were animated by hostility to Cecil Rhodes. Chamberlain's questions throughout were strongly critical of President Kruger's government.

Respited by President McKinley.

Santa Fe, N. M., March 24.—A telegram was received Tuesday from Washington saying that President McKinley had respited for ten days the four members of the Button gang who were to have been hanged Tuesday for the murder of ex-Sheriff Frank Chavez, May 29, 1892.

Seismic Tremors in Illinois.

Vandalia, Ills., March 24.—A slight earthquake shock was felt in this vicinity Monday night shortly before 10 o'clock. The vibration was from west to east.

Certainly before the treaty between England and the United States is finally ratified it ought to contain a clause eliminating from the subjects for mutual arbitration any matters connected with the domestic policy of either nation or any matters connected with either nation's foreign policy in regard to any other country than Great Britain and America. The United States does not want to interfere with England's action in Europe or Asia; the United States will not let England interfere with our liberty of action on this continent or in this hemisphere.

January, 1897, was the month of fires. Fifty million dollars will not cover the losses from January fires in the United States and Canada.

The states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Utah and South Dakota have each a neat little senatorial contest still on hand.

Canadian farmers have discovered a new market for the products of their stock farms. Two carloads of Canadian horses were recently sold in Boston at auction, and unusually good prices were realized.

For 1896 the balance of trade in our favor from the export of all our goods, including silver bullion, was over $350,000,000, the largest of any year in the history of the country.

1 Shoeknife.
1 Shoehammer.
1 Bottle Rubber Cement.
1 Bottle Leather Cement.
1 Harness and Saw Clamp.
1 Ball Wall.
1 Ball Shoe Thread.
1 Bunch Bristles.
4 Harness Needles.
1 Soldering Iron.
1 Bottle Soldering Fluid.
1 Box Rosin.
1 Bar Solder.
1 Directions for Use.

All these tools are full-sized, practical, neat, and cheap; not mere toys. They enable any person to do his own half-soling, boot, shoe, rubber, harness, and tinware repairing.

This Outfit is the result of years of study, experiment, and correspondence in the manufacture of Iron Lasts and Repairing Outfits; and its practical advantages need only to be seen and tried to be appreciated.

Our Improved Iron Lasts and Standard are one of the handiest tools you can have about the place. The Lasts are four in number, smooth and solid, 4, 6, 8 ,and 10 inches long, thus enabling one to half-sole all sizes of foot-wear. The Standard is made with an iron base, which can be easily fastened to the bench. No method of half-soling is now used on common work, except that of iron last and wire clinch nails. The writer of this has been in the business 20 years, and has seen the changes from the old wooden lasts and pegs to the modern method, and knows it to be complete.

Our Improved Harness and Saw Clamp is an indispensable tool in sewing a harness or filing a saw. The jaws are thrown open mechanically by a coiled spring on the bolt.

The weight of this outfit is 18 lbs. Price, all complete, packed in a neat, strong box, only $3.00.

The Home Repairing Outfit No. 2.

COMPLETE BOOT, SHOE AND RUBBER REPAIRING OUTFIT, consisting of 31 first class tools and materials. The No. 2 outfit contains the same articles as the No. 1 except ing the Harness and Soldering Tools, and is gotten up for those who have no harness or tinware repairing to do. Price of No. 2, neatly boxed, $2.00, or with the paper one year, $2.75. Price of No. 1 neatly boxed, $3.00, or with the paper one year, $3.75.

FARMERS VICTORIOUS.

Both Producers and Consumers Greatly Benefited by Legislation.

Years ago the dairymen of this country combined in an effort to place oleomargarine under government supervision and finally secured the desired end, says a writer in The Dairyman's Gazette. A couple of years ago they began a vigorous effort to place filled cheese likewise under the internal revenue department, where it should be branded and pay a tax for its existence.

Some of the filled cheese makers said that these efforts would be unproductive and that their miserable stuff had a market for itself and did not interfere with honest cheese. The law controlling filled cheese went into effect last spring, and the markets are practically bare of that brand. It is time, therefore, to see whether honest cheese has been forgotten or still has a hold upon our people. Let me quote the following from The Trade Bulletin, published in your city. Under the heading of "Cheese" that paper states:

"Arrivals have been very free, about as large as ever witnessed, and it has been so right along for some time. The output has been better than for some years, an evidence of good business. What shows well for the market also is the fact that trade has been almost entirely on home account. The only way for accounting for this is that either the consumption of cheese has increased or jobbers and small merchants have put away more cheese for winter use than customary. Perhaps there was a little of both. Good quality would naturally tend to cause increased consumption, and the fact also that there will be no winter making of filled cheese would tend to cause more fall goods to be put away."

Is not here sufficient evidence that our people still have a desire for good cheese and are ready to buy it when they can do so with any assurance of getting what they pay for? Cheese is too good an article of human food to be driven from our tables by a fraud product, and at last the government has given us relief.

There never was a finer illustration of the value of combination among farmers than in this warfare. We started out with opposition from a few of the knowing ones and interference all along the line. Gradually letters began to reach members of congress one at a time, and these individuals began to ask what was going on. Then came from dairymen's associations and produce exchanges petitions and resolutions by scores. Finally as the interest increased the telegraph wires were used because letters were too slow. Delegations visited congress and dinned in the ears of the members that something must be done. Of course the filled cheese men had their paid representatives at work, and they fought as well trained men of that class can when their whole interests are at stake. The people won, and the bill passed, despite the predictions of the knowing ones who said it could not be done.

The consumers of cheese are now offered honest cheese at reasonable prices, and the price for butter is likewise low. Thus the consumer is in nowise injured by the act, but materially aided, and the producers of butter and cheese both have a chance still for making a living from their calling.

The placing of oleomargarine and filled cheese under the supervision of the internal revenue department signalizes two of the greatest victories won by American farmers, the forerunners of the great and important fact that some day all human food products will and must be branded and sold for what they are.

Soil Injured by Stock.

There is no time of year when injury may not be done to soil by having stock run over it. But there is greater danger of this in moist, open weather in winter than at any other time in the year. There is nothing for stock to get at this season by roaming over the fields even if they are bare of snow. The poaching which pasture and meadow lands get by being trampled in late fall or open spells during the winter destroys much grass. It is not much, if any, better when the field has to be plowed in spring. The soil will turn up full of clods made by the poaching, and it will take a great deal of extra cultivation to make the plowed surface into a seed bed fit for any hoed crop.

Use the Head.

Dairying requires constant study and intelligent thought. It requires years in which to build up a profitable herd of cows and to learn how to feed and care for them and to handle the product. The man who can successfully breed and feed a dairy cow has a mind above the average. He is a student, a keen, bright business man, and you will not find this class of men dissatisfied with their business. It is the class of men who are constantly changing from one branch to another—men who do not do much figuring and cannot tell you how much their cows earned individually or collectively—who have an intense hatred for the Babcock test and for all creamery men.

The Cow Is Doing It.

The cow is saving the farmer of the plains. She is not the handsomest of his possessions, but as she is coaxed into a corner of the yard and gives her milk she does more to pay off the mortgages than any of the fancy investments of which the farmer has been so proud. The last few years have been hard ones for the dweller on the prairie claim He has found the price of grain low and the yield light. He has experimented and found the end vexatious.

In Kansas scores of creameries are being built each month. Less than ten years ago the first creamery was established in this county, and it was one of the first in the state. Now there are 15 in one county, and of the 2,600 families in the farming communities 1,700 take to the factory each morning a greater or less supply of milk. They get from $5 to $100 each month for milk the year round. The average is about $10, and the total is nearly $300,000 annually. That means much to the settlers, who are thus enabled to have a steady income not dependent on the rainfall or the winds.

The prairie women are responsible for the great advance made in this direction. They were the first to see the profit to be gained from the little things on the claim. The hens are said to have saved Nebraska, and the humble cow is doing as much for Kansas.

Keep the Cows Warm.

Some dairymen think their cows must go out in the cold to keep healthy, says an exchange. One writer said he would turn them out every day if he had to hold an umbrella over their heads. This man must be very kind, for a kind man is kind to his beasts, and it must be a source of great comfort to cows to stand and see the icicles as they form from their eyes and nose. A cow turned out for 15 minutes each day will shrink in milk. The colder the temperature where the cows are kept the more food is required to keep up the animal heat. Cold takes some of the food usually used in the formation of milk to produce this heat. A cow will never return to the full milk flow again. There will be a loss, and after a time you will see that the cow has fallen off in milk.

1. The American Rite of 13 degrees;
2. The Scotch Rite of 33 degrees;
3. The Egyptian Rite of 96 degrees.
4. The Mystic Shrine of one degree.
5. The Eastern Star of 5 degrees for Master Masons and for women. These are side degrees, and not genuine masonry.

The Symbolic degrees, or Blue Lodge of three degrees, are common to every Masonic rite, whether American, Scotch, or Egyptian, or whichever of the Masonic rites, named in Mackey's Masonic Encyclopedia one may choose to investigate.

This chart shows in the Blue Lodge the position of the Worshipful Master and some of the other officers of the lodge. Several positions of the candidate who is being initiated are also shown. In the Master Mason's degree is recognized the murder, burial and resurrection scene so full of religious significance to Freemasons.

Finney on Masonry. Cloth 75c., paper 35c.
The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By ex-Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasony Self-Convicted. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40c.
This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them.

Judge Whitney's Defence before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. 15c.
Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. 10c.
This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life-undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder and Oaths of 33 degrees. 304 pages, cloth, $1.00,
"Composed of Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees."

THE NATIONAL LEGISLATURE.

Synopsis of the Proceedings of the Lawmakers at Washington.

Washington, March 24.—The senate adopted the resolutions directing the civil service committee to inquire into the recent removals from office at South Omaha, Neb. Turpie made a long speech in favor of popular election of senators. A joint resolution was adopted for the purchase of 1,000 tents for flood sufferers. An executive session was held.

The house continued the debate on the tariff at day and night sessions. The feature of the oratory was Dolliver's speech. McLaurin of South Carolina advocated a duty on cotton.

Washington, March 25.—The senate session lasted only half an hour yesterday. Bills were introduced by Allen of Nebraska to repeal the civil service laws and to do away with educational tests as a preliminary to entering the public service, and by Hoar prohibiting vitascope and kindred exhibitions of prize fights in the District of Columbia and the territories.

The third day of the tariff debate in the house was almost as dull as the first. There were two nofable speeches, one by Grosvenor and the other by McMillin, but the rest, with the possible exception of that of Walker of Massachusetts, hardly created a ripple on the monotonous sea of speech-making.

Washington, March 26.—The senate yesterday after brief discussion referred amended credentials of John A. Henderson, of Florida, appointed to succeed ex-Senator Call, to the committee on privileges and elections and then went into executive session on the arbitration treaty. During the open session the bankruptcy bill was read in full, but not debated.

The house closed the general debate on the tariff bill at the day and night sessions, and a dozen or more speeches were made for and against the bill.

Washington, March 27.—The senate adopted a resolution asking the president for information as to the death of two American sailors at Santiago de Cuba; also resolutions asking the attorney general for information of any proposition to sell the Union Pacific railroad. It was determined to print the supreme court majority and minority opinions on railway trusts as a senate document. A memorial from the Michigan legislature was presented by McMillan protesting against the executive order at the close of the last administration consolidating pension agencies. After an executive session the senate adjourned until Monday.

The house adopted several unimportant committee amendments to the tariff bill, of which nine pages of the 162 were disposed of. The Democrats tried to get in an amendment against the trusts, but it was ruled out as not being in order until the free list was up. Dingley said the trusts would be dealt with at the proper time.

Washington, March 29.—The house made slow progress with the tariff bill Saturday, disposing of but five pages. Five amendments of minor importance were adopted, the balance of the time being taken up with discussion.

THREE MEN KILLED BY A TERRIBLE EXPLOSION.

Nitro-Glycerine and Other Chemicals the Agents of Destruction—Ten Other Persons Slightly Wounded — Details of the Disaster.

Philadelphia, March 27.—Three men were blown to atoms, and ten other persons injured by an explosion of nitro-glycerine at the Repauno Chemical works, near this city, yesterday. The dead are: James Hamilton, aged 30 years; Charles Wright, aged 25; J. T. Stiles, aged 28. All were married men. The injured are: John Langford, William Gardiner, William Tussey, John Jefferson, Peter Fellman, John Williams, Joseph Donnelly, Charles Maderia, Lizzie McGinnis and Emma Bates. The injuries were sustained mainly from concussion or from broken glass. They are not serious. The works are situated on the New Jersey side of the Delaware river, one and one half miles from Gibbstown. The dead men belonged in Paulsboro, and the injured live in Gibbstown. All were employed in the works, the women in the casing house.

Too Much Heat the Cause.

The explosion was of such terrific force that besides totally destroying the two houses it tore a hole fully eighty feet long and twenty-five feet wide in the ground upon which they had stood. It was learned that Stiles was in the separating house and Hamilton in the weighing house when the explosion occurred. Wright's duties kept him going from one to the other of the buildings, and he may have been in either. The cause is assigned to excessively high temperature in one of the houses, quantities of the explosive being in both at times. The company is engaged in the manufacture of dynamite, which necessitates the handling of nitro-glycerine, wood pulp and nitrate of soda.

Plant Had Killed Other Persons.

Its plant covers about 600 acres, and in consequence of the character of the work carried on is almost completely isolated from any habitation. The plant comprises about seventy separate small frame and iron buildings. On March 24, 1884, an explosion occurred by which nearly the entire plant was destroyed and six men were killed. That explosion was caused by the generation by nitric acid of excessive heat, and among the killed was Lamont Dupont, president of the company. He was the second of that family to meet death at the works, the first being Irene Dupont, who was killed twenty-five years ago.

AUTHOR OF BOYS' BOOKS DEAD.

"Oliver Optic" Passes Away at His Home in Boston.

Boston, March 29.—"Oliver Optic,, is dead. This news will bring to kindly remembrance in many a mature man's heart the author—William T. Adams—whose books were so popular among boys in the '60's and '70's. He wrote a whole library of books that were the delight of the boys of the generation referred to. He was 75 years old at the time of his death.

In addition to having written more juvenile works than almost any other living man, Mr. Adams was also at various times the editor of at least four different magazines for young people. During the nine years in which Our Boys and Girls was under his entire control he contributed some of his best stories to its columns as serials.

Legislation for the Hawkeye State.

Des Moines, Ia., March 29.—The private bankers carried the day in the house, and by a vote of 52 to 36 prevented the insertion of a provision requiring them to submit to examination and make reports the same as state and savings banks. The senate has passed the house bill relating to the state library. The board includes all the members of the supreme court, with the governor as chairman. The senate also passed the bill relating to roads, bridges and ferries. Farmers driving steam engines along the highway are prevented from blowing the whistles are required to have a man 100 yards in advance to look out for teams, and to stop when within 100 yards of teams or stock.

Mankato, Minn., Under Water.

St. Paul, March 24. — A Mankato, Minn., special to The Pioneer Press says: The Minnesota river went on a rampage yesterday and loss of life was one of the accompaniments. The gorge which seemed to have broken Monday night re-formed below the city during the night and has steadily grown firmer. Yesterday afternoon the water took a sudden spurt and rose two or three feet in half that many hours. Along Belgrade avenue through north Mankota yesterday afternoon a sleigh load of men was swept away by the torrent which had set in across the avenue. The drowned man was named Andrew Hanson, formerly from Winona, and another man was only saved by clinging to a tree where he was rescued with much difficulty after an hour or two of work. Several families were rescued from their houses with boats. The great flood of Monday night and yesterday has caused nearly 200 families in the lower section of this city and North Mankato to abandon their houses to the fast encroaching waters. One-half of North Mankato, a village of 700 inhabitants, is under water.

Averted a Massacre.

Corfu, March 29.—A body of armed Turks from Epirus recently threatened to massacre the people of a village near Sayada, opposite Corfu. The massacre was averted by the agent of the Austrian Lloyd Steamship company, who gave warning to the authorities.

THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

The Annual Meeting of the National Christian Association occurs on the 8th of May next. Members of the Association and all friends will please take notice and be prompt in attendance on Wednesday, May 10th, at 10 o'clock A. M, at 221 West Madison St., for the election of officers and the transaction of other important business.

SAMUEL H. SWARTZ, Pres.

MRS. M. C. BAKER, Rec. Sec'y.

The California State convention will be held in the Women's Temperance Temple in Los Angeles, April 14, 15.

The convention will begin Wednesday evening, April 14th. Among the subjects discussed as per the program are, "Origin and Character of Freemasonry," "Why Christians Should Not Unite with Secret Societies," "Holiness and Secret Societies," and addresses on other subjects by Bishop Dillon, Rev. E. B. Ebey and Secretary Williams. There is also to be a conference of seceders during the afternoon session on Thursday.

Secret orders are often spoken of as "founded on the Bible" until it is believed, like any other "lie well stuck to." But high Masonic authority repudiates this silliness, declaring that "Masonry has nothing whatever to do with the Bible. It is not founded on the Bible."

During the next two or three months there will be many local and State meetings of churches. It is impossible to send someone to such meetings from this office, but will not all readers of the Cynosure who attend such meetings remember Christ's command: "Let your light shine," and as God shall give opportunity enlighten the churches in regard to the "pagan institutions" of our land? Write for literature, and state how many leaflets you can use, and it will be sent you. If you can pay for it at the rate of 25 cents a pound do so, but if you cannot pay anything and will do the work of distributing it will be sent you.

GEORGE F. PENTECOST.

This portrait is one of the foremost and reliable evangelists of our day and once pastor of the Tompkins Avenue Congregational church, Brooklyn. Few have left as clear and radical a testimony on the secret society question. He has said, "God's Word prohibits the believer from forming alliances with the ungodly in society. Whenever the Christian surrenders himself to the society of the unbelieving world, his heart will be led away from God. This is especially true of thousands of Christian men who have deliberately yoked themselves up with unbelievers in all manner of secret societies. This course of false alliance is doing more mischief to individual Christian men by turning their hearts away from God and his service, and to the church by depleting and robbing her of her male membership, than any other one enemy of Christ. There never was a time when the cry, 'come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord,' was more needed than now."

If "Freemasonry don't amount to anything," how do you then say "So help me God," and avoid taking "the name of the Lord thy God in vain?"

Dr. Hugh Johnston, President McKinley's pastor at Washington, says that "Senator Ingalls, who outraged the moral sense of the nation by saying that politics had nothing to do with the Ten Commandments or the Sermon on the Mount, pronounced his own political death warrant when he uttered the words." We may add that the moral sense of the nation was no less shocked when this Senator attended the brutal prize fight at Carson City, and then wrote up the story of the fight for the Chicago Tribune.

Rebekah practiced deception and taught her son falsehood. She substituted one for another with a change of name. Is it part of her punishment that, even yet, her name is degraded by its application to a substituted degree put in place of Odd-fellowship, a false substitute for a falsity?

Jezebel was the royal patroness of the "ancient brethren" of Modern Freemasons. She was a votary of Astaroth with Baal, and Astaroth was akin to Venus, if not identical. Venus names a star and Zidonian licentiousness claimed astronomical relations. Naturally, the modern brethren of the "ancient brethren" whose "four hundred" fed at Jezebel's table, hold related to them the "Eastern Star." It is Jezebel's degree. Jezebel herself was an Eastern Star adoptive Mason; that is, she was a Zidonian pagan.

The second epistle of John calls those who "confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh" by the descriptive title "deceivers." It adds the title "anti-Christ." It speaks a solemn word to him who "abideth not in the doctrine of Christ." Freemasons do not abide in it, unless one can at the same time abide in what he practically repudiates. Christians are warned not to "receive" such nor bid them "Godspeed," "for he that biddeth him Godspeed is partaker of his evil deeds." Men who try to profess both religions, should read this epistle from the seventh verse onward.

The following note is from the pastor of the Congregational church at South Norwalk, Conn., and is dated March 31, 1897:

EDITOR Lodge Lamp:—I commend to your thoughtful and prayerful study the Sermon on the Mount and the parable of the Prodigal Son before you send out any more such un-Christian literature as the article "Why a Collapse Threatens," so far as it relates to the Fasherhood of God.

Yours sincerely, (Rev.) GERALD H. BEARD.

The following is the sentiment professedly complained of:

God is not the Father of all men in a religious sense. He is the Father of those only who have been truly redeemed by faith in Jesus Christ. The Holy Spirit declared to the church that "he that hath not the Son hath not the Father;" and Jesus told those that opposed his salvation and sought to climb up some other way, "Ye are of your father the devil."

The Sermon on the Mount presents the nature and character of the righteousness of the kingdom of God, and indicates the mode and manner of genuine spiritual life. The parable of the Prodigal Son has been twisted into teaching almost every doctrine under the sun. It has been suggested that the wide wandering prodigal represented the Protestant, and the selfish, selfrighteous son the Catholic church. But those who haven't "fish to fry" agree that it presents the two classes of sinners to which all men belong, and also the grace of God to the repentant prodigal. In neither of the above references, of Rev. Mr. Beard, is the lodge doctrine of the "Fatherhood of God" the thought; and if Jesus was to preach to-day the Sermon on the Mount to pastor Beard, would he not say; Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Masons and Odd-fellows, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven. (Matt. 5:20.)

THE LOST SHEEP.

[The following poem is said by Chas. A. Dana, editor of the Sun, and compiler of the Household Book of Poetry, to be, without regard to dialect, one of the most beautiful poems in the English language.]

De massa ob de sheepfol'
Dat guard de sheepfol' bin,
Looks out in de gloomerin' meadow
Whar de long night rain begin—
So he call to de hirelin' shepa'd,
"Is my sheep, is dey all come in?"
Oh, den says de hirelin' shepa'd,
"Dey's some dey's black an' thin,
An' some dey's po' ol' wedda's,
But de res' dey's all brung in,
But de res' dey's all brung in."

Den de massa ob de sheepfol',
Dat guard de sheepfol' bin,
Goes down in de gloomerin' meadows
Whar de long night rain begin—
So he le' down de ba's ob de sheepfol',
Callin' sof', "Come in, come in!"
Callin' sof', "Come in, come in!"

Den up t'ro de gloomerin' meadows,
T'ro de col' night rain an' win',
An' up t'ro do gloomerin' rain pat,
Whar de sleet fa' pie'cin thin,
De po' los' sheep ob de sheepfol'
Dey all comes gadderin' in,
De po' los' sheep ob de sheepfol'
Dey all comes gadderin' in.

SECRETISM IN THE LIGHT OF THE GOSPEL.

BY REV. S. G. SHAW.

I have nothing in particular to say now against the minor orders, some of which are called benevolent, others social, some organized for the purpose of advancing temperance, others drawn up in the great strife between capital and labor. My present stand is against those that have invaded the religious sphere; that have a form of worship, that have engrafted into their ritual and initiatory rites sacred terms and references to things divine, that pretend to teach men truth higher and more ennobling than revelation has taught, that enslave the conscience and extend to men assurance of eternal life, claiming, as not a few of them brazenly do, to be "a religion good enough for any man." I would examine such secret orders in the light of the Gospel.

1. The Gospel means development. Growth, expansion, progress toward perfection has always characterized the truth as it is in Jesus. In this respect its likeness is in nature. "First the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear." The bud develops into the flower first, then into fruit and seed. It is the same with the light of day. First there is the gray dawn, then the sunrise, after that the meridian glory. Something we say is wrong if the bud does not burst into a flower. Something is wrong if the branches of the tree do not stretch out wider and reach up higher, eager for more sunlight and dew, and yielding better shade and more fruit as the seasons pass.

Truth has a similar power of expansion. I find development in the Bible from beginning to end. There is a development in the law. Moses having received the ten commandments from God, came down out of the mountain; but returned to receive special enactments suiting the moral code to Israelitish life. Still the law was not complete, and had farther enlargement. A man was found gathering sticks on the Sabbath, and he was put in ward till Moses had enquired of the Lord what should be done to him. Zelophehad had no sons but daughters, and the question as to the disposal of his inheritance led to a recognition of the property rights of women. So all along down to our own time. The law student finds original work to do. The pleader employs methods unknown to Choate, and the legislator declines to yield everything even to Blackstone. In the Scriptural foreshadowings of the Gospel there is development. First we find a promise positive but far from explicit, "The seed of the woman shall bruise the head of the serpent." This expands, grows definite and clear as time passes, until His name was made known to Joseph, and His birth-song was sung by the angels. Even since His sacrifice was offered there has been development. The Gospel could not be hid under a bed or beneath a bushel. The apostles beginning at Jerusalem carried the truth well on to the ends of the earth. Likewise we find development in science, art, literature, philosophy—in everything that contains truth and the power to benefit mankind.

We cannot say this of secretism. Its advocates will not allow that it admits of development. De Witt Clinton said, "The principles of Masonry are essentially the same, and uniform in every place." In a standard Masonic work it is declared, "Masonry stands in no need of improvement; any attempt, therefore, to introduce the least innovation will be reprobated not by one, but by the whole fraternity." When the lambskin apron is given to the Entered Apprentice, he is told that it is "more ancient than the golden fleece or the Roman Eagle." What is this that claims to be so ancient and so incapable of improvement? Is it possible that it stands alone among systems of truth and agencies of blessing, eternal and infallible? Does it not look rather as if the light had come all along from other sources, and benefits through other channels? Does it not look as if the system were so frail and rested upon foundations so unsound that to change it in any respect would be to endanger its very existence? Mythology tells us that Minerva sprang full-armed from the head of Jove; but so far as we know, nothing has come full-armed or full-grown from the heart of God.

2. The Gospel means the brotherhood of men. It means the removal of race distinction and class boundaries. With God there is no respect of persons. So it was with Christ. He came to redeem men; not Jewish men, but men of every name. Therefore the angels sang, "Peace on earth," and universal good-will. Therefore we find the shepherds of Bethlehem going to see the babe in the manger, and the wize men from the far East offering him gifts. Fulfilling the purpose which brought him to earth he instructs the woman of Samaria, heals the Syro-Phœnician, saves the demon-possessed of Gadara and restores to health the servant of the Roman centurion. He accepts the hospitality of the Pharisee and allows the woman that was a sinner to wash his feet with her tears. He admitted no difference between men on account of class or condition. All whom he met had need of his help; and to as many as were willing to receive it, he gave it freely. For this he was censured. Nothing like it had been known. The Jew divided the world's inhabitants into Jews and Gentiles. Those who were of Israelitish extraction were his brethren, and entitled to his regard and help; but all the rest of mankind were despised and hated. The Greek divided the people of the earth into Greeks and barbarians, and favored those of his own race, while he fought with all the rest of mankind. The favor and help of Christ were available to Jew and Gentile, Greek and barbarian, upon the same terms. He taught his disciples to do as he had done. They were to preach the Gospel to every creature. When the Spirit came at Pentecost he endowed the apostles with power to preach with equal freedom in the various languages and dialects of Asia and Africa and Europe.

FREEMASONRY REJECTS CHRIST.

BY EX-PRES. JOHN G. FEE, OF BEREA COLLEGE.

It is often insisted that Masonry acknowledges God. So does the devil, Koran and the Shaster, but they do not acknowledge him as the Christian's God,—the one by whom we are to be regenerated, sanctified and redeemed. Masonry, as such, acknowledges God as the great architect—a power to swear by. Freemasonry, then, is a deceptive religion.

Freemasonry is not only a "religion," but it is an impious "religion." This will be seen in its rejection of the name of Christ in all of its official prayers; as in Masonry proper, the first three degrees of Masonry. All who attend a Masonic burial can notice the proposed omission of the name of Christ, at whose voice the sleeping dead and the very chaplain of the service shall come forth. The reason assigned for this omission is, that prayer in a Masonic lodge is to be of a general character. See Webb, page 287.

Again, in the words of another authority, "To offer prayer in the name of Christ is contrary to the universality of Masonry." That is, a professing Christian must treat the name of Christ as he does the name of Joe Smith, Mahomet or Zoroaster, as a mere man. As a pagan or an infidel he might do so, but as a Christian he may not. In the Christian religion Christ is the eternal, and the God manifest in flesh, "the Saviour from sin," and no other name is given among men whereby we can be saved. His name may not be ignored. Acts 12:10. You say in your heart you do not omit his name. But in your association with others, and in an avowed religion you do; for what you thus do through others, you do yourself.

Men have confessed to me that when as a Master Mason they opened the lodge with prayer, they knew that the use of the name of Christ was un-Masonic, and that such use could be silenced by an objector, if present. The minister and professing Christian present and consenting to such rejection of the name of Christ, "rejects the Lord that bought them."

Again, Freemasonry is flagrantly impious in cutting out the name of Christ from Scriptures which Masons quote, and thus use in their standard works. In the New Testament, 2 Thess. 3:6, we read, "Now we command you, brethren, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw." Masonry using the same text leaves out the name of Christ, and reads thus: "Now we conmmand you, brethren, that ye withdraw yourselves." The same omission in the use of the twelfth verse, and so in other places. See Mackey's Ritual, pages 348–9.

Odd-fellowship in like manner rejects the name of Christ. We cannot treat the name of Christ thus and do as he requires. "Honor the Son as we honor the Father." It is a great crime to mutilate God's Word, and thus treat it as a trivial thing. Our Lord says, "If any man shall take away the words of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city." You may say, "I do not do this myself;" but I say again, what you as a member and part of the association do through others, you do yourself, and God will hold you responsible for your fellowship and co-operation.

In conclusion, let me say, that of all devices of Satan for the subversion of the religion of Christ and correct civil government Freemasonry is the most subtle and dangerous; and that it is the duty of every man and woman loyal to Christ and civil government, to do all he or she can to show forth the anti-Christian character and dangerous tendency of secret oath-bound affiliated societies.

THE SECRET ORDER OF JESUITS.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

Jesuitry, or the Society of Jesus, is a celebrated religious order of the Roman Catholic church, which has figured largely in the ecclesiastical political history of the world for 350 years. It originated with Ignatius Loyola, a Spanish monk, in 1540. His system remains substantially the same to-day. He secured a bull from Pope Paul III., in September, 1540, sanctioning his rules. He was made first General of the order. There were five assistants to be his counsellors, but his will was superior. He is called the Black Pope. In every society there are four classes:

1. The professed, who have spent ten or twelve years in training and have taken the four vows of chastity, poverty, obedience and a promise to go as missionary to any country the Pope might designate. From this class the General is selected, and holds his office for life.

2. Coadjutors, spiritual and temporal; the former, those who have completed their studies and been admitted to holy orders, assist the professed in preaching, teaching and direction of souls; the latter, lay-brothers to whom minor and menial offices are assigned.

3. Scholastics, who, having completed their novitiate, are engaged for a long series of years in pursuing studies or teaching in the schools of the orders.

4. Novices, who, after a short trial as "postulants" for admission, are engaged for two years exclusively in spiritual exercises, prayer, meditation, ascetic reading, ascetic practices and a general course of disciplinary training.

The government of each society is by provincials appointed by the General, and holding office for three years. There are three communities in each society—professed houses or residences, colleges and novitiates. The superiors and various office-bearers in these houses are appointed by the General, and a monthly report from the society and a quarterly from the college and novitiate is made to the General detailing the character, conduct and position of each member of the society.

Its growth was phenomenal; within one century they had 22,598 societies, 24 professed houses, 669 colleges, 176 seminaries, 61 novitiates, 335 residences and 275 missionary stations, and occupied Italy, Spain, France, Portugal, Germany, England, the colonies of North and South America, India, China, Japan, South Africa. Notwithstanding their vow of poverty they had $200,000,000 when suppressed by Pope Clement XIV., in 1773. And though they had sworn to hold no office except in the order, yet, they had 24 cardinals, 6 electors of the empire, 19 princes, 21 archbishops, 120 titular bishops, at this time. Their fundamental principle is, "the end justifies the means." They may join any society that they may choose and take any obligation where they can serve their own order. They may break any law of any country that will help them.

They are above and independent of any civil power on earth. They live to bring all governments under the Pope. Their secret methods gave them unsafe power in church and state. They were a perfect system of spydom. They serve as a telephonic system, connecting the different countries with the Vatican. Their attempt upon the life of King Joseph and the treasonable conduct of their missionaries in Paraguay, a Portugese province, led to their expulsion from Portugal in September, 1759. France soon followed. It came in this way: Father Lavalette, procurator of the order in Martinigue, consigned to a commercial house in Marseilles two large and valuable cargoes. The cargoes were seized by English cruisers. Lavalette was unable to meet the bills which had been drawn on the credit of the delivery of these cargoes, and the merchants proceeded against the order. A report, highly discreditable to the society, was drawn up and a demand made for the suppression of the order.

The decree expelling the Jesuits from France was issued in 1764 Spain followed this example in circumstances of great harshness and severity in 1767. They were expelled from Prussia, Austria and Italy. The South American Republics have also banished them. The Popes have also excommunicated them, only to find that the Jesuits were stronger than they. Pope Clement XIV. suppressed them in 1773, but Pius VI. restored them. to secure their assistance in his conflict with Napoleon Bonapart. Gregory XVI. recognized them in 1831. Popes Puis IX and Leo XIII. acknowledged the order and appointed their priests to "teach and hear confessions in all nations." When the will of the Pope and the General come into collision, the result is, the submission of the Pope or his death.

BOGUS REFORMS AND INSURANCE.

In the insurance of property many conditions are imposed, the violation of which forfeits the policy, but in life insurance there are few forfeitures except for non-payment of assessments or suicide. Fraternal insurance adds to these lodge standing which creates supernumerary conditions that exceed the multiplied requirements of property insurance. Among them are, promoting and defending the lodge, spying and reporting its enemies, paying its dues and assessments, aiding its members in courts and business, and many others expressed or implied in its books or deducible from its practice. The violation of these may cause temporary or permanent suspension or expulsion and abeyance or forfeiture of insurance. It is, therefore, evident that fear of loss of standing will create anxiety in those insured in lodges and cause them carefully to guard their words and acts, and any breach of discipline will increase their solicitude in a still greater degree.

But all are subject to fears who desert free for despotic government, an equal for a master. As a reason for the transition in insurance they claim that there is no security from fraud in law, but there is in lodge oaths and rule. This is a misrepresentation of the former, and suppression of the defalcation of the latter but a confirmation of its terrors and tyranny. If true, it has been caused by lodge practices, and should not be encouraged by toleration but remedied by extirpation. This is suggested by observing the caution with which those insured in lodges guard their speech and acts, and the anxiety they manifest for the fraternal good will. It is evident that they are under a strict master.

A neighboring gentleman has placed his trust in fraternal insurance, although his experience seems to condemn it. He first tried common insurance and decided it was insecure. He then tested Odd-fellow insurance at a dollar per death, but increasing mortality made it oppressive and he withdrew, although still liable, as recently claimed by the order in Wisconsin. He finally adopted Masonic insurance, but its assessments also became insupportable and he compromised on a stated sum annually, and now thinks himself secure, but still he is troubled with misgivings. He says he can see only a single danger, the loss of standing; but by this he plainly expresses his fears and doubts and the bane of fraternal insurance. He has sold his peace and freedom for a pittance, and must submit to every rule and exaction to retain his insurance, which in the end may fail him. He cannot protect himself with the law because the conditions, the requirements of his oath, are beyond the investigation of courts.

He has been incapacitated for meetings and parade and has retired by demit, but still his anxiety continues and is shown by restraint in speech and direct and indirect advocacy of the lodge to emphasize his silence of its defects. He never tires of citing instances of lodge charity and fidelity surpassing the church to ally suspicion by flattering comparisons and now boldly argues that secrecy is universal and indispensable. But in all this the true motive may be detected or apprehended. He has paid large sums which he will lose with his standing, and as rates increase with age farther loss is threatened with a change of insurer. He is a slave to his investment, and proves that connection with the lodge is not happier in insurance than in other relations.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN CHINA.

FROM BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

The meeting places of secret lodges in China are carefully chosen with a view to concealment, and were situated for the most part in obscure mountainous and wooded districts. The more inaccessible the spot, the better suited it was for the meetings of the conspirators. The following is a description discovered by Professor Schlegel of the entrance to a lodge in the province of Shantung:

"A stone road leads to the first pass, called the Heaven-Screen Pass. Past this is the Earth-Net Pass. Next comes the Sun-Moon Pass, at which each brother is obliged to pay one mace and two candareens (about one shilling). After this pass comes a stone bridge over a river, which leads to the Hall of Fidelity and Loyalty, where are the shrines of the five ancestors, flanked on the right by a council-room and on the left by the court: here the brother must produce his capital (three Hung cash) and diploma.

"From this goes a long road along the mountain chain Huiling, girded on the one side by the mountain and on the other by the sea. At the end of this road is the outside Moss Pass, called also the Pavilion of the Black River. Thirteen Chinese miles farther on is the Golden Sparrow frontier, so called on account of the name of the mountain at whose foot it lies. Past this are four buildings. Over the front one are written the words, 'To extend the empire let righteousness flourish.' The second one is called the Palace of Justice, with the civil entrance to the left and the military entrance to the right. The lodge follows immediately."

It is not always, however, that such a well-concealed meeting-place can be discovered, and it often happens that the brethren have to meet in large and crowded cities. In such cases the formal lodge is dispensed with, and the meetings are held in the houses of the presidents or in other convenient buildings. The recruits to the ranks of the Kolao Hui are commonly gathered from the dregs of society—time expired soldiers, unemployed work-people, and professional thieves from the familiar substrata of the various lodges. In furtherance of their objects, which are for the most part disorder and rapine, modified by a keen anxiety for their own safety, these ragged regiments find it necessary to improve their personnel by enlisting as many householders as possible into their ranks. This is done in several ways.

If a man who is regarded as a desirable recruit resists the overtures and enticements of members of the lodge, steps of a stringent nature are taken to arouse in him a sense of the danger he entails by resisting the commands of the league. In such a case the householder may possibly find on his table on his return home from work a note bearing the stamp of the society, ordering him to betake himself at a certain hour to a given place, and threatening the murder of himself and family if he should dare to refuse or venture to give information to the authorities. Occasionally, when desirable, a stratagem is employed to entice the recalcitrant recruit into some secluded spot, where he is surrounded by members of the Hui, who compel him vi et armis to accompany them to the lodge. Outposts and guards keep a strict watch over the approaches to this arcane retreat, and the appearance of policemen and soldiers following in the wake of neophytes is signalled to headquarters with such speed that the aims of the invaders are almost invariably frustrated.

THREATENED WITH UPHEAVAL.

CHINESE EMPIRE IN DANGER FROM THE LODGE.

No careful reader can fail to see that the great Chinese Empire is rocking in the throes of revolution caused by the conspiracy of secret orders. The lodge question is fast becoming the absorbing one in the politics of all nations. A London daily publishes recently that 'Sun Yatsen, the Chinese doctor who was kidnaped by the officials of the Chinese Legation there, and who was subsequently released on the demand of the Marquis of Salisbury, has published an article in which he says that the value of Li Hung Chang's head will be determined by the value of the information he has taken to China anent the doings and power of the Chinese abroad.

"Sun Yatsen says that he was the leader of the conspiracy at Canton in October, 1895, to establish a constitution for China. The society which he belonged to was called the Hing-Chung-Woey, meaning 'Chinese Progressive Society.' He says it has a powerful organization in America, with a center at San Francisco and headquarters in New York. Sun Yatsen further states that the American chief is Walter Fong, the first Chinese graduate at Stamford, Conn., and that his principal colleagues are graduates of Yale, Harvard and other universities. The article includes a letter, dated Chicago, from Wong Chin Foo, who claims that the movement in the United States is in good shape.

"Many attempts to compass Sun Yatsen's death are predicted. Inquiries made among the Chinese in this city established the fact that the 'Hing-Chung-Woey' has a large and rapidly increasing membership, both in this country and China. A number of Chinamen who are promigent in Celestial circles in this city, when approached by a reporter were very reticent, but, when they were assured that their names would not be made public they consented to talk about the matter. Several of them acknowledged that such a society existed, but not one of them would say that he was a member.

"As to the purport of the organization, it was generally conceded that the Chinese subjects were dissatisfied with the ruling of the Emperor, and they were cognizant of no other way to overthrow the Emperor's power than by secret means. None of those questioned would acknowledge that the headquarters of the society is in this country, but one or two inadvertently spoke of leaders in San Francisco and New York. One of the best known Chinese merchants in this city said that the movement was for the overthrow of the present Government in China and the substitution of a republican form of government. He said that the organization was more successful in point of numbers than the most sanguine anticipations of the leaders had looked for, and he claimed that in the United States alone its adherents could be numbered with six figures.

"One, more bold than the others, volunteered this statement: 'I cannot,' he said, 'disclose anything with reference to the work of the organization, but when the time comes to strike a blow for the overthrow of the present dynasty and the formation of a republic, on American lines, the system of government now existing in China will receive a severe shock, and I think we will win.

"'Were I in China my head would pay the penalty for these words. But I think I have said enough just now to give you an idea how far-reaching our society's work has been. Like all secret bodies, we have to be reticent, and while our work is being carried on with a great deal of secrecy, we have no fear of its ultimate success.'"

SECRET SOCIETIES AND GAMBLING.

Justice Henry Carter, of the Haverhill police court, has decided that playing whist for prizes is gambling, and that if complaints are made warrants will have to be issued. The decision came about in this way: A leading member of the Pythian sisterhood received an anonymous letter warning her against the further offering of prizes for whist. The letter was shown to Judge Carter, with the result as above; and it is said that all the secret societies in Haverhill which have been running whist parties have abandoned them. Judge Carter is no crank, nor is he on principle at odds with the game of whist, and he is far from thinking that cards are devil's books.

On the contrary, he is fond of his little game, and, despite his years, he is as genial and hearty a gentleman as one could wish to meet. His decision is purely judicial, and it is difficult to see how it could be otherwise than as stated. Playing for useless knickknacks, or even for booby prizes, is as much gambling as playing for money in large or small sums. But what a shudder it must send along the vertebra of society, and up and down the backs of the pillars of our churches, when it becomes generally known that all this time, while they were believing they were harmlessly amusing themselves in card competitions, and incidentally advancing some worthy cause, they were doing that wicked thing, gambling, against which they have all their lives been raising their voices in horror.—Springfield, Mass., Republican.

LAFAYETTE.

Lafayette was a Freemason. He came from France a few years after the expulsion of the Jesuits from that country—which act is said to have been approved by him. While in the United States he invariably attended worship at Protestant churches, and when here in 1824, we are told by "The Memoir of Lafayette," published in Boston that year (page 172): "He manifested a desire to attend the religious service of the Sabbath at the church in Brattle street, where he had formerly joined in worship with Bodowin, Hancock and Cooper." We are also told that he had refused an invitation from Bishop Fenwick to attend Roman Catholic services—"at which refusal the bishop was much hurt."

Again—and there can be no doubt of the veracity of this—on two different occasions—first to an eminent Reformed Dutch clergyman, Rev. P. I. Van Pelt, and afterwards to Mr. Charles Palmer, of Richmond, Va., Lafayette said: "It is my opinion that if the liberties of this country—the United States of America—are destroyed, it will be by the subtlety of the Roman Catholic Jesuit priests, for they are the most crafty, dangerous enemies to civil and religious liberty. They have instigated most of the wars in Europe."—The Light of San Francisco.

REFINED HEATHENISM.

In the Kansas City Catholic we find an excellent article from the pen of M. N. Butler, from which we take this extract:

"Freemasonry in the United States is an English system. Albert G. Mackey, Past General Grand High Priest of the General Grand Chapter of all the Masons in this country, in his Lexicon of Freemasonry, page 402, declares: 'The religion, then, of Freemasonry, is pure theism, on which its different members engraft their own peculiar opinions; but they are not permitted to introduce them into the lodge, or to connect their truth or falsehood with the truth of Masonry.' Chase's Digest of Masonic law is the great book of decisions and every Grand Lodge in the Union is represented therein. Pages 207 and 208, affirms: 'The Jews, the Chinese, the Turks each reject either the New Testament or the Old or both, and yet we see no good reason why they should not be made Masons. In fact, Blue Lodge Masonry has nothing whatever to do with the Bible. It is not founded on the Bible; if it was, it would not be Masonry, it would be something else.'

"Thomas Smith Webb was the first standard Masonic author in this country. He is the Father of American Freemasonry. His Freemason's Monitor, page 285, says: 'So broad is the religion of Masonry and so carefully are all sectarian tenets excluded from the system, that the Christian, the Jew and the Mohammedan, in all their numberless sects and divisions, may and do harmoniously combine in its moral and intellectual work with the Buddhist, the Parsee, the Confucian and the worshipper of deity under every form.' Freemasonry, then, is pure theism, deism, or natural religion.

"Mackey's great book of Masonic Jurisprudence that governs every lodge, page 503, reads: 'Every Mason, says the old charges of 1722, "is obliged by his tenure to obey the moral law." Now, this moral law is not to be considered as confined to the decalogue of Moses, within which the ecclesiastical writers technically restrain it, but rather as alluding to what is called lex naturae, or the law of nature.' 'The universal law of nature, which the authors of the old charges have properly called the moral law, because it is, as Conybeare remarks, "a perfect collection of all those moral doctrines and precepts which have a foundation in the nature and reason of things," is therefore the only law suited in every respect to be adopted as the Masonic code.'

"Remember we are not quoting Anti-masons, but open standard publications by the highest Freemasons in America. They contain none of the so-called secrets of the order. We are giving you a fair and legitimate discussion. Go to your bookseller and enquire for those Masonic prints, and if they don't have them write to W. I. Phillips, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill., and he will procure them for you."

—Think just a moment, if the thought is endurable, of A. J. Gordon on the platform with a distiller whose rum blights Africa, saying, that if the Masons were not welcome to the church he hoped they would go out in a body, and he would go with them.

LODGE INTERFERENCE SNUBBED.

Governor Black and Lieutenant-Governor Woodruff, of New York, sat down hard upon a delegation of A. P. A.'s who waited upon them, March 16, and requested that they refuse to review a St. Patrick's day parade at Albany tomorrow. The A. P. A.'s first called at the Executive Chamber. Dr. Watkins presented to the Governor what purported to be a protest from the American Protective Association against his reviewing the sons of Erin as they march in the morning.

"By whom is this issued?" asked the Governor, after glancing through the document.

"By our secretary," replied Dr. Watkins.

The Governor said, "Good day, gentlemen," wheeled about in his chair, turned his back upon the delegation and resumed the dispatch of business of state.

Dr. Watkins and his companions retired disgusted, but thought they might have better luck with the Lieutenant-Governor. When they submitted the protest to him, Mr. Woodruff asked:

"If you, as American citizens, happened to be in Ireland on the Fourth of July, would you not resent an attempt to prevent the display of the Stars and Stripes on that day?"

"Certainly," was Dr. Watkins' reply.

"Then be as fair with the Irish Americans as you would be to the native born," was the Lieutenant-Governor's retort.

Both the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor said they would be on the reviewing stand tomorrow in accordance with their promise. Just after Mr. Black and Mr. Woodruff were nominated last fall, they were called upon by a committee of A. P. A.'s, and asked to sign pledges that they would appoint no Roman Catholic to office. Both refused to consider any such proposition. Nor would either subscribe to a single tenet of the A. P. A. faith.

MASONRY IN THE OLD WORLD.

A well educated lady from Amsterdam in Holland, who is visiting friends in this city, was recently an interesting visitor at this office. She informed us that in Holland almost every official both in civil and military life was far along in Masonry. Those who say that Masonry is but boys' play and too unimportant to contend against, should consider why President McKinley, Chauncey M. Depew, the Prince of Wales and leading officials in all governments subject themselves to the most degrading and humiliating initiation ceremonies that they may gain influence in these secret orders.

An eastern exchange says: "The publicity given to the prominent part which Oliver Belmont is now taking in Masonic affairs calls attention to the difference of the manner in which the craft is regarded by the most fashionable people in the Old World. In England, Germany and Scandinavia all the best people, royalty as well as aristocracy, are Masons, and in England especially it is just as much de rigueur for a man to belong to a first-rate lodge as it is to form part of a really good club. Here in the United States, however, the very rich people, those who have pretensions to birth and who seek to copy the English, do not, as a rule, belong to the craft."

WEALTHY CHINESE CRIMINALS.

Thirteen of the wealthiest Chinese in this country sat down to dinner, March 12, at the Auditorium hotel in this city. There was never a jollier gathering in the Auditorium; yet two of the diners are under sentence of death, and the rest of the party, with the exception of two American lawyers of San Francisco, are under sentence of life imprisonment. The amount of wealth represented at the banquet, according to the leader of the party, was $12,000,000.

The party are on their way to Washington, where they knelt before the Chinese Minister, Yang Yu, and asked for mercy and justice. Already their relatives in China have been imprisoned, and their immense estates confiscated by the government. The trouble for which these banqueters are sentenced to such heavy penalties arose through the strife of the Chinese societies in San Francisco. Correspondence between the Chinese Minister and the Chinese government resulted in an indictment by the Emperor of China against the leaders of the See Yup Society.

Two of them, Lee Kang Chow, whose wealth is placed at $4,000,000, and whose relatives are prominent in China, and Chin Wan Way, a distant relative of Li Hung Chang, were condemned to death. The others were condemned to life imprisonment. The indictments did not cause the merchants much anxiety, for they realized that while in this country they were safe. But when they learned that their vast estates in the Flowery Kingdom had been taken by the Emperor and their relatives thrown into prison, they determined to journey in a body to Washington and place their case before the Minister.

—Heathen India is fond of Masonry and builds lodges. The home of Masonry, with its sun-worship, is naturally there. It is exotic in Christian lands.

OPEN LETTER TO BISHOP McCABE

New Orleans, La., Feb. 6, 1897.

W. B. Denton, Winfield, Kan.

My Dear Brother:—I do not look on Life Insurance as you do. I think it a great Christian enterprise of noted value to the poor. This is the way to put it: Let the many give the small sums that the poor may have the large sums in case of need. If forty men had each given $100 to give the poor widow $4,000 upon the death of her husband, you would have said "all right, that is certainly commendable." Suppose eighty persons had joined in the contribution of $50 each; suppose 160 had joined by giving $25 each, it would still have been commendable. That is just about what happened when the Life Insurance company gave her $4,000.

It is all right, in my opinion. I am insured for $17,000 myself and get a great deal of comfort out of it. My premiums have gone, since 1864,—a period of 33 years—to help the company pay large sums to widows and orphans, and so far from begrudging it, I rejoice in it. Please let the poor widow read this letter. God bless and guide you. Yours faithfully,

C. C. McCabe.

Winfield, Kan., March 1, 1897.

Bishop C. C. McCabe, Fort Worth, Tex.

Dear Brother:—I thank you very much for replying to my inquiry. I am exceeding surprised at your position and statements. Like many other good people you have been too closely occupied with better things to see the bottom of this matter. If you please, have you been paying premiums for thirty-three years to help the poor or help yourself, or your family, which is the same? You certainly would not pay more to a rich corporation than you expect to receive, and if you pay less there is not much reason for "begrudging it." Instead of "the many giving the small sums that the poor may have the large sums," the opposite is more nearly the case. You must know that a very large majority of the policies do not mature. Who fail to meet their payments, the poor or the rich? The poor, of course. Occasionally a poor man dies with his policy in force; then it would not be Christian common sense to want to contribute thousands to his family while so many others are destitute.

Your premiums are mainly divided between the company and those who are able to carry their policies to the end. I knew a lady with three dependent children who was persuaded to take a $3,000 policy. After paying $116 she lapsed and could scarcely provide the most common necessities for her family. You would not "rejoice" to think that this poor woman's $116 has been paid to the company to help make up your $17,000. There is profit and loss in business, but it is a sorry business where only the loss makes the profit. This has all the marks of a lottery. Lottery is suppressed by moral law while the scheme called life insurance grows with Christian support. Would any one be so foolish as to sell you property worth $17,000, (or $1,000), on condition that if you died the property need not be paid for? You see this thing has no business foundation. It is only a money making affair which should be denounced by Christian and honest people.

There can be no such thing as life insurance, since death is certain and there is no uncertainty upon which to base insurance. You simply venture that you will pay certain sums at certain times while you live. The company ventures a certain amount that you will not. That the companies win vastly more than they lose is evident by the large salaries paid, their magnificent buildings and millions invested. Some interest is received but that is not "a drop in the bucket" in comparison to the amount accruing from cancelled policies. When you secured your policy for $17,000 you did not know but what you would die the next day. In God's estimation, how much more of a thief is the poor man who takes a pair of needed shoes than is the rich man who purposes in his heart to take several thousand dollars without giving a recompense. There are many devices to secure the fruits of other people's labor, and I expect God is no more a respecter of names and means than he is of persons.

Men will frequently let honest debts go unpaid to keep up their life insurance, thus working a hardship on the community. A man of this town was so worried for years to meet the payment of heavy premiums, that the doctor thought it caused his death. Life insurance is the direct cause of a great many suicides. Is this a soul-saving or a soul-destroying instituton? If neither, what is its tendency? "Abstain from all appearance of evil." I sincerely hope that Christians are not in the majority in this business, and if not, it could hardly be called "A great Christian enterprise." The patriarchs, apostles and many good Christians of the present day have lived and died without life insurance.

"Distribution was made unto every man according as he had need." This is quite different from life insurance benevolence (?). "Providing for honest things not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of all men." "Be not conformed to this world." "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth." These and many other passages certainly prove that life insurance is not a Christian enterprise.

The other day one of our class leaders remarked, "The lodges are ruining our church. We are over two hundred dollars behind on the preacher's salary, and I fear we cannot raise it." So many church members pay more to the lodges than to the church, and even attend them in preference to church meetings. "For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God." The incentive in most of these lodges is what they call protection, a sugar-coated term for the worst kind of life insurance. The lady whose conscience troubles her so much because she is using money which she feels does not belong to her, may not be under condemnation, as her husband joined these orders without her desire or consent; but it is dangerous consolation to imply that it is all right to secure in this way $4,000 of other people's money with an outlay of thirty-two dollars.

As per your request I read your letter to this widow. She said, "Well, that is not the way I feel about it. As I understand the Bible, life insurance is not right."

May the Lord bless and guide us all.

Very truly, W. B. Denton.

STRONG BACKBONE, AND MORE NEEDED.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 26, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—The battle is on here, and the lines are drawn; the people are taking their position against the evil thing or for it. We have the prospect for more than an ordinary meeting. Let all the friends pray and work to that end. There is victory for us here if we are willing to take up the guage of battle and win it. Heroes and heroines are what we need. Men and women who are not only loyal enough to stand and praise the heroes who fought in '76 and '61, but who are willing themselves to dare and do in the moral realm what the others did in the physical. Some will be found skulking to the rear as in all great engagements. Moral cowardice is the worst of all.

In the army the least skirmish in front would give some fellows pains in the stomach, lame back or limbs, and at once disqualify them for all service. Perhaps they wanted it about this time. The conduct of some ministers toward a convention reminds me very much of war times. Some have legitimate reasons for declining to take a part. In our coming convention we will have men who are known, tried and true. Men who can look the world and the devil in the face, knowing their duty toward this great evil, and are willing to do it; knowing their message and will tell it.

Among those who will have addresses as per program are Drs. Dillon, Bresee, and Bowers, Revs. C. B. Ebey and E. Leonardson. At the testimony meeting for some who have left the lodges, we will hear from a number of seceders, among them Mr. Hugh Todd, an architect of the city of Los Angeles, a second Ronayne, Irish by birth; initiated in the old country. When the Lord saved him he could not stand Masonry, but spewed it out. I may say, in his office he talks about it as freely as on any other subjects, and his patrons and friends all respect him for his convictions.

In the open conference we will have Rev. Will W. Logan of the U. P. church, Bro. Roberts and wife and others of the Free Methodists. We hope to enlist a great many in this phase of the work. Rev. L. C. Ebey is chairman of the committee of finance and advertising. He is a "hustler" and has all the pastors who are in sympathy with the cause to assist him.

I assisted Elder Tibbett at his quarterly meeting at Clearwater last Saturday and Sabbath. I spoke Saturday afternoon and night; led the Sabbath-school and lovefeast Sabbath morning, giving the lodges a slap at each service. I spoke again in the afternoon; conducted a praise service in the evening. A few of the lodge friends say, "I think P. B. would do more good if he would confine himself to preaching and revival work." The other hurts them worse of course. Well, I thank them heartily for all their left-handed compliments.

I spoke Wednesday night at Fullerton, to a small audience, in the Baptist church. Advertised the convention and distributed tracts and Lodge Lamps. It is thought by some they will arrange for me to return and speak again at F. I am billed and will speak to night at Compton in the M. E. church. I expect a good crowd there. P. B. Williams.

WHO WILL HELP BRO. DAVIDSON?

New Orleans, March 26, 1897.

Dear Cynosure:—I am just in receipt of a check for $5 from M. L. Worcester, of Kingston, Ill., through kindness of Rev. Wm. I. Phillips, to assist in building the new St. Matthew Baptist church. We are truly thankful to Rev. Worcester for his liberal donation. We have been and are still being greatly oppressed in our church work here.

The Louisiana Baptist State Convention will meet in the St. Matthew Baptist church in September next, and I am struggling to have our new building in readiness to entertain them. The lodge has used every imaginable opposition to me. They have contended that none but cranks will oppose the lodge, and that the Baptist denomination will show me their contempt and disapproval by ignoring me and my church, and that the great State Convention will never meet in my church; therefore, to prove their boasting true they are trying to prevent me from succeeding in my new church work, thus compelling the convention to meet in another church and enabling them to boast, "I told you so."

If God be pleased to help me succeed in finishing this new church building, it will prove of untold strength to me in the anti-secret cause. But if I am defeated and the convention is forced to meet elsewhere, it will cripple my influence in that the lodgeites will contend that my radical course against them is the cause.

My church is the only out and out anti-secret lodge church among the colored people in this city. Dear brethren, you can see the great need of helping me in this arduous undertaking; any amount contributed will be thankfully received and acknowledged through the Tribune. I have not enough on hand as yet to justify me in attempting to build. I have had several bids and I now find that we can have our church finished for $6,800 cash.

Will not every reformer send me at least a mite to help; we want to start on our church April 26. Please lend us your prayers. Yours in Christ, F. J. Davidson, 2020 Seventh St.

ON HIS KNEES TO THE MOSLEM GOD.

Coulterville, Apr. 1, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—I was very sorry to read in your last issue that we need not expect the Cynosure's visits, after May 1st, as a weekly, but as a 32-page monthly. It may be best. I hope so. I have my doubts. I find our monthlies, as a rule, have a great deal of stale news. I know your ground is not gone over so much, but I had learned to look for news in the Cynosure I could get nowhere else, and was often helped in my sermons; but it does not matter about these things, if the change is for the best. You gave us a good paper and it was growing better all the time.

Have we not come to wonderful times? Our chief magistrate bowing the knee to Allah. What a picture the President of this Christian country, and a member of the Methodist church, on his knees with the Arab, Moslem and Mohammedan, making himself their inferior, calling down fearful imprecations should he be untrue to the order. How revolting his position; stripped, with his hips higher than his nose—root hog or die. I think he had better have gone with Cleveland duck hunting.

I hope to have you give some lectures here on the lodge question. We have the Woodmen here, and they are in some of the churches. I am waiting to see the outcome. I am afraid there will be no discipline. I am afraid numbers take the place of principle many times. There is one bright reft in the clouds, "The Lord lives: the Lord reigns." Hallelujah! The Lord bless you in your great work. E. G. Elsey.

OUR POSTAL CARD SYMPOSIUM.

QUESTION—HOW CAN WE BEST WITHSTAND THE INFLUENCE OF SECRET SOCIETIES?

The following replies have been received to the above question:

MRS. HANNAH PALLISTER, BIG BEAVER, MICH.

I would say keep right on with your truths as published in the Christian Cynosure, and have no fear except that of the Lord.

REV. B. E. BERGESEN, BOSTON, MASS.

How to withstand the influence of secret societies? Reveal their secrets. There is one thing that secret societies cannot stand, and that is light. Let there be light and there will be no darkness.

SARAH POWELL GIDDINGS, ENOSBURG FALLS, VT.

Expose their crimes; bring them face to face with their victims who are always too poor to defend themselves or expose them. Thank the Lord, what is impossible with man is possible with God. They are a snare to all honorable men. Their object is to undermine the faith of the Christians and defile the church. For over 20 years I was the wife of one of their victims. They are false to each other, and all who trust them are deceived.

ELDER A. B. LIPP, SIDNEY, MO.

1. True believers must not receive them in church relation, or commune with them as Christians. Christ and the Apostles rejected them. 2. Talk to them as to gross idolaters, going in the way of Cain after the error of Baalam for reward. 3. Do not vote for them to hold office, party or no party; thus make them know that you mean what you say. 4. God will not give us power to withstand Baalism until we, like erring Israel, forsake our own sins. 5 Keep his law of separation from them religiously and politically.

REV. A. G. JOHNSON, HUNTINGTON, IND.

I think the best way would be to educate the public as to the evil of such societies; and I think the best and quickest way to educate the public would be to send out men to hold meetings on the public streets of our cities and towns. Of course these men would be slandered and imprisoned, and some would have to give their lives, but that would only arouse the public mind and they would investigate the subject, and then those devilish institutions would fall, for they are dependent on darkness for an existence.

REV. ARNEY S. BIDDLE, JERSEY CITY, N J.

1. Let the church offer something better. See what are good elements in these societies, and let the church adopt them as far as practicable. 2. Let the church bear witness against the evil elements of the societies, not because they belong to some or all secret societies, but especially because these elements are evils, and no man can conscientiously be a partaker in evil things whether in the society or out of it. 3. Magnify Christ and his church as the great force for good. No substitute can be offered for either.

ANTI CABAL, CHICAGO, ILL.

Avoid hearing a secretist as far as possible in pulpit, church or state; and guard against patronizing publications that refuse to discuss or publish the harmfulness of organized secret cabals, or decline to caution readers of the anti-Christ influences of all secret societies, and of their tendency to impoverish families and promote and perpetuate saloons, and to foster gambling, robbery, deception, lying, to throttle and handicap church and state and enable an upper few to grasp power and property at the expense of the many in the lower ranks of the orders by force and intimidation of them. Avoid contributing to individuals, corporations, charities, Sabbath school libraries or churches managed or controlled by lodgemen. Avoid the presence of secretists (by learning their signs, grips, the mark of the beast, etc) as you would avoid charlatans, mountebanks, bunko-men, assassins, pickpockets, incorrigible dupes and wolves in sheep vesture. Avoid Satan and his works, and side with the true Worshipful Master, and stand firm against secretists and other hidden powers of darkness; and not even the Supreme Most Worshipful Master of the lodges can influence, deceive or harm you individually, though championed by doctors of divinity of either of the varieties of the spotted, striped, speckled, ringstreaked, spavined or cloven-footed, trying to served two masters.

REV. A. J. M'FARLAND, KANSAS MO. CITY,

The influence of secret societies is anti-Christian. To withstand such influence Christianity must be strengthened. Christ must become the ruling influence in our lives. We must recognize and teach that everything desirable is to be found in him, and that nothing desirable is to be found outside of him. The Christian who enters a secret lodge for the purpose of finding any good thing, confesses a lack of confidence in Christ's ability to supply all his needs, for he cannot expect to find Christ there, who said, "In secret have I said nothing," and whose Word contains, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers."

PROF. D. B. WILLSON, D. D., ALLEGHENY, PA.

One method I would commend is, making known to the children in our families the evil influence of secret societies, keeping anti-secrecy literature before them and looking out for them what we know will interest them as to the evil working of these societies. I was thus held back, and Dr. Trumbull also has borne testimony to the effect of his home training. This instruction must begin early, for the gaudy dress and public display of these societies allures the young who do not yet know that all is not gold that glitters. The objections must be in the heart, and from loyalty to Christ, to hold back from these unholy alliances.

REV. J. S. COLVIN, BOOKWALTER, NEB.

I would suggest that we should seek by precept and example to encourage our people to deeper spirituality, to a more real Christian life. The truly devoted Christian has no desire to be identified with these societies, especially if he knows anything of them. This suggests the importance of the work the Cynosure is doing in revealing the true inwardness of these associations. The ministry should arm themselves with facts readily obtained or seen that demonstrate the disloyalty to Christ the Divine Master, and the organized selfishness of Freemasonry, Oddfellowship, etc., and use these facts both privately and publicly in withstanding their influence.

ELDER RUFUS SMITH, WHEATON, ILL.

Do not, as so many do, ignore them, but dissect and expose them. Show the people that they cannot be true followers of Christ and Freemasons. For years we have cannonaded the lodge with the Cynosure as our weekly gun. We have shattered their walls and made many an opening for the poor lodge victim to escape. But has not the time come when a larger gun is called for, one that will carry a larger ball and carry it farther. We are glad the Cynosure is to be enlarged to a tihirty-two page monthly. In this busy, rushing age men will more carefully read and better appreciate it. The gun will be less frequent, but can be better aimed and made to carry a larger ball and do better execution; so let us go in for the enlargement of the grand old Cynosure.

COME OUT FROM AMONG THEM.

It seems that the ministers and the Christian church of this glorious nineteenth century have gone to sleep, or else have allied themselves with the devil throughout the land through the medium of the secret Christ-rejecting lodges. Their object is to defeat the Lord of glory from coming in his glory to rule king on earth. But their craftiness will not stand, for God has got a few faithful witnesses in all parts of the land who will continue to bear testimony against these monsters of iniquity. Secret oath-bound societies corrupt courts, prevent justice and condemn the just for the unjust. God don't want his people with a cable-tow about their necks and a hoodwink over their eyes. The voice of God cries, "Come out from among them and be ye separate." 2 Cor. 6:18.—The New Orleans (La.) Tribune.

ANTI-MASONIC SPLINTERS.

—The cable-tow is a donkey halter.

—Washington practically withdrew from Masonry.

—Masonry is meanness. At the foundation it is base.

—Masonry intends to imprison and enslave the pulpit.

—The "third point of fellowship" is infamy systematized.

—Loyalty to the government makes Masonic oaths absurd.

—The way to destroy secrecy is to make it no longer secret.

—Never forget that a lodgeite, like a smoker, is addicted to a vice.

—The bitter sectarianism of lodgeism is one of its noticeable features.

—There is one effective way to demolish secrecy; that is exposure.

—Masons tell who join; we ought to tell about the many who withdraw.

—Masonry, if good, should not have been so bitterly hated by so many Masons.

—Has a minister any right to go off and hide in a secret place to worship the sun?

—To rescue lodge victims is commendable, but to save free men from joining is imperative.

—Multitudes of men have entered the lodge, discovered its unworthiness and left it again.

—There are yet seven thousand who have not bowed the knee to Baal—have not knelt and worshiped the sun.

—Thou that abhorrest idols and sendest missionaries, dost thou commit sacrilege in a sun-worshiping lodge?

—It ought to be urged more freely that the haters of Masonry are numerous among those known as Masons.

—No doubt it is just to show the blameworthiness of Lorimer, but it might be more effective to speak of Colver.

—It is nonsense to charge Masonic action, conformable to Masonic principles, to a few hot-headed members of the lodge.

—Does it make invoking double damnation on your soul any better because a minister has been weak and simple enough to do it?

—If the exposures are not true, those who make them are not perjured. If they are not perjured they have no call to be murdered.

—Common sense would save a man from becoming a Mason. The trouble is he starts with the fault of going blindly, and so lies helpless in the ditch.

—It is Masons and those who were once Masons, who are often found among its severest critics. More than one of them has said, "It is of the devil."

—The Gospel that modern sunworshipers need is no other than the Gospel preached to ancient worshipers of the sun. But lodge Galatians need a similar epistle.

—Ministers belong to it. Yes, some ministers; and then again ministers don't belong to it, and won't belong to it; and, having belonged once, cease to belong to it.

—The Scripture gives warning against being "partaker of other men's sins," and being "partaker of his evil deeds." Can a man hold full affiliation in the lodge and escape this?

—Charles Sumner and Daniel Webster were good judges of what was best for Massachusetts; possibly as wise statesmen as a few Massachusetts ministers, who think disloyal oaths endurable.

—"Hereby," as well as "hereon," the Mason swears. A Christian is in business of questionable appropriateness when he swears by a mechanic's tools, like the square and compass, yet he does swear "hereby."

—Colver, the early pastor of Tremont Temple, an able and eminent as well as godly man, had been a Mason. He came out with deep repentance and with intense joy at his deliverance. He called Masonry "Satan's masterpiece; a terrible snare to the souls of men." How sad it is to see any other minister foolishly play stool pigeon to lure immortal souls into that snare.

THE COMMON HEN.

A Woman Tells Farmers and Their Wives How to Improve Stock.

At the Minnesota farmers' institute recently Mrs. Ida Tilson told farmers and their wives how the common hen may be improved. She said:

"The common hens are of all the shapes and colors that fowls ever grow, and they are usually neglected, abused, half starved and left to shift for themselves generally; but for all that they generally pay their own way and more, too—live and thrive and bring up a big family of healthy chicks under the most discouraging circumstances.

"Take the same pains with them as you would with a stock of thoroughbreds and they will respond quickly and generously. There is something—a good deal—in blood and there is an immense deal in care and food. If you have not the cash with which to buy pure breed cocks to mate the hens with to begin with, don't think that you can do nothing to improve the common fowls.

"Common fowls can be greatly improved in point of size by always selecting the largest and best to 'keep over' to breed from, and the laying qualities can be improved by sitting only eggs from hens that are known to be the best layers. On some farms where this course has been followed year after year the fowls have greatly increased in size and rival the Leghorns and Hamburgs in egg production.

"In one case which came under my observation, in five years from the time when the improving process commenced, the average egg product from the hens had increased one-third and the average weight in the same proportion. In that time no 'fresh' blood had been introduced into the flock. The improvement was wholly due to food, care and selection of the best each year. Of course the same results could be reached in two years with thoroughbred roosters, but the woman who had these hens didn't have the thoroughbred roosters nor the money to buy them, yet she went ahead and did the best she could with the fowls she had, and her best was very good indeed. It is a fact that the third winter after her work of improvement commenced her hens laid more eggs than any other flock in the neighborhood, and there were some thoroughbred flocks among her neighbors.

"If size be your object, select your largest common hens and mate them with a rooster of some of the larger breeds; if you desire a better egg production, select the hens you know to be the best layers, and for any other special purpose select males that possess the qualities which you desire. Chickens from these crosses will be 'half blood' and much superior to common fowls. The next year mate the half breed pullets to pure cooks and keep the best of the pullets from this cross for breeding stock the third year.

"In this way always keep your best hens and pullets each year, and by using only thoroughbred cocks you will in a few years have a flock of fowls that for all practical purposes will be just as good as though you had started out with thoroughbreds."

Buff Plymouth Rocks.

The Buff Plymouth Rocks have solid, practical merits as well as an attractive shape and color; hence it is not to be wondered at that they are popular. The preference of the public today is for either white or buff colored, yellow legged and yellow skinned varieties that are good layers and present a handsome, attractive appearance when dressed for market, and those qualities are combined in our subject in a pre-eminent degree; add to which the fact that their size is about right to give a fowl or chicken dressing eight or ten pounds to the pair and their present popularity will be lasting. The Buff Rocks are popular, for their solid merits and extremely attractive appearance please the public. They stepped at once into the front rank, both in this country and in England. A writer in Feathered World says of them:

"Through heat and through cold we have received an excellent return of good sized rich brown eggs, and this when running in the open fields in both exposed and sheltered positions, and also when tested for some months in a small graveled pen. The Americans say the Buff Rock lays like the Leghorn, and we have proved that this is not vain boasting. As chickens they grow rapidly and feather unusually early and mature sooner than the original Rocks."

Do Not Market Lean Fowls.

It does not cost over 5 cents even with the heaviest feeding to produce a pound of poultry. A poor hen weighing six pounds can be gotten to the weight of eight pounds in from 10 to 20 days—seldom more than two weeks—and if the market price is 12 cents per pound she will bring 14 cents owing to her superior quality, but allowing 12½ cents per pound she will bring $1. We allude to the choicest fat fowls. The poor hen weighing six pounds will not sell for more than 10 cents per pound. Thus it will be seen that by expending 10 cents for food and making a hen very fat, not only is the expenditure for the food returned, but the profit is also much larger. In fact, by increasing the weight and improving the quality the value of the hen is nearly doubled in two weeks.

Dirty Eggs and Clean Ones.

A wholesale egg dealer was sorting over a lot of fresh laid eggs just received from the country. They were all good size, the candle test showed them to be tolerably fresh and good, but some of them were so dirty that it was difficult to say what was their original color. The question was asked as to the difference in price between the dirty and clean eggs. "Three to 4 cents per dozen, and the dirty ones are very slow of sale." The quality is the same, but the appearance kills the sale. Another thing—had not the dealer gone to the trouble to sort the eggs all would have sold for little more than the price of dirty ones. Any one who ships eggs should know better than to send dirty eggs to market. They should be kept clean in the first place, but, if by chance they do become dirty, should be thoroughly washed. Few poultrymen can stand the loss of 3 or 4 cents per dozen from this cause in these times.

Clean Eggs.

Never send eggs to market soiled in the least. Usually they can be made, with warm water, not hot, and a soft rag, to look clean. If not, use them at home, making it an invariable rule to send your eggs clean and neat in baskets that will add to and not detract from their sale. Some people prefer a brown shelled egg, others the white. It is therefore wise to assort them to meet the wants of customers. The large eggs of the Brahma, Plymouth Rock, Wyandotte or Cochin should never be mixed with those of the Leghorn, Minorca, Houdan, Polish or Hamburg, as the size of the former is larger and buyers usually prefer them and are willing to pay for what they desire. These suggestions may seem small to many.

The Christian Cynosure.

REV. M. A. GAULT, - - - Editor.
WM. I. PHILLIPS, - - - Publisher.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 8, 1897.

SITTING DOWN ON AN EXPELLED MASON.

Postmaster-General Wilson last November issued an order barring C. C. Burt, alias Hi Williams, of Detroit, from the use of the mails. According to information received at the department, Burt was an expelled Mason who has been conferring degrees upon various persons for pay. He is well remembered in Detroit, where he formerly had a law office. He was, of course, unpopular with the Masonic bodies of Detroit. He claimed to have in some way come into possession of degrees of the order up the "Rite of Memphis." He used a great lot of paraphernalia in initiating members. Detroit Masons profess never to have regarded him seriously. He is now living at 105 Columbia East. He says he is a member of the Memphis rite, which he declares is a legitimate part of Masonry.

THEY WANT WOMEN TO STAY OUT.

As an illustration of why secretists do not care for the society of women we find the following report in the New York Sun of a discussion on this point in a Brooklyn lodge room:

"When it came to the suggestion by Mr. Jones of an innovation in the shape of a resolution that women should be invited to join in the festivities, a marked difference of opinion was developed. Mr. Jones said: 'A year ago I advocated this innovation and was defeated. I don't want any political dodging again over this matter. I want each member of this society to show his colors up to the handle. I believe the presence of ladies would greatly enhance the pleasures of the banquet, and brighten up the festivities.' Mr. Cooper said; 'I am opposed to the resolution. I don't think that a place where wine drinking, smoking and talking such as we indulge in on these occasions is a suitable one for ladies.'

"Col. John Oakey, popularly known as 'Our John,' came to the aid of the women. He said: 'As we invite ladies to our regular meetings, it is not right that we should debar them from participating in our annual dinner. They won't interfere with our appetites or "drinkitites." We should be ready to forego our cigars for the charming experience of their presence. Our wives and daughters not unnaturally think it selfish for us to go off and stuff ourselves, leaving them at home.' The resolution was sidetracked at the instance of Mr. Johnson, who moved its reference to the dinner committee. Should the report be unfavorable Mrs. Jones will again renew the fight for the women in open meeting."

TWO LIVES FOR A MASONIC GRIP.

John S. Mosby, the famous Confederate Guerrilla, has made application for the Consul-generalship at Havana. The present Consul at that place is Fitzhugh Lee. Speaking of Col. Mosby, reminds us of an incident of the civil war related in the Philadelphia Times by an old soldier of Mosby's command.

At Rectorville, Va., after consulting with his officers, Col. Mosby sent an Adjutant to a squad of Union prisoners, who were closely guarded, and ordered them to form in line. He then read to them an order, saying that seven Confederate prisoners were recently hung by the enemy, and seven Union prisoners must be hung in retaliation, and that they must draw lots as to who should be the doomed men.

The narrator says a scene ensued which would be stamped on his memory till death. A cry of anguish arose from the unfortunate prisoners, who implored the guard to intercede with Col. Mosby, but without avail. As the seven drew their fatal lots, most of them calmly resigned themselves to their fate. An officer was ordered by Mosby to take them as near as possible to Gen. Sheridan's headquarters, and hang them. One of the men gave the officer an empty pocketbook and pencil case and requested that they be sent to his wife in Michigan. The officer learned that he was a Freemason, and while going to the place of execution, they met Capt. Mountjoy, who was returning with another company of prisoners. The two officers held a consultation, and then took two of Mountjoy's prisoners and substituted them for the Freemason, who returned earnest thanks for his life. The eight were then taken to a point near the Federal lines where they all met their fate. Thus, in the estimation of these Masonic officers, two soldiers must die as a ransom for one Mason. What an accursed system of sworn favoritism is Freemasonry.

A BRIGHT YOUNG LIFE DESTROYED.

Late in the sixties the writer resided in Wisconsin and was a student in Monmouth College, Illinois. Secret college fraternities were then strong in Monmouth and monopolized nearly all the college honors. The students who were not members of any of the fraternities were made to feel very much as if they were out in the cold. The elections in the literary societies of contest or exhibition performers in those days were intensly exciting, and noted for all manner of wire-pulling and political scheming for the election of various society candidates.

As an illustration of secret society influence on the students, we will relate the case of a young man, Frank ———, from an excellent United Presbyterian family in an adjoining county. He was bright, vivacious and promising, and as he had never been much from home and was easily led by associates, his mother requested several of us who were older students to keep an eye on Frank and guard him as much as possible against bad company.

For a time he made us his confidential counselors and would drop into our rooms often. But after a while his visits were few and far between and finally ceased entirely, and he took up with other associates. We surmised that he had joined a secret fraternity, against which we had often warned him. Soon we found our suspicions were correct. Being of a social turn of mind and fond of society he soon became absorbed in society suppers and banquets and the companionship of lady students.

His fast living soon ran him in debt, and the crisis was reached when he, with a livery rig and a lady, was driving out the horse ran away, smashing the buggie and involving him in a large bill of expense. He was too proud spirited to appeal to his mother for help, and so left college and in a remote Illinois district found employment, so that he might earn enough to pay his debt. But the sad part of the story is that disease and death overtook him. And instead of graduating with honors and reaching a high and useful position in church or state, his body now occupies an unmarked grave in a country cemetery. We cannot doubt that it was the evil influence of secret societies which so sadly destroyed this unusually brilliant and promising life.

RENOUNCING THE LODGE.

A few weeks ago in his church, the Zion Tabernacle, Dr. Dowie read the following letter to his large congregation:

2333 Kimball Ave., Chicago., Ill.

Now, Dr. Dowie, accompanying this letter you will find some spoils which you have captured from the enemy. They are from the Knights of Pythias and the Royal League. It is two years since I first heard your voice, and I praise God for what he has done for me, I have been wonderfully blessed. My mother was healed through your agency. I have now given up secret sccieties. I was a member of five organizations. The last one given up was the Royal League, in which I was insured for $2,000. These things have cost a good deal, not only money, but it cast a shadow at one time over our home. I was told, "You might die, and leave me alone. What would become of me then?" that is regarding the sick and funeral benefits. But we have learned to trust God, and we are going to give up association with these benefits. Christ is to us all in all. What have we to do with such things? Where is our faith in God?

It is inconsistent for believers in divine healing to be connected with any institution which requires doctors' certificates, and recognizes doctors and drugs, which are the enemies of divine healing. I want to be with Zion in all these matters. By the grace of God we have given all up. Some would say I am a crank. Yes, but I will no longer sin by paying lodge dues, for they play cards, smoke and have vile dances, and one where we paid hanged himself last week. There is lots of deviltry in them. They are full of drunkenness and full of immorality and I am determined to have no more to do with these societies no matter what the consequences may be. Yours in Christ, W. H. Handyside.

Dr. Dowie went on to say, he gives up his certificate calling for $2,000 at death, with this letter. God bless him. Here is another surrendered to-day; Knight of Pythias badge by Edmund Raber, 4311 Evans Ave. Now, there we have the ritual of these orders, and the demits, and all these things, and I am very glad. We will put a nail through these things and hang them on the walls of Zion as trophies, and may God in his infinite mercy smite and scatter the 4,500 secret lodges in this city. (Amen.) And may he establish his kingdom. We have only 450 churches in this city. A secret society is no place for a Christian man, and a man that goes there cannot attend to his wife and family. You cannot be a member of a number of lodges and be a true and faithful husband and father. There is no time for it.

Apart from anything else there is not time for it. You can be a member of the Elks on Monday, and a Primo Buffalo on Tuesday, and a Knight of Pythias on Wednesday, and an Odd-fellow on Thursday, and a Freemason on Friday, and a Red Indian on Saturday, and a fool all the time, and be utterly unable to perform your duties as a father, as a husband. It leads to drunkenness; it leads to immorality; it leads away from Christ, and it costs money. It breaks the hearts of women, and it alienates those that are in the homes, and the right thing for a godly man is to get out of it all. (Amen.) May God grant it.

OUR FAITHFUL FRIEND.

Rev. Woodruff Post, of Olean, N. Y., has been one of the most constant and consistent friends of the National Christian Association which it has had since its organization.

He was born in Toronto, Canada, Dec. 6, 1820. He became a resident of the United States in his twenty-fifth year, and married in Lima, N. Y., as he says, "The best woman in the United States." He began his ministerial labors in Canada, and continued in the service of the ministry until 1887, when he took a superannuated relation in the Genesee Conference.

WOODRUFF POST.

But the hands of himself and wife have not been idle since 1887, as is seen in the report in 1891 of the Genesee Conference by his presiding elder: "One of these veterans, Woodruff Post, with failing strength but with a sanctity and zeal unexcelled, has this year done a work among the neglected colored people of Olean which has won the admiration of all classes and made his name precious to many."

His father was conversant with the facts concerning the Morgan abduction, and he was engaged to engrave a copper plate for the Morgan book. Before it was published, illness compelled him to desist, for he lost the use of his hand, which he imputed to the physician in attendance, whom he discovered to be a Mason. His father early instructed him in the evils of Masonry; and Bro. Post says, "I have found by a long experience the lessons my father gave me were correct, only the half had not been told."

When he first entered Conference he began circulating anti-lodge literature. He was threatened and persecuted in various ways but kept rising in the Conference, for the work of the Lord prospered under his faithful labors. He also gained adherents in the Conference to his views so that seventy faithful ministers united with Bro. Post in a resolution against secret societies, though it was not adopted by the Conference.

The follow resolution illustrates the opposition against which he had to contend:

Whereas, the Rev. Woodruff Post, a member of our Conference, did present papers on the subject of Freemasonry for our consideration for three years past, but we will not entertain nor discuss this subject, now therefore, be.

Resolved, That we advise our beloved Brother Post to desist from his efforts to draw us into a discussion upon this subject which can only result in evil to himself and the cause of Jesus Christ.

In reference to the above, Bro. Post writes that Masonry has indeed flourished in that Conference since then, but what, he asks his brethern, has been the effect upon the cause of Jesus Christ? "Such was and is the policy down to A. D. 1897, and my church is well stocked with the fretting leprosy from 'crown to sole.' We are in the church 'hale brothers well met' with the profane and ungodly of all nationalities and characters."

One of the resolutions that especially worried the Conference is as follows:

"Inasmuch as Freemasonry," in the language of the lamented Bishop Hamline, "has caused us so much trouble in our Conference and among our people, Therefore,

Resolved, Without judging any man, we affectionately advise the members of this Conference, for the peace of brethren, not to affiliate with said institution."

Gentle and mild as is the above resolution in was more than the Masons could bear.

This did not stop Elder Post's agitation of the question in the Conference and he soon succeeded in getting a resolution passed forbidding the introduction of any Masonic rites in the celebration of any ceremony connected with the services of the M. E. church. This stopped, for the time being, corner-stone laying for the M. E. churches by Masonic lodges. Elder Post writes that "the bishop deprecated this last effort, fearful that it would divide the Conference." Union with Baal it seemed was preferable to suffering with Jesus Christ and separation from him.

The subject of this sketch was counted a nuisance in the Conference for "meddling with that which was none of my business," but notwithstanding the long ministry of our friend and his faithfulness in the midst of the unfaithful, he has kept head and heart in the sunshine of God's love.

ANOTHER EDITOR SHOOK UP.

The editor of the Republican Valley Echo at Franklin, Neb., recently echoed through his paper the following editorial. It was after his initiation in a Modern Woodmen lodge, where evidently he was cavorted around on the "Day Mare," or "Wild Ass of the Desert," a cut of which we have often exhibited on these pages. The editor says:

"This is the very latest photograph of the M. W. A. goat, whose acquaintance the editor had the pleasure of making on last Tuesday night. He's a real nice, lively goat, fully capable of entertaining (?) a candidate in a befitting manner and giving him back his money's worth, together with a good round sum of interest. Just at present we are wearing a good sized porous plaster and holding down a soft cushioned chair. Perhaps we'll feel like giving a more extended account of our experience later on."

It is hoped this editor will give his experience. We expect soon to have for sale at this office a Revised Ritual of the Modern Woodmen showing just what this poor editor had to pass through in his initiation, and what many a poor presiding elder must endure in becoming a member of this sublime order.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. P. B. Williams writes, March 19th, from Pasadena, Cal., where he conducts a series of meetings.

—John Quincy Adams was lawyer, legislator, minister of the United States at a foreign court and chief executive, He also understood Masonry well. He spoke by authority when he pronounced Masonic law and American law incompatible.

—Editor M. A. Gault preached last Sabbath in the Sussex, Wis., U. P. church. This congregation has more Cynosure subscribers than any other of this denomination in either Wisconsin or Illinois. They always welcome an anti-secret sermon or lecture. An anti-secret convention was held in this church a few years ago.

—Lenna R. Winslow has brought suit at Kansas City, Mo., in the Circuit Court for $2,500 damages against the Kansas City lodge of the Knights of Maccabees and of the World for injuries received while being initiated into the order. Winslow claims he was tossed in a blanket and pushed off a high plank, falling to the floor and receiving permanent injuries.

—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, though never a Mason, can deal rather seriously with a Masonic minister, but it is peculiarly edifying when a Mason denounces a Masonic minister as a "hypocrite."

—Minister Terrell, at Constantinople, has informed the State Department that one Lussuf Zunan, charged with the distribution at Saird, Asiatic Turkey, of relief funds, was murdered at that place and robbed of £500. On the assumption that the victim was engaged in the distribution of the American relief funds, Mr. Terrell has requested the recovery of the stolen money and the arrest and punishment of the guilty parties.

—"George Harris," says one of our exchanges, "has filed a bill in the Federal court, at Dubuque, Iowa, to recover $20,000 from Ironwood Camp, Modern Woodmen of America, for personal injuries. He alleges that during his initiation into the camp he was blindfolded and thrown about until he fell upon the floor, and sustained injuries which kept him in the hospital for months, and that his right arm was permanently stiffened at the elbow."

—The Philadelphia Inquirer says: "The body of Nicholas A. Schaffer, who attempted to kill his wife and then committed suicide by shooting himself, was laid to rest in Odd-fellows' Cemetery this afternoon. Delegations from the Odd-fellows, Knights of the Golden Eagle and Junior Order American Mechanics were present. The casket was draped with the American flag." What must be the effect of such honors at the funerals of the greatest criminals? Does membership in a secret order entitle every grade of criminals to honor and respect?

—A Superior, Neb., paper says: "Grand Custodian J. A. Tulleys, of Red Cloud, Neb., was in town last week, and Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights held a school of instructions of the Masonic fraternity. A large crowd attended the Saturday evening exercises. A banquet closed the school. The fraternity were well pleased with the attendance." "My people perish for lack of knowledge," but not for the kind of knowledge taught in the above school, but for the light that exposes such hidden works of darkness.

—Rev. J. P. Stoddard of Boston, writes that "Nothing could be more opportune or give promise of greater good at the present time than the March Lodge Lamp. I shall take great pleasure in circulating a thousand of them among the people especially interested in foreign missions, and among the young men and women who are preparing to labor in home and foreign fields, in the Gordon and other mission training schools near me. Progress seems slow, but let us pass the watchword all along the line, "Be not weary in well doing, for in due season ye shall reap if ye faint not."

—A Washington Daily Post days: "There is a thoroughly organized movement among the Masonic bodies of the District to build a new Masonic Temple. This is something of which Washington Masons have felt the need for a long time, and one or two efforts have been made to secure it in recent years. The longer the work was delayed the more pressing the need became, and now that every one of the forty-nine organizations of the District has come into line, a comprehensive organization has been formed, and a few weeks at most, it is expected, will see the plans definitely laid."

—The Guild of Commercial Travelers, numbering in the United States 500,000 members, includes a vast number of Blue Lodge Masons, and a number who boast of more degrees than three. Many among the great lights of Freemasonry are included in the Honorary Committee, and are personally interested in the success of the Commercial Travelers' Fair, to be held Dec. 15-28 at Madison Square Garden. The officers of the fair are: Chairman, Chauncey M. Depew, and a 32-degree Mason; Vice-presidents, William L. Strong and Roswell P. Flower; Secretary, R. G. Dunn, Esq , and Treasurer, George E. Green, Mayor of Binghamton, and president of the Commercial Travelers' Home Association of America.

—What are the churches and anti-secret reformers of New Castle doing to stem the tide of secret orders threatening to engulf that once famous reform center? The News of that city says: The Knights of the Golden Eagle have fitted up a hall in elaborate style in the new Jackson building on Nesnannock avenue. The hall is provided with both gas and electric lights, and the floor is covered with fine Brussels carpet. The new furniture, including chairs, altars, stands and paraphernalia with which to put on the degree work, cost in the neighborhood of $1,000. The order is growing rapidly, and new candidates are being initiated almost every meeting night. The hall has been sub-let to the new lodge of the Knights of the Maccabees and other fraternal orders.

—Rev. W. B. Stoddard writes from Washington, March 31: "On Monday eve, March 29th, I addressed a parlor meeting arranged at Bro. Lyon's. About 35 persons were present, some who had no knowledge of our work, and little knowledge of the lodge. I felt that good was accomplished. I start for New York City in the morning. For two years past I have addressed the young friends studying to go as missionaries and Christian workers in Dr. Simpson's training school. Dr. Farr invites me to address this year's class during my visit in the Metropolis. I hope to comply with this request. Word comes from Conemaugh, Pa., that a lodge lecturer is desirous of meeting me in discussion. I have had several points in view for work en-route. Perhaps I could reach some other points."

—Rev. I. L. Buckwalter of Lisbon, Ia., says in writing on the lodge question: "Let the religious press, the pulpit, the college professors, and all leading Christian men and women everywhere who are earnest workers in reform, direct the attention of the people to this vital question. I am glad to notice that leading men everywhere are giving more attention to this matter than formerly. But one of the most encouraging signs of the times is that the women are waking up to the vast importance of this vital question, and are taking hold of it with their native energy. And, as is usual for them, when they undertake a good work they generally manage to reach its accomplishment. Hence we may expect great and successful results in the near future. In the beginning woman had much to do in bringing our race into trouble; so now it is but proper that she should lead off in the glorious work of bringing the race out again."

—For thirty-two years Mr. Edmond Ronayne and wife have lived in this city; and for over 45 years have enjoyed together the life of husband and wife, but on Saturday last, the 3d of April, at 5 o'clock in the evening, Mrs. Ronayne fell asleep gently, and without apparent pain, and so the Lord granted her prayer for a quick and painless passing. Secretary Phillips acted as pastor at the funeral on Tuesday, at the home and also at Rose Hill Cemetery, and the Chicago Avenue (Moody) church were represented by a part of its choir. Mrs. Ronayne's favorite hymn, "Jesus Paid It All," was among those sung. Editor Gault and two of the members of the N. C. A. Board of Directors were present. No one was more widely known among our readers than Bro. Edmond Ronayne, and thousands of hearts will beat in smypathy for him when his sorrow becomes known. Those who may wish to write him, can address him at 104 Milton avenue, Chicago.

—Rev. F. M. Foster, of New York, in a recent letter to the Christian Instructor, says: "It is noticed with regret that Bishop Potter, the leading Episcopal clergyman in this country, participated in Knights Templar worship in the Church of the Beloved Disciple, Eighty-ninth street and Madison avenue, New York. A special service was held in said church on Feb. 27th. About fifty Knights Templar in uniform were present; among them Commanders, Right Eminent Commanders, Grand Prelates, etc., etc. On the occasion Bishop Potter delivered an address in which he reviewed the history of the Knights Templar 'since the year eleven hundred.' It is quite remarkable that the eminent Bishop stopped at the date '1100,' when he could just as well have gone back five thousand years more. He is to be commended for his moderation. It is probable, however, that by his next effort he will lend his dignity and ministerial influence to all the unsubstantiated statements of his less careful colleagues."

BOTH LUCKY AND RICH.

The Author of "Shamus O'Brien," Which Has Made a Hit In New York.

George H. Jessup, the author of "Shamus O'Brien," was for many years a well known figure in New York life. He came here from San Francisco nearly 20 years ago and supported himself by writing for the newspapers and weekly periodicals, devoting his spare time to dramatic work.

He was a contributor to Puck in its early days, and also to Fiction, a weekly story paper started by Keppler & Schwarzmann and written by H. C. Bunner, W. J. Henderson, Townsend Percy, R K. Munkittrick, A. E. Watrous and others of the budding writers of that era. Later he was editor of Judge, and it was about this time that he came into public notice as a dramatist. He wrote "Sam'l of Posen," "Myles Aroon," "A Gold Mine" and many another play that has served its purpose with the public.

A few years ago an English family lawyer, of the kind so frequently seen in stageland, wrote a letter of the kind that seldom reach any young men except those who figure in the drama. This letter informed Mr. Jessup that a relative had died and left him a fine property in the neighborhood of Dublin and an income sufficient to maintain it in suitable style. The dramatist read the letter and then pinched himself, and as he did not "wake up" he knew that it was true, and very soon afterward he installed himself in the beautiful old family mansion which is still his home. He is now a county magistrate, and peasants of the kind that abound in his plays touch their hats to him when he rides by. To this day he sometimes wonders whether it is all real or whether he is one of the characters in a play of his own.—New York Journal.

CHANGING HIS COLOR.

A White Resident of St. Louis Is Turning Black.

Bernard McCarthy of St. Louis is developing peculiar and unnatural symptoms. His condition is such as to indicate a degeneration from a member of the human family to a lower order of beings.

Several years ago a little growth of hair started on McCarthy's breast. It grew longer slowly and gradually spread over his chest. The growth continued, and now it covers his entire chest and is about four inches in length. The hair is a light, sandy color and curls slightly. He noticed the hair growing, but didn't think it was anything serious and never said anything about it.

Three weeks ago he felt an itching of the skin on his chest. The irritation was severe, and he kept rubbing himself, but was unable to pacify it. He took off his shirt to see what the trouble was. He noticed a stripe of a dark bronze color across his chest. It was about 2 inches wide and 6 inches long. It was dark in the center and grew dimmer near the edges.

Next day he examined himself again and found the bronze spot was spreading. He apprehended yellow jaundice and watched himself closely afterward, but did not consult a physician. The spot gradually spread and grew darker in color. It has now covered his entire body, even the soles of his feet and the scalp on his head, and is still getting darker. His health otherwise is good.

The whites of his eyes have changed from their natural color to a dark hue, like that of some animals.

He has consulted physicians, but none of them knows the cause of his strange malady and can only watch the case closely for developments.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Senator Caffery's Purse.

Senator Caffery of Louisiana lost his purse the other morning in the lower corridor of the house. He did not miss it until he started to get into the elevator. Just as he was turning to cuss the luck a man came running up to him with the fat purse in his hand.

"I beg pardon," said the stranger, who was an uncouth, unshaven fellow and looked as though he needed the money in the purse worse than the senator did, "but did you drop this pocketbook?"

Senator Caffery said he did, and the stranger forthwith handed over the book.

"That's a close shave I had," said the Louisiana senator as he shoved the purse into his inside pocket. But the finder of the book was not rewarded.—New York Sun.

To Be the Finest of Bicycle Clubs.

A plan is on foot for the erection of one of the finest and most completely equipped bicycle clubhouses in the country, the cost of which is to be $100,000, although those behind the enterprise expect to raise $200,000. The promoters are residents of New York. They expect to call it the Greater New York Bicycle Club-by-the-Sea by reason of its proximity to Coney Island. The company has secured an option on a site on the boulevard near Neck road, within a half mile of the island.

Eats and Speaks Without a Tongue.

Henry Chenowitz, a mason, 55 years old, has returned to his home in Long Island City after recovering from a surgical operation by which the whole of his tongue was removed. Chenowitz's case has attracted considerable attention by reason of the fact that he now talks almost as well as he did before he lost his tongue. A cancerous growth then interfered materially with his speech.—New York Journal.

SABBATH SCHOOL.

LESSON III, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, APRIL 18.

Text of the Lesson, I Cor. xv, 12-26—Memory Verses, 20-23—Golden Text, I Cor. xv, 20—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

While for this week we turn from the regular lesson in the Acts to a special resurrection lesson, the connection of thought is not broken, for in the next lesson in order (Acts xi, 19-26) the great number of believers in Antioch and elsewhere were won through the preaching of Jesus and the resurrection, and it was the power of His resurrection that led them to send relief, every man according to his ability, to the brethren in Judæa by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.

12, 13. "If there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen." The Sadducees taught that there is no resurrection, neither angel nor spirit (Acts xxii, 8), and everywhere the apostles seemed to find those who hated the doctrine of the resurrection (Acts iv, 2; xxvi, 8; xvii, 32). But it is the great fact which crowns all in the work of Christ. By it He was with power declared to be the Son of God (Rom. i, 4), and we must believe in our hearts that God raised Him from the dead (Rom. x, 9; I Thess. iv, 14).

14, 15. "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." And all the apostles would be scored as false witnesses for preaching what was not true. The resurrection of Christ from the dead is the assurance to all men that He is indeed the Son of David, the Messiah of Israel and the Judge of all men (Acts ii, 29-31; xvii, 31). As surety for us He was delivered for our offenses, but if He is not raised from the dead there is no justification for the sinner, for the surety remains in prison (Rom. iv, 25). Unless Christ is alive from the dead there is no gospel to preach, no glad tidings for sinners, and all preachers are fools and liars.

16, 17. "If Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins." A dead Christ has no power to save or to forgive sins, and I think that is the force of the question in verse 29. Why baptize any one in the name of a dead Christ? Israel was baptized unto Moses as a living leader in the cloud and in the sea (I Cor. x, 1, 2). Our Christ is alive from the dead, an immortal man, the God man, having all power in heaven and on earth. At God's right hand He is the assurance to every believer of the forgiveness of sins, for there could not be at God's right hand one on whom any sin was resting.

18. "Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." If Christ is not at God's right hand, alive forevermore, then Stephen was deceived and lied when he said, "I see the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God" (Acts vii, 56). Ananias lied when he said to Saul "The Lord Jesus appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest" (Acts ix, 17), and all Paul's testimony as to the dead being absent from the body and present with the Lord (II Cor. v, 8; Phil. i, 21, 23) is simply without foundation.

19. "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable." The present life of the believer is set forth by the Holy Spirit both in the gospels and the epistles as a life of tribulation and affliction and suffering (John xvi, 33; Col. i, 24; I Pet. ii, 20, 21; iv, 12, 13), a life of such treatment from the world as Christ Himself received (John xv, 19-21), but the sufferings are not worthy to be compared with the glory to be revealed, and we are ever to consider Christ and His sufferings lest we grow weary and faint (Rom. viii, 18; Heb. xii, 3; John xiv, 1).

20. "But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept." In verses 5 to 8 Paul mentions six different appearances of Christ after His resurrection, and there are at least five others recorded. Thus He showed Himself alive after His passion by many infallible proofs (Acts i, 3), speaking much of the kingdom during those 40 days between His resurrection and visible ascension, the kingdom which is associated with the resurrection of the saints at the second coming of Christ (verses 50-54; Isa. xxv, 8, 9; Dan. xii, 1, 2; Acts iii, 20, 21; Math. xxv, 31, 32).

21, 22. "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead, for as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." In verse 45 Adam and Christ are spoken of as the first Adam and the last Adam. The first brought sin and death upon the race, but the last has brought life and resurrection for all who will accept Him. All are of necessity in Adam, the one man by whom sin entered the world (Rom. v, 12, 18, 19), all who accept Christ are in Christ and enjoy the benefits of His righteousness, which are sufficient for all who will accept Him, and whosoever will may (Rev. xxii, 17).

23. "But every man in his own order, Christ the first fruits, afterward they that are Christ's at His coming." In Col. i, 18, and Rev. i, 5, Christ is called the firstborn or first begotten from the dead, for by virtue of His resurrection all resurrections have taken place or will take place. Both just and unjust shall rise from their graves (Acts xxiv, 15), but there shall be an interval of 1,000 years between them. Rev. xx, 5, 6, is very plain upon this.

24. "Then cometh the end, when He shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father." The "afterward" of the previous verse has already covered over 1,800 years since Christ rose from the dead. The "then" of this verse will cover the thousand years of the millennium, after which will come the new heavens and earth wherein dwelleth righteousness, when God shall be all in all (verses 28, 29; II Pet. iii, 13). Inasmuch as "He is able to subdue all things unto Himself" (Phil. iii, 21) and will eventually, why not trust Him even now to subdue us fully unto Himself and make us wholly new creatures to His glory? (Rev. xxi, 5.)

25, 26. "For He must reign till He hath put all enemies under His feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." When He thus reigns and subdues, we are to reign with Him (Rev. v, 10; xx, 4, 6). See also Ps. cxlix. He is now at the Father's right hand on the Father's throne waiting for the completion of His body, the church, but after that He will sit on His own throne to judge the nations and rule the world in righteousness (Math. xxxv, 31; Acts xvii, 31). Then shall we be manifested with Him (Col. iii, 4; I John iii, 2); also Rev. iii, 21. So a time will come when on this earth there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain (Rev. xxi, 4).

Oh, let me know the power of Thy resurrection!
Oh, let me show Thy risen life in calm and clear reflection!
Oh, let me soar where Thou, my Saviour, Christ, art gone before!
In mind and heart let me dwell always only where Thou art.

LIQUOR LICENSES.

Official Figures That Give an Idea of the Magnitude of the Rum Business.

Each individual saloon is licensed by the government. No man can lawfully sell a glass of beer or wine without paying a fee and obtaining a license from the collector of internal revenue. During the last fiscal year 235,091 licenses were issued by the government of the United States, a decrease of 3,400 from the previous year, which were divided as follows:

Rectifiers, 1855; retail liquor dealers, 204,294; wholesale liquor dealers, 4,648; manufacturers of stills, 26; brewers, 1,866; retail malt liquor dealers, 12,064; manufacturers of oleomargarine, 22; wholesale dealers in oleomargarine, 168; retail dealers in oleomargarine, 4,399.

The largest number of saloon licenses granted was in the First district of Illinois, which includes the city of Chicago, where the total was 13,719; the second number was the First district of California, 9,360, and the third was the Fourteenth district of New York, 9,052. New York has more liquor dealers than any other of the states, the total being 42,351.

The following table shows the number in each state in order:

New York	42,351	Georgia	1,750
Illinois	22,512	West Virginia	1,590
Ohio	17,572	New Hampshire	1,580

A NEW INTOXICANT.

Inhalation of Smelling Salts a Recent Form of Drunkenness.

The very latest sort of drunkenness, says the Chicago Journal, is that which, it has been discovered, comes from the constant inhalation of smelling salts.

So great a hold has the smelling salts habit gained upon the modern woman that when she is deprived of them she experiences all the cravings that afflict the person who dearly loves liquor and finds himself deprived of it. Some of the salts are of excessive strength and produce a sort of stupor most gratifying to the victim. More than one woman has been suspected of drinking when really her inebriety has resulted from a too liberal use of the smelling bottle.

Not long ago a titled lady was carried from the cloakroom at a grand reception in London in a state of helplessness. A bottle was found in the folds of her gown containing matter of a strength sufficient to take away the breath of an ordinary person. The rumor spread with wonderful precision that my lady was a confirmed drunkard, the smelling salts theory being derided by the majority, and the victim found it necessary to withdraw from the social circle she had long graced.

Indulgence in this habit may become expensive, for the seasoned subject soon exhausts the strength of the salts. As stimulation of the olfactory nerves is not alone the reason of this practice, it becomes necessary to renew the supply, and, once enchained, the slave will accept nothing that does not yield full virtues. The story is told of an elderly lady who calls upon a chemist every two or three days and requests the replenishing of no fewer than eight smelling bottles, some of which are not of a diminutive size.

CURE OF DRUNKARDS.

No Means Should Be Neglected to Accomplish That End.

Plymouth church is becoming more and more a practical moral force, and its latest in the many deeds for the alleviation of human sin and suffering is to go into the gold cure business. At a meeting held for purposes of subscription and inspiration it was set forth that the gold cure had cured, and offerings were invited to facilitate reform through that agency. No doubt exists as to the potency of the alleged gold in many cases, nor is there any doubt among physicians as to the curative power of the human will and human faith.

So long as the cure is effected, whether by alleged gold or faith or prayer or seclusion and refraining from liquor, the good is done and we may be satisfied with the result, without inquiring curiously as to means. There are people who say that the whole system in use in the gold cure establishments is humbug. There are ex-drunkards who point to themselves, sober, prosperous and moral, as refutations of that statement. So long as a certain percentage of tipplers can be cured of tippling the good work should go on, and it is better for the world that churches should engage in such reformatory and charitable services than to limit themselves strictly to matters of theology and faith.—Brooklyn Eagle.

An Insecure Bank.

The barroom is a bank. You deposit your money—and lose it; your time—and lose it; your character—and lose it; your health—and lose it; your strength—and lose it; your manly independence—and lose it; your self control—and lose it; your home comfort—and lose it; your wife's happiness—and lose it; your own soul—and lose it.—Ontario Mirror.

Forfeits $5,000,000.

It is said that Mr. Victor Burton of a celebrated brewers' firm in London, having become a teetotaler, has withdrawn from the firm and forfeited thereby his right to £1,000,000.

CUTENESS OF THE COYOTE.

A Dog Drawn Into Ambush—Tricks to Make Away With a Badger.

No cuter animal is found in the west than the coyote. The coyote is to the plainsman what a fox is to an eastern farmer, only the coyote is more in evidence. Forest and Stream tells about a dog that had its principal sport chasing and otherwise worrying coyotes and was led into ambush by one coyote and then set upon by several others of the prairie wolves and almost done to death.

"About 9 o'clock one night," the paper says, "one of the coyotes came to the kitchen door and howled aggravatingly at the dog, which thereupon set after the coyote full tilt. The coyote fled around the house, down to the corral and around the blacksmith shanty, the dog yelping after. Behind the shanty were other coyotes, six or seven of them, and all of them made for the dog in a way that made it feel lonely. The ranchman heard the fight and the dog's howls of pain, and grasping a rifle started that way on the run, yelling as he went. The coyotes each took a farewell nip and fled, leaving a sore dog behind. Since then the dog has not been so much interested as on former occasions in coyotes. It follows single coyotes vigorously, but the appearance of another sends it back as fast as it can run."

The coyote likes badger flesh very much, but one coyote is not equal to a badger in a fight. Consequently the coyote, when it meets a badger, has to resort to stratagem till aid arrives. The manner in which it does this, according to the sportsman's paper, is interesting.

"A few weeks ago," the writer says, "as I was riding along I saw a coyote and a badger. The coyote seemed to be playing with the badger. He would prance around it, first as if to bite it, then run off a little way, the badger following, evidently very angry. When the badger saw me it ran into its hole, while the coyote went off 40 or 50 yards and lay down, evidently knowing I had no gun with me. The coyote's device was evidently to tease and so keep the badger interested till another coyote happened along, when the badger would have been killed."

HE COULDN'T SWIM.

But He Kept Hold of the Anvil When He Went Down.

They were talking about swimming at the city hall the other day, and among those engaged in the discussion was Jim Springman, the well known deputy marshal. Springman has charge of the cage at the city hall where the prisoners are detained before being taken into court, and also has charge of their transportation to and from the jail. He is a man of many stirring adventures and of remarkable physical powers. Therefore his remark that he cannot swim his own length was heard with not a little astonishment.

"But although I can't swim I've been overboard several times," explained Springman, "and have yet to be drowned.

"However, I came pretty near it one time during the war, when I was employed as an iron worker down at the wharfs. That day I was carrying a 75 pound anvil on my shoulder along the wharf, when the first thing I knew I was overboard in about 20 feet of water. I went right down to the bottom, but I didn't stay there but a second, and up I came. The moment I got my head out of the water I had sense enough to grab hold of a pile, and there I hung until they fished me out with a rope."

"Did they ever get the anvil, Jim?" asked one of the crowd.

"Did they?" remarked Springman. "Why, man, you may believe me or not, but I never let go of that anvil. You see," went on Springman, ignoring the smiles of the crowd, "I was walking along with the anvil on my left shoulder, and when I went down I shot down so quick that I hadn't time to let go of it. So when I bobbed up the thing came up with me, right on my shoulder, too, just where it was when I dropped overboard. You see, it was all done so quickly that I hadn't time to think, or else I'd let go of it, and"—

But the crowd had dispersed.—Washington Star.

Was He a Savage?

Was early man a savage? That's a poser. Let us see.

At night he never had to fit a disobliging key, he never had an empty purse, nor did he have to scheme to get his girl past—safely past—the place where they sell ice cream. He never bribed a jockey and then bet a pile and lost, he never was an umpire or was by an umpire bossed, nor did he feel the keen concussion of a big financial drop, nor paid a festive plumber all his savings at a pop, nor did he mortgage real estate so's he could go to law and lose the case and see it drop in litigation's maw.

He never had a favorite cook to simply up and quit, he ne'er fixed pictures on the wall, nor pipes that wouldn't fit, nor had a new silk hat exchanged for some old seedy tile. He never donned his best dress suit and then fell in the mud, and, since he never wore a shirt, he never lost a stud. He never burst a buttoned glove, nor—till his neck was raw—wore collars that resembled much the saw teeth of a saw. He never wrote a poem that an editor declined, nor hatched a joke within the incubator of his mind. He never moved into a house whose chimneys would not draw, nor knew exactly what it was to have a mother-in-law, nor had to catch suburban trains, as nowadays he does, and, since these things make savage men, I don't believe he was.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Wonderful Faculty of the Triton.

The triton, a spotted, lizardlike reptile found in almost every state in the Union, has a most wonderful power of reproducing amputated parts. Bonnot, the great French naturalist, experimented on the little creatures by amputating their legs and tails and by so doing found that their powers of reproduction were almost unlimited. In one instance an amputated leg was reproduced 12 times in three years, and in another an eye was gouged out and reproduced in less than 12 months. The loss of a tail does not appear to discommode a triton, except to give him a sort of unbalanced gait. Tails clipped from the specimens Bonnot kept to experiment on were invariably reproduced in from five to nine weeks.—St. Louis Republic.

Letter Writers.

According to recent statistics, the English and Scotch are the most persistent letter writers. In England it is said that each person averages 40 a year, in Scotland 30 and in America 21. The Italians and Spanish are poor correspondents, 6 letters being the average.

Hunting the Ballad.

In no field of literature have the forger and the manipulator worked with greater vigor and success. From Percy's day to our own it has been thought an innocent device to publish a bit of one's own versifying now and then as an "old ballad or an "ancient song." Often, too, a late stall copy of a ballad, getting into oral circulation, has been innocently furnished to collectors as traditional matter. Mere learning will not guide an editor through these perplexities. What is needed is, in addition, a complete understanding of the "popular" genius, a sympathetic recognition of the traits that characterize oral literature wherever and in whatever degree they exist. This faculty, which even the folk has not retained, and which collectors living in ballad singing and tale telling times have often failed to acquire, was vouchsafed by nature herself to the late Professor Child. In reality a kind of instinct, it had been so cultivated by long and loving study of the traditional literature of all nations that it had become wonderfully swift in its operations and almost infallible. No forged or retouched piece could deceive him for a moment. He detected the slightest jar in the genuine ballad tone. He speaks in one place of certain writers "who would have been all the better historians for a little reading of romances." He was himself the better interpreter of the poetry of art for this keen sympathy with the poetry of nature.—Atlantic.

American Women and Royalty.

"During the Prince of Wales' tour through Canada I had attributed the strange conduct of the ladies to an excess of loyalty. As soon as the prince had left a hotel they would rush into his rooms, seize all sorts of articles, from a furniture button to a soiled towel, as souvenirs, and even bottle up the water with which he had just washed his face," writes Stephen Fiske in The Ladies' Home Journal. "But in the United States the women were equally curious and sycophantic. The luggage of the royal party was carried in small leather trunks—a trunk for every suit of clothes—and whenever the train stopped the crowds would beg that some of these trunks might be handed out, and women would fondle and kiss them. I need not say that the trainmen were never too particular as to whose luggage was subjected to this adoration, and I have had the pleasure of seeing my own portmanteau kissed by mistake. Before the prince arrived at Richmond his room at the Ballard House was entered by the ladies, and the pillowslips and white coverlet were so soiled by the pressure of hundreds of fingers that they had to be twice changed by the chambermaids. When he attended church on Sunday, the whole congregation rose as he departed and climbed upon the seats to get a better view of him."

Monotonous.

A well known physician once told a patient, who he suspected was receiving too many calls from solicitous friends, to make a stroke with a pencil on a piece of paper every time he was asked, "How are you today?"

The result for one day was just 24 strokes, and the physician immediately gave strict orders that no visitor should be permitted to enter the sickroom until further notice, remarking to the nurse that if his patient must be worried to death there was at least no reason why it should be done in such an unscientific manner.

Only those who have suffered serious illness know how trying it is to be required to answer again and again the same question, asked by one well meaning individual after another. It would matter less if visitors contented themselves with asking just the one question, but they do not, and the minute details of one's ailments become peculiarly depressing after a few repetitions.

Many people forget that rest and quiet are often invaluable agents in securing restoration to health.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Soldier and Athlete.

May 1, 1897, will be ready the new manual of physical training for the United States army. It will be a revolution in some respects of former methods of military drill. Instead of training a recruit to stand like a ramrod, stiffen back his shoulders and in consequence puff out his breast and abdomen, the new manual of physical culture for soldiers will release and educate every muscle in his body. It will make him lithe, limber, graceful and powerful, like the acrobat and the all round athlete. It will be a system of calisthenics which will be a joy and source of health to the soldier rather than an eternal and heavy, monotonous military drill.

Herrmann, the magician, had the muscles of the inside of his hand so developed that he could hold a silver dollar in the middle of his palm in such a way that it would be hidden entirely from sight. All the muscles of the inside of his hands could be used by him as freely and effectively as most persons use their fingers. We mention this to show to what perfection muscles can be brought.

The officers who prepared the new drillbook will place it before the army boys as a guide to muscle education and development. This new idea of the soldier's physical training was introduced first at the recruiting barracks in Columbus, O., in 1893. The general athletic or calisthenic exercises are now a part of the daily drill in the various recruiting stations and military posts of the country. The effect of the new training was shown recently in an exhibition drill given at Madison Square Garden, New York. The Thirteenth regiment, United States infantry, made a remarkable display of power and skill. Sixty-four men of this regiment are able to scale a wall 25 feet high in three minutes. There actually seems no limit to the power of human muscles when properly developed. This was always the contention of Herrmann, already mentioned.

The widest results of the new system of army drill and training will probably be reached among the boys of the national guard throughout the country. The fine young farmers, mechanics and clerks who compose the national guard regiments will have opportunity to make themselves fully as athletic and graceful as the regular army soldiers. Let it be urged on them everywhere that they avail themselves of the opportunity. From them the system will spread throughout all classes and the American race will become physically strong.

It is to be hoped that the question of the kind of money the people of the United States are going to use will be permanently settled by the next congress. Two opposing forces are marshaling for battle. One party is in favor of retiring all government paper money and substituting therefor only national bank notes. But the old state rights feeling is still so strong in some parts of the country that any bill which should undertake to retire the government notes could only be passed with an added clause permitting state banks to be revived in all the numerosity and unglorious worthlessness of the good old state dollar, which, being printed in Mississippi, was only a bit of greasy paper in Massachusetts. Do the advocates of the retirement of the national notes want to bring back those times again? Against the party desiring the banks to issue our paper money stands the party that desires the government to continue in circulation not only its present notes, but to henceforward issue all the paper money used by the country, so that a dollar will be the same the country over. Between these two opposing forces the currency battle will be fought out. It may be remarked in a general way that those who desire the national banks as at present constituted to issue all the paper money are those who favor the exclusive gold standard.

An employee of the New York postoffice is under arrest for stealing letters containing money and has made a full confession. This particular thief is 71 years of age and has been in the postoffice for 37 years. He is certainly old enough to have known better, if experience goes for anything.

Students of political economy and men of affairs generally will find food for reflection in the report that British postal correspondence with the United States last year was 41,000,000 letters as against only 65,000,000 with the whole of Europe.

Here is a problem for a good mathematician: Under a so called reform government New York city increased her debt $8,000,000 last year. How much would it have increased under a plain, everyday regime without any claims to reform?

CYCLONE AND FIRE

Work Frightful Havoc in an Oklahoma Town.

FORTY OF ITS PEOPLE KILLED.

Flames Break Out in the Debris and Many Wounded Are Burned Alive—Among the Hurt a Number Will Die—All the Physicians But One in the Town Fall Victims to the Fury of the Tornado—Awful Scenes in the Wake of the Destroyer.

Guthrie, O. T., March 31.—A report is received here that twenty lives were lost last evening in a cyclone that swept over Chandler, a town of 1,500 inhabiants fifty miles east of here. It is reported that only two buildings were left standing—the Mitchell hotel and the Grand island grocery store. In addition to the twenty persons reported killed rumors say that fully 150 were badly injured. The following names are given as among those killed: J. Woodyard and wife, Mrs. Mitchell, Mrs. Thomas Smith and John Lawson, lawyer.

The cyclone struck at 5 o'clock last evening. The court house, in which Chief Justice Dale was holding court, was taken off its foundation. All communication with Chandler is now cut off. The telephone office was destroyed, and the only information received here was from a telephone connection made a mile and a half out of Chandler. That has since been lost.

Twenty-One Bodies Recovered.

Later.—At 1 o'clock this morning twenty-one dead bodies had been taken from the ruins at Chandler. Seventy-five to 100 persons are badly injured, and a dozen or more of these are reported dying. In addition to those dead, dying and injured, it is believed that there are a score or more dead buried beneath the wrecked buildings. Several of the wrecked buildings have taken fire and the debris is burning fiercely. Many of the injured have been burned to death while pinned fast under the debris. In one building, it is reported, five injured people were burned to death, and at another place the incinerated bodies of three unknown children have been taken out.

All the physicians of the town, save one, met death in the storm. Nearly all the physicians of Guthrie have gone to the scene of the disaster.

Some of the Dead and Wounded.

The following is the list of the dead, so far as known at 1 o'clock: Mr. and Mrs. Woodman, Mrs. Henry Mitchell, Mrs. Tom Smith, Attorney John Dawson, F. DeMoff, Emma Dressinger, D. C. Johnson and wife, Mrs. Philip Johnson and child, Mrs. Dr. Lee, A. W. Keller and wife, unknown woman and babe, five unknown chilidren.

Among the fatally injured are: Arthur Jewett, Peggy Joneson, Mrs. Frank McCann, D. C. Gooding, Maggie Reaves, Andrew Asbee and wife, Mrs. Cullum, Jennie Woodsworth.

Among the injured are the following: John McCartner, brother-in-law of United States Marshal Nagle; F. N. Niblack and father, John Foster, Mrs. Emma Foster, two daughters of County Treasurer Ulam, Samuel Winthrop, and George McHenry.

Groans and Cries on Every Side.

Chandler is a town of 1,500 people. It is built on a hill in thick timber and the mass of torn trees and wrecked houses made it impossible to reach the injured in the dark. On every side could be heard groans and cries for help and the scene was indescribable.

TEXAS AND KANSAS VISITED.

But the Destruction Is Done to Property Only So Far as Known.

Kansas City, Mo., March 31.—Reports received here indicate that the cyclone which destroyed the town of Chandler, O. T., last night, also passed across the state of Kansas, though in less destructive force. Florence, Kan., reports a severe wind storm between 5 and 6 o'clock that unroofed a portion of the Santa Fe round house, blew down several buildings and blew box cars from the tracks. Great Bend reports a very heavy wind, accompanied by hail and rain.

Wichita reports the heaviest rain ever experienced there, accompanied by wind and hail. At Haven box cars were blown from the railroad tracks. Barton reports a very heavy wind, which wrecked several small buildings and blew cars from the tracks. Telegraph service throughout the state is badly crippled.

Fort Worth, Tex., March 31.—Another cyclone passed over this city last night, this time catching the south side. The chimney of the Mulkey Memorial church was blown down and falling on the parsonage crushed in the roof. Several houses were unroofed and the houses of ex-County Treasurer Thomas Bratton and Mrs. Cline were blown from their supports. The lady is reported injured. It is said a small negro church in the extreme southeastern part of town was blown down, but the 'phones are out of order and it is so remote that no accurate details can be had.

SHAME TO EUROPE.

Black Side of Her "Concert" Illustrated at Suda Bay.

London, April 1. — A cablegram from Canea, Crete, says: "The insurgents by a bold stroke occupied the hill on the south side of Suda bay Tuesday evening. They were promptly shelled by the British, Austrian and Russian warships. At daybreak yesterday the firing was resumed and the Cretans were driven from their positions. As soon as the firing ceased they made another attempt to recover the ground and the warships promptly resumed the firing, which was very heavy for several hours. During the cannonade three Turks were killed and five wounded." The Standard's correspondent at Canea in describing the bombardment says: "When the Cretans began the attack Colonel Bor proposed to the admirals that they should land a mixed force of 500 men to drive the insurgents from the position they occupied behind a strong wall along a ravine. The Austrian and French admirals were opposed to taking the offensive and they decided to confine their action to bombarding.

"By 8 o'clock in the morning the engagement was in full blast. The Turkish guns in Fort Izzedin could take only a small part in the firing, as most of them are directed seaward, but a Turkish frigate shelled the insurgents freely, though with little effect. An hour later the foreign men-of-war signaled their intention to bombard. The Groziastichy fired first, then H. M. S. Ardent, and finally the Austrian gunboat Tiger. Each vessel fired in its turn, aiming chiefly at the Greek flag, which was hoisted above the stone wall. The Ardent ceased firing at 9:30, but the Groziastichy, ranging close in shore, by degrees pounded down the wall, yard by yard, every shot telling.

"In spite of the heavy cannonade the Cretans held their ground stoutly, even throwing out skirmishers to repel the Turkish outposts, though they were compelled to abandon their own principal positions behind the stone wall. At 9:45 a. m. H. M. S. Camperdown, the outermost of the large ironclads, began firing 6-inch shells. The Cretans thereupon retired slightly, but continued a heavy fire until 10 o'clock, when the Camperdown, at a range of 6,400 yards, fired her big guns. The effect was instantaneous.

"Three out of four of the percussion shells burst directly in the center of the insurgents' position, and the Cretans fled helter-skelter. The aim of the gunners was perfect, while the formidable noise of the enormous shells hurtling through the air was alone enough to frighten any enemy. Things were now getting too hot to last, and the insurgent flag was speedily lowered. The Cretans in full retreat were hastened by the fire of the Groziastchy and the Tiger, which poured in with extreme accuracy of aim a succession of shrapnels.

"At 10:30 the last shell fell. Seeing that the object of bombardment was accomplished the Russian and Austrian warships steamed away for blockade service. The Ardent returned to Suda. The Turkish soldiers sallied quickly from the forts, occupied the positions lately held by the insurgents, hoisted the Ottoman flag with great manifestations of delight, and even advanced across the open with great coolness, though exposed to the continuous fire of the insurgent sharpshooters, who remained in the ravine up to the last minute.

"At 11:30 a. m. the Turks were still pouring a rattling rifle fire upon the retreating masses of the insurgents, who replied with wonderful spirit. Their splendid defense of the position excited the admiration of all. Until the Camperdown began to fire heavy shells the insurgents rather gained than lost ground in spite of the tremenodus fire of the Russian and Austrian vessels. Altogether about 100 shells were fired."

Election at Davenport, Ia.

Davenport, Ia., April 5.—The city election Saturday resulted in the election of the Republican ticket and three of the six aldermen, leaving the control of the council with the Democrats.

Killed by a Fall.

Deadwood, S. D., April 3.—J. H. Flynn, mining editor of the Deadwood Times, was instantly killed by falling from the steps of his house, his neck being broken by the fall. Mr. Flynn has been connected with the Black Hills newspapers for a number of years and has contributed many articles on mining to all the large papers and magazines in the country. He leaves a widow and two children.

Gen. Ruger on the Retired List.

Washington, April 3.—Secretary Alger yesterday issued an order placing Major General Thomas H. Ruger, commanding the department of the east at New York, on the retired list on account of age. His retirement will make a large number of promotions and cause the shifting of several of the department commanders.

Another Cyclone in Arkansas.

Warren, Ark., April 3.—A cyclone passed over the southern portion of Cleveland county Thursday, destroying twelve or fifteen country residences and wounded ten or fifteen persons. Will Shirley was killed and others are seriously injured.

NEWS OF THE STATE.

ITEMS WHICH WILL BE OF INTEREST TO OUR READERS.

A Condensed Report of the Proceedings in the State Senate and House, Showing What the State Lawmakers Are Doing at Springfield.

Springfield, April 1.—In the senate a bill was introduced to raise the salaries of state officers as follows: Governor, $10,000; lientenant governor, $2,000; secretary of state, $5,000; auditor, $5,000; superintendent of public instruction, $5,000; attorney general, $5,000; adjutant general, $2,500; treasurer, $10,000. The supreme court bill was amended so as give Springfield the court. Bills were passed: Authorizing trustee in trust deed to release mortgage on margin of record; providing that a husband may ask in a bill for divorce that the wife resume her maiden name, or some name other than her husband's; providing that a certified copy of the receipts of internal revenue collector shall be prima facie evidence in a case for violation of the dram shop act; authorizing the St. Louis Bridge company to operate a street railway over the bridge and to and through adjacent towns; raising the age until which children may remain in the soldiers' and orphans' home at Normal from 14 to 16 years; making it an offense to knowingly use any false weight or measure.

In the house the Humphreys street railway bills were postponed until April 8. The judicial apportionment bill was ordered to third reading. Bills were passed: Reclassifying the demands to be made against the estate of a deceased person; to legalize the judicial proceedings of the March term, 1886 to 1887, of the Clay county circuit court.

Springfield, Ills., April 2.—The senate yesterday passed the bill for the consolidation of the supreme court at Springfield without a dissenting vote. The Torrens land title bill was also passed. A bill was introduced to take the power of appointing subordinates from the president of the Cook county commissioners. Bills were passed: To prevent the introduction and spread of the San Jose scale; providing that election ballots shall be placed in a canvas covering instead of pasteboard. The child labor bill was advanced to third reading.

The house referred the department store bill to the committee on municipal corporations, refusing to refer it to the judiciary committee. The senate's amendment to the supreme court bill, locating the court at Springfield, was concurred in. The bill to prevent political fusion was ordered to third reading, and on objection a proposition to have the bicycle baggage bill read the second time was rejected. The senate bill appropriating $60,000 to pay the employes of the present general assembly was passed with the emergency clause.

Springfield, Ills., April 3.—The senate did nothing yesterday. The house sent the bill creating a state board of pardons to third reading and then business was stopped because so many Republican members were absent that the Democrats could break a quorum. Governor Tanner has signed the supreme court bill. Neither house will do anything before next Wednesday if they do anything then.

Illinois State Official Stricken.

Springfield, Ills., April 2.—A telegram was received here yesterday from Milledgeville, Whiteside county, stating that Samuel M. Ingliss, state superintendent of public instruction, had been stricken with a partial stroke of apoplexy, and for his wife to come at once. Professor Ingliss was attending the County Teachers' institute at Milledgeville.

Quincy Refunding Her Debt.

Quincy, Ills., April 1.—The city finance committee has opened bids for refunding $214,000 in city bonds at 4½ per cent. Seven bids, each for the full amount, were received. The First National bank, of Chicago, will get the bonds on their offer of $1,050 premium.

SERMON BOOK.

By Rev. B. Baldwin, Evangelist.

Single copy, 60 cents; two for $1 00. (Postage stamps not taken.) Montpelier Ohio.

A friend says of it: "Every page is crowded full of most important matter. Every young minister should early possess a copy. Evangelists and all others who engage in revival work will find "SERMONICA" brim full of facts, illustrations, comments and themes which will inflame thought and zeal in pulling sinners out of the fire. It is a seed-bed from which will spring many other sermons."

1 Soldering Iron.
1 Bottle Soldering Fluid.
1 Box Rosin.
1 Bar Solder.
1 Directions for Use.

All these tools are full-sized, practical, neat, and cheap; not mere toys. They enable any person to do his own half-soling, boot, shoe, rubber, harness, and tinware repairing.

This Outfit is the result of years of study, experiment, and correspondence in the manufacture of Iron Lasts and Repairing Outfits; and its practical advantages need only to be seen and tried to be appreciated.

Our Improved Iron Lasts and Standard are one of the handiest tools you can have about the place. The Lasts are four in number, smooth and solid, 4, 6, 8 ,and 10 inches long, thus enabling one to half-sole all sizes of foot-wear. The Standard is made with an iron base, which can be easily fastened to the bench. No method of half-soling is now used on common work, except that of iron last and wire clinch nails. The writer of this has been in the business 20 years, and has seen the changes from the old wooden lasts and pegs to the modern method, and knows it to be complete.

Our Improved Harness and Saw Clamp is an indispensable tool in sewing a harness or filing a saw. The jaws are thrown open mechanically by a coiled spring on the bolt.

The weight of this outfit is 18 lbs. Price, all complete, packed in a neat, strong box, only $3.00.

Fruit and Flowers

ROOT GRAFTING THE APPLE.

Detailed Directions From a Well Known Horticulturist For Doing This Work.

The common apple is grown almost entirely by what is termed root grafting, although it may be grown by budding and cleft grafting. Root grafting is done during winter, and here is an illustrated description of the work as given by Samuel B. Green in The Farm and Fireside:

Seedlings which are dug in autumn and packed in moss or sawdust in a cold cellar are taken as needed to a warm room and the scions grafted upon them just below the collar—that is, the place where root and top are joined. The kind of graft made is here illustrated, showing the successive stages of the work. A shows a seedling apple root with top removed, which is to be cut off and grafted at the cross line. B shows scion; C, scion and stock prepared for being united, but with the cut held open. This cut is made by the knife blade, and no wood is removed from it. D, the same united; E, the union wrapped with a strip of paper or cloth which has previously been covered with grafting wax. Some prefer waxed string for this covering. The grafts should be about 8 inches long. When completed, they should be tied in bundles and put away, packed very firmly in sand or light soil, in a cold cellar. A cave is best for this purpose. Early in the spring they should be planted in the nursery, about six inches apart, in rows three feet apart, setting all but the upper bud of the scion below the surface of the ground. It is important to plant the scion deep, so as to encourage it to throw out roots, as the trees are then more hardy than when they depend entirely on the seedling root for support. Great care should be taken to have the soil very firm and solid around the base of the root and at the union.

SUCCESSIVE STAGES OF GRAFTING.

Tie Up the Evergreens.

Tie up your evergreens so that the snow cannot spread and injure them. This advice applies to yews, retinosporas, arborvitæs and any others growing in a bush rather than upright single stemmed form like a spruce or a fir tree, and comes from Gardening, with these directions for doing it: You may do this with a piece of lath cord or marline, tying up the main branches from the inside that a weight of snow cannot break them down, or take a long piece of the same material or hay rope and run it around on the outside of the bushes from the bottom to the top, tying in all the branches from the outside. Of course in this last named way it is necessary to run one cord in the opposite direction, knotting it to the other here and there to prevent it from slipping.

White Azalea Indoors.

The white azalea affords a vast amount of pleasure as a house plant, but it has its special requirements. An authority in such matters gives this advice in The Ladies' Home Journal: The room in which the white azalea is kept must never be so dry and warm that the element of vitality is exhausted. Admit fresh air daily, and keep the temperature of the room quite low. Shower the plant well two or three times a week, taking pains to get the moisture where it will do most good—on the underside of the leaves.

Forcing Lily of the Valley.

Florists have lily of the valley on sale 11 months in the year. Rural New Yorker tells that the "pips," as florists term the little bulbs, are readily forced, being merely planted in pure sand, freely watered, shaded and kept in a high temperature. Twenty to 25 days of this treatment bring them into bloom. Sand is used because they are not expected to produce roots, merely to force out the flower through the nutriment stored in the bulb. Under ordinary conditions, while the flowers could be produced at any time during winter previous to the normal period of blooming, they could not be produced after that, but the florists have obviated this difficulty by putting the bulbs into cold storage until needed, these cold storage roots providing the summer flowers.

Ammonia For House Plants.

Fill a teacup with tepid water in the morning and add to it three drops of household ammonia. Pour this on the soil of the geranium or other rapid growing plant in your window. An application of this kind once or twice a week will add wonderfully to the growth and appearance of the plant. It is, in fact, cheap and handy. For a number of plants, 12 or 15 drops to a quart of water is sufficient. Twice a week on a sunny morning is enough, says a writer in The New England Homestead.

Frozen Window Plants.

Cut off the frozen, wilted or deadened parts, keep the plants a little drier than before, and cooler rather than warmer, always, of course, avoiding frost. Don't rush them into fresh growth with the view of quickly regaining their former fullness, but let them come along slowly at first till you find out how much injury they have sustained and cut them back to sound eyes or wood.

A GOOD, RELIABLE WATCH CHEAP.
FREE FOR A CLUB OF TWENTY SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the demand for a good cheap watch, we have made arrangements to furnish this reliable and durable timepiece at a very low figure. This is no "below cost" or "sheriff sale" watch. The price we ask is more than we pay, but so little more that we could not send them a cent less if you ordered a bushel. ☞ There is

No Reliable Watch Cheaper Than This!

READ CAREFULLY! The movement is a 7 jeweled Elgin or Waltham with stem wind and stem set. To set the watch: Pull out the stem until it "clicks," when you can turn the hands at will. Press back in position to wind. By this arrangement you only need to open the watch to regulate it, and your movement is kept as nearly dust-proof as possible. The case is Silveroid (not silver), yet can hardly be told from solid silver. Will keep its color always. Is screw back and bezel, tight fitting, handsome and strong and will last a lifetime. Before the late reduction in price of this movement the retail figure was $12.00. WE GUARANTEE this watch to be perfect, and will refund the money if not exactly as represented. REMEMBER, this is not a Chronometer, nor will it regulate the sun, but it is a good, reliable timekeeper. Sent by express for $5.75. If wanted by mail add 25c. for postage.

This movement in a solid silver case, described as above, only $9.50.

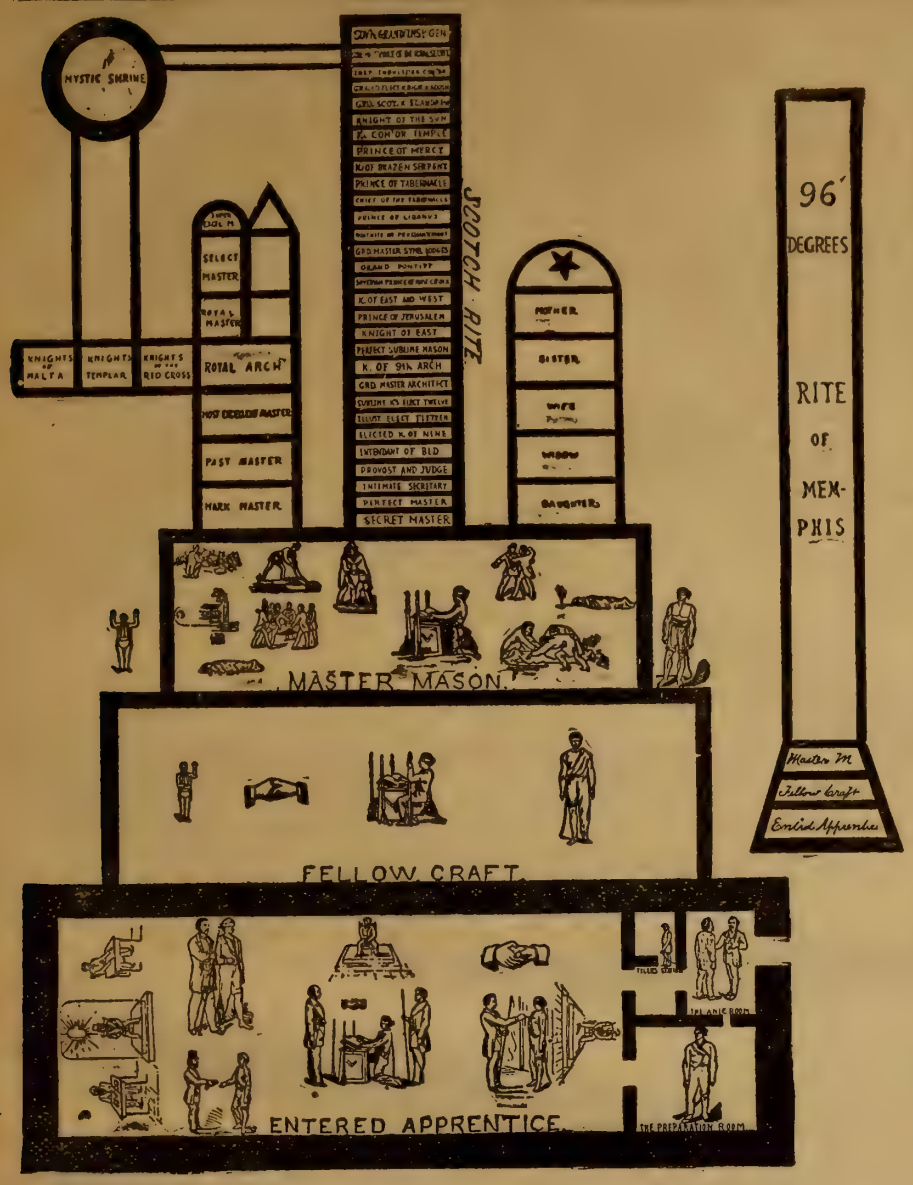
Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christain Cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. 50c. each.

Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover, 25c. each.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge, and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc.



MASONIC CHART.

ILLUSTRATING THE RELATION OF SOME OF THE DEGREES AND RITES IN FREEMASONRY TO EACH OTHER.

The accompanying chart represents one hundred and forty two degrees.

1. The American Rite of 13 degrees;
2. The Scotch Rite of 33 degrees;
3. The Egyptian Rite of 96 degrees.
4. The Mystic Shrine of one degree.
5. The Eastern Star of 5 degrees for Master Masons and for women. These are side degrees, and not genuine masonry.

The Symbolic degrees, or Blue Lodge of three degrees, are common to every Masonic rite, whether American, Scotch, or Egyptian, or whichever of the Masonic rites, named in Mackey's Masonic Encyclopedia one may choose to investigate.

This chart shows in the Blue Lodge the position of the Worshipful Master and some of the other officers of the lodge. Several positions of the candidate who is being initiated are also shown. In the Master Mason's degree is recognized the murder, burial and resurrection scene so full of religious significance to Freemasons.

Freemasonry Illustrated. 640 pages, cloth, $1.00; paper, 75c.
A complete exposition of the Blue Lodge and Chapter consisting of seven degrees. Profusely illustrated.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. 341 pages, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. 2 vols. Per vol., cloth, $1.00; paper, 65c.
The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive.
Vol. II comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. 274 pages, flexible cloth, 50c.
By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. 110 pages, paper, 25c.
The genuine old Morgan book republished.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry. By Avery Allyn. Cloth, $5.00.
Contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, and the Orange Societies.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Cloth, $2.50.
Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market, it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated."

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 75c.
Contains the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual.

Look to the East. A ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Cloth, $2.00.
Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or the Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 16 pages, 5c.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. By "Spectator," Atlanta, Ga. 16 pages, 5c.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. 16 pages 5c.
This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. 16 pages, 5c.
Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge.

Mah-Hah-Bone; 589 pages; $1.00
Comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. Cloth, $1.00: paper cover, 50cts.
The complete revised ritual of the Lodge Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. Cloth, 50c; paper cover, 25c.
This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor of Evangelical Lutheran church. 10c. each.
This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and, the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias, Illustrated. Cloth, 50c: paper cover 25c.
An exact copy of the new official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the world, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. 15c each.

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association. 10c. each.
Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Constitution and By-laws of the Association.

Secret Societies. Cloth 35c, paper 15c.
A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev Edward Beecher.

The Master's Carpet or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical. Bound in fine cloth. 400 pages. 75c.
Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. 5c.
By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard, Cloth, $1.50. paper, 75c.

Finney on Masonry. Cloth 75c., paper 35c.
The character. claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By ex-Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasony Self-Convicted. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40c.
This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them.

Judge Whitney's Defence before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. 15c.
Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. 10c.
This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life-undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder and Oaths of 33 degrees. 304 pages, cloth, $1.00,
"Composed of Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's, Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees."

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor of United Presbyterian church.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in New Berlin trials. 10c.
The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiation by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties,

Grand Lodge Masonry. 5c. each
Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to Republican Government. 15c.
By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio.

Story of the Gods. Postpaid, 10c.
By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of the past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood.

Masonic Outrages. Postpaid, 20c.
Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. 25c.
As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book. 25c.
Consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies.

The Image of the Beast; A Secret Empire; or Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy. By Rev. Richard Horton. Third Edition. 200 pages, cloth, 60c.

Sermon on Secretism, 5c. each.
By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear expression of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all.

CREVASSE IN THE MISSISSIPPI AT FLOWER LAKE

Will Involve Four More Mississippi Counties in the Deluge—Appalling State of Affairs on the St. Francis River—Destitution of Those Driven from Home.

Memphis, April 5.—The general situation as the result of the floods in the Mississippi valley is terrible. In the lowlands of Arkansas a call for food has been made and the people of Little Rock will take immediate action. Starvation confronts 50,000 people. Saturday night R. C. Graves and J. S. Menkin, of the Memphis relief committee, went to Washington to ask the general government to lend assistance. The local relief committee has demands that will exhaust all present funds. They are from Mississippi as far down as Greenville, and from nearly all of eastern Arkansas. The visitors to the capital of the nation will ask for $25,000 to be used in buying rations. Ten thousand dollars has already been expended by the local committee, and probably $10,000 more in provisions have been distributed. It now looks as if famine is ahead.

"It is feared that no human power can overcome the forces of nature below Vicksburg, and it is believed by many to be only a question of a few days before the same conditions that now obtain in the delta will exist in southeastern Arkansas and northeastern Louisiana. The hopeful view of the flood situation which prevailed some days ago has been rapidly dissipated by reports from the waters of the upper Mississippi and its tributaries, which are rising at a rapid rate with every indication that immense volumes of water, the result of a thaw of many feet of snow over a big area in the northwest, may be expected to pour into the upper Mississippi through its tributaries, and eventually increase the already appalling conditions existing in the middle and lower Mississippi valley.

Aberdeen, S. D., April 5.—Heavy rain fell all Saturday in this section, and the flood situation is therefore more serious than ever before. Nearly the entire west and south parts of the city are under water. Main street in the business section is alone clear of present limits of the flood. The rears of stores on the west side are, however, in great danger. All livery barns, blacksmith shops, machinery depots and warehouses on the west side are flooded. The Wisconsin House is entirely surrounded by water, and occupants of the Becker House have been driven to its upper stories. A hundred householders have either been driven out or are living in their upper rooms.

Reports from the country districts are alarming. Hundreds of farm buildings are but center pieces for vast lakes. Stock is standing in water, and hay and feed exposed to the flood. Between Groton and Andover, on the Hastings and Dakota, a boat ferry has been put in, and passengers were transferred thereon yesterday. No other trains are moving in this entire vicinity.

PREPARED FOR A CATASTROPHE,

And It Came in the Crumbling of Still Another Levee.

Memphis, April 5.—Another break in the Mississippi levee occured yesterday morning at 8 o'clock at Flower lake, six miles below Tunica, Miss., and the water is pouring through the opening with great velocity. This will probably be the most destructive break that has occurred in the delta. The most fertile farm lands of Mississippi, lying in Coahoma, LaFlore, Quitman and Tallahatchie counties, in the north part of the state, will be inundated, and the newly planted corn crops will be laid in waste. Fortunately no loss of life is reported, the inhabitants of this stricken section having made preparations for just such a catastrophe as exists. The condition of the poorer classes throughout the flooded area is indeed critical. Thousands of refugees are being huddled on levees and spots of land waiting for relief. The towns of Rosedale and Tunca report that everything possible is being done for these poor people, but that funds and provisions are fast becoming exhausted.

In the little city of Rosedale alone 1,200 refugees are being cared for by the citizens. Half a hundred towns stand in six feet of water, and the yellow stream is creeping up slowly but surely. Advices just received tell of a break in the levee two miles south of Helena, Ark. This is the levee for which the people of southeastern Arkansas have made such a desperate fight. The waters from this break will flood a great area, and in all probability will back up into the streets of Helena. The relief steamer Ora Lee arrived at Marianna, Ark., late yesterday afternoon, having made an expedition up the St. Francis river. There were on board 160 refugees and 200 head of cattle. The steamer went up the St. Francis river as far as Cut Off, and then worked her way down stream, rescuing people from perilous positions.

The suffering along the St. Francis river is appalling. The water throughout the entire neighboring country is from six to fifteen feet deep. The relief boat had on board the body of Mrs. McMain, of Raggio City. The body was found at Raggio, and it was taken to Marianna for burial, there being no land at the former place on which to give it interment. The St. Francis river is rising from three to five inches daily. At Memphis the river is slowing rising again.

Important Foreign Posts Filled.

Washington, April 2.—Two more important foreign posts have been filled by the president, who yesterday sent to the senate the names of Andrew D. White, of New York, to be ambassador of the United States to Germany; William F. Draper, of Massachusetts, to be ambassador of the United States to Italy, and Anson Burlingame Johnson, of Colorado, to be consul at Amoy, China. Besides the foregoing were these nominations: Chandler Hale, of Maine, to be secretary of the embassy of the United States at Rome; Samuel L. Gracey, of Massachusetts, to be consul at Fuchan, China; Benjamin Butterworth, of Ohio, to be commissioner of patents; Oliver L. Spaulding, of Michigan, to be assistant secretary of the treasury; William B. Howell, of New Jersey, to be assistant secretary of the treasury.

THE NATIONAL LEGISLATURE.

Synopsis of the Proceedings of the Lawmakers at Washington.

Washington, March 31.—The senate listened to a long speech by Allen of Nebraska against protective tariff. The house amendments to the bill appropriating $250,000 for rescue work on the Mississippi were agreed to. Corrected credentials were filed in the case of Corbett, appointed senator from Oregon. Morgan presented a resolution asking for a lot of information about Cuba. A petition was received from sheep-raisers of Montana for ample protection to wool. In executive session the arbitration treaty was debated.

The house yesterday had a warm discussion over the subject of free hides, but no action resulted. Thirty-five committee amendments to the tariff bill were adopted, and at adjournment but twenty of the 162 pages of the bill had been considered. The vote will be taken at 3 p. m. today. Healwote of Minnesota introduced a resolution for a banking and currency commission, which is in line with the recommendations of McKinley's inaugural address and of the Indianapolis conference.

Washington, April 1.—The open session of the senate yesterday lasted about half an hour. It was productive of another Cuban resolution, by Mills of Texas, this time calling on on the committee on foreign relations for a report on the obligations assumed by the United States in insisting that Cuba should not be annexed to any European power and should remain subject to Spain. The rest of the day was spent in executive session on the arbitration treaty, and Hoar's amendment was adopted in place of Chilton's.

The house passed the Dingley tariff bill with an amendment providing that the duties therein shall take effect from and after today. The vote was 205 to 122. An attempt to recommit the bill with instructions to provide that articles controlled by trusts shall go on the free list was defeated—198 to 148. The house then adjourned to Saturday.

Washington, April 2.—The senate yesterday adopted the resolution calling for information as to the alleged letter written by the Cuban rebel Gomez to the president, and in executive session adopted two amendments to the arbitration treaty, one excepting claims against southern states for debts repudiated and the other eliminating article 8 of the treaty. Attempt was made to fix a time for a vote, but was defeated by Chandler because he was not in the "mood" for it. Morgan introduced a Cuban belligerency resolution and Mills one to inquire if under the Monroe doctrine the United States have not an obligation to help the Cuban rebels. Adjourned to Monday.

Washington, April 5.—In the house Saturday Ferry of Arkansas said he was not piqued because he did not get the Democratic nomination for speaker, as had been charged; the senate resolution providing for the charter of a vessel to carry food to the famine sufferers of India was adopted after McMillin had vainly attempted to add to the resolution a condemnation of England's policy there. Corliss of Michigan introduced a resolution to annual the last extension of the civil service rules made by Cleveland, and Mahany of New York a resolution to ask Spain not to shoot Rivera. Adjourned to Wednesday.

Work of Hawkeye Legislators.

Des Moines, Ia., April 3.—The house of representatives passed what is known as the Cheshire amendment to the revenue bill. It provides for the taxation of express, sleeping car, telegraph, and telephone companies on the Indiana and Ohio plan, which is based on their total capitalization and total mileage. The senate defeated the same measure, but it is thought it will go through the senate the next time. The senate committee for the suppression of intemperance, voted to recommend a substitute for the house manufacturing bill back for passage. The substitute is more stringent than the house bill.

Desperate Fight with Outlaws.

Ardmore, I. T., April 3.—From persons just in from Pavia it is learned that a posse of Indian Territory deputy marshals, headed by Deputy McLamore, met a band of outlaws near that place and a desperate fight ensued. Particulars are meager. The desperadoes were seven in number, and three of them are known to have been wounded in the engagement. None of the officers was injured. The gang is known as the Morris band of outlaws.

Fatal Explosion in a Tunnel.

Chicago, March 31.—Two men were killed and four seriously injured by an explosion in the northwest water tunnel at the foot of Oak street yesterday. The dead are: Owen O'Malley, Peter Gallagher. The injured are: Thomas Gallagher, Dennis Hayes, Patrick Conway, George Blank. The explosion took place at a point 2,300 feet out in the lake, where excavation was in progress for a water supply inlet.

THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

The Annual Meeting of the National Christian Association occurs on the 10th of May next. Members of the Association and all friends will please take notice and be prompt in attendance on Wednesday, May 10th, at 10 o'clock A. M., at 221 West Madison St., for the election of officers and the transaction of other important business.

SAMUEL H. SWARTZ, Pres.

MRS. M. C. BAKER, Rec. Sec'y.

Take notice that the time of our next Annual Meeting is Monday, May 10th, at 10 A. M.

The place of our Annual Meeting will be in Carpenter Hall in the N. C. A. building, where the morning session will be held.

The second session, Monday, will be at 12 M. the noon hour in Willard Hall in the W. C. T. U. Temple. Well known speakers will occupy the hour, and there will doubtless be a large attendance.

In connection with our Annual Meeting arrangements are being made for a lange number of anti-secret meetings in the various churches of the city and suburbs. More than 500 of the churches have been solicited to arrange for such meetings. It is expected that a large number will respond to this request.

One of the most important meetings in connection with our Annual Meeting will be in Zion's Tabernacle, 1633 Michigan Ave., on Sabbath, May 23. The whole day will be given to sermons and discussions of the question, "Secret Societies the Foes of God, of Home, Church and State." The services morning, afternoon and evening will be led by Dr. Dowie and other able speakers.

Dr. Dowie's Zion Tabernacle will seat over 3,000, and we are assured it will be filled on Sabbath, May 23d. One session will be devoted to testimonies from seceders from various secret orders, many of whom have renounced the lodge during the past year. Many are looking forward to this meeting with great interest. Let all pray that it may be a day of the Holy Spirit's demonstration and power.

The first meeting in connection with our Annual Meeting will be on next Tuesday evening, April 20th, in the (Moody) Chicago Avenue church. It will begin at 8 P. M., and will be addressed by Pres. C. A. Blanchard and others. We look for a strong rally of the friends of the cause at this meeting. On Sabbath evening, May 2, at 7:30 P. M, President C. A. Blanchard will preach in Dr. E P. Goodwin's church on "Secret Societies or the Church—Which?" There will also be a lecture on the lodge question Friday evening, May 7th, in the Summerdale Congregational church, Rev. E. B. Wylie, pastor.

A State Convention for South Dakota is anounced by Secretary Fenton for the last of May. Fuller particulars will be given next week.

Masonic oaths need only to be read and understood in their applications to make an appeal to God in taking them an impious profanity of the most flagrant kind.

The vice of taking unknown obligations, swearing unconsidered oaths, and advancing without reasonable foresight, is followed by the train of vices fostered in a lodgeite.

The Christian Cynosure and weekly New York Tribune one year for only $1.25 for the two. The Cynosure for Christ as the only way of salvation, and a warning to those who hope for safety by climbing up some other way. The Tribune for market reports and news of the week.

We wish for our Postal Card Symposium as many replies as possible to the question, "By what means can the anti-secret reform be best promoted in your own community?" Reader, think and pray over this question. Take it to God in prayer and the Divine Spirit will suggest to you plans by which you may checkmate this soul-destroying iniquity, the secret lodge. Cannot more be done in your town to raise a testimony against this evil?

In this issue we republish by request the excellent address of Pres. C. A. Blanchard at the Northfield Conference. In its scope and clear plain statement no address on the subject contains such an effective array of the arguments against the lodge from a Bible standpoint. We wish especially to emphasize his statement that the reason why our churches are being flooded out with vice and crime, "Is simply because men have either wholly neglected this Word, or because they have chosen certain portions of it, and have pushed whole continents of revealed truth out of sight."

It is no wonder that bad men love Freemasonry, and good men after being taken in often withdraw from it. Reason enough would be found in the "Third Point of Fellowship," so dear to the gang that fellowshipped Griswold in the lodge at Hartford, and expelled the member whose testimony in court sent him to the rather more respectable Wethersfield State prison.

"In the light of God's Word it is the duty of every Christian minister to unmask these batteries of hell's dominions, and warn the people from God's Word against the lodge wiles of the devil. To say, 'preach the Gospel and let the lodge alone,' betrays the mask of a deceitful worker, an ally of Satan's designs." Would that these words of Bro. Fenton in this issue were hung in the form of an electric transparency on the wall behind every pulpit in the land.

The Cynosure from this time on will devote considerable attention to such practical questions as, how to reach the people most effectually with anti- secret literature; the best way to get the people out to an anti-secret meeting; the kind of anti-secret address that will best impress the people; how to get the best results from a meeting; how to get the best collection; how to arrange for an anti-secret convention, and how to get the most out of it; the relation of the anti-secret movement to the reforms of the day. We will be glad to receive brief pointed communications on any of these questions.

The minister who preaches the Bible only in spots lives next door to the minister who believes the Bible only in spots. The Bible is the pharmacopæ containing prescriptions not only for sinners in units but also in political relations. Many chapters are filled with warnings against the false religion of Baal, which in our day has assumed the form of the secret empire. Ministers cannot be silent on this question without ignoring whole sections and chapters of divine truth. The fearful condemnation of the minister who holds back this truth is that of a nurse who withholds part of the medicine prescribed by the physician when the patient is sick nigh unto death.

An Ohio correspondent in a private letter thus characterizes the recent initiation of President McKinley: "How like fools our great men are conducting themselves! President McKinley a Mystic Schriner! 'How glorious was the king to-day.....who uncovered himself as one of the vain fellows shamelessly uncovereth himself.' Think of our President going through the 'Bunghole' test, 'Dog-habit' test, 'Bumper' test, 'Spanking' test. Sprinkling 'The Devil's Pass' with .....His walk 'throught the desert,' greeted in the name of the god of Mohammed, sworn upon his Koran, and promised the company of the celestial Houri—the heavenly Harlots. Oh, Methodist Lucifer, son of the morning, how art thou fallen!"

EMBLEMS OF THE CRAFT.

The Mason's square on Jewish breast,
His hate of Christ doth still attest
In face of God and man.
Who then dares bow in worship there
And life and doctrines think to square
By such a Christless plan;
And so erect his edifice,
By this design, and this, and this.

The Moslem doth the level wear,
And with the Jew will sport the square
In vanity and pride;
With these the Christian meekly bows,
And unto Baal performs his vows,
From virtue turned aside.
With these erects his edifice,
By this design, and this, and this

The mystic G claimed type divine,
On breast of infidel doth shine
And fills him with conceit,
That God his friend and maker is;
But will not own that Son of his,
Nor worship at his feet;
But will erect his edifice,
By this design, and this, and this.

Such life, such beauty meets our view,
In what Masonic fathers drew
In London dram-shop old;
They breathe an odor from the tomb,
The craft doth dig for manhood's bloom,
Where lies for truth are sold
To him who builds on this and this,
His soul a crumbling edifice.

PROFESSING GOD, YET NOT KNOWING HIM.

BY REV. D. H. COULTER, D. D.

Is there a religion of the lodge or is there not? If there is not, why has the lodge a chaplain? What is a chaplain but a "person chosen to conduct religious exercises for society, etc?" Why are magnificent temples built? Why are prayers offered? What is prayer, if not "the act of addressing supplication to a divinity?" Why does the lodge use a form of religious service at the burial of its dead? Why adore and invoke a "Grand Master," or "Supreme Architect," or other object of lodge worship? Why send good lodge members at death to a "grand lodge above" or other lodge heaven? There is a lodge religion. But what religion is it? It is believed that it can be shown that it is not the Christian religion—not a religion of God, but of men; not the religion of the Bible; not the true, but a false religion, and therefore not a religion that God will recognize and accept.

In John 8: 54,55, our Lord said to the Jews in reference to his Father, "Of whom ye say that he is your God, yet ye have not known him." Christ's eternal Father is God alone. The Jews of that day said that he was their God, but the Saviour declares that their claim was false. They had not known God. What it was that they worshiped he leaves them to decide. One thing is evident; it was not God.

This has been true of the Jews from that day until now. It is true of the Mohammedans. Their cardinal tenet is that there is no god but God; and it has been claimed that Islam is quite superior to paganism or Polytheism, since it has spread over a large part of the world the doctrine of the unity of the Deity. But the object worshiped by the Mohammedans is no more God than is the object of the Jew's adoration. The same is true of the whole class of Deists and Theists. Deism is from the Latin Deus, God; and Theism is from the Greek Theos, God. They are one and the same thing.

Like the Jew and the Mohammedan, the Deist and the Theist worship a God out of Christ. They may think and say that the eternal Father is their God, yet they have not known him. Will not this distinctly apply to the Christless religion of Freemasonry, and of all the kindred secret orders?

The Jews were intelligent; they had the Scriptures. They were very religious in their own way. Their morals would compare not unfavorably with the boasted morality of the average devoted lodgeman. They were not idolaters; they set up the exclusive claim to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ as their God; but Christ distinctly testifies that they did not so much as know the true God, because God is known only in and by Christ Jesus. None but the eternal Son, who dwelt in the bosom of the Father, originally knows God and is capable of declaring him unto men. "And no man knoweth the Father but the Son, and he to whom the Son reveals him."

Now why is the Lord Jesus left out of lodge religion? out of its prayers and hymns, its whole ritual; and his name cut out of those Scriptures in which it occurs, used by the lodge? It cannot be through inadvertence or forgetfulness or ignorance. The advent and death of our Lord Jesus Christ are beyond measure the most conspicuous and important facts of all history. No, the conclusion is forced on us that Christ has been as deliberately put out and kept out of secret lodge religion as he was put out and kept out of the faith and worship of the unbelieving Jews.

The devotees of such a system may say that Christ's eternal Father is their God, yet by the testimony of our blessed Lord, they have not known God.

1. Because God is what the Scriptures as a whole reveal him to be. Deistical or theistical lodge worshipers divest him of some of his distinguishing attributes, and represent him as approving of and doing things contrary to his clearly revealed character. An un-Scriptural notion, a distorted conception, a mutilated deity, whatever it is, or by whatever high-sounding titles it is invoked, is not God.

2. Because God is triune. To think, to know, and to worship the Father alone, excluding the Son and the Holy Ghost, is not to know and worship God, any more than would be the knowledge aud adoration of the Son alone, to the exclusion of the Father and of the Holy Spirit, or the worship of the Holy Spirit alone, leaving the Father and the Son altogether out of view.

High Masonic authority affirms that the religion of the lodge is pure Theism;" and the distinct Deistical or Christless character of lodge religion in general, is simply undeniable. But the Theistic conception of the character of God is fatally defective.

3. Those who do not know God as Christ reveals, declares and manifests him, do not know the true God. The object of their trust and adoration is something else; it is not God. Nothing can be clearer than the teaching of Christ on this subject. He is the eternal personal Word of God, and the light and life of a benighted and dying world. It is his office to make God known; and no other one is competent to this work. God is what Christ declared him to be, and what he showed him to be. He is not something else, nor anything else. Is it not then as evident as anything can be made, that those who reject Christ, leave him out of view, and form some other idea of God than that we obtain in and through Jesus Christ, do not know God? The Father loveth the Son and honoreth the Son, and requires men to believe in, love, acknowledge and honor the Son, and to come to him through the Son. Is it then to be believed that God will make himself known to men who will not love and honor the Son of his love? or that he will accept of any service offered to him outside of Christ, the only way to the Father?

A religion from which Christ is left out, in this land and day, is a religion from which he is intentionally left out. Such services God will not accept. Christ distinctly makes the knowledge of himself to be the test of the knowledge of God; and the love of himself the test of love to God. In the same way the criterion of any assumed relation to God is the sustaining of that relation first to Christ; and of any service to God is that service rendered in the name of Christ. This test—this criterion is specific and exclusive.

The ruler and disposer of all things referred to in state papers, whilst Christ is studiously excluded from all mention and all respect, is identical with him who is God alone, whose name is Jehovah, and who is the Most High over all the earth. They would be shocked to think otherwise. But they need just to be so shocked. Doubtless those Jews whom the Saviour addressed felt outraged when he declared to them in reference to his Father, "Ye say that he is your God; yet ye have not known him." It was a statement calculated to astound them, but it was true, and pertinent, and needed; and whatever be the effect on Christless religionists today, sound it aloud in their hearing; ye say that the Divine Father of all is your God; but ye know him not. It is Gospel truth, and it needs much to be proclaimed.

If the above conclusions be true, why should I, unless barred on other grounds, join in church relationship or fellowship, or sit down at the communion table with the worshipers of lodge divinities any more than with respectable Jews, Deists and Mohammedans?

HOW TO WITHSTAND THE INFLUENCE OF SECRET SOCIETIES.

BY REV. WILBUR N. COFFEE.

Agitate by press and platform. Make a systematic effort to induce those periodicals which are in sympathy with this reform to constantly devote some space to the instruction of their patrons upon the subject. Apparently some of them are disposed to allow the Cynosure to take up their crosses, because it is convenient and incurs less reproach. Scatter good, clear, reasonable tracts upon the waters of the nation, hoping to find their fruits even after many days.

Continue the plans of the N. C. A. to furnish authoritative exposes of this work of darkness, to publish able lectures and terse criticism upon all secret orders.

Teach the children. There is demand just now for carefully written juvenile literature on the subject, illustrating the workings of secret fraternities; in defeating justice and in the prodigality of their displays; the selfishness of their benevolences (?); the barbarism of their oaths; the ridiculousness, puerility and indecency of their initiations, the incompatibility of lodge worship with true Christian worship, and of Christian fellowship in a pleasure-loving, worldly organization whose delight is balls and suppers and club-room conclaves.

It should be shown that there is a manifest difference between these conclaves and church conferences, when the harlots of Chicago and New York rush to Boston to attend a conclave, as vultures to a dead carcass, and ply their vocation on the streets in the daytime and during fraternity parades. Does not a vender of wares know the class of people to whom he caters? What a comment upon the morals of one of the most prominent orders of secrecy. Who ever heard of the strumpets of the nation flocking to a general conference of the church? Young people should know that it is inconsistent for any Gospel minister to join the lodge, serve as chaplain or fellowship a fraternity characterized by such fleshliness.

The incongruity of a union of this modern heathenism with true religion because of its rejection of Christ can be shown so that children and young people may become enlisted against the influence of secrecy. These books should be in the Sabbath-school and all seminaries of learniug where it is possible.

The lecturers should be kept in the field to keep alive the interest of the question. We all feel more like work when a good, stirring lecturer sounds the war-call; and making a specialty of the subject he can diffuse a great amount of light to both enemies and friends of these works of darkness.

The ministry should be encouraged to pray for installments of anti-secrecy courage. Masonry should be identified with that idolatry denounced by God in the days of Ezekiel. The prophets did not consider it out of their way to call on this "enemy of all righteousness" and to "call it down."

A few years ago ministers of anti-secret denominations felt "called to speak out against this great evil." Now it is convenient for some in these denominations to delegate their commission to recognized reformers. Labor with the ministry. Reprove participants. When Moses came down from the Mount and found his people singing and dancing before a heathen symbol, he burnt the image, ground it to powder and strewed it upon the waters and compelled the worshipers to drink it. When dealing with lodge-loving professors, I believe in scorching secrecy, pulverizing it and strewing it upon the waters of life and compelling them to drink and know its bitterness. Some have been known to "throw up" because of this treatment. It is all the better for being "Mosaic."

Again, organize in nation and state. God himself has taught us this in our own being. The human being is organized in mind and body, and it works well. Disorganization is death. Let us organize so closely that we become members one of another.

Finally, make this work of rescue from idolatry a subject of prayer. If Elijah could pray successfully for victory over heathen priests, may not we? Yea, ought we not to pray "lifting up holy hands without wrath or doubting?" Our conventions should be scenes of "fervent effectual prayer of the righteous."

We should implead the God who dried up the waters and sent famine to Isreal because of idolatry, to help us vindicate the cause of true religion and give us the victory over the whole system of secrecy; that a cloud the size of a man's hand may appear in the heavens; that this nation may be the grateful recipient of showers of blessing from on high.

SECRETISM IN THE LIGHT OF THE GOSPEL.

BY REV. S. G. SHAW.

In a former article we have shown that the Gospel means development, and also brotherhood. In the face of what Christ and his followers have done to bring the world into unity, secretism has gone back to the old method of dividing men. The Mason separates them into Masons and not-Masons. The Odd-fellow divides them into Odd-fellows and not-Odd-fellows. Those who return his grip and respond to his sign are to be befriended, aided, protected; the rest of men have no claim upon him. They may even be wronged in order that the brother of like degree may be advantaged. What about the character of the one who, according to secretism, is first to be considered? That is not in question. How about the need of the lodge-member as compared with that of another man? Neither is this considered. Lodge membership stands paramount to every other consideration. In some of the higher degrees of Masonry even murderers and traitors can demand protection, and their brethren are sworn to give it. This is in direct opposition to the whole spirit of the Gospel. Our Saviour taught that all men are brothers; that the distressed should have our sympathy whoever they may be, and the oppressed our championship everywhere. He would have us make no distinction between men, save only upon the ground of character. Vile men are to be despised whatever their name or rank or power, while those who fear God are to honored however obscure and humble they may be. By fostering class spirit secretism interferes with the progress of Gospel principles; and in making everything of lodge standing and nothing of moral character, it is in direct opposition to God, with whom there is no respect of persons.

3. The Gospel means personal responsibility. Christ had very little to do with communities. We read that seeing a great multitude he was moved with compassion toward them, and he healed their sick. At another time with five loaves and two fishes he fed the famishing companies of hundreds and fifties in the desert. Instances of this kind, however, seem more like the overflowings of his bounty and love than his ordinary and usual work. The results also were very small in comparison with those that followed his hand-to-hand efforts. His life would have been a failure almost had it not been for his meeting, calling, healing, instructing men and women apart from the multitude. The greatness of his character as well as the grandeur of his mission, appears in his talk with Nicodemus, the call of Matthew, the raising of Lazarus and his promise to the dying thief. There is no mistaking his position on the question of individual responsibility, when he says, "Whosoever therefore shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven." Even his unlimited invitations, such as, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest," while general in tone, admit only of individual acceptance. The law of God is plain upon this point. The soul that sinneth shall die. Every one of us must give account of himself to God. This thought of the soul standing alone before God is not an agreeable one to the natural mind, therefore attempts have been made to lay blame upon others. In Plato's Republic the citizen is nothing, the state is everything. Personality is lost in the aggregation.

We know what the effect is when this principle dominates the minds of men. We see it in the group of boys who together will commit depredations which none would dare to do if he were left to himself. We see it swaying the mob, prompting them to acts of the most lawless and brutal description. The thought prevails, that if there are enough chargeable with guilt all may escape. Have we not seen this principle leading to the infliction of dignities and cruelties in the lodge? I cannot imagine that even the Elks of Des Moines would have done individually what they did as a society to Lawyer Curry. No; as decent men they would each have scorned the suggestion. What the lodge does, however, the members of the lodge do, for the body could have no existence without the members. God has said, "Though hand join in hand the wicked shall not go unpunished." It is impossible for us to say to what extent a man may be guilty who takes part in sin along with other men; but to Him who is infinite it is as easy to place the blame for iniquities committed by corporations as it is in the case of one who does evil by himself alone.

I wish that this fact of individual responsibility were written as with an iron pen upon the conscience of every man. Individuality is not lost in the state, the church, the corporation or the secret order. Individuality, God-given, remains, and the only way to escape condemnation and punishment is to come out from among those who do evil.

"DINNA YE HEAR THE SLOGAN?"

BY REV. O. H. PERRY.

Under the scorching rays of India's sun, with death claiming a victim every hour, stood a company of men and women, fighting to the death a band of passion-inflamed savages whose appetites, already wheted by the blood of the innocent and helpless, sweep on with a relentlessness that knows no mercy. The hour was as dark as hopelessness could make it, which only lessened as they "looked up to the hills."

A consultation was held. At its close the farewells were spoken, the hands grasped more firmly the guns, the blood cooled, the nerves quieted, the eyes sighted more closely. They had waited upon God and renewed their strength. At this juncture a Scottish maid, whose ear was familiar with the sound from infancy, detected the notes of the bagpipes of the Highlanders under Havelock coming to their relief. Rushing out from the enclosure of safety for the women, she shouted, above the din of the cracking rifles, "Dinna ye hear the slogans?" Sure enough; and as the besieged caught the sound which meant safety, the besiegers heard it, and to them it meant danger.

From a human standpoint, the cause of moral reform is in a darkness as intense as hatred, malevolence, ignorance, superstition and hypocrisy can make it. Government-protected trusts of whisky, secrecy, etc., are flaunting their colors in the face of church and state. Oath-bound political office-holders, oath-bound judicial courts, supported by the distillers, brewers, wholesalers, retailers, bartenders, drinkers, renters of buildings, defenders of parties that foster these evils, the preachers and laity who "abhor a fuss," these all are seeking to hide the "Sun of Righteousness" who is to come with "healing in his wings." With the state fostering adultery in houses of prostitution, and the church by her unscripturally divorced membership united by her ministers for the fee, we have a darkness simply awful. "The darkest hour is just before the dawn."

> "Evil shall not forever sway;
> The many toil in sorrow;
> The bars of hell are strong to-day,
> But Christ shall reign to-morrow."

"There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life." "Be strong and of a good courage, for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest." "Lo, I am with thee always, even unto the end of the world." "There is nothing covered that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known." "Dinna ye hear the slogan?" "Every man must give an account of himself to God." So of institutions. Man is expected to live for the glory of God. Men in their combined relations are expected to do the same.

The man who is living for the glory of God cannot do that in an institution which cannot exist for the glory of God. If you doubt this, turn it around. Can a man, who is not living for the glory of God, be in practical sympathy with an institution that is glorifying God? In the presence of a Janus-faced morality, these questions must needs have solution. Can men, whose "lives are hid with Christ in God," consistently fellowship with an institution that disfellowships Christ? Can a man, one, two and three nights in the week, bow at one altar, in worship, where Christ is not, find communion at another where Christ is, without renouncing the former? "Can a fountain bring forth both sweet water and bitter?"

Hanover, Mich.

"A NAME TO LIVE."

BY REV. CYRUS SMITH.

The first start of the division in the United Brethren church was a belief among many of the preachers that the name of the church to which they belonged was sufficient, it being anti-secret, and that it was not necessary for them, uninformed as they were, to mention the lodge. A dependence on name without works was the beginning. We have seen the fruits of it in strife and division.

An evangelist living in West Des Moines Conference since the division, organized a class, and when Elder Siemiller went there to hold a quarterly meeting they did not know that this is an anti-secret church. So it seems the devil since the division did not cease to sow the same seed, but it is also true in other anti-secret churches.

There are ministers relying on the name of an anti-secret church, but do not mention the lodge in the pulpit. They read from God's Word, "prove all things," and then mention "all things" except the lodge. If a man be anti-secret in principle he should seek to be able to give a reason for it, as the Bible requires us to give "a reason of the hope that is in us," "with meekness and Godly fear." And hope is in light that "makes manifest."

I am not writing this to censure any, but to help to strengthen that which remains. It is the devil's business to make Christians believe that it is not necessary to let their light shine, especially the light of our anti-secret principles. "Don't mention the lodge." It used to make hell rage for a preacher to mention slavery. May we trust in Elijah's God for grace to let our light shine as calm as faith and as long-suffering as charity, then we will never fail, but have that perfect love of Jesus that casts out fear. Then he will withhold no good thing from us; and the best "good thing" we can crave is that the world be converted to Christ from all their idols, including lodgery. There is only room for Jesus and the things of his kingdom in the heart.

JACK-MASONS.

Carlyle wrote a book upon hero-worship. This homage extends to the most prominent men in the state. The hero-worshiper exalts a particular hero and worships him. These heroes are made examples for imitation and followed with the strictest care. They are believed to be infallible, and those of a contrary opinion are despised as disturbers of the peace. Their good qualities are praised, their bad excused, and every word and deed is defended as an acme of truth and wisdom.

When Morgan was murdered by Masons in 1826, and the people were trying to fill offices with honest men to punish the perpetrators, they were opposed, not only by Masons but by their friends who worshiped their heroes as paragons of propriety. The latter sometimes excelled their patrons in activity, because the one was hampered by fears of retribution and the other stimulated by hopes of reward. They were employed by their masters in assaults upon Anti-masons because the latter feared to excite the anger of the people by acts of violence. They exceeded their principals in numbers, and the latter would have been punished for their crime but for their support. They constituted a new class in politics, and a name, jack-Mason, was coined for them. A jack-Mason is a hero-worshiper.

There will be jack Masons as long as there are Masons, and will show themselves whenever their masters are opposed. They are numerous and easily distinguished. It requires three things to constitute a jack-Mason—Masonic bias, man-worship and partisanship. He claims that Masonry must be right because some good men who are his friends are in it. This is man or hero-worship. He scowls down antagonism to the lodge and is ready to assault its enemies without its bidding. This is partisanship, and these constitute the jack-Mason. But his anger rises in proportion to the magnitude of the hero assailed. It is greater for the family hero than for the church, and greater for the church hero than for the community, and greater for the latter than for the state. It is also greater when both parties are members of the church, because he then imagines that the church is assailed and in jeopardy. Religion intensifies his fears and passions, and he estimates heros and opponents at a higher value. He is more determined to uphold the former and suppress the latter, and is a more pronounced and dangerous jack-Mason if looks and actions are a true index. A READER.

CHURCH AND LODGE.

[Address delivered at Northfield, Mass., Aug. 7, 1895, by President C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton College, Illinois, before some fifteen hundred Christian workers gathered from all parts of the United States, to Mr. Moody's "Conference for Christian Workers," as reported in the November number of Northfield Echoes,]

The Bible contains a complete rule for the whole life of man.

It tells a man how he should conduct himself with reference to God, to the Lord Jesus, to the Holy Spirit, to the Word which God has given, and to the church which he has established.

It directs him how he should treat his wife, and care for his children; how much he should pay his hired man, and when he should pay him. It teaches the hired man how he should conduct himself with reference to his employer. It tells men how to loan money and how to collect debts as well as how to worship.

It teaches a man what kind of a citizen he should be. How he ought to vote, if he is in a self-govering country. If he is a magistrate, it directs him how he ought to exercise authority, and says that God will call him to account for the manner in which he executes his office.

We are apt to narrow down the teachings of the Bible and the business of the church, and to suppose that they have to do chiefly with the work of the Sabbath, and that they have little or nothing to do with our pleasures, our business, or our political and our industrial relations; but the testimony of the Word of God is that this Book is given by inspiration of God, and that it is "profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in right doing, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good work," not simply to some good works.

Men act as if God had never told them how to live and the result is that our churches are being flooded out with vice and crime. The reason we have trouble of all kinds in the world is simply because men have either wholly neglected this Word, or because they have chosen certain portions of it, and have pushed whole continents of revealed truth out of sight.

TURN ON THE LIGHT.

The church, the minister, the Christian, is a watchman on the walls, and it is his business to see the threatening enemy when his spear-points come over the top of the wall, that the gates may be shut, the walls manned, the men armed, and women and children protected. It is the business of the watchmen to look out, not for pleasant but for injurious things, and to point them out. If you go into a dark room filled with vermin, you cannot see anything, but if you light a match, you see some of those creatures; if you light a lamp, you see more; and if you turn on an electric light it reveals the good and the evil in sharp contrast. "That which doth make manifest is light," and the Christian is the light of the world. The church establishes the moral standard for men who never go near it, and for communities who reject it.

STOP THE WRECKING BUSINESS.

In these days the work of rescuing the individual sinner is very popular, but it is not popular to point out and put down the evil that destroys him because there are material interests involved. Men are trying to save a few wrecks here and there while thousands go down and the wreckers keep plying their trade. It is better to reform or hang the wreckers than to save one wreck.

Men tell me plainly that the Sunday newspaper is here to stay, and that the whisky trade will never be abolished. I was discussing the whisky question, in a Missouri stage-coach, and the driver said, "You can never down the whisky business when there is an eight-cent profit in a ten-cent drink." He wasn't a Christian, and I didn't wonder, but when a man who believes that God led the Israelites across the Red Sea, and across the Jordan; that God caused the walls of Jericho to fall,—I do not like to hear such a man say that any iniquity in this world is here to stay, because if God is here to stay, he will have a clean world for his people to live in; he has promised that even the heathen should be given to Jesus Christ for his possession; and he doesn't call to a few, but to the world, when he says,

PRES. C. A. BLANCHARD.

"Look to me and be ye saved." The Bible is positive and negative; it requires and forbids; it points out evils and prescribes the remedies.

Some say that the way to destroy evil is to proclaim the good. God does not do this. It is necessary both to root out the evil and to establish the good. God commands us not to profane his name, not to steal or kill or commit adultery, and then gives positive commands to honor our fathers and mothers, to remember the Sabbath, and to love God and man. No farmer is fool enough to try to kill weeds by planting good corn. He relies upon the plow and the hoe.

It is the duty of the church to point out the evil not only of some sin, but of all sin. Yet in every age there are evils which men instinctively avoid mentioning. The wrong is so widespread, so deep rooted, so powerful, that the minister naturally passes it by to deal with some comparative trifle. When slavery was the law of the land, the church did not even name it. Yet it included theft, adultery, murder, and all other crimes. As John Wesley said, it was the sum of all villainies.

In our day no one objects to good, pious people saving drunkards. Liquor men like to have it done. They have no use for a drunkard. The besotted, blear-eyed, ragged victim of the trade is a discredit. But they don't want their trade meddled with. They want the privilege of making drunkards. Give them this and they are glad to have you take the "finished product" off their hands.

A MIGHTY FACTOR FOR EVIL.

At the present time, in a Christian church, in a Christian newspaper, or on a public platform, almost never will you find a secret society mentioned. Many do not like to say so, and yet the secret society system is one of the strongest factors for good or evil in our country. There are five hundred thousand Masons in this country, and as many Odd-fellows. The majority of these men are not in Christian churches; they tell you plainly that they don't care for the church. The secret society system of the United States, which puts up such temples as there are in Boston and Philadelphia and New York, which puts up its lodges in every town, and seeks to attach to itself every young mechanic and merchant and lawyer, and tells him that, if he joins a secret society he will be able to serve his country better, or will be helped in his industrial pursuits, or receive a life insurance—such an organization is a tremendous power for good or evil, and the Church of Christ should find out which it is, and then should see that every young man may be warned if it is evil, and urged to join it if it is good. There are lodges for almost every purpose under heaven. They are drawing in young men by hundreds of thousands, yet the pulpits, the religious press, and the platform is, in general, as silent as the grave. Now we are told in 1 Thess. 5:21, "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good," and to inform men, "Ye are the light of the world." Matt. 5:14.

IGNORING THE EXAMPLE OF CHRIST.

I submit to you a few doctrines which determine absolutely the character of these secret lodges.

They all require members to disregard the example of Christ, and his example is just as binding as his Word. Assume that the Good Templars are an excellent organization for promoting temperance, or that the Freemasons promote a faith in God, hope in immortality, and charity to all mankind. What right then has a Christian man to hide that work from his wife and children?

Christ told his disciples to proclaim on the housetop what he had told them in private. Matt. 10:26, 27. Now a man is initiated into a lodge. When he comes home his wife says, "Where have you been to-night?" "I have been initiated." "I didn't know you were going to join. Tell me about it." "I am not permitted to tell you." "Was there anything wicked?" "No." "Anything ridiculous?" "Nothing at all, my dear; it was very solemn." "Well, then, why can't you tell me about it, if there is nothing wicked in it, and nothing ridiculous?" He is compelled to say, "I have obligated myself not to."

The question as to whether it is good or bad may be a matter of taste. Jesus Christ knew how to promote the temperance cause, faith in God, the hope of immortality, and charity toward all men; the Saviour that turned his head on the cross to say to John, "Take care of my mother," and said to the mother, "John will look after you," is not unmindful of the needs of the wife after her husband has been taken from her and she is left to provide for herself. Jesus knew how to promote friendship and love and liberty, and you and I, if we are Christian, are bound to do Christ's work in Christ's way. Christ said, when asked as to his teachings, that he spoke openly to the world in the synagogue and in the temple, and that in secret he said nothing. No man can be a secret society man and follow the example of Jesus Christ.

TRAMPLING UPON CHRIST'S COMMANDS.

But not only does a lodgeman necessarily disregard the example of Christ, but he is compelled to violate his express command. He said to the disciples, "I am the light of the world," and "Ye are the light of the world;" you are to show mankind the difference between right and wrong. "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Suppose that every secret lodge is doing good; put in the Jesuits, the Ku Klux Klan, the Knights of the Golden Ring, the Whisky Ring, and assume they are all doing good.

Are men in secret societies letting the good which they do shine out? They go into the second or third stories, curtain the doors, and let no one come in unless he will obligate himself not to tell those outside what they do inside. Christ says, "Let your light shine," and I go off and join a Mason's or Odd-fellows' lodge. I meet my neighbor the next day, and tell him that it is a good organization. He asks me what it is for. "To promote faith in God, the hope of immortality, and charity to all mankind; we are trying to build up the temperance cause."

"What do you do?"

"Go and pay our secretary twenty-five dollars to be initiated, and you can find out." Unless he will do that, he can know nothing of the good we are doing.

HAVING FELLOWSHIP WITH UNBELIEVERS.

Again, in these organizations you have good men and evil men together. I had a very pious and worthy elder in a church in which I was preaching, who was an Odd-fellow. I said to him one day, "How many Christians are there in your lodge?" He said, "I and Brother Woods." "How many members?" "About a hundred." "Don't you feel rather unequally yoked? Can you and Brother Woods pull against so many men? When they had that ball last winter, did you want it?" "No." "Why did they have it?" "Because we were outvoted." You may join any lodge you please and you will find anywhere from seventy-five to eighty per cent are not professing Christians.

In many towns, I know of not one prayer-meeting man connected with the Masonic lodge. Here is a Christian man, redeemed by the blood of Jesus Christ, and desiring to be a man, separated unto God and his service, and yet he joins with men who are unbelievers and some of whom are profane, and they are all brethren together. When a man enters a lodge, he takes his chances; he yokes himself with unbelieving men.

A Christian ought not to do that. "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness?" 2 Cor. 6:14. The church is God's light to shine out in the world, that men may see the ditch before they fall into it; that they may see the trap before the foot is fast.

TEACHING IMMORALITY.

Once more, the morality taught in these organizations is un-Christian and wicked. Take for example the Masonic oath, which binds the Mason not to wrong or defraud a Mason, knowing him to be such; or the other clause which binds the Mason not to have "illicit carnal intercourse with the wife, mother, sister or daughter of a Master Mason, knowing them to be such." I was once lecturing in a university, and met a number of the ladies, among them the lady principal. She said, "I know nothing about this subject. I have been thankful many times that my brother was a Mason. I have been self-supporting from my girlhood, and, when I left home, my brother gave me a Masonic token, and told me to wear it when I was alone. Three times I have been approached by men, apparently with evil intent, and three times they have turned away at that sign." The unthinking man says, "Isn't that splendid?"

That is as splendid as the devil. The devil is satisfied with a morality of that kind. God says, "Thou shalt not steal." Jesus Christ says, "If you look lustfully, you are an adulterer; you must not only abstain from outward crime, but you must have a clean heart, a clean eye." Masonry says, "Don't steal from a Mason; don't commit adultery with the relative of a Mason." A church deason once said to me, "Is that so very bad?" "How old is that boy who put out your horse?" I asked. "Twelve years." I said, "If you were to say to that lad, when he was starting for the city, 'You must not take any watches from the store on the right hand side of the street,' what would he understand about the watches on the left side?" "Why," said he, "I suppose he would understand that I wouldn't be very much offended if he took some of the watches from the left side."

An organization that binds a man to partial morality speaks against Jesus Christ and imperils the moral standards of the community.

CHARITY MISCALLED.

The charities of these orders are utterly un-Christian. They have not the first inkling of Jesus Christ in them. Their plan is to keep out anyone who is likely to need anything. Anyone who wants to join must be a good and true man, sound in mind, and with sufficient means for the support of his family, and for the support of the order.

They shut out the maimed and the halt, the women and the children, and pick out the able-bodied men, and propose to give charity to those who have paid, and the friends of those who have paid, and nobody else; this is called charity. It is not charity, it is absolute selfishness.

DENYING GOD'S PLAN OF SALVATION.

Once more, these organizations put the plan of salvation aside, and in its place put mere moral teachings enforced by material symbols. This whole system is a plan to do away with the atonement of Jesus Christ, and to lead the poor sinner to trust man in the awful day of judgment, with no hope except what his miserable paltry righteousness has been able to get for himself.

We have members of lodges by the million, learning to believe that they can be saved without the blood, by practicing temperance, or friendship, and then they teach such morality as is involved in those obligations of the Master Mason. Good works are indeed necessary, but are not sufficient.

EXCLUDING CHRIST.

These lodges not only exclude Jesus Christ by inference, they exclude him by form. In Masonic rituals, they choose readings which do not contain the name of Christ at all. They have two passages which contain the name of Jesus Christ, one of them 2 Thess. 3:6,12. Here the name Lord Jesus Christ occurs twice, but if you will take the Masonic book you will find that whole name deliberately stricken out, that name which is above every name, and which is the only hope of the church. When you ask the reason, they say that a great many conscientious members do not believe in Jesus Christ, and it would offend them. So that a man who goes into a Masonic lodge not only leaves his wife and children at the door, but he leaves his Saviour there, too.

COWERING BEFORE THIS FOE.

Why does not the church take this matter up, and warn young men who by the thousands are being ensnared every year?

What does God care for our religion if it does not lead us to protest against these evils? If we will not open our mouths to do away with evil and bring in the good, ought not the church to die? God calls the Christian church to a life of faith, and a great many of us are looking around and wondering what will happen, and how God will manage to have things turn out right. But the thunderbolts in his right hand are plenty in number.

When he sees fit to wipe out iniquity, he will do it, and if we do not do our part in fighting against evil, the judgment, when it comes, will take some of our blood with it. God make us faithful.

"If ye shall ask anything in my name I will do it." In the lodge you must not ask anything in his name.

REFORM NEWS.

THE KIND OF GOSPEL OUR TIMES DEMAND.

St. Paul, Minn., April 3, 1897.

Dear Cynosure:—Wendell Phillips used to say, "I am speaking of the eternal essence of things." The work of Wendell Phillips was an implicit function of that eternal essence while ours is an explicit function of that same essence. His work pertained to the bodies of mankind while ours pertain to their souls. The slave-holder had authority over the body only of the slave. The good Presbyterian could cut up her body with the baked green withes and boast of having "made the blood and mutton fly;" but her soul he did not pretend to touch; she might see the heavens open as the proto-martyr Stephen did when he was stoned to death.

The lodge claims jurisdiction over the souls of mankind and the bodies of men are subordinated to its end—the destruction of the soul. The lodge god claims the soul. The light-fingered gentry of the lodge play pick-pocket with each other, and defraud all outside the lodge of their lawful rights under the guise of benevolence, while the real object is to destroy the soul while they hold out the false light of a false scheme of salvation.

In the light of God's Word it is the duty of every Christian minister to unmask these batteries of hell's dominions, and warn the people from God's Word against the lodge wiles of the devil. To say, "preach the Gospel and let the lodge alone" betrays the mask of a deceitful worker, an ally of Satan's designs.

The "Father of Waters," the Mississippi river, is at flood tide; the danger line is reached and destruction follows. Hundreds of families are made homeless, and much injury is the result. This has not come without warning. Neither will the great judgment day come without warning. In fact, judgment is due and has always been due ever since man committed the first act of disobedience to our Maker. Yours in faith for righteousness, W. Fenton.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MORE ABOUT LAFAYETTE.

Chicago, Ill., April 8, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—It is difficult to reconcile the statements concerning Gen. Lafayette, copied from a San Francisco journal, on the fourth page of this week's Cynosure, and one or two well authenticated occurrences. The General died on the 20th of May. On the 30th of June (forty days later), at Charleston, S. C., and on the 29th of July (sixty-nine days after his death), in Philadelphia, Pa., the Roman Catholics publicly offered "solemn high masses" for the repose of his soul. The Church of Rome is certainly not in the habit of offering such expensive memorials for those who openly revile its Jesuit priests and attend only Protestant services, as Lafayette is said to have done. H. M. Hugunin.

OUR POSTAL CARD SYMPOSIUM.

QUESTION—HOW CAN WE BEST WITHSTAND THE INFLUENCE OF SECRET SOCIETIES?

We are much gratified at the response to the above question from so many of our readers. In order to make this question more practical, we have concluded to change it so as to read, "By what means can the anti-secret reform be best promoted in your own community?" We give a standing invitation to all friends of the cause to send us on a postal card their answer to this question. These answers will greatly help us in determining the needs of the work. The following replies have been received since our last issue:

REV. ISAIAH FARIS, VERNON, WIS.

1. By cultivating the fear of the true God in our hearts. 2. By maintaining a faithful and consistent testimony in our lives. I believe these two points embrace the whole; but they might be amplified into a volume.

REV. J. S. TURNBULL, PEOTONE, KAN.

In reply to your inquiry, I would say: 1. By large and enthusiastic conventions; 2. by showing that they are treasonable; 3. are un-Christian; 4. are un-American; 5 unrepublican; 6. by proving that they involve a great waste of time and money; 7. testifying against them in the press and in the pulpit.

M. WOODWARD, ADAMS CENTER, N. Y.

Read the Word of God and obey its teachings. I am in hearty sympathy with the Cynosure. I have taken it almost from its first publication. I have almost reached my eightieth milestone. Times are hard. I cannot do without its weekly visits. You may consider me a life subscriber. Its reading is second to none but the Word of God.

CHARLES E MALMSTROM, MAPLETON, UTAH.

Trust in God and never yield to anything that is darkness. Organize an open society, with a vow to parade with music and transparencies, and with appropriate mottoes against secret societies. Establish in connection with it a life and sickness benefit insurance, so as to counteract the influence of secret societies even in that respect. Is not open insurance better than secret insurance?

PROF R J. GEORGE, ALLEGHENY, PA.

To withstand the influence of secret orders we should: 1. Keep fully informed as to their principles, purposes, methods and fruits. 2. We should wage an aggressive warfare against them; there is no safety in indifference. The force of the out-going current must be so strong that it will make an in-coming current impossible. 3. We should unite with a church that bears faithful testimony against these Christless or anti-

Christian institutions and excludes from sealing ordinances those who bind their souls with evil men for selfish and sinful ends. Few sacramental vows will protect from the ensnaring oaths of secret orders. 4. Cultivate that enlarged spirit of charity for all that will refuse to be narrowed down to the lodge circle. 5. Walk in the light as He is in the light.

REV. CYRUS SMITH, DE KALB, IOWA.

To withstand the influence of secret societies Christians should be prayerfully, patiently, gen tly and persistently persuaded to arm themselves with the spiritual "mind of Christ," who is "the light of the world" on the secrecy question as well as on any other subject. The Christian's God is on the right side of every subject, and when the right side of the secrecy question only is maintained by the church, she will withstand the Satanic influence of secret societies with the two-edged sword of God's truth effectively.

REV. O. B. HENDERSON, HARPER, KAN.

1. By seeing to it that all the good features of these societies are found in the church with which we have to do. 2. By keeping ourselves informed as to their infamous workings by taking the Cynosure. 3. Expose and denounce them. 4. Take a stand against them and openly and publicly expose their Baal-worship, and use our influence not only to influence the young men and women to keep clear from them, but educate them to always be ready to give a reasonable reason why they refuse to fellowship with the unfruitful workers of darkness. It will make you unpopular? Of course it will—with the world. But if you are seeking the favor of God you must cease to lean upon the arm of flesh and cry out against sin wherever you see it.

JAMES A. LEARN, RIDGEWAY, ONT.

"How to withstand the influence of secret societies?" Not by the courts, for there it controls; not by war, for the army has all the officers; but by the Spirit of God, through his church and people. As for the church, so much of it is unconverted; many taken into membership simply by believing one of God's promises and calling it regeneration. Some one has said, "In order to produce conviction we must preach against the sins of the people and personate sin." Few preachers do this, and fewer still seek the baptism of the Holy Ghost so as to preach conviction. So they deceive the sinner by getting him to hold up his hand and say he believes a certain promise. Then as to "his people." So many are in a mere infantile state, not being led on into holiness, purity of heart (Acts 15:9), having the old man crucified (Rom. 6:6). The church will have to be cleaned out of this rubbish, and the standard of Christian experience raised to the Bible standard, then God will hear our prayers and send his ark out before us, and one will chase a thousand, and two will put ten thousand to flight.

REV. A. W. MORRIS, GREENWICH, N. Y.

In my judgment about the only way to withstand the evil influences of secret societies is through the education of the coming generations into the thought and purpose of nobler and better things than to give their time and thought and money to such driveling nonsense. And yet so intricately are all our institutes caught already in the web of secrecy, that there seems little hope even along this line. If we could only command increased facilities for planting the leaven of truth and righteousness in the minds of the coming citizens on this subject in time, the growing tide might be arrested. My only hope is in stopping its growth. To hope to remedy the evil, so far as those already infatuated with secret societies are concerned, is vain, unless we are able to discover an infallible cure for insanity; for I look upon the love of secret societies as a mania akin to the worst form of insanity. It apparently does those already in the meshes no good to press the most vivid truth upon them. They are hopelessly joined to their idol. The high favoritism of the lodge forestalls all hope of legislation restraining the evil by keeping its dupes always in positions of authority as law-makers and executors. It should, in a government like ours, be made a treasonable offence for a man to belong to a secret society, but, because of the foregoing reason, doubtless it never will be.

OUR LAST WEEKLY SERMON.

BY REV. J. B. GALLOWAY.

The kingdom of the world is become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Csrist. Rev. 11:15. R. V.

The great transaction is done. Great voices in heaven proclaim it. Things in this world do not always continue as now. There is a blessed hope set before the church and the groaning creation, even a time of righteous rule, and universal peace; but the latter cannot be without the former. Man on account of sin cannot use great power without abusing it; hence the world has always had corrupt government and mal-administration.

Power is so fraught with responsibility that no mere man has been or will be able to wield it with safety to himself and others. There is only one man that can do so with a holy hand—the man Christ Jesus; and he is coming to do it.

1. This kingdom will be universal as no other has ever been. It will probably be the eighth great dominion on earth. In Rev. 17:9-11, seven mountains (symbols of power or government) and seven kings are spoken of—five are fallen. What five? May we not say Egypt, Syria, Babylonia, Persia and Grecia. One is in John's day, viz., the Roman. The other, or seventh, is not yet come, and when he cometh he must continue a short space. (We have not space to speak of the beast from the pit, which is of the seven.) The harlot woman, or false religions, has ridden and will ride all these world powers to death. False religions are the worst thing in the world, and Masonry is one of them.

2. The kingdom will be on this earth as the others have been. It is the kingdom of the world that is given to Christ. He is the stone cut out of the mountain without hands, which became a great mountain and filled the whole earth. Dan. 2:34. He is the one seen coming in the clouds of heaven, to whom was given dominion and glory and a kingdom, that all people, nations and languages should serve him. Dan. 7:13.

He is the nobleman of the New Testament who went into a far country to receive a kingdom and to return; and our text indicates the time fulfilled. He will next, as a man of war, set his kingdom in order by mighty judgments on the kings of the earth and their armies. Cast the beast and the false prophet alive into a lake of fire. Then do that, without which there can be no millennium, viz., bind Satan and cast him into the abyss, where he remains for a thousand years, as harmless to tempt men as if he was dead.

3. Let us notice objections to this Bible view of Christ's glory and power.

1. Some say it is unphilosophical. We have simply to say: There are two kinds of philosophy, the divine and the human; and that the divine has always gone crashing through the human, and it will do so again.

2. "These ideas of the kingdom are too gross and material. The kingdom is spiritual. My kingdom is not of this world. The kingdom of God is within you." Luke 17:21. It was to unbelieving Pharisees Christ said this. Did he mean that the kingdom was within them? Is not the marginal reading, "Among or in the midst of you," more in harmony with the truth, when we consider that the King and his disciples was in their midst? True, my kingdom is not of the "present order of things," for that is the meaning of "world" in this text. "Too material." Matter is not in itself sinful. Christ's body was material and yet it was immaculate. When God finished creation, he pronounced it all very good. Sin brought the curse upon the ground, but the curse is to be removed.

3. "The personal reign would be degrading to tne glorified Lord." "It would be a second humiliation if he should reign here in a world of sin, sorrow and suffering." This objection is founded on the supposition that all things will continue as they now are. This is a sample of the human philosophy, and the divine goes crashing through it with "the restitution of all things." We must not forget that even the face of nature may be revolutionized by the fires of judgment and mighty earthquakes of the day of the Lord. That the nature of ferocious animals and reptiles shall be changed. "The wolf shall dwell with the lamb." "The sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp," etc. Isa. 11.

ANTI-MASONIC SPLINTERS.

—Masonry is paganism.

—Masonry is a religion.

—Ezekiel eighth is an Anti-masonic exposure.

—"No man cometh to the Father but by me." How then can lodgeites come?

—The Christian Cynosure might have been called the Western missionary.

—Charles Sumner classed Masonry, which is white slavery, with negro slavery as a foe of America.

—Masonry has come to stay. Of course, like other forms of paganism. But that is no reason for abandoning mission work.

—Jezebel's priests are recognized "ancient brethren" of modern Sun Worshipers, who hide their paganism under the name Freemasonry.

—Hartford lodge forfeited every claim to public respect when it expelled a member for convicting a worthy brother of the crime of arson.

—The anti-saloon people of Pittsburgh have a great work in prospect if they prepare their city for the coming triennial debauch of the Knights Templar.

—Learn from the enemy. Masonry makes ill-founded assertions and so produces an impression. Make well-founded assertions and reiterate them like a Mason.

—Never trust your mere disapproval of lodgeism as sufficient even for your own child. Take the trouble to know reasons, and then take the trouble to make them known.

—The Knights of Labor number 100,000 members. There were at their last annual meeting in Rochester, N. Y., about 100 delegates present from all parts of the country.

—If nothing else condemned Masonry, the report of Hartford news on page three of the Hartford Courant, for Christmas day, 1895, would alone condemn it past all exculpation.

—Worship is action. Kneeling to the East is kneeling to the sun, being so intended and understood. This is an "abomination." See Ezekiel 8:16, and see also Ex. 20:5. Have such things ceased to be "wicked abominations?"

—The heroes and advocates of Anti-masonry might well be put forth by Anti-masons, as their men are by lodges. Why not offset the plea that ministers belong to it with the other one that ministers abandon it and denounce it?

—John Quincy Adams, Daniel Webster, Chief Justice Marshall and William H. Seward, not to mention other men of similar caliber, were not weak-minded nor ignorant judges of the Masonic system and its relations to American institutions.

—It may be that one of the weakest points in anti-lodge effort is exclusive attention to the faults of secret orders, and neglect of the virtues which the lodge tarnishes or opposes; with failure to praise those who have been outside or have come out.

—A. J. Gordon's Clarendon St. church gave more to missions than all the Baptist churches in each of the States except four. At the same time Dr. Lorimer has the man who sends rum to Africa to offset missions on the platform with him as a "brother."

—Masonry could not thrive by using Anti-masonic tactics. Perhaps Anti-masonry would do well to learn from the enemy. Masonry advocates itself, puts forth the names of its members and avoids discussing the question on its merits. Anti-masonry denounces its foe and forgets its friends.

—Though not "founded on the Bible," as Masonic authority clearly allows, yet Masonry is in its essential character found in the Bible. Elijah was an Anti-mason. Jezebel was an Eastern Star patroness of Masonry. Ezekiel describes the "wicked abominations" of Masonic "elders of Israel" who had joined the order like "elders" of the modern church.

—It was a Masonic crime to convict Griswold of arson, but it was not a Masonic crime to commit arson. The Connecticut citizen, Dr. Jackson, is expelled from Hartford Lodge and Connecticut Grand Lodge shares the expulsion. But Bro. Griswold is still in Hartford Lodge and in Connecticut State prison. Of the two the latter is the more respectable place.

TO TAN A SKIN.

How to Do It Without Salt and Acid by the Use of Sumac.

This recipe is sent by some one who says that sumac is better in every way for skins than salt and acids, for the skins can then be washed when necessary and will not feel damp in wet weather. He says: The skins which people wish to tan at home are those of cats, rabbits, etc., and so only small quantities will be required. Take a pound of sumac and half an ounce of powdered saltpeter; mix together till you have a paste, and lay on the flesh side of the hide. Rub this in with the hands or a brush; roll the skin up for a week, opening it every day to dampen the paste and rub it into the skin.

Take a pail, put 4 pounds of sumac into it, and on it pour boiling water and stir all together. When the water has cooled sufficiently to put the hand in it, dip the skin in a few times and then lay it in the liquor. At the end of a week take out the skin and warm up the tanning fluid. Before returning the skin the water must be cold. Each day take the skin out of the liquor for a few minutes to give it air. In three weeks the skin will be tanned. To soften the skin, rub it on the flesh side with pumice stone.

How Consumption May Be Propagated.

Forty years ago the inhabitants of Mentone and neighborhood were a healthy, happy race of splendid physique, to whom consumption was absolutely unknown. Then Mentone became the Mecca of the consumptive. The peasants left their farms and their healthy lives to wait on the wealthy invalids. Farmers' wives and daughters became washerwomen, constantly handling clothing impregnated with the germs of consumption. Thousands of consumptives died there, impregnating the soil and the water with the germs of their disease. As the result, the earth, air and water of Mentone are infested with the tubercle bacillus and the once healthy peasantry is consumptive almost to a man and a woman. No more complete or startling proof of the truth of the once derided germ theory of disease could well be imagined than this.

How to Prevent Taking Cold.

A person in good health easily resists cold, but when the health flags and liberties are taken with the stomach or with the nervous system a chill is easily taken, and, according to the weak spot of the individual, assumes the form of a cold or pneumonia, or, it may be, jaundice. Of all causes of cold probably fatigue is one of the most efficient. A jaded man coming home at night from a long day's work, a growing youth losing two hours' sleep over evening parties two or three times a week, or a young lady heavily "doing the season," or young children overfed and with short allowance of sleep, are common instances of the victims of cold.

Luxury is favorable to chill taking. Very hot rooms, feather beds and soft chairs create a sensitiveness that leads to catarrhs. Some of the worst colds happen to those who do not leave their house or even their beds, and those who are most invulnerable are often those who are most exposed to changes of temperature and who, by good sleep, cold bathing and regular habits, preserve the tone of their nervous system and circulation.

Probably many chills are contracted at night or at the fag end of the day, when tired people get the equilibrium of their circulation disturbed by either overheated sitting rooms or underheated bedrooms and beds.

How to Cook Beefsteak and Mushrooms.

Wash and pick over the mushrooms carefully and wipe them clean and white on a wet, soft cloth. Cut off the stalks. Have a porcelain saucepan for cooking them. Put them on with water enough to cover them and stew slowly for 15 minutes. Add salt to taste and pepper, and a tablespoonful of butter rolled in a little flour for every quart of mushrooms. Let simmer three or four minutes and stir in two tablespoonfuls of cream. Let simmer a few minutes longer and then pour over your beefsteak, which has been previously broiled.

How to Make Popcorn Balls.

The corn to be preferred, if you can get it, is the squirrel tooth corn, and, if possible, that which is a year old. Shell and pop the corn in a popper, or in a tin pan with a pie plate for cover. By shaking the pan as soon as the corn gets hot, the corn will pop as well in this fashion as in a regular popper. After the corn is popped, set an iron skillet on the fire, with a cupful of molasses, a piece of butter the size of a walnut and a saltspoonful of salt in it, and cook the mixture until, on dropping a little into a cup of cold water, it will candy. Then set it on the back of the stove where it will not cook any more and stir into it just as much of the popped corn as possible. The more corn the better the candy. Then take up the pieces of corn on the top of the skillet, which have the least candy on them, and pat them into cakes, or roll them into balls. Next stir in more popcorn and repeat the process, and so on until you have used up all the candy. Set the cakes in a buttered dish to cool.

How to Clean Jewelry.

Jewels should not be wiped after being washed, except with a soft brush. Rinse them from the alcohol, or soap and water, and put them face downward in boxwood dust to dry.

How to Whiten the Kitchen Table.

Spread over it a thin paste made of chloride of lime and hot water. Leave on the table all night and in the morning wash off.

How to Extinguish Burning Oil.

Flour thrown upon burning oil will instantly extinguish it, while water only spreads the flames.

How to Prepare Shredded Eggs.

Boil 6 or 8 eggs hard; remove the yolks and cut the whites into shreds or pretty fine pieces. Put a large tablespoonful of butter into a pan on the range. Add a scant tablespoonful of flour or corn starch, if preferred, and a half pint of milk or more to make a creamy sauce. Season and set over boiling water to keep hot. Toast several squares of bread and butter them. Cover with the mixture. Put the yolks through a coarse sieve or vegetable press and sprinkle over the toast. Set in the oven about 3 minutes, although this is not necessary. Serve at once.

The Christian Cynosure.

REV. M. A. GAULT, - - - Editor.
WM. I. PHILLIPS, - - - Publisher.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 15, 1897.

HOW OUR FRIENDS REGARD IT.

One of our most valuable exchanges, the Christian Nation, of New York, thus speaks of the change in our plan of work. It is a sample of how many of the most self-sacrificing friends of the cause view it:

"The Christian Cynosure with this month will cease to appear as a weekly paper, and will be published monthly in the form of a 32 page magazine with an illustrated cover, at one dollar a year. All matter will be excluded excepting that relating to the cause of anti-secrecy. We urge our readers to give the magazine a very generous support. Covenanters ought to make it a matter of conscience to see that it is strongly maintained. Our brother, Mr. Gault, who has shown himself possessed in large measure of the qualities of a successful editor, will hereafter give a portion of his time each month, in company with Mr. Phillips, his colleague, to platform work, in behalf of the important work of oral education as to the evils of secret societies. This will be great gain."

A NARROW ESCAPE.

While calling at the Cynosure office last week Edmond Ronayne related an interesting experience he had while working the degrees in 1875 in the Opera Hall in Syracuse, N. Y. He had finished working the third degree, and the hall was crowded—the doors had been shut in the face of many unable to get in. While Bro. Ronayne was on the platform putting some books in his valise and the audience had largely dispersed, an irate Freemason with vengeance in his eye was seen mounting the platform in an effort to reach the lecturer. Rev. D. S. Kinney tried to head him off and demanded what he wanted with the speaker. He seemed determined to reach Mr. Ronayne, but Bro. Kinney's suspicions were fully aroused, and being a large man he seized the Mason by the collar and the seat of the pants and sent him sprawling down among the chairs, which produced quite a sensation among those who remained in the hall. This seemed to have quite an effect to calm the belligerant Mason for he retired apparently satisfied.

AN IMPORTANT STAGE REACHED.

While some friends of the anti-secret cause express the fear that the change of the Cynosure to a monthly magazine will decrease rather than increase its circulation, and will be a step backward, yet a larger number do not so regard it. For some years the movement has been relying more upon the press than upon the pulpit or platform. The funds contributed to the work have been mostly employed in publishing and sending out literature on the subject. Except in Minnesota and on the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts no regular lecturer has been in the field, and the need is increasing for more face to face and hand to hand contact with the people. Much of the effect of the literature is lost for want of this contact. The personal interwiews of agents and their lectures at meetings and conventions are an indispensable part of the work.

From this time on we wish to appeal to every friend of the cause to plan how we can reach the people in their respective communities by meetings and conventions. Where a church or hall can be secured and well filled with people, let it be done. But during the summer months we can best reach the people by street meetings. To do so, it will be important for the street meeting to be announced and a few friends to stand by the speakers and join or lead in singing. This is, we believe, the method our Lord would adopt if he were on earth to day. Wherever local conventions or basket meetings can be arranged, and a number of ministers can he enlisted to discuss various phases of the lodge question, it will be done. Will the friends everywhere please write us in regard to the outlook for meetings in their localities?

Do not fear that the publication arm of the work will be neglected. It will be rather strengthened and intensified. Instead of a general paper coming every week and containing much that is irrelevant to the cause, and a paper that amidst the large variety of reform papers is too often overlooked or imperfectly read, you will receive an elegant 32-page monthly magazine in most convenient form for binding and preservation, or to mail or hand to a friend whom you wish to interest in the movement. It will condense the facts and arguments on the lodge question, and each number will be an arsenal of ammunition, a magazine of shot and shell, valuable to every worker and friend of the cause. Its advantages will be that every fact and article and item will be on the lodge question. Issued monthly it will be read with greater interest, and its power will be multiplied, and it will condense what has been so often published that it has become stale to many readers.

Let every reader of the Cynosure begin at once to solicit one dollar contributions to this vital reform, and offer this elegant monthly magazine to every one who thus contributes.

THEOSOPHY.

Near San Diego, California, a section of the followers of Madame Blavatsky have laid the corner-stone of a "School for the Lost Mysteries of Antiquity." It is also announced as a "Theosophical Institute." It is to be a school where the occult sciences are to be taught. These are the sciences of the Middle Ages which related to the supernatural powers, as alchemy, magic, necromancy and astrology. The essence of this false religion, which is popularly called Theosophy, is a pretended knowledge of God without the use of the Bible. It claims by extraordinary illumination to have a direct insight into the mind of God. It is in close affiliation with Spiritualism, and is a most subtle and dangerous form of infidelity. Like every false religion it has its secret signs and ritual.

Its chief apostle is Mrs. Annie Besant, a notorious advocate of free-love, and once a co-worker with Charles Bradlaugh, the noted English infidel. In 1893 she represented this false religion at the Parliament of Religions in Chicago, and is the successor of Madame Blavatsky. They have a branch organization in Chicago, and hold their meetings in the Masonic Temple. The whole system is designed to supplant the pure religion of Christ by a revival of the ancient mysteries of the heathen world.

A SAD CASE.

It is now a little more than a year since we called upon Dr. T. D. Wallace, pastor of the Eighth Presbyterian church of this city. He willingly promised to give an anti-secret address at our last Annual Meeting. But soon a terrible affliction fell upon this pastor's happy home. A promising son of sixteen who was a student at Delafield, Wis., came home on vacation last November. On Saturday night following Thanksgiving he went to visit friends in South Chicago, but never reached his destination.

Dr. Wallace has ever since worked and prayed to find his lost boy. He scrutinized all the unidentified bodies in the city morgues, but could find no trace of him, until last Wednesday at the county morgue he identified an almost shapeless mass taken from the Chicago river as the body of his long-lost son. The inquest revealed that the body had been in the river since last November, and the evidence was conclusive that he had been robbed and murdered. The funeral was held from the residence last Saturday morning.

This sad case is only one of many for which this city is noted. We ask the question, why could this mysterious tragedy happen in our city? The answer is, because our city officials are unfaithful to duty. Why are they unfaithful? Because the people do not choose on election day men fearing God and hating covetousness. Why do the people not choose such men? Because the ministers do not preach this important Bible truth. Mr. Moody said to a Record reporter the evening before his great meetings in this city: "How do I know who is the best man for mayor? Preach the Gospel. No, I don't believe in enforcing the Ten Commandments by human statute. They must be written in the heart. And you can't enforce prohibition in this city."

Alongside of these words we wish to put those of Pres. C. A. Blanchard in his address published is this issue: "In these days the work of rescuing the individual sinner is very popular; but it is not popular to point out and put down the evil that destroys him because there are material interests involved. Men are trying to save a few wrecks here and there while thousands go down and the wreckers keep plying their trade. It is better to reform or hang the wreckers than to save one wreck."

We can't get rid of the conviction that in the difference between these two sentiments lies the disease of our body politic. And the reason why the preaching and popular evangelism of our times have so little influence to stem the tide of crime and corruption is because of this dangerous defect in preaching the Gospel. The medicine is not administered as God has put it up. The part prescribed for nations is left out. The Gospel must be applied to municipal as well as to individual life.

OUR LECTURERS IN THE FIELD.

None have sacrificed so much to make the anti-secret movement the power it is to-day as our lecturers in the field. Sacrificing home comforts they have toiled and traveled in winter's cold and summor's heat, facing the bitterest prejudices and scorn and obloquy, endangering personal safety and health, and life itself in contending against the greatest organized iniquity of our times. They are poorly paid, and labor often in communities where there are few sympathizing friends. They are often grossly abused and misrepresented by a lodge subsidized press. Indeed, we have wondered if missionaries in foreign lands have any more danger and opposition to encounter than these home missionaries in uprooting these false and rival religions in our own land.

The writer spent ten years in the reform field, not directly in opposition to secret orders, but he so often encountered their opposition that he is convinced that no form of Christian work requires such self-sacrifice, such constant, prayerful reliance upon the Divine Spirit, such strong faith and patience and such untiring devotion to the cause of Christ as the work of these lecturers. We are convinced that no form of work is so much needed in our times; no form of Christian work bears so directly on the advancement and honor and glory of the kingdom of Christ as the work of uprooting secret orders. It is a work that means the removal of the greatest obstruction to the kingdom of Christ, and to the salvation of souls.

SOME THINGS HARD TO BEAR.

The pinching poverty of the times is grevious, but to the N. C. A. has come some special hardships.

Our building, known as the gift of Dea. Philo Carpenter for a general headquarters for this cause, has usually netted the Association abou $1,000 per year over and above expenses; bu this year, owing to the depression in business and the failure some eleven months ago of our renter, has resulted in making the building cost for taxes and repairs about $500 more then the income.

Another one of the things that has been burdensome and hard to bear has been the necessity of self-defense. A damage suit for $10,000 has just been dismissed at the expense of the party bringing it, which has cost the N. C. A. about $350 for defence. The man who brought the suit had no reason except that, being thoroughly bad and dirty himself, he wanted to trample on something clean and pure, and hoped for Masonic help to aid him.

Not to weary our friends, but still give each of you fresh reasons for doing all that you can individually for the financial help of the Association, and for being more abundant in prayer for the work, we will add this last item. At the beginning of the year we held a note for $2,160 drawing interest, and secured by real estate mortgage. This note was the donation of a saint now gone to his reward. The hard times and other considerations led the maker of the note to decide that he could not pay it, and hence the N. C. A. has the land instead of the note. No sooner had this change been made, however, than the heirs, who had been treated very liberally by their father, compelled this Association to go to law to protest its interests, and so, instead of an income, there is an outgo.

Satan is a very busy devil and has many ways for repelling the attacks which we make on his kingdom; but we thank God that many thank the Lord Jesus Christ for our work and their deliverance, and that we have been able to do a work this year second to that of no other twelve months of our organization.

MUCH NEEDED TESTIMONY.

In the great Auditorium meeting in this city, Tuesday afternoon, March 30, D. L. Moody strongly urged separation from the lodge. His testimony was not reported by the press, but was along the same line as the following from his Boston sermon reported in the press of that city:

"Of course, you Christian women have a perfect right to marry a drinking man if you want to, and try to reform him, and have a little hell on earth trying to do it, but I believe Paul meant what he said, and that there wouldn't be 25,000 divorces in the country every year if men and women would marry in the Lord. I say, I believe this, 'Be ye not yoked with unbelievers,' comes down into our social life. Where are you Odd-fellows, now? Where are you Freemasons? That's the question.

"Lots of Christians don't want to give up going to the theatre. If you can go to the theatre for the glory of God, keep on going. If you think it pleases Christ, go. Mind you, I'm not talking against the theatre. I'm talking against you. Just square your life, you Christian people. If you don't want your daughter to be an actress, why do you go and encourage some other person's daughter to be one?

"Whiskey was then scored by Mr. Moody, and then the dancing school. In conclusion he said that God does not try to wean us from these things by prohibiting them, but he gives us something so much better that we do not want for the pleasures of life."

THE MOLLIE MAGUIRES.

The April issue of the American Federationist contains an article on the Mollie Maguires, by Dr. U. M. Weideman. Strange to say, the article is in strong sympathy with this murderous order. The author says: "I was intimately acquainted with John Sharkey, who murdered the mine boss Williams, and no man in the range of my knowledge had more of my esteem up to that time than John Sharkey. His home was respectable and his wife an estimable, intelligent, worthy woman. But Sharkey was the man on whom the lot fell to kill the mine boss, and the fearful oath of the order bound every man to do the stern duty devolving upon him as the order might command."

There were 75,000 men in this order which during the years 1868, 1869 and 1870 murdered 150 men in the coal fields of Lackawanna, Schuylkill and Wyoming and caused a strike that paralyzed the coal and iron business of the whole State of Pennsylvania. This article estimates the loss to the State of Pennsylvania, not counting the wages of miners or other toilers or merchants in the coal region, as from seventy-five to one hundred millions of dollars.

Dr. Weideman says: "I must say with the wife of an old citizen, of Scranton, I would sooner be a Mollie Maguire any day than have the millions of a coal magnate and his conscience with them." Again, he says of these secret assassins: "They have written their protest in blood on the page of history, and it can never be wiped out. One of them once said to the writer, 'A worm will turn if trodden upon and we have done the same,' and no wonder to me that they offered no apology for their terrible work to any man."

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. Carl H. Corwin, pastor of the Congregational church, Geneva, Ill., changed pulpits last Sabbath with Rev. W. H. Chandler of the College church, Wheaton.

—Rev. W. B. Stoddard writes: "I am thankful for a large number of Lodge Lamps containing Bro. Phillips' excellent article to scatter among the missionaries and mission workers in New York."

—A verdict of importance to members of the Royal Arcanum and other benefit societies was rendered at White Plains yesterday. The widow of Charles F. Smith sought to recover $3,000 from the order on a benefit certificate issued to her husband in 1887. The jury found for Mrs. Smith and awarded her the full amount asked.

—"Perjury" was charged by Hartford lodge in the Griswold arson case. The conviction of a criminal in a Connecticut court therefore involved what Hartford lodge calls "perjury." Is there any other gang in Connecticut that equals such a lodge in swearing its members to be confederate with criminals? Is it a "stable gang" or what? Whatever it is, some Connecticut Judge Duffey had better set himself to break it up.

—The honors and attentions showered upon General Grant during his tour of the world are perhaps unequaled in the history of kingly hospitality. He was received everywhere as the greatest soldier of his time and as the foremost living American. Hon. John Russell Young, who accompanied General Grant throughout the famous journey, graphically recalls, in the May Ladies' Home Journal, its conspicuous incidents: the receptions, dinners, fetes, balls, etc., given in honor of the illustrious American. It is said that Mr. Young brings to light a fact that has received but passing attention: that General Grant was instrumental in arranging the terms of a treaty of peace between China and Japan, which prevented an outbreak of war between those nations.

—The "Higher Criticism" controversy has already developed an extensive literature, and has opened for fresh investigation the whole question of inspiration. In the volume before us, "The Breath of God," by the Rev. Frank Hallam, we have a scholarly and remarkably eloquent work, giving an historical and critical review of this doctrine. In terse and forcible language, the author sketches the formation of the canon of Scripture, the gradual formulation of the various "theories of inspiration," and the rise of the "higher criticism." These different theories he reduces to two: the traditional and the inductive. He treats the Bible with the deepest reverence, regarding it as "an infallible guide to life and righteousness, to immortality and eternal joy." 12mo, cloth, 75 cts. [Thomas Whittaker Publisher, 2 and 3 Bible House, New York.]

—Lieutenant-General John M. Schofield will contribute to The Century for May a chapter of secret history entitled "The Withdrawal of the French from Mexico." It was intended by the United States Government that General Schofield should take charge of volunteer troops to drive the French out of Mexico, but afterward he was sent on a confidential mission to Paris to induce Emperor Napoleon to order a peaceful withdrawal. General Schofield will give a hitherto unpublished letter from General Grant to General Sherman, then in command of the military division of the Gulf, showing to what extremes the government was willing to go to accomplish its purpose. In a supplementary article, Mr. Romero, the Mexican Minister to the United States, will give his view of the relation between the withdrawal of of the French and the fall of the Second Empire.

—"Christ in the New Testament," or "Popular Lectures on Biblical Criticism." By the Rev. Thomas A. Tidball, D. D. 12mo, pp. 337, paper covers, 50 cts., postpaid. [Thomas Whittaker, Publisher, 2 and 3 Bible House, New York.] It is with great heartiness that we commend this intensely interesting and helpful book to all thoughtful readers. Ministers will find it very useful, also Sabbath-school teachers. To the general reader, however, it will be the most valuable—the reader who has not devoted much time, if any, to the consideration of the subjects treated, and yet who feels the need of proper instruction. We feel sure that no one with any earnestness can fail to have his faith strengthened, and his interest in the New Testament greatly quickened by the reading of these admirable pages. They are candid, scholarly, unsectarian and devout. A book much quoted in them is Farrar's "Messages of the Book," but this is only one of an array of authorities.

—The Gospel Trumpet Publishing Co., Grand Junction, Mich., beg leave to announce that they have nearly ready for the press "Letters of Love and Counsel for Girls," by Mrs. Jennie C. Rutty. It will be a beautiful illustrated work of about 350 pages, containing letters on various subjects pertaining to Salvation and Christian living, and such subjects as Dishonesty, Amusement, Fashion, Society Life, Novel-Reading, Dancing, Flirting, Secret Sins, Love and Marriage, Motherhood, Affliction and Death and Heaven, interspersed with numerous original poems. The author's own almost fatal experience in novel-reading together with a complete exposure of the dangers of dancing, and other snares that beset our girls, make it a book that should be in the hands of one million girls at once. To lead girls to the feet of Jesus is the only object. Your daughter and your neighbors' daughters will thank you for the privilege of reading this book. It will be beautifully bound in cloth, stamped in gilt. Price 75 cents. The same in paper cover, 35 cents.

A QUEER SORT OF CHRISTIAN.

New York City, April 8, 1897.

Dear Cynosure:—I have just mailed a number of postal cards inviting friends to Dr. Simpson's training school to-morrow morning at 9:30. Dr. Farr will join in advertising me to speak at that hour. What a blessed privilege to aid these bright, consecrated young men and women in their efforts to counteract Satan's "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain."

Last Friday my father came from Boston and we spent a few days in counsel and visitation. For Sabbath he accepted the cordial invitation of our faithful friend, Rev. James Parker, and went to Jersey City to preach, while I was made welcome in the Free Methodist church, Brooklyn. From present appearances I judge my report of Cynosure subscriptions secured here will be an increase on former years. The old friends stand by and new friends are met.

Two Cynosure readers, and I believe earnest Christian men, belonging to the 39th St. Covenanter church, have gone to their eternal reward during the past year—David Torrence and Wm. McClain. Elder Gill of the Second U. P. church, Jersey City, is among those we shall hereafter miss on earth. He helped our work as his means would allow. His death was triumphant. I called at the home of a wealthy man in Harlem. A real estate agent was there, an Episcopalian of the most ritualistic order. When asked what he thought of the secret societies, he replied:

"I'm a joiner in most all the societies going—the ritualism has charms for me."

I found him a 33-degree Mason; a Mystic Shriner, etc., etc. When asked how he could be true to Christ and his church and to a Christ-excluding institution, he asked:

"Are you a Mason?"

I replied, "I know what I am talking about."

He then stated that Masonry was older than Christ, etc. After showing him his wrong in this direction, I asked what good he had ever gotten out of secret societies. He did not know whether he had gotten anything good, or any bad out of it. Reference was made to the dissipation at lodge suppers, and Ezra T. McIntire's experience in the Boston Temple was cited. He said the meetings here in the Masonic Temple were nothing but dissipation. They never initiated candidates into the Mystic Shrine without a big lay out. Liquor at these banquets was freer than water. It was the custom for the boys after the lodge adjurned to form companies and visit bad-houses. I asked if he thought President McKinley in being initiated into the Mystic Shrine had to do certain most degrading things. He said they might have let him through without; but the night he took the degree the boys laid for him, but he told them he would knock dowr the first fellow that touched him, and, said he, "they knew I meant what I said."

This man passes for a gentleman. He has a Real Estate office on Broadway. I suppose some seeing him at church reading his prayer might think him a Christian. He spoke with the utmost freedom to me, and I admonished him as one who was to live after this life to leave this rotten institution and become free in Christ. As I attempt to consider the terrible condition of those who are in this mass of corruption, and at the same time trying to make themselves believe they are on the road to heaven, it stirs my soul with sorrow and pity. W. B. Stoddard.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems of Truth Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

God deals not only with individuals, but also with nations and governments and corporations, such as cities, as well. When civil governments put the national seal on that which is a violation of God's moral law, they may then be said to frame iniquity by a law.—Rev. C. D. Martin, Reformed Presbyterian, Pittsburg.

Youth Is the Seedtime.

We all might be in a better financial condition, our domestic relations and our religious principles might have reached a higher standard, if in our youth we had heeded the noble words and examples set forth in the little book given us by our mother, but in the words of the prophet of old, "we sold our birthrights for a mess of pottage."—Rev. F. A. Horton, Presbyterian, Philadelphia.

Gotham a Second Sodom.

I am not a pessimist, but I am not blind to the fact that the ordinary means of grace fail absolutely to make an impression on this city. Luxury spreads its temptations over the community; the public mind is intent on gain by day and pleasure by night. I cannot help but feel that we have drifted away from the real purpose of the church, which is to win man from sin to holiness.—Rev. Madison C. Peters, Reformed, New York.

Going to Hell.

Our grandfathers went to heaven by an agonizing, tortuous path, but we expect to drift there; but we will not. That mill stream does not go to heaven. To be "in the swim" is to go to hell. When Noah built his ark, his neighbors gathered around and said, "We all thought the old fellow was cracked, but now we are certain of it." They soon saw that the regenerate man was rationally the superior and the other fellow the damned fool.—Rev. John Robertson, Glasgow, at Baptist Church, Detroit.

Patriotism.

Patriotism is not an independent or even an elementary virtue. As I have said, it is born of moral integrity. It presupposes private and public honesty, truthfulness, justice, sobriety and purity. These are the virtues we need. When men possess them, there may be less declamation, but there will be more real patriotism. A man who steals when he gets into office, or accepts bribes, or sells his vote, or tries to foment disunion and hatred among his fellow men, or corrupts family life, is not and cannot be patriotic, no matter what may be his protestations.—Rev. Father Charles A. Ramm, Catholic, San Francisco.

The Masses and the Classes.

The employed and employer rise and fall together. Dishonesty, private or public, lack of confidence, the denial of long established standards of value, cause common ruin. The under man suffers most, but all suffer together. On the other hand, the prosperity of one is the prosperity of all. The interests of what are called the classes and the masses are identical. In the industrial world we may ask for wiser laws of distribution, whether in the general field of commerce or banking. We may demand a readjustment of the relations of laborers and capitalists and the introduction of reason and sympathy into relations of practical life. But the law remains. Shall it be wisely applied and in the interests of integrity and progress, or shall we vainly fight against it and bring misery to all?—Rev. Charles H. Eaton, Universalist, New York.

Snobs and Washerwomen.

The Philistine in society is otherwise known as the snob. There is a great deal of snobbery in every man. The language of the street betrays it. The other day a man, in speaking of the governor of one of our states, said: "Oh, he is no good. He is nothing but an old washerwoman." The man who will allow such language to escape his lips shows that he is a snob at heart. Such a man ought to have his own back bent over a washtub, and his own eyes filled with the steaming suds. I would give a thousand of those cigarette snobs that decorate our street corners for one honest washerwoman.—Rev. Dr. Bigelow, Congregationalist, Cincinnati.

Indians Were Once Civilized.

When God created man, he did not create him a savage. Therefore other things have brought about this savage condition. It is supposed the red man has fallen away from a higher state of civilization. It is a matter of history which I now quote that 83 years before the pilgrim fathers landed on Plymouth rock a Franciscan friar traversed the vast expanse of territory now known as the territory of New Mexico, and to his surprise discovered some of the natives living in towns and houses, far advanced in arts, etc. Ethnologists claim all savages are the degenerated remnants of more civilized races which have been overpowered by enemies and driven to take refuge in the woods.—Rev. W. Q. Bennett, Methodist, Philadelphia.

Religious Revivals and Patriotism.

There are no three men in our country, neither is there a Christian church, which will be brought to trial for promoting a revival of religion. The United States government knows too well the social and ethical value of revivals of religion to interfere with them in any way. Our whole growth as a nation has been indissolubly connected with the movements of God among the people. Whatever moral stability there is in New England, the south land, the Mississippi valley and the great west, it is there because of Christian principle and life among the people planted and nurtured by movements of grace over the whole land. We owe our enlightenment as a people and our public conscience to former revivals of religion.—Rev. James W. Marshall, Methodist, Camden, N. J.

Making the Most of Life.

Many there are who think to make the most of life by turning it into entertainment and amusement merely. The element of amusement has its proper place in the complete and well developed life—a place that is not to be overlooked. But to make it the supreme end of life, so that this great, splendid world bears no other meaning than to furnish an idle show to while away the passing hour—this is to make the least of life, rather than the most.

God has endowed man with a measure of his own power and sent him forth among men to exercise that power in the relation of life. To make the most of life is to so live that the power of man, which is of God, shall receive the noblest possible development. The supreme conception today under which every man's life must be wrought out—to attain the richest, highest result—is the thought of service, of work for humanity's good.—Rev. G. G. Hamilton, Universalist, Boston.

Woman's Future.

Woman's place is not on the farm or at the forge, in the court or counting house. She is not fitted for a soldier or a statesman, has no place on the battlefield or at the ballot box. Her place is where the spirit of love alone holds sway. Woman is to become the modern Messiah, going forth to redeem the world from its superstition and its unhappiness, removing error with the light of truth and dispelling gloom with the magic wand of cheerfulness and plenty. To purify the legislature and congress and bring cheer and hope into every hovel, to clean the Augean stables, to fumigate the prison and reform the prisoner, to stanch the wounds of the soldier on the battlefield and wave the flag of truce and peace—in short, to rule the world, with truth and love, hope, faith and charity.—Rev. Joseph Silverman, Hebrew, New York.

Every Man a King and a Priest.

Some persons make the law of obedience and citizenship in the kingdom of God end in themselves, and by deduction from this consider themselves as a little coterie especially selected by God, and so acquire the tribal or caste idea of religion, lacking the true spiritual conception of the church, to bring men's minds back to which was the object of our Lord's coming upon earth. He set aside all the old forms and appointed the 12, not to form a distinct and separate caste, but to perpetuate the spiritual essence of religion. That is the object of the ministry, to present the great ideal of a world unity. Every man ought to be not only a minister, but a king and a priest, a builder of the kingdom, not only to speak to men but to live for them.—Right Rev. David Sessums, Episcopal, Louisiana.

The Devil of Divorce.

From the Vanderbilts and Astors down or up to the humblest families of society there is an increasing demand for divorce. In 20 years 328,716 divorces have been granted by United States courts. The laws are continually being changed to make this easier, so that the holy institution of family is sadly threatened. We must ask ourselves the question, Why? We think we see some of the reasons in the general lack of a serious conception of life. We are too trifling. This is seen in the newspaper attempts at witticism regarding the so called numerous engagements of the summer girl. This is exaggerated, but the fact that there is any foundation for the witticism makes the case alarming. If marriage engagements may be treated lightly and broken repeatedly, it will be easy to carry this levity into the marriage relation.—Rev. T. J. Leak, Methodist, Pittsburg.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

Feeds Upon the Hungry and Fattens Upon Poverty.

The liquor traffic is the crime of crimes and "the sum of all villainies;" if allowed to flourish in the future as in the past—practically unchecked—it will demoralize the individual, destroy the home and demolish the church; thwart the will of the moral, law abiding elements of society; exalt vice and immorality under the guise of "personal liberty;" poison the mind of youth with the pernicious principle that liberty consists in disobedience to law when law conflicts with personal interest or indulgence, and the foundations of civil government being thus undermined, the downfall of the state will be assured.

The drink traffic is dissimilar to any other business. It gives no adequate return for value received. It saddles the state with the support of a vast multitude of lunatics, paupers, imbeciles and criminals, and the money which it pays into the public treasury as its license fee is but a mere bagatelle compared to the sum which the state is forced to expend in order to maintain and care for the wretched victims of its nefarious greed.

It feeds upon the hungry, starving poor; it fattens upon the poverty of the people; it builds costly palaces and revels in luxury while its victims shiver in hovels and gnaw the crusts of charity; it takes the young man in his nobility and makes of him a moral leper; it takes the young father in the pride and glory of his manhood and makes of him a degraded sot, groveling far below the level of the vilest beast; it takes the young woman in her beauty and purity and the young mother in her matronly loveliness and makes of them objects of shame, derision and pity; it brings poverty, disease and death into thousands of comfortable and happy homes; it laughs at purity, scoffs at religion and defies both God and man; it grows and spreads and thrives like some baneful weed, no matter what measures be taken to hedge it in; it waxes strong, arrogant and aggressive under high license or restrictive measures of any kind; it overleaps all boundaries and rushes out a devastating flood under "regulation;" you may as well try to "regulate" the Atlantic ocean.

WHISKY FOR GRIP.

"Don't Use It" Is the Advice of an Eminent Physician.

The newspapers and the physicians report that "grip" is again epidemic in New York city. Not only that, but it is in a more malignant form than usual. A large number of cases are developing into pneumonia and other serious disorders. As usual, many people are making the old mistake of rushing to their whisky bottle "to wash down the quinine." Upon request of a representative of the New York Voice, Dr. A. Monae Lesser, executive surgeon of the New York Red Cross hospital, explained how to recognize and treat the disease.

"The patient at first feels chilly," he said, "and this is followed by high temperature. These symptoms are always noticeable, but the other symptoms vary. Sometimes there is an intense headache, with pains in the bones. Again sore throat and a form of bronchitis appear, and frequently a severe bowel trouble develops, which is mistaken for typhoid fever. When the chill first comes on, take a strong cup of hot coffee. The nearest druggist can supply you with a dose consisting of five grains of bicarbonate of soda and three grains of salol. Take this dose every two hours. That is all that is necessary in ordinary cases. The less nourishment taken the better. A cup of plain meat broth may be taken every few hours when the patient is hungry. That is better than milk or food. If the pulse gets weak, a hot bath should be taken. Within the last five days I have seen 22 new cases of grip. Out of these 22 cases, 18 were treated without the use of whisky, and none met with any serious results. The other four were treated with whisky, and each one developed into pneumonia. No, sir; don't use a drop of whisky for grip."

Rum In South Africa.

Referring to the new law prohibiting the sale of liquor to natives in the Transvaal, The South African Financial Record states that out of the 24,618 natives employed by the 44 mining companies, 12.3 per cent of them were constantly drunk. With this fact before them, The Record says that, "arguing from the standpoint of pure expediency, it would have been advantageous to this (mining) industry to have paid the government a sum equivalent to the entire revenue derived from the canteen licenses for the privilege of closing them."

A Cancer In Society.

The liquor traffic is a cancer in society, eating out its vitals and threatening destruction, and all attempts to regulate it will not only prove abortive, but will aggravate the evil. There must be no more attempts to regulate the cancer. It must be eradicated. Not a root must be left behind; for until this is done all classes must continue in danger of becoming victims of strong drink.—Abraham Lincoln.

Drunkards In Turkey.

The Daily Mail of London states that for the first three offenses of drunkenness in Turkey the offender is sentenced to the bastinado, but thereafter he is considered a "privileged" or "imperial" drunkard. When such a one is arrested, he has only to give his name and address, whereupon he is taken home and a bill for services sent him the next day.

Rum Keeps Down Wages.

A drunkard will sleep anywhere—on a bundle of rags thrown in the corner of an unfurnished room. He will be content with any sort of food, will allow his family to go about in rags and will be reduced to such an abject state that he will work on any terms, will accept less than the market rate, will undersell his fellow workers and supplies the cheapest labor that is to be got.—Philadelphia Telegram.

Notes About Drink.

Cambridge, Mass., with a population of 80,000, has not had a saloon for ten years.

The total income from the liquor licenses in New York last year was $1,790,530. This year, under the Raines law, up to Aug. 1 the total amount received is $4,857,918.25.

Trained Negro Nurses.

Charleston is to follow the example of New Orleans and establish a school for trained negro nurses, both men and women. In both cities it is believed that all the nurses trained at these schools for some time to come will find employment and that there will be a demand for them in other places.—Atlanta Journal.

THAT MULE.

He Grows In Favor and Is Valuable For Export.

Recently a reporter visited the mule-yard, which is an institution in Jersey City. It has accommodations for about 10,000 mules should it be necessary to crowd that number in, a contingency which has never yet arisen. About 400 animals were placidly loafing about the yard when the reporter called. By advice of David A. Bishop, who did the conducting, the reporter took good care not to pass close behind any of the stock.

"All this talk about the mule's viciousness is bosh," said Mr. Bishop. "But he is likely to branch out a little in mere playfulness and excess of good spirits, and sometimes that results badly for persons in his immediate vicinity. I knew a man once who had a mule that would follow him around like a dog, it was so fond of him. And once after he had been on a long journey that mule was so glad to see him back that it just had to show its joy some way, and that man got three ribs broken and his under jaw knocked so far out of place that it never got back. Yet there was nothing vicious in that animal."

While speaking Mr. Bishop had led the way over to the watering trough, where a number of the tenants were having a drink. Near by were a feed manger, a hayrack and a salt manger. The animals paid no attention to their human visitors beyond a raising and projection of their awninglike ears.

"This is the kind of life they enjoy," said the mule raiser. "It's just about their style of temperature, there aren't any flies to bother them, they have plenty to eat and drink, and altogether I doubt if you could find another spot on earth where the average of contentment in higher than right here. The mule is an unambitious sort of creature. All he wants is to be let alone and he's happy. For all that it would take a very little thing to bring about a riot here that would send you and me vaulting over that fence in one second if we wanted to save our bones. All that you would have to do to start it would be to drop a rail down on the heel of one of them. They're very suspicious of any attack from behind and very quick to resent it. The first one would send the rail flying up in the air, and it would come rattling down on another one, who'd take a kick at it, and a third would join in, and first thing you knew the yard would be full of flying hoofs and the air of thuds like the banging of a muffled bass drum. That's the sound one mule's hoofs makes against another mule's ribs. There's a surprising power of resistance in those ribs. It's a good thing, too, for if there weren't the rate of mortality here would be very high."

"Do the mules ever fight among themselves just for the fun of it?" asked the reporter.

"Not those of the same variety. We have a number of varieties here, and we keep each herded separately. I've seen duels between two mules, and they were fierce and exciting, for these animals have a sort of bulldog grit, and they won't give up while they can stand."

"What is the best brand of mule?"

"A cross between a Spanish jack and a Kentucky thoroughbred mare produces a good mule. The jacks often come at a high price. I've known $3,500 to be paid for one. The mules we get here are mostly from 4 to 7 years old, between which ages they are the most easily marketable. North America breeds the best mules in the world. France exports many, but they are fat and lazy and cannot be roused to hard labor by any amount of coaxing or abuse. The South American breed are small, and while they have the spirit to work they haven't the strength, so we ship to those countries. It costs $40 a head for transportation and $6 or $8 for duty, so the mule accumulates considerable cost by the time he arrives. Speaking of a mule's strength, here is a peculiar fact—that they seem to gain inspiration by working together. I've known 20 mules to haul a 30 ton load without a protest, where if you had tried to persuade any one of them to start off with his share of 1½ tons behind him alone he would either lie down and try to die or else attempt to kick the load in two and take the lighter half."

As Mr. Bishop led the way into another division, a solid built horse with several brands on his sides walked across the yard, followed by a pack of mules. When he stopped all the mules stopped and gathered around him in admiring contemplation. This horse was Rarus, one of Buffalo Bill's animals, quiet and peaceable in the open, but a demon when saddled and mounted. He is used to lead the mules on board ship. All mules have this same respectful admiration for a horse, regarding him, probably, as a superior being. Before Rarus' time Mr. Bishop had a spotted horse named Harry, whose occupation and chief pleasure in life it was to lead the mules consigned to foreign ports on board ship and then gallop down the gangplank neighing with glee while they were being imprisoned on deck. They are very good sailors as a rule, and of a consignment of 1,500 that went to Cuba not long ago for use by the Spanish soldiery not one was seriously affected by the voyage. Of the relative values of horse and mule Mr. Bishop says:

"The average life of a mule is about the same as that of a horse. The mule has greater power of endurance, can pull more weight, is less nervous and more patient, is more intelligent and with proper treatment is equally docile. When a mule runs away, which is seldom, he doesn't smash into everything that looms up in his path, but dodges obstacles and shows himself possessed of some little common sense. A horse doesn't show any when he's excited. Of course the mule is no match for the horse in speed or beauty. Physically, however, he is the sturdier animal. His digestion is better, he isn't so liable to disease, and he can better endure the rigors of heat and cold. As a worker he is slowly but surely replacing the horse."—New York Sun.

Stock at the Yards.

The Chicago stockyards handled 2,600,476 cattle in 1896, an increase of 11,918 over the receipts of the previous year. Native beef steers averaged $4.05 against $4.50 in 1895. Prices for this class ranged from $2.90 to $6.50. It was a year of low values, owing to depression at home and the lowest prices abroad for the past five years. Bottom was touched in March, when good to choice steers did not average over $3.75. Values for good cows and heifers have fluctuated within narrow limits, and the difference in price between steers and heifers of equal quality has materially lessened. While the receipts of steers have increased, cows have come to market in lesser numbers than last year. Female stocks have been reserved for breeding, and this should stimulate the demand for bulls. Receipts of Texans decreased 36,000 and northwestern rangers fell off 160,000. The export trade largely increased, showing a gain of 54 per cent over the previous year. The number tagged for export was 243,300. This foreign demand continues strong, and the situation is encouraging for the holder of well fatted cattle. The highest prices of the year were paid in December, and the advance has been marked since the opening of the present year.

Feed For Cows.

A cow's food should contain about 14 pounds of starch, 2½ pounds of nitrogen and one-quarter pound of fat, the latter in most cases being found in a large enough quantity in the former two. Farmers who have used silos for the storing of their fodder find that their expense attending the feeding of the cows by this method is trivial compared with beets. Protection to the cattle in the winter is of special importance for the maintenance of a standard product. The starch in a cow's food acts as a fuel, but not sufficient to keep the animal's temperature at normal. Experiments have proved that cows kept in the fields, although eating more than those protected in the barn, drop one-half in their production in three months, while those in the barn remain at standard and consume no more than usual. Many farmers complain of stringy milk and are at a loss to understand it. It is because the cow's udder is not cleaned as often as it should be, and when she is milked the musty hay from her bedding, which has collected on her udder, drops in the pan, with stringy milk resulting.

Handling a Jack.

Concerning the procreative capacity of the jack when moved about from place to place, a well known authority says: The best results from standing a jack are derived by putting him in a good, roomy paddock, with a nice, clean, dry box stall in which the door is never closed. Let plenty of grass and good, pure water always be present and feed a good sheaf or shelled oats and bran ration.

The moving the jack around from place to place will not interfere with his producing colts if he is properly handled and not moved far enough to tire him materially. In moving him move slowly and see that he is not overheated and that he is permitted to cool off before being used to mares. Be sure not to overbreed, as this injures him more than all else. It is colts you want, not services. Twice a day and not nearer together than eight hours will bring the best results.

Live Stock Points.

If New York had only a few royalties to enter beasts annually at the live stock show, what a howling success it would be, instead of the unfortunate orphan it is now. The Four Hundred would flock in droves to gaze in unspeakable awe and admiration upon the big hog of the Prince of Wales or the fat heifer of her majesty the queen, and all the rest of New York's lower million would follow suit. Even a swine belonging to his royal highness would be an object of adoration to first society. Why do not the managers of this poor starveling show take the hint and get Albert Edward to send a pig or some other beast to their display? It would be thousands in their pockets. Live stock association managers in Great Britain understand this very well, and royal and noble names are always among the lists of exhibitors there. For instance, the usual fat cattle show at Islington this year was a great success, with 574 entries. We know why it was a great success when we read that among the animals were specimens belonging to the queen, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York and Lord Rosebery.

Pacing horses are not in demand for Europe. They have never become the fashion yet, and few European horse fanciers know what they are.

It is the verdict of good judges that auction sales for swine are not an unmitigated success.

A PLAIN LESSON.

But It Is Hard For Dairymen to Learn It.

A correspondent of The Country Gentleman makes the following clear statement of fact:

"In a recent number of the Michigan Farmer I read a communication from E. F. Brown, giving the result of a test made and record kept of the production of one cow in a dairy, which clearly teaches a most valuable lesson that was entirely overlooked in the report.

"During eight weeks following Feb. 9 this cow gave 1,668 pounds milk, or 28 5-7 pounds per day on an average. But there was a variation from 193 to 218 pounds per week, and a history of the way in which she was fed and treated during the time, and it is in this we are to find the lesson.

"For instance, during the first week, Feb. 9 to 16, she gave 201 pounds and the next week 214 pounds, or a gain of 13 pounds. Now, the first week was warm and pleasant, and she was turned out every day 20 minutes to drink, but the next week was a regular blizzard, and she was not turned out at all, but watered in the stable twice a day, and gained almost two pounds per day, while the rest of the herd, turned out as usual, shrunk 10 to 12 pounds each. She therefore showed an absolute gain of about 25 pounds per week, or over 6 1-2 pounds per day, or over 12 per cent. Now, this milk was made in winter and was worth at least $1 per 100 pounds, and, if so, it paid 25 cents per week just for the care and comfort. Twenty-five cents per week means, for 26 weeks, the usual period of stabling cows, $6.50, and this for an absence of 20 minutes' exposure each day and for added care and comfort. And yet how many cranks we have who claim that the cow must go out every day for a breath of fresh air, and usually they mean run out from two to four hours. If a man has, say, 15 cows, the loss for the 20 minutes' exposure each would be $97.50, or a good deal more than it would cost to hire a man to care for them.

"But there was another factor which entered into this gain which should not be overlooked. A part of this gain was due to the fact that in the second week she was watered twice a day instead of once.

"The average dairyman does not seem to realize the importance of giving his cows all the water they want and when they want it. He does not remember that more than 87 per cent of the milk is water, and that without this water, no matter how well the cow is fed, she can't make the milk. Nor does he realize how difficult it is—in fact, that it is impossible—for the cow to drink at one time enough water to do her for a full day and have her do her best.

"An average 1,000 pound cow in full milk must have from five to seven pails of water every 24 hours, and compelled to take this enormous quantity all at one time she is badly handicapped.

"Every man on watering twice a day will notice a change from once watering, and when watering three times he will see an increase over twice, and those who put in a stable watering device and give cows constant access to water are always surprised at the gain."

Effectual Prayer.

There is an awful amount of so called prayer that is only from the throat outward; it begins nowhere and ends in nothing. Such pointless repetitions of stereotyped phrases must be as wearisome to God as they are unprofitable to the utterers. There must be pith, point and purpose as well as faith in every effectual prayer. At an evangelistic meeting for "roughs" over in New York, when the leader called on some one to pray, a hard looking character in the crowd arose and said: "O Lord, forgive me for being a bad man, and please excuse me, Lord, from saying any more now. Amen." He did not need to say any more. He had told God just what he wanted.—Rev. Dr. Cuyler in Central Presbyterian.

Botany.

Botany was scientifically discussed by Aristotle about 347 B. C. He is acknowledged to be the father of the science. Works on botany appeared in several European languages about the close of the fifteenth century, general attention being at that time directed toward the study of this science. The first encyclopedia of plants appeared in 1829.

Not Legal Tender.

"What's the matter, chum?" asked the college student of his roommate, who was making the air a dark blue.

"Matter! I wrote the governor to send me some money for textbooks, and here he's sent me the books. I can never pay my bills at this rate."—Detroit Free Press.

The unity of earthly creatures is their power and their peace, not like the dead and cold peace of undisturbed stones and solitary mountains, but the living peace of trust and the living power of support, of hands that hold each other and are still.—Ruskin.

THE CITY ELECTIONS.

CARTER H. HARRISON IS ELECTED MAYOR OF CHICAGO.

Democrats Capture the City Council and All the Other Places Worth Mentioning —St. Louis Goes Republican and the Democrats Win in Detroit.

Chicago, April 7.—The mayoralty election yesterday resulted in a decisive victory for the Democratic party, its candidate, Carter H. Harrison, having more votes than all other candidates combined.

At midnight available figures gave Sears 60,000; Harrison, 148,000; Harlan, 72,000; Hesing, 18,000.

The feature of the election was the strength shown by Harlan. He ran second to Harrison, and although independent, with no organization behind him, he secured more votes than the regular Republican candidate, Judge Nathaniel Sears. One thing that helped Harlan greatly was that Sears was looked upon as being the nominee of the Republican "machine," which has grown unpopular in the ranks of the Republican party.

Results on the Town Officers.

The Democrats made a clean sweep of all the town offices in the west town and north town, and probably in the south town also, although the Republicans have a fighting chance to get the assessor in that part of the city. Of the thirty-four aldermen, returns point to the election of twenty-six Democrats, four Republicans, and four independents. Three of these independents are Democrats, who went upon the ticket by petition.

Carter H. Harrison is a son and namesake of the late Mayor Harrison, who was assassinated during the closing days of the World's fair. The popularity of his father was an immense advantage to the mayor-elect in his campaign, and contributed to the victory yesterday. Harrison is 37 years old, and never before held a political office. He was educated at Heidelberg and Yale. During the greater part of his business career he has been associated in the real estate business with his brother, Preston Harrison, but was business manager of the Chicago Times during the four years the Harrison family owned that paper.

At Other Illinois Points.

Peoria—The township election resulted in the selection of a majority of the Republican ticket. William Lyons, Democrat, is chosen collector by a majority of about 600, while the Democrats secure three of the minor offices. The remainder of the ticket is Republican. The majority is greatly reduced over a year ago, ranging from 200 to 500.

Galesburg—The Republicans won the city election, defeating the Independent ticket by 1,000 majority. Forrester F. Cook, for mayor, defeated D. W. Aldrich.

Moline—Gustaf Swensson, the present incumbent on the People's ticket, defeated William Lundahl, the Citizens' candidate for mayor, by a majority of over 500. It was a personal and financial issue.

Rock Island—The Democrats carried the day here by electing Medill mayor and most of the city officers. The Republicans carried the township officers. Both sides have small majorities.

CINCINNATI DEMOCRATIC.

Gustav Tafel Elected Mayor by a Plurality of 6,755.

Cincinnati, April 6.—The election in Cincinnati yesterday was for mayor and other officers. The Republican ticket was headed by Levi C. Goodale for mayor, and the Democratic ticket by Gustav Tafel, the latter being elected by a plurality of 7,320, while the city gave McKinley a plurality of almost 20,00 last November, and Caldwell, Republican for mayor three years ago, a plurality of 6,755. The Democratic ticket had three Republicans on it—for city auditor, treasurer and corporation counsel—but under the recently enacted Dana law it could not be called a fusion or independent ticket. There was a total vote of over 65,000, as compared with 78,000 last November, being an unusually large vote for a local or spring election.

Canton, April 6.—The home of McKinley yesterday went Democratic. Mayor Rice for re-election carrying it by over 400. The remainder of the ticket is divided, the Democrats winning a majority of the offices. The vote was lighter than last fall, but nearly up to the average spring vote.

Cleveland, April 6.—The returns of the municipal election indicate that Mayor McKisson (Rep.) has been re-elected by a majority of 2,500 over John Farley, Democrat. All the other candidates on the ticket are elected by larger majorities, some running up to 10,000. The Republicans elect all four candidates for the school council and nine out of eleven members of the city council.

ST. LOUIS ELECTS THE REPUBLICANS.

Zeigenhein Carries Off the Mayoralty—Silver Republican Successful at Denver.

St. Louis, April 8.—The returns show that Harry Ziegenhein, for mayor, and the whole Republican ticket is elected by majorities ranging from 4,276 to 24,-24,038. Ziegenhein ran far behind his ticket, as did Robert McMath, for president of the board of public improvements, whose majority was the lowest received. The former came next with a majority of 6,163, while Isaac M. Mason, for treasurer, received a majority of 24,038.

Denver, Colo., April 7.—The mayoralty contest was a warm one. There were thirteen tickets in the field, and three candidates were confidently expected to be elected. It was a victory for the present incumbent, Thomas McMurray, a silver Republican, who was running independent against a Democrat and a straight Republican. His plurality was 4,000 to 5,000.

ELECTIONS IN THE BADGER STATE.

Milwaukee Impartial as to Parties—Returns from Outside Towns.

Milwaukee, April 7.—The election in Milwaukee yesterday was for judges of the superior and county courts and for associate justice of the supreme court. J. E. Mann, a Democrat, is re-elected county judge, and George E. Southerland, a Republican, is elected superior judge. The total vote in the city was 9,695, against 60,000 in November. There was no opposition to Marshall for the supreme bench.

Other points in the state report as follows:

Watertown—Edward Racek, Democrat, the present mayor, defeated J. T. Moak, Republican, by 162 majority.

Oshkosh—A. B. Ideson, Democrat, is elected mayor by 500 majority. The council is in doubt, but probably Democratic.

Madison—The Democrats swept this city, electing mayor, treasurer and most of the council, more than reversing the result of one year ago.

Racine—In the municipal election party lines were slashed and the personal merits of the candidates formed the issue. Fred Graham, Dem., was elected mayor by 1,100 plurality. The Republicans elect four of the seven aldermen. Schroff, Rep., was elected city clerk.

Chippewa Falls — The Republicans have elected E. Poznanski mayor. W. J. McDonald, Republican nominee for city treasurer, is probably elected. The Democrats seem to have elected the majority of the council and Judges Condit and Lunney for municipal and county judges.

West Superior, Wis., April 7.—Charles S. Starkweather was yesterday elected mayor of Superior

Results at Dubuque and Keokuk.

Dubuque, Ia., April 6.—The Independents elected T. T. Duffy mayor, L. M. Langstaff recorder, Henry Gniffke treasurer, and two aldermen. The Democrats elected T. H. Duffy attorney, and three aldermen. The council will be controlled by the Democrats.

Keokuk, Ia., April 6.—The city election resulted in favor of the Republicans, who elected the mayor, assessor, judge of the superior court, and five aldermen. The Democrats elected the marshal and two aldermen. The constitution of the city offices and council is unchanged.

NEWS OF THE STATE.

ITEMS WHICH WILL BE OF INTEREST TO OUR READERS.

A Condensed Report of the Proceedings in the State Senate and House, Showing What the State Lawmakers Are Doing at Springfield.

Springfield, April 8.—The legislature was in session again yesterday. The governor sent to the senate the following appointments which were confirmed: Members of the Illinois commission of claims—J. G. McKenzie, of Elizabeth; Walter Louden, of Carlyle; W. C. Jones, of Robinson. Grain inspector at Joliet—Thomas Stevenson, of Joliet. Grain inspector at Savannah—F. E. Lewis, of Thomson. A bill was introduced and sent to second reading repealing the city civil service law. The following bills were passed: Compulsory education law; offering a bounty of 10 cents a head for crows; extending from three to ten days the time for claims for sheep killed by dogs; exempting from garnishee the proceeds of the sale of exempt property.

In the house the speaker counted a quorum as the national speaker does, and will do so whenever necessary hereafter. The Democrats had refused to vote on a resolution to investigate the cause of the deficit in the state revenues, and on its passage it got 66 votes. After counting others present and not voting the speaker declared the resolution carried. Democrats raised an uproar but were ignored. A bill was introduced to repeal the city civil service law, and the bill making corporations responsible for damages arising from the fault of their employes was passed.

The house Republicans caucused last night and resolved that no member be absent without leave hereafter this session and that the congressional and senatorial apportionment bills be passed.

Springfield, Ills., April 9.—Governor Tanner sent to the senate yesterday a new board of Lincoln park (Chicago) commissioners, but the senate refused to suspend the rules to go into executive session and confirm the nominations. A motion to postpone the Humphrey street railway bills to next Wednesday prevailed, and a similar motion, naming Thursday as the time, prevailed as to the two Chicago revenue bills.

The house recalled the judicial apportionment bills to second reading and struck out the Tanner amendment. The bicycle baggage bill was practically killed by a refusal to suspend the rules and take it up. Bills were passed to enable corporations created for the purpose to transact a surety business in this state, and to become surety on bonds required by law; authorizing the election of a board of school directors in Marion county; to permit graduates in osteopathy to practice medicine. A number of bills were advanced to third reading.

Rev. James Miller's Insurance.

Bloomington, Ills., April 12. — Mrs. Sarah V. Miller filed a suit here against the Knight Templars' Life Insurance company for $10,000. She is the widow of Rev. James Miller, who was found dead last fall in Decatur, with a bullet hole in his head. The coroner's jury found a verdict of suicide, and on that ground the company refused to pay his life insurance.

Assets Exceed Liabilities.

Quincy, Ills., April 9.—The J. R. Dayton Tablet company closed yesterday under chattel mortgages of $25,000 to Ricker National bank, of Quincy; $14,000 to Mrs. J. Kibbe, of Springfield, and $4,000 to Kimberly and Clark company, of Appleton, Wis. The total liabilities are $85,000; assets said to exceed $100,000. The company will be reorganized.

Pauper Who Is Heir to $20,000.

Springfield, Ills., April 9. — Arthur Quinn, of this city, who is at present an inmate of the poor farm at Bloomington, is heir to a fortune of $20,000 by the death of his brother, Frank Quinn in Philadelphia five years ago, and the latter's wife, who died recently in Pennsylvania.

Pioneer Merchant Dead.

Bloomington, Ills., April 9.—Stephen Smith, a pioneer dry goods merchant of Bloomington, died suddenly yesterday afternoon, aged 70. He was one of the best-known merchants west. He celebrated his thirty-seventh anniversary of beginning business at Bloomington last Monday.

TALL SYCAMORE FALLEN.

Death Strikes Down the Hon. Daniel W. Voorhees.

Washington, April 12.—Daniel Wolsey Voorhees, whose death occurred in this city last Saturday, had been ill for some time, and with a disease that always carries off those upon whom it once fixes—itself—angina pectoris. He was 76 years of age last September, and prior to his retirement from public life on March 4 last had been for many years one of the most picturesque figures in the senate. He was born in Liberty township, Butler county, O., and in his early infancy was carried by his parents to their pioneer home in the Wabash valley, Indiana. In 1849 he was graduated from the Indiana Asbury (now DePauw) university, and began the practice of law in 1861. His first public office was entered upon in 1858, since which time he had been almost continuously in the public service. That office was United States district attorney for Indiana. His congressional career began in 1861, and he went to the senate in 1877 by appointment, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Oliver P. Morton, and because of his long experience in the house was assigned immediately to the finance committee, a very unusual honor in the case of a new senator.

Senator Voorhees was latterly one of the ardent admirers and supporters of the United States greenback, and beginning his senatorial service with a most eloquent speech in favor of the preservation of the full legal tender quality to this money he never abated at any time his earnest advocacy of the greenback. In appearance Senator Voorhees was one of the most striking figures in the senate. He was familiarly known as "The Tall Sycamore of the Wabash," by reason of his large and magnificently proportioned figure. As an orator he had few peers, commanding a magnificent vocabulary and imbuing his utterances with a degree of earnestness and feeling that strangely influenced his auditors.

His legal reputation, in fact, was based largely on his forensic powers, and it is an undoubted fact that success attended his efforts in many cases commonly regarded as almost hopeless, owing to his ability to sway the jury by the magnetic qualities of his address.

Denied by Prince Constantin.

New York, April 12. — The Press prints the following from its special correspondent at Larissa, Thessaly: I had a personal interview with the Crown Prince Constantin, commander-in-chief of the Greek troops, at his headquarters here this afternoon. The prince talked freely of the situation now confronting the people. He said: "The incursion into Turkish territory by several rebel bands of armed Greeks was wholly unauthorized by me, and absolutely against my policy and my instructions from the king. Their attack upon the Moslems will by no means be used as an excuse to begin war, and I shall do my utmost to prevent a repetition of such a violation of the neutrality laws. The Turkish position captured by these rebels will not be occupied by the Greek army, nor will we aid the invaders in any way. I shall remain here without taking any aggressive action unless forced to, no matter how long it may be, until the Cretan question is finally settled."

Hundreds Are Destitute.

Fargo, S. D., April 9.—The waters are receding and the danger point is passed in one of the greatest floods this city has ever experienced. Now comes the replenishing of flood sufferers. Hundreds of people are destitute. Relief committees are doing all in their power for the destitute. The secretary of war has just wired Mayor Johnson of this city asking what amount was needed for immediate relief. The mayor wired back that $10,000 would be needed.

Michigan Election Returns.

Detroit, April 7.—Returns from the state election are still fragmentary, but it is evident that Justice Long, of the supreme court, is re-elected by upwards of 40,000 plurality. Complete figures in the Detroit election give Maybury, Democrat, 550 majority over Stewart, the Pingree candidate. Out of sixty cities in which mayors were elected the silver party carried twenty-eight, Republicans twenty-seven.

Evansville Carried by the Democrats.

Evansville, Ind., April 6.—The Democrats elected William M. Akin, Jr., mayor and eleven aldermen. The city went Republican in November last.

1 Ball Shoe Thread.
1 Bunch Bristles.
4 Harness Needles.
1 Soldering Iron.
1 Bottle Soldering Fluid.
1 Box Rosin.
1 Bar Solder.
1 Directions for Use.

All these tools are full-sized, practical, neat, and cheap; not mere toys. They enable any person to do his own half-soling, boot, shoe, rubber, harness, and tinware repairing.

This Outfit is the result of years of study, experiment, and correspondence in the manufacture of Iron Lasts and Repairing Outfits; and its practical advantages need only to be seen and tried to be appreciated.

Our Improved Iron Lasts and Standard are one of the handiest tools you can have about the place. The Lasts are four in number, smooth and solid, 4, 6, 8 ,and 10 inches long, thus enabling one to half-sole all sizes of foot-wear. The Standard is made with an iron base, which can be easily fastened to the bench. No method of half-soling is now used on common work, except that of iron last and wire clinch nails. The writer of this has been in the business 20 years, and has seen the changes from the old wooden lasts and pegs to the modern method, and knows it to be complete.

Our Improved Harness and Saw Clamp is an indispensable tool in sewing a harness or filing a saw. The jaws are thrown open mechanically by a coiled spring on the bolt.

The weight of this outfit is 18 lbs. Price, all complete, packed in a neat, strong box, only $3.00.

The Home Repairing Outfit No. 2.

FARM AND GARDEN

CONVENIENT HOG TROUGH.

It Prevents Climbing Into the Feed and Has Other Advantages.

The customary V shaped hog trough is probably the most practical, cheapest and easiest made device for the purpose, and with a few changes can be made much more convenient than the narrow little spout which we find on many farms. One of these improved troughs was recently illustrated and described in Farm and Fireside.

IMPROVED TROUGH.

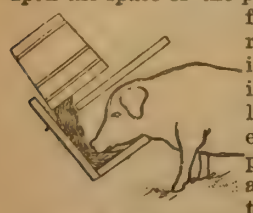
In the first cut is shown a trough made of two 2 inch oak planks. The one on the side from which the hogs feed is 8 inches inches wide and the other anywhere from 15 inches upward —the wider the better. The end pieces are also 2 inch plank, and to fit the whole trough tightly between the sides of the pen the wide plank should be notched so that the upper part is just even with the outside of the end pieces, see a, a. A wide board is fastened by means of a couple of cleats, b, b, tacked to the sides of the pen in a slanting position, as shown in the cut. In a large pen it would be better to use a 2 inch plank for the latter.

The advantages of such a trough are these: The narrow spout is here changed into an opening the whole length of the trough, enabling the feeder to scatter the feed to accommodate any number of hogs. This is especially convenient when feeding apples, potatoes, corn or any other kind of grain. It prevents all fighting, pushing and jamming to see which can get nearest to the spout when being fed.

The slanting board, c, prevents hogs from climbing into the trough, and while it does not interfere or infringe upon the space of the pen, it makes the feeding alley roomier, which is quite an item in a building of limited size. In emptying the pail this slant is a great advantage. It allows the pail to be turned almost bottom side up, as can be seen by the cross section shown in the second cut.



CROSS SECTION OF TROUGH.

The trough itself is all that is needed for a partition. It can be easily moved in either direction, and a nail or two driven through each side of the pen into the end pieces will hold it securely in its place wherever it is desired.

Another important point about a hog-pen, but one which is generally neglected, is a bridge or easy passageway from the pen to the yard. For the health of the stock it is necessary to give them free access to pure air and a chance to keep their pen clean. A small yard is sufficient for this, and the bridge should be level with the pen floor, of easy grade, and slatted or otherwise rigged to prevent hogs from slipping when passing in or out.

Kaffir Corn.

In experiments conducted at the Kansas station the largest yield so far obtained of Kaffir corn was with red Kaffir corn, 98.7 bushels of seed and 12.29 tons of fodder per acre. On 48 trial plats the rows varied from 16 to 32 inches and the plants from 4 to 8 inches in the row. The largest yield of grain was obtained with plants 4 inches apart in 32 inch rows. Experiments have shown that when corn and nearly all other crops are complete failures, Kaffir corn will yield a fair crop of forage. At this station red Kaffir is preferred to white. It grows 6 to 9 inches taller, ripens earlier, does not shell in handling, has a juicier stalk and the head always pushes clear of the upper sheath. The seed of white Kaffir corn is liked better by stock. The black hulled white has been grown the past season only. It is very promising and may surpass the red.

Potatoes In Minnesota.

In a Minnesota station bulletin notes and tabulated data are given on 45 varieties of potatoes tested at the station farm, 23 varieties in Lyon county and 16 varieties in McLeod county. Among the largest yields per acre are the following: At the station farm, Rural New Yorker No. 2, 388 bushels; Lee Favorite, 349 bushels; Early Everitt, 343 bushels; Early Oxford, 328 bushels, and Irish Cobbler, 325 bushels; in Lyon County, World's Fair, 551 bushels; American Wonder, 528 bushels; Irish Daisy, 510 bushels; Early Oxford, 470 bushels, and Pearl of Savoy, 467 bushels. In McLeod county the highest yield was given by Summit, 227 bushels.

Montana's Wool.

According to the statistics furnished by the American Woolgrowers' association, Montana leads all the states and territories of the union in the number of her sheep and in the quantity of wool produced during the last year. In addition to this, the wool of Montana is pronounced to be of superior quality and higher grade than that produced by any other of the newly created western states. The number of sheep assessed throughout the state of Montana for the year 1896 was 2,812,829, which showed an increase of more than 210,500 over the number assessed in 1895.

News and Notes.

A new fungicide for the treatment of smuts bears the name ceres-pulver. It consists mainly of potassium sulphide.

An extra early forcing radish, remarkable for the small size of its leaves and called leafless radish, is said to be of excellent quality.

An exchange calls attention to a neat package for green beans, peas, etc. It is the half barrel basket. It is an exaggerated edition of the peach basket, though much higher in proportion to its size. It has a wooden cover.

Farm Journal says: Do not plan to plant any one kind of fruit tree in a solid block. Be sure and mix the varieties. Otherwise the orchard will never bear as it should.

The practice of feeding the grain crops, oats or oats and peas unthrashed is becoming common in some localities.

The hot water treatment is now very generally advised for the prevention of smut of oats, wheat and barley.

Sixteen varieties of potatoes are reported as above the average in yield, at the Ohio station—American Wonder, Columbus, Carman No. 1, Early Northern, Forest Rose and Irish Daisy leading.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A GOOD, RELIABLE WATCH CHEAP.

FREE FOR A CLUB OF TWENTY SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the demand for a good cheap watch, we have made arrangements to furnish this reliable and durable timepiece at a very low figure. This is no "below cost" or "sheriff sale" watch. The price we ask is more than we pay, but so little more that we could not send them a cent less if you ordered a bushel. ☞ There is

No Reliable Watch Cheaper Than This!

READ CAREFULLY! The movement is a 7 jeweled Elgin or Waltham with stem wind and stem set. To set the watch: Pull out the stem until it "clicks," when you can turn the hands at will. Press back in position to wind. By this arrangement you only need to open the watch to regulate it, and your movement is kept as nearly dust-proof as possible. The case is Silveroid (not silver), yet can hardly be told from solid silver. Will keep its color always. Is screw back and bezel, tight fitting, handsome and strong and will last a lifetime. Before the late reduction in price of this movement the retail figure was $12.00. WE GUARANTEE this watch to be perfect, and will refund the money if not exactly as represented. REMEMBER, this is not a Chronometer, nor will it regulate the sun, but it is a good, reliable timekeeper. Sent by express for $5.75. If wanted by mail add 25c. for postage.

This movement in a solid silver case, described as above, only $9.50.

MASONIC CHART.

ILLUSTRATING THE RELATION OF SOME OF THE DEGREES AND RITES IN FREEMASONRY TO EACH OTHER.

The accompanying chart represents one hundred and forty two degrees.

1. The American Rite of 13 degrees;
2. The Scotch Rite of 33 degrees;
3. The Egyptian Rite of 96 degrees.
4. The Mystic Shrine of one degree.
5. The Eastern Star of 5 degrees for Master Masons and for women. These are side degrees, and not genuine masonry.

The Symbolic degrees, or Blue Lodge of three degrees, are common to every Masonic rite, whether American, Scotch, or Egyptian, or whichever of the Masonic rites, named in Mackey's Masonic Encyclopedia one may choose to investigate.

This chart shows in the Blue Lodge the position of the Worshipful Master and some of the other officers of the lodge. Several positions of the candidate who is being initiated are also shown. In the Master Mason's degree is recognized the murder, burial and resurrection scene so full of religious significance to Freemasons.

Finney on Masonry. Cloth 75c., paper 35c.
The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By ex-Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasony Self-Convicted. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40c.
This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them.

Judge Whitney's Defence before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. 15c.
Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. 10c.
This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life-undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder and Oaths of 33 degrees. 304 pages, cloth, $1.00,
"Composed of Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees."

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor of United Presbyterian church.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in New Berlin trials 10c.
The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiation by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties,

Grand Lodge Masonry. 5c. each
Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to Republican Government. 15c.
By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.

Knoxville, Tenn., April 9.—Never in the history of Knoxville has the city suffered such a loss by fire as it did yesterday. The very heart of the city, including some of the largest wholesale and retail business houses in the south, was destroyed. The loss is variously estimated at from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000, with about 60 per cent. of insurance. The loss of life is very uncertain, as the register of the hotel in which fifty-six people were sleeping was burned. The proprietor of the hotel says that he had five or six guests who have not put in an appearance. A. E. Weeks, of Locke, N. Y., drummer for a Rochester stamping company, is known to have perished in the flames. R. W. Hopkins, a St. Louis drummer, was last seen in the burning building in a suffocating condition. W. H. Kephart, ex-secretary of the chamber of commerce, saved the life of John Bogle, an old farmer, by dragging him to a window and letting him out on the roof of another building. Kephart jumped one story and was injured.

Imminent Peril of a Woman.

When the firemen thought all the inmates of the hotel had escaped a woman with an infant in her arms rushed to the rear window and screamed for help. A net was quickly stretched and the woman asked to drop the child out, but as the smoke almost choked her she told them that if one had to die, both would die. The woman was finally rescued by the firemen. From the hotel building, which is five stories, the fire spread east and west, and a stiff wind made the flames very ugly and the fire department was inadequate. In the wholesale hardware house of W. W. Woodruff & Co. a large dynamite explosion occurred, and scores of people were hurt by flying brick and glass.

Used a Howitzer on the Blaze.

It became necessary at last to have the walls of one building blown down by cannon to stop the mad career of the fire. A mountain howitzer of the Knoxville legion was called into play and a load of canister did the work, at the same time tearing up some residences in a different part of the city. The city authorities, realizing that the fire department was unable to conquer the flames, telegraphed to Chattanooga for assistance. An engine was placed aboard a flat car and started the run of 111 miles which was made by Engineer Robertson in 109 minutes, breaking the record. When the engine arrived here the fire was about under control, yet the Chattanooga boys did some good work.

FURTHER RECORD OF CASUALTIES.

One Man Falls Dead from Fright—List of the Known Lost.

Altogether twenty-seven firms were burned out, including the hotel. A cabinetmaker named P. C. Dyer fell dead on the street from fright. A man named Robinson from Pulaski, Tenn., is supposed to be another victim. He was registered in the hotel and has not shown up. A large force of men is at work clearing away the debris and searching for the bodies. The street car lines are completely tied up and all the electric companies have suffered. One Knoxville architect has received orders for plans for eleven buildings to take the places of the ones burned. All the buildings are to be replaced at once. It is more than probable that J. C. M. Bogle, the old gentleman hurt in the hotel, will die. He inhaled flames and can neither speak nor swallow.

The last man to leave the burning hotel says that he is positive that five or six persons were burned. He ran over three or four men in the hallways who were suffocated. J. M. Dean, of Kansas City, who jumped from the burning building, tells a thrilling story of his escape. He started out with only a nightshirt on, and had that torn off before he reached the street. His room mate, W. A. Tabor, was more fortunate, having saved two shirts. The T. P. A. members of the local post took care of all the drummers, buying some suits out and out. W. H. Mitchell, of Abingdon, Va., jumped from the burning building to the bank building.

U. I. Johnson, a railroad baggagemaster, came down from the fifth floor hand over hand on the water pipes before the fire engines arrived. Only one of the guests saved any of his effects.

The list of dead and injured so far reported is as follows: Dead—A. E. Weeks, Locke, N. Y.; R. W. Hoqkins, St. Louis; —— Robinson, Pulaski, Tenn.; S. E. Williams, Springfield, Mass. Injured—J. C. M. Bogle, Tennessee, burned and will die; D. M. Dean, Indianapolis, ankle sprained; Tom S. Peck, Morristown, Tenn., ankle cut and sprained; Lieutenant Hood, Knoxville police, cut on face and head by glass from explosion; Claude Harris, Knoxville, cut in a dozen places; Policeman Asquith, burned and cut by flying glass; Policeman Duncan, badly burned; Fire Chief McIntosh, bruised from fall; W. H. Kephart, Knoxville, internally hurt.

THE NATIONAL LEGISLATURE.

Synopsis of the Proceedings of the Lawmakers at Washington.

Washington, April 7.—The senate put in two hours on Morgan's resolutions granting the Cuban rebels belligerent rights and spent the remainder of the day on the bankruptcy bill. An executive session was held.

Washington, April 8. — The senate passed a house bill appropriating—in response to a presidential message setting forth the need thereof—$200,000 for the relief of the flood sufferers on the Mississippi river and the Red River of the North. The balance of the day was taken up with Morgan on Cuba and an executive session.

The house passed the flood sufferers' relief bill as in the foregoing, and upon Simpson demanding the appointment of committees and declaring that the house was ruled by the speaker and threatening to stop all business by consent if the committees were not appointed, Speaker Reed explained that it was the general opinion that there was no necessity for committee appointments at this session, and denied that he was anything but the representative of the house, to do its will.

Washington, April 12. — The house Saturday did nothing but talk politics. Simpson tried to obstruct legislation by demanding a quorum, but a quorum was present. As a matter of fact there was no legislation, and the house adjourned to Wednesday after a desultory and uninteresting political talk.

FALLING FROM CAIRO TO HELENA.

Mississippi River Is All Over the Country, However—The Destitute.

Memphis, Tenn., April 9.—Telegrams received from the flooded area of the Mississippi delta report the situation unchanged. A heay rain accompanied by a strong northwesterly wind prevailed all the afternoon. Information from the Flower Lake crevasse says that the break is 1,700 feet wide. Every effort is being made to tie the ends of the levee. The town of Lulu is entirely shut out except by telegraph. Yesterday was ration day for the destitute refugees at Rosedale, and a more poverty-stricken band of negroes than those gathered at the place of distribution would be hard to picture. The news had become current among the negroes that the government had sent rations, and many who were yet able to take care of themselves were grievously disappointed at not finding their names on the relief roll.

At Helena the river has fallen two feet and eleven inches since the levee gave away on Sunday. The backwater in the southern part of the city is at a stand. Many flood refugees are being taken to Helena, and the number in that city will now probably reach 3,000. The relief committee is doing good work and no complaints have been made. The river is falling at all points between Cairo and Helena.

Grand Forks, S. D., April 12.—Early yesterday morning the Red river was about stationary. Since it began falling Saturday afternoon it has gone down about three inches. This may be due to the steamers which went down theiriver in the afternoon, opening some of the gorges, but it is the general opinion high water mark has been reached. The highest point touched was Saturday, when it registered a trifle over two feet higher than in 1882. The next trouble now is mostly to come to come from the Red Lake river. If the Red river continues to fall it may bring it down low enough to give the Red Lake a swift current, and in addition to raising the water here bring down a vast amount of ice.

Report of the Wheat Condition.

Washington, April 12. — The report of the department of agriculture for April makes the average condition of winter wheat 81.4 against 99.5 on Dec.1; 77.1 last April and 81.4 at the same date in 1895. Leading winter wheat states show average as follows: Michigan, 85; Indiana, 65; Illinois, 40. The average rye condition was 88 against 82.9 last year.

Bryan Hurt at a Speaking.

St. Augustine, Fla., April 9.—Hon. W. J. Bryan was injured here yesterday afternoon by the caving in of the piazza from which he was speaking. Nearly 400 men and women were precipitated about twenty feet to the ground and many of them were injured, but none fatally. Bryan was picked up unconscious and removed to a physician's office, where an examination revealed that he had received no injuries of a serious character.

Ten Thousand Rebels Surrender.

Washington, April 12.—Spanish Minister De Lome has received advices that 10,803 rebels in the Philippine islands have surrendered. Aside from a few maurauders in the province of Nueva Reija the remainder of the islands is quiet. This surrender the minister regards as practically settling the rebellion.

Child Killed While Riding a Wheel.

Baltimore, April 12.—Hortense Rogers McIntire, the 7-year-old daughter of Representative W. W. McIntire, was killed Saturday while riding a bicycle. The little girl, who was a novice on the wheel, was practicing a short distance from her home, when she fell in front of a wagon loaded with lumber.

THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

The Annual Meeting of the National Christian Association occurs on the 10th of May next. Members of the Association and all friends will please take notice and be prompt in attendance on Monday, May 10th, at 10 o'clock A. M., at 221 West Madison St., for the election of officers and the transaction of other important business.

SAMUEL H. SWARTZ, Pres.
MRS. M. C. BAKER, Rec. Sec'y.

The time of our next Annual Meeting, Monday, May 10th, is near at hand. The first session will be held in the Carpenter Hall, at 10 A. M. We hope many of the old and new friends are planning to be present. We will be glad to hear by letter from those who cannot come. We request all to pray earnestly for the divine blessing to accompany the deliberations of this meeting.

The first meeting in connection with our annual gathering was on Tuesday evening this week in the (Moody) Chicago Avenue church. A report of the addresses of Pres. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. E. B. Wylie will be given next week.

The second session of the Annual N. C. A. Meeting on Monday, May 10th, will be held in Willard Hall, corner LaSalle and Monroe streets, at the noon hour, from 12 M. to 1 P. M. This will be the business men's session, and well known speakers will occupy the hour. Come early to get a good seat.

Secretary W. I. Phillips has been exceedingly busy for several weeks arranging for meetings in various churches in connction with the Annual Meeting. As we go to press twelve of these meetings have been arranged for, and there are many more to follow. One of the most important of these is an all-day meeting for sermons and testimony on Sabbath, May 23d, in Zion Tabernacle, 1633 Michigan Avenue.

"Unlawful Secret Oaths" is the title of Joseph Cook's great arraignment of secret abominations. Now let some other strong hand follow it with "Unlawful Penalties of Unlawful Secret Oaths."

Our friends should not fail to read the excellent address of Rev. B. T. Roberts, which we republish on our fourth page. It is a most practical and powerful presentation of the danger to civil government arising from secret societies. It is a subject of vital interest to every American citizen.

We observe a plant in our window always grows toward the light. If it gets bent in the wrong direction all we have to do is place it in the window in the right position and it will always turn to the light. So should we ever turn to the light of eternal truth as it is in Jesus, and turn away from the magic arts of lying secret society devils who are fooling lost men into hell.

A Philadelphia exchange says: "King George, of Greece, is alleged to be sitting on bent pins. In other words, he is the victim of several secret societies which are punching him with sharp sticks from all sides, and crowding him on to declare war against Turkey. It is a pretty serious matter when secret societies get the upper hand of a nation as they have sometimes done in France."

To make a meeting practical in its results should be an important object of the anti-secret lecturer. A considerable portion of each lecture should be given to introducing and commending the literature of the movement. It should also contain an appeal for funds to carry on the work. It is at this point the lecturer should bring to bear his best logic and most earnest exhortation. The question, what can I do to advance this cause? must be laid close to every conscience.

A few friends of the old soldiers in Pennsylvania have been trying to get a bill through the Legislature preventing the sale of intoxicants on Memorial Day. Yet when it came to a vote there was not a word said for or against it, but a storm of nays sent it to its grave. This reminds us that when the liquor power decided to take back as much as possible of the old soldier's pensions by starting a saloon in connection with the Soldiers' Home at Leavenworth, Kan., there was no power in that prohibition State to prevent it.

The terrible massacre of Armenians at Tokat and the semi-official announcement of the Sultan, that the powers support and approve his rule, has caused a revulsion of opinion in Western Europe against which the powers find it difficult to act. The wisest diplomatists believe the present struggle cannot but result in the dissolution of Turkey. It is believed that the Czar of Russia is the instigator of the present hostilities in order that he may have an excuse to conquor and annex the Sultan's dominions.

As we go to press the daily papers announce that the forces of Greece and Turkey are meeting in bloody and relentless war, and the thunder of artillery and rattle of musketry are heard along the entire frontier. The Turkish batteries at Prevesa fired upon and sunk the Macedonia, a Greek steamer, whereupon the Greek fleet at 6 o'clock Sabbath morning began the bombardment of Prevesa. The seat of war is the Thessalo-Macedonian frontier where the Greek and Turkish armies have long faced each other in sullen hatred.

Assume the defensive. Anti-masonry is in one way an unfortunate term. It is Masonry itself that is anti-moral, anti-religious, anti-loyal and anti-social. Masonry begins the conflict; it makes the attack. Government must be defended; society must be protected, and religion must be vindicated. It is Masonry that does the wrong. An initial attack upon it is impossible, for it consists of attack. It is war. As soon as it acts it is an aggressor. It is not an innocent victim assailed by foes. Its very life is assault. It is not a first institution against which foes arise. It is a second party coming to the assault and attacking existing institutions. Its opponents should maintain the defensive attitude.

Learn of the enemy. The question how to work against Masonry is pointedly answered by Masonry itself. It swears its victims to silence; it imposes silence as far as possible on those outside. No internal fact is better known than the obligation of silence. No external one is more marked than silence actually preserved. Therefore speak. If silence is essential to the monster's life, let silence be destroyed. But so far as the very method of silence can be suitably adopted by Anti-masons they can learn this also from the enemy. Much Anti-masonic work is done in quiet anonymous ways. Those who neither speak nor write can mail copies of the Cynosure and N. C. A. tracts here and there. Those who write can do so anonymously, yet effectively.

Select points and proofs.—Weak advocacy of a cause hurts it, as it is, in effect, blame, to "damn with faint praise." Feeble arguments may prove worse than none. A few real and impressive faults, clearly shown, do more to make Masonry abhorred than many charges that are less powerful in effect. There may be times when the dress of the candidate and the rougher features of initiation can be mentioned with effect. But these are not the real and conclusive objections. Denial of Christ, sacrilege, profane appeals and assumption of bad obligations are more impressive and convincing. It is better to fight effectively in the intrenchments than to scatter forces ineffectually over territory needlessly wide. One conclusive reason for not joining will keep a man outside the lodge.

AN ANTI-LODGE PSALM.

[This inspired Bible psalm was originally written in Hebrew poetry, and, like translations of Horace or Virgil, it should be into poetry. It gives the reason for the lack of the Spirit's power in the churches, and vividly portrays the devotee of the secret lodge.]

Wherefore is it that thou, O Lord,
Dost stand from us afar?
And wherefore hidest thou thyself
When times so troublous are?
The wicked in his loftiness
Doth persecute the poor;
In these devices they have framed
Let them be taken sure.

The wicked of his heart's desire
Doth talk with boasting great;
He blesseth him that's covetous,
Whom yet the Lord doth hate.
The wicked, through his pride of face,
Upon God doth not call;
And in the counsels of his heart
The Lord is not at all.

His ways they always grievous are;
Thy judgments from his sight
Removed are: at all his foes
He puffeth with despite.
Within his heart he thus hath said,
I shall not moved be;
And no adversity at all
Shall ever come to me.

His mouth with cursing, fraud, deceit,
Is filled abundantly;
And underneath his tongue there are
Mischief and vanity.
He closely sits in villages;
He slays the innocent:
Against the poor that pass him by
His cruel eyes are bent.

He, lion-like, lurks in his den;
He waits the poor to take;
And when he draws him in his net,
His prey he doth him make.
Himself he humbleth very low,
He croucheth down withal,
That so a multitude of poor
May by his strong ones fall.

—Psalm 10: 1-10.

A FOE OF CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

BY REV. O. H. PERRY.

"Every man has a right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," according to our Constitution. This guarantee of the state makes combinations for this purpose unnecessary, hence, revolutionary. Any organization formed to give men these rights, asserts that the state either will not or cannot fulfill its duties to the citizen. This means a supplementing or supplanting of the state. In view of open utterances from high Masonic authorities "that Masonry is a government of itself," it means the supplanting of the state.

"On this rock I build my church." If this church founded by Christ is not sufficient to furnish to man a satisfactory system of religion, an addition or substitute would be in order. From high Masonic authority we learn that "Masonry is a religion, neither Christian nor Mohammedan." The primary object of religion is regeneration. "Unless a man be born of the Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God." Masonry offers to its membership "a home in the temple of God, above, not made with hands;" hence it is a supplanting of Christianity, which claims that "there is no other name given under heaven or among men whereby we must be saved."

Can a citizen of the United States be a loyal subject thereof when at the same time he is oath-bound to Masonry, "which is a government of itself?" Can the Christian be loyal to the Church of Christ, having joined hands in an oath-bound fidelity to Masonry, "that is a religion of itself," and that independent of Christ?

But we are met with this crippled argument: "There are so many good men in Masonry that it cannot be harmful or dangerous to state or church." Let me ask you, is it helpful to church r state? Is a judge more loyal to justice and quity because he is a Mason? Can he decide impartially between two men, one of whom is "a worthy brother of this degree?" If he can, Masonry in the courts is useless. If he cannot, Masonry in the courts is injustice. "Everyone that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light lest his deeds be reproved."

Let the ministry turn on the light. If Masonry is of God it will stand. If not, look out that they be not found fighting against God. Look up, ye friends of Christ the Light. The true light cometh not "from the East" of Masonry, but from above, where "the light" is shining.

He hath sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat,
He is sifting out the hearts of men before his judgment seat.
Be swift, my soul, to welcome him, be jubilant, my feet,
Our God is marching on.

SECRETISM IN CONFLICT WITH CHRIST AND HIS GOSPEL.

BY REV. S. G SHAW, PH. D.

The Gospel sets forth Christ as the ideal man, the embodiment of virtue and the pattern of godliness.

The law was given of old. Its precepts were clear and broad. A revelation of God was also given in word and doctrine. Something better was needed, however; something more definite and inspiring, more practical and easier to understand. This we have in the Son of God, who became man and dwelt among us. He lived not as one who was bound down to the letter of the law, but as one who delighted to do the will of God. He lived as child and boy and man a faultless life.

We have been instructed to learn of Christ, to follow him, and to see in him the express image of God. This makes uprightness easier, for we can far more readily follow an example than obey commands. His life also proves the possibility of living faultlessly in the midst of temptations and distresses. Thus light came into the world while it was still stumbling and in darkness, although the way was pointed out by the law. Thus grace and truth were brought forth like the noon-tide, and a dispensation of mercy and goodness begun that will end in the redemption of the world.

Secretism ignores Christ. If his name is mentioned in ritual or prayer it is understood to be only by permission and not by decree. A recognition such as this is more an insult than an honor to Him whose name should be above every name. What does secretism give us instead of the Christ of the Gospel? There is, we do not deny, reference made to a supreme being and to abstract virtues, such as friendship, love and truth. But what of this? does not heathenism contain the same? A glance at the history of those systems of religion or morality that have not set before men the fact of a living and sympathizing personal God, will reveal their weakness and emptiness.

The oracles of the heathen world are dumb and their temples are deserted because the worshiper was not satisfied; he found nothing there that drew out his affection, nothing that filled him with high aspirations, nothing that he could rest upon in trouble and look up to as an example. In what respect is the lodge better than the heathen temple?

The defenders of the lodge say we exalt truth and piety; we would have men to worship the infinite and the eternal; we instruct them to love the good and the beautiful. We reply that this is to set up the imagination of the mind of man, instead of the living and true God. We declare that the contemplation of mere qualities, however grand and noble, has never made either a patriot or a martyr. We need something more: an object possessing the qualities, a being to love and worship and serve. This the lodge denies us. At the best it could point us only to imperfect men, men whose example we ought not to follow in everything. As it is, however, even the most enthusiastic of secret soceity men knows that there are men in his order not worthy to be looked up to, men of whose practices he is ashamed.

DR. FINNEY'S ESTIMATE OF FREEMASONRY.

BY R. W. LYMAN.

In my opinion Freemasonry exhibits sound judgment in the choice of its most conspicuous and most eminently fitting insignia—darkness. Its own safety, as an entity, depends upon the presence of the blackness of darkness. How else could it be possible, were the sun to shine upon the sacred doings, to hide from the profane—the cowans, the dogs—the intricate and indispensable art of clothing and not clothing? How retain, for the sole use of the mystic brotherhood, the art, the vastly valuable art of being shod and yet barefoot? To shield the other secrets of like value from the eyes and from the knowledge of the profane, some of the faithful have been ready to risk the loss of their lives.

But Freemasonry, in its workings, though ridiculous in some of its performances in the extreme, is too serious a matter to be dismissed with bare ridicule and contempt. It is a soul-destroyer. C. G. Finney, well known to a past generation in the earlier part of the present century as a grand Christian man, an evangelist, and as a pastor of extended usefulness in the Lord's vineyard, was, before his conversion to Christ, a successful and able lawyer, and withal a Freemason of the bright kind. When he became a Christian he very soon found that Masonry and Christianity had no affinity for each other whatever,—one emanating from God, the other from Satan.

Of course he separated from the organization, and knowing by his own experience and observation the wickedness of the workings of the institution, he exposed and condemned it. A very few quotations from his work will show in what estimation he viewed the godless institution; godless so far as not having or acknowledging the God of the Bible, Christ's mediatorship being entirely ignored. Mr. Finney says, "I wish, if possible, to arrest the spread of this great evil." He wished young men particularly, who were Masons, "to consider the inevitable consequences of such a horrible trifling with the most solemn oaths, as is constantly practiced by Freemasons. Such a course must and does, as a matter of fact, grieve the Holy Spirit, sear the conscience and harden the heart."

During a portion of Pres. Finney's life I was a boarder in his family and bear witness to his daily godly life. In the year 1826, which was the year that Wm. Morgan was abducted from this (then Genesee) county and murdered by Masons, because, having been a Mason, he exposed the secrets of the order, I then, a boy of sixteen years, was living in this place. I remember as distinctly as though it were yesterday the fury and rage manifested by a very few of the faithful who clung with deathlike tenacity to the institution, as though their life depended upon the continued life of the, to them, sacred institution.

One man in particular, who was employed by my older brother, for whom I was a clerk in a country store, the man being a maker of pearl-ash, from black salts, swelled up almost to bursting with oaths and imprecations, both of which were poured out upon Morgan's head, accompanied evidently with a desire to curse and sink him to the lowest hell. On the other hand, the greater number of Masons looked on coolly, and were, for the time then being, mum.

REFORMATION NEEDED IN THE CHURCH.

"Last Sunday, March 21st, the local lodge of the Order of Mystic Chain attended our church, the occasion being their anniversary and annual sermon. Our rector, Rev. A. Sloan, delivered a very helpful and practical sermon on the power and beauty of the "Mystic Chain," as set forth by his text, Gen. 41: 42, drawing many lessons from it. Our church is a very popular one with the various fraternal societies, owing, perhaps, to our rector and his assistant, Mr. Frank I. Reynolds, being members of the following orders, viz.: American Protestant Association, Orange Order, Loyal True Blue Society, Masons and Odd-fellows."—P. Q. C., in the Episcopal Recorder of April 1st.

If reformation is to begin in the house of God, I will say that the men who assumed the work of such in the church, as here given, have not pursued their labors far enough. When men who claim to be the heralds of the Gospel of Christ cease to be "blindfolded and cable-towed," and ask God to reform them by the influence of his Holy Spirit, then will they be the better fitted to lead and direct others; to walk in the liberty wherewith Christ makes men free. Then they will not be restrained in action of will by the binding yoke of secret associations.

Mr. Sloan, you notice, chose for his text the words contained in verse 42, chapter 41, Book of Genesis, in which is found a gold ring for the finger, a silken robe, and a gold chain for the neck; hence the title, "Mystic Chain." I have been informed, and I believe honestly, by a member of this order, that it is based on, and had its origin in, of or from, King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table.

I declare it, despite the gainsayings of all who may speak otherwise, that secret societies are sapping the foundations of the Christian church; hence we find more bonnets than uncovered heads in the prayer meetings and regular church services.

I will say further, that when the excitement caused by the murder of Captain Wm. Morgan had seemingly died in the minds of the people, and some years had elapsed, Free—beg pardon—mind-enslaving Masonry reared its head; and since the revival of this delusive and false-lying institution it has been working to control and dominate all other institutions, civil and religious. And Freemasonry has placed a muzzle on the tongues of hundreds of men who to-day are hypocritically posing as ministers of the Gospel of Christ. Where the shepherd leads by his influence, alas! too many of the sheep follow.

If we could only get the number of men who were blessed and controlled to some extent by Christian and religious influences previous to their entrance into the Masonic lodge, and who in a few years became indifferent to the church and cared little for the ministrations thereof, the figures would be appalling. Yet what shall we say of those who say they want no better religion than what is taught and given forth by the Most Worshipful Master, or his aid, the Master of Ceremonies? O blind candidate, truly you are influenced by a strong delusion, inasmuch that you are instructed in and taught to believe not only one lie, but several in the several degrees of the Blue Lodge.

Come, oh, come, Spirit of the Lord, and prick the hearts of men and bring them out of the darkness of secrecy into the light and liberty in which Jesus enjoins men to walk.

Tubal Cain.

NOT THE RELIGION OF THE BIBLE.

The Masonic lodge lays upon its unhallowed altar the Word of God; but upon and above the Bible it lays, as far more important and binding, the square and compass, wherewith to regulate Masonic conduct. Then upon the square and compass it swears the embryo Master Mason not to commit adultery with the relations of other Master Masons—"knowing them to be such"—and to suffer in himself the penalty of brutal murder should he fail to keep the secrets of the fraternity; and this last obligation also implies that in obedience to the mandates of the lodge he is willing to assist in killing any other Mason who may be guilty of that offense.

This is the religion of the square and compass, but it does not square itself with the religion of the Bible. The Apostle James was evidently not a Mason nor an Essene, for on these very points of Masonic doctrine and practice he was very explicit in his denunciation; for, says he, "Whosoever shall keep the whole law"—God's law—"and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all. For he that said, do not commit adultery, said also, do not kill. Now if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressor of the law." Masonry uses the Bible as an advertising show-card, both in the lodge and in its public processions; yet Dr. Mackey plainly tells us "Freemasonry is not Christianity." What, then, have Christians to do with it except to denounce it? H. M. Hugunin.

OPPOSING THE LION AND THEN SUCKLING HER WHELPS.

I know a gentleman who once concluded that Masonry was wrong and assented to the use of his church, the Methodist, by Anti-masonic lecturers, and incurred, thereby, the anger and denunciation of the lodge and its master. But soon after for impartiality or amends he joined with his own and the Baptist churches in welcoming a promoter of the Good Templars, a preliminary and rudimentary school of Masonry, modeled and founded by it for security and aggrandizement, and a lodge was organized and met in the parlors of the latter's church after a petition for the Masonic lodge had been rejected. The same rooms were subsequently used for voting, and the lodge books were accessible to all. They showed that he and other prominent Masons headed the charter followed by church dignitaries and others. Perhaps, as affirmed, he may have been merely passive in permitting the use of his name, but his loyalty to the parent society is manifest in procuring a demit in accordance with lodge laws instead of withdrawal and his fidelity to its principles in contributing two sons to its primary and auxiliary.

Still the village did not prove congenial soil or the cravings for secrecy were sufficiently supplied by the Masonic lodge, for the Good Templars languished and went into dissolution after two years of precarious existence. But under the auspicies of the same Methodist minister at another church of his charge the results were less transient. The conditions were more favorable and the territory unoccupied by similar institutions. The lodge then organized or promoted by the church has since thrived and won the county banner for excellence in initiatory services which is but orientated paganism. Moreover, the same church members were so pleased with their experience that they welcomed the Grange to their midst, and are working with avidity to extend it.

The ignorance of the purpose or tendency of secret societies is so great that some aid and commend the anti-secret reform, and then on a specious pretext, at the suggestion of those who cherish or tolerate a secret object, assist its opponents in combatting and suppressing it. There may be some palliation for the unwary on the outer circle but not for this inner circle who see the evil full-fledged beyond, but still promote it. They quibble that the lodge is not the worst evil, not knowing that every evil should be combatted without regard to degree.

Thirst for lodges is like that for drink. The secretist is blind to consequences and submits to degrading ceremonies and sacrifices his liberty and money and the laws of the land for new mysteries. Membership in one excites a desire for membership in others, and some join a score. He joins auxiliary societies for diversion or curiosity; the leading ones to promote business or political relations or for protection in vice or crime, and then continues to climb the ladder of secrecy from habit or to surpass a rival. But he finds in the end that his friends are also his enemies. He has gained exemption from the justice of the law, but also liability to the oppression of the lodge. The world thinks these counterbalance and withholds its sympathy, and if he complains, denounces him as a perjured traitor or villain. Counterfeit virtues and insurance are lodge baits, fair to look upon but dangerous to accept.

Good Templars and other societies that meet for amusement and punish with expulsion and contempt are not chargeable with the murders and crimes of the leading society. Their offense is familiarizing people with the lodge system, and preparing them for control by the emissaries of the advanced society. The churches and good men who form or favor them may be guiltless of a bad intent, but are deceived, and the tools of designing men who have a purpose, and desire auxiliaries to effect it. This reservation is due churches and others who mean well but stumble in the darkness of the lodge as formerly in that of slavery. The decalogue is the true rule of right, and the lodge conflicts with in every particular. A Reader.

COLORED FREEMASONRY IN UNITED STATES

FROM THE CHICAGO "LEGAL NEWS."

Our readers who hear from time to time of the proceedings in the various Masonic jurisdictions in the United States are probably not aware, or, at best have but a vague idea, that there exist in the land of the stars and stripes quite a formidable array of negro Masons, having precisely the same kind of organization as to lodges and Grand Lodges, and practicing, as we are informed, precisely the same rites and ceremonies as we practice in our lodges under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of England. Some twenty years ago, quite a discussion arose in the Masonic press on the subject of this colored Masonry, but nothing came of it. The matter, however, has been again brought to our notice by a review in the Report on Correspondence appended to the Proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Canada (Province of Ontario) of an article written by Bro. William H. Upton, which appeared in the Report on Correspondence of the Grand Lodge of Washington for 1895. Bro. Upton is described by his Canadian reviewer as "one of the brightest minds in the fraternity, an enthusiastic student of Masonry, and well informed on all its branches."

It is this Bro. Upton who calls attention, in an article on Masonry among the negroes, to the fact that at the present time there are in the United States "more than 27,000 of our fellow citizens, unknown to us as members of the fraternity," who "claim to be affiliated Masons of good standing, and regularly study our mysteries in 1,300 lodges which we never visit," and that this alone is "sufficient to justify a brief reference to Masonry among the colored men of America." He does not concern himself about their legitimacy, and is careful to avoid anything like an expression of opinion upon a question which has excited so much controversy in the United States. He is content with a brief statement of the facts as he has ascertained them to be, leaving it to his readers to draw such conclusions as seem best from the premises he lays down. These facts are as follows:

A certain Prince Hall and fourteen other colored men of Boston were initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry in an army lodge waranted by the Grand Lodge of England, and attached to one of the regiments stationed under General Gage at Boston, Mass., on the 6th of March, 1775. These fifteen brethren, acting, it is suggested, under an authority granted by the lodge which made them, subsequently met as a lodge. At a later date—on the 2d of May, 1784—they applied to the Grand Lodge of England for a warrant, which was granted them as "African Lodge, No. 459," with Bro. Prince Hall as Worshipful Master, on the 29th of September following. They did not, however, receive it till the 2d of May, 1787, when the lodge was quickly organized, and remained on the English Register until the revision, which took place after the the union of the "Ancient" and "Modern" societies of English Masons in 1813, when, in common with other lodges of English origin, in the United States, it was struck off the list. This Bro. Prince Hall, first Worshipful Master of African Lodge, was, we are told, "a man of exceptional ability and energy," and in 1797 he "issued a license to thirteen black men who had been made Masons in England to 'assemble and work' as a lodge in Philadelphia," a second lodge being organized by his authority in Providence, R. I.

In 1808 these two lodges, with the original African Lodge, No. 459, of 1784, "joined in forming the 'African Lodge' of Boston,—now the 'Prince Hall Grand Lodge of Massachusetts'—and Masonry gradually spread over the land." In 1847, the negro Masons made what Bro. Upton declares to be the mistake of establishing a National Grand Lodge, which in 1867, at the time of its zenith, had some twenty Grand Lodges under it; the negro Grand Lodges of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland, however, holding aloof and remaining independent. This National Grand Lodge, we are told, has since fallen into decay and at the present time enjoys only a nominal existence; but colored Freemasonry, notwithstanding, has continued to flourish, and as Bro. Upton points out—and we have no reason to doubt the accuracy of his information—there are upwards of 27,000 of these negro brethren organized in lodges and with sundry Grand Lodges to preside over them in different States.

As to the legitimacy of Colored Freemasonry, Bro. Upton quotes a dictum of the late Bro. Albert Pike, to the effect that "Prince Hall Lodge.....had a perfect right (as other lodges in Europe did) to establish other lodges, making itself a mother lodge. That's the way the Berlin lodges—Three Globes and Royal York—became Grand Lodges." He also quotes the opinion of Bro. T. S. Parvin, "that the negroes can make as good a show for the legality of their Grand Lodges as the whites can." Further information of great interest is contained in Bro. Upton's paper. It is shown that they possess our secrets and practice our rites. They have "bodies of all the 'high degrees,' including the A. and A. S.

rite," while "upon the question whether they exercise care in guarding the fraternity from the admission of unworthy persons," Bro. Upton tells us that "it is to their credit, that while among the whites of the United States one in every eighty-five is an affiliated Mason, the affiliated negroes are but one in each 273 of their race."

We take the above in relation to the standing of colored Freemasons in the United States, from The Freemason of London, the organ of the craft in England under date of Oct. 24, 1896. In this article Bro. Albert Pike and Bro. T. S. Parvin are cited as to the legality of Colored Freemasonry.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

The following is part of an address by the late Rev. B. T. Roberts, who was one of the most, if not the most, prominent minister of the Free Methodist church. The address, which we republish by request, was delivered before the National Christian Association Conference in this city. April 22,23, 1890.

I hardly know why the most important subject on the program was assigned to me this afternoon, unless it is because I am about the only one who has called attention to the subject, from time to time. I wish I might be able to awaken such an interest in it that abler ones would take hold of it and call attention to the greatness of the subject on which I am to speak this afternoon.

In prophetic language, the sun stands as a symbol of the civil power. It is a fitting symbol. The sun knows no partiality; it shines alike for all. It sends out its light and its heat equally for the peasant and for the prince. It has no broader, purer rays for the palace than for the cottage. However humble the plant, the sun gives to the dew-drop on every leaf the beauty of the pearl. It is no wonder that the sun was the first object of idol worship. Job, who lived before the days of Moses, says: "If I behold the sun when it shines, or the moon, walking in brightness, and my heart hath been secretly enticed, or my mouth hath kissed my hand, that were an iniquity to be punished by the judge, for I should have denied the God that is above."

Civil government, like the sun, should be impartial,—it should have no favorites. It should give the same protection to the lowest as to the highest. It should mete out justice equally to all. It should extend the favor that it gives to one citizen, to all citizens. In every department of our government should be set forth the equality of mankind. The manhood of man should be vindicated in every act of civil administration. We should say to the dignataries of foreign countries who come to make a home with us, "Forget you now your state and lofty birth; not titles, here, but works must prove your worth." God, by direct inspiration, founded one form of civil government. It had no aristocracy, heredity or monetary. Under its operation there were no paupers, and there were no millionaires. We should do well to study its provisions. It treated all men as equal. It made no provision for one class that it did not make alike for all classes. As far as possible, we should carry out that same provision.

The principles of our Declaration of Independence should be the cherished principles of every American. We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with inalienable rights; that among these is life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Jefferson says that, in an age of revolution and reformation, our steps are guided safely by the observance of strict and impartial justice towards all men of whatever state of persuasion, religious or political. Our civil government should be what the poet says the church is,—

> "Our mother, the church, hath never a child
> To honor above the rest,
> But she singeth the same for mighty kings
> And the veriest babe on her breast;
> And the bishop goes down to his narrow bed
> As the plowman's child is laid;
> And alike she blesseth the dark brown serf
> And the chief in his robe arrayed."

There should be no preferences, no prejudices, in our civil government. Long before the age of our revolution Montescue wrote that if there were no God we should still be bound to love justice; that is to say, we should strive to be like him of whom we have so grand an idea. Among the painters justice was portrayed as blind, for she knows no distinction in those who appear before her bar. She awards to each one according to his desserts apart from all other considerations. Macauley said of Hume, that he hated religion so much that he hated liberty, because it had been allied with religion, and he pleaded the cause of tyranny with the dexterity of an attorney while affecting the impartiality of a judge.

But the principles of civil government, the principles of liberty, are interwoven all through the Bible, and all through men who have been inspired by the spirit that wrote the Bible. It should be strictly impartial. One of the provisions of this early commonwealth was, ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment. Thou shalt not respect the person of the poor nor honor the person of the mighty, but in righteousness shalt thou judge that neighbor. But here come in secret societies, and they interfere with the equal distribution of justice. This is their real, though never their avowed, intention. What man ever joined a secret society without expecting to derive from it some advantage? Do they pay their fees and their dues in order to fare the same as the uninitiated members of civil society? The whole system is founded on human selfishness. Christ said: "The field is the world, and not an eye walled up so tight as to keep out the light." The men who in fighting the battles of life go into some dark corner, do it with the expectation of receiving some protection which otherwise would not be granted them, or of being able to sally forth with their associates and gain some victory which they could not achieve in a fair and open fight. The whole system of secret societies is based on selfishness.

But let us notice a few principles. First: Through secret societies unsuitable men are elected to office. Men are placed in positions which they have neither the intellectual nor the moral ability to fill. They are put forward by the lodge. They are placed in such positions that ought to be occupied by better men. The most meritorious act that many of them do is to draw their salaries. We have illustrations of this on every hand. The papers of this city are complaining of their mayor. I remember at the time the canvass was going on in which he was elected, I was talking with an old resident of this city. I expressed my doubts about his election. He said: "There is no doubt about it," and then he mentioned the secret societies to which he belonged, and he said he belonged to the same society, "and," said he, "we shall be able to elect him by a large vote."

The recent city treasurer of Rochester, New York, was a 32-degree Mason. He was a man who had never been heard of until he was put forward by the lodge, and by the aid of these votes of men who labored for him in secret, was elected to the office. He became a defaulter to the amount of $60,000. His elevation turned his head. Because a good deal of money passed through his hands he thought he was immensely rich, and he used the money as though it were his own. When the matter came out it was so plain that even Masonry did not attempt to save him. He acknowledged his guilt, was sent to State's prison for five years, and, doubtless, will be pardoned out as soon as it is deemed expedient to do so.

In the congressional district in which I reside is the city of Rochester, a university, many large towns, and perhaps as intelligent a population as is to be found in the United States, and yet for a quarter of a century we have not been able to elect but one first-class man to Congress from that district, and he was sent for only a single term. Secret societies put forward very inferior men for office in the nominating convention. They get them nominated and then they get them elected; and then they go on, and if there is not much to be done, why they get along and fill the office; but if there is work to be done there is a failure. When there is work that must be done they are obliged to give place to better men. The sword falls from nerveless hands. When battles are to be fought McClellan gives place to Grant, and abler men must take the place.

But secret societies keep inferior men in office, and the country suffers. There is great danger in that direction. Carlyle said that men of world-renown may succeed by their quackery for a day, but their run is short; but men can in a little time, under bad leaders, do mischief that will take generations to repair. France had many noble and patriotic men when she was struggling to establish free institutions. Some of them were men of very marked ability. LaFayette, Necker and Murat, and men like that, could have guided the people in safety to the establishment and operation of free institutions. It was in vain that LaFayette wrote: "If conspirators exist they should be punished only by the sword of the law. It is necessary that the reign of the clubs should give place to the reign of law. They are disorganizing maxims to the true principle of liberty, their mad fury to the calm courage of a nation that knows its rights and defends them." LaFayette and men like him were driven into banishment, or imprisoned, or beheaded, and the Gerondines and the Jacobites held sway until Paris and the leading cities of France became as a slaughter-house, and the best blood of its citizens flowed like water down their streets.

We have had a trial of government by lodges, and this trial is a failure. We cannot afford to repeat the experiment. We need to have our best men placed in office. One of the provisions that God made in his Old Commonwealth was, "Thou shalt provide out of my people able men, such as fear God and hate covetousness, men of ability, men fit to be rulers over you, rulers over thousands, over hundreds, over fifties, and over tens." We ought to carry out that same principle. Carlyle says: "The finding of your able man and getting him invested with the symbol of authority so that he may be able to act according to his faculty of doing it, is the great business well or ill-performed of every social procedure whatsoever in this world." But secret societies interfere with this. They put forward men who are not fitted for the position, and the consequence is that the nation suffers. We are suffering, and we shall continue to unless there is a reform in this particular.

Again, in the second place, secret societies interfere with the equal distribution of justice. It is almost impossible, under their influence, to have justice fairly administered. Said Edmund Burke: "Fair trial by jury is the very soul of government, and all our legislation and administration and parliamentary debatings, and such like, go on in order to bring twelve fair and impartial men into a jury box." Did ever a secret society, can ever a secret society succeed in getting just one man, obstinate and partial, in the jury box, where the interests of that lodge to which he belongs are concerned, or any of its members, the ends of justice are defeated. We have had many notable examples of this kind. One of them occurred in my own neighborhood. It is familiar to the old generation, but the present generation has well nigh lost sight of it.

William Morgan was a Mason. He was a citizen of the United States. He resided in Batavia, near where I lived. William Morgan exposed Masonry. He was taken to jail on a false charge, and was acquitted on his trial. He was kidnapped, gagged, put into a waiting coach, carried 120 miles through a thickly settled portion of the country, and confined in a United States fort on the charge of one officer, a Freemason. He was sentenced by the lodge to the Masonic penalty of death. The penalty was inflicted. I suppose that more than one hundred men were concerned in this conspiracy. The whole State of New York was agitated. The whole nation was agitated. And yet, in the long, ably conducted trials that followed, not a single one of the men who murdered Morgan was brought to justice. They all escaped. Secret societies showed themselves stronger than the law.

We have had a recent case in this city. That Dr. Cronin was foully murdered there is not the slightest doubt. That he was murdered by authority of the lodge is equally clear. The men who executed the sentence are confined in your State's prison at Joliet. Perpaps their sentence was thus light because the conviction is deep-settled that these men who were apprehended and tried, were only the tools that abler and more wicked men lay at the bottom of this movement. When Fouquier-Tinville, who had brought hundreds to the guillotine in France, in the French Revolution, himself came to be beheaded in the fluctuations of power among the different clans and different societies, he said: "I have been simply the axe of the convention. Do men punish an axe?" You have the axe with which Dr. Cronin was taken off safely locked up in Joliet, but where are the men who wielded the axe? Where are the principals in this foul murder? Have one of them been apprehended? Is there any presistent determination expressed to bring them to justice? Is there any well-directed and earnest effort made in this direction? Is there the slightest probability that the men who plotted the death of Dr. Cronin and brought it about will be punished? Then the ends of justice are defeated. Then in this case secret societies show themselves stronger than the law, and they do so right along in almost every case where there is a conflict of this kind. When a conspirator against his fellow-man comes into court he regards his oath to his fellow-conspirators as more binding than the oath administered to him by the magistrate, and the consequence is that it is impossible through their influence, where they are concerned, to have justice administered.

And so it goes on, and so it will continue to go on until there is a remedy applied, until the influence of these societies is put out of the way.

A NEW PAPER.

Missionary Tidings is the name of a new eight-page paper published monthly by the Free Methodist Publishing House, Chicago. It is printed on good paper, is ably edited by Mrs. Mary W. Chapman, assisted by a corps of four lady editors, has fine engravings, and is the organ of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Free Methodist church. It began with January, 1897, and from its choice makeup and moderate price (30 cents) we believe it will have a large circulation, and has come to stay. Write for sample copy to the editor, Mrs. Mary W. Chapman, 14 N. May street, Chicago, Ill.

ALARMING GROWTH OF SECRET ORDERS.

A recent article in the New York Sun gives the following alarming figures as to the strength and growth of many of the secret orders. Any of our readers who imagine that secret orders are dying out and that the reform is unimportant, would do well to ponder these figures:

"At the recent 'great camp' of the Maccabees of New York, held at Jamestown, in Chautauqua County, a report of membership was made showing that during the past five years the New York membership of the Knights of the Maccabees has increased from 4,000 to 33,000. This organization was established in 1881, the camps or district divisions being known as hives. It distributes in a year through the various lodges to the number of 4,500 more that $1,000,000 in sick and death benefits. The present reserve fund for such benefits is $8,000,000. Yet the Knights of the Maccabees are by no means the first of the fraternial organizations in the country, but rank fifth, from which fact the great and increasing influence, membership and resources of these organizations may be figured.

"First in respect of membership come the Odd-fellows, with an enumeration of more than 1,000,000. Then follow the Freemasons of various lodges and sub-divisions to the number of 800,000. Next come the Knights of Pythias, who number nearly 500,000, and then the Order of United Workmen to the number of 350,000. The Knights of the Maccabees, who number 210,000, follow in fifth place. The Odd-fellows are most numerous in the State of Pennsylvania, and New York, Illinois and Massachusetts follow, though at some distance behind the Keystone State. The benefits dispensed by the Odd-fellows in a year amount to nearly $4,000,000, of which much the largest share is for the relief of sick members.

"Freemasons are much more numerous in New York than in any other State, and the New York lodges have nearly double the membership of those in Pennsylvania. Illinois comes second in the list of States, and in the South, particularly, Freemasons are far more numerous than are members of the Odd-fellows' lodges, which are strongest in the West, and particularly California, where the Masons number 18,000 and the Odd-fellows 30,000. The Ancient Order of United Workmen was founded in 1868, and is sub-divided into thirty-four grand and 5,000 sub-lodges. The benevolent fund distributed by this organization amounts to more than $7,000,000 in a year, and is distributed throughout the whole country. Following the Knights of Maccabees comes the Royal Arcanum, with a membership of nearly 200,000, then the Improved Order of Red Men, the United Order of American Mechanics, with a membership of 150,000, the Knights of Honor, the Foresters, the Knights of the Golden Eagle, the American Legion of Honor and the Order of Chosen Friends. The total membership of these fraternal organizations is in excess of 5,000,000, and the amount of money disbursed by them in a year exceeds $25,000,000.

"It is a peculiar thing about these organizations that by far the larger number have been established during the past fifteen years, and since that time the increase in membership has been relatively even larger than the increase in the number of separate organizations. To three causes is this marked growth attributed. First, to the increasing popularity of life insurance associations and to the principle of life insurance when applied to sick benefits; second, to the fact that these organizations are essentially and exclusively social in character; and, third, that they eschew, and more strongly each year, any identification with politics or with the political ambitions of members—a rock upon which many otherwise promising social organizations have split and gone to pieces."

SECRET SOCIETIES IN CHINA.

FROM BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

The oath, which is almost as long as the catechism, is now read to the recruits, who listen on their knees to the thirty-six articles of adjuration which bind them, under dire pains and penalties, to be incurred here and hereafter, to be faithful to the league, to be true and just in all their dealings with their brethren, to live on friendly terms with the priests of Buddha and Tao, to assist brethren in every difficulty, whether they be in the right or in the wrong, and at all times to be prepared to stand by the league at all hazards.

In confirmation of this oath the recruits, having partaken conjointly of tea, are presented with a large bowl filled with wine, over which each man pricks his middle finger with a silver needle, and allows the resulting blood to pour into the vessel. This mixed chalice is passed from hand to hand, and is partaken of by all. After having thus served its mundane purpose, the copy of the oath is burnt in the furnace, that its smoke may ascend into the presence of the gods as a witness against any false or perjured recruits who may hereafter desert the standards of the league.

The president next presents every member with a diploma printed on linen, on the back of which the name of the holder is written in crytographical symbols. This diploma serves a double purpose; it is a sign of membership, and it is also held to possess talismanic powers almost as potent in times of pressing danger as those of fern-seed. With the possession of the diploma the recruit becomes a full member of the association; and he is still further fortified by being presented with the laws of the society, which like the other documents, certainly do not err on the side of brevity. His first duty is to make himself acquainted with these; and it is also incumbent on him to learn the secret signs and mystic sayings by which the brethren are known to one another in the world.

He thus learns to lift his teacup with three fingers, to place his feet in certain positions, to wind his handkerchief in a particular way round the point of his umbrella, and to ask and answer questions which are bewildering in their non-sequiturs. He is expected also to have the slang terms of the Hui on the tip of his tongue. He learns to speak of the mandarins as "the enemy;" of government troops as "a storm;" of men as "horses," and of the common objects of daily life in strangely disguised terms.

CORRESPONDENCE.

PUSH FORWARD THE PETITIONS.

Washington, D. C., April 15, 1897.

Dear Cynosure:—Some splendid lists of names are being sent in, showing the petitions in Pennsylvania are having a wide circulation. Since my last report lists have been received from the following places: Plumsteadville, two pages; De Golia, Corry, Custer City and Lewis Run, four; Allegheny, two; Lemaster, two; Warrior's Mark, four; Hickory, Venice and Midway, twelve; West Middlesex, two; New Bedford, two; Philadelphia, two; New Alexandria, eight; Stewartstown and Hopewell Center, two; Tub and Elk Lick, two.

Some have written inquiring if it was too late to circulate the petitions. It is not. This is a big undertaking, and time will be required to reach all who will wish to sign. I am sending out blanks to those who will further aid in the circulation. Any friend in the State who writes will receive what petitions they can use. Let those who can help push this work forward.

AN INTERESTING SUBJECT.

The following letter has been held over for some time for want of room. We conclude to use it now as the windup of the Pre-millenarian discussion:

Esther, Pa., Feb. 12, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—In your issue of the 11st inst., there is an interesting and able letter from Bro. Hugunin, in which he ably refutes two or three errors held by some Post-millenarians. The first, that the promise made to Abraham in regard to earthly territorial possession was fulfilled in full by Israel's occupancy of the land of Canaan. The second, that the promise was merely spiritual and to be enjoyed only by faith. These cover the main points of his contention that I endorse. As a Post-millenarian, I agree with his view that the promise included earthly possessions that neither he personally nor his seed have as yet occupied. But I demur to a number of Pre-millennial ideas that crop out in his letter.

And first, he claims that Acts 7:5 proves that the promise has not been fulfilled to Abraham at all, and that Heb. 11:13 warrants the view that Abraham will be resurrected to its personal enjoyment. And second, he seems to argue that no spiritual or celestial benefit was included in the covenant at all. It is common in such controversies for each side to conclude there is no other side, and that truth is all one-sided. But truth is many-sided, and must be seen from all sides to be fully comprehended. The Abrahamic covenant included both an earthly and heavenly Canaan. It included both an anti-Christian and a Christian period. Also a temporal or literal and spiritual seed. An anti-millennial and a millennial fulfillment. Abraham, Issac nor Jacob had a personal inheritance in Canaan, but had it in their posterity or representatively. But they personally possess the celestial. The Israelites did not literally nor fully enjoy all the promised land, but the literal seed of Israel will do so during the millennium.

To illustrate. Take Gal. 3:16, where the apostle shows that Christ was in an especial sense the seed of Abraham, he refers to three passages where the word seed is in the singular number, but did not intend to deny that others were of the seed of Abraham and heirs, for they are alluded to in scores of passages where the word is in the plural number. So in Heb. 11:9 and Rom. 8:17 the terms "heirs and joint heirs" are properly enough employed in reference to those already in possession as well as to those who are to come into possession, for all inherit by faith in Christ. In Acts 26:7, the twelve tribes "did hope to come" into the heavenly as they were already in the earthly. Micah 7:20 refers to both Abraham's literal and spiritual seed yet to enjoy both earthly and heavenly inheritance. Deut. 34:4 refuses Moses a personal enterance into the earthly but not a spiritual one into the celestial inheritance. Indeed, every view of every passage is one-sided which the brother takes and makes all literal; just as others take the spiritual view as exclusive. In John 8:39 Christ denies to Abraham's literal children the right to be called his children because they were not spiritual. And Paul, in Rom. 9:7, says, neither because they are the seed of Abraham are they all children.

But in Gal. 3:7, they which be "of faith are children of Abraham," and verse nine, are "blessed with faithful Abraham," and verse fourteen, "That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ." "That we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith." The promise of landed possessions, of Christ, of the Spirit and of heaven, as Luke 13:28 and 16:23 shows, were all in the Abrahamic covenant, and may be enjoyed by spiritual as well as literal children in temporal and spiritual things—not that all Gentile heirs may have the same earthly land as the Jews; for Palestine would not contain them, nor all enjoy the earthly by a resurrection of the body, for the resurrected body needs no earthly possession. "They neither marry nor are given in marriage, but are as angels." But the "meek do inherit the earth" while they live on "it;" and theirs the kingdom of heaven when they get to "it;" and "they go no more out," nor do they "need the light of the sun," or aught else of earth, but "eat of the hidden manna that grows in the paradise of God."

A MISSIONARY TRAINING SCHOOL.

CAMP NELSON, Ky., Apr. 10, 1897.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The Camp Nelson Normal, Industrial and Missionary Training School is founded on the historic spot where the first slaves were freed in Kentucky, in the famous Blue Grass region amidst a dense negro population. It is also founded on "Holiness to the Lord," and wages unceasing warfare against secret organizations which are becoming such a curse to the colored man as well as to his "brother in white." Undenominational, and knowing no race lines, this school enables worthy young colored men and women to "work their way" through its course of study and training, while preparing for lives of usefulness to their race at home, and as missionaries to Africa.

Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky., the venerable and heroic apostle of freedom from human bondage and from slavery to sin and secretism, donated the land. It is very fitting that he, the original native Kentucky Abolitionist, disinherited by his wealthy father on this account, should be the founder of an institution that is destined to accomplish much for the emancipation of the ex-slaves and their descendants from the thralldom of sin, vice and degradation that were the concomitants of a system of traffic in human beings.

With fair buildings, a good farm, diligent students and a corps of self-sacrificing, consecrated teachers, this institution is in a position to be blessedly used of God for the evangelization of the dark places. It is just now at a critical point in its history. Funds are greatly needed to carry on its present work, while a very small investment would enable the trustees to add an industry that would provide employment for fully thirty additional students who cannot pay the $8 per month, which covers cost of board, room, fuel, lights, tuition, etc., but who are desirous of entering the school, and who will become potent factors in carrying the Gospel of purity and deliverance from sin to their benighted fellows, when properly trained and full of the Holy Ghost.

The trustees, students and teachers are praying in faith, believing that the Heavonly Father will put it into the hearts of his people to supply the means for putting this school on a substantial, self-sustaining basis. A little money accomplishes so much in this work.

Any amount contributed to this "labor of love," no matter how small it may be, will be greatly appreciated and will help a thoroughly practical work to maintain its existence. As Camp Nelson is not a money-order postoffice. money-orders should be made payable at Nicholasville, Ky., to Mary M. Robe, treasurer of Board of Trustees, and forwarded to Wilbur M. Gale, financial agent, Camp Nelson, Jassamine Co., Ky.

OUR POSTAL CARD SYMPOSIUM.

QUESTION—HOW CAN WE BEST WITHSTAND THE INFLUENCE OF SECRET SOCIETIES?

We are glad that so many of our readers have responded to this symposium. In the multitude of counsel there is safety. We wish to hear from as many as possible, and please make your reply practical by stating what the interests of the reform require in your own community. The following responses have come during the past week:

REV. R. C. ALLEN, GROVE CITY, PA.

1. Refuse to join them. 2. Expose their selfish principles. 3. Expose any acts with which you are acquainted which are dishonorable. 4. Show that we would not permit the church to invent and publish, or perform for effect what they do with Scripture characters and things in their lodge workings. It is profaning God's Word.

REV. G. P. RAITT, NEWBURGH, N. Y.

"How can we best withstand the influence of secret societies?" Abraham Lincoln was once asked what he would do to withstand the Southern conspiracy, and replied, "We'll keep pegging away." By this he meant a vigilant, energetic pushing of the work to overthrow the enemy. Thus it must be with the forces of righteousness against the enemy of darkness.

REV. J M. FOSTER, BOSTON, MASS.

1. Let every man who is opposed to the lodge come out if he is in, and stay out if he is not in. 2. Let him refuse to commune in the church that allows lodge members to officiate or have fellowship in sealing ordinances. 3. Let him refuse to exercise his political privileges of voting or holding office in the political body which charters the lodge and allows lodge members to exercise political privileges. 4. The witnesses with clean hands are the agents used by the Holy Ghost in casting out Satan enthroned in the lodge.

C. G FAIT, MONANGO, N. DAK.

I think more could be accomplished in opposition to the evils of secret societies by a systematic effort of the friends of the cause in different localities to secure the publication of something adverse to the lodges as frequently as possible in their respective local or county papers. I find by experience that editors of county papers will publish most anything written by their patrons. They will publish many clippings also adverse to the lodges, even though they are themselves lodge members. Our lecturers would do well to make special efforts to enlist agents for this local publishing matter in every place they are called to deliver a lecture. I have been impressed with the importance of this kind of work for some time.

REV. J. A. SPEER, WARM SPRINGS, ORE.

Replying to your question, "How can we best withstand the influence of secret societies?" I would say look after the boys and young men. The lodge, as the saloon, must look to the boys for its recruits. By suitable tracts and books, setting forth the true character of secretism, emphasizing its anti-Christian nature and influence; supply reading-rooms of colleges and Y. M. C. Associations, young peoples' conventions and summer schools. This I regard the best soil to cultivate; and a skilful "still hunt" in this line may prove even more effective than open war. Let the tract or book be both readable and convincing. I happen to know of some very effective missionary work done in a very quiet way with "Finney on Masonry," which a few years ago was furnished free by the Reform Tract and Book Society of Cincinnati, Ohio.

ELDER J. T. CULLOR, ST. JOHN, MO.

Secrecy and deception are growing worse, and to withstand them we must realize this: We should emphasize the deception of the lodge in professing to save men without Christ. I would also emphasize the importance of the friends of anti-secrecy rescuing the Fourth of July and such public days from lodgemen. Let ministers and all friends of light gather the people in groves on that day and lecture them eloquently on secratism as a foe of civil and religious liberty. Why can we not have anti-secret celebrations all over the country next July 4th, even if only a few families could be gathered for a basket dinner?

REV. J. J. M'CLURKIN, NEW ALEXANDRIA, PA.

Stand on the Rock of Ages laid in Zion, against which the gates of hell can never prevail. All other foundations are shifting sand which will be swept away when the flood of God's judgments comes. The anti-secret reformer must not only stand clear and be separate from all secret societies which ignore and deny Christ, but he must as well refuse to swear supreme allegiance to any civil constitution that denies Christ. An open political covenant, swearing its members to exclude Christ, is scarcely less dangerous than a secret Masonic covenant doing the same thing. "Get back to Christ" is the slogan cry we should ring out in our day. Show to the people that lodge rejection of Christ and political rejection of Christ are the great crimes of our times. No reform will weather the storm that is about to break upon our world unless it stands for Christ in every civic institution.

H. P. MARKS, MADISON, WIS.

We must continue steadfast in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, knowing that the Word is a lamp to our feet and a light to our path; and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness. As the Word is a sword, a hammer and a fire, answering all the needs of man in all moral conflicts, because God the Holy Ghost accompanies it who dictated it. The Lord has declared it shall accomplish that whereunto I send it. Exposing the initiations should be mostly done by seceders, as they know whereof they affirm. The devil gets as many good things as he can in these secret orders so as to keep men in them for a selfish purpose, and that the church is robbed of her glory and applause, that is why the sisters have so much to do with this cooking-stove apostasy. The Bible is anti-secret from cover to cover. I will give a few references: Lev. 5:4,5, Ex. 34:13, Deut. 12:3, Ex. 34:12-15, 23:32,33, James 2:1, 8, 9, James 5:12, Matt. 5:33-37. "Through God we shall do valiantly." Ps. 60:12.

REV. D. B. GUNN, CAMBRIDGEPORT, MASS.

In our mission work against the evils of secret societies, three requisites seem to me to be especially necessary, viz.: zeal, prayer and faith. It is a mission from God; one part of the life-work of his elect and loyal servants is to combat unrighteousness. It is as much our duty as to promote salvation and holiness. The zeal of God's house consumed our dear Master, and it was his meet to do the will of him who sent him. We should be alike zealous and devoted as workers and witnesses, and thus only can we expect success. We are far too easy and slow. 2. Earnest prayer to Him who alone can make pious effort successful. We need the fervor of John Knox, who gave a new mould to Scotland; and the power of Elijah, who called down fire from heaven and saved Israel from idolatry and final apostasy. Have we not greatly lacked in this particular? Oh, for might in prayer. 3. Faith is not less important. If we believe in our hearts and doubt not, what mountain, even of lodgeism, cannot be removed? Heroic faith as was Joshua's before Jericho, "Shout, for the Lord hath given you the city!" God can overthrow secretism with fire, or sword, or ram's horns, or without either, in his own way, and that soon; and he will do it when we unitedly work, pray and believe in real Gospel fashion.

FARM AND GARDEN

CONSTRUCTING RESERVOIRS

For Purposes of Irrigation Where Pumps and Windmills Are Used.

Professor F. H. King of the Wisconsin experiment station, in his paper on "Irrigation In Humid Climates," published in a farmers' bulletin, has the following to say on the construction of the reservoirs necessary where pumps are employed, and particularly if windmills are used:

The location of the reservoirs should be such that its level is above that of the land to which it is to supply water. The deeper the reservoir can be made the less will be the loss by evaporation and usually also by leakage, but if the water supplied to it is too cold to use it will warm faster in a shallow reservoir.

Where the soil is of a clayey nature a good reservoir may be made by first plowing and removing the sod to a distance beyond the border of the proposed walls, because if introduced into the wall it will leak. The earth is then plowed and scraped into a broad ridge having the inside slanting in order that the waves shall not erode the embankment. While the earth is being deposited in the wall it should be trampled firm and close. When the proper height and form have been given to the walls of the reservoir, it is necessary to plow and thoroughly pulverize the bottom to a depth of five inches preparatory to puddling it. If the reservoir is circular in outline, the loosened soil should be first wet at the center and thoroughly puddled there by trampling with a team. Then by widening the wet area the team may be driven round and round until the sides are reached and the whole thoroughly worked into a mortar. In this condition, if thoroughly puddled, the reservoir is nearly water tight. To prevent washing the inner slope may be covered with a layer of coarse gravel or crushed rock.

If a perfectly water tight reservoir is desired, the bottom should be cemented, coated with asphalt and sand, or six or eight inches of brick clay used in the puddling.

To remove the water from the reservoir the best plan is to use lap weld steam pipe provided with an elbow and laid with the mouth of the elbow level with the bottom of the reservoir and facing up. This is closed with a plug to which a long T handle is attached. The cut represents a cross section of reservoir with plug inserted in the discharge pipe. The end of the pipe where the plug is inserted should be thoroughly imbedded in a large mass of cement heavy enough to prevent it from being shaken when the plug is taken out or inserted. A reservoir with sloping sides should have an outlet at the junction of the sides and bottom, and it will be necessary to build a pier out to it in order to reach the plug.

A reservoir 4 feet deep and 40 feet in diameter will hold water enough to irrigate 0.85 acre 4 inches deep and 0.69 acre 2 inches deep and 100 feet in diameter will irrigate 4.62 and 2.16 acres 2 and 4 inches deep respectively.

Ramie Fiber.

The Dundee Courier gives an illustrated account of how the ramie fiber is worked at Wraysbury, on the Thames, near London. According to this account, at Wraysbury there is a perfected plant of ungumming, bleaching, preparing, combing and spinning. In a word, at Wraysbury have been demonstrated the possibilities of turning out yarn at a price to compete with flax or mohair and at about one-third the price of spun silk. The constitution of ramie is so entirely different from hemp, flax and other textile plants that the fiber must be treated by a wholly different method. It cannot be spun on cotton machinery. On wool, flax and silk waste machinery it works fairly well. A special plant, however, is necessary to treat the fiber economically and to enable a cheap yarn to be produced that will permit manufacturers to buy it either for its strength or for its luster. Now, if it is proved that machinery has been successfully introduced for the treatment of ramie stems freshly cut, there will undoubtedly be a more wide cultivation of the plant.

There is practically no limit to the goods that can be manufactured from ramie. Its strength renders it suitable, it is claimed, for ropes, twine, machine bands, belting or sailcloth and fishing lines and nets and for many of such purposes its diminished bulk and weight render it specially suitable. It can, it is averred, be converted into a cloth similar to cotton and it vies with flax as the basis for damask tablecloths and the like. It will mix with silk, wool and even cotton, adding strength by the alliance. The waste can be utilized for paper making of a high class. Its absorbent and antiseptic qualities, it is claimed, render it specially suitable for medical purposes.

A Plank Marker.

For planters of small gardens a Texas correspondent of Farm and Fireside gives an illustrated description of a homemade tool which he finds very serviceable in planting small beds, such as radish, onion, etc. Take a plank 6 or 8 inches wide and 1 foot long. Hollow out the side that is intended to drag on the ground, and nail a small, sharp stick to it, which is intended to open a small furrow for the seeds. Attach a handle about 5 feet long to the top edge of the board and pull it straight ahead over freshly plowed ground, and you will have a nice smooth ridge, with a small furrow on top to receive the seeds. To cover the seeds, remove the small stick and drag the concern over the ridge again.

Tests on slag of different degrees of fineness showed that the solubility increased with the fineness of the particles.

The Christian Cynosure.

REV. M. A. GAULT, - - - Editor.
WM. I. PHILLIPS, - - - Publisher.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 22, 1897.

THE GRANDEST OPPORTUNITY.

The anti-secret lecturer has rare opportunities of exposing and breaking the weak point in Satan's lines. The pulpits of many churches are open to him, and the pulpit is a weapon of tremendous power. If the pulpits of our land were arrayed against the lodge it could not stand twelve months. Combined with the pulpit is that of the platform. Wherever an audience can be gathered, whether in a church, hall, schoolhouse, private parlor or on the street, the N. C. A. lecturer has the privilege of proclaiming God's truth.

If there ever was a time when the advocates of the anti-secret Gospel should study diligently how best to present this truth it is now. Every reform cause has its powerful pulpit and platform advocates, and a cause that encounters such strong prejudice and opposition as the anti secret cause should have speakers of rare power and accomplishment. All the eloquence of heart, of voice, eye and hand, and that of the first quality, should be utilized. The time has come when advocates of this reform should aim to reach the highest proficiency in its presentation to the people. No cause can so ill-afford to depend on haphazard off-hand speaking.

The lecturer should have his discourse carefully written out, even to underscoring the words where he expects to draw blood. Let every sentence be carefully weighed, not only as to its truthfulness, but as to its power to convince. Select the most telling facts, the most pointed illustrations, the most convincing arguments. Let these be thoroughly memorized even to the authorities quoted. It detracts from the power of an address to read any portion of it. Of course this applies to lecturers who are regularly in the field. To be thoroughly familiar with the words greatly increases ones power of address. It obviates any nervous strain which is consequent on unfavorable conditions. Especially is this important in addressing street meetings. The anti-secret lecturer more than any other should have his story so on his tongue's end, that his words will flow without pause or hesitation.

Such a lecture should be made as interesting as possible by the use of apt and telling illustrations. These rivit the truth in the minds of the hearers. Few in an audience will listen unwearied to hard, dry logic without illustration. Above all we should rely on the power of the Holy Spirit to impress the truth. Yet in proportion as we depend upon the Spirit's power, we will most diligently do our part. Rev. James Milligan, who had three sons in the ministry, was in the habit of advising them to prepare for the pulpit as if everything depended on them, and after they entered the pulpit they should feel that everything depended on God. This is good counsel for an anti-secret lecturer.

FEARFUL POWER OF THE LODGE.

We intended at the time to call the attention of our readers to the trial of Alderman O'Malley a few weeks ago in this city as an illustration of the fearful power of the lodge in defeating justice in our courts.

More than two years ago Mr. Colliander, an election judge, was shot while guarding the ballot-box. It was a fearful crime against our government and against God. But the trial, which continued several weeks, revealed the fact that the lodge was making every effort to clear O'Malley. Mr. Forrest, who was prosecutor, declared that there was an A. P. A. combine, and would not allow an A. P. A. or a member of any Protestant church to sit on the jury. On the other hand, Mr. Deneen, the State's Attorney, would not allow a Roman Catholic to sit on the jury. The result was the decision of the O'Malley murder case had to be left to those who made no religious profession.

What a terrible condition in our courts when, because of secret society influence, the lawyers on both sides of such a case refuse to have a church member on the jury. It shows how the churches as well as our courts are under the heels of the lodge. The court has to rule out of the jury both the Catholic and the Protestant in order to get justice. What is the world coming to, anyhow? No wonder the court was unable to fasten the crime upon anyone. And is it any wonder that under such conditions human life is so cheap in Chicago?

AIDING VOLUNTEER WORKERS.

To the writer of the following note is sent five hundred assorted Lodge Lamps and three hundred Thurlow Weed pamphlets:

"Those not distributed here, or by letters, I intend as soon as the country roads are good shall be scattered among the farmers whenever I take a spin on my wheel out among them. I know of no better way to make my 'silent horse' serve the Master's cause than scouting for his army. How old am I? Seventy-fourth birthday next month. How is my 'special field of labor panning out?' I find large quantities of earth and but little gold. I find a few who are beginning to see the sin of lodgery and are helping me to turn search-lights on their darkness. What trembling cowards the majority of editors and preachers are in the presence of the slaves of the 'secret empire.' I have had a rich experience with them. 'Dumb dogs, they dare not bark,' though they see these night prowlers breaking into families, churches, and every department of human society. I am writing an article on secretism, which will be sent to an editor of a religious paper who is noted for his moral courage. He is a friend of mine; yet I doubt me that I get it published. If it is, I will order largely of extras for distribution."

The neighborhoods in which such men live are receiving an uplift that is invaluable to the community. Aiding such volunteer workers is a large part of the N. C. A. work.

MASON AND MORMON CHRISTIANS.

Chas. H. Malmstrom, of Mapleton, Utah, writes us the following testimony concerning Mormorism. It has always been the Cynosure's conviction that Mormonism is a man-made and Christ-rejecting system, and we cannot recollect the saying Bro. M. alludes to in the following statement:

"A few weeks ago you published a saying by a Mormon elder that the Mormons believe in salvation by Jesus Christ. We have many evidences here that that was a false statement, because no matter how much one believes in Jesus Christ, yet if he does not believe Joseph Smith, then he is cut off from the Mormon church. That makes Smith the corner-stone of the Mormon church. The Mormons call themselves 'The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints,' but they have been truly called 'The Church of Joseph Smith of Latter Day Devils.' Although occasionally you find one that is a Christian among them, but it is not Mormonism that made them Christians."

ARE WE TRUE TO OUR MASTER?

I regard your whole work as utterly opposed to the spirit of Him under whose name you work. The same principles that you advocate applied logically would make havoc of business and society in general.--Rev. John Clark Hill, D.D., pastor of the Presbyterian church, Austin, Ill.

The question Dr. Clark has raised is a test question. Is our work of exposing secret organizations, as he implies, opposed to the Spirit of Christ under whose banner we fight? How are we to determine the Spirit of Christ but by his example and command; and his example is as binding as his command. When the question was once asked where Christ would likely be found, it was answered negatively in order to strengthen the impression. It was declared that he would not be found in the secret chamber. His character was all so luminous and aboveboard that it was impossible that he should be found in a secret lodge-room. He once said when asked about what he taught, that he said nothing in secret, but taught openly in the synagogue and in the temple. Instead of commanding his disciples to ever conceal and never reveal, he directed them to let their light shine that others might see their good works.

In face of this command and example of Christ, can anything be more inconsistant than to imagine Jesus walking the streets of Jerusalem with the beloved John and inventing some excuse to send John off while he would disappear in some doorway and ascend to the fourth floor, where at the door of a lodge-room he would give the rap and password, and then go in and engage in lodge ceremonies which John, out in the cold night, could not share. Or can we for a moment imagine the Saviour of men taking such an oath as the Master Mason swears when he binds himself "under no less a penalty than that of having my body severed in twain, my bowels taken from thence and burned to ashes, and the ashes scattered to the four winds of heaven so that no more trace or remembrance may be had of so vile and perjured a wretch as I, should I ever knowingly or willingly violate this my solemn obligation as a Master Mason?"

Is not the boasted benevolence of these orders, in giving only to those who are able-bodied and who keep their dues paid up, in direct antagonism to the command of Christ, that his disciples must not give merely to those from whom they expect to receive in return? In fact, the leading spirit of these secret orders is that of selfishness, which is the very antipodes of Christianity. By what principle then does Dr. Hill say that opposition to them is opposition to the Spirit of Christ? Is he not sadly ignorant of either the Spirit of Christ or the nature of these secret orders? His declaration that our anti-secret principles if carried out would make havoc of society in general, reminds us of the Western editor who objected to the Decalogue as a basis of conduct because its application would revolutionize society.

DR. BUCKLEY'S ESTIMATE OF DR. FINNEY.

The New York Advocate, of which Dr. Buckley is editor, in comparing the world's four great evangelists, Wesley, Whitefield, Finney and Moody, says of Mr. Finney: "He was a lawyer, and without exception the most extraordinary evangelist America has produced, who, applying the hair-splitting, point-making methods of a lawyer convincing a jury of different degrees of intelligence, added thereto an awful solemnity, earnestness, power of denunciation and condensation which made men feel that every time they stepped they trod on chords that would vibrate to all eternity. By a sentence he could produce a deeper sense of the reality of the day of judgment than most great orators could create in a dramatic appeal of half an hour in length."

HOW TO FIND REST.

Christ said if we need rest we must learn of him. What feature of his character does he ask us to study and imitate? He says, "Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls." Pres. Charles G. Finney, the great preacher and revivalist of his generation, said: "I just lay down before God and asked him to empty me and fill me with his Spirit." Perfect submission to God's will is an essential condition to receiving the fullness of the Spirit. As Andrew Murray says, "When once the distinct recognition of what the indwelling of the Spirit is meant to bring is brought home to the soul, and it is ready to give up all to be partaker of it, the believer may ask and expect what may be termed a baptism of the Spirit."

WHY DID THE PATRIARCHS DIE?

From an article in the Commercial Advertiser of New York we learn that the dissolution of the famous Patriarchs was not a surprise, though the end came much sooner than expected. In fact, the Patriarchs themselves were hardly aware that they were so near the end. They met in secret Friday afternoon, April 9, at the Waldorf Hotel, New York. There was a vague feeling that the fight for existence, which had been a hard one since the death of Ward McAllister, in 1895, was nearing an end, but just what the outcome would be no one seemed to know. As far back as last fall there were disquieting rumors concerning the solidity of the Patriarchs when they decided to forsake their old home at Delmonico's in favor of the Waldorf.

Why did the Patriarchs disband? was the question on all sides. For the purpose of getting an authoritative answer to the question, a Commer- cial Advertiser reporter went to E. N. Tailer, who is one of the oldest members of the organization. Mr. Tailer said: "You see so many new dances like the assemblies and the Tuesday evening dances have come into favor during the past few years that the elderly ladies have gradually lost their oldtime interest in the Patriarchs. The outcome of the dissolution of the Patriarchs will result, I think, in more private dances next year. Then the young gentlemen will probably get together and form themselves into a dancing set."

A MENACE TO THE COUNTRY.

There is indeed something alarming in the following note taken from the Christian Instructor. It indicates where the next revolution will break out that will shake this country:

"The report is published in reputable journals of the enlisting of minute men all over the country among laboring men for mutual defence against the aggressions of the great corporations of the land. It is not known that these minute men are armed at present, but it is admitted that they will be drilled in the use of arms so that they will be serviceable in a fight. The whole movement is proceeding under cover of secrecy. It is denied that it is under the auspices of the Knights of Labor. Yet Knights of Labor members probably make up the greater part of the enlisted minute men. To us this is a menace to the peace of the country.

"When men are being enlisted in secret, and trained for taking the law in their own hand, without sanction of government, it looks very much as if treason were lurking somewhere in the movement. If our government cannot protect us in our just rights, the time must be near when we will need a new one, and this movement may have significancy in that direction. It may be an intimation that the people are about to assume once more their original powers. We know not whereto this matter will grow, but to our minds there is something rather alarming in this movement of the "minute" men, if correctly reported. It proceeds on the supposition that officers and courts have failed to protect the workingman as against his employers. It certainly should be a warning to the whole nation to do justly with all. Righteousness exalteth a nation."

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. J. A. Renwick, who is now traveling as financial agent of Monmouth College, was a recent visitor at the Cynosure office.

—Bro. S. S. Blonge, of Johnstown, Pa., writes: "The Cynosure is all it is represented to be—a strong weapon against Satan's secret tactics."

—Freemasonry was established in the island of Cyprus in 1888. There are now two lodges on the island under the English constitution. There is also a Royal Arch chapter and a Mark lodge.

—Rev. E. A. Crooks, of Blanchard, Iowa, visited our office recently on his return from the Reformed Presbyterian Theological Seminary, where he has just finished a three years' course of study.

—Bro. W. O. Dinius, of Huntington, Ind., writes that he will be at the Annual Meeting at 10 A. M., May 10th. He requests prayer for the Holy Spirit's presence in meetings he is now holding at County Line, Ind.

—Wm. C. Bissell, our veteran worker at Humboldt, Neb., writes: "I have, thank God, plenty of help in distributing the papers which you sent me. This shows an increasing interest in the subject. More than ever yours for the cause."

—James W. Ratcliffe, administrator of the estate of the late John K. Ward, has sued the Knights Templar and Masonic Life Insurance Company, to recover a policy of $5,000, alleged to have been unpaid on the life of the deceased.

—Says the San Francisco Chronicle: "One of the valuable relics intrusted to the care of the Grand Master of Massachusetts' Masons is the 'Washington urn'— a small golden urn containing a lock of General Washington's hair. Mrs. Washington presented the lock to the Grand Lodge in 1800, and Grand Master Paul Revere made the urn."

—As an illustration of the rapid growth of a secret order, the Heptasophs have gained 200 per cent in membership within the past year. The business men have investigated and taken hold with a will. Only one assessment per month is what pleases the "masses." The conclaves are working hard with a view of increasing the membership as much as possible between now and next May, when the supreme body will convene at Louisville.

—Elder J. T. Cullor, of St. John, Mo., says: "To take a pledge in a minor secret order is likely to lead to take an oath in a major secret order. My mother used to say, 'don't take anything that does not belong to you.' She would then illustrate by a noted thief, whose mother said the first thing he stole was a pin. Let us warn the young men of the first step in secrecy, the same as of the first drink."

—J. Griffin, of Hortonville, Wis., writes: "For me to say that myself and wife are interested in the great and noble work, is saying but little. Though the cause is so very unpopular, yet we are praying daily for the prosperity of the work. I feel that it must go forward, for surely there is no department of moral reform work that is so imperative and so indispensable. It must succeed. God bless you in letting the light shine into those dark places."

—Rev. Joel Swartz, of Steubenville, O., writes: "I have often thought of sending you something for your columns, and shall do so; and thus testify my sense of obligation for the privilege of being one of your constant readers. I enjoy the powerful and faithful testimony of the Cynosure against the evil of secretism. The absurdity, to say nothing more, of hiding anything claimed to be good under the vail of oath-bound secrecy is so preposterous that argument against it is made difficult and seriousness seems almost ridiculous."

—A lodge in Illinois recently had a peculiar experience. A majority of the members were in arrears for dues and voted down every measure proposed for their collection. The Master owed $24, the Senior Warden $20, the Senior Deacon $19, and similar amounts were due from many others. This fine state of affairs was brought to the attention of the Grand Master. A visit from the district deputy soon settled the matter. It was "pay up or shut up." At last accounts measures had been taken to "pay up." This illustrates the authority of Masonic government.

—Albert Morgan, Supreme President of the Equitable Aid Union, a fraternal insurance company, with headquarters at Columbus, Pa., and with a large membership in many States, acknowledged to the Associated Press, April 18th, that there is no hope for the future of the Union, and that a member dying to-day would not get a dollar of insurance. A percentage will be paid on claims now due. The local branches of the order in Western New York will disband this week. Lyon Union, the oldest branch of the order in this city, formally disbanded last night.

—John S. Peter, wanted in Pittsburgh for the embezzlement of funds belonging to the Window Glass Workers' Association, of which he was preceptor and treasurer, has been arrested in Oakland, Cal. J. S. Peter was superintendent of the plant of the association, a combination of 6,000 wage-earners, at Jeannette, twenty-seven miles from Pittsburgh, and his brother is corresponding secretary of the branch. He admitted, April 7th, that he had taken $600 belonging to the association, and had foolishly fled, rather than confess his error to his friends. He declared that he was ready to go back, and would waive requisition papers.

—Rev. Cyrus Smith writes: "I feel that the 'God of peace,' mercy and love is in this work. We rejoice with you at the prosperity God gives, blessing his own cause by putting it into the hearts of those who would be his servants to help his struggling cause when loyalty to his Son is so vital, but most neglected. Love for the erring is indispensable, but 'zeal according to knowledge' is also necessary to rescue the fallen who worship at lodge altars. Lodgery is the exact opposite of 'pure and undefiled religion;' and when all who profess to love the truth are loyal to Christ in withstanding his worst enemy, God will bless the church most grandly. 'Prepare ye the way of the Lord.'"

—Rev. G. P. Raitt, of Newburgh, N. Y., writes in reference to our work: "All cannot work in the same line. Each has his particular talent, and has his own work to do. I am glad to know you are in this work. You have a large congregation to preach too, and I see you give a certain sound—send forth a clear light. Your guns must tell sooner or later on the fortresses. You are at the head with the trumpet, the lamp and the gun. Who can estimate the influence you may be able to wield? May God bless you and bring you on your way heavenward. May he guide you in your work that you may see the heels of the enemy and hear the shouts and receive the congratulations."

—Robert G. Ingersoll was asked by a reporter: "What do you think of the Methodists' resolution at the Cleveland conference for putting God in the Constitution?" "I think that if the fanatics get God in the Constitution there will be no room left for man. Our fathers in 1787 retired all the gods from politics and established a secular government, in which the power to govern does not come from God, but from the consent of the governed. Let us keep the aristocracy of the air from governing the land in which we live." How does Ingersoll's theory of government harmonize with that of Christ, who said, "All authority in heaven and in earth is given unto me;" and Paul's declaration, "There is no authority but of God?"

A TORNADO OF FLAME.

The Swift and Tragic Burning of the Steamer Martha Washington.

A steamer called Martha Washington left the Cincinnati docks late in the night of Jan. 7, 1852. She was heavily freighted with a cargo consigned to New Orleans and the markets of Texas and California. In her cabin were 30 passengers. When seven days out, on the coldest night known to rivermen, she burned to the water's edge off island Sixty-five, in the Mississippi river. Despite the loss of 16 lives, together with the cargo, the catastrophe excited no more comment at the time than many like disasters. In time, however, the captain and others were charged with burning the boat to secure insurance. In a famous trial they were acquitted, but belief in their guilt remained general.

On the witness stand is the pilot, Lewis Choate. "I was at the wheel when the Martha Washington burned," says he. "Captain Cummings was with me in the pilothouse. I remarked that I smelled fire. The captain looked about and said there was no fire. He went down stairs, however, and immediately the flames broke out.

"I stood at the wheel until a line was made fast to a tree. There was no person alive in the cabin when the boat struck the shore. I could hear the glass rattling like hail in the burning cabin, where the flames roared like a tornado. I jumped ashore from the pilothouse—a hard spring it was. I struck partly in the water and partly on shore. All the passengers who ever got ashore did so at the instant the steamer struck the bank. Yes," he adds in a tragic voice, "if I had believed that Captain Cummings set the boat on fire, I would have taken his life that night. If you," addressing Mr. Stanberry, who stands erect and alert, the very Bayard of the bar, "had seen the misery, the suffering, that night on board the Martha Washington you would not blame me. I am sure I would have killed the incendiary on the spot. It was the coldest night I ever saw in that country. No one could quench the flames. As well describe a hurricane as that fire, so fierce, so swift was the destruction it wrought. In less than a minute after the engineer shouted back to me that there was no fire the flames flashed 10 or 12 feet above the hurricane deck. The cabin of the boat had been painted over, God only knows how often—perhaps 20 times. It was not the coal tar paint on the chimneys I smelled, it was a pine and turpentine smell."—Lida Rose McCabe in McClure's.

When Hunger Gives Zest.

I have not lost all taste for an al fresco feast in camp style, but there are pleasures of many kinds and they are not always comparable. I only draw the line at those messes called clam chowders, fish chowders and the nightmare provoking clambake. These may be classed as coarse feeding, but I have had as delicious trout, venison and other game served in camp as ever tickled a tongue. Yet a service in courses, the varied products of the vineyards, the fruits and desserts—I like all good things; but the best of all is good company, whether in evening dress or flannel shirt. Yet I can't admit that camp cookery excels the best hotel cookery, taking each on its merits outside of sentiment. We deceive ourselves in this. We come in hungry enough to eat a bear before his skin is off and "hunger is the best of sauce."

You have often come into camp with a string of trout and had to clean and cook them before you could eat supper. You stuck a stick in the gills with a bit of pork in the mouth and stood them up before the fire and turned them when necessary. When you thought they were done, you sat down and ate them half raw and half burned, and your hunger prompted you to say that you never ate such trout before in your life. If trout cooked in that same way were set before you in a restaurant, you would reject them as unfit to eat. But the memory of a camp dinner with an appetite only six hours old, but very large for its age, has a halo around it that should properly encircle the appetite. Though not a taxidermist, I have stuffed several thousand first class appetites, but never could preserve one.—Fred Mather in Forest and Stream.

Onward and Upward.

If our onward motion (in life) is down hill, the past is cut off from our view. We have no appreciation for the deeds, the efforts, the virtues, the truths, which the life of our predecessors taught and exemplified. The accumulated wisdom and experience of the bygone are sunk into an abyss of blue haze—nothingness. There is no warm sentiment to cheer the heart, no guidance, no hope, no inspiration for the future. But when our spiritual progress is upward—heavenward—the past becomes more charming, more significant to us the farther we proceed. Every single object in the distance that is behind us appears more beautiful, more significant, in the grouping we survey from the heights we ascend. And the heart is aglow with hopes and anticipations of the future. We feel that there is a beyond which is more blissful than the human fancy can conceive. By our appreciation of the past we can estimate whether the course which our life takes is upward or not. Onward we are swept by the "chariot of God." But within ourselves and our relations to the past we must find an answer to the question, Whither?—Hebrew Journal.

Tortured For Disobedience.

An extraordinary custom prevails among some Chinese a few days after the marriage ceremony is performed, the bride being required at a festival to repeat certain phrases after any of the guests assembled on the penalty of suffering cruel tortures, such as burning her face with lighted joss sticks, a redhot poker or such like implements. A short time ago a marriage took place in Hollywood road, near the Man Wo temple, and a festival was held in honor of the event.

A young Chinese, in the course of the festivities, asked the bride to repeat certain phrases after him, which she refused to do. He thereupon inflicted serious injuries to her face with burning joss sticks and the lighted end of his cigar. The uncle and some of the friends of the woman subsequently had a quarrel with the young man over the affair, with the result that he was brought before Commissioner Hastings at the magistracy, charged with assault. He pleaded that he was only skylarking. The magistrate sent him to skylark for four months in Victoria jail.—China Exchange.

The New Man Must Hustle.

The colleges for women are said to be besieged with applicants for the higher education, with the number constantly increasing. This suggests two facts—the possibilities of the race for intellectual development when the women are so eager for knowledge and the absolute necessity for the new man to be up and doing to keep pace with the feminine procession.—Baltimore American.

A Ride For Reputation.

While they were discussing the melee in the school board the head of a big manufacturing establishment was moved to relate this experience:

"I was once a pedagogue myself. I had resolved to do something worth while in the business world, and having no capital except what was wrapped up in my person I taught school to get a starter. I had some advanced students and had to skirmish in order to keep up with the procession. One day the whole class was stumped by an arithmetical problem, and so was I. In order to gain time for myself I came the old dodge of telling them how much better it would be if they would work out the solution for themselves and gave them another day.

"That night, behind locked doors and closed blinds, I worked in fear and perspiration. From the bottom of my trunk I took a key to the arithmetic, but even with that aid I failed to master the problem. By midnight I was desperate. It would never do to let the scholars, the parents and the whole cruel world know that I was not equal to my position. But it's not in my make up to surrender while there's a fighting chance.

"At the town, ten miles away, there was a loyal and highly educated friend of mine. He would help me and say nothing. It was one of the bitterest January nights I ever knew. But I slipped to the barn, appropriated a horse, made a ride more notable than many of those immortalized in song or history, froze my ears and toes and had my vocal powers reduced to a whisper.

"But you should have heard my whispered explanation of that problem and my regrets that none of the pupils had mastered it."—Detroit Free Press.

Wave Names.

I have a note of some curious names given locally to the waves on different parts of our coast that may be worthy of record. These were culled from The Family Herald a few years ago. I cannot give the exact date. The names are curiously varied and sometimes not a little suggestive. The Peterhead folk call the large breakers that fall with a crash on the beach by the grim name of "Norrawa (Norway) carpenters." On the low Lincolnshire coast, as on the southwestern Atlantic fronting shore of these islands, the grandly long unbroken waves are known as "rollers." Among East Anglians a heavy surf, tumbling in with an offshore wind, or in a calm, is called by the expressive name of a "slog," while a well marked swell, rolling in independently of any blowing, is called a "home." "There is no wind," a Suffolk fisherman will say, "but a nasty home on the beach." Suffolk men also speak of the "bark" of the surf, and a sea covered with foam is spoken of as "feather white." The foam itself is known as "spoon drift." So in the vernacular we have it, "The sea was all a feather white with spoon drift."—Notes and Queries.

He Said "Poke and Beans."

Joe Cavan, who has had a whirlwind experience in the south and west, said to the crowd in the same old place, the up town hotel:

"My advice to you all is, be natural. Do not try to deceive people with your affected talk or in your clothes. You will be certain to show the cloven foot somewhere. I was at a dinner once in St. Louis. It was given by Governor Marmaduke. Before we had given our orders, for at a western dinner every man has the privilege of saying what he wants, the governor asked each one of his guests where he hailed from. One was from Tennessee, one from Illinois, one from California. The east was not represented, so I handed in my card from Vermont. Just then the waiter passed the bill of fare, and, my ruling passion asserting itself, 'Poke and beans,' said I in my natural voice.

"'Cavan,' said the governor of Missouri vehemently, 'you're from Georgy. No man from Vermont ever said 'poke and beans,' and your scheme of passing for a Yankee, suh, is reprehensible and will cost you the wine.'

"I have sailed under my own colors ever since."—New York Sun.

Their Peculiar Aversions.

Most people have aversions of some kind or other, and some very strange ones. The sight of a set of false teeth makes John L. Sullivan sick at the stomach. Napoleon did not like to see a white dog. Agassiz could not bear to touch polished steel. The sight of the rising moon, when it was full, always made Mme. de Stael ill. Barefooted children made Louis XIV nervous. Dean Swift has said that Bolingbroke would "act like one bereft should he cast his eye on a poor, harmless toad." Disraeli had an attack of vertigo when he saw anybody chewing gum. Dickens never liked a stiff shirt bosom, and Buffon would fly into a rage if any one put an egg on the dining table at which he sat.

Common Honesty.

In the west there are six states with senatorial contests on hand. A paper has been sent to the United States senate by the presidential electors of Delaware setting forth that through fraudulent and illegal action in the count of votes in one county in that state an actual majority for one political party had been changed to a majority for the opposing party. This was done to elect certain men to the legislature in order that they might vote a certain desired way for senator. Therefore the presidential electors brought the matter to the consideration of the United States senate.

Now, in every one of these senatorial contested election cases the way is plain. Either one candidate or his opponent was certainly elected to the legislature. It is not hard to ascertain which one it was. Those who count the votes certainly know which it was. There is one clear, straight, infallible way out of the tangles in every case. Let those who know, who cannot help knowing exactly how the count stands, simply certify to the truth. That is all they need do.

It is time we were returning to the simple, straight path of common honesty in this country, in elections and everything else. An infusion of just plain, common honesty into vote counting and all the processes of politics will solve every difficulty, straighten out the tangled threads of every contested election case and make darkness as clear as noonday. What is more, everybody concerned will be even better off financially than he is now. Every dark and muddy and crooked way in politics has been tried in this country and failed. It has failed even where it at first seemed to succeed. Now let electors and candidates go back on their tracks and settle square down on the platform of plain, common honesty, which is also the eternal and illustrious platform of common sense.

Danger to the Republic.

There are wise persons who think they see peril to the existence of our republic. The editor of The Outlook is one of these. He writes:

Two dangers threaten the republic—mobocracy and plutocracy; the ungoverned passions of the many and the cool, calculating, organized greed of the few. The first is hirsute, loud voiced, barbaric, appalling; the second is genteel, well clad, silent, specious. Those who fear the first will wish to add to the safeguards and strength of vested rights and to lessen the power of the people; those who fear the second will wish to increase the safeguards and enhance the strength of the people and to lessen the power of wealth. We fear the second peril.

For mobs, though appalling, are generally local and always temporary—mere episodes in our national life. They are generally unorganized and always ill directed; are as abhorrent to public sentiment as they are hostile to public interest; are invariably disavowed by the very men who have evoked them, and are easily and promptly quelled. It has never been necessary even to summon the militia where the police were efficient. But the greed of concentrated wealth is chronic, and its work is continuous. It is never satisfied and never vanquished. It buys votes at the polls, franchises of city councilmen, special privileges of legislators. The "boss" is its hired servant, and through the "boss" it controls lawmakers and governors. It escapes just taxation and levies unjust taxation on the people. It has been officially proved to have purchased judges in a few rare instances; it is believed by common fame to have secured the appointment of others who were by tradition and habit identified with its interests. It already controls the output of coal and oil—our fuel and lights; our railroads—the highways of the nation; our telegraph—an increasingly necessary means of communication, and it is even now clamorously demanding at Washington special privileges.

About 25,500 immigrants come to the Dominion of Canada annually. Of these, however, an average of 7,800 skip across the border to the United States each year. They simply take advantage of the rates and inducements offered by the Canadian authorities to get a cheap way of coming to the United States. In addition to these immigrants, the French Canadians are fairly tumbling over one another to get out of the Dominion and into the United States. Thousands come every year. All this is curious, but it will never be any different till Canada becomes a part of the American Union.

Three-fourths of all the meat products exported from this country go to Great Britain. She took from us last year 103,000,000 pounds of ham alone and 204,000,000 pounds of lard. We shipped abroad in 1896 $600,000 worth of oysters, and England took nearly all of these too.

The people want our national legislature to pass that bill forbidding any foreign company to land an ocean cable at any point upon our shores without first obtaining consent of congress.

A question that requires a nice discrimination to decide is when nudity in a picture or statue is artistic and when it becomes an impropriety.

If there should come a war between England and the United States, John Bull would suddenly find himself very short in his meat supply.

It sounds very strange to read that a man was frozen to death recently near Mobile, Ala. But the man was drunk, which accounts for it.

HINTS ON ROADMAKING.

One of the Requisites Is a Dry and Solid Foundation.

The importance of drainage in the construction of roadbeds is not sufficiently understood by amateur road-builders, farmers, path masters and road tax workers in general. Dry roads, as a rule, are good roads, and the good roads problem will be near solution when this fact is generally known and appreciated. An essential for any kind of a roadbed is a solid foundation. This can never be attained so long as water is allowed to remain in the road or under it.

In road drainage provision must be made for both surface and under drainage. The roadbed should be graded, rounded and kept smooth, so that water falling upon it may readily run to the surface drains at the sides of the road. These side ditches should be graded so that water will not stand in them and saturate the roadbed by capillary attraction.

But the work is only half done by the removal of the surface water. More dangerous and injurious to the life of the road are the wet places in the road foundation. Underdrainage must be resorted to to remove this foe of good roads.

Underdrains should be made by laying a line of tile on each side between the roadbed and the side ditches. These tile drains should be at least three feet deep, carefully graded and have a good, clear outlet. Wet places in springy or "seepy" hillsides can be remedied by laying a line of tile across the road some distance above the wet place. This will catch and remove the water before it can come near the surface.

Roadbuilders should bear in mind that, no matter how hard the surface, it will not stand the weight of traffic if it be laid on wet soil, as the foundation soon becomes saturated, and the destruction of the road quickly follows.

REPAIR OF HIGHWAYS.

A Little Fixing When Needed Saves Money as Well as the Road.

Poor nations make poor roads and keep them poor. Yet a poor nation might increase its riches by the making of good roads. We are not a poor nation, and it ought to be a matter of pride no less than of business tact to keep up with the other nations in this matter of feasible roads. What they mean to the farmer in the saving of repairs, of live stock and of rolling stock, what they mean to the women who wish to stir out of the house in bad weather, what they mean to the children who have to go to distant schools, what they mean in looks and cleanliness, what they mean in the facility they afford for transportation and for pleasure travel have been gone over again and again, yet the lesson has not been fully learned.

England and other European countries do not wait until a road has been kicked to pieces by the horses or guttered by rains before mending it. They keep men at work on it. And it is estimated that in such a case the repairs are not over $50 a mile per annum, since the work does not take all of the time of one man—indeed, the work is often consigned to superannuated citizens who are no longer in competition with the people who have indoor trades or are employed on farms. A little tinkering, a little rock breaking, a little ramming home of loose stone when frost or rain has heaved it up will keep a road in good condition, and the man who does this humble yet useful work can keep some miles of it is shape.

In some of the poorer countries of Europe these road menders work for what the benefited citizens choose to give them in the way of alms, but that is not businesslike, and it ought not to do here. We want able men and are able to pay them, and in the country we have no doubt that able men could be engaged to repair the highways at $50 a mile per annum. For lack of immediate repair it costs hundreds of dollars where it might cost one. In the end we shall learn that the best is the cheapest and that constant watchfulness alone keeps things at their best.

POOR ROADS TAX.

A Florida Farmer Figures That It Amounts to $10 an Acre.

A farmer in Leesburg, Fla., is convinced that the poor roads of his neighborhood are a serious tax. In a letter to the local paper, The Commercial, he sums up the cost of poor roads to himself as follows:

Cultivating ten acres, eight miles from the station, I buy two tons of fertilizer for $70. This quantity makes eight loads for one horse, and six hours are required for a trip. The time of myself and horse is worth 60 cents per load. I make 500 crates of vegetables, which require 71 trips to get them to the station, at a cost of $42.60. On hard roads I could haul my $70 worth of fertilizer in four trips of four hours each, at a cost of $1.60. I could haul my 500 crates of vegetables in 35 trips of four hours each, at a cost of $14.

On the sand roads one horse is required 71 days to ship my crop, which is a longer time than the shipping season; hence I am compelled to keep two horses during the year or hire from my neighbors at a busy time. The cost of keeping the second horse may be safely estimated at $25.

So much of my time is used in my trips to town that during three months of the year I am compelled to hire an extra hand, which costs me about $45. The foregoing items will suffice to show that bad roads cost on my ten acre crop $101.80, being a tax of over $10 per acre.

A Permanent Improvement.

The chief of the board of road inquiry at Washington is responsible for the statement that it costs the farmers of the country an average of over $3 a ton to market their produce, nearly two-thirds of which might be saved by the construction of good roads. The value of the saving that would result in any farming state in a single year would be very large. If rightly constructed, good roads, when once established, should be a permanent improvement, so that the addition to the wealth of the country from the economy they afford would be something enormous in the course of years.

Repair of Stone Roads.

Experience has shown that the way to preserve stone roads is to roll them after rains with a steam roller, or, where that is undesirable, with a heavy horse roller. The steam rollers can be bought for about $3,000, and the expense if each township owned and operated its own roller would be slight. Weak bridges are sometimes an obstacle, but it is certain that, without rolling at the proper time, the best stone road is bound to be destroyed by the sun, wind and wear and tear.

Keep the Roads In Order.

To keep a macadamized road in good order the dust should be removed from the surface in dry weather and the mud when it is wet, so as to keep the surface clean, and the drains and gutters kept clear, so that no water may lie on the surface. In England the drainage of the roads is considered of so much importance that property owners, through whose lands any drain or ditch which carries off the water may run, are required by law to keep the drain or ditch in good order.—Exchange.

WEIGHT AND MEAT.

Fowls That Rank Highest as Used on the Table.

To produce a large and heavy fowl is one thing and to produce one with weight and meat combined to the best advantage for table purposes is another.

The Brahma is the largest and heaviest fowl, with the Cochin and Langshan closely competing with it in size and weight. But in none of these three breeds are weight and meat combined as satisfactorily to the consumer, when the fowl is dressed and cooked, as it is in several other breeds.

The fanciers of the country—those that make mating and breeding with a view to utility a study—have tried for many years to produce a breed of fowls that would have small bones and sinews, with plumpness of breast, meaty thighs and shortness of leg and neck—in other words, a compact, blocking bird, with plenty of meat and little bone.

Working in this line they have evolved the Plymouth Rock and the Wyandotte, the two best known and most popular American breeds. These two breeds are not perfection. Yet these represent a long step in the right direction, the females coming nearer to the ideal, small boned, meaty fowl so greatly desired than the males. The latter are still rather lank and bony. It is hard to breed them down to a blocky, meaty form. But, still, in the two latter named breeds we find the best table fowl in all the long list of pure bred poultry. Of these two the Plymouth Rock is the best known and the most popular. The difference between them, however, consists chiefly in plumage, as there is really very little difference in the size, weight and the amount of edible flesh on them.

There is another breed that ranks high as a table fowl, one that, in the female particularly, combines weight and meat in a most happy and desirable degree; we refer to the Southern Game fowl, a fowl that, like Topsy, "just growed," and which, despite the efforts of the poultry fanciers to produce something superior, still holds its own as a table fowl. In fact, a game pullet, with her plump breast, broad and fleshy back and meaty thighs, combines as large a per cent of meat to the bone as any fowl grown. In addition to this there is a sweetness and wild bird flavor about the meat of the plantation or farm raised game fowl not found in any other breed, not even excepting the Plymouth Rock.

FARM POULTRY.

More Profit In Eggs Than In Fattening For Market.

The profit derived from improved farm poultry comes, first of all, from their increased size; therefore in improving poultry you should have two objects in view. The first is egg production; the second is size and keeping such stock and in such numbers as will allow the profit resulting from the sale of the surplus to pay for labor of caring for them.

In climates not extremely cold a plain, comfortable house should be constructed. One that will accommodate, without crowding, 100 fowls may be built with a small outlay of from $50 to $100, and a flock of this size, provided their sleeping quarters are kept clean and wholesome and they are allowed a wide range, may be kept healthy without much hard work. Of this number 25 will easily raise a liberal supply of young chicks for a large family, besides furnishing them in addition an abundance of good fresh eggs the year around. This will leave 75, and the greater profit will be realized if they be of some nonsitting breeds or crossed with some nonsitters, so that they will concentrate their strength and energy in egg production.

For, unless one has favorable market facilities, there is no profit in selling live chickens. Well fattened hens sometimes bring a reasonable price, but as a rule, unless the seller is well posted in such matters, the prices accorded the farmer, after transportation and commission fees, are so low that he finds it would have been better if he had kept them for home use. Good, fresh, brown eggs fetch a good price in the market at any time. The price varies with different localities, but in the summer season we can get 10 cents per dozen, while in winter and the greater part of the fall the price rises to a greater extent. If the food is raised for the flock on the farm, the expense of keeping is reduced to a considerable extent. If a large family be liberally supplied with fresh eggs and first class poultry, that in itself should be considered as equivalent for the food supply of the rest.

POINTS OF MERIT.

Why One Man Places Black Minorcas at the Head of the List.

A writer in The Poultry Monthly sums up the merits of the various breeds of fowls in this seemingly rational fashion:

The Egg Breeds.—Minorcas, Leghorns, Polish and Hamburgs. Of these, the Minorcas and Leghorns easily outclass the others. Now, while it may be conceded, for the sake of argument, that as to number of eggs they are about even, it must be acknowledged that the Minorcas lay a much larger egg and are heavier birds. We reserve the Black Minorcas.

Meat Breeds.—Brahmas, Cochins and Langshans. Of these the Brahmas easily lead in point of weight and also as layers. We reserve the Light Brahmas.

General Purpose Breeds.—Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Dorkings, Houdans. Of these the race for first place is very close between the first two, with possibly a slight advantage in favor of the Plymouth Rocks. We reserve the Barred Plymouth Rocks.

In the fight for superiority we have now left three distinct competitors: No. 1, Black Minorcas; No. 2, Light Brahmas; No. 3, Barred Plymouth Rocks.

No. 1 is supposed to be the highest type of an egg machine.

No. 2 is the exponent of solid weight.

No. 3 of the class of so called general purpose fowls is supposed to be half way between No. 1 and No. 2—a sort of connecting link—but we believe that we can readily eradicate him by comparison.

As to meat, No. 3 is barely superior as to quantity as compared to No. 1, but far inferior to No. 2.

As to eggs, we find No. 3 greatly inferior to No. 1 and hardly equal to No. 2. In view of the above we feel justified in reserving Nos. 1 and 2 as the real competitors for highest honors as useful fowls. Let us study the special points of each:

No. 1. Best layer, largest eggs, hardy, quick maturing, good average size.

No. 2. Good layer, ordinary size eggs, hardy, slow maturing, very large.

Now, we believe that all points considered (and you can study it out for yourselves), the Light Brahmas should take second place, acknowledging that the Black Minorcas stand at the head of all domestic poultry.

An exchange for the unemployed has been established in Berlin on a plan which ought to be adopted in all great cities. Headquarters have been secured where the unemployed may come and register their names and likewise wait for bids for their services. The place is provided with reading rooms and an ample library and a light and spacious general waiting hall. All classes of unemployed, from the schoolteacher to the day laborer, are invited to appear and make their wants known.

Yes, New York is a great metropolis. In some respects it surpasses any city under the sun. But it is chiefly noted for its freak newspapers, its Dr. Parkhurst, its Steve Brodie and its reform city government.

"EASTERN TROUBLE."

WHICH ONE OF THE COUNTRIES STRUCK THE FIRST BLOW

The Question That Europe Is Required to Answer—Somebody Struck It and Turk and Greek Are Fighting All Along the Line.

London, April 19.—The situation in the east has not been cleared by the declaration of war so far as the powers are concerned. If they manage to confine the trouble to the two nations now is the aggressor. Both Greece and Turkey declare it was the "other fellow," and Turkey, in the official document that brought about the culmination of the strain that has existed for weeks, very artfully avoids "declaring war," as follows: War has not been officially declared between Turkey and Greece, but it has been declared officially to have "broken out." The Turkish cabinet has decided to sever diplomatic relations with Greece, and has ordered Edhem Pasha, the commander of the Turkish forces. to take the offensive. But war between Turkey and Greece has actually begun, Turkish declarations that war has "broken out" being merely for the purpose of diplomatically putting the onus of the war upon the kingdom of Greece.

They Are All Turkish Facts.

The facts relied upon to support this position are that the Greek regulars advanced into Turkish territory Friday and attacked the sultan's troops; that the whole of the past week was one of invasions by the Greeks, but that Friday's invasion was one of regular Greek troops, "thus establishing war," without agression by the Turks. The word "facts" above is used as if used by a Turk; the porte says the above statements are facts. The Greeks say they are not. The porte says that Turkey has no idea of conquest, and as a proof of pacific sentiments the sublime porte offers to retire the Turkish troops on the frontier if Greece will retire her forces from the frontier and from Crete. These statements are made in a circular to the powers.

Greeks Have Their Own Story.

Now as to the Greek position, they claim that the "outrage at Prevesa" was practically the opening of the war. As for the alleged invasion of Turkish territory by Greek regulars the Greeks hold that it was an attempt upon the part of the Turkish forces to occupy a strategic position near Mount Analipsis, not far from Nezoros, in the neutral zone, which led to the encounter on Friday between the Greeks and the Turks. This, it is added, was used at Constantinople as a reason for ordering Edhem Pasha, the Turkish commander-in-chief, to assume the offensive, and led to the rupture of diplomatic relations between the two countries. Little news of a reliable nature has been recived at Athens or is allowed to leak out regarding what has really transpired on the frontier. It is known, however, that the whole frontier of Thessaly has been blazing with murderous firing since early yesterday morning.

Delyannis States His Case.

The Greek case is stated plainly by Delyannis at a special sitting of the legislative asembly held at Athens yesterday. The public galleries were crowded. Amid intense excitement Delyannis, the premier, announced that the Turkish government had notified Greece of the rupture of diplomatic relations on the ground of the aggressive attitude of the Greek government. In a cool but diliberate speech he reviewed the recent events to show on the contrary that Turkey had been the aggressor; that her troops had attacked the Greeks and attempted to occupy neutral positions, and that her batteries at Prevesa had sunk the Greek ship Macedonia.

"Turkey," said Delyannis, "declares war against us. We accept it."

This statement was received with prolonged cheers from the galleries and the floor of the chamber. Athens and all of Greece accept war gladly.

GREEKS BOMBARDING THE TURKS.

Naval Attack on the Forts at Prevesa—The Frontier Fighting.

Athens, April 19.—[Copyrighted, 1897, by the Associated Press.]—The Turkish batteries at Prevesa, on the north shore of the entrance of the Gulf of Arta, where according to the treaty of Berlin the Turks had no right to erect fortifications, fired on and sank a Greek steamer, the Macedonia, yesterday morning while she was atempting to leave the Gulf of Ambracia. The crew of the steamer were saved by boats from the shore, but the captain of the Macedonia was severely wounded. Upon receipt of this news the Greek government sent orders to the Greek fleet in the Gulf of Ambracia to bombard Prevesa Consequently the bombardment of Prevesa commenced yesterday morning.

It appears that the bombardment of Prevesa only began at 11:30 a. m., whereas Turkish forces there opened a hot fire upon Actum at 5:30 a. m. Actum was formerly a telegraph station, but the building was converted into a fort and was garrisoned by 500 men. The Turkish fire completely destroyed it. At 10 o'clock a. m. the Shafidaki fort fired a few shots on a Greek gunboat, which replied, effectually silencing the Turkish battery. At 11 o'clock the Greeks began to attack the Turkish forts outside the entrance of the gulf, partly to divert the enemy's attention and partly in order to prevent the massacre of the Greeks at Prevesa. The Greek ironclad Spetzai has arrived to assist in bombarding Prevesa, and the gunboats continue to bombard from inside the gulf.

The firing opened at long range. The first shot was sent by the Greek warship Basileus Georgios, the cruiser Nauarchos Miaulis taking up the fire. The Hamidieh and Pantokatoros batteries returned the fire, but their practice is not good. At 3:25 p. m. a shell from the Nauarchos Miaulis fell fairly in the Hamidieh battery. A dispatch just received says that the Skafididi batteries have been completely destroyed. The Greek battery at Kefalipanaghia co-operated effectively with the flotilla in the bombardment.

London Audiences Are Modest.

London, April 19. — The first performance of "On Leave" at the Avenue Theatre showed a rather thin French farce which had been ruined for a London audience by reason of two actors exchanging trousers before the footlights.

FUNERAL OF SENATOR VOORHEES.

Many Distinguished Men from All Parts of Indiana Present.

Terre Haute, Ind., April 16.—In the presence of a concourse of people, which included Governor Mount, ex-Governor Matthews, and many of the most distinguished men of the state, as well as a large percentage of the population of this city, the remains of Daniel W. Voorhees were committed to the grave yesterday afternoon. Among the honorary pall-bearers were the venerable Richard W. Thompson, always a vigorous opponent of Voorhees on the political forum, and Riley W. McKeen. Nearly every one present was a sincere mourner, and at few funerals has the element attracted by curiosity been so small.

The interment was under the management of the Masonic order, and was preceded by a funeral service at St. Stephen's Episcopal church, in which Mr. Voorhees was confirmed long after he had reached years of maturity, and in fact but comparatively few years ago. The funeral cortege consisted of a platoon of police, the Ringold band, Co. B., I. V. I., the Bar association, the Indianapolis delegation, the Jackson club, the Fort Harrison club, the Terre Haute club, the Masonic orders the G. A. R., and carriages of private citizens, and was one of the largest ever seen in this city. During the funeral business in the heart of the town was suspended, the public schools were dismissed, and all Terre Haute joined in doing honor to the memory of her distinguished son.

COSTLY BLAZE AT NEW ORLEANS.

Wipes Out a Whole Block and Costs the Owners $400,000.

New Orleans, April 16.—One of the most picturesque business structures in the city, known as the Moresque block, owned by Gauch & Sons, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday. The conflagration broke out shortly after 1 o'clock, and in an incredibly short space of time the whole building was a mass of flames that burned with a velocity absolutely astonishing. At half past 2 the edifice had collapsed, and upwards of $400,000 had gone up in smoke.

The Moresque building occupied one entire block, bounded by Camp, Poydras and Church streets and Lafayette square, and its walls were built entirely of iron in a design known as the Moorish. The Montgomery Furniture company, and Gauch, Sons & Co., crockery merchants, were the tenants of the building, and both firms carried full stocks. The fire is supposed to have originated in the top floor of the Montgomery section.

DISAPPEARANCE OF A MINISTER.

Has Much the Appearance of Another Dr. Cronin Tragedy.

LaGrange, Ind., April 17.—Rev. A. L. Case, of Tekonsha, has mysteriously disappeared. He has been gone since last Tuesday and all efforts to find a clew to his whereabouts have failed. The disappearance has been likened to the Dr. Cronin case of Chicago, as Case was called to the bedside of a dying member of his congregation, but the call was never made. He came to town from his country farm and hitched his horses in front of a friend's house, where the horses were afterwards found. It is learned that he had sent a letter to his wife saying it was better that they should part, but it is thought the letter is not genuine.

Sutherlin Goes Up for Life.

Plymouth, Ind., April 16.—After an argument, covering twenty-four hours, the jury in the famous Sutherlin murder case retired at 6 o'clock Wednesday evening, reaching a verdict at 5 o'clock yesterday morning. The defendant, William Sutherlin, was found guilty of murder in the second degree, in killing W. E. B. Fetters, and he was ordered imprisoned for life. A new trial is asked for. The verdict gives general satisfaction. The prisoner retained that calmness characterizing his demeanor throughout the trial.

NEWS OF THE STATE.

ITEMS WHICH WILL BE OF INTEREST TO OUR READERS.

A Condensed Report of the Proceedings in the State Senate and House, Showing What the State Lawmakers Are Doing at Springfield.

Springfield, Ills., April 15.—Immediately after routine business of the senate was completed yesterday that body went into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering the Humphrey railroad bills on the order of second reading. The order of the day was speeches for and against the bills by gentlemen from Chicago. Against the bills there were speeches by Newton, Partridge, P. Doyle (of a labor union), Judge L. B. Thoman and John H. Hamlin, of Chicago; for the bills, C. L. Bonney, J. J. McDonald (representing Chicago real estate dealers) and C. T. Yerkes (the street railway king), all of Chicago.

In the house a joint resolution was offered for a sine die adjournment May 6. The judicial apportionment bill was passed as it came from the senate. Bills appropriating an aggregate of over $1,242,000 were passed and the joint resolution to take a rest from tomorrow to next Wednesday adopted. The committee on elections reported in the Kirby-English contest in favor of seating Kirby, the Republican.

Springfield, April 16.—In the senate yesterday a bill was introduced authorizing the consolidation of gas companies. The senate then took up the Humphrey railway bills and an amendment was adopted providing that street railway companies must pay into the city treasury from 1 per cent. in cities of less than 100,000 inhabitants to 7 per cent. in larger cities, of the gross earnings, the amount so paid being also increased for successive periods of years, 7 per cent. being the highest. The franchise is to run for fifty years and an attempt to make it forty was defeated. After further amendment the bill was ordered to third reading, and made special order for today. A committee was appointed to investigate the trouble with the University of Illinois funds connected with the bank at Chicago.

Bills were passed: Providing that separate ballots be provided at an election for a constitutional amendment; providing for the appointment of ten commissioners who participated in the battle of Shiloh to mark the positions on the battle field occupied by Illinois troops; to prohibit the wearing or using of the insignia or rosette of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion by others than members of the order.

The house spent most of the forenoon discussing the bill creating a state board of pardons. The bill was advanced to third reading. The bill appropriating $30,000 to the Illinois National Guard was passed. The bill to prevent the name of a candidate from appearing on an official ballot more than once, or under more than one party appellation, was passed.

Springfield, April 17.—The senate yesterday passed both the Humphrey street railway bills, the first by 29 to 16 and the second by the same vote and then adjourned until next Wednesday. The feature of the debate was Littler's speech in which he said that the street railways under the bill would in fifty years pay to Chicago $60,000,000, and of the council of the "typical American city:" "If there ever was an institution of this country which needed to be restricted in its rights it is the city council of Chicago. That body has the worst reputation of any legislative body in the world. It is a noted fact that no man can get his rights there without paying for them." The bill was passed requiring teachers in public schools to be 18 years of age if females and 19 if males, and a bill was introduced appropriating $315,000 for the asylum for the incurably insane at Peoria.

In the house the Humphrey street railway bils were received and ordered printed and to first reading. The committee to investigate the state institutions were announced. The bill appropriating $687,000 for two years for the eastern Illinois hospital for the insane at Kankakee was passed. Several bills were advanced and adjournment taken to next Wednesday.

Illinois Woman Suffragists.

Bloomington, Ills., April 17.—A mass convention under the joint auspices of the National American Women's Suffrage association and the Illinois Equal Suffrage association opened in this city yesterday afternoon and will end with a mass-meeting tonight. A large number of prominent women suffragists are present.

Illinois Nomination.

Decatur, Ills., April 16.—The Republican convention for the third supreme judicial district was held here yesterday. J. W. Wilkin, of Vermillion county, was nominated for judge. The nomination was made by acclamation. Judge Wilkin made a speech of acceptance.

Aged Man Killed by the Cars.

Dixon, Ills., April 17. — Orlando F. Herrick was killed by cars at Princeville yesterday. He was 64 years old and came to Dixon from Canada fifty-seven years ago.

Arrested for Forgery.

Bushnell, Ills., April 17.—James E. Dugger was arrested here yesterday charged with forgery to the amount of $1,000. He is wanted at Carrollton.

State Notes.

William Martin, a prosperous farmer, near Lynnsville, Ills., was found near a haystack with his brains blown out. It is believed to be a case of murder.

The Englewood (Chicago suburb) Bureau of Charities has placed forty acres at the disposal of unemployed persons. The land will be laid out in small vegetable gardens.

Seven persons were injured during a fire in the picture frame works of H. Zehnert & Bro., Chicago. An explosion of chemicals knocked down five firemen and they were all burned about the face, hands and body.

Judge Henry W. Blodgett and daughter Carrie have reached their home in Waukegan, Ills., after a month's visit at Eureka Springs, Ark., for the benefit of the former's health. The judge says his condition is much improved.

The strike of the Chicago tanners continues, both sides remaining firm. Owing to threatening demonstrations police are guarding the tanneries.

ANGELL TO GO TO TURKEY.

Michigan University President Nominated for a Diplomatic Post.

Washington, April 15.—The statement that President Angell, of Michigan State University, had been selected as United States minister to Turkey was confirmed yesterday by his name being sent to the senate for confirmation to that position. Other nominations sent in were: George N. West, of the District of Columbia, consul of the United States at Pictou, Nova Scotia, and George D. Meiklejohn, of Nebraska, to be assistant secretary of war.

James B. Angell is a native of Rhode Island, in which state he was born in 1829, but he has resided in Michigan for the past twenty years or more. He is a graduate of Brown University and his life has been largely devoted to educational work. Mr. Angell is a Congregationalist and has been quite prominent in church affairs. His appointment was sought especially by the members of this church, which has a greater number of missionaries in the Turkish field than any other denomination.

A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies.

Narratives and Arguments, 15c. each.
Showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. 10c. each.
By Rev. M. S. Dury.. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown.

NEW IRON LASTS and HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT

The Latest, Neatest, Cheapest and Best Outfit Ever Invented

THE HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT NO. 1.

Consisting of 38 First-Class Tools and Materials (neatly boxed) Shown in Cut, viz.:

1 Iron Last, 8 inches.
1 Iron Last, 6 inches.
1 Iron Last, 4 inches.
1 Iron Standard, with Base.
1 Package Assorted Nails.
1 Package 4-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 5-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 6-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
6 Pairs Star Heel Plates.
½ lb Copper Rivets and Burrs.
1 Steel Punch.
1 Sewing Awl, complete.
1 Pegging Awl, complete.
1 Wrench for above.
1 Stabbing Awl, complete.
1 Shoeknife.
1 Shoehammer.
1 Bottle Rubber Cement.
1 Bottle Leather Cement.
1 Harness and Saw Clamp.
1 Ball Wall.
1 Ball Shoe Thread.
1 Bunch Bristles.
4 Harness Needles.
1 Soldering Iron.
1 Bottle Soldering Fluid.
1 Box Rosin.
1 Bar Solder.
1 Directions for Use.

All these tools are full-sized, practical, neat, and cheap; not mere toys. They enable any person to do his own half-soling, boot, shoe, rubber, harness, and tinware repairing.

This Outfit is the result of years of study, experiment, and correspondence in the manufacture of Iron Lasts and Repairing Outfits; and its practical advantages need only to be seen and tried to be appreciated.

Our Improved Iron Lasts and Standard are one of the handiest tools you can have about the place. The Lasts are four in number, smooth and solid, 4, 6, 8 ,and 10 inches long, thus enabling one to half-sole all sizes of foot-wear. The Standard is made with an iron base, which can be easily fastened to the bench. No method of half-soling is now used on common work, except that of iron last and wire clinch nails. The writer of this has been in the business 20 years, and has seen the changes from the old wooden lasts and pegs to the modern method, and knows it to be complete.

Our Improved Harness and Saw Clamp is an indispensable tool in sewing a harness or filing a saw. The jaws are thrown open mechanically by a coiled spring on the bolt.

The weight of this outfit is 18 lbs. Price, all complete, packed in a neat, strong box, only $3.00.

The Home Repairing Outfit No. 2.

COMPLETE BOOT, SHOE AND RUBBER REPAIRING OUTFIT, consisting of 31 first class tools and materials. The No. 2 outfit contains the same articles as the No. 1 except ing the Harness and Soldering Tools, and is gotten up for those who have no harness or tinware repairing to do. Price of No. 2, neatly boxed, $2.00, or with the paper one year, $2.75. Price of No. 1 neatly boxed, $3.00, or with the paper one year, $3.75.

BUTTER STOCK.

Another Prize Bull of the Famous St. Lambert Family.

Good things, good people and good live stock cannot come in number too large. The great Ida of St. Lambert

IDA OF ST. LAMBERT'S BUTTER BULL.

Jersey family is now noted in Europe, America and even in Australia.

The illustration shows the Jersey sire that took second prize at the New York state fair. He was entered in the aged class, being nine days too old for the 2-year-old list. He is more strongly and stockily built than some of the Jersey bulls. Some of them are proportionately too long bodied and thin loined. Not this fellow, however. He is a grandson of Ida of St. Lambert.

More About the Silo.

In a recent talk about the silo and ensilage a farmer made the following points:

"I have not found anything more profitable than a silo. It should be located inside the barn, thus being protected from frost and not requiring roofing material and weather boarding. Dig ditch and fill nearly full of stone for foundation. Have very little stone wall in a silo. Make the silo square. Use timber 2 by 8 inches, spiking four together for each silo. Bed the sills in pine tar. For studding use 2 by 8 stuff, 6 feet long. On top the first course of studding spike a plate made of three pieces 2 by 8 stuff. On this spike another course of studding and on this another plate. Continue to build on till required depth of silo is secured. Bind the corners by lapping ends of the 2 by 8 timbers that compose the sills and plates. This plan secures a silo that cannot spread. Put lining on horizontally. That nearest the bottom rots first and by this method can be replaced without removing the sound lumber nearer the top. The silage settles all right. I feed silage till last of May, and when cows are turned out upon grass they shrink in milk. Next year I want to feed silage the entire year. To raise silage corn, plant as for grain. For cutting use a McCormick harvester. When cut too green, there is too much acid. Harvest when the corn begins to dent. Silage will be sour if made when corn is in the milk. While filling keep level, or the grain bounds to the outside. Do not tramp around the sides, as this spoils the silage. Merely keep level. No cover is needed. Top can be tramped and made wet and will then form a crust. If feed is scarce, use chaff or cut straw for cover."

The Setting of Milk.

Milk may be set for cream in various kinds of vessels and under different conditions. The poorest method is to set in shallow tin pans or crocks on pantry shelves or in a cellar. Milk thus set is exposed to a greater air contact than when set otherwise, and so is more liable to be affected by injurious odors, by diseases transmitted through the atmosphere and by heat and cold. Milk so set will oftentimes rapidly sour, or in very cold weather may freeze. If it sours badly in summer when skimmed, curds will be likely to get in the cream and remain more or less in the butter after churning, forming white spots, thereby seriously injuring the quality of the butter, or if the milk or cream freezes an inferior grade of butter will be made from it.

If cream is to be secured by setting milk, the best plan will be to set the milk in round tin cans, about 18 inches deep and 8 inches in diameter. If the can is placed in ice water or cold spring water to the height of the milk in the can, the conditions for cream separation will be greatly improved, especially if inside a refrigerator or creamer. This method helps keep the milk at a uniform temperature and enables the cream to rise to best advantage.

Begin With Good Stock.

Most of those who begin farming buy more land than they can pay for because a part payment on land leaves good security for the balance, says an exchange. Then they find innumerable expenses in purchasing tools and stock to begin operations. The temptation always is to economize in the stock, thinking that it is easy to breed up. Sometimes this is done, but more often the economy in not buying the best stock dooms the farmer to the same labor and expense in caring for it, while it is, when grown, not worth half or a quarter what it would have been if he had begun right at first.

The Oatmeal Trust.

It requires an unlimited amount of cheek, says The National Stockman, for the agents of the new Oatmeal trust to appear before the ways and means committee at Washington and ask for a higher duty on oatmeal, "so that better wages may be paid to employees." The present duty on oatmeal is 15 per cent ad valorem, and under this duty only $20,000 worth of oatmeal was imported into this country last year. Already the trust has advanced prices $1 a barrel, and with more protection it could force prices still higher and still keep out Canadian, Scotch and Irish oatmeal.

Milk Cow Statistics.

Milk cows in 1895 numbered 16,504,629, and their value was estimated at $362,601,726, and in 1896 their number was but 16,137,586, but their value increased slightly over $363,900,000. There was a decrease in other cattle of more than 2,000,000 in 1895 and 1896. In the present year the number is 32,085,409 and the estimated value $508,528,416.

Dairy and Creamery.

When cream is churned too warm, the butter will be soft and too white and there will be considerable of it left in the buttermilk. When the butter grains are too fine to collect and they form what is called butter flour, then your cream is too cold. In this case warm about two gallons of water to 62 degrees and pour it into the churn, stirring well.

For hilly regions the Guernsey or Jersey will do well. Holstein-Friesians do their best on moist, rich, comparatively level lands. The most fertile lands in Europe, as well as the dampest, are those of Holland, whence the Holstein-Friesian springs.

Milk producers should study to get not only the most milk from their cows, but the richest. This is a matter of breeding and feeding, and it can be entirely controlled by the cattle raiser.

Here is a day's cow ration as recommended by Hoard's Dairyman for a North Carolina milkman: 10 pounds corn stover, 10 pounds clover hay, 5 pounds pea vine hay. To this is added a mixture of 2 pounds cowpeas, 2 pounds Kaffir corn, 2 pounds sunflower seeds.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

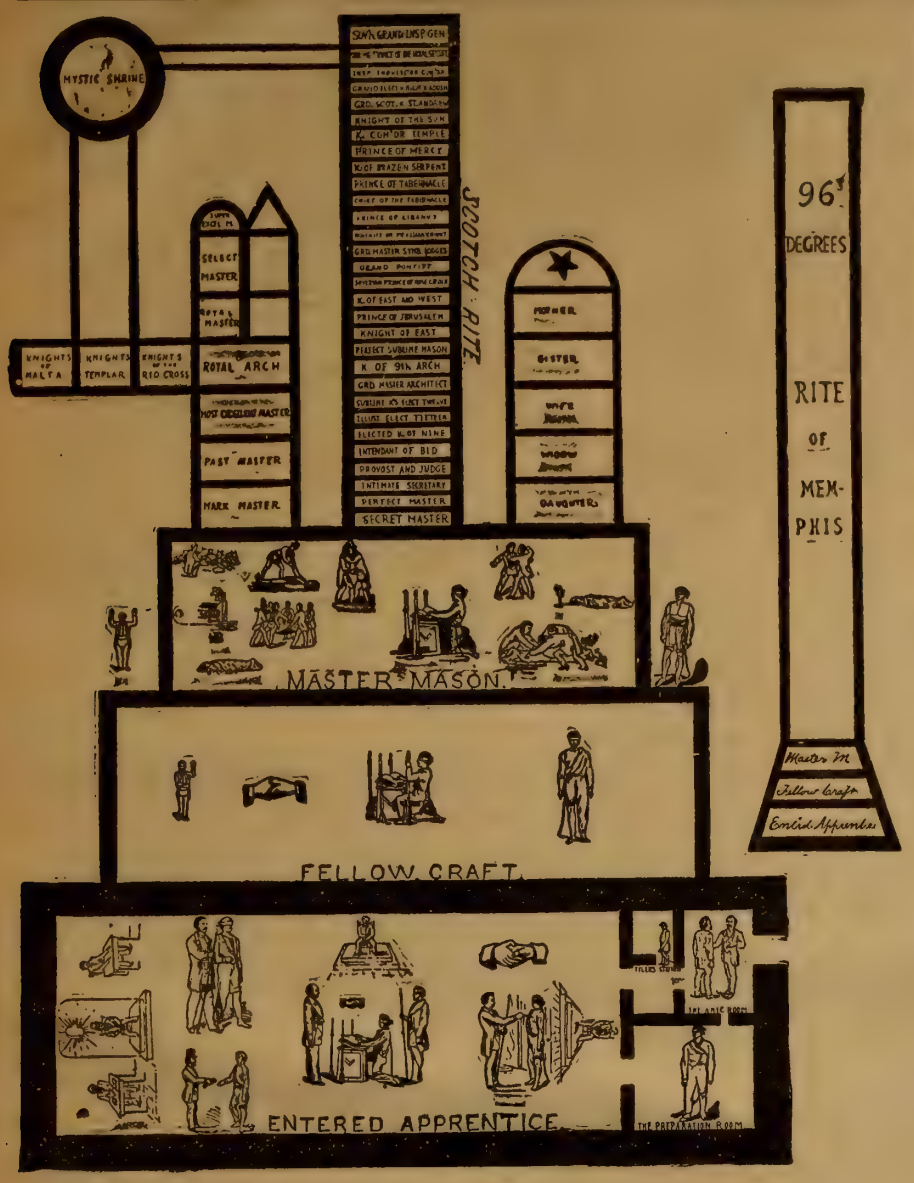
Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover, 25c. each.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge, and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc.



MASONIC CHART.

ILLUSTRATING THE RELATION OF SOME OF THE DEGREES AND RITES IN FREEMASONRY TO EACH OTHER.

The accompanying chart represents one hundred and forty two degrees.

1. The American Rite of 13 degrees;
2. The Scotch Rite of 33 degrees;
3. The Egyptian Rite of 96 degrees.
4. The Mystic Shrine of one degree.
5. The Eastern Star of 5 degrees for Master Masons and for women. These are side degrees, and not genuine masonry.

The Symbolic degrees, or Blue Lodge of three degrees, are common to every Masonic rite, whether American, Scotch, or Egyptian, or whichever of the Masonic rites, named in Mackey's Masonic Encyclopedia one may choose to investigate.)

This chart shows in the Blue Lodge the position of the Worshipful Master and some of the other officers of the lodge. Several positions of the candidate who is being initiated are also shown. In the Master Mason's degree is recognized the murder, burial and resurrection scene so full of religious significance to Freemasons.

A complete expositon of the Blue Lodge and Chapter consisting of seven degrees. Profusely illustrated.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. 341 pages, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. 2 vols. Per vol., cloth, $1.00: paper, 65c.
The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive.
Vol. II comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. 274 pages, flexible cloth, 50c.
By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. 110 pages, paper, 25c.
The genuine old Morgan book republished.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry. By Avery Allyn. Cloth, $5.00.
Contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, and the Orange Societies.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Cloth, $2.50.
Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market, it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated."

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 75c.
Contains the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual.

Look to the East. A ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Cloth, $2.00.
Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or the Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. 16 pages, 5c.
Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge.

Mah-Hah-Bone; 589 pages; $1.00
Comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. Cloth, $1.00: paper cover, 50cts.
The complete revised ritual of the Lodge Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. Cloth, 50c; paper cover, 25c.
This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor of Evangelical Lutheran church. 10c. each.
This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and, the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias, Illustrated. Cloth, 50c: paper cover 25c.
An exact copy of the new official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the world, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. 15c each.

Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated."

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association. 10c. each.
Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Constitution and By-laws of the Association.

Secret Societies. Cloth 35c, paper 15c.
A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev Edward Beecher.

The Master's Carpet or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical. Bound in fine cloth. 400 pages. 75c.
Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. 5c.
By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard, Cloth, $1.50. paper, 75c.

Finney on Masonry. Cloth 75c., paper 35c.
The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By ex-Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasony Self-Convicted. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40c.
This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them.

Judge Whitney's Defence before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. 15c.
Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. 10c.
This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life-undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder and Oaths of 33 degrees. 304 pages, cloth, $1.00,
"Composed of Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's, Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees."

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor of United Presbyterian church.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in New Berlin trials. 10c.
The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiation by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties.

Grand Lodge Masonry. 5c. each
Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to Republican Government. 15c.
By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian) a seceding Mason of 21 degrees.

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio.

Story of the Gods. Postpaid, 10c.
By I. R. B. Arnold. Brief sketches from the mythology of Rome, Greece, Egypt, India, Persia, Phrygia, Scandinavia, Africa and America, showing the relations and unity of the past and present systems. The idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus clearly seen and understood.

Masonic Outrages. Postpaid, 20c.
Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assualt on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts. etc.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. 25c.
As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book. 25c.
Consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies.

The Image of the Beast; A Secret Empire; or Freemasonry a Subject of Prophecy. By Rev. Richard Horton. Third Edition. 200 pages, cloth, 60c.

Sermon on Secretism, 5c. each.
By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear ayn of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all.

THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE AT WORK ON THE LEVEES.

Their Stability the Only Hope of the Planters — No Hope for This Year's Crops — Outlook at Omaha Decidedly More Encouraging.

Memphis, Tenn., April 15.—The river continues to slowly rise at Vicksburg and all points south, and the situation along the Louisiana system of levees is acute. The waters are pouring gulfward with tremendous force, and several thousand men are working and watching night and day in one grand effort to hold the embankments intact. Reports from the overflowed Mississippi delta are not encouraging. The expected fall in the waters that extend for miles and miles over the fertile valley has not occurred. Many well-known planters express the fear that the yellow stream will not recede until June—too late to plant this year's crop. Much suffering still exists in the Sunflower and Bogue Phalia country, where hundreds of negroes have deserted their cabins and are huddled on high grounds and the railroad tracks.

Davis Island People in Peril.

Many cabins are submerged to their very roofs. while several have been swept from their foundations and carried away by the swift current. Near Greenville yesterday two negroes were drowned in an attempt to reach dry land. Word reached Vicksburg during the day that many negroes were in imminent peril at Davis island, where the break in a private levee occurred, and assistance was asked for. A relief steamer was immediately dispatched to the island. At Rosedale, the work of relief continues. Rations will be sent to the Sunflower district today. At Greenville the river stood stationary last night.

Rain Falls Over the Flooded Area.

Throughout the overflowed area rain fell in torrents Tuesday night and part of yesterday. At Helena the downpour was of such violence that great pumps were put to work in the lower part of the city. The water gained so rapidly that the pumps had to be discontinued on account of the driving belts becoming soaked and unmanageable.

The whole of the southern part of Helena is under water from one to four feet deep and those who had provided themselves with boats were fortunate. The pumps were started up again last night, and it is expected the water will be out of the streets in three or four days.

OUTLOOK AT OMAHA IMPROVES.

Danger of a Cut-Off Averted for the Time —Much Stock Drowned.

Omaha, Neb., April 15.—At noon yesterday the river was still rising slowly. A new break in the banks of Florence lake had occurred above the dyke built Tuesday, and the water was again pouring into the Cut-off lake. The damage so far to the houses of the people in East and North Omaha, and to the tracks of the railroads along the river front. The East Omaha Terminal company's yards are almost completely submerged. The Union Pacific and Burlington have lost some sections of sidetracks, which have been undermined and slid into the river. The lower yards of both systems are practically abandoned. The other roads are faring better, as their yards are on higher ground. The Columbia distillery stands on a knoll surrounded by water. The Willow Springs distillery is just out of reach of the water, and the Omaha and Grant smelter is in the same fix.

Some water has backed in around the Union Pacific shops, but not enough to do serious damage. Along the river front hundreds of squatters have been driven from their huts and many of these are being swept away. On the Iowa side the levee which protects the Council Bluffs lowlands is holding splendidly and there is very little probability of its giving way. All the danger is on the Omaha side now. Cut-off lake has risen twenty inches, and is overflowing its eastern bank. This may serve to weaken the dyke at the lower end. If this gives way the loss will be severe. At noon the government gauge showed the river at 16.9 feet, a rise of 0.3 feet, and the gauge at Florence above the break shows 17.6 feet, a rise of 0.9 feet. It is reported falling at Pierre and stationary at Sioux City.

Last night there was less danger of the threatened cut-off by the Missouri river, and unless there is an unlooked-for rise or a high wind from the north it is not probable that much more damage will be done. The hastily built dyke that stemmed the torrent from Florence lake on Tuesday was greatly strengthened yesterday, and has almost stopped the flow at the most threatening point. The water has spread out over a wider stretch of territory and surrounds a few more houses, but the change in channel of the Missouri has been averted for the time at least. The workmen employed along the levee struck yesterday for double pay. They were getting 15 cents an hour and demanded 30 cents. Their demands were refused and they quit work. Other men were easily secured.

On the Iowa side of the river, south of Council Bluffs, the water has inundated farms for a distance of three or four miles from the stream. The water came up in the night and the farmers report much stock drowned. These reports are coming in from every point along the river as far south as St. Joseph. The flood is the worst since the inundation of 1881, and is doing immense damage to property along the river's edge. The flood seems to have reached its height and will probably fall from now on.

Specimen of Cuban "Specials."

New York, April 17.—Una Melton, one of the Competitor prisoners, cables to a New York paper that the Spanish evacuation of Cuba has commenced, 450 soldiers having embarked from Havana for Spain. It has been given out by Spanish authorities that the men to leave were sick and wounded, but that was merely a ruse to cover the fact that the withdrawal of Spanish troops has commenced.

Omaha Is Probably Safe.

Omaha, April 17.—The river is still falling at this point, and there is evidence that the worst damage from the flood has been done. The stream across the north bottoms is still discharging an immense volume of water into Cut-Off lake, but the dykes across the bottom are holding well, and the receding river must soon reduce the influx.

THE NATIONAL LEGISLATURE.

Synopsis of the Proceedings of the Lawmakers at Washington.

Washington, April 14.—Morgan yesterday concluded his long speech on the resolution declaring that a state of war exists in Cuba. He did not ask for a vote on the resolution, but announced that he hoped to secure a final vote at an early day. The bankruptcy bill was taken up at 3 o'clock and Lindsay of Kentucky defended the measure against criticisms made against it. A letter was received from Secretary Gage explaining his order as to liquidation of entries of imports arriving after April, and Vest presented a resolution declaring that the order is without authority of law. An executive session was held.

Washington, April 15.—The only thing of interest in the senate yesterday was a test vote on the tariff, the question being on the reference to a committee of Vest's resolution declaring illegal the order of Secretary Gage with reference to the retroactive clause of the tariff bill. The Democrats opposed reference and lost—24 to 23. The left-over Indian appropriation bill came up, but Morgan made a long speech, and nothing was done on the bill. The president sent to congress a message urging suitable provision for the representation of the United States at the Paris exposition of 1900.

Carter Harrison Installed as Mayor.

Chicago, April 16.—Carter H. Harrison was formally installed as mayor of Chicago last evening. He delivered a short inaugural address in which he promised to do his utmost to give Chicago a good administration of its municipal affairs, and promised that all the pledges he made during the campaign would be kept religiously. Immediately after taking the oath of office he submitted the following cabinet appointments, which were approved by the council: Comptroller, Robert A. Waller; chief of police, Joseph A. Kipley; commissioner of public works, Lawrence E. McGann; chief of the fire department, Denis J. Swenie.

Representative Milliken Dead.

Washington, April 19.—Representative Seth L. Milliken, of Maine, died at night of pneumonia.

THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

The Annual Meeting of the National Christian Association occurs on the 10th of May next. Members of the Association and all friends will please take notice and be prompt in attendance on Monday, May 10th, at 10 o'clock A. M, at 221 West Madison St., for the election of officers and the transaction of other important business.

SAMUEL H. SWARTZ, Pres.

MRS. M. C. BAKER, Rec. Sec'y.

The second session of the Annual Meeting, Monday, May 10, will be in Willard Hall at the noon hour, from 12 to 1 P. M.

While the old Cynosure cartridge will be changed in form next week yet it will be charged with the same quality of powder, only a little stronger. Look out for it.

Arrangements are being made for Pres. S. H. Swartz to preach in the Wheaton College chapel on the secret society question, Sabbath, May 9. This will be in connection with the Annual N. C. A. meeting.

"Bring Another" should be the motto of every friend of the cause who can attend the noon hour meeting at Willard Hall, Monday, May 10th. The addresses will be by Pres. S. H. Swartz and Dr. C. A. Blanchard.

Near the Cynosure office, at 362 Washington Boulevard, the Coin Publishing Company have published a book called "The Patriots of America" of over 200 pages. W. H. Harvey is the father of the order. It has a chaplain and secret ritual, and the candidate must swear to "recognize the divinity of unselfish intelligence, and cheerfully yield allegiance to the principle that the judgment of a majority of this order is carried out will result in good to all the members thereof."

The name "secret society" is a blind. Masonry is more than a society. It is an order. As an order it is a religion. Christian Masons profess two religions. Outside they belong to the church. In the lodge they affiliate with pagans and practice paganism.

Rev. Wm. Fenton is busy arranging for a State anti-secret convention for South Dakota for the last of May. Will not all in this or adjoining States who can in any way assist Bro. Fenton write to him at 74 S. Robert street, St. Paul, Minn?

An anniversary meeting of the National Christian Association to testify against the secret society evil will be held in Dr. E. P. Goodwin's church, corner Ann and Washington Boulevard, Sabbath evening, May 2. It will be addressed by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.

The Synod of the Iowa Norwegian Lutheran church convenes in Northwood, May 27. The lodge will come up for discussion under the question, "How Shall we Confess Christ?" The synod will be in session one week. The pastor of the Northwood church, Rev. O. T. Lee, says their denomination has demonstrated that it is possible to build churches without courting the lodges.

Last Friday morning a wholesale liquor dealer, J. H. Raap, was shot and instantly killed in this city by G. H. Braunschweig, who had previously been in his employ, and who was accused of embezzling from him $2,300. After shooting his employer the murderer turned his revolver upon himself, adding the crime of suicide to murder. He was buried Sabbath afternoon with Masonic honors, and, as usual in such cases, sent to the grand lodge above.

There is a fable of some shepherds who had killed and were feasting together on a lamb. "What an uproar," said a passing wolf, "would be made by these men if I should do the like!" Freemasons, swearing to conceal each other's crimes, and quoting Bible oaths as precedents, use wolves' logic. Combining to get secret advantages of our neighbors, and swearing not to reveal our proceedings, resembles legitimate oaths as sheep-stealing resembles eating mutton.

What an impression of the danger of secret labor unions is made by reading the address in this issue of Rev. B. T. Roberts. These unions are growing more powerful every year. It is now well-nigh impossible for any artisan to obtain employment in this city or suburbs, unless he belongs to a secret labor union. Two years ago on the Marquette building during a strike two men were shot and the murderers went unwhipped of justice, because the law was powerless in the presence of these secret labor organizations. Non-union men have been pursued on the street, and recently one was followed into a church, where he fled for refuge, and dangerously assaulted before the pulpit in the presence of a prayer meeting. Labor is enslaved by these despotic organizations.

President Blanchard, at the Congregational Association which met at Wheaton, April 20th, gave an address upon the subject, "The Holy Spirit as a Revealer of Truth." Every one present was greatly moved by the pathos and power of the address, which was filled with spiritual food for the soul. He said in part that every pastor felt the need of more power in his work. The work of the churches was neutralized largely by the worldiness of its members, and the enemy would follow Christ's ministers even with thoughts of self to the very threshold of the pulpit. How could the Holy Spirit reveal the hidden things of God when there was a tendency to compromise by catering to the favor of the world instead of God, and by being mixed in lodge entanglements and other things which grieved the Spirit away? What is needed is the preparation for the Spirit by putting away all evil from the heart and life that the Holy Ghost might reveal his power through us to the salvation of men.

The Chicago Record of April 26, says: "Secession from the main body of the Ladies of the Maccabees of the World and the formation of an independent movement may be the outcome of the inharmonies that have existed in the local 'hives' of that organization for some time. The trouble—the question as to the legality and financial standing of the supreme body—culminated Saturday night in the First Methodist church building, when Miss Bina M. West, supreme record-keeper, with headquarters in Port Huron, Mich., left the meeting after having refused to answer the question put by the presiding officer, Miss Hattie Kline, as to what was the meaning of a telegram she held in her hand from the commissioner of insurance of Michigan, setting forth that the Ladies of the Maccabees of the World had not been incorporated by him."

The Record continues: "'The fact of the matter is,' said Miss Kline yesterday afternoon, 'that as the result of a private investigation it has been learned that the supreme order had no legal standing during the four years of its existence in this State prior to April 1, for the reason that it had no license, and on account of that we have lost confidence in the officers and do not propose to risk our money any longer. Again, the organization has no standing in Michigan, where it was instituted, the document Miss West has being only a permit until March, 1898, by which time legislation covering the specific case will have been enacted by the Michigan legislature. Another reason there has been inharmony in the local ranks is because our request for permission to form a State hive has been repeatedly ignored, though we have 4,000 members, and, according to the bylaws, but 2,000 are required.' In answer to these charges, Miss West insists that the rules of the order specifically forbid open meetings, and for that reason the Saturday meeting was illegal."

THE TWO "PRAYER RUGS."

BY H. E. LOVELESS.

Two rugs of costly make and weave,
Both old with age and wear,
Lay side by side, and both receive
Their mead of praise and care.

They are treasured more as they grow old;
Time mellows and subdues
The colors bright, as frosts and cold
Enrich the autumn hues.

One represents the artist's skill
In texture and design;
Once, priest and prince upon it kneeled,
And worshipped at their shrine.

And one a homely braided mat,
The skill you would scarce admire;
Yet memory brings the weaver back
Before the open fire,

Where mother sat and plaited in—
Not oriental hues
Nor threads so fine, but did combine
The honest reds and blues.

For beauty this one can't compare
With its mate from 'cross the sea,
But it became my "rug of prayer,',
My shrine, my mother's knee.

AN AGED VETERAN'S EXPERIENCE.

BY R W. LYMAN.

My brother, now living at the age of nearly ninety-four years, had joined the lodge some time after Morgan's abduction. He was one of the cool Masons, probably meditating upon the cut-throat oaths he had recently taken. He had not at that time entered into covenant and fellowship with the world's Redeemer. He very soon after saw the aggravated wickedness of the institution and broke loose from it.

He said to me, referring to Wm. Morgan's book, that for a dollar or less he could have purchased as full and correct a knowledge of the first three degrees of Masonry as he got by paying a much larger sum and going through the silly, degrading and profane ceremony of initiation. After he became a member of Christ's spiritual body, as he did soon after, he further said to me that he could not conceive it possible for one to be an intelligent Mason and at the same time a Christian.

I have given the substance, not the exact words, uttered by my brother. I have heard many seceding Masons give in substance the same testimony. All that a Christian need to know of Masonry in order to give an unqualified condemnation of it, is that it sets at naught as a myth the whole story of the only Saviour and Redeemer of the world.

As proof that Masonry rejects the Christ of the Bible, I bring the testimony of the following named accepted Masonic authors: Webb's Monitor, page 120; Macoy's Monitor, page 157; Sickels' Monitor, part 2, page 51; Mackey's Ritualist, page 348. Several passages of Scripture are quoted by these Masonic authorities, which they mutilate by dropping out the name of Christ. I will give only one of the numerous instances:

"Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, unholy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ."

The last three words are omitted by the Masonic writers. It is blasphemously claimed by such writers that Masonry saves its adherents in like manner as it is claimed by Christians, as asserted in the Bible, Acts 4: 12: "There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved" but that of "Jesus Christ of Nazareth." In fact, Masonry is blasphemy from base to topmost peak; and yet some good men are hypnotized by Satan and ensnared therein. In like manner are multitudes of good men blinded and led to cast their votes in favor of licensing the sale of intoxicating and crazing beverages. Thousands upon thousands are thus prepared and led to organize schism in the church of Christ, his body.

Such organizations oftentimes lend themselves to shield and defend wrong doers, such, for instance, as Masons and wicked voters. They say in substance, come and join our band and practice our ritual and you shall be shielded and fellowshiped. To the members of the Christian family, one and all, who wander in any way from the path of strict rectitude, I say, being of the age, in my natural life, of over eighty-seven years, and having been a member, through the new birth, of the Christ family for very nearly seventy-four years, from a heart on fire with love to God and to my fellow-beings, I approach you with the command from our Immanuel, see Isaiah 1: 16, 17, "Cease to do evil," etc., etc.

CONDITIONS OF SALVATION.

BY REV. S G. SHAW, PH. D.

The Gospel teaches that service is the way to greatness. It condemns pomp and display, and emphasizes the fact that in this world we are to be the servants of Christ. Christ was meek and lowly. He never sought honor from men, but gave himself a sacrifice for sin. We are instructed to walk in his steps. He said, "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief, let him be your servant." Again he said, "Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven." The Saviour spoke truth. He that exalteth himself in society, in business, in politics, in the church, anywhere, shall be abased.

Secretism, with its degrees, its grand titles, its decorations, its public displays, encourages pride, and appeals to one of the lowest sentiments of the heart. In doing this it is a deceiver, for it has nothing to offer but the emptiest shadow of real honor. The rank here is not even the guinea's stamp, for the whole thing is counterfeit. I doubt not that many a man having a coat trimmed with gold lace, waving ostrich plumes in his hat, and a silver-plated sword at his side, who outranks others in the lodge, and is known by a title made up of high-sounding words, has thought himself to be somebody. Let him take his history and read, and he will not have gone over a dozen pages before discovering that the men whose names have outlived the age that gave them birth, have been the men who served their generation by the will of God. They were the humblest and the most inconspicuous of men, save only when the fierceness of the fight brought them to the front in civil or moral conflict. Let him look over the world of the living, and he will not look far before he will discover that those whom the living delight to honor are the men of worth, of earnestness and of action, who think not of honor but of duty.

The Gospel offers salvation to men upon condition of faith in Christ and the renewing of the Spirit. It is very plain in its teachings concerning faith in Christ. It says, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." To the objector it adds, "There is none other name in heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." It also affirms the need of the regenerating and sanctifying influences of the Spirit, as appears in our Saviour's saying to Nicodemus: "Ye must be born again." Does secretism offer salvation to men? Masonry and others of the greater orders certainly do. Their members at death are represented as passing into heaven, called "the supreme lodge above." Even in the ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, as I have heard it read on Decoration Day, reference was made to the patriot dead as then "marshalled on the parade-ground of heaven."

We find fault with the Roman Catholic church for making good works a condition of eternal life, but the lodge offers it for still less. In the Master Mason's degree there is a profane caricature of regeneration from spiritual death; and after this, if the rules of the lodge are observed, none may deny the dying Mason his hope of eternal life. Where then does the lodge leave men? Certainly not under the covenant of grace; but with blinded eyes and seared conscience they remain out of Christ and under the covenant of works. Still we know that there is not a just man upon the earth that doeth good and sinneth not. Where then is there hope of salvation? Who will forgive the transgressions committed and make up for omitted duties? Lodge religion is not sufficient. There is a great gulf here which it cannot bridge, and indeed makes no attempt to bridge.

We turn from it to the Gospel with its doctrine of atonement by Jesus Christ, and its revelation of a satisfied law, a forgiving God and a quickening, enlightening, cleansing Spirit freely given. Here is a salvation that can be offered to the world; a salvation that saves. There is no other.

TIME AND ETERNITY.

BY HENRY M. HUGUNIN.

"Occult Philosophy" is something like the "New Theology"—the more it is explained, the more muddled it becomes, and the farther it leads us from the truth. Occult philosophy has a theory concerning time and eternity. I once had it explained to me by an occult philosopher—I call him such because he believed in the re-incarnation (or transmutation) of human souls, and surely that is occult enough for the most infatuated Theosophist now living. I repeat, he explained it to me, but I have forgotten his explanation, and I am glad I have, for I could not understand it, and did not believe it. But I have a theory of my own, which I think may be understood, relating to the connection of time and eternity.

Eternity signifies continuous duration, without beginning or ending, represented by an unbroken ring or circle.

Time signifies duration of more or less brevity, having both a beginning and an end.

Time is a portion of eternity in its duration. Duration is the period covered or occupied by the progress of an event or a connected series of events, and is in reality a part of eternity.

"The created world," wrote Sir Thomas Browne, "is but a small parenthesis in eternity, and a short interposition, for a time, between such a state of duration as was before it, and will be after it."

Illustration 1. Draw a figure of a complete ring or hoop four inches in diameter. On one side of this figure mark off a section of it half an inch in length. The space thus marked off represents, imperfectly, the six thousand years of earthly time or human life. But it does not in the least interfere with the continuation of eternity. It is only an episode in eternity.

Illustration 2. Draw a line from left to right straightly and partly across a sheet of paper. That line represents a section of eternity before any event in heaven or earth. Leave an open space after the unfinished line. Let that space represent that passage found in Rev. 8: 1: "And there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour," indicating time-duration in an unbroken eternity, but parallel with it. Beginning at the right of this space, continue the line to the right edge of the paper. This section of the line represents the ending of the "half an hour," but there has been no real break in eternity during this episode of time.

Illustration 3. A musical concert begins at 8 o'clock in the evening. If the concert was eternal it would never have a beginning, and would never end. But, at some time in the evening, the pianist strikes up "Home Sweet Home," and someone sings the words of the tune through to the end. The song and music combined is a part of the concert, but not the concert. The melody represents time in its relation to eternity, for the concert exists before, during and after the song. So, whether time (represented by a distinct event) begins or ends—and it does both—it is part of eternity, which would exist if the event had never occurred.

Eternity is independent and perfect; time is not, since it is but a section of eternity. Eternity, with God, has no past or future, but is always present. With man, eternity, like time, must have a past, present and future. Each one of our mortal lives, whether short or long, is simply a moment of eternity; our future lives, based on immortality through the salvation of Christ, will be eternal, existing as long as God, "Who only hath immortality," but can confer it on whom he will.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN CHINA.

FROM BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

It is impossible to study these rites and ceremonies without recognizing a strong resemblance between them and some of those of the Freemasons. "The Bridge of Swords" is common to both societies, as are also the formation of lodges and their orientation. In both societies the members are entitled brothers, and confirm their oath with blood. During the ceremony of affiliation the recruits both among the Freemasons and the Hung League attire themselves in white garments and go through the form of purification by washing. In the Chinese lodges the triangle is a favorite emblem, and lamps, steelyards, and scales form part of the ordinary paraphernalia. It is curious to observe also that the three degrees of Apprentice, Fellowcraft and Master among the Freemasons find their analogues in the Sworn Brother, Adopted Brother and Righteous Uncle in use in the Chinese society.

Such are some of the regulations of the Hung League, and presumably of its offshoot, the Kolao Hui. Of all the secret societies in China, this last, besides being the largest, is the most revolutionary in its aims. As has already been said, however, the Hui are not all on the same lines, nor devoted to the same objects, but may, speaking generally, be divided into two classes—the Religious and Seditious. The former of these, though using religious terms as passwords, and adopting religious formularies, depart, as regards many of their dealings, in a marked and complete manner from all objects which can in any way be associated with the cause of religion. Being, however, mutual aid societies, and being unconnected with political movements, they attract less of the attention of the mandarins than their more revolutionary congenitors. An attack on the dynasty is an attack on the provincial authorities, and these men are engaged in a death struggle with the threatening disturbers of the peace. They have no such bitter hostility against societies like the "Fuhkien Hui," which has its headquarters in the province of Fuhkien, or the "Golden Lily Hui," which flourishes in Szech'uan.

The existence of these and many other similar associations is well known to the provincial authorities, who not infrequently are called upon to deal with the leaders in matters relating to the civil obligations of the brethren. Their organizations are an open secret, and we learn, for example, from a semi-official native statement, that the members of the Golden Lily Hui are arranged under four military flags. Those residing in Hupeh, Human and Kiangsi are marshalled under the white flag; those in Kwangtung, Kwangsi and Fuhkien under the black flag; those in Yunnan, Kweichow, Shensi and Kansu under the red flag; and those in Szech'uan under the yellow flag.

At the present time, supported as China is by the European nations, even the most dangerous of these societies do not threaten any immediate peril to the State; but China's difficulties will always be their opportunity, and if the time should ever come when China may again have to face a foreign foe, not the least part of her danger may possibly arise from enemies within her own household.

A SECRET ORDER THE STRENGTH OF GREECE.

FROM THE CHICAGO "RECORD."

"I do not see how the Greeks can fail of victory in the war with Turkey," said James Chacona, the leading Greek citizen of Milwaukee, April 19. "Greece is in that blissful position of having everything to win and nothing to lose. Nearly all the banks and commercial institutions of Turkey, both in Europe and Asia, are owned and maintained by Greeks. The Greeks are the wealthiest people in Turkey, and they are very numerous,

"There is a very powerful secret society in Greece known as the National League. The league is largely of a political character, and it has branch organizations in all parts of Turkey. The Sultan of Turkey is well aware of this society, and he has on many occasions and in numerous ways shown great deference to the organization, through fear. There can be scarcely any doubt that the Greeks in Turkey will organize a revolt, which will seriously embarrass the Turkish government in its war with Greece.

"The National League of Greece has been in existence in its present form since 1821, when the freedom of Greece was declared. Its members have been preparing for the present event for centuries. There are at least 10,000,000 Greeks in Turkey, and the latest statistics show that the total population of that country, both in Europe and Asia, is 23,000,000.

"When the fact is considered that the Greeks in Turkey control such a vast portion of its commercial and financial interests, it is apparent that the Sultan will not be able to wage a very vigorous war. In Constantinople alone there are 535,000 Greeks, and it is safe to expect that they will not be found fighting against their native land. I am certain of victory for King George, and I believe the final result will be a higher civilization for Turkey than it has ever known."

Of the Greek colony in Milwaukee only six remain in the city. They meet daily to receive the latest war news from their native land. The late dispatches have roused them to a fever heat of excitement. A letter received yesterday by John Chacona from his father, written under date of March 12, states that all business in Greece is at a standstill, and that every boy of sixteen has armed himself with a gun, with which he was privately practicing. It was expected that the government would call into service all men between the ages of sixteen and fifty years. The writer's opinion was that, if war followed, the Greeks would not only hold Crete, but would conquer Macedonia.

RENUNCIATION OF FREEMASONRY.

FROM THE "CHRISTIAN CONSERVATOR."

"I do now sign my name with my own right hand, the hand that has transgressed in taking these sinful obligations, on this 21st day of August, 1895, and testify that I have found Freemasonry a curse upon mankind, a lie, a league to protect a brother right or wrong; a pledge to cut throats, tear out hearts, split tongues, etc., in case of violation of the oath. Masonry blinds the eyes of its victim, benumbs his conscience, weakens his judgment, and makes him incapable of discerning right and wrong."—W. C. Earhart.

And yet of this lodge many of the prominent ministers and members of our dominant Protestant churches are leading members. It was for the purpose of opening the doors of the United Brethren church for the admission of the members of this and similar organizations that our Liberal brethren divided the old church, and formed for themselves a new church which neither refuses nor opposes connection with these orders, but even courts their favor, and eulogizes their purposes and their practices. It was against this and similar orders that the late General Conference of the Evangelical Association, though claiming to be "an anti-secret society church in sentiment and practice," refused to insert a clause in their discipline, because, forsooth, as their editor said, the experience of other churches who have such a clause had taught them that such a clause "becomes a bone of contention, a cause of friction, and may result in untold trouble, even to the extent of schism." Shame on such cowardice!

How can a church be "an anti-secret society church in sentiment and practice" when it is afraid even to ask the candidates for its ministry to express themselves on the question, lest, perchance, it becomes "a bone of contention, a cause for friction?" How can a church or an individual be opposed to a thing and yet refuse to oppose it? Christ was not so afraid of saying something that would become "a bone of contention, a cause of friction" in his opposition to the evils of his day. Nay, he even declared that he came for the purpose of causing such a state of things. "I came to send fire on the earth; and what will I, if it be already kindled?" "Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you, Nay; but rather division: for from henceforth there shall be five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three, etc.," and the men and the churches, since the days of Christ, who have blessed and reformed the world, have come for the same purpose.

They have not been so afraid of friction and disturbance as so many of our modern churches and church members are. This is the great trouble with modern churches and Christians. They are so afraid of causing friction and disturbance that they are dying and letting the world die of stagnation. As things are about us, says Dr. Parkhurst, "The man or woman" (though not a Christian) "possessing ordinary intelligence and good health who is not making a disturbance in his community is not doing his duty," and it is equally true, yea, tenfold more so, of a church. As long as there is evil in the world there will be friction and disturbance if Christian people and Christian churches do their duty. "I came not to send peace but a sword." But unfortunately that sword has so long been sheathed and resting in its scabbard that the rust has eaten away the edge, and the peace of carnal security reigns in many of our churches, while evils of the most fearful character flourish unrebuked.

The church that refuses to legislate, or in some way publicly express itself against a general and popular evil, especially when the matter is brought up, does not, as a church, oppose that evil, for how else can it do it? And not to oppose such an evil is to support it. And that is just what the large and influential Protestant churches of this country are doing in reference to the multiplied anti-Christian secret societies of the day—they are supporting them and seeking support from them, notwithstanding the fact that the Book says: "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you." They are trying to bring about a concord where Paul says there can be none—between Christ and Belial.

God awaken, and thus save the churches of the day from complicity with the popular evils of the day! Lest they be tried and found wanting.

SECRET COLLEGE FRATERNITIES.

The Chicago University is becoming worm-eaten with secret societies, as the following from the Chicago Record will show:

"By the recent vote of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity another group of men at the University of Chicago are rejoicing in the possession of that much-desired piece of parchment, a fraternity charter, and another element has come in to complicate the undecided problem as to whether or not fraternities shall live at the University of Chicago.

"The body of men whose exertions have met with this recognition formerly constituted a club called the 'Lion's Head,' and for the last nine months it has been rumored they soon would be in possession of an Alpha Delta Phi charter. They have had enrolled among their members some of the most prominent of university athletes, and this fact, coupled with the strong endorsement of the faculty members of this fraternity, at last triumphed over the conservative policy of Alpha Delta Phi and won for the university a chapter of what has always been regarded as one of the most exclusive of eastern fraternities.

"The chapter at present includes the following members: J. E. Raycroft, F. D. Nichols, J. S. Brown, Forest Grant, H. M. Adkinson, C. V. Bachelle, Carr B. Neel, all of whom have been members of the university athletic teams. The chapter enters a field by no means overcrowded, its only competitors being the Phi Kappa Psi, Beta Theta Pi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, and Sigma Nu, among regular intercollegiate fraternities, while the Omega Club, who are petitioning for Psi Upsilon, and a crowd of Zeta Psi petitioners expect soon to obtain charters. Inasmuch as two of the prominent supporters of the new fraternity are members of the University of Chicago faculty it would seem there is no immediate danger of anti-fraternity laws at the university."

IS IT A REVIVAL OF THE GRANGE?

Many years ago the farmers of this country were duped by Freemasons into a secret benefit organization called the Grange. It amounted to nothing more than a training school for the Masonic order, and soon became well-nigh extinct. It appears by the following extract taken from a Toledo paper that the same confidence game is being again played upon the farmers:

"The organization of a 'farmers' trust' extending over the country has been undertaken. Jonas Stanberry is at the head of the organization in this section. Several branches, it is said, have been secretly organized and the order is strictly oathbound. It originated at Lancaster, Penn., and was incorporated under the laws of New Jersey as the Agriculturists National Protective Association. The supreme body is made up of one representative from each State. Each State has a subordinate board of directors consisting of one representative from each Congressional District.

Each district, in turn, is governed by a board of two members from each county. Each county is under the immediate control of a board.

"It is the purpose to do nothing this year in the way of controlling the markets, because the organization is not yet complete. Next year, however, the crops will be limited to the actual living needs of the members of the organization.

"If the plan is carried out, not a dollar's worth of farm produce of any kind will be sold for general consumption. After the year 1898 there will be erected or rented in each county storehouses, in which all products for the market will be placed. From these warehouses the products will be shipped as the State and National directors may order."

CIVIL GOVERNMENT AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

The following is part of an address by the late Rev. B. T. Roberts, who was one of the most, if not the most, prominent minister of the Free Methodist church. The address, which we republish by request, was delivered before the National Christian Association Conference in this city, April 22,23, 1890.

Another objection to these soc'eties is that in their conflict with the civil law they rob many of their inalienable rights. Our Declaration of Independence, as we have stated, and as you all know, secures to every man the pursuit of happiness; but never in the darkest ages of the world, under the most despotic government, has a worse tyranny been exercised than is practiced by secret societies in this free country, in these last years of the 19th century. They rob men of the right to win bread by honest labor except at their dictation. They say when men may work and when men must be idle. They prevent men from using their God-given powers as they are pleased to use them. At the close of our war, Whittier represented the freedmen as singing,

"We own a hoe, we own a plow,
We own the hands that sow;
We sell the pig, we sell the cow,
But never a child be sold."

The working man of the city cannot say that. The lodge claims to own their hands, and it says when they may work and how they may work. A winter or two since our New York papers gave the account of a man who was arrested and brought before the bar of justice for failing to support his family. On the trial these facts came out: He said: "I am a blacksmith; I belong to the Blacksmiths' Union. I was working for $3 a day. The Union decreed that I must not work short of $3.50 a day. My employer was not willing to give it, and so I was compelled to go idle. I would like to work, but I cannot work." That man had to go idle and his family had to suffer.

In the New York Tribune of the 14th of this month I read a special dispatch from this city. It said that a carpenter, I think by the name of C. S. Marks, landed in this city on that morning from Twin Lake, Wis. He had with him a kit of carpenter's tools. As he stepped on the sidewalk, he was met by a committee from the strikers. They asked him if he belonged to the union. He said no. They said, "Then we will take your tools;" and they took his tools and carried them to their headquarters on Lake street. He appealed to the nearest police station. The captain said to him, "Are you a member of the Carpenter's Union?" "No, I have just returned from a job of a month at Twin Lake, Wisconsin." "Well," said the captain, "they took your tools from you because they were afraid you would go to work; I can't do anything for you." That was right here in this city of Chicago. Why, if there is justice, this city will be held at the bar of justice to make that man good for the loss which he has sustained by being deprived of the protection that the law should afford him. Chicago has been awarded the World's Fair. I am glad of it. I am glad that it is to come here. But if the lodge steps in and says to men whose work may be needed in making the necessary preparations, "You cannot be employed unless you put your neck under our yoke," then I say the lodge should be suppressed.

I say the right to work is a right that God has given to every man, and that right ought to be defended. I remember when this conflict between labor and capital began. So far as I know, I printed the first labor advocate that was ever printed in this country in the interests of the laboring men. My sympathies were wholly with them, and for this reason: The manufacturers had entered into a conspiracy under our laws, which are always rendered possible by preventing imports of their articles except at a high price,—they had entered into conspiracies all around to raise the prices of their products. The men found out that these manufacturers were making themselves very rich on their labor, and so they insisted on higher wages, and my sympathy was with them. I did all I could to help them. I printed their paper. But when these labor unions took one step farther and said that a man cannot work unless he belongs to our lodge, then I quit them. I say that every man has a right to work on such terms as he pleases, and that freedom is a mockery that does not leave men free to work on the terms that they may agree upon with their employers.

If we knew it, we are in the first stages of the French Revolution. The reign of anarchy is upon us. The reign of the clubs is upon us. We are under its reign now. We say the people rule in Chicago, but the clubs really rule in Chicago. And it is time that we see to these facts and to the dangers that threaten us on every hand. If it should take the whole power of our national government to defend a man in his right to work, that man should be defended.

Here is where secret societies are doing what would not be tolerated from any other source. If our State Legislature should exercise the tyranny that these lodges exercise, there would be a revolution; men would not stand it. If your legislature in Springfield should say, "Carpenters shall not work in Chicago except so many hours a day and at such wages an hour," every man who shoves a plane, who had the spirit of a man in him, would say, "I work when I please, and I work for whom I please, and I will work for what wages I please, and now I take the consequences." And I say that it is time that this anarchy that is upon us was brought to an end.

Again, secret societies are a standing menace to our institutions, to our free institutions. They accustom those belonging to them to the language of nobility. Their "Grands," their "Noble Grands!" Their language is not the language of free men, and the men who act under them cannot be free men. They are bound and shackled hand and foot. One of these societies, at least, —and I don't know but more than one—has a large, well-drilled, well-armed military organization. If a crisis should arise, as may arise in our political affairs, such an organization could very easily seize the reins of power. There would be nothing to prevent it. Does anyone imagine that men of mature age, business men, intelligent men, would spend the time necessary to secure the military drill of which the Knight Templars boast and pay a million of dollars for their uniform and equipment, for no other purpose in the world than to make a gratuitous exhibition of themselves in one of our cities once a year and drain dry the saloons? Why, the very idea is absurd. It is said the King of France with 40,000 men marched up the hill and then marched down again. Is this all the Knight Templars propose to do? I repeat, the very idea is absurd. General Sheridan said, years ago, "A government that allows bodies of men on its soil to acquire a military drill and discipline independent of its control does not deserve the name of a government," and events may show that General Sheridan was right. The arming of one body of men, of one secret society, renders necessary the arming of another, for those opposed to them are in danger; and these armed societies in our midst, with an organization as perfect as the organization of the army of the United States, and with numbers far exceeding that of the army of the United States, are a standing threat to our free institutions. They should not be tolerated.

Finally, let me call your attention briefly to the position that the civil government should take toward these secret societies, as they are, as we have seen, its enemies. They should give them neither toleration nor support. From White Caps to Jesuits they should be suppressed by law. The influence of the Jesuits was found to be so detrimental to even the limited liberty enjoyed under the monarchies of Europe, that years ago the Jesuits were suppressed in France, they were suppressed in Spain, they were suppressed in Austria; and yet, perhaps, of all secret societies they are the least to be dreaded. We are in danger from them and they should be put down. We give to a certain class of men in our laws the right to administer an oath. If our laws are good for anything they ought to protect that man in the exclusive exercise of that right, and they should punish every other who assumes to administer an oath as a usurper of the rights belonging to the nation.

The axe should be laid at the root of the tree, and the foundation of these secret societies should be cut off at once, and all these organizations that bind themselves together by an oath, and all members who administer an oath, should be treated as enemies of the government, and we should stand out God's free men in the broad sunlight, according cheerfully to every man the privileges and the advantages and the rights and the liberties which we claim.

A NEW SECRET ORDER.

WHOLESALE SWINDLING ITS BUSINESS.

The recent arrrest of George R. Bell at Neosho, Mo., and of seven of his alleged accomplices in various parts of Kansas and Missouri, has brought to light the details of the most elaborate counterfeiting swindle with which the United States Secret Service has had to deal in years. It was a conspiracy on the part of high government officials, an extensive secret organization, and alleged credentials for Bell bearing the signature of the Secretary of State.

Bell's operations were confined principally to the trans-Mississippi States. His plan was to go to one of the smaller towns and approach his prospective victims with a show of great secrecy. He said he was James T. Swartz and represented himself as a government official coming direct from Secretary of the Treasurer Carlisle. He proceeded to disclose the existence of a conspiracy among Treasury officials and others in the government service, including several Cabinet officers, to dispose of a lot of greenbacks. He explained that greenbacks were being constantly presented at the Treasury for redemption by individuals, banks and sub-treasuries. Instead of their being cancelled, he said, they were abstracted by those engaged in the conspiracy, and were put back into circulation through the members of the American Knights of Mystic Numbers. By a number of clever devices Bell supplied himself with documents which appeared to support his statement that he was a government official.

By sending his address to the Treasury department he had his name placed upon the list of persons to whom the daily reports of the department are sent. These documents are sent to any citizen who requests them. They are mailed in Treasury department envelopes which are unsealed. Bell threw away the reports and placed forged letters from officials, referring in mysterious terms to the greenback "overissue" scheme, as he called it, in the envelopes. He sealed them up and clipped off the ends of the envelopes, so that to all appearances the letters had been sent to him from the Treasury department. As a clincher, Bell produced what he called his commission. This consisted of an ordinary passport which he had obtained in the usual manner from the State department. It was issued in the name of James T. Swartz and contained a description of Bell. His photograph was also attached to it. After the words "citizen of the United States" engraved on the passport, Bell had written "and member 879 C. A. M. of A. K. of M. N." After his name was stamped "879 M," which was his individual number in the secret order. In several places were stamped the words, "By proxy, holds commission under 58." In the lower corner was a cryptographic table of letters and numbers, with a number of cabalistic characters, somewhat like Chinese letters. Bell had two of these "commissions," one signed by W. Q. Gresham, and the other by Richard Olney, as Secretary of State. They proved to be very convincing to the people among whom Bell operated.

Having established his official standing, Bell next proceeded to unfold something of the workings of the American Knights of Mystic Numbers. In order to assist in floating the overissue the victim must join this mystic brotherhood. It was not a cheap affair. The price of a full membership was $4,000. Each member was to receive $40,000 in greenbacks to dispose of to his own advantage, Bell's ingenuity, however, was sufficient to provide for the small fry who hadn't as much as $4,000 to invest. He arranged a scale of fractional memberships with corresponding initiation fees and profits. The smallest was a one-sixteenth membership, at an initiation fee of $250 and a $2,500 share in the "overissue." As soon as Bell had a chapter of his order in process of organization he held a meeting of the neophytes and read to them a forty-page paper giving in detail the history, purpose, scope and methods of the American Knights of Mystic Numbers and the conspiracy of government officials. As a still further precaution against any suspicion of a green goods game on the part of the initiates, Bell voluntarily offered to guarantee them against loss by giving them deeds to real estate of sufficient value to cover the original investment involved in the initiation fee.

When the arrangements were all completed, Bell displayed the genuine greenbacks to the new members and collected the initiation fees, in return for which he handed them packages of the money and real estate deeds. The deeds were entirely fraudulent, and the packages when, opened, disclosed only brown paper. In the meantime Bell had moved on to a new field of operations. His associates were also engaged in working other towns at the same time by the use of exactly similar methods, and for two or three years a rich harvest was reaped by the gang. Enough members were initiated into the American Knights of Mystic Numbers in Kansas and Missouri to form a pretty good nucleus for an extensive association of suckers.

Bell was the chief of the gang and the most successful operator. He is a well-appearing, plausible man, ready to meet all questions and objections with a ready answer. He instructed his confederates to approach men of standing in the towns, such as lawyers, doctors, and merchants. Even a Missouri banker is suspected of having been initiated into the order. The names of many persons who joined the order are in the hands of the secret service officers, and a full investigation of all the cases will shortly be made.

Never tear down a man's house till you provide for him a better one, is a good maxim. Before knocking out the secret lodge prop, on which so many are leaning for salvation for both time and eternity, it is well to show them the better way. Therefore, always preface your anti-secret lecture with a clear statement of the way of salvation through Christ. Make it clear that it is to facilitate sinners in coming to Christ that you are removing their greatest stumbling-block.

THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S,

AND NOT THE A. P. A 'S.

Senator Gibson, of Maryland, addressed the Senate, April 14th, in opposition to the bill restricting immigration. He urged that there was no reason to turn back the immigrant from our shores so long as there were mountains to tunnel, rivers to bridge and virgin country to develop. Many of the States with scant population would be glad to welcome the foreigners, either with education or illiterate, if he only works. The most populous and prosperous States owed their prosperity largely to the great benefits resulting from immigration.

Mr. Gibson said the power behind the anti-immigration bill was the American Protective Association, a secret, "oath-bound, red-lettered, left-handed, dark-lantern organization." The bill had for its real purpose, he said, hostility to the Catholic church—a purpose of envy, hatred and malice. It was the offspring and brood of mischief makers. Mr. Gibson read the oath of the organization. This was the organization, he said, that was seeking to enter American politics. There was no branch of honest politics which a secret, oath-bound citizen could serve.

Mr. Gibson added that the whole people are equally interested in the welfare of this country, and none should be refused an equal share with the rest in every deliberation and in all legislation affecting it. All political clubs, societies and associations start on their career with professions skillfully drawn so as to make it appear that their purposes are patriotic and worthy of support; but all of them, as soon as they have obtained power, are used by unprincipled men to do wrong. This is the history of the Carbonari, the Nihilists, the Jacobins, the Anarchists and the commune, and this will be the history of the A. P. A. until its evil tendencies are perceived in time by the American people and its career stopped by their good sense and judgment.

"I have faith, Mr. President, without bounds or limits, in the American people; in their moderation, wisdom, justice and courage. I do not believe that they will submit to the dictation of any such organization as the A. P. A.s, but that they will promptly and effectively stamp with the seal of their condemnation this impudent and dangerous interference with the interests of this republic."

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE COAST AGENT.

DANCING A FORM OF LODGE WORSHIP.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 22, 1897.

Dear Cynosure:—Before leaving Long Beach for the convention, I had a little experience worth relating. Among the pleasure seekers were a number of ladies from the aristocratic city of Pasadena. One of them (more talkative than the others) picked up a conversation with me and the gentleman with whom I was conversing. Soon she gave us to understand that she had attended an Odd-fellow's dance the night before.

I said: "I always understood that Odd-fellowship was a religious institution."

"Oh," said she, "I attend dances at the Odd-fellows, Masons and Knights of Pythias about every night when I am at home."

I asked, "Don't you believe in religion?"

"To be sure," she said, "I'm a good Methodist, and have done worlds of good in helping the church work."

Poor soul, she did not understand but what she could pay enough to atone for all her wickedness. Talk about ignorance among the Roman Catholic members! Protestantism is drifting toward the same. The more I see of humanity, the more I am convinced that some of the larger Protestant churches would crush out the weaker ones just the same as Catholicism would crush out the Protestants if in their power.

During the convention at Los Angeles, my friend, Mr. Haddox, of El Monte, came down. While talking with him about the salvation of his soul, he admitted that he had been a Christian, a member of the Baptist church, but at present he is an agnostic.

I said, "I notice you wear the square and compass; are you a Freemason?"

"Yes," said he, "but I heard your lecture at El Monte, and you have Masonry from the word go." Then he went on to say, "There is nothing in Masonry. The pledges or oaths don't amount to shucks, so far as compelling men to be good." He related an incident of two doctors in his town, both Masons. A merchant's boy got his limb crushed. The old physician was away. The young doctor, just from Cincinnati, Ohio, amputated the limb. When the old family physician returned he insisted that the limb must be amputated further up, which meant sure death to the patient and also the practice of the young physician. The parents demurred, which led to a general row in which the Masonic brothers fought like dogs.

"There," said Mr. H, "is Masonic brotherly love."

I spoke at Artesia, Monday night, on the saloon evil, to a fair-sized audience. We start for the East this morning, via. the Santa Fe R. R.

RALLY TO THE ANNUAL MEETING.

SURE SIGNS OF PROGRESS.

Chicago, Ill., April 26, 1897.

We are now within two weeks of our Annual Meeting. Another twelve months have quickly flown and our enemy still lives, increases and is strongly entrenched. We shall gain for ourselves nothing by an underestimate of our adversary's strength. But men and animals sometimes die of obesity, or fatty degeneration. I asked an architect the result of a continued addition of stories to our twenty-story buildings, and his reply was, "An inevitable smash up."

There is no denying the fact that secret societies for both men and women have multiplied the past year. The membership of the older societies is said to have increased and new organizations have sprung up like mushrooms. I predict a smash up in many of these organizations from over-confidence and over-prosperity. The friends of the National Christian Association and others who oppose secret orders have increased in numbers, and have improved in methods for successfully resisting the encroachments of oath-bound societies.

We have this year access to twice as many churches as we had a year ago, and the meetings thus far held have been better attended. Gradually we have been getting the ear of the people on this subject, and hearing is believing in the righteousness of our cause.

Arrangements have been made to focus all our strength on the one central noon mass meeting to be held at Willard Hall, Monday, May 10th. Addresses will be made by President Swartz, President Blanchard and Rev. P. B. Williams. Let there be a generous rally.

J. M. Hitchcock.

Now can it be shown that things which were "wicked abominations," when done by "elders of Israel," are otherwise than at least as wicked and abominable when done by elders of the Christian church?

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE CAUSE PROGRESSING.

Larwill, Ind., April 19, 1897.

Editor Cynosure:—The lodge of Odd-fellows of this place is about to suspend operations for want of patronage. I have this information from a source that is perfectly reliable. I also judge from the dunning letters the secretary of the lodge is sending out to men who have become non-affiliated members, for non payment of dues. The order goes so far as to threaten them if they do not pay up, the penalty will be inflicted, and some have told them a number of times that they do not wish to have anything to do with the order any more. A man informed me personally that they are getting desperate, and the same man let me read the letter he is sending in reply to one of these duns. He denounces them severely as having been swindled out of the money that he has paid in and as trying to get more under false pretenses and blackmailing. In fact, I don't believe I could have made a better reply myself, considering he is only a young convert from the evils of the lodge, and not a Christian either.

Two helpers have come to me in opposing secret societies. They went at it of their own free will and choice. I know of a man who got considerably miffed at me some time ago for approaching him on the secrets of his order. He came to me recently for books to inform himself more perfectly as to the real character of his order. These men are very much in need of anti-secret literature to better qualify them for the work they have undertaken. Their names are James Kerr, Pierceton, Ind., and Marian R. Elder, Larwill, Ind. They are men of character, and willing and ready to receive all the information they can obtain on the evils of the day, especially the lodge evil. John Helfrich.

LETTER TO THE LOS ANGELES CONVENTION.

Capitola, Cal., April 4, 1897.

Dear Bro. Williams:—I congratulate you in your noble work and would like to be with you in your convention. Your work is hard and your enemy is mighty, for you wrestle not with flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers, against spiritual wickedness in high places. The devil has his forces organized the world over and well disciplined. He is the god of this world; the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience. His purpose is to dethrone Christ.

Masonry claims great benevolence, but unfortunately it all terminates on themselves and is the essence of selfishness. Speculative Freemasonry implies that the object is speculation—speculating or scheming to get rid of the curse pronounced on men for breaking God's law, "In the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat bread." Somebody has to sweat for it, and the game is to eat the fruits of another's labor and keep him good-natured. If he does not know it he will not be offended; so if they blind him it gives them great advantage. Then the first thing they do in order to speculate off the community is to blind them by secrecy and thus not let them know what they are doing.

Another feature in their speculation is to band men together. We remember the fable of the bundle of sticks. But where many men are bundled together in secret plots, penalties must be attached; and where great interests are at stake, strong penalties must be used. If the people only knew what these meant they would not stand it one day. All large secret organizations, where much is taken and nothing given, have to use such safeguards.

The word "free" as used by Freemasons signifies that they are free to live without work and share in the spoils of speculation. They call themselves "Accepted" because they claimed to be excused from learning a trade. Says Mackey's Lexicon: "Masonry, up to a certain time, was only practical stone and brick masonry, and a man was required to work three years before he could join as a mason. He then had to work for his living. But now no trade is necessary, as there is no work to be done. All purpose to live by speculation. Somebody has to work. The lodges claim the "healthy, wealthy and wise." These are inside the ring, and outside are the excluded ones called cowans or dogs. They embrace "the old in their dotage, the young in their nonage, all cripples, all women, and poor people too poor to pay dues.

On the poor cowans is laid the burden of carrying all the strong ones. This is mercy with a vengeance. Their tears over the poor are like the crocodile's tears which he sheds over his game before he kills it. It is passingly strange to me that the community do not see at a glance that they intend to get more than they give. The community is like a Spanish horse, which will stand and let the blind be put on, and the rider mounted with whip and spur; and when all is secure, the blind is lifted and force applied. The poor creature struggles for his freedom, but it is of no use; he must serve his rider.

This has long been the condition of the people of this country. They will stand and be hoodwinked and blindfolded, and when they feel the whip and spur they struggle, but soon find it is of no use. They submit to their fate and claim it as a virtue to be silent. L. B. LATHROP.

THE LOS ANGELES CONVENTION.

Rev. P. B. Williams feels much encouraged over the success of the California Anti-Secret Convention at Los Angeles, April 14 and 15. He writes that the weather was favorable, and the interest and attendance good. The addresses were of a high order, and several high Masons spoke out squarely against the lodge.

The officers of the present State organization are: President, Rev. C. B. Ebey, No. 814 Kohler street, Los Angeles; Vice-president, Rev. Will W Logan, cor 8th and Hill streets; Secretary, Geo. W. Shealy, Whittier, Cal.; Treasurer, Rev. G. P. Runkle, No. 751 Flower street, Los Angeles, Cal. These officers are efficient workers, and will not fail to push the work in the State.

Bro. Williams, accompanied by his wife, started last Thursday to attend the Annual Meeting in this city. He will fill two weeks' lecture appointments on the way. He still wishes friends who will insure him a $5 collection and entertainment, to write to Sec W. I. Phillips at this office.

OUR POSTAL CARD SYMPOSIUM.

QUESTION—HOW CAN WE BEST WITHSTAND THE INFLUENCE OF SECRET SOCIETIES?

One happy result of this symposium has been to induce correspondents to condense what they have to write. This of itself is an important training, and will be a valuable habit in those writing for the Cynosure in its magazine form. The following responses have come since our last issue:

REV. S. S PALMER, ORANGEVILLE, OHIO.

The best way to promote anti secrecy reform in every community is to let the light shine. Light is knowledge. When all the people know what Masonry is, it is sure to die. When Masonry dies the whole secret system dies. She is the mother of harlots.

REV. T. J. ALLEN, STERLING, KAN.

1. Turn on and pour in the light. 2. Let the church declare against all such associations in her doctrinal standards. 3. Practice it in her ministry and membership. 4. Enforce it in her discipline. 5. Circulate the Cynosure. 6. Keep the women right on this question. 7. Educate the children, especially the boys.

BRO. R. D. NICHOLS, JANESVILLE, MICH.

By showing their un-Christian character, false claims and unwholesome practical workings. And by a consistent conformity of your life in your church relations, not only in purity, but in fervancy of Christian character. Be an all-round reformer, not spoiling all at the ballot-box. I do not mean that in the present state of affairs it is always best to refuse to vote for a secret society candidate.

MRS. SARAH POWELL GIDDINGS, ENOSBURG FALLS, VT

Have someone look up their crimes in church and out of the church. Make them face the truth, and show them that the Lord is stronger than they. Their only help and strength is in not being found out. They are cowards and fear exposure. Expose their crimes, and bring the truth before the people. Treat them in a way that they may know their order is no longer popular. Separate them from the church.

BRO. RUSSELL PARK, DENMARK, IA.

Do as Hezekiah did. See 2 Kings 19: 14; also Isa. 37: 12. He went unto the Lord, appealing directly to him. So, too, did Ezra. See Ezra 8: 21. They both "found help in time of need." We need a deeper, stronger, larger faith and hold on omnipotence. When prominent characters have open letters written them as did Dr. Talmage, by Bro. Fenton, and Sam Jones, by Miss Flagg, those persons ought surely to have a copy of letter sent them.

MRS. HATTIE E. POWERS, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The anti-secret reform can be best promoted in any community by concerted action among lecturers and laymen in bending every effort to focus upon two points, namely, to convince the W. C. T. U. and the W. S. A. that the lodge and the saloon are identical; that it is the unseen hand of the secret empire that withholds suffrage from woman (or "cowan" in the polite phrase of our brother Masons). Could we but throttle the lodge she would soon have her freedom. Why should woman, who has her eyes open to every other snare, be so easily hoodwinked and cable-towed by the secret lodge?

REV. T. H. ACHESON, DENVER, COLO.

1. Turn on the light; make the hidden things of secret orders manifest. Do it through the pulpit and pew; by church courts and the press; but not by public initiatory services. It is not time that the more you discuss properly an evil the more harm you do. 2. Discriminate between persons and principles; attack secret orders, not men. Don't talk so indiscriminately that you will awaken sympathy in behalf of the better class of secret order men. 3. Show the evils of minor secret societies; that their secrecy is wrong, and that they are stepping-stones to higher and worse orders. 4. Assert the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ in every sphere; that we can form no partnership, enter no association where we do not possess full liberty, as a part of such organization, to apply the law of Christ as the ruling principle of moral action. 5. Enforce church discipline against members of secret orders. Let the church stand against all of them. 6. Pray mightily to the Lord of hosts. In him alone is victory.

REV. J S. T. MILLIGAN, ESTHER, PA.

The conquering weapons of all Christian warfare are "the blood of the Lamb and the word of testimony," and these will conquer secretism. But some may ask, what do these signify? I answer: saving relation to Christ and his blood by faith on the part of the secretist, and kind and faithful testimony against the sin by those that are Christ's. The testimony must be practical as well as theoretical. This requires personal separation from the orders, as all admit. But does it require personal, family, political and ecclesiastical separation from those in the orders? Is it a warrant for a divorce of the wife from the husband? Is it to be a term of communion in the church? These are the disputed points. A Christian woman should not accept a secretist husband. A Christian voter should not elect a secretist ruler. A candidate for civil or ecclesiastical office, who is under the oaths of most of the orders, could not receive the suffrage of a Christian man or woman consistently with faithful testimony. It is claimed that Christ directed his disciples to submit to officers who were as bad or worse than secretists, and that he and they sustained both church and state fellowship to the Jewish church and state rotten to dissolution; and that they consistently and faithfully testified against their sins without excluding them from their fellowship by terms or discipline. Who will draw the line? or tell the reason why?

ANTI-MASONIC SPLINTERS.

—Practically the Masonic lodge is an infidel club.

—A Christian Mason entering the lodge leaves Christianity outside.

—The vice of making unconsidered promises is akin to the vice of lying.

—Positive truth is the basis on which all reproof of error must stand.

—All argument that succeeds is based on something in which both parties agree.

—The enmity of Freemasonry to Christian truth and morals is radical and ineradicable.

—There are men who could not look into a monkey's cage without asking what it cost to join.

—Masonically, Christians, like Mohammedans, are a sect, and the lodge excludes their sectarianism.

—An unchangeably immoral and anti-Christian fiber is woven into the very fabric of Freemasonry.

—Masonic authority declares that in the lodge the book called the Bible is not to be recognized as a divine revelation.

—Reform work which was purely destructive would build on nothing. Rather it would not build at all; it would only tear down.

—Freemasonry can no more become consistent with morals and true religion than the Ethiopian can change his skin or the leopard his spots.

—Teaching children to make hurried and unconsidered promises in a lodge, is a fine way to develop character to withstand intemperance.

—A man reads a contract before he signs. But a lodge obligation is a contract. Has he read that? Has he considered it? Is he a wise man?

—It was a high Masonic authority which declared that Masonry was not founded on the Bible, and that if it were founded on the Bible it would not be Masonry.

—Suppose a Sabbath-school teacher should make his class promise to tell their parents nothing at home; and suppose he should meet them only at night in a closed and guarded upper room?

—"I know not the man," said Peter; and the Mason echoes, "I know not the man." Peter cursed and swore, and the Mason swears and lies. Peter wept bitterly, but the Mason gushes bombastically.

—The opposition of Freemasonry to Christianity must be shown in connection with a clear statement of the Christian truth which Freemasonry attacks and denies. For example, the mediatorship of Christ.

—Worship is primarily attitude rather than speech. It is bowing or kneeling rather than prayer. Christians worship God, and pray to him. Masons worship the sun. This is the meaning of their bowing to the East.

—It might be a real service to the cause of Anti-masonry, if competent committees were appointed by the N. C. A conventions to work, first, separately in their sections, and finally, as a joint committee, to make a list of Masonic murders with dates and places.

IMPROVED ARTICHOKES.

Tubers Which Are Finding Increased Favor as Food For Stock.

Attention has been called of late to artichokes as food for stock, notably for hogs. Farmers in various sections of the country have reported success with feeding swine on these tubers until a short time before killing, when a few bushels of corn are given to harden the flesh. Following are extracts from a Michigan farmer's letter to Vick's Illustrated Monthly:

One acre of artichokes will keep from 20 to 30 hogs in the best condition, as they are always healthy when fed on them. For horses, cattle and sheep there is not a better root grown. One acre will produce from 300 to 700 bushels of tubers, depending on the soil. The improved artichoke is entirely different from the native or wild variety which is raised in some gardens. The Improved White French is a native of France, where it is largely grown for domestic use as well as for stock. It grows about 6 feet in height, and in the fall is covered with yellow blossoms, which in this country never mature seed; hence no danger of covering the farm. My five years' experience has proved to me that they can be destroyed. My plan is to plow under when one foot in height. A simpler way is to leave the hogs in the patch a little late in the spring, and they will find every one.

IMPROVED WHITE ARTICHOKE.

The tubers are much like Irish potatoes in appearance, only rougher, flesh pure white, very brittle and sweet. Many farmers in Newago county are growing them extensively as a general farm crop. The artichoke is important, as no insect, blight or rust has yet struck it, and the tops make a good fodder when properly handled. Last winter they were tested at the Fremont creamery with the best of results.

Lowland which is too frosty for corn and many other crops is just the place for artichokes, as freezing does not hurt them. Drought seems to have but little effect on them.

Celery For Home and Market.

With proper management celery may now be had nearly all the year round, and consumers have become more discriminating as to the qualities of the different varieties, as is evidenced by the following inquiry from one of the largest celery growers in Ohio: "Is it not advisable for growers to use more of the self blanching varieties of celery like Perfection Heartwell or Perle le Grande and less Golden Self Blanching, and are not the pink and red varieties the best for marketing?"

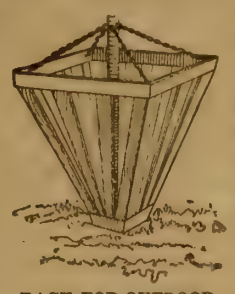
This inquiry was submitted to a number of experienced growers in various sections of the country, and their answers as published in The American Agriculturist are highly interesting and show how the tastes of buyers differ in different localities and how important it is for growers to acquaint themselves with the requirements of their markets. Nearly all agree that the eating qualities of the pink and red varieties are superior to those of all others, but for marketing they are almost worthless.

Homemade Windmills.

A Nebraskan writes as follows concerning a homemade windmill for pumping water: We usually make our wheels 8 feet in diameter—that is, we use four 2 by 2 inch hard wood pieces 8 feet long, and they cross on the axle, so that the fans are 4 feet long, and we make them 4 feet wide, so that the fan is square. We use half inch lumber to cover the fans. Lap siding does very well. The box is made enough larger than the wheel so that there is no danger of striking with the fans. We use a wire extending from the extremity of one fan to the next to brace the wheel. If there should be trees or buildings near to interfere, the box may be set on posts as high as you choose. Mine is 8 feet to the top of the box.

Feeding Rack.

Where the farmer has rough fodder that he must feed out, advantage can be taken on many sunny days of this liking on the part of the stock for out of door eating. An easily made and convenient rack for such out of door feeding is shown in the cut here reproduced from the New York Tribune. It can be reached by the stock from four sides, and the last mouthful can be reached, as the bottom is close in to the post in the center. With the sides spread still more, large stock can feed from the outside and smaller stock farther in under the sides. These sides are made of separate pieces, four in all, and each side is held up by ropes or chains attached to the post. The sides may hook together at the bottom.



RACK FOR OUTDOOR FEEDING.

Fighting Off a Frost.

The idea is an old one of fighting off a late frost through orchids, etc., by building small fires. In California, where fruit growers have met with success, the best results have been gained by burning a damp smudge. Small fires of damp straw or stable manure, it is claimed, have saved plantations. Sometimes bags of wet stable manure, weighing about 90 pounds each, are distributed through the orchard. When frost threatens, a little kerosene is poured on each sack and fired. The wet manure burns slowly, sending off large quantities of moisture in the form of vapor, and it is this watery vapor or fog which prevents the frost.

Different growers have different methods for creating this artificial fog. One of them uses frames made of chicken yard netting mounted on wagons filled with wet manure or straw. Under them pots of tar or petroleum are kept burning, and as the heat sends up a cloud of moisture the wagon is slowly hauled about the orchard.

TO CHRISTIANS.

I want a middle-aged or elderly man or woman to sell VITÆ ORE; the best thing in, on or out of earth for all people. Credit given all sending good references. I am no hypocrite or quack, but a public benefactor, giving employment and bringing blessings to all worthy of God's gifts. Address

The Christian Cynosure.

REV. M. A. GAULT, - - - Editor.
WM. I. PHILLIPS, - - - Publisher.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 29, 1897.

THE NEW CYNOSURE.

Next week our readers will receive the Cynosure in its new dress. Though its form will be changed yet its soul and spirit will be the same, and go marching on. Welcome it as the same old familiar friend only in new attire. Its more youthful countenance and vigor will betoken a new lease of life and increased activity and hopefulness for the future.

Some of our readers will doubtless regret the change for a time, but we trust all will soon be convinced of the wisdom of the change which will mean better aim and effectiveness in the presentation of the truth both by the living voice and printed page. Many of our workers have written hopefully of the change. Mrs. Mary Carnes, of Detroit, a liberal supporter of the cause, writes: "I am glad to hear that you and Bro. Gault are going into the field a part of the time. I think you will stir up the people much more than merely through the press."

Secretary P. B. Williams writes: "I believe the reduction of the Cynosure to one dollar a year will help the circulation, and be a good thing in the end." Bro. Geo. W. Pritts, of Scottdale, Pa., writes: "I hereby renew my subscription for the Cynosure. Though its visits will be longer between times, yet we will wait till it comes and appreciate it all the more." Rev. O. T. Lee, of Northwood, Iowa, writes: "I hereby subscribe to the proposed change in the Cynosure I have not been able to see that some of the reforms advocated through its columns were thoroughly Biblical and practical for the paper. Let the Cynosure take up the fight against secretism alone, and the Lutherans will stand by it."

We want the friends to remember that we have counted the cost and enlisted for the war. We will hope and trust they will stand by us during these dark and cloudy days. There is sunshine on ahead.

A TERRIBLE BONDAGE.

Stephen Merritt, of New York, in an editorial in his paper, The King's Messenger, says: "No East Indian is more trammeled and enthralled by caste than we are, and we suffer as do they if we break caste. We are not free. Individually we are bound; and as a nation we are held captive. This land of the free and home of the brave is in the bondage of the rum oligarchy—very slaves; as bad, if not worse, than anything in heathendom, costing life, and treasure, and honor, vast in amount and increasing continually.

"And the worst of it is that this monster enslaves the church and shuts its mouth, and palsies its hand and enervates its power. The church, society and the community are in bondage and in league with the devil. Christianity, world-wide, is a slave to mammon. The Powers are for the defense of the Turk; and right must go to the wall that wrong may prevail. Terrible bondage!

"I was a Mason of high degree for many, many years, and greatly honored, respected and beloved. The Holy Spirit suggested to me, if I desired him to be my guide, it would be in proper form for me to abjure every other allegiance and receive him fully. I had never viewed it in that light, but the suggestion was all that was necessary, and it was immediately adopted; and an army of friends, who had helped me much in busines, became cold or avowed enemies, and I am paying the penalty. Hallelujah!"

DRIFTING UPON THE ROCKS.

Full of significance are these words of Josiah W. Leeds:

"Sixty years ago the righteousness of Freemasonry's obligation to 'always conceal and never reveal' became the main issue in a Presidential contest. We may have to face it again. What success would a committee of the Pennsylvania Legislature have, in the matter of an inquiry into extra judicial oaths, as compared with that of the Connecticut General Assembly's committee of 1833, who made bold to report that they believed 'the administration of such oaths (as the ritual provides) to be highly improper, and that the same should be prohibited by legal enactments,' giving as their reasons that they (the oaths) were unauthorized by law, binding the person to whom administered to disregard and violate the law; that their natural tendency was subversive of public morals, and that they were even blasphemous, while the penalties attached to the breach of them were such as were entirely unknown to our law, and forbidden both by the State and the National Constitution.

"A member of the secret fraternity, an adept at concealment in all its branches, is the attorney for the master of the dominant political ring in Philadelphia, and what would such an investigating committee gather from him? This Lawyer Shield's counsel to his client Martin, in the Mutual Automatic Investigation case, has been sworn to say nothing. And if we go to the Senator who is credited with controling the State's political destinies, what would he divulge who had made it all right with the influential order of which he is a member, by the gift of a valuable tract of land for their prospective University? Many a day has gone by since the statesman, Thaddeus Stevens, predecessor of Matthew S Quay, represented his State, with honor, in the National Legislature. Can we imagine this man of open methods training in the school of Quay and of Shield's — this Thaddeus Stevens who stood by Charles Sumner, who had boldly averred: 'I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antogonistic to our free institutions, and tend to centralization and anarchy —Freemasonry and Slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free, as our ancestors designed it.'"

TREASONABLE OATHS.

"Furthermore do I promise and swear that I will not give the grand hailing sign of distress, unless I am in real distress, or for the benefit of the craft when at work; and should I ever see that sign given or the word accompanying it, and the person who gave it appearing to be in distress, I will fly to his relief at the risk of my life, should there be a greater probability of saving his life than of losing my own. Furthermore do I promise and swear that I will not wrong this lodge, nor a brother of this degree, to the value of one cent, knowingly myself, nor suffer it to be done by others if in my power to prevent it."—Oath of a Master Mason.

Who is to be the judge of the distress? It is the man himself, and it may be when he is pursued by the officers of the law for his crimes, he who sees the sign is to fly to the rescue, if there is the appearance of real distress. Which oath will the officer of the law keep? The oath to the lodge or the oath to the government? Let the facts show.

"Furthermore do I promise and swear that I will not speak evil of a brother Master Mason, neither behind his back nor before his face, but will apprise him of all approaching danger if in my power. Furthermore do I promise and swear that I will not violate the chastity of a Master Mason's wife, mother, sister or daughter, I knowing them to be such, nor suffer it to be done by others if in my power to prevent it."

THE MOODY CHURCH MEETING.

POWERFUL ADDRESSES —A LARGE AND ENTHUSIASTIC AUDIENCE.—STIRRING TESTIMONIES FROM SECEDERS.

One of the most inspiring and successful meetings in the history of the anti-secret movement was the one in the Chicago Avenue church, Tuesday evening, April 20. We believe there is no other church in Chicago, and doubt if there is another in the land, that could have furnished such a large and deeply interested audience. The Bible Institute being now in session, a large number of ministers and evangelists from various States were present.

For some time the interest of this church on the lodge question has been on the increase. Last May, after the powerful addresses in this church by Pres. C. A. Blanchard and Dr. Henson, a few of the members made good use of anti secret literature in the congregation. Rev. R. A. Torrey, the pastor and also superintendent of the Bible Institute, has publicly declared, "I do not believe it possible for a man to be an intelligent Christian and an intelligent Mason at the same time." He announced this meeting from the pulpit on the previous Sabbath and earnestly urged all to attend. Rev. Mr. Newall, a professor in the Bible Institute, was present and announced that his Bible class of several hundred would adjourn that night to attend this meeting. The pastor's assistant, Rev. Wm. Jacoby, was a Knight Templar, but seceded and burned his uniform and buried his sword at Guthrie Center, Iowa, when he was converted some five years ago. He had before related this in giving an account of his conversion.

The Moody church is most thoroughly organized. Its plan is to give every man, woman and child some work to do. Tuesday evening, when we came within several blocks of the church, we heard a young man on the street corner announcing in loud voice the meeting, the speakers and the subject, and also handing cards of invitation to every passer by. After running a gauntlet of several of these young men, we were prepared on entering the large church to find it rapidly filling up with an interested mass of people who continued to pour in until every seat was full and many were obliged to stand.

The singing was inspiring. It seemed that everybody sang, and sang with such enthusiasm that one could scarcely help joining in it. Would that all the Chicago churches could pattern after this congregation in the manner of their singing.

Rev. William Jacoby, who presided, introduced as the first speaker Rev. E. B. Wylie, pastor of the Summerdale Congregational church. His address was, from first to last, a clear, logical and well-proven argument against the lodge. He proved from the best recognized Masonic authors that Freemasonry claimed to be a religion; and though this did not of itself discredit it, yet it promised to do for sinful men all that the religion of Christ did. He proved that it could not be the Christian religion, which holds that the Bible is supreme. Masonic authorities say that the Koran may be used in the lodge-room in place of the Bible in Mohammedan countries. Chase, a high Masonic authority, says that Masonry is not founded on the Bible; and it is a serious innovation to require that a Mason profess his belief in the divine authenticity of the Bible or a state of future rewards and punishments. Bro. Wylie argued that a system that dishonored the Word could not claim to be a Christian institution. Masonry aims to include all that is common in all religions, and to exclude all that is peculiar to any religion. Christ is peculiar to the Christian religion, therefore Masonry blots out his name.

Pres. Blanchard then gave one of his most effective addresses. He showed the importance of the question. Many were beginning to see that those who did not go to the churches went to the lodges. Yet we hear little about these lodges except when they meet in their conclaves and go on their excursion trains thundering across the broken law of the Sabbath.

He drew beautiful pictures of the three divine institutions, the family, the church and the state, and showed how miserable people would be without these. It was a pity of the man without a home and church. He showed that God ordained these and also the state. The trouble with Chicago was that men were not doing their duty in politics as God's law prescribed. This was why there were over 6,000 saloons in this city of 500 churches, and these saloons were destroying one hundred souls while the churches were saving one.

Any institution that Satan creates, such as the lodge, is at war with the family, church and state. Satan hates to see people happy. He wants to make this country like Armenia. If you have a State like Turkey what use have you for a home or a church? He gave instances of the lodge destroying the home by alienating husband and wife. He proved the lodge to be an enemy of the church and state. It generates selfishness; and a man who is selfish cannot be a good citizen or a good church member. He also gave some striking examples of lodges training men to commit crime.

Nearly an hour was then spent in hearing testimonies from those who had seceded from the lodge. Quite a number of these were present, and the large audience listened with intense interest. Secretary W. I. Phillips related the experience of a wife who had told him that her husband belonged to so many lodges that he had little time to lodge at home. He gave his own experience in leaving the Good Templars, and gave instances of the danger of young men and women associating in their secret lodge meetings and playing religion, sometimes electing as chaplain young men who were profane.

The chairman next gave a powerful testimony, relating that soon after his conversion he left the Knight Templars. When he went from the prayer meeting to the lodge he found there some prominent members of the church, and found that they preferred the lodge to the prayer meeting.

A Methodist minister came to the front to defend Odd-fellowship, saying there was nothing in it conflicting with his obligation to Christ. A young man who had left the same order replied that he was chaplain in the lodge, and opposite him sat a notorious saloonkeeper. Appealing to the minister, he said, "How can you be yoked together in that sort of fellowship?" He said he always observed that lodgemen were seldom found in church and prayer meeting.

A number of seceders gave interesting testimonies, and the large audience listened with profound interest till after 10 o'clock.

A good supply of N. C. A. literature was on a table at the door and many availed themselves of it. All in all, the meeting was one of the most interesting we have ever attended, and was a great uplift to the friends of the cause.

REV. WOODRUFF POST'S BANNER.

Rather a novel and effective method of testifying against the lodge and saloon has been practiced by our good brother, Rev. Woodruff Post, of Olean, N. Y. He stretched across the sidewalk in front of his residence what the Olean Herald characterized as "a peculiar anti saloon, Anti-masonic banner." It was a large canvas sheet, on which was printed mottoes in letters so large that they could be read for a block or more. In the center was the picture of the Masonic candidate taking the oath of the third degree. Bro. Post has sent us a photograph of this banner. We are unable to reproduce it in form, but the mottoes and picture are as follows:

"WHAT IS SPOKEN IN THE EAR IN CLOSETS SHALL BE PROCLAIMED UPON THE HOUSETOPS."—Bible.

I PROMISE AND SWEAR TO KEEP THE SECRETS OF A MASTER MASON GIVEN ME AS SUCH, MURDER AND TREASON ONLY EXCEPTED.

IN ROYAL ARCH, MURDER AND TREASON NOT EXCEPTED.

OUR M. E. BISHOP INITIATED.

GOOD MASTER. GOOD DEVIL

CAN'T SERVE TWO MASTERS

INCLUDING MANY OATHS.

"I PROMISE AND SWEAR I WILL NOT VIOLATE THE CHASTITY OF A BROTHER MASON'S WIFE, MOTHER, SISTER OR DAUGHTER, KNOWING THEM TO BE SUCH "—Finney's Expose.

UNPARALLELED VIRTUE!

Recently the Olean town council endeavored to adopt an ordinance covering the case as follows:

Section 1. No person or persons shall be allowed to place or extend any sign or banner having thereon any writing, printing, lettering or pictures, across or over any sidewalk in any of the streets of the city of Olean, or over any part of any such sidewalk or street of said city.

The ordinance was to take effect April 10th. The Herald says:

As it happened, the councilmen had been acquainted through the Herald with the efforts already made to intimidate Mr. Post, and they at once recognized this ordinance as another effort in that direction. Several of them began to ask pointed questions, and the city attorney and Alderman Sloane were kept busy for some time defending their position. Of course they denied that the ordinance was aimed at any particular individual, but a spirited cross-examination drew from the city attorney the admission that it was not a summary order for the removal of all signs over the sidewalks, but was only operative when an individual was notified by the mayor, to remove his sign or banner. After a protracted discussion the motion of Mr. Sloane to adopt the ordinance was put to a vote. Alderman Johnson demanded a roll-call, and the motion was defeated by the following vote: Ayes—Baker, Luce, Schue and Sloane. Noes—Corsett, Cowans, Foss, Holmes, Johnson and Reed. President Alderman refrained from voting.

The Daily Times of Buffalo, N. Y., makes this announcement:

The Rev. Woodruff Post, of Olean, who displays banners on which are attached notices obnoxious to the saloonkeepers of Olean, has won a victory over his enemies. An attempt made to pass an ordinance directed against him failed. The signs are still on exhibition.

Is not Bro. Post's method of advertising this semi-pagan institution worthy of imitation? We doubt, however, that there are many town councils who would tolerate such an exposure of Masonry; but it would be well for the friends to test the matter, and thus start many to thinking on the subject.

IMPORTANT REMINDER.

We must add a regiment to our ranks of coworkers in securing Cynosure subscribers. The rank will depend upon the number of recruits (Cynosure subscriptions) secured for the army of our readers. There can be only one colonel, but there are captains, lieutenants, sergeants and corporals needed in every city and hamlet in our land. Every community has in it men and women who love the home and the church, and who want to make them happier and holier as Jesus would have them. It is such that the Cynosure needs. We have opened a recruiting office; who will be the first to enlist? Send names and receive special helps. Remember that the Cynosure and weekly New Lork Tribune one year for only $1.25.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Articles were filed recently by William S. Linton, William Johnston Palmer and Walter J. Lamson, incorporating the Parliament of the Prudential Patricians of Pompeii, a fraternal beneficiary organization.

—It was a brother of the craft who, when asked to explain how a certain Masonic minister could treat the Scriptures and prayer church-wise in church and lodge-wise in the lodge, answered tersely, "He's a hypocrite."

—A prominent Chicago minister says: "I will come into collision with any power that wants me to lower the flag of my absolute obedience to Jesus Christ." Such a minister cannot be a Mason, for the Masonic covenant not only repudiates Christ's authority but defiantly tramples upon his law.

—The churches in Great Britain are going more and more under the power of the lodge. Rev. John Brown, of Clear Lake, Iowa, who was for many years a pastor in Ireland, writes us that the Irish Presbyterian church admits Orangemen into her communion. He does not believe that either Baptists or Independents would have admitted secretists in his day.

—There is no evangelical church in the land that has as expensive a building as the Masonic Temple in Philadelphia, dedicated in 1873, and costing $1,750,000. It is the largest and costliest Masonic building in the world. They have costly halls in all the principal cities in the land, one of the finest among them being the hall erected by the fraternity in Pittsburg at a cost of $425,000. In Philadelphia and Pittsburg there are more anti-secret churches than in any other cities in the land, and yet strange to say it is in these cities the lodge is most strongly entrenched. Surely the Gospel preached in those cities must be lacking in expulsive power.

—Rev. John Brown, of Clear Lake, Iowa, sends us the following: "Among many excellent observations on national education, Dr. Strong says: 'Questions of conscience can be settled neither by majorities nor by authority, but because the necessities of the state are above individual rights. The state, when its necessities require, does not hesitate to draft into the army a citizen who has conscientious scruples against war, the government utterly disregarding individual conscience.' Does not this look like a self-contradiction? Is it right for the state to compel her citizens to violate the law of conscience? Does the necessity of the case justify her citizens in the violation of the law of conscience? Will her citizens, who disobey the law of conscience, be able to cast the responsibility on the state in the day of judgment? Acts 4:19; 5:29.

—Sarah Powell Giddings, of Enosburg Falls, Vt., writes: "My husband was a victim of the Freemasons, and was a Freemason from the time he was 26 years old until he was 53. When he was on his deathbed he told me the Freemasons held his life as if by a thread. He said he was afraid to say his soul was his own for fear they would put him in the asylum. He could see no way to escape them, and he thought he had got to do as they said. They are traitors to each other and the church." Mrs. Giddings sends us a long article and abundant newspaper evidence to prove her assertions that Freemasons with whom she came in contact were guilty of seduction and murder.

—Elder Woodruff Post writes that in condensing his article in a recent issue we failed to give his full meaning. The full text of his resolution which the conference adopted was as follows: "Resolved, that we members of the E. S. Conference do disapprove of and protest against the introduction of any ritual or part of a ritual in the celebration of any rite or ceremony in the M. E. church save and accept such as is provided in the rubric of the said M. E. chunch." This he said checked Masonic ritual use in the M. E. church. The bishop depicted the effort fearful that it would divide the conference. Union with Baal and peace, it seemed, was preferable to suffering and separaton with Christ.

—An Eastern pastor writes us: "I wonder if Pittsburgh is being well prepared for the Triennial Knights Templar Christian debauch? I wish that its eyes might be opened beforehand. Would a tract expressly prepared and not so obviously Anti-masonic as to be unused, be available through the local W. C. T. U.? I think it should be written as a temperance, not as an Anti-masonic tract. Not that it would leave Masonry out of sight, but its apparent aim should be that of the W. C. T. U., I think, rather than that of the N. C. A. This might both promote its circulation and make it more effective. But if we should rouse the Pittsburgh women to drive the visiting Christians into decency their sacred sepulcher might be whiter than ever with freshened and more effective hypocrisy. But we must not reserve our fire on the enemy for fear he will fly a flag of truce."

—As a sample of Sister Powers' Beacon Light work in Philadelphia a correspondent in that city sends us the following: "A gentlemanly representative of the press called at our mission. I found him to be exceptionally bright, although duped by secretism, no exception to the rule, inactive as a Baptist and active in the brotherhood of Odd-fellowship. I quietly listened to the usual weak defense of his pet institution with its superiority to the church. Then drew from him the fact that he had been out of business mostly for three years unable to start again. I then thought my time had come to open a whole volley of truth upon him, which I kept up for four consecutive hours without refreshments. He paid earnest attention, although coloring and wincing alternately; he manifested no desire to escape the fire, but drank in Odd-fellowship as he had not taken it in the lodge. After he had freely expressed himself as deeply interested and convicted I modestly suggested that his boasted beneficial society ought to have put him on his feet before this late day. He gladly accepted an invitation to attend the evening meeting for men only (conducted by Elder Brown), and take a look into darkest secretism as revealed in Masonic exposures."

VALUE OF GOOD ROADS.

A Necessity to All, but the Farmer Will Receive the Greatest Benefit.

In an editorial on the next meeting of the national good roads congress the Chicago Inter Ocean has the following to say regarding the value of good roads to the farmer:

The national good roads congress will hold its next yearly session at Orlando, Fla. This is somewhat remote from the path of commerce, but nevertheless the place of meeting may be well chosen. Good roads are a necessity in all states, and the aggregate of good to the republic cannot be attained until in all parts of the country all highways are fit for travel by heavily laden wagons at all times of the year.

It is possible that the interest of the farming people in good roads has been retarded of expression by continual preachment of the advantages that bicycle riders and pleasure seekers on horseback or in vehicles will derive from improved highways. These, though important, are secondary considerations.

The loss to the United States by bad roads is estimated at from $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 a year. It is a loss caused by enforced idleness during many months of the year, and by the employment of needless horsepower during most months.

A FACTOR IN TRANSPORTATION.
[From Good Roads.]

In the spring and summer the farmer can find work in plenty on his farm. In the fall and winter he ought to be able to haul hay, grain, wood and other materials to market. It is in these seasons that, as a rule, he can obtain the highest prices for his products, and it is in these seasons that he can market them without taking time that ought to be used in the work of plowing, sowing and harvesting. But it is in these seasons that he is forced to be idle or to haul half a load with four horses instead of a full load with two because of the wretched or impassable condition of the roads.

It is strange that a class of men so frugal and so wisely economic in most expenditures has hesitated to make liberal outlays for road improvement.

BRICK COUNTRY ROAD.

New Departure In Highway Construction Made at Monmouth, Ills.

The first brick country road laid in the United States has been put down in Monmouth township, Warren county, Ills. It is the fruit of a movement for hard roads which has been going on in the township for the last four years, and which has resulted in the construction of a number of miles of broken stone road and finally in the departure from old methods and the laying of a paved way of brick. The road is the culmination of a series of experiments in road building, and though it is regarded as more or less on probation the utmost confidence in its success is expressed. The work has attracted much attention among friends of good roads all over the country.

The average cost of the stone roads has been 70 cents per foot. The brick road cost $2,500 for 3,000 feet, or about 90 cents a running foot.

Convict Labor.

There is one kind of work that the convicts could be given, however, that we believe would meet with the unanimous approval of the people of the state, and that is the improvement of our roads. Here, within a radius of ten miles of our state penitentiary, is to be found the finest material in the world for road making.

We have stone, gravel and even brick clay that could be prepared by the convicts in enormous quantities for roads in all parts of Illinois. Down in the mudholes of central and southern Illinois a few macadamized or brick highways would be hailed as a godsend by the farmers whose homes are almost isolated during the rainy portions of the year.

A system of highways throughout the state, most of the work on them to be performed by convicts, should be inaugurated.

If Governor Tanner desires to ingratiate himself with all classes of people, laboring men, taxpayers, bicyclists, farmers and, in fact, nearly every one, he will take up this plan.—Joliet News.

Work For Tramps and Convicts.

It would be a most excellent plan to harness all the tramps and criminals in the country and put them at work building roads, says the New York Ledger. Appoint state commissions, under the authority of the commission appointed by congress and working by its plans, and have a complete system of roads on one general scale, which should be carefully worked out and experimented with until the very best results attainable by intelligent and painstaking research are secured.

Kentucky Toll Roads.

The farmers of Kentucky have taken the law into their own hands and destroyed the tollgates in a section of that state. The turnpike companies had not kept the roads in fit condition and had charged the full rate of toll. The farming community in that section is in a high state of excitement, and the result will doubtless be an agitation in favor of improved highways.

Bad Roads Consume.

At the farmers' congress at Indianapolis Mr. Otto Dorner, the Milwaukee member of the League of American Wheelmen national committee for road improvement, told the truth succinctly when he said: "The elements entering into the transportation of grain to the railway are time, horses and vehicles. Bad roads consume them all; good roads conserve all." He pointed out that since New Jersey had undertaken the construction of good roads the quantity of potatoes that could be hauled to the load had increased from 50 baskets to 85 or 100 baskets.

ECONOMY IN HIGHWAYS.

The Cheapest Road Is One That Is Always Easily Traversed.

"Constant dropping wears away stones," and it is only by constant reminders by the press that the public mind can be brought to the sensible conclusion that good roads are among America's essentials, remarks the West Chester (Pa.) Republican. They are not merely wheelmen's wants, but wants demanded by the comfort and convenience of everybody. It does not by any means follow that because a man has not a team of his own or does not ride a wheel he has not a direct personal interest in the improvement of roads. European countries have long recognized their merits and for centuries in some portions have enjoyed their benefits. We in America have only begun to appreciate—and mainly in the immediate vicinity of large cities—their great importance.

The importance of the subject demands a much wider spread feeling of interest. While the area of the United States is too immense and the population too sparse to hope for many years to come for a general good roads system, yet great progress can be made in sections of the country where farmers are prosperous and where they have occasion to use roads to a considerable extent in order to get the products of their farms to railroad stations for shipment to large cities and towns.

Were it possible to estimate the dollar and cent extra cost for repairs to wagons and carriages, the wear and tear of horse, mule and ox flesh over wretched roads, and the delays caused in winter by their impassability, the aggregate would be startling and would, we feel assured, reach a sum far in excess of what would be needed to provide good roads and keep them in good condition. And if to the economy referred to be added the increased value of property and, last but not least, the comfort of farmers and their families, there would be overwhelming argument in favor of immediate action. The work is a stupendous one, when viewed as a whole, but, a beginning once made and the advantages clearly demonstrated, there would be steady improvement.

VERMONT'S ROAD PROJECT.

A Plan Has Been Discussed to Build Highways at the State's Expense.

Good roads came in for considerable discussion at the session of the Vermont legislature recently ended. Dr. W. Seward Webb proposed a plan for developing the state by means of state highways.

In a general way his project provides for the construction by the state of an elaborate system of highways. Persons familiar with the topography of Vermont will recall the fact that extending lengthwise nearly north and south through the state are two ranges of hills, or mountains, and practically three valleys. Dr. Webb proposes to run a broad state highway through each of the three valleys and connect these highways with as many lateral roads as may be found necessary.

This work will, of course, cost a large amount of money. The scheme involves the bonding of the state to pay the expenses of improvement. The plan has not yet been matured, but those who have studied it feel confident that it will appeal to the business sense of the people.

Inaccessibility has always stood in the way of the commercial growth of many fertile and resourceful sections of the state. The state highway idea is likely to be a leading topic of discussion in the next legislature.

Pennsylvania Farmers Want Good Roads.

It is one of the interesting evidences of the progress of a good idea that some of the most pronounced declarations that have been made in favor of vigorous action for road improvement by the Pennsylvania legislature come from agricultural sources. One or two prominent opponents of road improvement in former legislatures have been conspicuously elected to stay at home. A very active supporter of road improvement in Westmoreland made his fight for election on road legislation for the rural districts, won his election and is now preparing to press a measure that will stimulate the construction of permanent and solid roads in all the counties that have enterprise enough to conform to its provisions.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

ADVICE TO SINGERS.

How to Stand That the Voice May Be Used Freely.

Mancini says: "Vocal faults are not the only ones that should be corrected in a singer. The faults of another kind are a bad position of the mouth, knitting the brows, rolling the eyes, twisting the neck—and, in fact, the whole body." Lamperti, the elder, declares that the singer should stand like a soldier—body upright on the hips, shoulders in the background, arms hanging naturally, elbows near the body, heels joined, toes out. There are teachers who should heed well the words of Tosi, "Let him never suffer the scholar to hold the music paper in singing before his face, both that the sound of the voice may not be obstructed and to prevent him from being bashful." And it was Tosi who, over a century ago, gave this counsel to pupils: "When he studies his lessons at home, let him sometimes sing before a looking glass, not to be enamored of his own person, but to avoid those convulsive motions of the body or of the face (for so I call the grimaces of an affected singer) which, when once they have took footing, never leave him." There are teachers who force their pupils to sing with hands joined behind the back, so as to develop the chest, but this is going too far, as Lemaire well remarks. Lemaire, however, believes in placing the hands on the back of the hips in such a manner that the fingers touch. How few singers in these days stand well! How few that stand as intelligently and yet apparently as naturally as Plancon, Whitney, the late Campanini, Nannetti. Among women, Melba and Emma Eames know the art. You will not infrequently see a soprano who will raise the eyebrows with an upper tone, or one who will company the end of a phrase or an embellishment by a vibration of the hips, or one who will lean forward, bust far in advance, hips drawn backward, and thus her force will be half paralyzed.

How to Become Slender.

Rise early and take a cold bath, rubbing vigorously afterward with a coarse towel or flesh brush. Take a cupful of hot water before breakfast. Avoid drinking at meals and confine yourself to three meals a day. Take one small cup of tea at breakfast, some dry toast, boiled fish or a small cutlet and a baked apple or a little fruit. At dinner, which should be at midday, take white fish or meat, dry toast or stale bread, vegetables and fruit, either fresh or stewed; for supper, toast, salad, fruit and six ounces of wine or water. Hot water with lemon juice in it is good for supper.

How to Tell a Lady.

A company of women was discussing lately how to know a lady in a casual encounter. "You may tell her," said one, "by her boots, gloves and handkerchiefs." Another thought her skirt binding told the story, and a third declared that her language would betray her, "and it's words, not ideas, that concern this particular test," the speaker added. It is undoubtedly true that, while the nicety of the small essentials of a woman's toilet indicates a certain degree of refinement of taste, they are not the unmistakable mark of birth and breeding. Many would much more readily give the preference to the intonation of the voice and the use of words as a surer sign. A fine detail in clothes now is quite possible to almost any observing person; an unmistakably coarse, not to say vulgar, looking woman is often irreproachable in the matter of boots, gloves, skirt bindings, etc. The charm of a well modulated voice, using good English, undefiled by slang or provincialisms—this is often acquired without the right of culture.

England and America.

English holdings in Turkey prevent any concerted action among the Christian nations to aid Armenia, and thus the greed of gold permits from day to day the sickening revelations of those horrible tales of rapine and murder. This unjust and cruel crusade has robbed mother of her virtue, infancy of its innocence and the deity of its sacredness. Armenia has for over 1,800 years been struggling for Christian liberty, and it is no wonder one of its countrymen exclaimed, "God himself has gone mad." Truly no nation of people has been so persecuted and put to death with so little thought as these poor, unfortunate Armenians. Women and children have not escaped these cruelties, and ere long some action must be taken to stop these murders. Armenia is a Christian nation and should have the support of every English speaking country.—Rev. A. W. Williams, Presbyterian, Philadelphia.

NEW ZEALAND JERSEY.

She Is From American Stock, However, Which Accounts For Her.

A creamery man, Mr. Cyril Jephson, sends to Hoard's Dairyman all the way from New Zealand the picture of his boss Jersey cow. The American Babcock test has also gone to New Zealand, along with the American Jersey.

The New Zealand creamery man writes to The Dairyman that he feeds his cows for a winter ration the following:

Thirty pounds chop (oat straw, one-third; green oats, two-thirds), 12 pounds wet brewers' grains wetted with skim-milk, about 2 to 4 pounds (they won't take up more), 3 pounds ground maize and pea meal, a pound of linseed ground (not oilmeal). I also give a few carrots as a luxury. Cows are only in stable at night and on wet days. They run in fair clover paddock during fine weather.

The Churn.

If the churn is to be kept sweet and clean, it must always be washed just as soon as it is emptied of butter, never being allowed to stand and get dried out before washing. Plain hot water—boiling water—is poured into it, the cover placed on and the handle turned for a few minutes, being careful to remove the steam once or twice during the operation or the cork may fly out, or perhaps the head. A brush kept for the purpose is used to remove any particles from the underside, at the top, which is of iron, galvanized. The cover is well brushed around the cork edge, the standard brushed also, where any buttermilk may have spattered, and the outside of the churn merely wiped off, never treated with hot water, which would spoil the varnish. Of course this part of it never gets soiled aside from a small space around the opening where the buttermilk is drawn off. The butter is washed quite clear in the churn, so that there is no buttermilk adhering to the sides, otherwise the water first poured into it would not be hot, as that would tend to cook the particles upon the inside, resulting in the same effect as pouring boiling water into a pail which has not first been cleaned into that which is not so hot. A yellowish substance forms in such case, which often puzzles one to trace to its cause, which is this: Boiling water should never be put upon any dairy utensil until it has first been freed from milk or cream with that in which the hand can be easily held.

Feeding Mangers.

The associate editor of Hoard's Dairyman says he is one of the comparatively few cow keepers who do not believe in mangers of any description, and he has none of them in his stable. Neither does he have any partition between the heads of the several cows, although willing to concede that a narrow division of the space in front of the cows into individual feeding places would not be particularly objectionable. Where cows are habitually fed all they will eat, he says, the robbery that goes on from one to another is not a very serious trouble. He claims that great objection to individual mangers is the inconvenience of cleaning them out, which is almost sure to result in the accumulation of a great deal of filth, and hence we believe in having the feeding place so easily accessible that a few strokes of a broom will clear out everything that ought not to be there. There is no stall or manger with which we are acquainted where uncut corn stover can be fed with any degree of satisfaction, and this is one point in their favor, for corn stover should always be cut before feeding.

Save the Liquid Manure.

All stable floors should be made of concrete, which will prevent the waste of liquid excrement. This is an important part of manure, and the solids are greatly helped by mixing the liquid with it. Enough dry absorbent should be kept under stock to absorb the liquid. This is much better than trying to save the latter by itself. No liquid can be distributed economically, and besides, liquid when fresh will burn vegetation to which it is applied. It must be composted, so as to rid it of the caustic properties which make it hurtful and put its nitrogen into form available for crops to use.

Keep the Best Only.

Nine-tenths of our farmers keep twice as much stock as they should and much of this is an unprofitable kind. It pays to keep the best of everything, including poultry. A good article always commands a good price. The time will come when the average farmer, instead of having a score of scrubs, will put his time upon half that number of good animals."

CROSS BREEDS.

Simple Facts Deduced by Practical and Extended Experience.

Seeing a request for experience in the Jersey-Ayrshire cross to get dairy cows, a correspondent of Hoard's Dairyman gives his experience, made 15 years ago in Saratoga county, N. Y., where a registered Jersey bull was used on full blooded Ayrshire cows. He says: The produce of this cross in nine cases out of ten produced the best possible cows for the dairy. They were nearly of perfect dairy form and deep, heavy milkers of rich milk. But in another case, when an Ayrshire sire was used on Jersey cows, no improvement could be seen in the quantity of milk, while the quality was much less; but, strange to say, these cross bred animals when bred together produced animals of very little use for anything, either milk or beef, while the cross bred heifers bred to a pure Jersey bull were fully as good as the pure Jerseys for rich milk, with a great improvement in quantity over their grandams. As is well known, this is the usual experience of crossing breeds. The first cross is all right, but the second must always be to a pure male of one of the original cross. Do not, if you wish to improve, use one of the cross bred males and never after having used one of the breeds twice go back to the other, as you will surely be improving backward, or, to speak more plainly, after having bred the cross bred Jersey-Ayrshire heifers to a Jersey bull do not breed the produce of this cross to an Ayrshire bull, but keep on in the same line, using only Jersey males. So, while in all cases the first cross of two breeds is generally a good one, it is necessary to keep up the herd, that a herd of pure females of one or the other breed must be kept, or in a few years you have run into all one breed.

The same thing applies to swine, for the best lot of fattening hogs the writer ever fed were a straight cross of Berkshires and Poland-Chinas of registered stock or well known pure stock on both sides; but, in order to keep up the stock year after year, it is necessary to have a herd of pure brood sows of one or the other breed and get a pure male each year.

Parchment Paper For Butter Tubs.

The use of parchment paper for lining butter tubs is on the increase all over the country, and the parties that are using it claim that they have less shrinkage than formerly. The commission men are also well pleased with it, as the butter does not stick to it, and they have less trouble in stripping the butter to get the weight of the package, so they can give proper weights on each tub, and also the paper will protect the butter from the heat in warm weather. So all creameries should begin lining their tubs with parchment paper, or, what would be better still, get some square boxes and line them with parchment paper and make a trial shipment in that kind of package, and note the difference in the expense of each kind of package and how the butter sells in them for the home market, for they will be easier handled than the tubs, and the butter can be cut out of them in a better shape, which will be more pleasing to the eye than where the butter is dug out of a tub. If butter for the home market was all packed in square boxes, how much handier for the retailer if he would strip a square package of butter and have it lying on a clean marble slab in his refrigerator and cut it with a fine wire into square pieces. He could soon tell how large a square to cut to make a pound. It would look much better, and the looks of anything always help to sell it, and butter is no exception to that rule.—Exchange.

A WORD FOR DUCKS.

The Experience of a Man Who Is a Decided Enthusiast.

A subscriber to the New York Tribune gives the following interesting experiences and opinion:

"I have always found poultry growing profitable, and for 50 years have taken personal charge of the fowls on my farm, but as I live in a thickly settled neighborhood I have kept for many years only chickens, as turkeys would trespass on my neighbors, and my experience with ducks when a boy had greatly prejudiced me against them, and for 30 years I had not had a duck on the farm. In 1895 my wife bought a sitting of White Peking duck eggs, from which we hatched 11 ducklings the last week in May. I submitted to the nuisance, as I supposed it would be, as my better half assured me that she only wanted to have roast duck a few times and would not ask me to keep any of them over winter, but before they were 10 weeks old I had become so interested in them that I determined to keep them, and I sent for a book on duck culture and began to study it with great interest, and after a year's care of them I have become a duck enthusiast.

"I found that the Peking ducks of today bore about the same relation to the old puddle ducks of my boyhood as a Belle Fleur apple does to a wild crab. The ducks I formerly kept were the common puddle ducks. They were poor layers and great ramblers, would often go from half a mile to a mile from home and not get back in time to be shut up at night, and I would lose their eggs, and finally before the summer was over they were all killed in the woods where they had wandered and furnished a repast to the prowlers that were fond of duck meat.

"The Peking ducks have been bred to get along with but little water, and are satisfied with a supply in a trough. They are very domestic, and although mine have not been confined to yards, I have never known them to go more than 200 yards from the barnyard. If one wishes to confine them, a fence of woven wire 2 feet high and costing in the roll 20 cents a rod, will restrain them, but it is best to have a baseboard, 10 or 12 inches wide, under it, so as to keep the ducklings in, as the meshes in the wire netting are large enough to let the little ones through until they are a few weeks old. We raised every one of the 11 and to my surprise at 10 weeks old they were practically grown and would weigh nearly three times as much as Plymouth Rock chickens of the same age and fed with them, and in addition to this early maturity they are much hardier and bring a higher price per pound in the market.

"My ducks began to lay the first week in February, and have laid to date, May 1, without intermission, and I am now getting twice as many eggs from them as from the same number of hens, and it is the testimony of those who have bred these ducks that with suitable care they will average 140 eggs each per year. Their eggs are about one-third larger than hens' eggs, and I have found that in most city markets they are quoted at double the price of hens' eggs. In Pittsburg and New York for many weeks this spring the quotations for ducks' eggs were not below 25 cents per dozen, and at times 29 cents, when hens' eggs were 9 to 12 cents.

"Ducks do much better on soft food. I tried feeding a pen of six Pekings on corn early in April, and the weekly egg record dropped to ten eggs. I then fed bran and cornmeal wet with milk, and the next week go 31 eggs and the week following 42 eggs, or one for each duck every day. Mr. Rankin says that with good care his ducks often begin to lay at 4 months old and lay until cold weather comes, then stop for a short time and begin laying again in December."

Scrubs and Mongrels.

The farmers of America lose millions of dollars in the aggregate by keeping scrub fowls. This is a proposition that cannot be controverted. And many of them lose money by keeping no fowls at all for market purposes or fowls for revenue. There is a great difference between a mongrel and scrub fowl. The mongrel may be a large composite fowl of pure blood—that is, may be made by a cross of pure bloods or a cross of pure bloods upon common stock. In either case it is removed from a scrub, which is a measly, little, common fowl without a trace of good blood in its composition. Such fowls, even at maturity, do not dress more than from one or two pounds, and it is a good specimen that will dress the latter weight.

But this scrub stock can be improved and doubled in size by the introduction of a few pure bred females and a good male or two, depending on the size of the flock. Besides, more eggs would be produced and of better quality, and these would add to the farmer's profits. Let farmers everywhere improve their fowls. There is good money in it.

Spring Chickens and Roasters.

Spring chickens, which, years ago, were procurable only in their season, can now, thanks to cold storage, be had practically at any season. And the same may be said of the roaster, the spring chicken grown in the fall big enough to roast. The roasters are killed in their season, when they are at their best, and put into cold storage, not to be eaten perhaps until the following spring or summer.

Chickens begin to dry soon after they are put into cold storage, but they don't dry much in the first three or four months. Chickens taken out within that period turn out as handsome as when they were put in and taste about as well. After that time they dry more rapidly, but as far as the actual keeping is concerned they may, in perfect cold storage, be kept almost indefinitely. A turkey has been eaten that had been in cold storage ten years. It was a pretty dry turkey, but it was good to eat.

For Farmers to Settle.

The vital question is for the farmers themselves to settle generally whether they want good roads and whether they will accept the help of those who are willing and anxious to join in paying the cost of road improvement. If they will take up the subject in all their organizations and appoint active working committees to visit the nearest accessible localities where good roads prevail and to urge such legislation as will make them attainable everywhere, the work will soon reach a point where its own momentum will carry it forward. —General Roy Stone.

The Poor Roads Tax.

The estimate of the secretary of the farmers' national congress, that $600,000,000 is wasted annually in this country through bad roads, is supported by that of other statisticians, and from this it appears that the tax they impose takes one-quarter of the whole value of all farm products in the United States.—

ARE FOUND WANTING.

GREECE WILL HAVE NO MORE TO DO WITH THE POWERS.

Abandonment of Larissa Declared a Demonstration of Impotence — Athens Wrapped in Gloom Over the Way the War Has Gone.

Paris, April 26.—The Figaro's Berlin correspondent says it is semi-officially announced that Greece will neither solicit nor accept the intervention of the powers, and is preparing to negotiate direct with Turkey.

Rome, April 26.—L'Opinione semi-officially says this morning: The hour is grave for Greece. Her abandonment of Larissa is more than a defeat. It is a demonstration of impotence, and its consequences are incalculable unless she has the courage to negotiate and to withdraw her troops from Crete.

How They Are Feeling at Athens.

Athens, April 26.—It is useless to deny that a very gloomy view of the war prospects is taken here by the better informed. There are, however, no signs of panic. The city exhibits an attitude of dignified endurance, while many persons still show an unabated enthusiasm for fight. This symptom is particularly noticeable among the wounded now in Athens. Their one desire seems to be healed in order that they may rejoin the colors. Naturally this spirit is much fostered by the confirmation of the reports that the Turks have burned the Greek wounded in a church at Kurtzivoli. The Turks lighted fires under the bodies of wounded beasts. Many of the Greek wounded implored their comrades to kill them; others committed suicide.

May Be a Memorable Battle.

The news of the loss of Mati was received during the small hours of Saturday morning. The premier and the minister of war were immediately summoned to the palace, where a council of the ministry sat until after daybreak. There was some difference of opinion, but it was finally decided, in view of the exhaustion of the Greek troops and numerical superiority of the Turks, to order a retreat to Pharsala. The Greek stand will be made at Pharsala, which once again may become the scene of a memorable battle. The battle of Mati lasted all Friday, the Greeks defending their positions with great intrepidity. Prince Constantin and Prince Nicholas were both continually under fire, and the latter greatly distinguished himself. The Turks, strongly re-inforced, succeeded in breaking the Greek lines at 6 in the evening. The Turkish cavalry delivered repeated magnificent charges; the fighting continued into the night.

Telegraphs of His Defeat.

During the afternoon Colonel Macris, commanding the first division, called for the support of Colonel Mavromicalis, commanding the second division. The latter arrived only just in time to cover the retreat from Mati. At 6 o'clock Colonel Mavromicalis wired to General Smolenitz at Reveni: "I am defeated and retiring to Kazaklar. Act according to your judgment." It is presumed that Reveni will be evacuated forthwith and the whole frontier line abandoned. Gloom and despondency sit on every countenance. The only gleam of consolation is the report that Pantepigadia is out-flanked and the the way open to Janina. This, however, needs official confirmation.

POWERS TALK OF INTERVENTION.

Opinion at London That the War Will Be Over in a Week.

London, April 26.—[Copyright, 1897, by the Associated Press.]—What seems likely to be the last week of the war was entered upon yesterday. It is difficult from the tangle of conflicting telegrams to understand the exact position of affairs. Following the Greek defeat at Larissa London opinion is almost uanimous that the end is in sight, and this view is probably shared by the powers, as they are already moving to intervene. For Larissa has fallen without a blow being struck directly thereat. The entrenchments at Larissa were of the most modern construction and looked as though they were impregnable to anything except an overwhelming force. But after a desperate stand made at Mati the Greek troops were driven back by force of numbers and retreated from both Larissa and Tyrnavo. Thus two strongholds have fallen into the hands of the Turks.

So it is thought that the time for Europe to intervene has arrived. It is believed that intervention will first take the form of a suggestion of armistice, to which the combatants would no doubt agree. Since Saturday afternoon the British foreign office has been in close communication with the other members of the European concert, Great Britain suggesting that the time has now arrived for them to act. The French, German and Italian governments have already responded, offering to agree, though the German government adds as a condition that it will be necessary to exact a pledge from Greece to obey the mandate of Europe when this mandate is again given. The British foreign office believes that Greece will give this pledge, as the disasters which have overtaken her have demonstrated that Turkey still possesses a formidable fighting machine, a fact which must have a sobering effect upon the popular demand for war at Athens, and which will permit the Greek nation to climb down without disgrace, after a superb vindication of the personal courage of the Greek troops and a gratifying demonstration of Hellenic patriotism. If the Greeks listen to reason it is not improbable that a decision will be reached by tomorrow, before which it is not supposed here that Edhem Pasha or Osman Pasha will have time to do more than to appear at Pharsala.

ATTEMPTED TO KILL HUMBERT.

Unemployed Iron Worker Misses His Purpose and Is Arrested.

Rome, April 23.—King Humbert, accompanied by his aide-de-camp, General Pondis Vaglia, was going to witness the Royal Derby yesterday when the attempt was made on his life by Acciriato. His majesty's assailant, who was waiting outside St. John's Gate, rushed up to the carriage in which his majesty was seated and attempted to stab him. The king avoided the dagger by rising from his seat. Acciriato, who is an iron worker out of employment, seeing that he had failed in his attempt to assassinate the king, threw away his dagger. He was immediately arrested by two carabineers, while his majesty calmly ordered his coachman to drive on. The news spread with great rapidity, and when the king reached the royal stand at the race course it was soon surrounded by a cheering multitude. The members of the diplomatic corps present at the race and a number of other distinguished people sent their congratulations to the king on his escape.

King Humbert treated the matter lightly and remarked: "It is only one of the little incidents of my trade." The king remained at the race course with his nephew, the Duke of Aosta, until the Royal Derby was run. Acciriato is 24 years old and a native of Artegna, a village of the province of Unoline, three miles south of Gemona. His majesty returned to the Quirinal followed by hunderds of carriages, and thousands of people gathered about the palace and gave him an imposing and frantic ovation. They called for the royal hymn, and the band of the guard on duty at the palace played it repeatedly.

King Humbert and Queen Margherita were greatly moved by the popular demonstration, and twice apeared on a balcony of the palace and bowed their acknowledgements of the frantic cheering of the populace. The embassies, public offices and private houses were decorated with flags as an expression of rejoicing at the escape of his majesty, and thousands of people inscribed their names at the palace. During the afternoon placards were posted calling upon the populace to take part in a great manifestation in honor of the king at 9 o'clock at night.

This is the second time the life of King Humbert has been attempted. As his majesty was leaving for Naples on Nov. 17, 1878, the year of his accession to the throne, a man named Giovannia Passante approached his carriage and attempted to stab his majesty with a dagger. The king, however, was only scratched by the blade, but Signor Cairoli, who was then prime minister, and who was with his majesty in the carriage, was severely wounded in the thigh. Passante was sentenced to death, but the king commuted his sentence to imprisonment for life.

DEATH OF THE "GREAT OBJECTOR."

William S. Holman, of Indiana, Passes to the Other Shore.

Washington, April 23.—After an illness of some weeks, which had been considered critical several times, and then again hopeful, William S. Holman, representative from the Fourth Indiana district passed to the majority yesterday at 2:05 p. m. He had been in public life for fifty-four years and died with the harness on. Cerebro spinal meningitis was the cause of his death.

Curfew at Springfield, O.

Springfield, O., April 22.—The curfew ordinance is now a law in this city. All boys and girls under 16 years of age must be in bed by 8 o'clock in the winter months and 9 o'clock in the summer months. The purpose is to rigidly enforce the ordinance.

Death of an Indiana Veteran.

Martinsville, Ind., April 21.—Captain John McKahan, of Centerton, a member of the One Hundred and Eleventh Indiana infantry, was found dead in bed. He retired in good health. He was a capitalist, 66 years of age.

Rnssia Warns the Powers.

London, April 22.—A telegram to The Times from St. Petersburg says that Count Muravieff, the Russian foreign minister, has dispatched a circular note to the powers, advising them to observe an expectant attitude, in case either Turkey or Greece should request intervention. The correspondent understands that all the powers have agreed to continue to hold Crete with the forces already there.

Elevator Men Win a Point.

Springfield, Ills., April 23.—The Chicago elevator men have succeeded in getting a favorable report to the senate from the warehouse committee on the bill giving the elevator men the right to deal in wheat. The Board of Trade men have several representatives here to fight the bill, and there will probably be warm times in the senate.

NEWS OF THE STATE.

ITEMS WH CH WILL BE OF INTEREST TO OUR READERS.

A Condensed Report of the Proceedings in the State Senate and House, Showing What the State Lawmakers Are Doing at Springfield.

Springfield, April 22.—Governor Tanner yesterday sent the following appointments to the senate: Trustees of the soldiers' widows' home—W. N. Stewart, of Wilmington; Walter C. Newbury, of Chicago; Flora Jamison Miller, of Monticello; Mrs. Christian Erickson, of Chicago; Berrelle Johnson, of Chicago. Members of the state board of health—C. B. Johnson, of Champaign; L. Adelsberger, of Waterloo; Florence Hunt, of Chicago; M. Meyerovitz, of Chicago; H. R. Wessel, of Moline; Z. B. French, of Lawrenceville; Julius Kohl, of Belleville. Members of the Illinois state board of public charities—Ephraim Banning, of Chicago. The governor also sent a message transmitting the proposal for Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota and Illinois to join in uniform legislation for the preservation of fish and game. The rest of the day was devoted to discussion of the revenue bills, the one built by Littler being the subject of discussion.

Springfield, April 23.—The senate yesterday agreed to the house amendment to the judicial apportionment bill striking out the emergency clause. A resolution was adopted for an investigation of the state university and the home for juvenile female offenders. The Littler substitute for the revenue bill was tabled and the bill advanced to third reading.

In the house the committee on municipal corporations presented a report on the anti-department store bill. There was also a minority report. The bill went on the calendar. A resolution was adopted summoning to the bar of the house witnesses at Chicago, who had ignored a subpoena to testify before the committee investigating the treasury deficit. A long debate occurred on the Humphrey street railway bills, Bailey, an opponent, moving to take them up. The friends of the bills opposed the motion and it was defeated on a roll call—57 to 84.

Springfield, April 24.—In the senate yesterday bills were introduced to prevent foreign insurance companies from doing business in this state without a license; requiring the annual statements of insurance companies to be published in one newspaper at Chicago and one at Springfield. Bills were passed: Providing that cities having a population of not less than 1,000 nor over 50,000 may elect a board of education; providing for the licensing of architects. Adjourned to Monday.

In the house the Torrens land title bill was read a third time and made a special order on its passage for next Tuesday morning. Adjourned to Monday. Governor Tanner has signed the judicial apportionment bill. The emergency clause having been stricken out the act strictly speaking does not become a law until July 1, though it is proposed that the circuit judges to be elected on the first Monday in June shall be elected in the new circuits. They will be unable act until after July 1.

A. P. A. DEFEATED AT ROCKFORD.

Results of City Elections Held at Various Illinois Points.

Rockford, April 21.—The city election here was the hottest in the history of the city, the A. P. A. question being the issue. E. W. Brown was re-elected mayor by 566 plurality, receiving 2,992 votes; C. J. Kinnie, A. P. A., 2,426; E. C. Dunn, Independent, 3,110. Horace Scovill was elected clerk, M. M. Corbett attorney. Aldermen—Fred E. Sterling, R. A. Sheperd, A. J. Anderson, S. A. Hyer, W. L. Harbison, R. G. McEvoy, John A. Bowman.

Peoria, April 21.—John Warner (Dem.) was elected mayor by a plurality of 17 out of a total vote of 10,460. The entire Democratic ticket was elected by a small vote.

Jacksonville, April 21.—Holly (Dem.) was elected mayor by a majority of 48. The Republicans elect the other officers by over 200, about the usual majority.

Litchfield, April 21.—The city election resulted in the Democratic ticket being elected by a small majority. The contest was on local issues. The Republicans elected three out of five aldermen.

Pontiac, April 21.—The Republicans won a decisive victory in Pontiac, and eletced D. S. Myers mayor by a majority of 241.

Decatur, April 21.—In the election Benjamin Z. Taylor (Rep.) got 2,302; David Patterson (Dem.) 1,745. All the rest of the Republican ticket was elected.

Will Test the Apportionment.

Springfield, Ills., April 26.—It is learned authoritatively that application will be made to the supreme court at Mount Vernon on the 4th of May for a writ of mandamus to compel Secretary of State Ross to receive certificates of nominations made in the old circuits and to certify such nominations to the county clerks of the counties composing the several circuits. This is for the purpose of testing the validity of the new judicial apportionment.

Earthquake at Cairo, Ills.

Cairo, April 26.—A severe earthquake was felt here at exactly 10 o'clock last night. It consisted of two distinct jars, moving from the west, and lasted about twenty seconds. The largest structures were shaken with a swaying motion, and people rushed in terror to the streets. No damage has been reported.

State Notes.

Frederick Hartman, the convicted murderer of Mrs. Gedde, near Sibley, Ills., Dec. 1896, has been sentenced to be hanged Friday, May 14.

Judge James H. Cartright, of Oregon, Ills., has been renominated the member of the state supreme court from the Rockford district by the Republicans.

Congress Will Rest This Week.

Washington, April 26.—There will not be a quorum in the senate during the present week, owing to the absence of a large number of senators in New York in attendance upon the ceremonies over General Grant's tomb. The house will meet formally today and adjourn until Thursday, when an adjournment will be taken until next Monday.

Judge Day and the Cuban Mission.

Canton, O., April 23.—Judge William R. Day left Canton yesterday to return to Washington. He declined to state a definite time for his departure for Cuba. For the present his destination will be Washington, where he is subject to the wishes of the president.

Cyclone Kills Several People.

Kansas City, Mo., April 23.—It is reported that several people have been killed in a cyclone at Newton, Kan.

SERMON BOOK.

By Rev. B. Baldwin, Evangelist.

Single copy, 60 cents; two for $1 00. (Postage stamps not taken.) Montpelier Ohio.

A friend says of it: "Every page is crowded full of most important matter. Every young minister should early possess a copy. Evangelists and all others who engage in revival work will find "SERMONICA" brim full of facts, illustrations, comments and themes which will inflame thought and zeal in pulling sinners out of the fire. It is a seed bed from which will spring many other sermons."

Sermon on Masonry. 16 pages, 5c. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. 15c. each.
To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. 10c. each.
By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown.

NEW IRON LASTS AND HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT

The Latest, Neatest, Cheapest and Best Outfit Ever Invented

THE HOME REPAIRING OUTFIT NO. 1.

Consisting of 38 First-Class Tools and Materials (neatly boxed) Shown in Cut, viz.:

1 Iron Last, 8 inches.
1 Iron Last, 6 inches.
1 Iron Last, 4 inches.
1 Iron Standard, with Base.
1 Package Assorted Nails.
1 Package 4-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 5-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
1 Package 6-8 Wire Clinch Nails.
6 Pairs Star Heel Plates.
½ lb Copper Rivets and Burrs.
1 Steel Punch.
1 Sewing Awl, complete.
1 Pegging Awl, complete.
1 Wrench for above.
1 Stabbing Awl, complete.
1 Shoeknife.
1 Shoehammer.
1 Bottle Rubber Cement.
1 Bottle Leather Cement.
1 Harness and Saw Clamp.
1 Ball Wall.
1 Ball Shoe Thread.
1 Bunch Bristles.
4 Harness Needles.
1 Soldering Iron.
1 Bottle Soldering Fluid.
1 Box Rosin.
1 Bar Solder.
1 Directions for Use.

All these tools are full-sized, practical, neat, and cheap; not mere toys. They enable any person to do his own half-soling, boot, shoe, rubber, harness, and tinware repairing.

This Outfit is the result of years of study, experiment, and correspondence in the manufacture of Iron Lasts and Repairing Outfits; and its practical advantages need only to be seen and tried to be appreciated.

Our Improved Iron Lasts and Standard are one of the handiest tools you can have about the place. The Lasts are four in number, smooth and solid, 4, 6, 8 ,and 10 inches long, thus enabling one to half-sole all sizes of foot-wear. The Standard is made with an iron base, which can be easily fastened to the bench. No method of half-soling is now used on common work, except that of iron last and wire clinch nails. The writer of this has been in the business 20 years, and has seen the changes from the old wooden lasts and pegs to the modern method, and knows it to be complete.

Our Improved Harness and Saw Clamp is an indispensable tool in sewing a harness or filing a saw. The jaws are thrown open mechanically by a coiled spring on the bolt.

The weight of this outfit is 18 lbs. Price, all complete, packed in a neat, strong box, only $3.00.

The Home Repairing Outfit No. 2.

COMPLETE BOOT, SHOE AND RUBBER REPAIRING OUTFIT, consisting of 31 first class tools and materials. The No. 2 outfit contains the same articles as the No. 1 except ing the Harness and Soldering Tools, and is gotten up for those who have no harness or tinware repairing to do. Price of No. 2, neatly boxed, $2.00, or with the paper one year $2.75. Price of No. 1 neatly boxed, $3.00, or with the paper one year, $3.75.

FRUIT AND FLOWERS

PROPAGATING PLANTS.

For Bedding Out Later In the Season—Geraniums, Ageratums and Ivy Geraniums.

Geraniums, which may be growing tall and straggling, will yield cuttings which may be potted firmly into soil in two inch pots; they will do quite as well as though put into sand. While they need warmth and protection from draft when rooting, the air of the room in which they are kept must be pure and free from the fumes of gas or coal oil. These suggestions come from Rural New Yorker, authority also for the following:

Ageratums may also be propagated now, as they will soon begin to grow straggly, and when the cuttings are rooted the old plants may be thrown away. We find them very satisfactory as a window plant, providing plenty of bloom. They should be carefully looked over for traces of mealy bug. If any of the tiny white cottony dots are observed, rub them carefully off with a soft pointed stick. These bugs are a great nuisance on soft wooded plants. If some old coleus have been carried over from last summer, propagate them from the young shoots. The old plants, which are usually dull in color when cold weather sets in, will be getting very angular and stalky, as they so often drop their leaves when in a low temperature. They should, however, have plenty of "breaks" or young shoots for propagating.

Ivy geraniums will now be throwing out long shoots, and they will be all the better for stopping. The top shoot should be pinched off, to produce a more stocky growth, and this severed shoot may be planted in a small pot, thus increasing the stock. Ivy geraniums have been wonderfully improved of late years, and there is no reason to grow the old fashioned type with small single blooms when we can get the fine new varieties, such as Souvenir de Charles Turner. Their luxuriant foliage and trailing habit render ivy geraniums indispensable where basket plants are required.

Canterbury Bells.

Campanula calycanthema is the botanical name of the highly prized cup and saucer Canterbury bells. A contributor to Gardening tells that, in addition to its gorgeous effect when planted in masses, it proves a most satisfactory addition to the list of those plants that can be taken up when in full bloom, potted and brought into the house, where if the fading blooms are removed it remains a thing of beauty for several weeks.

CUP AND SAUCER CANTERBURY BELLS.

The most pleasing colors to me are the pure white rose and striata, being a groundwork of white striped with a deep blue. They are easily raised and cared for if one has a cold frame, where they receive the same treatment given to pansies.

In the spring they are transplanted to where they are to bloom. If planted in a mass, they are placed about 18 to 20 inches apart. In June and July they bloom most profusely and are in good form for a long time. Being biennial, when through blooming their mission is ended, and asters or other plants must be provided to take their place.

Desirable House Plant.

Among desirable foliage plants for the window garden or for room decoration, mentioned by The New England Homestead, are the aspidistras, the most desirable of which is the variety with broad white striped leaves (Aspidistra elatior variegata). It is of the easiest cultivation and stands more abuse than any other plant we know of, yet it appreciates proper care and attention as much as other plants. To have the plant thrive best, the pot in which it is grown should be rather small, and the soil be mixed with a liberal proportion of sand. It is one of the few plants which grow in a shady place as well as in a sunny situation, and it contrasts pleasingly with other ornamental foliage plants. If matured properly and kept clean by washing its leaves about once a week, the plant will not fail to be a source of brightness and pleasure all winter.

Winter Pruning.

In reply to the query, "Is it injurious to apple trees to prune in January and February?" Country Gentleman replies:

The theory of pruning fruit trees, or, in fact, any trees, is based on the principle that trimming when in a growing condition tends to increase growth; hence, generally, pruning had best be done after the leaves have fallen and before the commencement of growth in the spring. Suckers may be removed at any season; the sooner after they start the better, as their growth tends to a waste of sap that should go to the fruit producing branches of the tree. When large branches are necessarily to be removed, pruning as late as March or April should be preferred, so that the growth about to commence at that time will cause the cut to heal over sooner, but otherwise general pruning may properly be done at the convenience of the owner at any time after the leaves fall and before the buds begin to open in the spring. This gives time to consult the convenience of parties and permits the performance of a large quantity of such work, preferring the latter part of the dormant season, when but little is to be done.

Floral Brevities.

The London exchanges tell of a new race of hybrid tea roses of the La France type.

Evergreen plants, as English ivy, camellias and oleanders, need very little water if in a moderate temperature. Still, care should be taken never to allow them to be really dry.

As a catch crop, gladiolus is grown in carnation houses, coming into bloom in early spring.

Charles Davis chrysanthemum in full bloom more than any other variety resembles the frowzy, towheaded football player, says an exchange.

Linum trigynum has rich yellow flowers in great profusion during winter.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A GOOD, RELIABLE WATCH CHEAP.
FREE FOR A CLUB OF TWENTY SUBSCRIBERS.

Owing to the demand for a good cheap watch, we have made arrangements to furnish this reliable and durable timepiece at a very low figure. This is no "below cost" or "sheriff sale" watch. The price we ask is more than we pay, but so little more that we could not send them a cent less if you ordered a bushel. ☞ There is

No Reliable Watch Cheaper Than This!

READ CAREFULLY! The movement is a 7 jeweled Elgin or Waltham with stem wind and stem set. To set the watch: Pull out the stem until it "clicks," when you can turn the hands at will. Press back in position to wind. By this arrangement you only need to open the watch to regulate it, and your movement is kept as nearly dust-proof as possible. The case is Silverold (not silver), yet can hardly be told from solid silver. Will keep its color always. Is screw back and bezel, tight fitting, handsome and strong and will last a lifetime. Before the late reduction in price of this movement the retail figure was $12.00. WE GUARANTEE this watch to be perfect, and will refund the money if not exactly as represented. REMEMBER, this is not a Chronometer, nor will it regulate the sun, but it is a good, reliable timekeeper. Sent by express for $5.75. If wanted by mail add 25c. for postage.

This movement in a solid silver case, described as above, only $9.50.

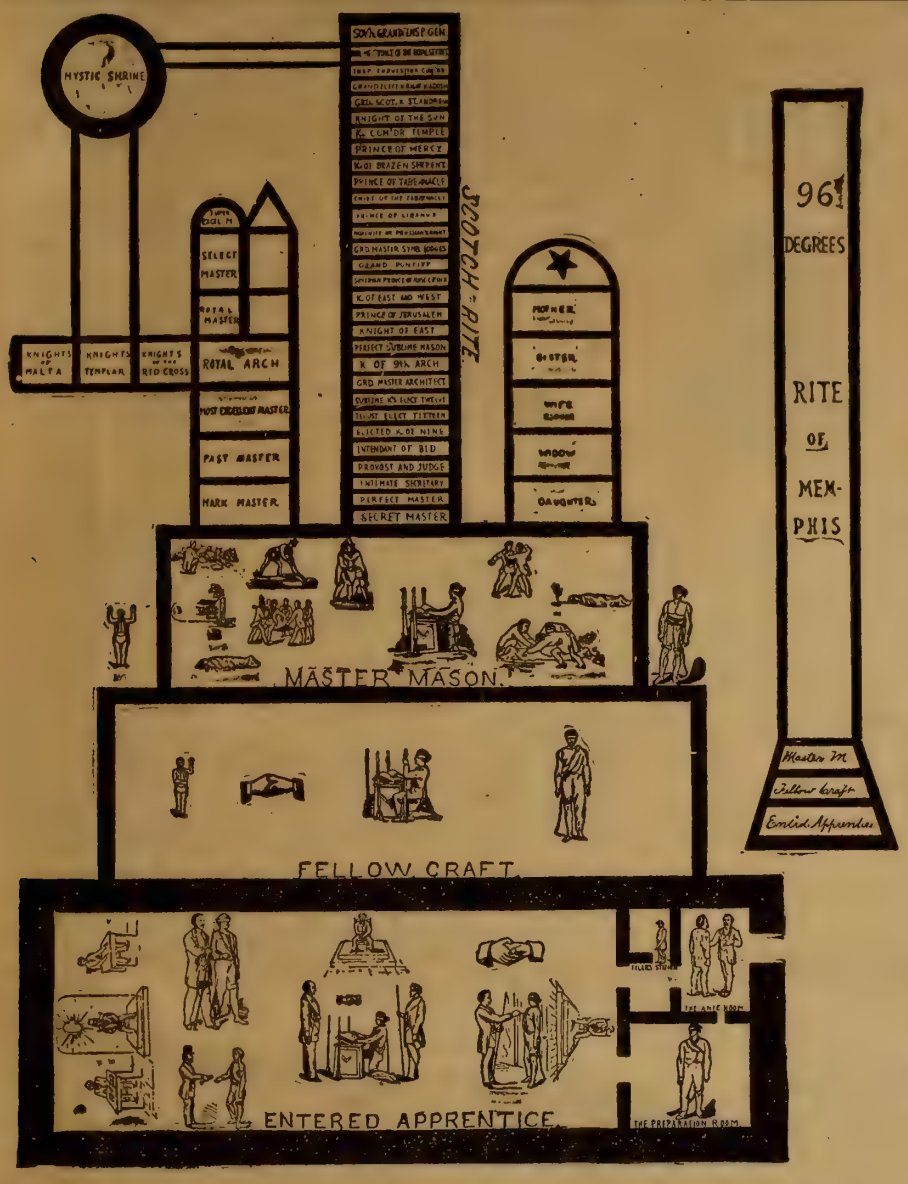
Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christain Cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. 50c. each.

Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover, 25c. each.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge, and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc.



MASONIC CHART.

ILLUSTRATING THE RELATION OF SOME OF THE DEGREES AND RITES IN FREEMASONRY TO EACH OTHER.

The accompanying chart represents one hundred and forty two degrees.

1. The American Rite of 13 degrees;
2. The Scotch Rite of 33 degrees;
3. The Egyptian Rite of 96 degrees.
4. The Mystic Shrine of one degree.
5. The Eastern Star of 5 degrees for Master Masons and for women. These are side degrees, and not genuine masonry.

The Symbolic degrees, or Blue Lodge of three degrees, are common to every Masonic rite, whether American, Scotch, or Egyptian, or whichever of the Masonic rites, named in Mackey's Masonic Encyclopedia one may choose to investigate.

This chart shows in the Blue Lodge the position of the Worshipful Master and some of the other officers of the lodge. Several positions of the candidate who is being initiated are also shown. In the Master Mason's degree is recognized the murder, burial and resurrection scene so full of religious significance to Freemasons.

Freemasonry Illustrated. 640 pages, cloth, $1.00; paper, 75c.
A complete exposition of the Blue Lodge and Chapter consisting of seven degrees. Profusely illustrated.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. 341 pages, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. 2 vols. Per vol., cloth, $1.00: paper, 65c.
The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive.
Vol. II comprises the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. 274 pages, flexible cloth, 50c.
By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. 110 pages, paper, 25c.
The genuine old Morgan book republished.

Allyn's Ritual of Freemasonry. By Avery Allyn. Cloth, $5.00.
Contains the fully Illustrated Ritual of the Blue Lodge, Chapter Council and Commandery, 11 of the Scotch Rite Degrees, several Masonic side degrees and what is termed a Key to the Phi Beta Kappa, and the Orange Societies.

Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Cloth, $2.50.
Profusely illustrated with explanatory engravings, and containing the ritual and work of the order for the seven degrees, including the Royal Arch. Though extensively used as an Instruction Book and one of the best in the market, it is not as accurate as "Freemasonry Illustrated."

Richardson's Monitor of Freemasonry. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 75c.
Contains the ceremonies of Lodges, Chapters, Encampments, etc. Illustrated. Although extensively used in conferring the higher degrees, it is not only very incomplete but inaccurate especially as regards the first seven degrees, and as to the higher degrees it gives but a description and general idea of the degrees rather than the full ritual.

Look to the East. A ritual of the first three Masonic Degrees by Ralph Lester. Cloth, $2.00.
Notwithstanding the high price this book is very inferior in every way to Freemasonry Illustrated or the Handbook of Freemasonry at a quarter the price.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. 16 pages, 5c.
Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge.

Mah-Hah-Bone; 589 pages; $1.00
Comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. Cloth, $1.00: paper cover, 50cts.
The complete revised ritual of the Lodge Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. Cloth, 50c; paper cover, 25c.
This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor of Evangelical Lutheran church. 10c. each.
This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and, the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications.

OTHER RITUALS.

Revised Knights of Pythias, Illustrated. Cloth, 50c: paper cover 25c.
An exact copy of the new official Ritual Adopted by the Supreme Lodge of the world, with the Secret work added and fully Illustrated.

Knights of the Orient Illustrated. 15c each.
The full Illustrated Ritual of the Ancient Order of the Orient or the Oriental degree. This is a side degree conferred mostly on Knights of Pythias lodges.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. $1.00, each.
Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated."

MISCELLANEOUS.

History Nat'l Christian Association. 10c. each.
Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Constitution and By-laws of the Association.

Secret Societies. Cloth 35c, paper 15c.
A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev Edward Beecher.

The Master's Carpet or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical. Bound in fine cloth. 400 pages. 75c.
Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge.

Disloyal Secret Oaths. 5c.
By Joseph Cook, Boston. He quotes the law of Vermont which makes the administration of the Masonic oaths illegal. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard, Cloth, $1.50. paper, 75c.

Finney on Masonry. Cloth 75c., paper 35c.
The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By ex-Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasony Self-Convicted. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40c.
This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them.

Judge Whitney's Defence before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. 15c.
Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. 10c.
This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life-undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder and Oaths of 33 degrees. 304 pages, cloth, $1.00,
"Composed of Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's, Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees."

Sermon on Masonry. 5c. each.
By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor of United Presbyterian church.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in New Berlin trials. 10c.
The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiation by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties,

Grand Lodge Masonry. 5c. each
Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to Republican Government. 15c.

PECUNIARY LOSS BY THE OVERFLOW OF THE MISSISSIPPI.

Nearly 50,000 Farms Now Under Water, Involving a Loss, Perhaps, of Nearly $22,000,000—Twenty Thousand Square Miles Overflowed.

Washington, April 22.—The bureau of statistics of the treasury department has made the following report on the damage caused agricultural interests by the Mississippi river flood: "Since the publication on April 12 of a statement relative to agricultural interests of the submerged districts of the Mississippi valley south of Cairo, Ills., the area under water has been considerably extended. This extension is below Vicksburg, Miss., but on the right or west side of the river, and is mainly due to a break 2,000 feet in width in the levee at Biggs. The outflow of water at this point has totally submerged four parishes (counties) of Louisiana and partially overflowed five others, while a break at La Fourche, crossing in the southern part of the same state, has resulted in the submergence of an additional area of nearly 300 square miles in La Fourche and Terre Bonne parishes. In this newly submerged region there was in 1890 a total population of 82,356, in the proportion of four colored persons to one white.

Land That Is Newly Inundated.

"The region contained at the last census 7,747 farms, with a total area of over 1,000,000 acres, of which 420,000 were improved. Of this last mentioned area 213,000 acres, or over one-half, were last year devoted to cotton, over 91,000 acres to corn, 6,000 acres to sugar cane, 2,000 acres to hay and an inconsiderable acreage to other crops. The total value of these farms, including fences and buildings, but exclusive of their movable equipment, was in 1890 close upon $11,000,000, and the value of the implements and machinery upon them was over $600,000. On Jan. 1 of the present year they contained live stock to the value of $1,500,000, and so lately as the first of March last they were estimated to have still on hand about $800,000 worth of the crops of last season. The total value of the farms submerged by the breaks in the levees that have occurred since the 10th inst., with their farm implements, live stock and crops on hand, is therefore close upon $14,000,000.

Products of the Damp Section.

"This region produced last year nearly 100,000 bales of cotton, over 9,000,000 pounds of sugar, over 1,300,000 bushels of corn, besides hay, potatoes, oats and other minor products, the entire production aggregating a value, even at the low prices that have prevailed, of more than $4,250,000. The total area submerged at this date is over 20,000 square miles. It contained at the last census 46,935 farms, with a total area of 4,904,466 acres, nearly one-half of which was improved, and a total population, agricultural and otherwise, of 462,041.

Total Value of the Products.

"If to the value of its farms, farm buildings, and farm machinery, according to the census of 1890, there be added the value of its live stock on Jan. 1 last ($9,174,636), and of its products of last season still on hand on March 1 last ($4,595,179), the total of $90,176,177 will represent the approximate value of the agricultural property of the submerged region. Among the products of this region last year were 466,056 bales of cotton, worth $16,312,060; 12,525,645 bushels of corn, worth $3,995,278, and 9,033,878 pounds of sugar, worth $271,016, the total production, including minor crops, represented a value of $21,782,180 on the plantation."

THE NATIONAL LEGISLATURE.

Synopsis of the Proceedings of the Lawmakers at Washington.

Washington, April 21.—In the senate Morgan's Cuban belligerency resolution was laid over for a week. Mason offered a resolution directing the rules committee to report a rule to limit debate and to order the previous question. The agricultural appropriation bill was passed and the bankruptcy bill discussed without action. An executive session was held.

Washington, April 22. — The senate yesterday heard Mason give the rules a lively scoring, but sent his resolution to reform those rules so that the majority could do business to the rules committee—32 to 24. It was agreed that the vote in the substitute and amendments to the bankruptcy bill be taken today. A few bills of minor importance were passed, and an executive session was held.

The house did nothing but meet, hear the formal announcement of the death of Representative Milliken, and adjourn in honor of his memory.

Washington, April 23.—In the senate Allen introduced a resolution of sympathy with Greece, which went to the foreign relations committee. Morgan made a bitter attack on Speaker Reed, whom he called the "Great white filibuster" owing to "inaction" of the house. Allen wanted complete cessation of business until the committees were appointed. The Nelson substitute for the Torrey bankruptcy bill was passed and an executive session was held. Adjourned as a mark of respect to the memory of Representative Holman to Monday.

The house debated the senate amendments to the Indian appropriation bill and those of unimportance were agreed to, a special order having been adopted for their consideration without reference to a committee. Adjourned in honor of the memory of Representative Holman.

Washington, April 24.—The house concluded consideration of the senate amendments to the Indian appropriation bill, disagreeing with those referring to the opening under the mineral land laws of the Uncompahgre reservation and modifying the clause regarding the deposits of gilsonite so as to lease the deposits for limited terms of years. Twenty-five members were appointed to attend the Grant monument unveiling at New York next week. Adjourned to Monday.

KENTUCKY FIGHT IS SETTLED.

Republican Caucus Nominates Wm. J. Deboe for the Senate.

Frankfort, Ky., April 24.—The Republican joint legislative caucus nominated William J. Deboe about midnight last night. Baird, the gold Democrat, was present and there were some paired absentees. Baird was ruled out in the count necessary to elect, but they allowed him to vote nevertheless. Rev. Mr. Grider was the first man to turn to Deboe, who started out with thirty-one votes—within five of the number for nomination. Holt showed weakness from the beginning, and the vote for the others was scarcely worth mentioning. The number of scattering votes—nine—indicated to those who know a thing or two that the caucus would arrive at some conclusion last night.

Baird's vote for Deboe on one ballot gave him thirty-two votes, but it only counted as thirty-one. After the twenty-fourth ballot it was decided that the hindmost man must be dropped. The absentees were divided between Lewis and Boyle. The five bolters up to this time and further along declined to vote. On the twenty-sixth ballot Evans was dropped, being the lowest. Deboe was still within five of an election and the bolters could have nominated him. On the twenty-eight ballot the bolters came in and settled the matter.

ELEMENTAL HAVOC IN IOWA.

Rain and Wind Work Great Damage to Property—A Cow's Adventures.

Des Moines, Ia., April 24.—There was a tremendous rain fall Thursday night all over the state, which caused much damage. It was accompanied by a high wind, taking off roofs, tearing down trees and moving buildings. One barn containing a cow was carried 200 yards and the cow unhurt. Two bridges on the Chicago-Rock Island railway between here and Holly Junction were swept away. The bridge on the Chicago Great Western at Berwick is gone. There were numerous other railway damages, and tracks submerged. Hundreds of people fled from their homes in the lowlands. The Des Moines and Raccoon rivers are within two feet of high water mark and still rising.

Nominations by the President.

Washington, April 23.—The following are among the nominations sent to the senate yesterday: Harold M. Sewall, of Maine, to be minister to Hawaii. Postmasters: Illinois—Hibben S. Corwin, Peru; Thomas S. Fekete, East St. Louis. Iowa—J. H. McArthur, Oakland; J. A. Conerd, Atlantic; Joseph W. Jarnagine, Montezuma. Michigan—Edwin O. Shaw, Newaygo. Wisconsin—Cassius C. Pillsbury, West Superior.
